FLIES.

The early fly is the one to swat.
It comes before the weather is hot,
It sits around and files its legs
And lays at least ten million eggs
And every egg will bring a fly
To drive us crazy by and by.
Every fly that skips our swatter
Will have five million sons and daughters
And countless first and second cousins
And aunts and uncles scores of dozens.
And fifty-seven billion nieces;
So knock the nasty thing all to pieces.
And every niece and every aunt—
Unless we swat them so they can't—
Will lay enough ugly eggs
To fill up five ten-gallon kegs,
And all these eggs, ere summer hies,
Will bring forth twenty trillion flies.
And thus it goes, an endless chain.
So all our swatting is in vain,
Unless we do that swatting soon,
In May time and in early June.
So men and brothers, let us rise,
Gird up your loins and swat the flies.
And, sisters, leave your cosy bowers,
Where you have wasted golden hours:
With ardor in your souls and eyes.
Roll up your sleeves and swat the flies.

—One of the principal by-products of the national forests of Japan is furnished by mushrooms, which have yielded in one year a revenue of a million dollars.

—The largest tree in the United States is said to be the "Mother of the Forest," a giant redwood in the Calaveras bigtree grove in California. It is supposed to contain 140,619 board feet of lumber. There are, however, many claimants for the honor of being the "largest tree" and the "oldest tree," and these claims, according to foresters, cannot always be verified.

—An investigation to determine the advisability of growing basket willows in the low-lying lands along the South Carolina coast has recently been started through cooperation between Clemson agricultural college, the office of farmers' cooperative demonstration work, and the forest service of the U. S. department of agriculture.

—Forest botanists recognize only one cypress in the United States. Its range extends from Delaware southward around the coast into Texas and up the Mississippi valley to Illinois and Indiana. It is one of the few cone-bearing trees which drop their leaves in winter. The heartwood of cypress is noted for its decay-resistant properties.

—There are about 37 pines native to the United States, of which 25 are western species, and 12 eastern.

—Much of the cork used throughout the world comes from Portugal, which harvests about 50,000 tons a year.

—Germany is said to have an oversupply of foresters; so that well-educated men have hard work to secure even inferior positions.

—Waste wood in the manufacture of school desks is now being used for the backs of cheap brushes, according to the statement of the forest service.

—The Daughters of the American Revolution at their recent Congress rescinded the action taken last year regarding the Canteen.

—Wm. H. Moffett, ticket agent in the passenger at Knoxville, Tenn., has served in his present position for twenty-nine consecutive years and has never been absent a single day during the entire time. In his own words, he has "worn out three depots."

MORE FACTS FROM JAPAN.

The entire work in Japan under the care of the Board of Foreign Missions now consists of forty charges which have 67 preaching places. During the last Conference year there were 159 adults and 31 children baptized. There were also 90 candidates for baptism reported and 289 inquirers enrolled.

Two hundred and eleven full members were received, and 187 probationers, 157 being adults. 1,369 members were on the roll, and 289 probationers.

Sixty-three Sunday schools were reported, with 3,622 scholars, and 112 teachers, and eight C. E. Societies with 156 members.

Bibles distributed, 892; tracts, 28,533.

There are ten church buildings and nine parsonages.

Two excellent young men were ordained at the recent session of the Japan Mission Conference, and the members of the Conference are to participate actively in the Evangelistic National Campaign to be carried on for three years, and to cover the Empire. I call upon the entire church to unite in prayer for the success of that far-reaching campaign of the Christians in Japan.

Send your order for Children's Day supplies without delay. Give your school ample time to prepare for the best service you have ever held, and encourage the scholars to largely increase the offering. We hope they will raise $25,000 by the Children's Day offering alone. Your school needs to hold the service, and ought to use the Board's illustrated service. Free to you. Remember, we have the shaped note music, if you wish it.

Our S. S. started up the first of April. The attendance is so irregular. We have 100 sometimes and then we have less than 50. How are we to get a regular attendance?

I will say in answer to the question how to manage those that visit people who would go to S. S., I say to the ones that visit me, "We always go to S. S. Come and go with us."

I enjoyed Miss Parsons' pieces in the Herald. We need more writers like that and not so much cutting and slashing as some do. Just to say what is right and what is wrong, with the Bible to back it. With the spirit of love as Jesus commands.

Our preacher, J. W. Self, has filled all his appointments at this church. He now preaches for us in the evening at three o'clock instead of eleeven; we like the change. He has a little boy at his house about one week old.

The Supt. of S. S. says we are to have a Children's Day service some time in July.

—The white marble of which the great $2,000,000 Lincoln memorial temple is to be built on the banks of the Potomac in Washington is to come from the Sopris national forest, Colorado. This is said to be the first great building in the east to be constructed of this stone, known to the building trades as Denver marble, though much of it has been used as an interior finish in public buildings. In the west a notable example of its use is found in the new federal building at Denver.

A Korean lady of great wealth, beautifully gowned in shining linen and soft silk, stopped her sedan chair outside a bookstore in An Dong. A friend stopped to speak with her, and she said:

"I have been buying some books to take home with me to give away to my unbelieving neighbors."

"Where are they?" I asked.

"In the chair," was the reply, and one of the chair coolies, with a disgusted look on his face, raised the chair curtain; and Mark's Gospels, tracts, and hymn books.

"But," I said, "the chair is full, you cannot get in."

"That's no matter," she laughed, "it's only thirty li (fifteen miles), and I can walk."

The chair coolies were bidden to take up the chair, and they did so rather gruntingly, and the lady followed, walking with her woman servant, her face beaming with pleasure, and the smiling "good-bye." Only those who know what riding in a chair stands for among Korean women can appreciate this story of the sacrifice.

"To leave the city of An Dong on foot when she might ride!" exclaimed a bystander. The lady was past fifty years of age. This is the way the Gospel is preached in Korea.—Exchange.

—Rev. J. L. Giles died Friday night, May 22, and was buried at Union Ridge Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. A large number attended the funeral. This information was sent last week by Bro. S. W. Taylor, but was delayed in transmission and did not reach us until last week's paper was printed.

—Rev. L. H. Hatley was in our office last week. He is strangely afflicted. He has on different parts of his body a number of swellings of various sizes. There is not much pain, but he is losing flesh and strength. He was advised by physicians at Asheville to spare himself mental and physical exertion. He moved to a piece of land he owned near Gibsonville and has put up a saw mill for his sons to operate. Though his malady is a strange one to us, we hope the physicians may be able to find a remedy. Bro. Hatley is taking the matter cheerfully, trying to be ready for either alternative.

—Dr. Tagg was in our office a few minutes last Saturday. He was on his way to Elon College to preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday.

—It was our pleasure with others from Greensboro to hear Doctor Tagg's commencement sermon at Elon. We hope to print his sermon soon. Dr. W. E. Swain was present and took part in the opening service.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (southern) in session in Kansas City last week put itself on record as opposed to the use of tobacco by clergymen, candidates for the ministry, and church officials. The retiring moderator, Rev. J. S. Lyons, spoke against the resolution, but the Assembly overruled the moderator and adopted the overture.

—We note that the same assembly discussed the question as to whether the women's missionary society should handle their own funds or turn them over to the church board. The convention recommended the latter course, but Dr. Egbert Smith, executive secretary of the foreign committee, pleaded for the former, which was adopted. In our view, this is the right and the sensible course. Women have human nature and have much the same disposition as men in regard to their enterprises. If they were not permitted to disburse the fund accumulated by their efforts, many of them through self-denial, they would not raise the large sums they now raise. It is good sense to let people do good in their own way.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., (northern), sitting last week in Chicago, adopted resolutions in favor of a federal divorce law, in favor of a revival of family worship, and against the white slave traffic. The sentiment was against allowing women to serve as ruling elders; also againt teaching sex hygiene in the public schools—a duty that belongs to parents.

—Wake Forest College has decided to stop giving free tuition to candidates for the ministry. They have perhaps been imposed on. Hereafter they will make a loan instead o fa gift to ministerial candidates, the same to be canceled when the students has completed five years in the ministry; also in case of death before the end of five years.

DEVOTION OF THE UNFAITHFUL.

The very unfaithful sometimes exhibit what seems to be a rare devotion. They make extravagant offerings, causing the recipients to believe themselves the objects of a passionate love. But what seems to be an offering of love is really an offering of remorse of conscience. The offerer vainly tries by one great gift to atone for the unfaithfulness of the past. It may be an unfaithful husband, an unfaithful friend, or an unfaithful servant of God. To those who know and understand it is a sad spectacle, though the unsuspecting may see in it the beauty of unselfish love.

—Kansas City University commencement comes June 5—10.

THE CONSTRUCTIVE QUARTERLY FOR JUNE.

The Constructive Quarterly continues in its chosen way. The June number is on our table. H. Scott Holland writes of "The Religion of a Changing World". A few sentences indicate the leading thought of the article: "Change is in us all. We are moving. To what goal, we cannot say. . . Humanity has surrendered itself to change. . . . That is why the moment is so hazardous. . . . The Hour has come when there can be but one religion which meets the needs of the situation. . . . If we, at such an hour, fail to bring home to men the one offer, we shall have made the great Refusal. We shall have blasphemed the Holy Ghost."

Henry Churchill King, president of Oberlin College, finds in the confession of Christ the one essential of Christian union. Not uniformity, but liberty and comprehension are to be sought: "Complete uniformity of belief and statement is impossible." "Organic unity presupposes differences not uniformity." "Uniformity gives only a sand-heap of identical atoms, but no true unity. Paul's epoch-making figure of the body of Christ with many different members and many different offices must not be allowed to slip from our minds." "Nothing conceivable can give such actual and genuine unity as common loyalty to a person. The greater that personality, the more significant the resulting unity. Where that person is the supreme personality of history, and believed by his confessors to be the supreme revelation of God himself—the personality that has redeemed their life—the unity of spirit is the greatest attainable." These sentences indicate the author's conception of Christian oneness.

Besides these two, there are twelve articles, all of weight and worth. It is a magazine for thoughtful Christians of every name. Edited by Silas McBee and published by George H. Doran Company, New York, $2.50 a year, 75 cents per single copy.

—Bro. Millaway has a meeting at St. Paul this week. Bro. Dosier preached on Sunday. Now Bro. Bethea is preaching nightly to good congregations, and the outlook seems good.

ORTHODOX CHRISTIANS.

It is getting quite fashionable to speak against orthodox Christians, as though they knew little about social service. Indeed, in some quarters, the impression is given that only those are doing humanitarian work, who have given up belief in the authority and historiticity of the Bible, in the virgin birth, in miracles, and in other things which the Bible plainly teaches. A good answer to this is a list—only a partial one—of orthodox Christians and their work.

Robert Raikes, a Bible Christian, was moved by the spiritual and moral destitution of the children around him. He invited them to his little shop, paid teachers to help him train them, first in reading and other profitable things, and afterwards in Bible truth. The movement grew into the Sunday school work.

David Livingstone, a most orthodox Christian, went into the heart of Africa, giving himself to help those dark people, and to make an opening for others to help. So near to God was he living, and so unselfishly, that a few days in his company transformed Stanley's whole life.

The Earl of Shaftesbury said to his biographer: "I have always been—and, please God, always shall be—an evangelical of the evangelicals, and no biography can represent me that does not fully and emphatically represent my religious views." He resisted, with impassioned eloquence, any attacks on the authority or historicity of the Bible.

In Parliament he put through, by strenuous labor and sacrifice, so many bills for the salvation of children that he was called "the children's champion." The four-year-old chimney-sweep helpers, the child workers and women workers in the coal mines, under horrible conditions, and in factories and other unsuitable places, were indebted to him.

When he took up the factory cause in Parliament, he had to make a choice that he settled after "meditation and prayer" and consultation with his wife, to whom it also meant sacrifice, and who said to him, "It is your duty."

"On the one hand lay ease, influence, promotion, and troops of friends; on the other, an unpopular cause, unceasing labor amidst every kind of opposition, perpetual worry and anxiety, estrangement of friends, annihilation of leisure, and a life among the poor.

"To espouse the factory cause was to give up home comfort and domestic leisure, to relinquish the scientific and literary pursuits which had for him such intense fascination."

Every question he took up he personally investigated. When he worked to relieve the terrible condition of the lunatics, he personally visited the asylums. "I made it an invariable rule," he said, "to see everything with my own eyes. In factory I examined the mills, the machinery, the homes, and saw the workers and their work in all its details. In collieries I went down into the pits. In London I went into the lodging houses and thieves' haunts, and every filthy place."

He was able to induce 300 thieves to change their lives and helped them to start anew (some by emigrating).

He took up the ragged schools and made them more efficient. He organized mongers, etc., into efficient workers. Always, when other duties would allow, he was scouring the miserable lurking-places of London with a lantern and paid workers, hunting out homeless boys, taking them to the shelter he had provided, and helping them into a new life. It would take too long to tell all he did.

Barnardo, of London, was a Bible Christian. He gave his life to hunting out neglected, homeless boys, who lived like rats in holes. He fed and clothed them and trained them to Christian lives and self-support.

Mr. and Mrs. Whittemore, of New York, wealthy Christians, went down to the mission of Jerry McAuley, carried on by people who looked upon the Bible as authoritative, and were so impressed with the fact that these simple people had something that they had not and wanted, that they arose and asked prayers for themselves. They then devoted their lives and money to saving the lost. Mrs. Whittemore is still scouring the slums of New York in Rescue work, and clinging close to the Bible. She has a wonderful influence to uplift the hopeless, degraded women and girls.

The whole Salvation Army, from General Booth and his family down, have always swallowed the Bible from cover to cover. I do not need to say what they have done for the world.

The Florence Crittenden Leagues of Compassion were founded by a man who took the Bible as authoritative and historically true. When he was converted, it was through the influence of the Bible that he, putting his business into the hands of others, gave his time, money, and strength to hunting out and saving lost girls, in memory of the pure daughter whom the Lord had taken to Himself. He was laughed at by his business friends, but it mattered not.

Gladstone, of the mighty intellect, showed just as mighty a conscientiousness. Time and again he stood alone for what was right and helpful to the weak. What he thought of the Bible is indicated by his book, "The Impregnable Rock of Sacred Scriptures."

Dwight L. Moody, as we all know, believed in the authority, historicity, and perfect sufficiency of the Scriptures. He gave up a position where he could make $5,000 besides his salary to take up work for humanity and religion. He consecrated to this the savings that he was planning to make the foundation of a big fortune. The first year he lived on $300, slept on the benches of the room where he held meetings and taught classes, and ate the plainest food. The writer has heard a man who knew him at that time in Chicago speak of seeing him going around among the poor, himself almost barefoot, seeking to help those who were in need.

These are only a very few of the most noted cases. Multitudes of humble orthodox Christians are doing the same work, and have been doing it in all ages since Christ first showed them how.—Elisabeth Webster in Zion's Herald.

A WAR-TIME MOTHER.

Story of Her Struggles.

In the cemetery at Mt. Harmony church, near the Union and Mecklenburg line, there is a massive and beautiful monument which cost several hundred dollars. "To Our Mother" is the inscription in large letters on the top stone of the monument. This monument in granite was erected by Messrs. S. T., J. T., B. A., and J. E. Sustar to their mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sustar. If ever a mother deserved a monument that good woman is worthy of one. Here is the story of her heroism:

In 1862 Mrs. Sustar was living with her husband, Mr. H. R. Sustar, and their four little sons and a little daughter in a cabin home in the pine lands of Lancaster county, S. C. Early in 1862 the husband and father joined the Confederate army and went to the front. He never returned. In a few weeks the news came that the husband and father was dead and had been buried in Virginia. The mother looked upon her five little orphaned children, the two youngest, B. A. and J. E., twins, but six months old, and then and there resolved to keep her family together and to make a living for them. She had nothing and not a child was large enough to make a living. But she went to work, hiring herself to the neighboring farmers and although she was nursing her twin boys she went to the field and many has been the day when she plowed all day for only 25 cents, and after her day's work was done would walk a mile, and sometimes two or three miles, to her cabin home, asd there she would cook the food for her children and often spin cotton at night with which to make their clothing. And then Sherman's raid and nothing was left in that home—everything being taken by the raiders; and then that mother went out to where the army horses had been fed, picked up the scattered corn out of the dirt, washed it and carried about half a bushel to a mill some distance away and had it ground and by night she had bread for her children. Afaer the war she fought on and on to keep the wolf from the door—and she kept him at bay—and her children never suffered for bread. As her children grew they joined their great-hearted mother in the battle for bread. The twins when but ten years old were spinning cotton at night with which to make their clothing and were working for neighborng farmers for only 25 cents a day for the two. In 1876 Mrs. Sustar moved with her children to Mecklenburg county, rented a small farm and instead of hiring out they made crops of their own. Just a few days ago the writer stood by the monument at Mrs. Sustar's grave and then he went over the splendid farms of the twin sons of this heroine—hundreds of acres there are on which are two beautiful homes, and the farms are dotted with neat, well-kept tenant houses, good barns and other outbuildings, and the land is in a high state of cultivation. The stock, the modern implements and everything about the farms indicates prosperity and the application of brains to business. Long before that good mother died, she saw her children' prosperity and she shared it. With the Sustar boys there was nothing too good for their mother to have and her last days were spent in the midst of abundance, not only in material things, but those boys of hers gave her a wealth of love and affection and their homes were her abiding place and in them she found a home indeed. Under that beautiful monument erected by the manly sons, who are victors in life's battles, sleeps a heroine.—Monroe Enquirer.

MORE REMINISCENCES DESIRED.

The late article from Bro. Hunt referring to his people was a good thing to read. I wished that he had said more. childhood and youth (and later in life) is the time to learn, and in the riper age is the time to put the things learned before the hungry people.

The considerate young people are thirsting for knowledge—and they are very muc hdependent on men and women of age for the rich things that they so much need.

The young should be eager to gain knowledge, and the aged and experienced have need to "redeem the time" by giving out good things "new and old," such as they have learned and have been assured of.

The church paper is a great medium of communication. Let the good old people think back and tell us of the rich times o f the past. Let Bro. H. tell us a few more things of the past. Others also we want to hear from. On a certain time Bros. W. C. and W. F. Kennett had occasion to be at a birthday of my aged mother, and there were about 150 people present. Rev. W. F. Kennett led the prayer. Rev. W. C. Kennett privately remarked that he served the churches on our circuit 27 years before that time—and old Crooked Run, near our house, was one of his preaching places. Now will the aged Bro. Kennett please write an article about the times that were once termed "27 years ago," and publish in the M. P. Herald. Also will Bro. Hunt please kindly say more on the line of his late report. There is a good-looking church house near the old spot, but the people who live near are content to venture out at a greater distance in order to de their church service, and the sacred spot is being neglected.

Nearly twice 27 years ago, yes, over twice 27 years ago the family of Bro. Hunt were the main singers at the meeting place called Crooked Run. In those days that family were needed to help to sing and preach and pray in order to have a revival.

I would be glad to hear from Bro. Dosier and others also.

W. F. Grabs.

MEANING OF BAPTISM.

I read that "Baptism and the Lord's Supper are the emblems of the death, the burial and resurrection of our Lord." Surely not! The bread and wine of the Supper are emblems of the "broken body and shed blood of our Lord" and the Supper is a memorial of his death. Baptism is an emblem of purification, an act of consecration, and the seal of the covenant which God makes with us. They are not emblems of the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord. Incog. Nemo.

—We were pleased to have a call from Rev. T. S. Coble last week. He had with him plans for two modern churches to be built on his charge this year.

A SENTENCE WELL DESERVED.

The judge in New York City who last week sent an ordained Congregational minister and his rowdy followers to the workhouse for six months for having entered Calvary Baptist Church during a Sunday morning service and disturbed the worship in the name of social revolution, will receive the unqualified approbation of all friends of law and order. That a clergyman should presume to interrupt a religious service on the pretext of free speech reveals to what length those who have been inoculated with the virus of certain kinds of social reform will go. The socialistic preacher, graduate of Harvard, entered Calvary, of which church John D Rockefeller and his son are members, to protest against the Colorado mine war.

The court took occasion, in pronouncing sentence, to denounce the entire brood of disturbers who have made it a business of late to invade churches and talk egotistically of the rights of free speech. "As a university graduate and an ordained minister of the Gospel," said the court, "his actions and conduct, all things considered, are simply incomprehensible. None knows better than he the customs and usages of religious bodies, the form and conventions connected with public worship, the sanctity and atmosphere of our churches. He knew perfectly well he would not tbe 'welcomed' by the pastor and the congregation. He, of all men, should have been the last to foul and profane the house of worship and to use it as a means of advertising himself and his views."

It is to be hoped that this sentence, which the clergyman and his friends call "staggering", will act as a deterrent to the band of diseased minded misleaders who with their followers are making nuisances of themselves in various parts of the country.—Zion's Herald.

—Mrs. Rev. A. L. Hunter, of Pinnacle, recently visited relatives and friends in Greensboro.

—Hendersonville reports a long list of serious injuries, most of them from accidents: C. J. Dillingham was struck in the head with a stone; Miss Lou Austin was burned to death by fire from an oil stove; a negro boy was burned perhaps fatally by his clothes taking fire from a match in his pocket; Eugene Parkinson lost his left arm from a gun shot; Bud Cosnell lost an eye by a blow from a dinner plate; General Heatherell also lost an eye; Alex. Staton was seriously hurt by an auto. What is the matter, Colonel Pickens, with your place and people?

PREPARATIONS FOR A REVIVAL MEETING.

J. D. Lampkin.

In the beginning let it be said with emphasis that there are no set rules by which you can work up a revival. A revival is not worked up by human schemes nor machinery nor manipulation of forces. You may have your forces organized, trained and skilled in the most thorough manner and then not have a revival. It is God's work; but He works through us. For this reason it is needful that we be in readiness. Many times our people are not in a condition for God to use them. Sometimes the revival just springs up, apparently without preparation; certainly without much definite thought on getting ready for a revival. Then, again, the revival comes only after much prayerful preparation. In every case, it is God who is moving among His people.

Notwithstanding, preparation upon our part is of supreme importance. The sooner God's people are ready the sooner the revival comes. We all understand the importance of preparation for other things. We understand how the farmer must prepare the soil and so cultivate as to retain and utilize so far as possible, the moisture for the growing crop. He must sow the seed and nurture the plant to maturity before he can expect a harvest. Many of us do not realize that in a religious sense, we must do likewise if we are to reap a spiritual harvest. Sometimes people seem to expect a great ingathering when they have done nothing in preparation; they have sown sparingly in a careless and haphazard way. It is wonderful how God out of His great mercy does bless us.

This preparation should be made before the protracted meeting begins. The revival ought to have begun already before the meeting starts. Now is the time to stir up the Christians to activity; now is the time to break up the fallow ground in the hearts of the unsaved ready for the seed in the sowing time. Much can be done between now and your meeting in getting the people's minds centered on this work, and in giving them the soul-winner's vision.

How to Prepare?

Begin with yourself. God begins many times with just one person. He began the stupendous task of peopling a world with just two. The great revival of Nineveh began with one man. Very often God's greatest works start in the heart and soul of just one man or woman. Brother pastor, we must begin somewhere. In our own hearts and lives is the place to begin. We will never set anybody else on fire until we get on fire ourselves. The evangelistic fire ought never to go out in our hearts nor be allowed to burn low.

When you are thus prepared you may share your burden with others. Much can be done in personal touch with individuals, laying upon their heart the importance of soul-winning. Pray with them in private, when it is more likely for two souls to be brought to share the same faith and longing for salvation of the lost. In the prayer meetings the coming revival can be made the subject of much thought and earnest united prayer. You can do much in your preaching. Let every message throb with a passion for souls. Emphasize the need and peril of souls. If we could get our people to realize the danger to which souls are hourly exposed, and their individual responsibility to rescue them, they would have the revival burden. No revival is worthy of the name except it come through burdened hearts. Put emphasis upon the individual's responsibility to lead the lost to Christ. Bring the church to feel that this is the main thing for which she exists; and failure here means to fail at the most vital point.

Set About to Create a Soul-Winning Atmosphere.

This is sadly lacking in many of our churches. It is just as necessary to have the right kind of spiritual atmosphere as it is to have the right kind of atmosphere to breathe which we all know is so vital to our physical well-being. Several things go into the make up of this spiritual atmosphere:

(1) Faith in God. Conquering faith in God. Faith that reaches up to God and brings down His presence and power Faith that makes the invisible things real. To the man who is lacking in such faith God is not real. Heaven is not real, Hell is not real. No church can be a soul-winning church unless to, at least, some portion of that church these things are great realities.

(2) Genuine love for souls. No kind of make-believe will take its place. If you do not love men's souls, no matter how much your words indicate such love there is a language of the heart that will tell the first man you do not really love him. How much we need love from God's own heart to fill our souls. We MUST have it.

(3) Heart burdened prayer. We must always have a revival of real prayer. These three things blend to make an atmosphere in which it is easy to lead the lost to Christ. Not much is going to be done till such a condition is brought about. So let us strive in every possible way to stir up faith in God, love for souls, and the spirit of prayer.

Two Things to Be Remembered.

1. That God CAN give a revival. When I first started out in this work I thought that everybody in the church had to be just right before we could have a revival. I have learned better than that. God can give a revival in spite of all the devil can stir up inside of the church or out of it. The two camp meetings in which a few years ago, Rev. J. F. Burkett helped this pastor demonstrate this fact beyond a doubt. An old trouble which had been working for some time beneath the surface, came to a crisis just before the meeting was to begin. The church became divided into factions. One said "we can't have a revival while the church is in this condition." Some had covenanted together to pray this prayer, "Oh, God, give us a revival at any cost." When the meeting came on almost from the very first service people were saved and this continued through the meeting. It was a common saying among those who were in attendance, "This is the best meeting I was ever in."

2. God WILL give a revival whenever His people meet up with the conditions. Every time the scriptural conditions are met up with the revival is already here. The revival comes in answer to prayer. Let us join heart and hand in praying for a gracious revival everywhere. The Lord is able and willing to give us more than we can think to ask Him for.—Baptist Standard.

A FATHER'S LOVE.

A little incident, which beautifully illustrated the word of David, spoken so long ago, came under my notice recently. It so impressed and comforted me that I want to pass it on.

We were seated round the tea table in my friend's pleasant home, when it seems the little daughter reached to help herself with undue haste. Her father reproved her, and it must have been gently, for there was not any interruption in the cheerful conversation. But a lady seated by the child's side told me afterward that Jennie's eyes filled with tears, and she slipped quietly away from the table. But I did not notice Mr. H— excusing himself and also leaving the room.

Immediately after I had occasion to visit the adjoining sitting room, where I found the little one nestled in her father's strong arms, the tears still falling from the blue eyes, but looking up trustfully into the brown eyes bent over hers and glistening with sympathy, while the voice tender and manly, was saying:

"There, there, darling; papa youldn't hurt his little pet's feelings or spoil her supper if he could help it. See, papa could not eat any more when he knew you were feeling so badly. Now, sweetheart, let us go and see if there is anything left for us. Mother will attend to us herself."

For some time they talked softly; then I heard a little ripple of laughter and they went to finish their meal, her hand clasped in her father's.

But I had my lesson. What a sweet remembrance for that child. Thank God for our Christian fathers, and while the tears dropped down my cheeks, I cried silently, "Does God love me so?" And the answer came and stayed, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."—Christian Guardian.

SEND ME.

There are millions of people today who are wililng and desirous that the church should live and prosper if somebody else will fight her battles, do her work, and pay her bills. We find this kind of people every day. They admit that the church is wholesome and uplifting but are not willing to assume responsibility for her maintainance. They are somewhat like Ahab when he asked the prophet, "Who shall order the battle?" The prophet pointedly answered, "Thou." When the Lord said to Isaiah, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" the prophet did not say that the work was a worthy one, and that someone surely ought to go, but not to ask him. He did not try to shift responsibility, but answered the call, "Here am I, send me." If we see that work ought to be done, and are asking in our minds as to whom shall start it, God may be saying to us, "Thou."—J. I. Frederick.

WORKING FOR ETERNITY.

Never mind where your work is. Never mind whether it be visible or not. Never mind whether your name is associated with it. You may never see the issues of your toil. You are working for eternity. If you cannot see the results here in the hot working day, the cool, evening hours are drawing near, and when you may rest from your labors, and then they may follow you. So do your duty, and trust to God to give the seed you sow, " a body as it hath pleased Him."—Alexander Maclaren.

—Science and scientific men continue to render their verdicts against the use of alcoholic beverages and tobacco. In the National Conference on Race Betterment, Dr. von Kleinsmid, speaking of "Causes of Crime", said: "Society by its sale of tobacco and liquors encourages mental defection which results in crime. Whatever may be said in the way of excuse for the moderate use of alcoholic beverages and tobacco among adults, there can be no justification for the use of these drugs by adolescents." The "temperance tidal wave" gains momentum from every such testimony, or expression of opinion, as also from the action of great railroad companies and other corporations which now forbid their employees to use liquor both when on and when off duty.

—In the large convention of Zionists from all over the world held recently in Chicago, sympathy was enlisted for the project of Mr. Nathan Straus for the redemption of Palestine, and many others are planning to accompany Mr. Straus. Already Jews from the various countries of Europe are escaping from conditions of oppression and finding refuge in their ancient homeland, mainly settling as farmers. Jerusalem now has about 70,000 inhabitants, but the health conditions are so deplorable that any enlargement of the city under present conditions is almost impossible. It is Mr. Straus' plan to make the city thoroughly sanitary, and then to start his colonization schemes.

—It is said that the very first convert to Christianity in Japan began with a young student who was engaged in translating the Gospel of John. It came about thus: An American lady went there with four or five missionaries. After some time this lady offered to teach English to a young Japanese and gave him the Gospel of John to translate. Shortly after, it was observed that he became very agitated and restless, walking up and down the room continually. At last he could contain himself no longer, and burst out with the question, "Who is this man about whom I am reading—the Jesus? You call him a man, but he must be God." Thus the written word proved itself "quick and powerful", Heb. 4:12, and was the means of saving a soul.

—Happiness, I have discovered, is nearly always a rebound from hard work. It is one of the follies of men to imagine that they can enjoy mere thought, or emotion, or sentiment! As well try to eat beauty! For happiness must be tricked! She loves to see men at work. She loves sweat, weariness, self-acrifice. She will be found not in palaces, but in the cornfields and factories and hovering over littered desks; she crowns the unconscious head of the busy child. If you look up suddenly from hard work you will see her; but if you look too long she fades sorrowfully away.—Exchange.

—The new $26,000,000 aqueduct which is to supply Los Angeles with water is the biggest engineering undertaking of its kind the world has seen. It is designed to carry a daily supply of 238,000,000 gallons from the Sierra Nevada mountains across the great Mojave desert, under the Sierra Madre range, and so into the San Fernando valley, twenty-five miles northeast of Los Angeles—a total distance of 235 miles. From the reservoirs there the water is being carried to the city's distribution mains through a six-foot steel pipe. Forty-seven miles from Los Angeles there is a fall of 1,500 feet in the aqueduct; this is being used for the generation of hydro-electric energy, which will light the city's streets.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

We expect to publish the full program soon. But this is to remind all of our pastors of the date. June 29th, at night, is the first session, then Dr. Tagg will deliver one of his best lectures. Tuesday morning we hope to begin on regular schedule time and run till closing hour Thursday night.

Thursday afternoon, July 2nd, is the Anniversary Day of the Home. All Methodist Protestants in reach are invited to come, bring baskets filled with good things to eat and spend the day at the Home. Picnic dinner will be served about 12:30 and then there will be exercises by the children of the Home, and an address by some distinguished invited speaker, we had hoped to be able to announce the speaker at this time, but feel we can in the next issue of the Herald.

Let all pastors prepare to come, stay throughout the sessions, and participate in every thing from start to finish.

The President of Summer Conference.

Nance.

Bro. W. K. Nance was born July 17, 1857, died May 14, 1914. He professed faith in Christ in early life and joined the M. P. Church at Chapel Hill, Davidson Co, and lived up to his profession. So say his friends and loved ones. He told his wife he was ready to die. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss.

The family have our sympathy. May the Lord bless and lead them in the path of righteousness. T. A. Williams.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

STILL OTHER FACTS—AT HOME.

The Board's treasurer reported at the annual meeting, May 20th, that the total increase in contributions from the entire church over the receipts of the fiscal year 1912-1913 was $7,711.06.

This includes Bro. M. L. Shields' splendid contribution to the Board's Annuity Fund of $5,000.00 now safely invested, and not yet to be applied to the work at present.

Deducting this amount, the increase in usable receipts was $2,711.06 over those of last year.

During 27 days of this month only 8 payments have been made on the assessment from the entire denomination, making a total of $90.40. This causes great financial embarrassment to the Board because the monthly expenses of necessity are large.

I am visiting churches every Sunday in an educational campaign, and doing my utmost in all directions to arouse and enlist the entire church, but I cannot do this great work alone. Pastors, as leaders, must help and all members must cooperate.

Orders for Children's Day supplies still came by every mail. Every school ought to hold a service, and use the Board's illustrated service specially prepared for our own schools.

Absorption of Gravitation.—Dr. Bottlinger, of Munich, has made a very interesting attempt to show that gravitation is absorbed in traversing a medium, so that the interposition of a third body between two others affects their mutual attraction. He is of the opinion that the attraction of the Sun on the Moon is enfeebled when the earth comes between them, i. e., when there is an eclipse and it is to be remarked that the effects of two consecutive eclipses nearly destroy one another. Dr. Bottlinger admits that the enfeeblement of gravitation depends on the density of the medium traversed and is, therefore, obliged to construct an hypothesis respecting the interior constitution of the Earth. The perturbations of longitude, calculated in this way, from 1834 to 1909, are translated into a feeble oscillation of which the period is nineteen years. The epochs of maximum and minimum correspond exactly to those which have been found empirically by Newcomb. It remains to be seen whether the application to a longer interval of time will not show that on this theory we reach results which are irreconcilable with the facts.

Origin of Structures on the Moon's Surface.—In an interesting letter to "Nature," Mr. Fisher mentions a few explanations which have been given to account for the present appearance of the Moon's surface. It seems very doubtful whether the so-called craters, which are such a marked feature on the Moon, are really of volcanic origin. Dr. Johnston-Lavis writes, "the more I compare the Moon's surface with volcanic vents in different parts of the World, the less I see a resemblance between the two," and "the more does the planetoid and meteorite projectile theory become acceptable." A very interesting theory was outlined some time time ago by G. K. Gilbert. He remarks that, if the so-called craters of the moon were due to the impact of meteors, their form would be, for the most part, elliptical, whereas, in fact, they are circular. His own theory is that the Earth was at one time attended by a ring similar to that which encircles the planet Saturn, and that this afterward "gradually coalesced, gathering first around a large number of nuclei, and finally all uniting in a single sphere," the Moon. Mr. Fisher suggests that in the disruption of the Moon from the Earth, the material was scattered and that the circular so-called craters have been caused by the impact of fragments of the solid crust and that the mountains of the Moon are anguar portions of the Earth's crust.

The sootfall of Pittsburgh, as determined from careful measurements during the past year, ranges from 595 to 1,950 tons per square mile per annum. The destructive possibilities of this immense deposit may be illustrated by stating that if an equal amount of lampblack were ground with oil so as to form black paint it would cover from 17 to 57 square miles with two coats. Statistics of sootfall at certain places in Great Britain are as follows: Industrial section of Leeds, 529 tons; center of London, 426 tons; Glasgow, 820 tons.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Asheville.

Bro. Bates met me at the station on Monday, the 25th, at 2:30 p. m. I spent one night with Bro. Bates and one with Bro. Williams. It was pleasant to be in ames. I preached in our new church in Asheville on Thursday night to a very attentive and appreciative congregation. I was in the church and looked over it as many as three times during the two days I spent in Asheville, and so far as I could see and learn everything was moving along nicely under the efficient leadership of the pastor, and he is keeping our people so well informed through the Herald that I shall not undertake to say anything as to the progress that is being made. His people are standing by him and the church will soon be complete if nothing happens to hinder the workmen.

Bro. Bates and his wife are working hard and desire and deserve the co-operation of the entire membership of the N. C. Conference, and no one need to hesitate to put something into the enterprise for it will fail. It's too near complete and the Asheville people and the surrounding community are determined as to the completion and success. The Sunday school and church attendance continues to increase from Sunday to Sunday, and contributions continue to come in for the completion of the church. Those who have made subscriptions for the Asheville church ought to send it in immediately to Bro. Bates. My claim overpaid.

Buncombe Ct.

I visited all the churches on this charge; the attendance was not large on account of having no pastor. I preached at all the appointments except Terry's Fork, and there was no appointment made by the church for me. I visited a few of the members to find out whom they desired as pastor. I hope to be able to supply the work in a few days.

Some of the members expressed themselves as wanting a hustler for their work; they meant by that they wanted a man that would get out among the people, which is right; but I am inclined to think there ought to be some hustling done by the membership of Buncombe circuit as well as to expect so much of the pastor. This field has had some of our best men and the charge is not what it ought to be; but I trust it will be in better shape soon, and I ask that the new pastor may have the co-operation of all the members as soon as he enters the field which I trust will be soon. Claim paid in full at all the churches except three and they promised to pay soon.

Pensacola Station.

Bro. Casto met me at Democrat where we spent the night with Dr. McLean. We crossed the mountain and I spent Sat. night with Bro. C. A. Oberlin. At 11 o'clock on Sunday I preached in Pensacola church to a splendid congregation, and they gave good attention to the word. Our church needs remodeling; or, better still, build a new one, and this was my advice. Now is a good opportunity for our people at this place. Bro. Casto is being well cared for; he is living in a new cottage on the church ground built by a lumber company free of charge. His health seems to be improving. I preached on Sunday night and left on Monday a. m. for Connelly Springs. Claim overpaid.

C. A. Cecil.

June 1, 1914.

La Grange Circuit.

Dear Bro. Cecil: I resumed my duties on this work May the 24th. On that day I met with the Harris Chapel congregation and preached for them at 11 a. m. I was favorably impressed with the hospitality and kindness shown by the community at large. I preached today at Grace, La Grange. The congregation was small, but faithful and true.

Our special meeting at Grace will begin on the first Sunday in August. Dr. Swain will be our help. Rev. Robt. S. Troxler will be our help at Hickory Grove. The second Sunday in July is the time set for that meeting. The time for the special meeting at Harris Chapel has not yet been fixed.

Since my last letter to the Herald we have received material aid from High Point, Greensboro, Pleasant Union, and from two circuits in and around Henderson. For these tokens of love and interest Mrs. Neese and I are profoundly grateful.

Dr. Forlines preached and lectured on this work recently. His discourses are highly appreciated.

If any brother pastor has a copy of Ralston to loan or to sell, please write me at once stating terms. This book is used in the first year's conference course. I am looking every day for a sixteen-volume set of Bible study books. I am buying them on the poor man's plan—the installment plan. I hope to be able to render more efficient service with these books on my table. With best wishes,

Will H. Neese.

La Grange, N. C., May 31.

Friendship, Fallston Ct.

Memorial service was held at Friendship last third Sunday. A large congregation was present. At 10:30 the congregation gathered at the grave yard. The choir sang a few beautiful songs and a Scripture lesson was read in concert, after which all the graves were beautifully decorated with flowers. At eleven o'clock our pastor preached an interesting sermon suitable for the occasion; it was delivered especially to the old folks, as this was old folks' day as well as memorial day. In the afternoon we had an old-time singing, led by Mr. Lee. The singing was good and everybody seemed to enjoy it.

Fourth Sunday was young folks' day. Mr. Moton preached a special sermon for the young folks which shows that he still feels the great importance of taking care of the young people. If we only had more people that could realize the great necessity of it as he does and would work as faithfully there would not be so many wayward boys and girls. We are sorry to say he had been sick and was hardly able to preach, but we hope he will soon be strong again.

Lumber is now being sawed to build a parsonage.

Our Sunday school is still doing good work. May God bless us in our work.

Reporter.

Hobbs' Chapel.

Sunday, May24th, was again a most enjoyable day for the people of Hobbs. A large congregation was present and we had a beautiful and interesting Sunday-school address by Bro. Powell, president of Sunday-school convention, of Greenville Co. I am quite sure judging from the good behavior and attention given, his hour's lecture was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. It is to be hoped that what he said will do much good in causing the older people to take more interest in the Sunday school. This school is doing very nicely at present, but we are not satisfied until we can get the whole community to come out and join us in our good work.

If all would take the interest our Supt. does, Bro. H. J. Butler, there would be no reason to doubt that we would have the largest Sunday school in the county. It never gets too hot, too cold, too wet or too dry for him to walk a distance of two miles through the swamp and across the creeks to his church and Sunday school. We have not yet commenced about our children's day, but guess will attend to that next Sunday.

(Mrs.) Sallie F. Hobbs, Reporter.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.

Granville Circuit is busy! We realized this more than ever before on yesterday when the whole circuit met at Rehoboth in a Sunday school rally. We care little for the frills and fashions which society is trying to get into some of our churches —in fact, those things are repulsive to us; so we met "in the good old-fashioned way". Some of our older members expressed themselves as being happy—truly, there were things to make our hearts swell with praise. Before these special services began, we were impressed in the Sunday school lesson that we should be more thankful. Let us count our blessings, lest we forget our debt of gratitutde. The refreshing rain, the beautiful day and the throng of Sunday school workers which met with us instilled these lessons of thankfulness into our hearts. The program for the day was carefully arranged. Seven young ladies read papers upon interesting phases of the work. We are sending these to the Herald for publication. We hope to give our readers some idea of our ways and means on Granville. Remember as you read these essays that Mr. Bethea said he gave these subjects to those who were doing the things mentioned. The music was a special feature. There were several male quartettes and a solo by Mrs. A. T. Barnes, of Henderson. Miss Maggie Finch's paper on "Music in the Sunday School" put us to thinking. Rev. Mr. Canipe, of the M. E. Church, responded to this. He condemned the modern "Tweedeedle-de-dee" singing! Neither does he like such songs as "When the roll is called up 'Yonder' " in our protracted meetings. He showed us that there is more religion in such as "Amazing Grace" and some of the good hymns sung in times past. After this talk, Hon. A. A. Hicks asked for "When I can read my title clear" to the tune of Pisgah. Lots of our younger people had never heard it on this order! It was glorious! We were glad to have an address from Mr. Hicks. His subject was "The Work of the Superintendent." He said that it was a good thing for a Sunday school to have a poor superintendent, so that the members might have more chance for work. Mr. Hicks is one of our flock, though his home is in Oxford and since there is no M. P. Church in town, he is superintendent of the M. E. Sunday school. His talk will help us, for we know his consecrated life. Messrs. E. C. Harris and J. T. Cozart discussed the subjects—"The Need for Greater Unity on Granville Circuit", and "Liberality". They gave us new things to think about—their remarks will bear fruit. We thank Mr. D. W. Hardee, of Henderson, for his appeal for more church loyalty. When he mentioned the loyalty of the Catholics, it should have made some of our non-church-attendants ashamed. Now we hope to report greater things from this charge later as results of this meeting. Surely we must keep moving forward. We certainly have an energetic leader in our pastor. He won't let us be drones in the hive! Pardon this long letter. We were bound to tell you about these good things.

June 1. Hattie Harris.

Ook Ridge Circuit.

Sunday, May the 31st, was a big day for us at Pine Grove on the Oak Ridge Circuit. A large crowd, many more than the house would seat, came together for our circuit Sunday school rally. All of the Sunday schools were fairly well represented. I believe we will see good results from this Sunday school rally—results by way of more interest on the part of those already in the Sunday schools, and an increase of attendance on the part of our church people.

The rally was something of an experiment, but we have good reason to believe it was a successful experiment. We did not use much local talent. With the exception of a paper on teaching a class of Sunday school children, by Miss Mary Pegg, and the report from the Sunday schools, we are indebted to outside speakers for the success of the day.

Bro. J. Norman Wills came over from Greensboro and gave us two interesting and helpful addresses on "Making the Sunday School Worth While" and "The Sunday School Teacher". We thank Bro. Wills for his direct service as well as for his indirect service. By indirect service I mean this: Bro. Wills brought Miss Anna Mead Michaux to the rally, and Miss Michaux was good enough to help take the place of other speakers who were absent. I am sure the small children all enjoyed the story which Miss Michaux told them; and we larger children enjoyed her helpful address on "The Child."

Bro. W. F. Kennett attended our rally and rendered us good service by giving us an interesting address on "The Relation of the Parents to the Sunday School". Bro. Kennett was in Bro. S. R. Harris's place. He said he could not fill Bro. Harris's place, but that he was certain of plenty of room. We were disappointed that Bro. Harris did not get here, but were pleased to have Bro. Kennett take his place.

We also appreciate Miss Helen Shore's solos and Mr. James Teague's service with his cornet.

All of these visitors have our thanks and an invitation to come again.

We were glad to have Miss Lucille Michaux, of Greensboro, and Miss Hattie Boyd, of Warrenton, who is a student at the Normal, with us on the occasion of our rally.

A word to our Sunday schools of Oak Ridge Circuit. In order for the Sunday school rally to be a true success we must put into practice the suggestions made by the speakers at the rally. May I depend on you? Let us get busy now and increase our enrollment by getting those out of Sunday school in at once.

We are still making haste slowly on our Oak Ridge church. A donation, great or small, will be appreciated from any friend. Send yours in soon.

Sincere wishes for all my brother ministers and all readers of the Herald.

June 2, 1914. Linley W. Gerringer.

Union Grove.

Our pastor preached for us again the fifth Sunday in May but the writer was sick and did not get to go. Our pastor stopped in to see us Sunday afternoon on his way to Bessemer City, where he started a revival meeting. We are always delighted to have him in our home. The health here is very good, but our Sunday school was off some; 64 present Sunday. Hope we will have more next Sunday. We trust and pray that we may have a great meeting at Bessemer City this week. We know our pastor will do his part. Pray for the meetiing.

Annie Steward, Rep.

Harmony Church, Yarboro Ct.

Our pastor came last Saturday evening, bringing with him Bro. Cecil, our president. Sunday being our regular preaching day we had a very good and attentive congregation to hear the sermon. Brother Cecil's discourse was very appropriate, especially for us at this time. I think every one well pleased with the president's sermon. Then, again, his sermon had a business end to it; that is, after he finished his gospel truth he talked a great deal in regard to the business of the church, which was very timely and appropriate for us at this time. We appreciated Brother Cecil's visit; wish it had been so he could have prolonged it a little. I don't know that it is best for our president to be in so great hurry in his traveling. If it took him two years to make his visit to all the churches he probably would stay long enough to do more good in one visit than he would in two, and his traveling expenses would be just one half as much.

Brother Cecil was obliged to move on Sunday evening. Bro. Lamar had to leave with him and the Rev. Mr. Martin, of Dentsville, S. C., was in the community and occupiied the pulpit Sunday night.

I reckon we are getting along very well down here. Our Sunday school is about normal; room for much improvement; our president hit us a little about using Cook's literature in our Sunday school; that was very appropriate and good for us at this time. Jas. A. Hughes.

Burlington Anniversary.

An anniversary service will be observed in the Burlington church on the second Sunday in June. This service was begun last year and it is hoped it will be permanently continued as an annual occasion. This church was organized in 1892 by Rev. W. F. McDowell, but Rev. W. C. Kennett had been preaching and working in the town prior to this time with a view of developing the work into an organization. Bro. Kennett will be with us on this occasion and preach at the eleven o'clock hour. One of the features of the occasion will be a reunion and home coming of those who have ouce been engaged in the work here. All persons who have ever been connected with the Sunday school or with any other part of the work at this place are cordially invited to return aand worship with us on this occasion.

Geo. L. Curry, Pastor.

Winston.

We are planning for three events during this month to which we are looking forward with deep interest and happy anticipations.

The first of these events is Young People's Day, the second Sunday. On that day both the morning and evening services will be devoted to the young people of our church. The program is being arranged with a view to their interests and we are trying in every possible way to place the responsibility of the service upon them. The pastor will preach to the young people in the morning and for the evening service all are hoping to have an out-of-town speaker.

These services are appointed in pursuance of one of the policies of our work here. We are trying to bring our young people heartily into the activities of the church and to make for them every possible opportunity for service and development. We want them to love the church because it ministers in various ways to their happiness and because it gives them an opportunity to minister to the happiness of others.

The second event to which we are looking forward is Flower Day, 4th Sunday, morning service. The church is to be profusely and tastily decorated with flowers and every one who attends the service is to be given a flower upon entering the church, which is to be worn during the service. The sermon by the pastor will be prepared with special view to the occasion, also the music by the choir. On that day we shall sit in the holy sanctuary to enjoy the beauty and sweet perfumes of flowers and learn God's lessons through them. In the afternoon committees from the church will take the flowers to the city hospitals, the county home, and to the sick members and friends of our congregation. It is to be a day of real uplift and service, as we contemplate, through the flowers, the beauty, purity, and perfection of our God.

The third event for the month is the paying by the Sunday school for a new piano, which we were fortunate to get at the very greatly reduced price of $110. The ladies' aid has paid already one half and the Sunday school is to pay the balance. Plans were made last Sunday to raise this balance and the 4th Sunday in June appointed as Pay Day. That means that the piano will be paid for in a very short time.

There is much about our work here that is encouraging and we are trying to use our encouragements in doing bigger and better things for God. Could write more but must not.

May the blessings of our God rest upon our conference—the president, every pastor and every charge and give us a great year in spiritual and material development. S. W. Taylor.

High Point.

Since our last report we have had the pleasure of entertaining the Woman's Board of Home Missions. They had a splendid meeting and did us good by their coming. Our church work and Sunday school work are moving along nicely. The attendance at Sunday school for the last nine Sundays has been 250, 220, 224, 204, 223, 232, 272, 232, and 234—making an average of 232 and one third for the nine Sundays. Our average attendance at Sunday school for this year has been 201 and seven elevenths. On last Sunday Rev. R. L. Davis, of Raleigh, spoke for us in the morning,, and gave us many encouraging facts with reference to the progress of temperance in North Carolina and in the United States. On Sunday night nearly all the churches closed and met at the school auditorium to hear Sam Small on temperance. His address was rich in wit, in sarcasm, and in truth. His work as a temperance lecturer is bound to be far-reaching.

Yours for the Master, A. G. Dixon.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Circuit.

No Sunday school last Sunday because of circuit Sunday school rally held at Rehoboth church, this charge. Truly, this was a great day with us. To begin with it is gratifying to be at Rehoboth church with those people and then with the talks, papers, and songs added made it great to be there. A day like this should make us more interested in our Sunday schools. It was undoubtedly a success.

W. Polk Garrett.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The program is now about complete. The only thing yet needed to make the Conference complete is for all the pastors to attend all the time. If it is worth it to any (and those attending last year said it was), it is worth it to all. If it is worth while to get part of the Conference, it is worth more to get all the Conference. We had a good Conference last year, we want a better Conference this year; the program this year may not be any better than last year, the only way to be sure of a better Conference is by a better attendance. It is for you if you will come after it, but you cannot get it by freight, or express, or parcel post, or by proxy. It is a good time now, before you are more busy, to send your registration to Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Kernersville; suppose you get busy and do it. Suppose the entire success or absolute failure of the Conference were in the hands of one man, he would have considerable responsibility; the success or failure of it so far as each individual is concerned is in his own hands—whether or not he attends. Enough said, time to do. Look for the program in the Herald, we'll look for you at the Conference.

Note the special features, including the address at the opening session, the rally on the last day, and the two addresses at the closing session.

ONE "MOTHER'S DAY".

Mrs. Morgan was awakened very early one Saturday morning in May by various spicy and appetizing odors which penetrated her room from the kitchen.

"Is it possible that I've overslept?" she asked herself in dismay. "No, it's only 5 o'clock," after consulting the timepiece on her dressing table. "But who is cooking such delicious things so early?" she questioned further to herself, much puzzled.

As she entered her kitchen, she saw her three daughters all busily at work.

"Why, what does this mean?" she exclaimed.

The girls rushed to her with kisses and embraces.

"It means, motherdie, that this is your day, and we are going to celebrate; or rather, you are going to celebrate while we do the work," exclaimed Ruth.

"It is not my birthday," protested the little woman.

"No, but it's Mother's Day," declared Grace. "We've appointed it ourselves, for one mother at least. It will not interfere with the day in which the minister preaches about you and tells of all your virtues. This is put in extra by your grateful daughters. We decided that it ought to be Saturday because that is one of the busiest days. It's to be Father's Day, too. We've cooked the nicest little lunch, and we want you both to go off into the beautiful woods today and be as care-free as you were before you had any troublesome children to work for. You are to call at the office for him by 9 o'clock sharp. Here he is. Now, both of you come right in to breakfast, and then father must hasten off to dispatch his business while mother fluffs her hair and dons her prettiest dress, just as she did in the days when father courted her."

"I have never left off," declared father, as he led their mother to the table with all a lover's gallantry.

"But there are so many things that ought to be done today," objected Mrs. Morgan. "Besides the regular Saturday's work, that long piece of unbleached cloth ought to be whitened and"—

"It's in the borax water already," announced Ruth, "and soon it will be on the grass. Knowing how it would vex your thrifty soul to think of work to be done, we shall bleach the cloth, do up the muslin curtains, and sweep and clean the whole house, along with the other work."

"Why did you tell her?" exclaimed Marian.

"It was absolutely necessary," declared Ruth, "in order that she might have these things off her mind and enjoy the day. Now there's really nothing for you to do, mumsie, except to put on your prettiest dress and go picnicking with father."

Mrs. Morgan looked lovingly into the faces of her eager young daughters, and decided that she ought to accede to their unselfish plans. Her husband, too, was desirous that she should go, and she knew it would do them both good.

"The ayes have it!" cried Ruth, triumphantly. "I can see 'yes' in her smile."

"Now remember to see that father does not leave the lunch at the office," cautioned Grace, as they were bidding her good-by on the porch steps. "We sent it along by him."

"And here's a book for you to read while he is taking his afternoon nap and you are resting," added Ruth. Then, with much waving of handkerchiefs and aprons, they sent her away.

The cooking and sweeping had been done, the muslin curtains washed and ironed, and the whole house was in perfect order. Ruth was setting the table for tea.

"Here they are," she called to her sisters, as Mr. and Mrs. Morgan came up the walk. "See how happy they look!" Then they all rushed to the door to greet their parents.

"Now tell us all about your good time while we eat, and then you must go up and see how fresh and inviting the chambers look," began Ruth.

"My dear girls, I've enjoyed every moment of this beautiful day," declared Mrs. Morgan. "I am very grateful to you for planning [illegible]."

"Where did you and father go?" asked Grace.

"Begin at the beginning and tell us everything," coaxed Marian.

"Well, when I reached the office a man from the other part of the town had arrived first and was talking important business with your father, and he could not leave for some time."

"What a shame!" cried Marian.

"But he promised to lunch with me at noon in Walker's grove," mother hastened to add. "I took the lunch basket, for I knew he would forget it. I decided to go to your Aunt Susan's for a while. When I got there I found she had fallen and lamed her right hip quite badly. The doctor had been there and left some liniment. I gave her poor hip a good rubbing. Rachel was so busy with the work downstairs that I helped her for an hour."

"O mother, on your holiday!" exclaimed Ruth.

"I could not have enjoyed the day a bit if I had left Rachel with all that work to do, my dear," replied Mrs. Morgan. "And you will not be vexed to learn that I gave Aunt Susan a little of your delicious lunch. You really must have put up some for somebody else, because there was more than father and I could possibly have eaten."

"What did you do next, mother?" asked Ruth softly, as she gave her mother's hand a loving squeeze.

"I decided to go and see my old schoolmate, Felicia Bennett. You know she lives not far from the grove. It was nearly 11 o'clock, but we could talk while she worked. I found that one of her daughter's children was having the measles and that the other two were very restless because they were forbidden to play with any of the neighbor's children. Felicia and Molly wouldn't let me do anything about the work, but they were willing that I should take the two children with me to the grove for a few hours. There was plenty of food, but Felicia insisted on sending some along. We had a merry time, and it reminded father and me of the days when you were little."

"But after dinner, while they were playing, what did you and father do?" asked Grace.

"Oh, I forgot to say that Felicia's niece, Lucy Brown, is there for a week and she was hurrying to finish some sewing. There was considerable lace to be sewed on a dress which she wanted to wear to church tomorrow. I told her I would help if she would bring the work to the grove after dinner, as she couldn't leave before. So we sewed in that cozy little summer-house, while father read to us from that delightful book. The lace was all on by 2 o'clock. Then we saw some people coming into the grove for a picnic, and Lucy took Charlie and Mildred home, lest they should give the children in the party the measles, for one can never tell just when a child is coming down with them."

"And did you and father go for a stroll through the beautiful woods?" asked Marian.

"Not just then. Some of the party came to us to inquire where they could get water for their lemonade, and after we had told them and one went for it, we had a pleasant chat with the rest. Then somebody in the party proposed a sail on the water, but one of the children did not want to go and began to cry. The poor little thing was afraid of the water. So I told them I would take care of her while they went. Father really needed his nap, and I could do it as well as not. But we did have a delightful walk in the woods a little later. Then father went back to the office to finish up his business for the day, and I had another hour with Aunt Susan. Then I called for father at the office and we walked home together, just as we did twenty-five years ago. Oh, it has been such a delightful day!''

Ruth rose and went over to her mother's chair.

''Come up and see the chambers, motherdie,'' she said.

When they had left the room, there was silence for a few moments. Then Grace said: ''Father, how many people has mother helped today?''

''Just as many as she has met,'' he replied, promptly.

'''And yet it was planned entirely for her own happiness—hers and yours,'' observed Grace.

''That's the way in which she always finds happiness,'' declared Marian. ''And that's why she's mother.''

''Yes, it's been a characteristic 'mother's day,' '' agreed father. ''God bless her!'' he added, tenderly.—Zion's Herald.

DIED.

Mrs. S. J. Knox.

On the morning of April 22, death claimed one of Yarborough Chapel's most faithful members, Mrs. S. J. Knox. Her health had been declining for several years, but while visiting her son in Birmingham, Ala., she was taken seriously ill and died at a local hospital there. Her two sons were at her bedside during her last illness.

Mrs. Knox was sixty-five years old. She was the daughter of the Rev. Caleb Smith, who was for many years pastor of Yarborough Chapel. She is survived by an aged mother, three brothers, two sons, Mr. M. G. Knox of Charlotte, N. C., Mr. E. R. Knox of Birmingham, Ala., and one daughter, Mrs. J. L. Wilson, of Cross Anchor, S. C., with whom she made her home.

Early in life she joined the Methodist Protestant Church and has always been a consecrated member. In her death the church suffers a heavy loss. Until her health began to fail she was always present and was one of the best workers. For more than twenty years she taught in the Sunday school and was teacher of the ladies' class at the time of her death. She took great interest in all phases of church work and especially loved the music.

This sore bereavement inflicts great grief upon the hearts of family and friends. Many tears fall and many hearts are crushed to know that she has been severed from the associations and scenes of earth. Her life was unselfish, kind and generous, for she lived for others, and to help the humble and needy swelled her heart with thankfulness and gladness. Such charity she manifested for the weak and erring.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. A. Lamar, after which her body was laid to rest in Yarborough Chapel cemetery beside her husband. Her grave was covered with beautiful floral tributes from her relatives and friends.

Cross Anchor, S. C., May 29, 1914.

A Tribute of Love.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Coble was made intensely sad when death entered on May 24th at 11 p. m. and claimed their little daughter Margaret Emma. She leaves a father, mother, and little brother to mourn their loss. Margaret was a sweet child and was loved by all who knew her. We can't see why one so young was taken, but "Sometime we'll understand."

The home will of course miss her most of all, but her friends and playmates will miss her, for she always greeted them with a smile and a warm welcome to her home. It won't seem like going to "Shugg"'s (as we often say), for little Margaret will not be there. The voice we loved to hear and was so sweet is now still, and the patter of her little feet will not be heard, and her little chair is vacant which never can be filled.

We feel especially bereaved in her death and we extend to the grief-stricken family our sincere sympathy.

With sad hearts we say farewell to
A sweet and precious flower
We thought was ours to love,
Was gathered by the angels
Into the home above.
Our hearts are sad and lonely,
Our tears must often flow,
But would we call her earthward,
To suffer more? No, no!
She's reached the many mansions
He promised to provide;
Her eyes have seen the Savior,
And she is satisfied.

THE DISTRICT PARSONAGE.

The committee elected by the last annual conference to secure site and proceed with plans for raising funds to secure a district parsonage, after many delays, and looking over lots of real estate, some in High Point and in Greensboro, has secured a sixty day option on a lot on McIver St. in Greensboro for $500; the lot is 50x150, with a 15 foot alley running through the whole block at back, one block from car line, close to Normal College.

We find we can have erected an eight room house, turnkey job for about $2,000. The house will be a creditable one, and large enough for any ordinary family. Your committee now comes to all the charges with the proposal, that we all assess ourselves an amount equal to the president's salary for two years, and we will have this house and lot paid for. We believe, that while this appeal comes late in the Conference year, our people will respond to it and take up the matter at once.

We request every pastor on a circuit to take an offering, beginning next Sunday and do this at all the appointments through June, urging the people to give at least an amount equal to the president's salary at each church. This will not work an hardship upon any one and yet will give us a home for our president, all paid for within two years time.

Send the money in just as soon as collected, to Mr. T. A. Hunter, Greensboro, and the amounts will be acknowledged through the Herald.

Signed by the Committee,

T. M. Johnson,
R. M. Andrews,
T. A. Hunter,

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

On seeing the notice in the Herald I decided to send in the attendance of the Clark's Chapel Sunday school from the first Sunday in May to the second Sunday in November.

The total enrollment the first Sunday in May was sixty-five. The attendance for each Sunday in May is as follows:

The school is better now than it has been for some time. Lester Watts, Sec.

THE NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH.

The thirteenth Annual Meeting of the North Carolina Branch met in Grace Church May 20th. Several delegates were present and some remained the following three days for the Executive Board meeting.

The report this year was good. We want this year to organize new auxiliaries, strengthen old ones, and increase our subscriptions to Missionary Record. All auxiliaries did not send in reports, and those who did will please mail their reports back to me. Our membership is about 245. Let's increase it to 300 this year. Owing to the Board meeting our Branch did not have but one day.

The women of our church must awake and go to work more earnestly than ever before. The election of officers was as below: President, Mrs. J. F. McCulloch; 1st vice president, Mrs. F. R. Harris; 2nd vice president, Mrs. S. M. Hornady; 3rd vice president, Mrs. S. W. Taylor; treasurer, Miss Velna McCulloch; auditor, Mrs. T. A. Hunter; recording secretary, Mrs. J. M. Millikan; corresponding secretary, Dr. Harris Glascock; lady managers, Mrs. Inez Foust, Mrs. Diffee, Mrs. Deviney. Harris Glascock, M. D.

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING.

On May 21st many intelligent and earnest women from the noblest and best in the Methodist Protestant Church, gathered to transact business for "our King".

The personnel of this body of devout women was an inspiration in itself—the business-like way in which the affairs were transacted was an inspiration, and the harmony that prevailed was delightful. Rev. T. M. Johnson told us of the importance of the W. F. M. S. in the activities of the church. His address was encouraging and helpful. Dr. Wilbur gave a stereoptican address with views of our property and missionaries in Japan and China. Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson, in her usual happy manner, brought greetings from the foreign field. She is full of missionary zeal, and bids us God speed in our work for women and children. Mr. J. Norman Wills brought fraternal greetings from the Board of Foreign Missions. Mrs. A. G. Dixon gave us a fraternal message from the Woman's Board of Home Missions.

Miss Wetsung Vung, of Greensboro College for Women, told us of our great opportunity for helping the women of China. She spoke at length on foot-binding and other habits of the people of China, that we women of America could help to alleviate.

"The Hour and Its Needs" was one of the most helpful things we had and was entered into by many. Mrs. Lida East led the discussion.

The Board paid the Children's Home a visit; had lunch and the children recited for them. The anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. R. M. Andrews and was much enjoyed.

Miss Nancy V. Grose, our returned missionary, addressed the Board meeting twice and was present during the entire meeting, giving the Board many hints and helps.

A pantomime exercise closed the meeting. This was given by the Philathea class.

This the 24th Board meeting closed a profitable and harmonious meeting, and we trust we all may be strengthened and built up in missionary zeal and that we may be more in earnest about the "King's business". Harris Glascock, M. D.
Cor. Sec. of N. C. Branch.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.

Brother Hulin preached a good sermon for us the third Sunday. Some said the best sermon they ever heard him preach; They all seem good to me. We have a pretty good Sunday school, but it could be much better if we could get the people to come on and take a part. Brother Hulin said he was pleased to hear so many of the questions answered. We want him to be there for Sunday school third Sunday in next month. After preaching he asked those that wanted the prayers of the Christians to come and give him their hands. There were some that went. People were made to shed tears.

We are sorry that Mrs. Wm. Russell's sight has failed her so that she can't read. We miss her in our class and singing. We hope she will soon get better.

I like to read the Herald, although it makes me sad sometimes. That piece that mother wrote in the last week's paper about her boy made me shed tears. But be faithful, mother, and you will meet him again. O Lord, help our boys to live better. Lizzie Cranford.

May 26, 1914.

Union Chapel, Granville Circuit.

The Sunday school rally at Rehoboth turned out to be a day of great success; it was a beautiful day and a large crowd attended. All seemed to enjoy it.

Mr. Bethea and others will write more about the day and will also send the papers that were read to be published in the Herald, and I think it would help us all to read them, so look carefully over your papers and find them.

On Thursday, May the 28th, our community was saddened by the death of Mr. Samuel Briggs, aged 69 years. He was a member of the Christian church.

He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn the loss of one who was near and dear to them. But their loss is his eternal gain.

To the bereaved we extend our heartfelt sympathy. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. A. T. Banks, and his body tenderly laid to rest at Union Chapel. Bettie Davis, Reporter.

Burlington.

Last Sunday was a record-breaker in the matter of attendance in our Sunday school this year. We had 285 present. It was not only a record-breaker in attendance, but the exercises given by the Philatheas were the best we have ever had in our school. The occasion was Philathea rally day and the termination of the Baraca-Philathea contest. An elaborate program was carried out, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, appropriate scriptural readings, and an address by Hon. Jas. S. Cook, of Graham. Pledges were received for the piano debt to the amount of about $176.00. The Philathea class has taken hold of the piano proposition with much enthusiasm and is proving itself master of the situation. Miss Swanee Patterson is the live, wide-awake president of this class, and, under her wise supervision, the class is doing things for the church and Sunday school.

The Baraca class is being heard from occasionally. They, too, are doing things for the church and Sunday-school. They recently purchased 200 song books for use in the Sunday school and presented them to the school last Sunday through their president, Mr. M. A. Coble. Our pastor, in a few words, accepted the gift in behalf of the school, speaking very highly and appreciatively of the work the organized classes are doing.

On the second Sunday in this month we will hold an anniversary service for our church and have a re-union in our Sunday-school. A committee has been appointed to prepare a program for the church anniversary.

The time for our second quarterly conference has been changed to the third Monday night in this month.

The Junior Philathea class has organized a Christian Endeavor Society in their class, and the meetings are held every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The monthly business meeting of the church was held Monday night. The attendance was very small, but much business was transacted. A nominating committee was elected to nominate officers for the Sunday school. It was decided to make some improvements in the church by making a door entrance from the church auditorium to the Philathea class room and placing book racks to the benches not already furnished. These improvements will mean much and add greatly to our comfort and convenience.

Miss Susie Stafford, who has been in Henderson teaching in the public school at that place, returned home last week to spend the summer vacation here. We are glad to have her back with us as she is a good worker in our church and Sunday sschool. C. B. Way, Reporter.

June 3rd.

—Dwight L. Moody: "It is a great thing to lead one soul from the darkness of sin into the glorious light of the Gospel. I believe if an angel were to wing his way from earth up to Heaven, and were to say that there was one poor, ragged boy, without father or mother, with no one to care for him and teach him the way of life; and if God were to ask who among them were willing to come down to this earth and live here for fifty years and lead that one to Jesus Christ, every angel in Heaven would volunteer to go. Even Gabriel, who stands in the presence of the almighty, would say: 'Let me leave my high and lofty position, and let me have the luxury of leading one soul to Jesus Christ.' There is no greater honor than to be the instrument in God's hand of leading one person out of the kingdom of Satan into the glorious light of Heaven."

—On Sunday, June 7, special services will be begun in the Methodist Protestant church. On Monday, June 8, Rev. Charles Morgan Compher, of Lynchburg, Va., a grandson of General Morgan of Confederate fame, will arrive to assist in the services. Mr. Compher is a man of splendid ability and deep spirituality. He uses no sensational methods but preaches the old-time gospel simply, earnestly, attractively. All are cordially invited to attend. Let's make it an Asheboro revival. Come and help to make it "our" meeting.—The Bulletin.

—Some time ago when Mr. G. C. Baucom, who lives in Monroe township, went to his lot he found that his cow had a piece of cotton rope in her moth and catching hold of it, he pulled a 16-foot plow line from the cow's stomach. She had swallowed all but the end which had a knot in it.—Monroe Journal.

—The singing class of the Methodist Protestant Children's Home at High Point, begin the season with their first concert at High Point next Friday evening and will soon begin a tour of the state with the class.—Bulletin.

—On Monday afternoon at one o'clock at the home of the bride at Seagrove Mr. Walter Clark Garner was married to Miss Catherine Stacy Lowdermilk, Rev. J. H. Stowe conducting the ceremony.

Mr. Garner is the son of the late Prof. W. C. Garner, of the Why Not school, a young man of sterling worth and a promising career. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lowdermilk, of Seagrove, and is well known over the country. The many beautiful presents attest the popularity of the couple.

—Bro. J. M. Stone led Grace Church prayer meeting last night. Bro. Raleigh Hunter is to lead next week. The attendance last night was good, though it will not be the best until all come that can.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

STOPPING THE AGONY.

An English judge, Sir Henry Hawkins, was presiding over a very long and tedious trial, and listening as attentively as he could to a protracted and wearying speech from an eminent counsel learned in the law.

Presently Sir Henry penciled a brief note and sent it to the lawyer in question. Opening it, that gentleman read as follows:

"Patience Competition.
Gold medal—Sir Henry Hawkins.
Honorable mention—Job."

Counsel's display of oratory came to an abrupt end.—Boston Transcript.

DIED.

Paschall.

On Thursday morning, May 28, 1914, death entered the home of Mr. R. J. Paschall, near Drewry, N. C., and called to rest his saintly sister, Miss Mary Jane Paschall, age 72 years.

She had been in bad health for several years. She was taken worse on Monday and the end was not unexpected. All was done for her that loving hands could do, but God said, It is enough, enter into thy rest.

Miss Paschall was a member of New Hope church for many years, although her health had not permitted her to attend church in several years. She was always glad to have her pastor visit their home.

She leaves to mourn their loss one brother, one niece and several nephews. Their loss is her eternal gain. Kind friends, grieve not for her, for she has only gone on before to welcome you one by one as God sees fit to call you.

The burial service was conducted by Mr. Holloway, and the remains were laid by the side of her mother near their home.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. N. W. Wilson, John Wilson, Clodie Watkins, Ed Lambert, T. D. Kimball and Buck Fleming. Misses Bertha Paschall, Mattie Watkins, Mary and Katie White carried the flowers.

A Friend.

Hawkins.

Miss Nora M. Hawkins, the subject of this article, departed this life on May 29, 1914, after being sick but a few days.

She suffered intensely from the very beginning of her sickness. All was done for her relief that could be done, but relief came only when the "white horse and his rider" past "neath the door-way's lintel" of her home.

She was thirty-four years old, was converted and joined Hawkins Chapel Methodist Protestant Church at the tender age of fifteen years, during the pastorate of Rev. H. S. B. Thompson, making her a member of the church nineteen years of the thirty-four of her life.

Her faithfulness and devotion to her church and Sunday school would lead us to believe that she had the best interests of His kingdom at heart.

At the time of her death she was a teacher in Hawkins Chapel Sunday school, and had been for a number of years, and it will be difficult to find one to fill her place.

She is survived by her mother, four sisters and two brothers, all of whom are faithful members of Hawkins Chapel.

In this sad hour we extend them our deepest sympathy and pray God that the vacancy made in their lives and hearts by the death of Sister Nora may be filled with the comforting presence of the Holy Spirit.

The remains of her mortal body were laid to rest in the family burying ground on Saturday, May 30, 1914, by the writer in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

—Missionary Review of the World: "In the situation in China to-day the most significant thing is not that the president and his council adopted the bill prescribing a religious ceremonial for the head of the nation, but that his identification with such a religious ceremonial should occasion any discussion in Chinese circles. Until the establishment of the republic, Confucianism was the state religion of China, the emperor himself being the head of the faith, and its services and maintenance a charge upon the public revenues. The fact that the present action has been deemed necessary is but another way of saying that a great change has taken place in the status of Confucianism in China, and it is not the historic form of Christianity as it prevailed previous to the republic which is embodied in the present bill, but a modified and somewhat denatured form of it. The deifying of dead emperors is discontinued, and this is a fact which will influence the Chinese view of dead ancestors. Confucianism is not, in reality, the established state religion, but the president is authorized to worship at the Temple of Heaven in behalf of the people."

BURLINGTON'S TWENTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

This was celebated last Sunday. An effort was made to bring together all former as well as all present members of the Sunday school. The result was an aattndance of 286 and an inspiring session of the school.

It was the editior's privilege to be present in the church service. The sermon was by the first pastor, Rev. W. C. Kennett, now nearly eighty years old, though apparently younger. (He was guilty of ploughing for an hour last week.) He represented the Christian life as a pilgrimage, comparing it to the journey of the Israelites from Egypt to the Promised Land. He is a man of strong faith and hope, and it was reassuring to hear him express his confidence as he looks across the River.

A historical sketch was read by Bro. R. F. Williams, from which we caught the following notes:

The first Methodist Protestant preacher to preach regularly in Burlington was Rev. W. C. Kennett, pastor of Belmont Mission, beginning in a union church in 1890. He collected the names of resident Methodist Protestants and gave them to his successor, Rev. W. F. McDowell, who came in 1891. In 1892 Bro. McDowell organized a church with seventeen members. A lot was bought in that year. Rev. C. A. Pickens came as the next pastor, remaining for a year. In 1893, Rev. W. A. Bunch came for two years, during which the church was built, though not completed. Bro. Bunch at times advanced the money to keep the work moving on.

In 1894 a Christian Endeavor Society, the first in the county, was organized, which was kept up for years.

In 1895, Rev. J. G. W. Holloway came as pastor for three years, during which the church was completed. The Annual Conference met here for the first time in 1896. This stimulated local effort. The church then had 96 members.

In 1897, Rev. C. A. Cecil came as pastor and remained two years. The church grew, 55 members beeing added. Rev. C. H. Whitaker was pastor in 1899-1900. Rev. G. F. Millaway followed, remaining six years, during which time 250 were added to the church.

In 1904 the Annual Conference met here the second time. Rev. Wm. Porter was next pastor, remaining one and a half years, followed by Rev. J. H. Abernethy to complete the year. Rev. J. D. Williams came in 1908 and remained three years. During this time the second parsonage was sold and the present splendid parsonage built.

Rev. T. E. Davis came in 1911 and remained two years. During his pastorate the Sunday School Annex was built.

In 1912 the Annual Conference met here the third time.

In 1913, Rev. G. L. Curry became pastor, and the church goes forward hopefully under his leadership.

The church property is valued at $6,750; parsonage, $4,500. There is a debt on the church of $1,500 and on the parsonage, $1,272.

The anniversary services were to be continued on Monday night with a song service and a social hour.

We have few, if any, more active and devoted congregations than our Burlington people.

HISTORIC GROUND NEAR BURLINGTON.

Last Sunday afternoon Mr. Minter Coble took us over the scene of Pyle's Hacking Match, or, as it is sometimes called, the "Massacre of Pyle's Tories." This is on the farm now owned by Bro. George W. Coble, three miles south of Burlington. There is only one thing to mark the event, and that is a grave, whose head stone says that seven soldiers lie buried there. There is nearby a pond covered with brambles in which Colonel Pyle hid himself after being wounded, and thus saved his life.

The battle, if battle it may be called, occurred on Feb. 25, 1781. After reading the account of it, we are inclined to think the term "massacre" not very inappropriate. But we must remember that it was near the end of the Revolutionary War, when the passions of men were heated to a white heat.

The facts seem to have been about as follows:

Dr. Pyle, who had been a Regulator, and who had been punished for it, had finally taken the oath of allegiance to British rule. When Cornwallis was in Hillsboro, Pyle sent word to him that he proposed to organize the Tories of his vicinity into a company and asked for protection. Col. Tarleton was sent with soldiers and was encamped where Burlington cemetery now is. Pyle and his men were expecting to join them, but went first to tell their friends good-by. They were warned to be cautious, but, says Col. Tarleton in his book, "inspired by whiskey and the novelty of their situation, they unfortunately prolonged their excursions." As they were marching on, they saw approaching them some companies of soldiers whom they mistook for some of Tarleton's men (similarity of dress causing the mistake). The soldiers were, in fact, part of the American army under command of Light Horse Harry Lee (father of Gen. Robt. E. Lee) and Captain Graham (father of Wm. A. Graham). When the latter inquired of Pyle's men who they were, they very promptly answered by avowing their allegiance to the king. The Americans as promptly attacked them, and in a few minutes cut down all who did not escape by flight. Over ninety were killed. Others who were wounded lay still to keep from being further injured, and were rescued by friends. There were, it seems, about two hundrd men in Pyle's company.

Colonel Pyle was a physician and was pardoned for faithful and skillful services to Whigs wounded afterward at the battle of Cane Crrek.

It is said that this deplorable slaughter had an intimidating effect upon the Tories of adjacent counties, restraining them from like organizations.

—Rev. T. E. Martin has been assigned to Buncombe Ct. as pastoral supply.

—It is vain to try to force events that must come spontaneously.

A LIFE WORK AND ITS PREPARATION.

Baccalaureate Sermon, Elon College, Sunday, May 31.

By Rev. F. T. Tagg, D. D.

Text: And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians and was mighty in words, and in deeds.. Acts 7: 22.

We are indebted to the inspired but persecuted Stephen, of the early Christian Church, for the information here given of the great leader of the children of Israel. The interesting history of his eventful life, the unparalleled wisdom of his administration, the unique character of his literary remains, the ever widening influence of his life-work upon the civilization and progress of the world, confirm the high estimate given us here in this discourse of the inspired disciple. The details of his life history need no mention here. But there are some salient and distinguishing features to be considered that will enable us to illustrate and appreciate the lessons of the hour. His greatness may eassily be measured by the quality and permanence of his work. The results of a man's life are a clear indicator of his character and personal force, He possessed the essential qualities of leadership. Trained in an Egyptian court he attained a mental equipment that made him the peer of any of his contemporaries. He was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians who at that time were the most advanced people on earth. They cultivated mathematics, architecture, medicine, law, philosophy, state craft and the art of war, and historians tell us they made much progress.

But though reared in the luxuries of a court, and in a religion of pantheism, he seems never to have forgotten the religion of the Hebrews, nor his knowledge of the true God, and when the time came to decide he did not hesitate. He chose to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.

It is a magnificent illustration of courage, fidelity and manliness to yield up prrincely luxuries to duty and right, and only a princely nature will do it..

The court training was incalculably important, but it was not sufficient to qualify him for his work. The indignant resentment he exhibited at the needless abuse of one of his countrymen may have been an early intimation of his life-work, but it was also an evidence that he had not yet acquired that self-control which must in the end be the dominant element of leadership. He preserved his faith in God, and was doubtless scandalized and disgusted with the idolatry that surrounded him, but it was not apparently upon religious grounds that he at first stood forth in behalf of his people. He smote the Egyptian because he thought his brethren would understand that God by his hand would deliver them; but but they understood not. The Hebrews were not yet ready for their emancipation, but neither was Moses yet ready for his work. His motive was patriotism—a very exalted motive—but not the highest. Very significantly does Stephen say: "It came into his heart, to visit his brethren." God had not yet sent him. He did not yet comprehend the full import of the divine purpose for which he was preparing. He wanted to be a political emancipator. God was preparing him for a religious reformer. He was not yet ready for his work. He had passed through the educational period. Now there was a school of trial, obscurity, and discipline, a striking illustration of the truth that a man does not always enter at once upon the work that is at last to be the grand and distinguishing labor of life.

His first school was the court of Egypt, where he became learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, their history, and traditions, their civil and religious institutions. As Saul was brought up in the pharisaism he was afterward to expose and demolish, as William the Silent was trained in the closet of Charles V., and at the court of Philip II., to become the liberator of the united provinces, so Moses was brought up in the very midst of those evils against which his whole system was a protest, and out of which he led his kinsmen into truth and liberty. Then came the mountain and desert training. This did not only serve to develop hardihood and physical courage. It became a period of meditation and communion, of self subjugation and discipline. The solitudes and silences of his mountain home were of no less value than his schooling in the court. He combined discipline with acquisition. He added moral power to mental vigor, and wedded peerless meekness to decision and indomitable courage.

Preparation for a great life work may require more time than its accomplishment. Angelo may throw upon the canvas a marvelous creation in two or three months, but behind it is a lifetime of training and discipline. The great Bunker Hill oration was delivered in two hours, but Daniel Webster is himself authority that back of it was twenty-five years of schooling and training and experience. Moses was eighty years in preparing for his life work, which he accomplished in forty.

That which is the result of such lengthened preparation is abiding. Moses' work has been increasingly felt during three milleniums and is actually more potent now than ever before. We stand amazed before the tremendous results. On its civil side it was the formation of a mighty nation out of a horde of slaves. On its political side it was the enactment of a code of laws which is now the admiration of every jurist, and which has come to some of its most glorious fruitage in the organization of our own republic. On its literary side it was the production of a book in which the grandest subjects that can occupy the human mind are treated in a style of simple sublimity, and the history of the beginnings is written with a sympathetic vividness that seems to transfer us into the midst of the scenes it describes. On its religious side it was the inauguration of a system of worship which conserved the truth with regard to the unity and sovereignty, the spirituality, and holiness of God. The system contained within itself, in symbol, all those spiritual realities which are now set forth in the character and gospel of Jesus Christ. The theocrasy of the Jews had its birth there. The seeds that subsequently flowered out in Magna Charta and the Declaration of Independence were planted there. Here is the fountain head of history, the organization of the church, the morning star of liberty, and civilization. Infidels may carp and sneer at the "Mistakes of Moses," but his great life was neither a mistake nor a failure. It is incorporated in the best civilization of the ages and next to Jesus Christ, stands foremost in the march of progress.

In the orderings of Providence it is intended that every man shall find a peculiar and distinctive life work. He is endowed with aptitudes and predilections, with faculties and adaptations, and when he attains to the greatest of all knowledge, a knowledge of himself, he will find his place in the ranks of life. The talent is the call. There is one direction in which all space is open to him. He has faculties silently inviting him thither to endless exertion. Emerson says, "He is like a ship in a river, he runs against obstructions on every side but one, on that side all obstruction is taken away and he sweeps on serenely over a deep channel into an infinite Sea."

Life must have a definite direction, it cannot reach an ideal, it cannot accomplish anything above the vulgar and the common-place without a controlling motive. It will be like a letter dropped into a box without an address. It is equipped with all that is necessary to carry it forward—vitality, energy—the power to be or to do, but it lacks the one element of direction. Too often alas! it goes to the dead letter office of disappointment, crushed hopes and final disaster. Life is meaningless without a goal. It is sailing without a chart or compass. True, there are thousands who drift along, and many are more or less comfortable, but is man with all his endowments and possibilities, to be only driftwood?

What a man does, that he has himself entered into, and cannot be taken away from him. To his taste, and adaptation, all things are open that he needs. To what enters into his appointed life-work he has the right of eminent domain. Every where he may take what belonge to him nor can all the force of men hinder him from taking so much. Nor can he take more though every door were open to him. Nor can he do what he has not the preparation for doing. Preliminary to all great and permanent achievements there must be an adequate training, not only in the courts of learning, but in the mountains of difficulty where caution tempers impetuosity, where antagonism develops courage and capability, and where inadequate resources stimulate the inventor of successful agencies.

In the silence and solitude of that inner life which must always be isolated except as God is admitted into it there is the first and greatest conquest to be made; the conquest of himself. "He that hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is broken down and without walls." An Alexander may conquer the world. and yet be so much a slave to passion as to murder his best friend. The Spirit of Solomon's maxim has entered into the ethical philosophy of all nations. In one of the odes of Horace this thought is finely expressed:

"By virtue's precepts to control
The furious passions of the soul,
In ever wider realms to reign
Unenvied monarch, than if Spain
You could to distant Silya join
And both the Carthages were thine."

Beyond this self conquest, courage cannot extend. This is complete sovereignty. A man reaches that commanding and glorious exaltation when all his passions and impulses become the willing servants of his judgment and conscience. But such a miracle can come only from personal contact with God. Somewhere the burning bush must be found, and the voice of God must be heard. This divine conquest in which all the achievements of real manhood center will hear the voice of God, saying, "Certainly I will be with thee." He has caught the divine fire. He is panoplied in the divine armor. He is filled with the divine spirit, and with the great apostle he can say, "It is no more I that do it but Christ that dwelleth in me." No man ever reaches the climax of greatness, until he becomes acquainted with himself, talks and counsels with—respects—thinks for—acts for—goes to school to — sacrifices for — masters — crowns himself. No man has ever made the world better by learning his last lesson in any other school. Such a man will be mighty in words and in work. What he says may make a Felix tremble on his throne, or sound the knell of doom into the very ears of a sensual and dissipated King. He becomes a prophet to his contemporaries, and speaks as one having authority. Personality is the soul of utterance. Speech only gives expression to personality. Character is the latent heat of words. The man behind them gives them their momentum and projectile force. Our inner life molds our language and is molded by it in turn. What, then, is our inner life? In the exigencies of life; in the unexpected and sometimes embarrassing crises of life, we cannot pause to think and to weigh words. If then this disciplined and chastened character experiences the divine afflatus that gives him in that same hour the words he ought to utter, he becomes irresistible in logic and power. There is then for us no resource but to make ourselves whole, to see to it that our lives shall be so marked that what we say and do shall be dominated by, and shall express, the sum of what we are. We can only realize the power of words, when used by one who can make them do his bidding. You can go to our forts and see cannon balls piled up in pyramids, but they are harmless. It is when the powder is put behind them and are touched off by the spark of fire that they speed, but they speak in thunderbolts. Words in the dictionary are gathered into columns, and piled up in tiers, but they are harmless. It is when they have behind them the power of a living personality, and are touched by the vitalizing spark of genius, that they leap into life, and become endowed with resistless energy. Let them be used by the mighty energy of thought that is found in the brain of a Paul, a Milton, a Webster or a Gladstone, and they become dynamics, to demolish error, establish national causes, and give immortal life to great humanitarian movements.

O to be a man, seeking to be true, true to the truth, true to righteousness, true to a quickened conscience, true to God. No shams to modify the full orbed character, no conceit to blur the dignity of the soul, no fickleness to modulate the music of his life. To be shorn of all the world that death will take away, and stand as Moses stood in the solitude of the mountain with his life-work well nigh completed, and with nothing but his own unparalleled personality to project him into all the future. O! my friends, if we are ever to be called by the Master to witness transfigurations, or to ascend in charirots of triumph, we must have personalities like Moses and Elijah and Paul, and Luther, and Savonarola. We must live in a way to send our voices before us into the unrevealed future. If we would be prophets to our day and generation, our words must enter into the organization of society. The moral forces of the community, and the administration of government, and man's personality must give force and character to his utterances. Carlyle said, "A word spoken in season, at the right moment is the mother of ages."

A man's biography is the true criticism by which the force of his words must be measured. As that becomes impressive, as its activity and utility emphasize and illuminate the utterance, it enters into the construction of society and the progress of life. When we come to know what a man lived for, what he had to be, and what he had to spend, we find that the magic rule that made him what he was. No life can be a failure when it enables us to recognize the message which God meant in its mission endowment and activity.

No inactive life can be either good or useful. Activity is an infallible sign of vigor and health. Beulah land is a land of misery except for those whose used up faculties demand rest. It is the "Old man's land" and is altogether unsuited to those who are in possession of health, energy, and laudable desire to be useful. Activity must be properly directed. It requires activity and effort to pull down a house, as well as to build it. St. Paul was as energetic in persecuting the church, as he afterward became in building it up. The homely maximum, "Be sure you are right and then go ahead," has a vast amount of rational philosophy in it. No life work can be great until its motive and purpose are deserving and meritorious. We must not ask how to become rich or gain notoriety. These misers and tyrants may acquire, and these other misers and tyrants may take away. You may become rulers, (but there are a million chances against you), but there are no impassable barriers to the qualities of character that fit a man for usefulness and eminence. Crowns may be placed on the wrong head. The bias of the multitude, the unrestrained impulses of the maddening crowd, the rashness and indiscriminating enthusiasm of the majority may put the sceptre in the wrong hand, but future generations will always put it where it belongs. The martyrs of one age become the heroes of the next.

Paradoxical as it may appear, the first step toward a truly noble life is humility, the recognition of our limitations and fallibility. Arrogance and assumption, conceit and vanity are the infirmities of small and immature men. Moses at forty was ready to accept leadership in the emancipation of Israel. At eighty, when he had learned humility in the school of experience, he was prepared to furnish all sorts of excuses to escape the responsibility. When Paul was a sinner he thought himself blameless. When he passed through the hard experience that made him the greatest of the apostles, he called himself the chief of sinners. Exaltation through humility was one of the greatest lessons that Jesus ever taught. He humbled himself, and his followers were told that whosoever would be great must minister, and whosoever would be the chiefest of all must be the servant of all. This is the irrevocable law "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

The next step is obedience. Not specially to arbitrary rules but to the inflexible laws which govern every progressive step of life. This is the secret of Christ's Kingship. "He became obedient, wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and this is the secret of all command, obedience to the laws upon which growth and power are founded. To be a scholar one must do far more than obey the rules of the school. He must obey the laws of mentality and scholarship, and these are al rooted in himself. The condition or law of a peaceful life is submission to the laws of meekness. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Only as he is obedient will he triumph, for by this can he take his own out of the multiplicity that sweeps and circles around him. "We need only obey. There is a guidance for each of us, and by lowly listening we shall hear the right word." It will direct us to a reality, a fit place, congenial duties. Place yourself in the middle of a stream of wisdom and power, which animates all whom it floats, and you will be happily impelled to truth and right, to usefulness and success in the ranks of life. One has wisely said, " By contenting ourselves with obedience we become divine." As we veer from this we lose not only the opportunity but the ability to work out the problems of our life work.

Finally, there must be a firm and inflexible decision. No irresolution that halts between two opinions. No infirmity of purpose that may yield at last to unexpected opposition; no timidity that shrinks from suffering or sacrifice. If the alternative of a luxurious court with its sinful pleasures, or enduring affliction with the people of God, is presented there must be no hesitation or uncertainty in the decision. We cannot stop to consider what is safe, or what is profitable, or what is popular. It may be very agreeable to vanity and prone to be a flattered prince of a royal court, but it is divine to become an inspired leader to break human chains and lead his fellow men to some Canaan of knowledge, rectitude of happiness. Difficulties however great, opposition however pronounced, only serve to fire the arm and quicken the faculties of the hero whose decision of character and invincible energies are unalterably fixed upon the accomplishment of his life work.

A Milton may be blind, but that cannot deter him from soaring into the high and lofty place where Paradise Lost is found. An imprisoned tinker gives us Pilgrim's Progress, and a martyred Paul gives the Gospel of Salvation to a Gentile world.

A vascillating man, no matter what his abilities, is invariably pushed aside. It is he who resolves to succeed and with every fresh rebuff begins resolutely again, that reaches the goal. It may drive him to the mountains, but there he will meet with God and come down with shining face, and new vigor for the fray. One of the most magnificent biographical sketches in the Bible is this, "And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought that which was good and right and truth before the Lord his God. And in every work that he began he did it with all his heart and God prospered him."

Here is the secret of a true and success- and truth with an unflinching purpose, and if you modestly shrink from it because it seems too great for your powers, you will hear the voice of God saying, "Certainly I will be with thee." And when the infinite arm of God sustains the finite arm of man, nothing is impossible.

THE MAKING OF A NAME.

The making of a name that is a name is not the capturing of a city, the defeating of an army, or the rising in political honors. Joseph lived the life of a true shepherd boy, and by his traits of character made for himself a name that time cannot erase. The boy Samuel heard the call of God and obeyed, and his life looms large in social history. Paul waged no wars, nor founded a peace conference, but his submission to God made for him a name never to be forgotten. Christ came to us as the simplest of men, and left us by a criminal's death. His life made him a name worth while. What is your life making for you? C. B. Riddle.

THE RELIGION OF LINCOLN.

Lincoln's one rule of life was the Christian rule of doing right. He was great because he was natural and sincere. He was controlled by realities. In his boyhood days he became acpuainted with the Bible and the old rule and principle of justice. In his dealings with men in commercial, social and professional life he adhered strictly to that rule. When a boy, he borrowed a book from a neighbor. Rain beat into the opening of the log house where he lived and the book was injured. Promptly he reported to the owner, and he was permitted to work for him until the book was paid for.

In his first visit to New Orleans he saw the shame and injustice of slavery. Then it was that he said, "If I ever get a chance to strike at the institution of slavery, I will strike it hard."

Lincoln was postmaster in a very small office in Illinois. After a time the office was discontinued, as but little business was transacted there. At the time the office was closed there was owing to the Government the sum of seventeen dollars and a few cents, and it was not claimed by the postal authorities. After three or four years this omission was discovered, and an officer of the Government called on Lincoln for the money. Meanwhile, Abraham Lincoln was fighting bravely against privation. When the officer called to receive the money, a friend of Lincoln was present who knew his financial circumstances. He thought that the money had been appropriated, and calling Mr. Lincoln from the room, offered to loan him the money. The future President smiled at this generous offer, but quickly went to his room and produced the money in exact amount, and the very coins in which it had been deposited by the people who had bought stamps. That was simple honesty and justice.

Again, hear him say in a political speech, "Douglas does not care whether slavery is voted up or down, but God cares and humanity cares and I care." He spoke volumes when he said at another time, "He who molds public sentiment goes deeper than he who enacts statutes or pronounces decisions. He makes statutes and decisions possible or impossible to be executed."

It was a feature of his nobility as a lawyer and statesman that he was incapable of cherishing the memory of an insult. In a certain case in court Edwin M. Stanton was an associate counsel with Mr. Lincoln. When the case came to trial, Stanton looked with disdain upon the western lawyer, and whispered to a friend, "What does that long-armed creature intend to do in the case?" referring to Lincoln, who had prepared to argue before the court. The notes that the western lawyer had prepared were used by his colleague. Only a few years after this episode in the court room in Cincinnati, "the long-armed creature" invited Stanton to become a member of his cabinet.

In his twenty-three years at the bar he had not less than 172 cases before the supreme court and frequently appeared before the United States Circuit and District Courts, and was often chosen counsel for some corporation, or arbitrator in important cases. During the years of his legal practise and public life, in which he came into contact with rude and ambitious men, some of whom were embittered by his failure to please them, he never willingly made any man an enemy, or allowed any one, if he could prevent it, to consider him a personal foe.

Like a Christian he spoke, when he said, "I have read the Beatitudes of Jesus. I have sometimes thought I might claim the benefit of the one that pronounces a blessing upon those who hunger and thirst after righteousness; but if that fails me, possibly I may come in among the peacemakers. As a peacemaker, a lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man."

He advocated temperance and proclaimed the gospel of health: "Do not worry; eat three square meals a day; say your prayers; be courteous to your creditors; keep your digestion good; exercise; go slow and go easy. Maybe there are other things that your special case requires to make you happy; but, my friend, these I reckon, will give you a good life."

Our Lincoln was just, sincere, courageous. He was indeed religious. Like one who has heard the voice of the all-wise God he acted and spoke. Read his sublime, solemn declaration: "I know there is a God and that He hates injustice and slavery." "I see the storm coming and I know His hand is in it. If He has a place and a work for me, and I think He has, I believe I am ready. I am nothing, but truth is everything. I know I am right, because I know that liberty is right, for Christ teaches it."

"The time for the enactment of the emancipation policy can be no longer delayed. Public sentiment I think will sustain it, many of my warmest friends and supporters demand it, and I have promised God that, if General Lee was driven back from Pennsylvania I would crown the result with the declaration of freedom to the slaves."

"When I left Springfield I asked the people to pray for me; I was not a Christian. When I buried my son—the severest trial of my life—I was not a Christian. But when I went to Gettysburg and saw the graves of thousands of our soldiers I then and there consecrated myself to Christ."

Our nation has sacrificed rich treasure for the sake of freedom, justice, humanity. Lincoln was our worthiest offering. He died for the cause of the people, and by his life and death he gave to one race liberty, and to another freedom. The perpetuity of our government is assured.

From the time he left Springfield the prayers of the people were offered for him at family altars and in places of public worship, constantly and fervently. It is but natural that the Christian people should enshrine him and his noble work in their hearts, and believe the hand of the Almighty directed him through all the perilous years of the terrible war.

Lincoln maintained his noble characteristics to the last; no selfish motive or narrow personal pride can be charged against him; no stain or dishonor can be found in all the eventful years of his life.. We point with pride to him. He is the product of our republic. He is an illustration of Christian manhood under a government of the people, by the people, and for the people.—Edmund F. Albertson, D. D., in Zion's Herald.

DREADING THE DISHES.

Most people put off doing disagreeable things. "Won't tomorrow do?" is a familiar household question; the easy promise, "Yes, I'll do it in a little while," has often tided us over until the merciless "eleventh hour" that finds so many things undone, or done helter-skelter, in order that we may be ready when the clock strikes twelve.

It is disagreeable to wash dishes. Even mothers, who do most things cheerfully, will sometimes pass the dishes on to youthful and unwilling hands. The schoolgirl invariably has other things to do, and the dishes are so insistent. Even when stacked in the sink, they look reproachful. Left in disorder on the table, they glare at you every time you pass; and when you are playing tennis or finishing a book, they loom over your head like a thunder-cloud. "I just dread to get at them," you say, and the dread grows greater every time you think of them.

But is doing the dishes as bad as dreading them? To scrape off the left-over food; to pile spoons with spoons, and plates with plates; to have a sparkling lather of soapsuds and hot water; to attack the dishes in the order of their cleanliness, instead of inversely or haphazard; to hang up the towels and see a clear sky spanning a golden afternoon — surely there are worse things than that! Washing dishes, like many other disagreeable jobs, requires no concentration. The mind is free to dwell on pleasanter things.

The sense of freedom and the feeling of self-righteousness that follow the prompt washing of the dishes are enough to raise the humble drudgery into a fine art, and insure that it be done not only quickly, but well. "There," said one valiant girl, hanging up the dishcloths with a flourish, "if I plunge headlong into them, I don't really come to my senses until I am half through! It is only dreading to do them that gets on my nerves." That, as all who know will admit, was hitting the nail square on the head.—Youth's Companion.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Randolph Circuit.

Level Cross .....June 27, 3 P. M.
Gray's Chapel .....June 28, 11 A. M.

Pastors please state where I will be met in going from one field to another, and make such arrangements between yourselves. C. A. Cecil.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Cleveland Circuit.

I spent Friday and Friday night with Bro. Lassiter at the parsonage in Falston. Bro. Lassiter and I on Saturday drove to Mt. Moriah for eleven o'clock service. A very good attendance. They have a good church at this place, but it needs to be painted. We drove back to Casar and took dinner with Bro. S. M. Warlick.

Pleasant Hill was our next appointment at 3 P. M. Not a large attendance, but a good service. Spent the night with Bro. W. M. Warlick.

We drove to Oak Grove for 11 o'clock service on Sunday where there were more people than could get in the church. I believe there were more people present than I have seen at any appointment since I have been traveling the District; a rather long but I trust a helpful service. Dinner on the ground. I ate with Bro. Powell.

Bro. Lassiter and I drove to Kisler's for our evening service; a fair attendance considering the membership; a pleasant service. We drove back to the parsonage and spent the night pleasantly after a hard day's work.

Bro. Lassiter is received kindly by his people and also by the people at Falston, but he ought to be among his own people and living at Casar and his people would be pleased if such was the case. He would be in four miles of either one of his churches and as it is he is from 6 to 16 miles to his appointments. His people own the parsonage at Falston and they do not feel themselves able to buy and build unless they can sell out at Falston. They have made an offer to the Falston pastor and his people which I consider a fair and reasonable one, and the Falston people have it under consideration and will do what they think best about the matter. This I consider a very important matter for Cleveland and Falston Cts., and also for the present and future pastors. I gave them my opinion and I am perfectly willing to leave the whole matter with the pastors and their membership. I thank Mrs. Lassiter for her kindness for looking after my linen while in her home.

Falston Circuit.

I spent Monday with Bro. Moton and his family and took dinner with Mrs. R. A. Lackey, spent Monday night with Bro. Moton. Preached at Friendship on Tuesday to a small congregation on account of the busy season, I suppose; a very good service. After the service the parsonage matter was considered and was left for the consideration of the membership on Falston charge. I am satisfied but for Bro. Lassiter's patches so he could give Bro. Moton possession the whole matter would be adjusted in the near future. This is only my opinion.

Bro. Moton and I went to Lawndale for night service where we had a good service but not a full house. Spent the night with Bro. W. E. Richards. Bro. Moton is appreciated by his people and is moving along with them pleasantly; he's not strong physically at present; but trust he will soon be himself again. Mrs. M. and the girls like to live at Falston and when they get into their new quarter they will be better pleased.

Shelby Circuit.

I left Lawndale on Wednesday A. M. for Shelby. Bro. Raper met me at the station and we were soon in his home where I met his wife and daughter. I preached at Shelby at 8 P. M.; not a large attendance, but good attention, and they seem determined to succeed and the pastor is ready to assist and encourage along all lines. I spent the night with Bro. Raper, and next morning he drove me over the town with his new horse and buggy which I enjoyed very much. At 5:20 I took the train for Lincolnton and Bro. J. H. Wood's little son Alton met me with horse and buggy, and I took supper with the family, and at 8 o'clock I preached to those present; this was my last appointment on this field. I spent the night with Bro. A. R. Elmore, visited Bro. Johnson and took the train for Charlotte.

The people like Bro. Raper and I trust they will have a successful year. Bro. Raper and I took dinner with Rev. H. W. Braswell and wife and we all enjoyed it very much.

Charlotte.

Bro. Braswell met me here, and we took another search for a lot and found one that he and some of the members think will suit, and we had intended to have consulted the membership at the church services at night, but on account of rain not many were out and the matter was deferred until Bro. Braswell's next appointment.

The membership here will have to do as the Asheville people have done, and the Conference will be willing to assist them. I trust we can have a church in Charlotte. Bro. Braswell is interested; if he can get his people to take hold with him I am inclined to think he can report something definite when we meet in Asheville.

Claim at this church promised.

I heartily endorse Bro. Andrews' suggestion as to paying the railroad expenses of pastors to the Summer Conference.

High Point.

Last week the Ladies' Aid Society put a splendid gas range in the kitchen at the parsonage. With the gas range and a fireless cooker the mistress of the parsonage does the cooking with a great degree of comfort this hot weather. The people here are exceedingly good to their pastor and his family.

Our Sunday school attendance for the two Sundays in June has been 218 and 220. Our average for May and June has been 235. That is not quite up with Burlington, but on the long stretch from now until Conference we hope to give them a close run. We are expecting Dr. F. T. Tagg to preach for us on Sunday, June 28. That being international Sunday school day, we are making a special effort to get all our people to attend that day.

Mrs. Henry Hancock is extremely ill at the High Point hospital. We ask the prayers of the church in her behalf. She has a husband and six bright children who need her so badly. Yours for the Master,

Dr. Forlines was with us at Hawkins Chapel school house June 5th and gave us a good lecture, with moving pictures of Palestine. All enjoyed it. The congregation wasn't large. Sorry no more were out. We ask him to come again. Our Sunday school and prayer meeting are in good condition. Some of the children have been absent for several Sundays, owing to whooping cough.

Our superintendent wasn't able to be with us Sunday; we missed him so much: hope he will soon be well and with us in the Sunday school. Our pastor filled his regular appointment here Sunday, and preached another one of his good sermons. There was a large congregation out to hear him. Every sermon Bro. Edwards preaches he gets better; he makes it so plain even the little children can understand it. Vannah Shearin, Rep.

Children's Day services were held Sunday morning. Each child recited well. Some of the McDaniel Sunday school pupils joined in to make the program long enough. Much credit is due Misses Blanche and Lossie Hardee for training the children. The children worked hard for the Sunday school banner.

Our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, delivered a helpful sermon in the afternoon, which was enjoyed by all, especially the sleepy ones.

Dr. C. E. Forlines of Westminster, Maryland, preached for us fifth Sunday morning, which was very much enjoyed. He also lectured the following Monday night. There were not very many out to hear him; guess it was on account of such a busy season.

I didn't report last month on account of the death of my sister, but we are still moving along nicely. They will begin work on the vestibule some time soon as the lumber has already been placed on the church ground. The money for the windows, and the amount for painting the benches has been collected, we have also got our pulpit set, so the next will be on the vestibule.

Miss Irene Hawkins spent the fourth week of May very pleasantly, at the parsonage with the pastor and his wife. I like parsonage life fine, it being the first time I ever visited at a parsonage. Before then I never knew what a busy life a preacher lives. I think if everybody could spend a week or two at a parsonage, there would be less complaining about the pastor's not visiting the people every time they think he ought to.

There will be a union picnic at Brinkleyville the 25th of June. Every church in reach, regardless of denomination, is invited to come. Each family is requested to bring a baasket, so guess there will be plenty to eat. Those that do not attend will miss a good treat.

Our protracted meetings will begin the first Sunday in August. Rev. J. H. Bowman will be pulpit help. We ask the prayers of all the people that much good will be accomplished.

Irene Hawkins.

Shelby.

I hope you are having rain ere this. We are having fine rains and hot weather. We were dry till about June the 1st, since then we could not ask for finer seasons. I kept our garden worked, and we have had two seasons of garden peas, had beans, Irish potatoes, beets, cabbage, and peaches from our own garden for some two weeks. Some of our corn is in tassel. It looks fine. Fine wheat and oat crop in this section and the most of it is cut. Cotton is growing very rapidly now.

We held our meeting at Lincolneton, beginning on Wednesday before the 5th Sunday. Bro. Johnson reported, so I will just say I enjoyed my nine days' stay with that good people, if it was dry and hot. I received a letter from Bro. J. R. Elmor's family the ninth and they said they were dry yet. I roomed at Bro. J. R. Elmor's and Bro. Moton at Bro. D. B. Johnson's; close neighbors, but we are so large we had a room apiece; and oh, how kind they were to us. Bro. C. A. Cecil came to our charge from Fallston on the 10th. I met him at the depot. As we only had the pleasure of having him two nights we did not ask him to go to Caroleen. They were very sorry he did not get there, but as the most of them work in the factory, there would have been very few out in daytime. As he reports his visits I will say we were glad to have him in our home and he preached a splendid, practical sermon to us at Shelby and then lectured and advised us in a way, as I see it, a president should. His sermon was good, but we needed the other as well, if we only do it. I have had no let up since conference,—finances, preaching, and trying to find the people who had their names on the list. I have found all that can be found here, but we are short quite a number. We have received over 20 into the church, but I fear we will have to report a large shortage. I expect to make it just as it is at the end of the year. I will close by saying, I enjoyed having Bro. Moton with us at Lincolnton, and Bro. Cecil in our home. It seemed like other good old times, but our homes are broken since then, like many others. I must close.

Let me say I was at Caroleen last Sunday and took dinner with Sister Bess and all her children. I don't mean little children, but her ladies and one young man. She has an interesting family. Bro. Lamar's wife and children were there. My wife, daughter, and I roomed there during our meeting at Caroleen and they were so kind to us. We took meals here and there and at Sister Bess's. And now I am

C. E. M. Raper.

Chestnut Ridge.

Our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, preached a fine sermon. We will not say it was the best, for we think they are all the best. We are so glad to have them back again.

We organized S. S. the first Sunday in April with a very good school; it continues to improve. We had 105 the first Sunday in June, 140 the second, also a good many visitors from other churches. We have made it a rule for more than a year to give our 4th Sunday's collection to the Children's Home.

Prof. C. E. Forlines will be with us the 24th of June at night. I feel safe in saying we all like to read the M. P. Herald. Sometimes we are made glad, while others, we are sad. I was made sad just last week when I was reading and saw Mr. Jordan Williams' death, Bro. of Rev. O. B. Williams. Jordan was an old school mate of mine. We were in school at Tlon and I so often think of the happy days we spent there. With best wishes to the Herald, Wellie Stroud, Reporter.

We had a good day at Stallings, Sunday. Preaching at 11, Sunday school at one forty-five, preaching at night. We had good attendance at each service.

We regret to report that Miss Lillian Noles, one of our competent Sunday school teachers, has been sick for more than a week, but glad to report that she is much improved now.

Miss Pattie Noles and Miss Velma Porter have also been sick, but are much better now. We hope that they will all be able to be back in S. S. next Sunday.

The work at large on this circuit seems to be moving upward.

We took a member into Zoar church at our last preaching day. He was a Mr. Tom Ogburn. There are more to come into the different churches at our next preaching day. We are looking forward to a good day at Antioch next Sunday, and at Beulah the fourth Sunday in this month.

Hope to see every member present at each service. H. E. Waldrop, Pastor.

We have not written for some time. However, we have not been idle. We held our meeting at Mt. Lebanon in April. Bro. Troxler was our pulpit help. He did good preaching and good was accomplished, but we had hoped to see greater results than were manifest. Bro. Ashburn was with me in May at Worthville. He preached faithfully for nearly a week, but we did not see at this place the visible results that we wished for, but it was a good meeting, after all.

Our special all day services were as follows: Bethany, second in May, memorial service before noon and mother's day service after noon. Good service and an enjoyable day to all. The cemetery was cleaned off nice and many beautiful flowers were placed on the graves of the dead. The third Sunday in May we held memorial service and old people's day at Mt. Lebanon. We had two good services, especially the afternoon service, which the old people seemed to enjoy so much. The cemetery was cleaned up and many flowers were brought and placed on the graves. As we walked over the cemetery we felt like we were in the "City of the Dead". The first Sunday in June was our memorial and old people's service at New Salem. The old people's service was a good one. The young people sang and the old people talked and entered into the service freely, which made it a sweet service.

New Salem Sunday school took Saturday, June 6, for a picnic. They loaded wagons, buggies, and automobile and off to Worthville to spend the day. It was a success from start to finish. A good dinner and refreshments were served and all seemed to enjoy the day. Our school at New Salem is superintended by our young Bro. R. S. Caudle, who has the work at heart and is pushing it and success is attending his efforts. They number almost a hundred now, and great possibilities are looming before them which we believe they will bring to pass.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely; there were 87 present last Sunday. Collection good. I am glad our Sunday school is growing. Glad that more of the old people are coming, but why not more? We are trying to reach the hundred mark. As next Sunday is rally day we hope to reach it then. Our contest closes June the 28th; the reds are a little ahead of the blues, but by the close of the contest I hope we will be ahead.

Yours for an increased Sunday school.

Dear Herald: It is always a pleasure to me to receive your valuable paper. I was very sorry to learn of L. H. Hatley's health failing him, as we knew him, as he had visited our home. But I hope he may soon recover.

Rev. Joel Trogdon filled his appointment at Cid Sunday and delivered a heart-touching sermon to a very attentive congregation, and I truly hope it will be as seed sown on good ground, for he sure does warn the people of their faults, and then if they will not turn his part will be clear.

We are sorry to say that Bro. Trogdon's health is not so good, but look to an higher power too restore him to good health again.

Bro. J. N. Kindley is critically ill at this writing. His recovery is very doubtful.

Mr. Branson Sheets, of near Denton, was killed by lightning last Friday eve and on Saturday eve at Denton a Mr. Smith was killed the same way. I extend sympathy to the bereaved families. God doeth all things for the best.

Mr. Madison Skeen had the misfortune to lose a good horse last week.

Mr. W. G. Lanier, of Scottsville, is visiting his brother, N. W. Lanier.

Mrs. B. F. Lanier is on the sick list, we are sorry to note.

I will close by asking the prayers of all Christian people for the saving of many precious souls this year.

Yours for Christ,

Mrs. N. W. L.

St. Paul.

Our special meeting closed on Thursday night of last week. There were 21 professions, reclaimed, and converted; so far we have six applications for membership. It was a very good meeting—much good was accomplished in the church. Bro. Bethea's preaching held the attention of his congregations and was well received by everybody. Sometimes the people laughed, sometimes they wept, but always listened. The Lord be praised for His goodness to us.

THE DISTRICT PARSONAGE COLLECTION.

Did you take it last Sunday and Sunday before? If not, do it next Sunday. The circuits will require at least four Sundays to get round, please do not lose time. Our option expires the first of August, we must have the funds in hand to purchase the lot or we will certainly lose by it. The situation is fine, within two minutes walk of West Market St., close to Normal, in good community, and the lot is very reasonable in price.

Send all funds to Mr. T. A. Hunter, Greensboro, he will acknowledge through the Herald.

R. M. Andrews, Secretary Committee.

THE PASTOR'S SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Who Is Doing It?

Who is getting up the funds to send his pastor to the Summer Conference? There is plenty of time to do this for even the largest charges. Some of our pastors will have to spend several dollars to attend the Summer Conference and they are willing to do it for the benefit they will get, so we hope the farther charges will avail themselves of this opportunity to help their pastors.

Have You Sent That Dollar Yet?

Of course there is time enough to do this before it is needed. But it is alrealy time to assure Bro. Gerringer of this financial support. Bro. Garrett, the superintendent of the Home is making preparations to care for all the pastors who will come, and that for $1.50 for the entire time. This is remarkably cheap, making the total cost of the entire conference, not including railroad fare, just $2.50.

Be on Time—All the Time.

To make this conference a complete success, all those who are to speak should be there without fail, should write their addresses, if possible, so they may be published for wider circulation. But all should be there all the time. The object of this conference is not to get a speech out of your system, but to get one into it. Not to give out, but to get in; not be prophets, but pupils; not to harangue, but to hear; therefore, let us all be there all the time.

That Methodist Protestant Rally.

Are you preparing to be there? It is Thursday afternoon. The conference will last until about 12:15, will recess until 6:45, giving the entire afternoon up to the Anniversary. Supt. Garrett is getting the children ready for this event with a splendid entertainment. We want all of our people within reach of the Home to be present that afternoon, come, but do not forget the lunch basket.

The President.

SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The Summer Conference is to be held at the Children's Home June 29-July 2. See program in last week's Herald.

Also let charges act upon Bro. Andrews' suggestion and pay the railroad fare for your pastor. It will do him good and it will do you good. Trains pass High Point going both ways in the morning from 8 to 9. At noon from 12:45 to 1:30. In the evening from 5:55 to 8:05. Good connections in Greensboro. I have not been asked to do this, but am volunteering in this way to try to have automobiles convey all the brethren out to the Home who come on the noon trains or the evening trains Monday, June 29. And thus to convey the brethren back to High Point on Friday morning for the trains they wish to meet. Dr. Tagg begins the conference with an address on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, and closes it on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

I trust all the brethren of the Conference can come, and that they will be here for the opening address and will stay for the closing address. A card from you telling me what hour to expect you will help in arranging to get you to the Home.

I do not know who has charge of the picnic feature for Wednesday noon, but I am sure it will be worked up well. I wish to suggest that every Methodist Protestant family within reach of the Home, who can possibly do so come to that meeting on Thursday, July 2nd and come with a good basket of dinner.

Yours faithfully,

A. G. Dixon.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment Sunday with an unusually good sermon, one of the best we have heard his preach.

Our Sunday school at present is doing nicely. However, there is room for improvement, especially in the amount of collections.

We have prayer meeting every two weeks and have been having interesting ones. Our subject for next Sunday night is Love.

Our special meeting will begin the third Sunday in July; Children's Day service in the forenoon and preaching in the afternoon. Pray for us that we may have a glorious revival and many souls be saved.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Circuit.

Rev. W. A. Ledford last Sunday delivered a most excellent sermon to a very attentive congregation. Bro. Ledford does not fail to warn people of their evil ways.

Our Sunday school has been more interesting and better attended now for awhile. Attendance last Sunday was 67.

We have prayer meeting twice a month with good interest.

In our township S. S. Convention, Prof. J. B. Ingle, of Snow Camp, gave us an interesting talk on a church member's obligation to the S. S. Also Mr. Stuart of Liberty and Mr. Harris and Mr. Lindley of South Fork spoke on different subjects. These men are great S. S. workers, and we give them a hearty welcome to attend our next convention which will convene the 5th Sunday in November at Hickory Grove.

I will say in behalf of those who sent me their reports and could not be with us that they were read and seemed to be enjoyed very much by the audience. Each church in the township paid their fee, also sent in reports except one which has not been represented at any of our Conventions.

We are planning for a children's day in the latter part of the summer.

Our special meeting will convene the third Sunday in August, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, pulpit help. Let us all work and pray that this may be a great spiritual revival, and that many unconverted souls may be saved.

We were glad to have Miss Cathleen Pike worship with us Sunday. She has just returned home from school. We missed her so much while she was away. She is a great worker in the church and Sunday school and is a great leader among the young people.

Last Sunday was a great day in our Sunday school and church, and will be long remembered. The Sunday school was the largest we have had in about two years, there being 286 present. The program which was arranged was carried out in almost every particular.

At the evening service our pastor preached a most excellent sermon on "The Ideal Church."

Monday night was a continuation of the anniversary. The Second Quarterly Conference was first held. The only matter coming before the conference besides reports was the election of candidates for delegate to the Annual Conference. Bros. G. L. Amick, M. A. Coble, J. G. Rogers, C. B. Way, and T. T. Stafford, were nominated. A ballot was taken and J. G. Rogers and C. B. Way were elected. Other matters of minor importance were deferred. Immediately after the conference adjourned, a piano recital was given by Prof. and Mrs. G. Scott-Hunter. Following this a social hour was enjoyed and cream and cake served by the ladies of the church. This feature of the anniversary was a most pleasant one and enjoyed very much by all who were so fortunate as to be present.

Rev. C. T. Forlines, D. D., of the faculty of Westminster Theological Seminary, will give a stereoptican lecture in the church on Thursday, June 25th, at 8 o'clock; which will be of interest to our people, and we hope to have a good attendance.

Our pastor conducted the funeral of Mr. Fred S. Richer at the church Monday afternoon. The deceased was not a member of our church. He was aged 33 years and is survived by a wife, two children, and an invalid mother in Indiana, of which state he was a native.

Bro. T. T. Stafford, who was confined to his room a few days recently on account of sickness, is able to be at his work again.

The election of officers will occur in our Sunday school next Sunday. A nominating committee, elected by the members of the church, will report nominations for the various offices.

WHAT ANOTHER HAS WRITTEN.

General Armstrong, founder of Hampton Institute, wrote "A work that requires no sacrifice does not count for much in fulfilling God's plans.

But what is commonly called sacrifice is the best, happiest use of one's self and one's resources—the best investment of time, strength, and means.

"He who makes no such a sacrifice is most to be pitied. He is a heathen, because he knows nothing of God."

God, in the foreign missionary work, gives every one of us the greatest opportunity, growing out of the greatest needs of the greatest number of people in the world, for the best and happiest use of self and resources in the most unselfish and beneficent enterprise.

To disregard our obligation to invest our time, strength and means therein at His command, in response to human needs, is to array us against His purposes and plans, to invite His displeasure, to restrict our spiritual development, and impede the progress of the church.

It means a rebellious spirit, lack of gratitude, disobedience which must work to deplorable results. We must obey God, share in His great work for the world's redemption, and partake of the joy of achieving.

Your Attention, Please.

If your school has held the Children's Day Service, brother superintendent, please send me the offering at once. The Board is in urgent need of funds. Do not hold any money intended for our Board until your Annual Conference is to meet. Because so many do that we are compelled every year to borrow money and pay interest while waiting for the receipts from the churches and Sunday schools.

AN OPEN SECRET.

Mr. Masavumi Kavada, Principal of the Middle School at Tokyo, who is now in America, commissioned by the Japanese government to study educational plans, asked among the first questions after his arrival in New York what America was doing in moral education. He was taken to one of the Brooklyn Sunday-schools (the Bushwick Ave. M. E.) and, after inspecting the various departments from the cradle roll class to the adult Bible class, made this significant statement: "I can now see the secret of America's greatness. You are studying one Book, and you are educating from the earliest years. We shall want to start something similar when I return to Japan."

IN MEMORIAM.

A Tribute of Love to Our Little Ralph.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Morgan on June 5, 1914, and took their little son, Ralph Holt, aged one year, eight months and ten days. The interment was at Piney Grove June 6, funeral services being conducted by our pastor, Rev. Joel B. Trogdon. He leaves a father, mother, three sisters and three brothers and many loved ones to mourn their loss. There, while the sun in heaven was shining in all glory and brightness, we looked for the last time upon the dear little face we loved and treasured so dearly. Oh! how hard to stand by the little open grave and see the little white casket lowered into thte earth. We know little Ralph's spirit is with Jesus. This sweet bud of promise, touched by the resistless fingers of disease, closed its lovely blue eyes to all earthly scenes, to open them on brighter ones.

Little Ralph had just reached the age when he was the joy and light of his home. He was such a bright and loving little child. Oh! how we will miss the sweet little voice that we loved so well to hear call papa, mama, brothers and sisters and auntie by their names and wave those dear little hands and say Bye-bye, and many other little words we will ever cherish in memory. He could also sing his little songs, could not call the words but keep the tune all the way through. Sometimes we think we can hear his little voice yet. Oh! how lonely it seems to think little Ralph is home no more. But Christ said, Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven. Kind Father, give us grace to submit to thy righteous will and be fully prpared to say, the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord.

Gone to rest our little darling,
Here no more we'll see his face;
But we'll meet again in heaven
When we've run life's rugged race.

When we reach the pearly portals
Of the city bright and fair,
Then we'll meet our little darling,
He will bid us welcome there.

And with Jesus and the angels
We will dwell forevermore,
And will know our little darling
When we meet on the bright shore.

A loving sister,
Mrs. Gurney T. Royal.

GAP IN HITTITE HISTORY NOW BEING FILLED UP.

One of the greatest peoples of old was the Hittites, who occupied the region to the east of the Holy Land and who figures in various ways in Bible history. They waged war for a thousand years with their powerful neighbors the Assyrians and Egyptians, and they must have been a great and formidable nation. In a general way their history parallels that of the children of Israel.

Abraham purchased a grave for his wife from the Hittites. Esau married two Hittite wives, thereby getting himself very much disliked by his own people. When the Israelites were in bondage in Egypt they were cheered up with frequent predictions assuring them that they would one day occupy the land of the Hittites, as well as of their other old neighbors and enemies.

And yet the history of this powerful race, which flourished so long is almost a blank. Little is known of them beyond these casual references to them in the lives of other peoples. They disappeared from history when Sargon II. took their capital, Carchemish, in the eighth century B. C., and since that time they have remained little more than a memory.

However, archaeologists are now patiently delving into the relics of all these ancient civilizations and by dint of piecing the fragments together are doing wonders in the way of restoring the world's knowledge of the races that lived, became prominent, conquered, were in turn conquered, and passed into oblivion as the centuries unrolled.

English scientists are now doing a splendid work at Jerablus, the modern settlement occupying the site of Carchemish, the ancient chief city of the Hittites. No one but an expert would have suspected that there was anything of historic interest to be unearthed at this spot, for race after race has held sway here, and each has built on the ruins of the preceding civilization until the soil is one mass of debris.

The most recent works are of Arab origin. Digging down below these, the explorers came to Byzantine relics; underneath these were evidences of the Roman occupation; underneath these in turn were found remains referring to Sargon and his conquest; underneath there were discovered many traces of the primitive peoples who lived there long before even the Hittites came.

The Hittite influence was in evidence apparently from about 2,000 B. C. to about 400 B. C. After that the Hittites were probably absorbed into other races. The sculptures found show that the art of the Hittites was far advanced, for some of the statues and reliefs have a delicacy that is "almost Greek," the explorers tell us.

Hieroglyphics are not all alike by any means, as many people suppose. There are hundreds of different texts. Some of these are so similar to ones that are known that scholars are able to "put two and two together" and make out their meaning. Others are so absolutely different that not even a syllable of them is known.

The ancients in some cases were wise enough to place "bi-lingual" or "tri-lingual" inscriptions on their monuments, etc. It was nearly a century ago that Champollion, the great French scholar, by the aid of the famous Rosetta stone—which held the same inscription in three different languages—was able to interpret the hieroglyphics of Egypt. Without that Rosetta stone most of the history of ancient Egypt, which is now being so rapidly unfolded and enriched, would have remained practically a sealed book to us.

A bi-lingual key to the Hittite hieroglyphics may at any time be dug up, and you can imagine with what feverish excitement the explorers among these ancient ruins must pursue their researches. Along one of the walls of the royal palace which were unearthed was found the longest hieroglyphic inscription that has yet been brought to light anywhere. No doubt this and other inscriptions, when once they can be interpreted, will be found of great interest. Numerous facts concerning the life of the Hittites can be gathered from the sculptures even though the inscriptions cannot yet be read. We find, for example, that children in those days were very much the same as now. One little child is being carried by its mother, and is followed by a little pet animal led by a string. Girls and boys are shown playing games with knuckle bones and spinning whip-tops. In the children's graves are buried numerous clay figures. With the boys are found clay horses and soldiers, and with the girls dolls—the custom being to bury their toys with them.

Below the Hittite buildings, which are of brick, the excavators found many relics of the early neolithic age, when even bronze implements were unknown and the only tools were made of stone.—The Pathfinder.

STATE C. E. CONVENTION.

The State Christian Endeavor Convention, held in the Friends Church at Greensboro, June 5th, 6th, and 7th was noteworthy by reason of several forward steps taken. First, it was decided to divide the State into six districts, each under charge of a vice-president, as follows: Wilmington, Northeastern, Raleigh, Northwestern, Charlotte, and Asheville Districts. For some years past our annual State Conventions have not been largely attended, owing to the distance of the Convention town from all save a few Societies. Ourrs is a large State, and no given town or city would be easy of access to all the Endeavorers. Moreover, reduced rates are not offered by the railroads to small gatherings. Hence, it was thought that by holding district conventions, more Christian Endeavor Societies might be able to secure the help and inspiration that comes from getting together to talk over problems of mutual interest.

Then, it was the suggestion of Mr. Karl Lehmann, who was with us, that a C. E. institute be conducted next summer at some desirable location—preferably at some college in the mountains, the institute to conclude with the annual State Convention. Suggestions as to a suitable place for such an institute would be gladly received by our new President, Mr. George L. Mitchell, Wilmington, N. C.

Mr. Lehmann brought the news that North Carolina's apportionment of $150,000 needed for the International C. E. Headquarters Building was $200, and Captain Russell, our retiring Treasurer, created unbounded enthusiasm in the Convention, by rising and offering to raise the amount himself. This he expects to do without so much as calling on the Societies for pledges.

The State Banner was awarded to Wilmington again, going this time to the First Presbyterian Society, having been held the past year by the Westminster Society of St. Andrews Presbyterian church. Apropos of the fact that the Banner has for several years past been won by a Wilmington Society, it was decided to purchase a second Banner to be competed for by the various other Societies throughout the State, any Society winning this second banner for two successive years to be eligible to try for the State Banner.

Mention has already been made of our new State President, Mr. George L. Mitchell, of Wilmington. Miss Isabel McDougall, Wilmington, N. C., was elected State Secretary for the ensuing year; Mr. Newton Fisher, Treasurer; Capt. J. P. Russell, Extension Secretary; Rev. E. J. Harold, Educational Secretary; Mrs. Lewis McFarland, Supt. of Junior and Intermediate Work; Mr. Thos. C. Findlay, Supt. of Floating Endeavor; and Miss Florence Ledbetter, Supt. of Press Department. The other Department Superintendents and the six vice-presidents will be announced later. Also, the duties of the Extension and Educational Secretaries will be explained later.

The Opening Session of the Convention was held Friday afternoon at 3:30. Friday evening, after an address by Rev. Edward S. Crosland, pastor of the Calvary Moravian Church, Winston-Salem, a reception was given the delegates in the S. S. room of the church. Friday afternoon the Convention went out in automobiles to Guilford Battle Ground, where, after the party was conducted over the Field by Mr. Paul Schenck, President of the Guilford Battle Ground Company, a picnic supper was served. Mr. Karl Lehmann, of Boston, Inter-State Field Secretary, arrived from New York, where he had been attending the State C. E. Convention, late Saaturday afternoon, and in the evening delivered an address on the theme, "Efficiency." No sessions of the Convention were held Sunday morning, but on Sunday afternoon Mr. Lehmann led an open parliament on C. E. methods, which was one of the most helpful features of the whole program. At 7:00 o'clock Mr. Lehmann led a Model C. E. Meeting, which, to say the very least, never dragged a minute. To have attended this meeting alone would have repaid one for coming to the Convention. At the closing session, Sunday night, Mr. Lehmann spoke on "Christian Endeavor Fellowship", and Rev. J. D. Andrew, President of Catawba College, on "Preparation for Efficient Service". Other Convention speakers were Rev. Melton Clark, who spoke on "The Work of the Church of Tomorrow", Rev. Lewis McFarland, whose subject was "C. E. as an Evangelizing Agency", and Capt. J. P. Russell, who spoke on "Efficient C. E. Business Methods".

THE LETTER JOE LOST.

Joe paused by the clump of lilac bushes and felt in his pocket for the letter which he had taken from the post office. It was not there!

He dropped his handful of barberry sticks and a bunch of yellow cowslips beside the stone wall, and hurriedly searched through all of his pockets. Then he started back toward the post-office.

"Hello, Ed!" he cried, almost running into his chum. "Haven't found a letter, have you?"

"No. Where'd you lose it?"

"If I knew, it wouldn't be lost, would it?" asked Joe, scornfully. "Come on back with me, Ed, and help find it."

"Grandpa would say you might as well look for a needle in a haystack," laughed Ed. "Why, Joe, we went down in Bard's meadow to pick cowslips, across the brook and climbed Laurel Hill to get barberry wood for our bows and arrows, tried to catch that turtle down by the pond, and stopped to see Harry's puppies."

"That's so," agreed Joe, "and probably the wind has blown it away. But I'm going to look, anyway. I don't see how it ever got out of my pocket."

The two boys hastened back to the corner, where the little country post-office occupied one corner of Beaman's grocery store. They asked all of children whom they met if they had found a letter. Then they visited the meadow, Laurel Hill, and the pond. It was getting late, and Joe had not yet been home from school.

"We may as well give it up, Ed," decided Joe at last. "I will go through Harry Marble's back yard, and if it isn't there I'll have to tell mother that I've lost it. I noticed that it was from Avon. Aunt Annie often writes to mother, so I guess it wasn't very important."

"Well, you are foolish!" cried Ed. "Tell your mother and see what a lecture you'll get! I'd say nothing about it. Least said soonest mended, grandpa says."

"Perhaps you are right," replied Joe, doubtfully. "Telling mother won't help matters any. It is lost and that's all there is about it."

Supper was waiting when Joe reached home.

"Where have you been, Joe?" asked his mother. "I was getting worried."

"Been cutting some sticks for arrows; stopped to see Harry's puppies, and picked these flowers for you," explained Joe.

"The flowers are bright and spring-like, but remember that you must not loiter so long on your way from school," said mother, firmly.

Thoughts of the lost letter haunted Joe. Conscience kept whispering, "You ought to tell! You ought to tell!"

"I hate the word 'ought,' " said Joe to himself. He ate very little supper.

"Are you sick, Joe?" asked his mother, anxiously.

"Well, I don't feel real good," admitted Joe.

"You have been playing around the ponds and damp places. If you are not careful, you will get sick."

After supper, Billy Thurston ran over and invited him to ride to Brockton in his uncle's automobile. But mother said, "No," very decidedly, and a sober-faced Joe went very slowly upstairs to bed.

Two weeks later, Joe's mother was mending his school coat. Something made a crackling noise inside the lining as she was sewing up a hole in the pocket.

Reaching in, she pulled out the letter for which Joe had searched.

"Come here, Joe," she called, after she had read the letter. "Did you take this from the post-office?"

"Yes'm. Who found it? I thought it was lost and it wouldn't do any good to tell you," stammered Joe, looking red and confused.

"I found it," replied his mother. "You slipped it into a hole in the lining instead of into your pocket. You should have told me about it."

"But you wouldn't have found it any sooner, mother," argued Joe.

"I might have thought to look in the lining. Your father lost the latch-key that way once. After he got a ladder and climbed into one of the windows, he found the key safely hidden in his coat lining. But if you had told me that you had lost a letter from Aunt Annie, I should have written to her at once. I am sorry, Joe, but keeping a secret from mother has cost you a week's pleasure. Auntie's letter was an invitation for you to spend your vacation week in Avon. Cousin Richard had a birthday party on the fifteenth. It was not wrong to lose the letter, for accidents will happen, but you did wrong in not telling mother at once."

Joe looked ready to cry. It was a keen disappointment.

"Uncle Frank has a new automobile and Richard's party was sure to be a dandy. School begins Monday and it's all over," he said, slowly. "I'm sorry I did not tell you all about it, mother. I might have known you would plan some way to make it all right."

That night Joe told the rest of the lost letter story to his chum.

"Just think of all the fun I lost by being afraid to tell my mother! Say, Ed," he concluded, "I've made up my mind that it doesn't pay for a fellow to keep any secret from his mother."—Nellie M. Leonard, in Zion's Herald.

JUDGE NOT.

"O mamma!" cried Jack, running into the sitting-room where his mother was sewing, "Sidney is breaking a Commandment. He is—'Thou shalt not steal'— and I should think he'd be ashamed of himself."

"Why, Jack," said his mother, in surprise, "what can you mean?"

"He is, truly, mamma," said Jack, hopping about on one foot, and seeming rather to enjoy the fact. "I saw him getting sugar out of the sugar bowl, and you know you told us not to."

"Oh!" said mamma, in a tone of relief, "that's it, is it? Come here, Jack." And taking her little boy's hand, she drew him to her side. "Do you think it such a dreadful thing to break a Commandment, dear?"

"Why, yes, mamma, of course," answered Jack, astonished that his mother should ask such a question.

"You would not do it?"

"No, indeed, mamma."

"Then you think you are very much better than Sidney?"

Jack hung his head at that question, but did not say no.

"Now, Jack, I want you to see how mistaken you are. You think you would not break a Commandment; but, because you are so able to believe evil of your brother, you are really breaking the command which says, 'Thou shalt not bear false witness.' Do you know what that means, Jack?"

"Yes, mamma. You said it meant saying what was not true about any one; but Sidney was stealing, for I saw him."

"He was taking sugar, Jack; but you are sure he was stealing?"

"Yes," answered Jack; "but now I s'pose he's going away to eat it."

At that moment the door opened, and Sidney came into the room, his bright, manly little face not looking at all as though he was ashamed of himself.

"Here is the sugar for Dicky, mamma," he said, slipping the lump between the wires of the cage, "and here is a letter for you. I saw the postman coming and waited a minute for him."

"Thank you, dear," said mamma, smiling at him; and then she turned and looked at Jack.—Sunbeam.

POPULAR TALKS ON LAW.

The Teacher's Authority.

By Walter K. Towers, A. B., J. D., of the Michigan Bar.

Every child who goes to school and every parent who has a child in school is interested in the extent to which a teacher may control the conduct of the pupils both in and out of school. It is well settled that within the school room the authority of the teacher is supreme. In the understanding of the law the teacher has been delegated the parent's authority to exercise while the child is within his care.

The teacher has the right to maintain discipline and enforce proper rules. In doing this, the teacher may resort to physical punishment, unless forbidden by statute, as in New Jersey, or by the rules of his superiors. But the punisment which the teacher may administer must be reasonable, and if it amounts to unreasonable and unnecessary violence, the teacher is liable to the injured pupil in an action for assault and batery.

While the pupil is within the school the authority of the teacher is complete, and in all ordinary cases, exclusive. The irate parent may not interfere between teacher and pupil so long as the latter is within the school.

The question frequently arises as to the authority of the teacher while the pupil is either on the way to school or on the way home from school. Generally speaking, both teacher and parent have authority over the child during this period, the teacher's authority being considered necessary for the maintenance of school discipline. Not all states, however, recognize this rule. For instance, New York takes the position that the teacher's authority does not extend beyond the school building and grounds. The majority of the states, however, follow the general rule stated above, and in not a few states, as California, Pennsylvania, Washington, Virginia, New Jersey, etc., the teacher is given this authority by state law.

In one recent case a teacher caned two of his pupils for fighting on the way to school. An action was brought against the teacher and it was strongly urged that he had exceeded his authority in punishing for an act committed away from the school premises. The judges took the following view of the matter:

"The power of the schoolmaster to punish a pupil is not limited to acts which take place within the four walls of the school premises. His authority over the pupil is an authority delegated to him by the parent, and, though it would not extend to the conduct of a pupil while under his parent's roof, when the parental authority would be resumed, it must extend to the conduct of the pupil on his way to and from school.

"Very grave consequences would result if it were held that the parent's authority was exclusive up to the door of the school; and that then, and only then, the master's authority commenced. It cannot be that such duty or power ceases the moment that the pupil leaves school for home. Parents do contemplate such an exercise of authority by the schoolmaster. The principle shows that the authority delegated to the schoolmaster is not limited to the four walls of the school."

Generally speaking, after the pupil has arrived home he is entirely within the control of his parents and the teacher has no control over his acts and may not punish for anything he may do while entirely within the parent's control. Certain exceptions to this rule are recognized, as an early Vermont case shows. One evening the pupil was driving home his father's cows, together with other pupils. They passed the teacher's home and the boy called him "Old Jack Seaver". The next morning when school opened Seaver reprimanded the boy for the insulting language and then whipped him. The boy brought action for assault and battery.

The court said: "There seems to be no reasonable doubt that the supervision and control of the master over the scholars extend from the time he leaves home to go to school until he returns home from school. When the child has returned home to his parent's control, then the parental authority is resumed, and the control of the teacher ceases; and then for all ordinary acts of misbehavior the parent alone has power to punish. It is not misbehavior generally, or toward other persons, or even toward the master in matters in no way connected with or affecting the school. For, as to such misconduct committed by the child after his return home from school, we think the parents, and they alone, have power of punishment. But when the offense has a direct and immediate tendency to injure the school and bring the master's authority into contempt, as in this case, when done in the presence of other scholars and of the master, and with a design to insult him, we think he has the right to punish the scholar for such acts if he comes again to school."

The right of expulsion or suspension is generally in the school board, which may inflict either of these punishments for breaches of the reasonable rules of the school. Continued absence without excuse, insubordination, disobedience are familiar and proper causes of expulsion and suspension. But these punishments may not be lawfully imposed arbitrarily and without proper reason, nor for the breach of unreasonable and unnecessary rules.

It has been held that a teacher or school board has no right to forbid a student to attend a social party after school hours. The school authorities have been supported by the courts, however, in their war upon fraternities, sororities and other secret societies connected with the school. Where these organizations have a tendency to interfere with school discipline and scholarship, it is held that the school board may forbid pupils belonging to them, even though they secure the consent of their parents and the organizations meet outside of the school premises and after school hours. School boards may also forbid pupils to engage in athletic sports under the auspices of the school or under the school name.

ELOCUTION VS. THE HOLY GHOST.

Bishop Simpson preached some years ago in the Memorial Hall, London. For half an hour he spoke quietly, without gesticulation or uplifting his voice; then, picturing the Son of God bearing our sins in His own body on the tree, he stopped as if laden with an immeasurable burden, and, rising to his full height, he seemed to throw it from him, crying: "How far? As far as the east is from the west, so far hath He removed our transgressions from us."

The whole asembly, as if moved by an irresistible impulse, rose, remained standing for a second or two, then sank back into their seats.

A professor of elocution was there. A friend who observed him, and knew that he had come to critiicize, asked him when the service was over, "Well, what do you think of the Bishop's elocution?" "Elocution?" said he; "that man doesn't want elocution; he's got the Holy Ghost!"

Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. —At the Anglo-American Hundred Years Peace Exposition, now open in London, the Southern Railway System has the only exhibit made by an American Railway and much attention has been attracted by the handsome display of Southern agricultural, horticultural and mineral products. The exposition will be open until November and will be visited by millions of people who will thus have the advantages of the South put before them.

The exhibit is enclosed by polished balls and pedestals of Tennessee, Alabama and North Carolina marble, set on oak posts connected by brass railing. Beneath the railing are blocks of granite from North Carolina and South Carolina quarries. Show cases at the front corners contain specimens of cotton stalks seven feet high filled with bolls. Other cases and tables contain tobacco, fruits, corn and other grain. The useful minerals found in the South such as iron ore, coal, talc, mica, rutile, zinc, silica, kaolin and other clays, granite, limestone and such other minerals and stones as have an active demand in commerce and art are shown.

There are displayed on the walls, on easels and attached to the railings dozens of agricultural, industrial, scenic and city views of the South, including panoramic views of cities, harbors, industrial and mountain scenery. All the views are large, all are colored and all especially selected to give a good idea of the attractions, resources and development of the southern states.

—Engineer Wingate and Fireman Pickard on the Southern's train No. 29 were killed in a wreck north of Reidsville last Sunday morning, the engine rolling down an embankment and turning about front end to the rear. The emergency brake which it is supposed Wingate applied in his last moment prevented the injury of passengers. The rails were torn up and twisted for hundreds of feet and the cross ties tossed about. The train was going at a high speed to make up lost time. Mr. Wingate lived long enough to utter a prayer. Pickard is supposed to have been killed instantly.

Mt. Pleasant Church.

Mt. Pleasant is still living, if we are not as lively as we might be. Our pastor, Bro. Troxler, has done good work for us this year, preaching plain gospel sermons that any could understand and be made better if we only would, and in the Sunday school and singing, especially singing, for he can sing as well as preach.

On the first Sunday in June we held our Children's Day exercise. Children did well, collection was $16.05. Our Sunday school is good this year. Our superintendent is faithful and punctual. There is more interest in the Baraca and Philathea classes than there ever has been with our young men and women in the Sunday school. On the first Saturday evening of this month the Baraca and Philathea classes met at the parsonage and enjoyed the evening together. Ice cream and cake in abundance. Our pastor asked us to make our motto "Every One a Christian This Year." Pray for us that we may.

Williams.

On June 8, 1914, Mr. Jordan Williams, aged 23 years, was called into eternity. He was son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Williams, of Hillsboro, N. C.; also left five brothers and three sisters. The brothers are Atlas, James, Odis B., pastor of Graham and Haw River Circuit, John and Charlie. The sisters, Maggie, Iver and Annie.

Jordan was a member of no church, but for some time seems to have been a prayerful seeker for a conscious salvation. From the beginning of his illness, which lasted about two weeks, he gave good assurance that all was well and that he was happy in a just and loving God.

He assisted his brothers in the Hillsboro Roller Mills, and we thought—"Two grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left."

His body was taken to Union Grove Church for burial. There in the well-kept cemetery, close by the little white church among the green trees; surrounded by a large number of sympathizing friends—it was impressive. The day was a beautiful one; a soft breeze was making the tall trees to nod, as if they understood. As the body of our loved one was lowered a choir of little birds sang a sweet song just over our heads in branches of the trees. I thought of this poem:

"Let me rest—but lay me low,
Where the hedge side roses blow;
Where the little daisies grow;
Whre the winds a maying go;
Where the footpath rustics plod;
Where the breeze-bowed poplars nod;
Where the old woods worship God;
Where His pencil paints the sod.
There beneath the breezy west,
Tired, and thankful, let me rest,
Like a child that sleepeth best
On its gentle mother's breast."

The funeral was conducted by the order of Odd Fellows and Rev. J. R. Green of the Hillsboro Baptist Church.

—Judge Pritchard's speech at the Home treated of training the young and of restraining wrong doers by law. He spoke in a plain and common-sense way. He urged young people to join the church and to avail themselves of its helps. Good character is the essential qualification for success. He insists on young people being made to work. He says he would not give the price of the powder and shot it would take to kill him for the young man who has been brought up in idleness. He gave a number of interesting examples, illustrating the truths he presented. He took occasion to speak a word in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic. He was introduced by Bro. J. M. Millikan, for whom the judge entertains a very kindly regard and by whom the services of the judge on this occasion were secured. He has many such calls that he has not time to accept.

—Mrs. Dr. Hartsell is improving rapidly and expects to return home in a few days.

—Grace Church people, Greensboro, have a treat in store for next Monday night. The children from the Home are to come down and entertain us for an hour in the church.

—We must again remind some of our contributors of the newspaper law requiring the names of contributors. Editors are responsible for what they print, and cannot reasonably be expected to publish contributions from unknown people.

—The book which we are offering for sale, College Men without Money, has a very significant title. Mr. Riddle, the compiler, selected the name himself, and certainly he had a right to do so, for he entered college three years ago with fifteen dollars borrowed money and had the pleasure, as he says, of having a very radical operation in New York City this spring which cost him nearly five hundred dollars. We trust the sales of this unique and readable volume will warrant Mr. Riddle sufficient funds to help him remain in college another year.

AN EXPLANATION.

At a called meeting held July 2, 1914, of the North Carolina Conference representatives in the Methodist Protestant General Conference of 1912, the question of our duty in regard to the special session of the General Conference called for July 15, 1914, was earnestly considered. Reasons for attendance were urged, and also reasons for non-attendance. It was finally found to be the sense of the meeting that non-attendance is our proper course, and the undersigned were directed to set forth the grounds that seemed to justify and require this course, which might otherwise seem to indicate a want of harmony with others of the Methodist Protestant Church.

It was perhaps true in this case, as in others, that some minds were mainly influenced by one consideration and others by another. We state various reasons urged:

1. The proposed session seems to be a substitute for the one contemplated by the General Conference and authorized by the Annual Conferences, and we therefore question its legitimacy. We understand the object of the legitimate session to be to complete the basis of union, if found acceptable to the two churches, which involves the necessity of a joint session with the United Brethren in which arrangement could be made for the further steps legally necessary to a consummation of the union. But this session is called for a time when a joint session is impossible. It is true that our law gives to our Annual Conference presidents the authority to name the time and place, but it is implied that they are not free to act arbitrarily; they cannot reasonably choose a time when the object of the session could not possibly be accomplished. With great respect for those who have named July 15 as the date, it seems to us that they have chosen an impossible date, and that however desirable a meeting at that time might be for other purposes, no legitimate meeting of our General Conference can be held at that time.

2. The proposed session cannot be a full session, which is very much to be desired in a union movement. One of our largest Conferences has decided that the session is illegal because there has been no new election of representatives. While not concurring in this view of the case, we appreciate the difficulty in legislating satisfactorily for a people not represented.

3. The proposed session cannot be a harmonious session, as one Conference has instructed its representatives to vote against union, while others are instructed to vote for union. It does not seem expedient to us to meet for official action until a full discussion and calm deliberation has brought our own people more nearly to a unit in the matter.

4. If we believed the proposed session legitimate, we would still be deterred from attending by the consideration that we could not aid in accomplishing what we understand to be the object of it; namely, to adopt or amend and adopt the basis of union. We were not authorized by our Annual Conference to vote for its adoption without amendment, and we feel that it would be disrespectful to the United Brethren to change the basis of union while they are in process of voting upon it.

Official action taken under these conditions seems to us more likely to tend to a dismemberment of our own church than to a satisfactory and permanent union with any other church, and we do not wish even to witness disruptive action. We therefore ask to be excused from attendance, feeling that loyalty to our church and to the cause of Christ prescribes this course. We do not wish to be separated or estranged from any part of the Methodist Protestant Church. We still believe that union with the Church of the United Brethren in Christ might be wrought out in a way satisfactory to both churches, but we also believe that there is danger of making it more difficult, if not impossible, by acting before all are ready to act.

With respect and kindly regard for those of our brethren who hold different views, we are yours fraternally,

J. F. McCulloch,
T. M. Johnson,
J. R. Hutton, Committee.

NOTES OF ITALIAN TRAVEL.

The most evident thing in Rome is the Catholic Church. Its churches, between 300 and 400 in number, are on nearly every street and every block. Their bells are constantly ringing. Its priests and monks are said to number 30,000, and contact with them is unavoidable. The churches are in all conditions of repair, though few of them are not now in the process of repair.

It is easy to understand why some of great churches appeal strongly to those easily influenced. There has been nothing left undone to make them perfect architecturally and artistically. The appeal to the esthetic of such places as St. Peter's and St. John Lateran is perfect. The best that could be devised by human brain or wrought by human hands has been created. The music is often perfect and powerfully moves those who have a keen sense of the harmonious. The priests are dignified, their vestments rich, and everything is adjusted to please the most exacting. This is Catholic Rome on the surface and at its best.

On the other hand, many churches once pretentious and dignified are in bad repair, and dirty. The priests seem perfunctory in their ministrations, and the sacristans more anxious for the fees paid them by the traveler than for the dignity and care of the buildings. One naturally expects to see in Rome the church filled with devout worshipers. In this he will be disappointed. It is true many of them always have a few engaged in worship, but only once of the scores of times the writer entered these churches, at all times and under all conditions, only once did he see what would be called a large attendance. In Holy Week the attendants were from one-half to three-fourths tourists or other curiosity seekers who did not participate in the worship. Even on Good Friady at the elaborate service of the adoraton of the cross, participated in by the dignitaries of the church and forty priests with great elaborateness and solemn processional, was this so, and this in one of the largest and most easily accessible churches. The writer talked with many, both Catholics and Protestants, both laymen and clerics, about the church, and from the impression they gave, the Catholic Church in Italy has lost the confidence and respect of the intelligent people, excepting, of course, the nobility, who are dependent on the influence of the papacy in a measure. What seemed a fair statement by an intelligent observer who had for years watched the trend, was that not over fifteen per cent. of the literate men of Italy have anything to do with the church unless compelled by business. This statement was confirmed among others by an intelligent Milanese merchant who applied the statement to all Italy. The reason is found in the boast of the church that it never changes. Its attempt to hold the people in the same mental and economic condition as during the medieval centuries has failed, except with the very poor, who seem as sodden and superstitious as ever. The reason for the failure lies in the political liberty of the Italians and the system of public education. The pity of it all is that the people, having repudiated Romanism, only in small numbers accept light from other Christian sources.

What is true of the intelligent laity is to a degree true of the young priesthood. A number of Protestant ministers of more than one denomination told the writer that many priests are constantly coming to them to ask their advice. They are disgusted with the intolerance and unprogressiveness of the church, and being denied the privilege of taking any steps to improve the condition of their people, would gladly step out of their priesthood, if occasion offered. Their education is insufficient to qualify them for the public schools, and "dig they cannot and to beg they are ashamed." Together with the growth of a national consciousness there is a growth of individual consciousness, and the question why individuals are being kept in ignorance and poverty is being asked in the same breath with that other question, why the most glorious civilization in the world should not exist in Italy, where traditions are so fine and heritage so rich.

The church in Italy is quite aptly typified by Mt. Vesuvius—quiescent, and dignified outwardly, but full of forces that may at any time explode with great violence. And it will be well when this happens, for the signs are that it is impossible that the church can or will purify itself. The trouble is with a powerful organization back of the pope that selfishly wishes to retain its lordship over the people. One cannot but pity the masses of the people who are, no doubt, most of them sincerely seeking rest of soul and "groping after God, if haply they may find Him."

The superstition and degradation of multitudes are, however, most deplorable. Whether taught to do so or not, they are permitted to do reverence like fetish worshipers to pictures, images, relics and inanimate objects. Much of this worship is founded on a lie. For instance, in St. Peter's are the handkerchief on which Christ imprinted His features when His face was wiped on it, when sinking under the burden of the cross, also pieces of the true cross; in the church of St. John Lateran the water and the blood which flowed from His side; in Turin the sheet in which His body was wrapped in the sepulcher; many pieces of the true cross in various churches in Rome. At Loreto, in Umbria, is the house in which the Virgin lived in Nazareth; in a church in Rome is the refuse from the child Jesus. The bones of 4,000 martyrs have been taken from the catacombs and sent to various churches throughout the world to serve as sacred "relics," according to a monk in one of these catacombs. All these things and many more are the object of veneration.

In the fifteenth century the Franciscans made from a piece of olive wood from Jerusalem the semblance of a baby. This was deposited in the church of Santa Maria in Aracoeli on the Capitoline Hill in Rome, and to it miraculous powers are ascribed. It was crowned by the Vatican Chapter in 1897, and, according to the published statement of the church, "is visited and honored by the whole Catholic world, owing to the innumerable favors the Divine Infant bestows on those who venerate it," and adds "100 days' indulgence once a day applicable to the souls in purgatory." This "Bambino," as it is called, has been richly and profusely decorated by the supposed beneficiaries, and is carried in processions and taken to the bedside of the ill, who hope to be cured by its wonderful powers. If other evidence needed to be given that the church teaches superstition, it might be illustrated further by the deposit of the blood of St. Januarius in the chapel of St. Januarius of the cathedral at Naples. This blood is supposed to liquefy on certain days in May, September, and December each year, and according as it liquefies slowly or rapidly, is the omen good or evil. In view of all these things, one is not surprised to see the people with great reverence bowing before and touching pictures and statues not only of the Madonna and of saints, but even of the effigies of persons recumbent on the tombs in the churches.

In view of what one thus observes, it is impossible not to charge the church with Mariolatry or idolatry. Indeed, there are constant evidences in Rome that upon what was once a pure Christianity a curse fell, when a pagan state adopted it as the religion of the state and began to persecute paganism as it had once persecuted Christianity. Some of the churches are constructed of the materials taken from pagan temples, others are buildings erected by pagan hands adapted to the new religious cult. St. Peter's statue in St. Peter's at Rome is a very old piece of bronze and is said to be an adopted piece of statuary from the old pagan days—an object of veneration to the faithful. Where the statue of St. Peter stands on top of the column of Trajan in Trajan's forum once the figure of the pagan emperor stood. This is a fit illustration of Roman Catholicism— a foundation of paganism, a crown of man-worship.

Romanism seems to have nothing in common with a pure and spiritual Christianity. Neither in its architecture, its art, nor its worship can one find a living Christ. Everywhere one sees only the cross with a dead Jesus. Never does it come to inculcate the personal presence of living friend and intercessor in the Adorable Presence of a living Lord. There is much difference between the teaching of Catholicism in Rome and the enlightened, spiritual teachings of an evangelical faith as there is between the gloomy opening words of that great hymn,

"Lead, kindly light, amid the encircling gloom, Lead thou me on!"

and the cheerful optimism of that sweet hymn of Christian faith,

"Jesus, the very thought of Thee,
With sweetness fills the breast;
But sweeter far Thy face to see,
And in Thy presence rest."

Rome has taken great pains to bolster up its dogmas by its art, and at great expense. From these beautiful witnesses one can get an idea of the growth of such dogma. The very earliest paintings, sculptures, and decorations speak of a simple faith in Christ and the resurrection. These decorations are especially marked in the catacombs, where the earliest church has left its spiritual hieroglyphs. The art of the church as found today in the Vatican galleries, the Sistine Chapel, and the former dwelling places of the popes teaches the doctrine of transubstantiation in the bleeding of the wafer in the fresco entitled the "Mass of Bolsena," and in other pictures the worship of Mary, of saints and of angels, and the immaculate conception of the Virgin. If time sufficed, there is other abundant evidence of such teachings. Almost no paintings in the Vatican galleries have any bearing except upon such teachings or the history and legends of the church.

Perhaps the most potent usage of the church is found in the confessional. That here the inmost secrets of life are inquired into, and that knowledge is here gained that has helped the church in developing its purposes is perfectly evident. The testimony seems to be that it is a source of immorality also. Girls and young women have suffered and do from this practice. And yet how trivial it may be is illustrated by an observation made. On the day before Good Friday, in one of the largest churches, a priest was seen to take his place in a confessional box with a long, slender wand in his hand. When a person would approach and face him, falling on his knees, the priest would touch him with the wand. On inquiry, it was learned that this was a substitute for confession, and the wand's touch was tantamount to absolution of sin. That such usage, or indeed that any supposed absolution by the priest, so stultifies the conscience as to make sin a light and easy matter is a matter of testimony and of demonstration in the every day life of the Italians.

Enough was seen to convince the writer that Roman Catholicism is only a remove from paganism, that it fosters the pagan elements in its devotees—in Italy, at least. If she fails to do so in Protestant lands, the reason lies in her willingness to go just so far in reform as circumstances and policy compel her. But that at heart Rome is the same the world over the enlightened reader will not doubt. If America could be dominated by Romanism as Italy has been, who can doubt the degradation which would result? Americans need to be alert to the attack Romanism is making on the public school, her deadly foe, and to her subtlety in endeavoring to influence legislation. Politically, Italy is lost to the papacy, as are France and other countries formerly subject to it. The papacy will try—and, some say, is trying—to recoup itself for these losses by gaining new possessions and influence in America.—Theodore A. Hildreth, in Zion's Herald.

LETTER FROM MR. HEININGER.

Kalgan, May 20, 1914.

Dear Record Friends:

The great feature of this month's work has been the opening of the Chaikoupu chapel. On May 2nd we had a formal opening of this chapel. Since the first of the year we have had possession of the building and work has been going on but some repairs had been necessary and for these we had to wait for warmer weather. So after the masons had fixed up the place and the painter had decorated it inside and the new table and benches and blackboard and maps and Bible pictures were in place and a supply of books and tracts on hand we planned for a big blowout. When a Chinese business firm opens shop then it is a big event and so must this our formal opening be. Preacher Kao Yueh left no stone unturned, overlooked no detail to have it made a great success.

The little chapel is on the main street of the city and on the road from the railway station to the four corners where the center of the city's activity throbs around a stately arch. It will seat about seventy in the main room, and has a room behind where the evangelist and chapel keeper stay. This is the first effort to establish a church there. There are no members in the city or within ten miles of it. My first visit to it was made in January 1913. I went up on the train to sell books and had one of the most successful days of bookselling I have ever had. Upon my return I planned for a colporteur to go there and systematically work the city and villages around. This work was quite fruitful. Six enquirers were enrolled last fall and one of our most experienced workers sent there to open a preaching place. He found a few more people ready to listen and already we feel that we are gathering a few who desire the better way.

The members of the Kalgan church took a great interest in the opening. They made a special offering and bought lamps and a sign board and two large flags to hang in front. The members of the church presented a scroll with a motto on and the boys of the school responded with one of their own and everybody was joyful and expectant. But Chaikoupu is thirty miles away and we could not all go there. Two of our number, Teacher Li of the boy's school and Church-member Hsu, a veterinary surgeon, went to preach to the people and explain our purpose. It did not seem wise for me to run away at that time from other work but some day soon I will have my first day of preaching in the new chapel.

The reports the two delegates brought back were glowing. Lots of people listened. A number of guests from the business men we have met and other friends came and according to Chinese custom sent large scrolls of congratulation to hang on the wall. We had printed five hundred leaflets explaining our purpose and our beliefs. These were distributed. Both men were surprised at the size and bustle of the city. One said there must be fifty thousand people there but Chinese population figures are unreliable. Preacher Kao says the opening was a great success and estimates that seven hundred people streamed through the chapel in the first day. Last Sunday Mr. Ch'in of the railway school here went to the place and spoke especially to the pupils of the schools. Thirty boys responded to the invitation. This while not a large gathering is encouraging. Indeed one of our friends on returning from the opening exhorted the Kalgan people to bestir themselves lest the new outstation should outstrip them. God grant that soon all over this land there mamy be His people vying with one another in good deeds.

Our dispensary is having a new lease on life or rather a revival. We have secured the return of Dr. T'sui who, though not a graduate, had had nine or ten years experience under foreign doctors. He has been for many years with Dr. Ingram of the American Board at Tungchou and he is doing good work. He has been here less than a month and a decided boom is noticeable. At present there are foreign patients in the dispensary and every day brings many with their sores and diseases and wounds.

The other day a well-informed Chinaman told me that he thought ten thousand people had moved to Kalgan in the last year. Isn't that cause for stirring ourselves.. Yesterday I rode over east of the river and saw row after row of houses going up. Don't I wish we could do more for these people. God has issued a challenge to us to do our best for Kalgan. Let us bestir ourselves.

Pray for us and our Chinese fellow-workers.

WHAT AMERICAN WOMEN CAN DO FOR CHINESE WOMEN.

(Address of Miss Wetsung Zung, given at the Board meeting.)

No better opportunity than the present time for American women to go to China and do something for Chinese women. They can help them educationally, socially, and religiously.

China, old China, is made new today. Women, for ages shut in the houses, having absolutely nothing to do with the outside world, are set free. They no longer have to be kept like prisoners within the four walls, but are allowed to be educated like their brothers.

Government schools open for girls are growing in number every year. English is not taught in these schools because teachers are nowhere to be found. Since English language is the most widely spoken language in the world, so why cannot the Chinese women learn it? So, educationally, American women can teach English in those governmentt schools. English is what the Chinese women are crying for. Very often when the Chinese o cials of high rank give receptions to the consular body or to other foreign representative the wives of those officials are proved to be unsatisfactory hostesses. The main reason dues to the ignorance of English language. The girls from influential families are very eager to learn English, so as to fit themselves in the new societies.

There are but few high schools for girls in China at present, and not one single college. Many girls graduated from the high schools are breathlessly waiting for the opening of a woman's college. The question is under discussion. Most probably within a couple of years the Interdenominational Educational Committee will solve the problem and build a college for the Chinese women. If the above mentioned college is opened, the best American women teachers are needed.

Kindergartens, day schools, preparatory, industrial, and medical schools are needed everywhere in the Chinese Empire. Since the Chinese women have just come out from their secluded homes, no wonder they cannot fill these vacant places as teachers. A voice, especially a woman's voice, is heard in China today crying for help. The Chinese women are hungry and thirsty for education. It presents the best opportunity for the more fortunate American women to lend an aid to the unfortunate sisters in China.

Socially, the Young Women's Christian Association can do more work than anything else. Schools can reach the needs of the younger women while the Y. W. C. A., the older ones. This kind of work is just started in some big cities in China. Good results have already been shown in many phases. Women, as a rule, have not much to do with their unknown sisters, though in some cases, indirectly, the richer women are always generous tending to the needs of the poor. Mother's Day, or Women's Club has never been known to the Chinese women. The Y. W. C. A. workers saw the social need and they are trying their very best to improve it.

Foot-binding is done away with through the mutual forces of the missionaries and the Chinese government. Before the glorious revolution, edicts even were issued from the Imperial Majesties concerning the subject of that foot-binding custom. There are still some ignorant mothers binding their daughters' feet today—but soon they will see their own ignorance and will do wiser things for their daughters

If a number of Chinese women can be trained under the best direction of American women as social leaders today, in the near future these women can go to help their own sisters.

Religiously. The most important question in China this very minute is religion. What she has for ages those religions are but dead, without life. The Bread of life is what China needs. "To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand." Sooner or later this prophesy shall be vitalized in meaning in China. Through the missionaries, the bringers of good tidings, China has a little light already. Still, there are hundreds, thousands, even millions of people in China today have never heard the Gospel, the sweet name of Christ.

Old dynasty has gone and a new Republic is set up. New learning, new ideas, and new ways of living are adopted. It is not strange to say, China even gets rid of her old religions for a new one. Hundreds and thousands of Buddhist temples are turned into schools; numberless idols are burned; innumerable Buddhist priests are turned out of their temples seeking another kind of living; and, what is the meaning of all these movements? Like Japan, if Christianity is not sown in the minds of the people today, soon they will become atheists or infidels.

American women who are endowed with intellectual gifts, brought up in Christian homes and good societies, through the love of God, are willing to suffer pains and endure hardships, and will be responsive to the cry for help from China.

As nation to nation, America is always friendly toward China. America is educating the young men of China this very day. If, side by side, women have the same chances as men, some day, China will become a stronger nation, for women's culture, women's faith is what China's great future depended upon. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things." Moreover, Christ's own words, "Whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me."

The women's foreign missionary societies are doing beautiful and promising works. Whosoever gives a cup of water to drink, in God's name, to one of the least of God's children, she will get her reward. Let the gratitude of Chinese women be shown in actions, not in words. "Action speaks louder than tongue." When millions of Chinese women come to see the great Light and become Christians, the American women will then realize that their pains are but gains and their sacrifices blessings.

OBSERVATIONS BY THE WAY.

Another week with its work, its worry, and its joy has passed. In a school with some twelve hundred in attendance, there is generally something to attract and something to take the mind away from the cares and toil of the day; and during the past week we have had a number of attractions. Among them has been the concert given by the Mary Sherier Concert Company. This was given on the evening of the last day of June. The scheduled time was eight o'clock, but a delayed train brought in the concert company about half past eight, and the large audience waited with all good nature for the company to arrive. But we were repaid for our patience, for we were treated with such rare festival of song and music from the violin that, for the time being, we felt that time swept too swiftly by, and when it was all over we wished to spend the same time over again. The Confederate battle song, The Bonnie Blue Flag, sung by Miss Sherier as a solo brought down the house and such applause was given as is received by the most gifted singers of our land.

Among the attractions, to the ladies especially, has been the arguments presented by the suffragette and anti-suffragette speakers who have been here the past week. As we were not interested, or rather, as we were more interested in other things, we did not attend. We suggested to our good lady that she attend, but she seemed also to be more nterested in reading about Thomas Jefferson and his work of founding the University of Virginia. It was to me an indication of the truth spoken by Tennyson in his Locksley Hall, "As the husband is the wife is." I would not dare to quote further for fear she would announce that in this case, "As the husband is the wife is not."

Another attraction was the lecture of Miss George, of Washington, on the "Montessori Method." Miss George has studied in Rome under Dr. Montessori, the originator of the method and by means of her lectures and moving pictures, she has opened the eyes of the teachers here on the matter of primary methods.

This is July 4, 1914. Just one hundred and thirty-eight years ago today the immortal Declaration of Inedpendence was adopted in Independence Hall, in Philadelphia. Today in that same Independence Hall, Woodrow Wilson speaks on certain new declarations of independence by the American people.

I find myself here within three miles of Monticello, the home of the author of the Declaration of Independence of July 4, 1776. And here at this university founded by him, it was well that the Fourth of July should be celebrated in a fitting manner. So, for the past week, preparations have been made which culminated in the grand pageant today. Each state represented here had a special part in the program.

First the students arranged themselves in line of march, four abreast, along the front of East Range and Washington Hall and promptly at 3:30 p. m. we marched down East Range to the Randall Building, there we took a turn and marched to the west to the University Lawn; we then turned to the right and marched up the lawn to the south steps of the Rotunda, where the series and pageants representing historic events were enacted.

The greater part of my readers would be more interested in what the North Carolina delegation did, and as I will not have time and space to write of the whole program, I will confine myself to the part our delegation took. We had known for over a week that Hon. Josephus Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, was to be the orator of the occasion, so we decided to make our program center around him. And in the parade one of our delegation carried at the head of our procession a banner, bearing on it a painted spray of long leaf pine with the word DANIELS painted under it in large letters. This delegate was followed by two others dressed in white sailor suits carrying a model of a battleship which floated a United States flag and a North Carolina pennant from its masts. Following this came two others who bore one of the largest North Carolina flags, sent to us by our state department for this occasion. Then followed all the other members of the delegation. The costume of the ladies was plain white dresses with belts and parasols of light blue. The men were dressed in white blouse shirts and white trousers with belts of light blue.

When our part in the program was announced we first sang "Carolina." Josephus could not stand that. He rose, came out with the delegation, waved his hand and joined in the song. Dr. McConnell, of Davidson College, then spoke for the delegation, after which we gave the following yell:

Boom-a-laca, boom-a-laca, tar, rah! rah!
Chic-a-laca, chic-a-laca, z—ah—ah!
Boom-a-laca, chic-a-laca, who is he?
Daniels, Daniels, of old N. C.

After each of the states represented had taken part in the program, Daniels was introduced and spoke for about three-quarters of an hour. His speech was patriotic as the occasion demanded, was well timed and listened to by several thousand people who crowded the lawn, the steps and roofs of the recitation rooms of the Rotunda, and was voted to be one of the greatest speeches ever delivered here on such an occasion.

This morning we took a trip to the University cemetery at the base of Mount Washington. Here are buried many doctors of laws and professors who have died in the service of this university. In this profound silence where sleep, under the shade of the great oaks and cedars, so many men versed in the learning and lore of the world, we were made to reflect again that death is no respector of persons. The learned die and return to their original dust just as the most ignorant of the land. But what a difference in the good accomplished and the lives touched!

From there we climbed to the top of Mount Washington to see the Astronomical Observatory of the University. It was no easy task and was accomplished only after a great deal of physical exertion. We found it would be necessary to shed our coat before we got far up.

The main thing of interest in the observatory is the great telescope, the third largest in the United States. The instrument is so complicated that it would be impossible for me to describe it here. The keeper was very kind and took great pains to describe the telescope and its workings. Numbers of students have been going over at night to see the moon. But enough for this time.

WORKING FOR ETERNITY.

Never mind where your work is. Never mind whether it be visible or not. Never mind whether your name is associated with it. You may never see the issues of your toil. You are working for eternity. If you cannot see the results here in the hot working day, the cool, evening hours are drawing near, and when you may rest from your labors, and then they may follow you. So do your duty, and trust to God to give the seed you sow, " a body as it hath pleased Him."—Alexander Maclaren.

—Bro. J. G. Rogers and family, of Burlington, attended the exercises at the Children's Home last Thursday.

—The mediators have succeeded in reaching an agreement satisfactory to our government and Huerta of Mexico. It remains to arrive at a basis of agreement between the Mexican factions. The mediators have taken an indefinite recess.

THE ROAD TO HAPPINESS.

This is the road to Happiness:
Start now, from where you are;
Turn to the right and keep straight on,
And you'll not find it far.

Along the path of Willing Feet
And over Heart's-Ease Hill,
Across the fields of Sweet Content,
The stream of Glad Good Will;
Then through the lane of Loving Heart,
The gate that's called To-Day,
And down the Steps of Little Things
Into the Common Way.

And take the cloak of Charity,
The staff of Wise Employ,
A loaf of bread and Daily Grace,
A flask well filled with Joy;
A word of cheer, a helping hand,
Some good to give or share,
A bit of song, a high resolve,
A hope, a smile, a prayer.

And in the place of Duty Done,
Beside the door of Home,
You'll find the house of Happiness—
For happiness does not roam.

THE EVANGELIST.

Sid Williams.

Let us look first at Ephesians 4:11: "And He gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers."

Now I believe in a special call to the ministry. God in His wisdom saw the need of a distinct separated service to be done by a set of men of His own selection. He has divided these men into classes to suit Himself. It does not seem that God has arranged it that way. Let each man called of God stick to His job; he will have all that he can do well. It is better to do one thing well than to strive to do five things half well. The man who is called of God to the work of an evangelist has been called unto a great task; an important work. Indeed, a most important work.

There is no more important work than that of winning souls to Christ, and that is the special work of an evangelist. An evangelist is the index finger of God pointing men to Christ and their Savior. The evangelist, of all God-called men, should ever keep Christ before his hearers, Christ and Him crucified; the rich, red blood. Paul told Timothy to preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine. Oh yes, the evangelist is to preach doctrine! Paul says the time will come when the people will turn away from sound doctrine and will seek to themselves teachers, having itching ears. Some folks seem to think that during a revival is no time for doctrine. Why not? It is the best time for the very reason that many are in the congregation who know nothing of the teachings of Christ; they are not regular church goers. The evangelist was not called for some special season as some seem to think, but for all the times. The work of the evangelist is just as necessary today as it was in Christ or Bible days. His day will never play out until we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.

Again, the God-called evangelist will be cared for in the way of his table being provided with his every need. God has never failed to raise up a people who will furnish his table. His traveling expenses, his raiment, his food, his lodging and all his expenses will be cared for. The evangelist must have faith to believe that God is looking after his every need. He is always doing good things for us when we are not conscious of it. Have more faith and less doubting.

Again, the evangelist called of God will always have a field to labor in. His work in this world is never to be set aside by men. Like the work of the pastor, it is to abide always as long as the world stands. The God-called evangelist is not always worrying about how long his work shall last. He is too busy about his Master's business. The man called of God to evangelize will not be running here and there getting some one to be writing letters asking churches and pastors to give him work. Rather, he will get down on his knees, asking God to open up fields of labor for him. This old world must be brought back to God and the man or men whom God has laid his hand on and named that man Evangelist is the man who is to do a large part of the work. God has separated him for this one most important job.

The evangelist must remember that he is a part of five men whom God has called to do a perfect work and each of these five men have their special work to do. The apostle, the prophet, the evangelist, the pastor, and the teacher are all to be co-laborers together perfecting the perfect will of God.

Now there is but one thing that can get in the way of an evangelist and that is he himself.

The evangelist must not get out of his line of work. When he begins to teach or take the place of pastor, or even go into agency work he generally fails. God called him to the most important work laid down in the Word—that of winning lost souls to Christ and it seems that God will not use him anywhere else as He will with such power as in the work to which he has been called to do.—Exchange.

PRIEST GIVEN JAIL SENTENCE.

Father Sancho Abadia, former parish priest at Moalboal, Cebu, Philippine Islands, has been convicted of subornation and has received a sentence of two years' imprisonment, says the Cable-news-American, a Manila paper, in its issue of April 29, 1914. The judge who pronounced sentence scathingly rebuked the priest, who, according to the decision, conspired to convict two innocent men of murder just to satisfy a grudge he had against them. The decision found that the priest had bribed several persons to testify falsely in his wicked endeavor to have two innocent parties convicted of murder. An accomplice guilty of perjury was also sentenced for three years and six months. In its finding the court further stated that it appeared extraordinary and incomprehensible that the office of a priest could be so perverted as to induce men to sell their services as perjured witnesses and put in jeopardy the life and liberty of innocent men. But the fact that a "holy priest" had bribed their contemptible service, was all the more a stronger incentive for these dupes of Romanism to obey.

Anything is right if the "infallible" church says it is. The offense is getting caught by the hated civil power.—The Menace.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL.

"She's the homeliest little thing! All freckles and pug nose and the pale blue eyes that go with the ugliest shade of sandy hair—" Maud's scornful young voice stopped abruptly at a warning gesture from Aunt Hannah.

"See here, young lady," that shrewd, elderly lady said, rather sharply, "there's only one face in the world that really concerns you, and that you have any right to criticize. That's the one you see when you look into your lookin'-glass. Other folks' faces are what the good Lord gave 'em, and what they've made of 'em by good or bad living. If you see to making your's show only good, it's ten to one sensible folks won't notice whether you've any freckles or not."

It was good advice as to faces and a lot of other things beside. Wise are they who look for the light from within shining in the faces and lives of those they meet, ignoring uncomeliness of form or feature as of little real importance. Beautiful are the girls who make it their aim to be as sweet and unselfish and lovable that others will not fail to see these things in their faces and their daily lives. Be warned if your looking-glass shows you fretful lines, or ill-tempered scowls or anything that you would not admire on another face. Take heed if honest self-communion shows you ugly traits in your character. Others you cannot make over directly. Attend to the things that are your own real concern—and lo! you will be showing others the beauty of an unselfish life and the way to attain it.—Exchange.

THE GIRL TO BE AVOIDED.

She is the girl who takes you off in one corner and tells you things that you wouldn't repeat to your mother.

She is the girl who is anxious to have you join a party which is to be "a dead secret," and which because people are very free and easy, makes you uncomfortable, and wish you were at home.

She is the girl who tries to induce you, "just for fun," to smoke a cigarette, or to take a glass of wine, and you don't know, and possibly she does not, that many of the sinners of today committed their first sins "just for fun."

She is the girl who persuades you that to stay at home and care for and love your own, to help mother, and to have your pleasures at home and where the home people can see them, is stupid and tiresome, and that spending the afternoon walking up and down the streets looking at the windows and people is "just delightful."

She is the girl that persuades you that slang is witty, that a loud dress that attracts the attention is "stylish," and that to be on very familiar terms with three or four young men is an evidence of your charms and fascination, instead of being, as it is, an outward, visible sign of your perfect folly.

She is the girl who persuades you that it is a very smart thing to be referred to as a "gay girl." She is very, very much mistaken.

And of all the others, she is the girl who, no matter how hard she may try to make you believe in her, is to be avoided.—Ladies' Home Journal.

ONLY ONE BOY.

It had been a dull year in the church where Moffet was converted. The deacons finally said to the old pastor: "We love you, pastor, but don't you think you had better resign; there hasn't been a convert this year?" "Yes," he replied, "it has been a dull year—sadly dull to me. Yet I mind me that one did come, wee Bobby Moffett. But he is so wee a bairn that I suppose that it is not right to count him."

A few years later wee Bobby came to the pastor and said, "Pastor, do you think that I could ever learn to preach? I feel within here something that tells me that I ought to. Yet I am afraid that I could never lead any. But oh, Pastor, if I only could! If I could just lead souls to Christ, that would be happiness to me." And the good old pastor answered, "Well, Bobby, you might, who knows? At least you can try!"

He did try, and years later when Robert Moffet came back from his wonderful work in Africa, the King of England rose and uncovered in his presence, and the British Parliament stood as a mark of its respect. They realized that a mighty man was among them. The humble old preacher, who had but one convert, and who was so sorely discouraged that year, is dead and forgotten, and yet that was the greatest year's work he ever did—and few have ever equaled it. Only one convert—but ah, that one!—Exchange.

THE STEWARDSHIP OF MONEY.

The stewardship of money, whether much or little, is one of the most important trusts ever committed to mankind. It bears a most vital relationship, not only to the development of one's personal, Christian character, but also to the general progress of Christ's churches in all their operations, both at home and abroad.

I ought, therefore, to administer all that God shall give me, as a trust for Him, and I ought to give of my means, to His cause, according to the principles plainly set forth in His Word, that is, I ought to give systematically, proportionately and cheerfully.

In grateful acknowledgement of the truth that I am not my own, having been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, and in recognition of the sacred obligations of Christian stewardship, I agree to set aside a certain proportion of my income, to be administered as a sacred trust fund for the Lord.

What this proportion is to be must be settled between the Lord and me, but as I am not willing to adopt a lower standard than that of the Jew, I will start with not less than one-tenth of my actual income, adding such free will offerings as I may find possible, with His blessing.

Since a constant outgo of sympathy in giving is sure to bring a continuous inflow of joy in living, I will make it a rule to give every week, if possible for me to do. In order to be perfectlly true in my dealings with God in this matter, I will keep an accurate account of all that I give, balancing the amount with my income at least once a year.

And in order to put this purpose into practice, I covenant to commence doing this now.—Baptist Standard.

A FATHER'S LOVE.

A little incident, which beautifully illustrated the word of David, spoken so long ago, came under my notice recently. It so impressed and comforted me that I want to pass it on.

We were seated round the tea table in my friend's pleasant home, when it seems the little daughter reached to help herself with undue haste. Her father reproved her, and it must have been gently, for there was not any interruption in the cheerful conversation. But a lady seated by the child's side told me afterward that Jennie's eyes filled with tears, and she slipped quietly away from the table. But I did not notice Mr. H— excusing himself and also leaving the room.

Immediately after I had occasion to visit the adjoining sitting room, where I found the little one nestled in her father's strong arms, the tears still falling from the blue eyes, but looking up trustfully into the brown eyes bent over hers and glistening with sympathy, while the voice tender and manly, was saying: "There, there, darling; papa youldn't hurt his little pet's feelings or spoil her supper if he could help it. See, papa could not eat any more when he knew you were feeling so badly. Now, sweetheart, let us go and see if there is anything left for us. Mother will attend to us herself."

For some time they talked softly; then I heard a little ripple of laughter and they went to finish their meal, her hand clasped in her father's.

But I had my lesson. What a sweet remembrance for that child. Thank God for our Christian fathers, and while the tears dropped down my cheeks, I cried silently, "Does God love me so?" And the answer came and stayed, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."—Christian Guardian.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The second session of the Pastors' Summer Conference is now history. There ought to be said a few things about it in the Herald for the purpose of informing our people as to the general character of this session. It was admittedly superior to the first. There were more men there, there were more addresses delivered, there was more interest manifested in these addresses, the topics or subjects touched upon themes more vital to our church life, more men came at first and stayed till the close; it was unanimously decided to make it permanent.

So far as could be learned the following pastors received all or part of their expenses to the conference from their charges: Davis, Bethea, J. D. Williams, Stubbins, T. F. McCulloch, Bates, Martin, from Buncombe Circuit, Gerringer, Lowdermilk; now if there were others we would be glad to have the fact published next week. Many of these pastors came from quite a distance, especially Davis, Bates, McCulloch, and Martin.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the efforts of the management of the Home to make our stay both pleasant and profitable; the food was well prepared and abundant, the rooms were well kept, the children had been so well disciplined that they did not appear to be under constraint, but were doing every one his and her work without compulsion. There are no happier or better controlled children in any home in our state than are these at the Home. God bless them and make them useful citizens and home builders when they have to leave there.

We will not attempt any synopsis of the splendid addresses delivered. Every one showed careful preparation and was delivered with an earnestness that caught and commanded our closest attention to the end. We were exceedingly fortunate in having with us Dr. F. T. Tagg, editor of the Methodist Protestant, who delivered a series of addresses of unusual interest and power. The lectures of Prof. Forlines were thrillingly informing, profoundly conceived and yet so illuminatingly presented that even an untrained thinker could follow him with ease through to the end. It was a pity for any of our pastors to miss this series. One brother who had taken a part on the program found he could not come, sent his written address which was read with a great deal of interest. By this showing that he felt responsible for the success of the conference and his act was appreciated by the program committee.

Only a few of the addresses can be published this year. We regret that we cannot give them all to the readers of the Herald, but that would deprive you of reading all other church news for several weeks. We do hope to give a synopsis of many of the addresses.

The fellowship of this conference was fine. We all doubtless feel the better for having spent a few days together. The time for conference was fixed upon the Monday after third Sunday in June, 1915. The officers were all reelected, and the next session will be held at the Home.

In conclusion we want to thank our good friends of High Point, and especially Pastor Dixon, Capt. Rankin, and Dr. Coe for the parts they contributed in making this conference a success. Their thoughtful consideration of us has placed every one of us under many obligations to them. Praying that it may be the privilege of all our pastors to greet each other again at the Children's Home next year, and that this year shall have many returns from the faithfully sown seed from your hands, I am very truly yours,

R. M. Andrews, President
Summer Conference.

METHODIST PROTESTANT ORPHANAGE AND MINISTERS' CONFERENCE.

Not many of the best things in life fall to the lot of a college president and such a creature is always happy when a combination of happy circumstances brings him opportunity to enjoy two of them at once, and that is exactly what fell joyously to my lot this week when I was privileged to visit the Methodist Protestant Orphanage and Ministers' Conference at the same time. I have wasted two stones on one bird many a time, but for this once one stone safely landed two birds,—fine ones, too, each of the two.

I was delightfully impressed with the Orphanage. It is happily situated and the building is not only commodious and well-planned, but it is elegantly appointed. The twenty-four children, eleven beautiful girls and thirteen fine, promising boys, wards they of a loyal, loving church, seemed as happy as larks in springtime when the meadows are most inviting. It was a pleasure and a benediction to see how happily they dwelt together and how cheerfully they responded to every wish of the superintendent or any other member of the administrative force and how gladly they served the ministers who were their guests. Orphanage life will never seem so dismal a thing after this.

I was glad to greet my good friends of former days, Brother and Sister H. A. Garrett, as the much-loved and thoroughly efficient superintendents of this youngest child of the Methodist Protestants, and to meet Mrs. Page and Miss Redding, their worthy and devoted assistants in faithful service. The Methodist Protestant Church has every reason to be gratified over its chidlren's home, for it is an institution worthy of the great brotherhood that conceived and fosters it.

The building was ample not only to house the present number of inmates, but also to care for the ministers in attendance on the ministers' conference, and they were cared for beautifully. The days were busy ones. Rising bell at 6:00 a. m., and a thirty minutes' devotional address beginning at 6:30 with breakfast at 7:00. Recreation and fellowship till 9:00. Lectures and addresses till noon. Recess till one, which brought refreshments to the physical man, and lectures beginning again at 2:00 p. m. Recreation from 5:00 till 6:00, when came the evening meal, followed by lectures again from 6:45 till 9:00 p. m.—a busy, strenuous program, but not busier or more exacting than the multitudinous duties of the average pastorate, for I tell you, brethren, the minister is ever a busy man and serves a larger constituency and in a larger way than any other professional man. How these preachers entered into it and enjoyed it!

I was privileged to hear Dr. F. T. Tagg, that sweet-spirited, lovable man, lecture on Present-Day Missionary Problems, and he painted the picture and pointed the way of duty in unforgettable manner. That was all I got of the first session I attended, but it was enough. The next morning Dr. C. E. Forlines, that scholar of the first magnitude, gave an address of rare power on The Authority of the Church. Now authority is an ingredient that Americans don't take to with avidity, but the professor treated it with sugar and put it in a capsule and it was really a thing beautiful to look upon and tempting to the taste.

After Dr. Forlines had completed his address I felt sorry for the three men who were to follow him, but they delivered the goods every one of them, and there was a sustained program which it would be difficult to surpass. Rev. J. D. Williams spoke on The Pastor and Prayer, Rev. A O. Lindley on The Relation of Conscience to Happiness, and Rev. J. H. Stowe, a country parson with Fifth Avenue ability, on Some Fundamentals of Character. It was a delightful three hours so spent and the fortunate bird of passage congratulated himself and took many notes. That was one of the notable characteristics of the assembly—the brethren were there on the King's business, and that meant carefully noting every good suggestion, and they were many.

I must not neglect to speak of a very illuminating matin message, preprandial as Chauncey M. Depew would say, delivered by my good-looking friend, the secretary of his conference, Rev. N. G. Bethea. When his subject, Camping by the Enemies' Fire, was announced, I wondered what he would ever do with such a subject on the first day of July. But it didn't bother him at all and he was as cool as a cucumber in December. He preached a veritable sermon of rare power on the need of the absolutely pure life, beginning with Peter's plight at the Master's trial, warming himself by the enemies' fire. Brother Bethea is always an original, independent thinker and electrifies a congregation with the appropriateness of his illustrations and the practicableness of his discourse.

The business session came just after the midday meal on Wednesday. I had previously sent a telegram inviting the conference here next year. At the proper time President R. M. Andrews gave me opportunity to reiterate our invitation and then Supt. Garrett spoke, inviting it back to the Orphans' Home. His eloquence and sweetness won everybody and our plea was withdrawn till the children should so throng the orphanage that the conference should be homeless, when Elon served notice that she would take them in.

Immediately after the business session, Rev. C. L. Whitaker began an enlightening address on Sermon Building, but Capt. A. M. Rankin's big automobile sounded "honk! honk!," and I was soon whirling along at a delightful pace toward Greensboro, there to take the eastbound train for Elon and an accumulation of correspondence that would have disheartened, were it not for the pleasant fellowship enjoyed at the Orphanage, and for the thought that answering those letters would perhaps open the way to college and to larger life for some forward-looking young man or hopeful maiden.

It was a spiritual feast at the Summer Conference to hear men who are giving their lives to the service of God, discussing the best methods for advancing His kingdom. May this conference continue to grow in usefulness.

JONAS HANWAY'S PLUCK.

It was in London many years ago—no, more than that; many, many years ago—well, perhaps 150, that he did it.

It was really very strange that he should have done it. You see, no one had ever done it before—at least, not in the city, not in broad daylight. But he made up his mind that it would be a capital thing to do, and he said, "I am going to do it."

His sister, who kept house for him, said, when he went out and prepared to do it: "I do wish you wouldn't be so silly!"

And his little niece exclaimed: "Oh, uncle, they will make fun of you if you do!"

But he just put on one of those "don't talk to me, I've made up my mind" looks, and then he kissed his sister and her little girl, and went away intending to do it.

"Poor thing!" his sister exclaimed, as she looked out of the window, and hoped it wouldn't be too wet. And his little slip of a niece hoped so, too. Because, you see, if it kept fine, he wouldn't have to do it.

But about 12 o'clock the weather changed its mind, and determined to make everybody wet. And it did. And people got crosser and crosser, until they happened to catch sight of him; then they nearly doubled over laughing. For, in spite of all his sister and her little girl had said, he had actually done it!

He had been walking with a friend, but when he told his friend what he was going to do, his friend said: "I don't think I would. You will look so foolish."

But he began to do it at once. So his friend went up a side street in Cheapside, muttering something about "silly business."

But he did it all the same. And the people kept on laughing.

One year passed by, and then two men might have been seen doing it. It was still very funny, but the people grew used to seeing them in Cheapside, and only strangers laughed. But if ever the first man went out to Lancaster Gate, or Forest Hill, or Hampstead, or Greenwich, to get a bit of country air, then everybody laughed again. And his poor sister used to get red in the face with embarrassment, and the girlie didn't like it at all. But the man did it all the same.

Several years went by, and now quite a number of people did it, for they saw it was a sensible thing to do; it only needed some one to begin it. And at last, after thirty years had gone by, everybody did it. And shops were opened, and children went to them to buy birthday presents for their fathers to help them do it, too, and nobody laughed any more.

Now we laugh if any one is out in the rain and doesn't do what Jonas Hanway did long years ago for the first time—carry an umbrella!

It took lots of pluck to carry that first umbrella. But Jonas Hanway had the best kind of courage. He didn't mind being laughed at—not at all! And he didn't mind being talked about—not a bit!

I don't wonder he started saving the little chimney sweeps who had to climb chimneys, and sometimes broke their legs; nor that he started training-ships for rough boys, and a lot of other things. A man who could start carrying an umbrella had pluck enough for anything.—Continent.

—Baroness von Suttner died at her home in Vienna last Sunday. She devoted most of her life to the cause of peace. The Baroness was heard with interest in Boston and other parts of the United States about a year ago. She was awarded the Nobel peace prize in 1905, and was a member of the advisory council of the Canadian Peace Foundation.

Sunday was a good day for us. Children's Day service was held in the morning, consisting of recitations and songs, followed by a very beautiful pantomime rendered by Misses Beulah, Nina, and Josie Guthrie. Then Messrs. Robert Woody, Parker Lewis, and Eugene Riddle sang a trio, "Anchored in Love Divine," which was highly praised by all.

Miss Fannie Ray, of Graham, assisted in the music which was very much appreciated.

After the children were through Rev. G. W. Holmes made a short but helpful talk. The collection amounted to $11.04.

Rev. Oscar Cox preached a good sermon in the afternoon to a good crowd.

We held our children's service first Sunday in June. The old people say it was the best we have had in many years. Miss Marie took charge of the music for us. Dr. Forlines addressed the audience in the afternoon. We all could have listened to him much longer. He always has something worth while to tell us. Can't listen to him and not feel benefited.

Having just returned from Summer Conference, Bro. Edwards gave us the best sermon yesterday he has given yet. He feels greatly benefitted.

Our third quarterly conference will convene at Littleton Saturday before the first Sunday in August at about 2 o'clock. Messrs. J. H. Harrison and "Ben" Fishell are our nominees to Annual Conference.

Miss Mary Morris had the best lesson of anyone in Sunday-school last Sunday. I believe I shall report to our church paper all who have good lessons. We love to know who study.

Miss Eula Morris, who has been teaching the Weaver school, and attended the two weeks' session of teachers' training school in Weldon, recently has returned home. Miss Nora Morris is home now also, having been in the Aurelian Springs school for the past term.

Mr. A. E. Carter attended the bedside of his son-in-law, Mr. A. Pittman, last Sunday. We are informed that he has fever.

We had 280 in Sunday-school last Sunday, which was an increase over the previous Sunday of 23. The increase in attendance is noticeable especially in the Baraca class. The attendance in that class last Sunday was 64. A contest between the members of the class is now being carried on, which accounts for the large attendance.

Our church service was well attended Sunday morning, and Bro. Curry gave us a good sermon, which he always does. There was no service at night, on account of the union service of all the churches in the town held under the Chautauqua tent. This service was a part of the Chautauqua week, and was under the management of the local ministers' association.

Bro. Curry is attending the Pastors' Summer Conference this week.

On Thursday night, June 18th, the Philathea class of our school very delightfully entertained the Baraca class, at the home of Miss Margaret Loy, from eight to eleven o'clock, in compliance with and fulfillment of the requirement of the Baraca-Philathea contest which closed a few weeks ago. About fifty were present to enjoy the occasion, which was full of merriment and pleasure.

With next Sunday our Sunday-school begins a new term. The newly elected officers and teachers will enter upon their duties for the remaining six-months term of this year. The prospects are very bright, and we are hoping to accomplish a greater work in the last half of the year than we were able to accomplish during the first half. Our superintendent, Bro. Rogers, expressed a feeling of gratification and appreciation last Sunday morning for the spirit of loyalty and willingness which the school has manifested along the various lines of Sunday-school work. The school appreciates beyond measure the valuable services which Bro. Rogers is giving it, and rejoices in the fact that Burlington M. P. Church affords such a consecrated and untiring man.

Our third quarterly conference will convene at Friendship on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July. Rev. Jesse Pritchard will be present and preach to quarterly conference at 11 o'clock. Then dinner and business of the quarterly conference. A full attendance of the officials desired, and be there, brethren, for preaching. There will be important business, brethren. Let the stewards get busy and make a good report. Remember that we are badly behind with all the interests.

Our special meetings and help will be as follows: Commencing at Friendship on 4th Sunday in July two services. Rev. Jesse Pritchard, of Halifax Circuit, will be my engaged help.

On the first Sunday in August at Mt. Carmel; two services. Rev. A. D. Shelton, of the Piedmont Circuit, will be my help.

On second Sunday in August we will commence our special services at Bethesda. Rev. W. E. Swain, D. D., will be my help.

On the third Sunday in August we will commence our special meeting at Shiloh; two services. Rev. John H. Bowman will be my help.

We are praying for and expecting gracious services. We sincerely ask an interest in the prayers of all friends to the Master's cause.

We are having splendid congregations.

On July the 4th we lost two of our members. William H. Harrison died in the well of Bro. Jesse Evans. He went down into the well to clean it out and it is supposed bad air killed him. He leaves a widow and one child. Sad.

Sister Lillie Fritts, the wife of Bro. R. M. Fritts, was carried to High Point Hospital on last Wednesday, July 1st; was operated on Friday afternoon, died Saturday. She was buried at Mt. Carmel on Monday. Funeral conducted by pastor. One of the largest audiences gathered I ever saw at a burial. Sister Fritts was a good woman and much loved. The pastor knew her when only a girl. She came to school to him. I've been her pastor now for nearly five years. I never heard an evil word spoken of her nor did I ever hear her speak evil of any one.

She leaves a husband and four children. May the good Lord bless them.

H. L. Powell, Pastor.

Bro. Waldrop gave us another one of his excellent sermons Sunday night, July 5, to an attentive congregation. Bro. Waldrop did not fail to warn the people of their evil ways. We are expecting to have a good meeting this year, which will begin the first or the fourth Sunday in August. Rev. J. W. Alexander will help in the meeting. Our Sunday-school and prayer meeting are improving some. We had Mr. Phelps with us Sunday. In Sunday-school he made us a good talk which was enjoyed very much by all who were present.

Surratt.

Julia Surratt, wife of D. L. Surratt, of Jackson Hill, N. C., was born June 4, 1851, and died June 24, 1914. This makes her age sixty-three years and twenty days. She professed religion at the age of 13 years and joined the Methodist Protestant church, of which she lived a consistent Christian member to the time of her death. She leaves behind a husband, eight children, one brother, two sisters, and a great number of friends and neighbors, none of whom have anything to say about her life except that which is good and commendable. This is saying a great deal but it is all true. In her home Methodist Protestant preachers have always found a hearty welcome. She was never too busy to stop and cook a warm meal for the tired preacher if he happened to call in a little after the usual meal.

She bore her sickness bravely and without complaint. She was conscious to the last. Just a few moments before she died she called her husband and children to her and told them she was going to die. Her last words were, "Lord, he will take care of me. Don't leave me." Her husband said, "He is taking care of you," and she said "Yes," and was gone.

A good woman has left us, but our loss is her gain. She was the mother of D. T. Surratt and W. B. Surratt, two young men of promise who expect to become ministers in our conference. May the Lord bless and take care of her loved ones and especially her husband who suffers most because of her removal.

Her membership was at Denton, but she was buried in the church cemetery at Pleasant Grove.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

Mr. W. M. Hurst, of McFarlan, N. C., was born Dec. 25, 1828; died July 3, 1914, aged 85 years, 6 months and 8 days.

Mr. Hurst was an industrious man, always cheerful when in good health. He was a hard working man and was very energetic as long as he was able to be up. His neighbors and friends all loved him. Though he suffered a great deal during his last days, he bore it with Christian fortitude and often spoke of his conversion and hope of Heaven. He was visited several times during his last illness by his pastor and was questioned as to his future prospects. His answer was, "I am ready to go; the way is clear; I am only waiting for the call."

The community, especially his church, suffered a heavy loss, he being the oldest member. His death made a vacancy in his home and church that can never be filled. His friends and family feel satisfied that he passed into the great beyond in peace and is gently beckoning them to come home.

We extend to the bereaved family, and especially to Mrs. Hurst, our heartfelt sympathies and pray that God's richest blessings may rest upon them.

He leaves a wife, four daughters and three sons to mourn their loss. His family and friends were very kind to him during his illness. We especially commend Miss Artie for her kindness to her father and mother.

His remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Pleasant Hill M. E. Church Sunday, July 5th; funeral services conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. F. Allred.

A Friend.

Porter.

Richard Porter was born September 13, 1892, was ushered into the great beyond on July 4, 1914. He was taken away right in the very prime of manhood, after an illness of only nine days, of typhoid fever. Richard left a father and mother and two sisters and one brother to mourn his loss: Mrs. Frank Honeycutt, Velma and Charlie Porter.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. E. Waldrop and Mr. Dawson, and his body was tenderly laid to rest at Pleasant Plain amid a large concourse of friends. The pall bearers were his Sunday-school class, Messrs. Frank Biggers, James Smyth, Grady Noles, Luther Underwood, Bob Noles and Bonner Stallings, and the choir sang very tenderly "Asleep in Jesus," and "Nearer, my God, to Thee."

Pray for the bereaved family that they might meet him in heaven.

Lillian Noles.

On Thursday, June the 29th, the death angel visited the home of Mr. Ed Strayhorn and claimed his sainted mother. She was born March 9, 1845. She leaves three sons and one daughter to mourn their loss, her husband having preceded her to the grave several years. She was a sweet-spirited mother, having strong faith in God.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Halifax Circuit.

On the third Sunday in June we had a splendid Children's Day service at Lee's Chapel. This writer has never seen a larger congregation there than there was that day and everything passed off nicely. The children had been well trained for the service by Mrs. W. I. Porter and Miss Lula Lee. The offering for foreign missions amounted to $10.70. In the afternoon Rev. Mr. Riggin, of the Baptist Church, preached a very helpfufl sermon, and so we went away feelng that it had been a good day.

Well, what shall we say about our union picnic which was held at Brinkleyville June the 25th? Anyway it was a great success. The people of all denominations came from all directions until Bethesda church would not hold the people. The principal address was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Cotton, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, Littleton, N. C., and an able one it was. After this each pastor present—there were five present—was introduced and made a short talk. After a very sumptuous dinner a committee was appointed to arrange for a similar meeting next year.

The repair work on Bethesda church has been finished and the appearance of the church has been very greatly improved.

A very severe hailstorm struck the Eden community on the 22d and some of our members were among the heavy losers. I hear that Bro. W. F. White lost 18 acres of tobacco. When we remember that an acre of tobacco in this section sometimes brings $300 we can begin to appreciate the loss.

This is no fish story, it is true: the pastor and his wife have a hen which laid 101 eggs without stopping for more than one day. Who can beat that?

The pastor's wife, who has been right sick, is better now, though she was not sufficiently recovered for him to go to the Summer Conference this week.

Bro. Glenn E. Wills is still very ill at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

Miss Lyla Wills started to Asheville, N. C., last Friday for her health. We trust she will be benefitted.

J. E. Pritchard.

Canaan, Piedmont Circuit.—The second in July is the day set for our Children's Day. We are going to have a children's day and a fathers' day also. I will not try to tell what hour either of the services will be. But come prepared to stay all day with us.

We have organized a Baraca and Philathea class since I wrote last. We are hoping that this will benefit our school. We know if we follow the rules of the Baraca and Philathea it will do us good.

We are having a good attendance at prayer meeting and Sunday-school. Yet I believe we ought to have just a little better attendance. Let us be careful and not be neglectful about our Sunday-school.

We Canaan people wonder what has become of the parsonage.

Our meeting begins at Canaan 4th Sunday in August. Everybody be sure and come that day.

Caroleen.

The Methodist Protestant Sunday school and the Jr. O. U. A. M. united in a picnic today and it was a great time for all. I counted 159 in the parade as they passed. Bro. C. W. Atkins. the faithful superintendent, with the help of others and the Junior Order made it a success. It was glorious to see them march from the church to the spring of Sister H. I. Bess, where a table some 75 feet long was well laden with eatables, and all the lemonade the crowd wanted to drink. There was the most manly conduct, and not a single smell of any intoxicants on hand. They sent Bro. Clyde Tate in an auto for wife, daughter and myself, and had me billed for an address at 11 a. m. I seized the opportunity after the address, and raised $31. subscriptions on our church debt. Every Junior gave me $1 except two or three. It was a good day for us. Over 200 ate all they wanted and a good supply left. We only lack $19 of having $100 needed within the next 60 days. I believe we will get the other $19.

All three churches are now in fine shape financially, but to say it has taken hard work does not half tell it.

Notice to Stewards.—Please hold your election for delegate to represent this work at the next annual conference. Bros. C. W. Atkins and D. B. Johnson are the nominees. The third quarterly conference is to be at Lincolnton on Saturday before the third Sunday in July at 8 p. m.

We expect to begin our special meeting at Shelby the second Sunday, and the church has selected the pastor to do the preaching. This will conclude our special meetings unless we hold some in the fall. Pray for us. I am rejoicing at the truth of our present attainments and must say praise the Lord.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. offer to pay my railroad expenses to Rutherfordton on the 11th if I will go and address them. They are helping us materially and also in other ways.

July 4, 1914.

As I came in from Lincolnton two weeks ago, I was called in haste to see a man who was nearly dead with consumption. I talked plain and straight to him. He said he was ready to go. I saw him on Monday and he died on Friday. As I came in from Caroleen last Monday I had a phone message to come at once to see another man almost dead. I read, talked plain and prayed with him. He had been a very wicked young man. He made a profession. I waited two or three days and went back. He was happy. His people were Baptists, but he asked me to take him into our church. So I did, and baptized him lying on the bed. He is living yet, but can't live long. Why will people wait till the very last? I can't see. I have many calls like this. I tell them it is a great risk to wait so long, but God can save to the uttermost.

Last Saturday week I married Mr. John Isler and Miss Mary Gibbons. He was a Holiness preacher.

Since writing my last little communication to the Herald I have received two persons into the church at Wesley Chapel on profession and one at Ebenezer by certificate. At my last appointment at Ebenezer $27.50 was pledged on the purchase of an organ for that church. I have been taking collection for president's parsonage. I think I will secure the full amount.

Our third quarterly meeting is appointed to be held at Hobbs' Chapel August 6th at 2 p m., which will be Thursday off the protracted meeting there.

Last Sunday-school report as follows: Total on roll, 80; total present, 43; total collections, 51 cents.

Since my last report one of our members, Mr. Haywood Falkner, was made to feel awfully sad because of the death of his nineteen-year-old son, Walter, who drowned in a pond near Durham. Walter was, I believe, an honest, truthful young man.

My meetings are as follows: Whitaker's Chapel, 2d week in August; Roseneath, 3d week in August; Whitaker's Temple, 4th week in August. Bros. Burgess, Bethea, and Stubbins will be my help in order named.

T. E. Davis.

Hebron, Lincoln Circuit.

We are having a good Sunday-school, with good attendance. Bro. Alex Boyles is superintendent, Elizabeth Boyles, secretary, Charley Houser, G. C. Boyles, Frances Boyles, teachers. Our protracted meeting commences first Sunday in August. Pray for us that we may have a good meeting, the church may be revived and many sinners be brought to Christ. Bro. Morris has been faithful and zealous in the work.

We have been thinking of painting our church in the near future. We held memorial service yesterday. Had a large audience, also a sermon from Bro. Morris, one of the best.

Mrs. Lee. Boyles, Reporter.

Yarborough Church.

Our Children's Day the first Sunday in July was a grand success. The children were trained by Mrs. E. M. D. Watson and Miss Lillie Yarborough. These good ladies have our many thanks for the work done, for without training the children would not be able to give such a great treat to the church. The offering in cash and pledges was one hundred and thirteen dollars, probably the best the church has ever done at one time.

W. A. Lamar, Pastor.

Asheville.

The preacher had a great time last week at the Summer Conference. It was pleasant to meet the brethren, enjoy the fellowship, get the inspiration of the messages, and, best of all, hear the expressions of delight when the folks saw the pictures of the Asheville church. You ought to have seen the preacher smile, and the folks likewise. We've got something worth smiling about.

But the preacher's smile has turned into a broad grin. It happened this way: Yesterday congregations were smaller than usual. Too much Fourth, or too little Fifth, I don't know which. But what was lacking in numbers was made up in spirit. One among the largest communion services in the history of the Asheville church. And the offering for the building fund of $169. With the $50 received at the Summer Conference, a total of $219. $67 of the amount turned in came out of Bro. Barrett's box. Let me tell you about it. Our Bro. Barrett conceived the idea some three weeks ago that it would be a good scheme to have a tin box made with a slot in it, and carry it around with him, and see if he couldn't gather in some of the stray coins that men wouldn't give if they had to put their names down. He weighed the box with its contents on Saturday, and it weighed close to eight pounds. When we counted the money it amounted to $67. Some of this was amounts that Bro. Barrett had pledges for, and it is so reported in his lists this week.

The preacher is mighty grateful to the membership of the church for raising the amount of his expense to the Summer Conference. It's worth a good deal more than the $10.25 that they gave him to know that it is an expression of their appreciation of what he has tried to do.

The rostrum was finished in the church last week, and the railing put around the choir platform. The rough coat on the concrete steps is finished. Just a few more touches like these and the work will be done. All done but paying for it. To pay, to pay, Aye, there's the rub. Come along, your help is needed. $1,500 by Conference time. Help!

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Ct.—We are always glad to get our Herald. We all want to read it at once. It is surprising to think so many of our M. P.'s don't take the church paper. How can these be M. P.'s without reading our church paper? They don't know what they are missing.

Bro. Stubbins gave us another fine sermon 4th Sunday in June from these words. "Deep calleth unto deep." We always feel stronger spiritually after hearing sermons like he preaches. In honor of our L. A. S. our church paid pastor's expenses to the Summer Conference. Our L. A. S. has also purchased an individual communion set for our church; something to be proud of, I'm sure.

We have not seen a notice in our paper of our collection the fourth Sunday in May for Children's Home. Our secretary sent it in. Guess it was oversight. Our last collection 4th Sunday in June was something over three dollars, I think.

Mrs. R. C. Stubbins and little Louise are doing some visiting while Mr. Stubbins is away.

Mr. Borughes Ray died the 26th of June after a lingering illness; funeral was conducted by the pastor.

Pleasant Grove, Lebanon Circuit.—Our Sunday-school met at usual hour with-sixty in attendance; our school has fallen off some on account of the warm weather; but, brethren and sisters, we must rally to its support and not be negligent. We decided to have a Children's Day service and picnic some time in August. At close of school we took the regular monthly offering for our Children's Home; amount, sixty-seven cents.

Brother Loy delivered one of the best sermons we have ever heard him deliver. Glad to have Sister Loy and her children with us. Come again, Sister Loy. Our protracted meeting is the second Sunday in July at eleven o'clock. Bro. Loy's pulpit help is Rev. D. R. Williams. Bro. Williams is not a stranger to us, having helped Bro. Moton here. To know Bro. Williams is to love him. We look and pray for a glorious revival and, brethren, we want you to pray that we may have a glorious meeeting.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.—We will commence our special meeting at Mt. Zion Church third Sunday in July, with Bro. D. R. Williams as our help; at Pinnacle M. P. Church fourth Sunday in July; Bro. Geo. L. Curry is our help secured for this place.

Brethren, pray for our success.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. A young artist named Tucker painted the picture of a forlorn woman with a child, out in the storm. This picture took such a hold upon him that he laid by paint and brush, saying, "I must go to the lost, instead of painting them." He prepared for the ministry, and for some time worked in the city's slums. At length he said, "I must go to that part of the world where men seem to be most hopelessly lost." That young artist was none other than Bishop Tucker, of Uganda, Africa.—Record of Christian Work.

IT'S JUST FINE READING.

With the remittances from pastors, superintendents, treasurers, secretaries and friends generally come words of cheer and hope, and hearten your overtaxed secretary greatly.

The good things written about the successful Children's Day services held in many of our churches are also encouraging.

"Keep believing, and we will keep coming," wrote a pastor. "Our prayers are for you," wrote another. "We had a glorious service." "Congratulations on the fine service you prepared for us."

It is indeed gratifying that a number of schools have reported an increase in their offering, for this is a necessity to meet the increased demands of our successful work.

Several, sending less than they sent last year, have explained and expressed sincere regret. We heartily appreciate everything done by everyone to help on the Master's work. Our best is all that is expected of us but we must see to it that we do our best for Him and His cause.

A PICNIC AT HOME.

Here is a practical suggestion which you can carry out in your own Sunday-school.

One Sunday-school makes it a regular custom during the three summer months to have an easily prepared outdoor picnic in their church grounds every bright Saturday afternoon. The ladies make sandwiches and salad and simple cake. The men "drop in" as soon as their office work is over, just in time to make the coffee in the swinging coffeepot over the brush pile, for of course they want a part of the preparation. A sandpile is provided for the babies, swings and teeters for the older children. And what fine times they all have! It is just like a big family circle, each member growing better and better acquainted with the other, as the weeks pass.

The interests of church and town are sure to creep into the conversation informally, and often some half-suggested need is met almost at once with volunteers. The wealthier members of one struggling community departed last summer for outings here and there; but those left put the very best face on the matter and resolved to enjoy the outdoor picnic idea to the utmost. When the various travelers returned they were astonished to find a newly constructed church kitchen, a Sunday-school freshly papered and tinted from top to bottom; an attractively planted churchyard, with a generous sand pile, and a newly painted parsonage—all done by volunteers.

"Even if we did have to stay placed, we didn't 'stay put,'" cried one jovial member of those who couldn't afford an outing. "Rust can accumulate in mortal's bones, even with summer's dews, so we just hustled around a bit in answer to some howling needs." C. H. Hubbell.

ELECTRICITY DIRECT FROM COAL.

It is universally admitted that when electricity can be produced cheaply enough it will supplant all other forms of motor power. It now looks as though the process of making it cheaply were in sight, and though some years may be required to adjust the mechanism to the newly discovered thought, many good judges, including such an authority as Thomas Edison, are reported to have expressed their faith in the plan to derive electricity from ordinary coal so cheaply as to make its well-nigh universal use possible. The new method would eliminate boiler, engine and dynamo in the transformation of the heat produced by burning coal into electrical power. By the present method of manufacturing electricity, in which three middle processes must be used, a large percentage of the original power is lost, which in the new method proposed will be preserved. Over a hundred expert electricians have been working in their laboratories to find a cheap way of making the subtle current, and they generally admit that the heat generated by the burning of coal will produce the current for economical commercial purposes.—Selected.

THE FORTUNE OF A RECLUSE.

An old man died in Texas the other day, who for many years had led the life of a recluse, on a dietary schedule averaging forty-five cents a day. The walls of his room were covered with cheap prints, newspaper clippings and calendars. He was regarded by his neighbors as an eccentric of slender means. After his death, deeds were found to a fortune in real estate. His property was scattered in more than a dozen States. It is estimated that his total wealth, real and personal, will aggregate $12,000,000. Diligent search failed to discover a will of any sort and a number of relatives are flocking to claim the property. What rich opportunities this man missed for doing good in his lifetime with the great wealth at his command! Had he regarded his possessions in the light of a stewardship, he might have become a benefactor to many. Those that trust in material wealth have this warning: "Not to set their hope on the uncertainty of riches, but on God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." (1 Tim. 6:17, R. V.)—Christian Herald.

RUSSELL H. CONWELL'S CONVERSION.

We recently heard him tell the story. He was an infidel in college, and gloried in the fact. He was an unbeliever in Christ and the Bible when he entered the Civil War as a captain in the northern army.

Now for 35 years he has been a minister of the Gospel and at the age of 72 he is trying to do the work of two men. He preaches four times on Sunday, we are told, to vast audiences. He is pastor of a large church, president of a college, and at the head of a hospital in Philadelphia. He has also written a number of books, and is in demand as a lecturer, especially on "Acres of Diamonds".

The impressions that led to his conversion were made by a little boy received into his tent as a servant. This little boy's mother had asked him to read the Bible every day, and the first night in the tent, he started to do so, when the captain noticed the fact, and forbade it. The boy thought the captain was speaking in jest, and proceeded with his reading. The next night, the boy started to read his Bible again, and was forbidden by the captain in a way that he could not misunderstand. The boy looked at the captain intently, and replied, "I love you, Captain, but you are a very wicked man!" This touched the captain, and he went outside the tent and walked back and forth thinking what he would do. At length he decided to allow the boy to go into the tent of the sergeant, who was a Christian man, and read his Bible every night.

The captain had a sword with a gold sheath given to him by Massachusetts friends, and he prized it very highly. One night, while Russell's company was in camp near Newbern, N. C., the Confederates came upon them so suddenly that the only thing they could do was to flee across the river, leaving the camp to the men in grey. After they had crossed over, the boy remembered the captain's sword and went back after it. Though he was dressed in blue, being a boy he was unnoticed by the Confederate soldiers who were busy shooting at the federals across the river. He entered the captain's tent, seized the sword, and started back on a bridge, which by this time was fast burning down. Then he was seen, and a Confederate took out his handkerchief and waved a signal of truce, and all became interested in saving the boy. He was finally rescued by the federals, but was so badly burned that he died a few days later in a hospital. But he kept the captain's sword, for which he had given his life, and left it when he died to be delivered to the captain.

The captain was himself so badly wounded that the doctors did not expect him to survive, and did not take the pains to set his dislocated shoulder. The boy's faith in God and his devotion to the captain affected him profoundly and he called for a chaplain to pray with him. One came and began praying in a perfunctory manner—"piling up words", Conwell expresses it. He laid his uncrippled hand on him, and asked him to stop. He wanted a prayer that could be felt. Again the chaplain prayed, putting his soul into the effort, and Conwell saw the light. He came to know—"not simply believe—that the Bible is true."

That sword he now keeps hanging over his bed that he may see it when he awakes. He seems to find in it and the memories it awakes inspiration for the life so abundant in labor he is now living. He says he works sixteen hours a day.

He has more physical strength than most men have, but would not many be more earnest and active in efforts to do good if they had Mr. Conwell's passion for blessing humanity? There is so much to do, and so short a time in which to do it!

—A negro woman was taken from jail at Elloree, S. C., by a mob and put to death. She was charged with the murder of a child. How will those lynchers feel if it should be discovered hereafter that the woman was innocent? How will they feel, anyway, when they reflect that they are themselves murderers? How much better is their crime than that charged to the woman?

THE DISTRICT OR PRESIDENT'S PARSONAGE.

We have heard from the following pastors: Rev. T. M. Johnson reports that Tabernacle will raise its full assessment; Rev. C. L. Whitaker, that Asheboro is ready to send its whenever needed; Rev. J. D. Williams reports that Henderson is also ready; Greensboro will pay theirs; Bro. Loy sends $1 for Lebanon; Bro. Highfill, Greenville Ct., has sent $7.66 and reports that the entire amount is expected.

These charges are far apart, but they show a willingness on the part of our people to respond to the calls made upon them in a manner that encourages the committee very much.

There is not much time for pushing this enterprise from now till the first of August, but posibly all that our pastors will need to finish up the canvass which they have already under full steam. Let's make a rush for the goal and bring in such an amount that the enterprise will be assured.

All money may be sent direct to Mr. T. A. Hunter, Greensboro; it will be acknowledged in the Herald. We want to publish a full list of charges and pastors the first week in August that have contributed their part to this splendid enterprise. Let's rally to the work now till it's finished.

Thanking those who have given this matter their attention and have shown the willing mind, we are very truly,

The Parsonage Committee.

That big hearted Baraca Class at Henderson has obligated to support an orphan in the Home for one year at least. The Woman's Home Miss. Society is supporting one and an individual member is clothing one. This congregation believes, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

I had the pleasure last week of visiting our church in Asheville. The Asheville people are to be congratulated for erecting such an attractive church on an ideal location. We haven't a more loyal congregation than this and it deserves the hearty co-operation of the entire Conference.

If you have made a pledge for that church, pay it and go see what is being done—you will be proud of it and will want to give a little more.

DIED STRANGE DEATHS.

Chief Statistician Hutchcroft, of the Wisconsin board of health, says that some of the causes of death which are given in the reports made to the board are of a very remarkable nature. Here are some samples:

One mother "died in infancy."

"Went to bed feeling well, but woke up dead."

"Died suddenly at the age of 103. Up to this time he bid fair to reach a ripe old age."

"Do not know cause of death, but patient fully recovered from last illness."

"Deceased had never been fatally sick."

"Died suddenly; nothing serious."

"Pulmonary hemorrhage — sudden death." (Duration four years.)

"Diseased died from blood poison, caused by a broken ankle, which is remarkable, as the automobile struck him between the lamp and the radiator."

Mrs. Breen had talked enthusiastically of the largely advertised fire sale which was to take place in one of the department stores. That evening when her husband came home he looked about at a number of bundles which were lying on a table. "Well, Mabel, what did you find at that wonderful fire sale?" he inquired.

"Oh, Will, I got some of the loveliest silk stockings at 24 cents a pair! There isn't a thing the matter with them, except that the feet are burned off."—Harper's Magazine.

"Aunt Mary, why is it that you never married?"

"I suppose, my dear, it was due to my policy of watchful waiting."—Detroit Free Press.

At the close of his talk before a Sunday school the bishop invited questions.

A tiny boy, with a white, eager face, at once held up his hand.

"Please, sir," said he, "why was Adam never a baby?"

The bishop coughed in doubt as to what answer to give, but a little girl, the eldest of several brothers and sisters, came promptly to his aid:

"Please, sir," she added, smartly, "there was nobody to nuss him."—Tit-Bits.

The vicar advertised for an organist the other day. Among the replies he received was the following:

"Dear Sir—I notice that you have a vacancy for an organist and music-teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I beg to apply for the position."

—The government's decree against the board of trade of Elgin, Ill., known as the butter trust, has been made final. The board is forbidden to meet and name butter prices. The quotations of the Elgin board for years practically ruled the butter market of the entire country resulting in artificially high prices. The butter producers are up in arms because they are unable to secure as high prices as they did when the combine was in operation. Somebody is always mad, whether prices are high or low.—Pathfinder.

—In order to meet the demand of Kansas wheat-growers for binder-twine, convicts employed in the twine department of the state prison have agreed to work overtime. MISSIONS A DEBT, OR A CHARITY—WHICH?

"I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians. . . . So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you also that are in Rome" (Rom. 1: 14-15).

In these forcible words the great apostle expressed his own personal missionary conviction and resolve. He confessed himself the heathen's debtor. He owed them the gospel. Even though he had already done more along this line than any dozen other men of his time, he laid no claim to merit, nor considered that he was conferring any favor on the Romans in making an added effort to take them the gospel. It was his duty, his debt, and he was only seeking, as an honest man, to discharge it.

But if it was for Paul a debt, can it be something less for the rest of us? Yet how few appear to treat it so! The majority of professing Christians regard missions with utter indifference, missionaries as an enigma, and their task as self-imposed. They wonder by what strange freak of nature certain pious people choose to go and live among yellow or black folks rather than stay at home. And it is to be feared that very many even of those who do profess and possess a degree of interest in this work conceive of it merely as a charity.

Is there any essential difference between regarding missions as a charity and as a debt? Let us see. Here comes a ragged, unkempt creature, holding out his dirty cap to me. I recognize him as a beggar. So I pull out a coin—a nickel, a dime, anything—and throw it to him. That is charity. It is cheap: it is easy. It is free from any sense of responsibility, purely a matter of personal choice. But now another man steps up and hands me a bit of paper. I open it and find it a bill of debt,—for $100, we will say. Do I presume to get rid of this second man as I did the first, by flinging him the first coin that comes handy? By no means. It is a very different matter, for this is a debt, and I am bound to face it seriously, and do everything in my power to wipe it out, to the very last cent.

Now, apply this illustration to missions, and what have we?

Missions viewed as a charity,—secondary, optional, no serious concern or prayer or effort, spasmodic and insignificant giving.

Missions viewed as a debt,—primary, obligatory, deep heart concern and prayer and effort, systematic and sacrificing giving.

Charity foots the list of your expenditure and claims your spare cash. Debt heads the list, if you are conscientious, and cuts out everything non-essential, until it is fully met. You give a little of the interest on your money to charity, but you dip down into your principal and give all, if need be, to pay your debts.

I visited a church, and met a number of its leading members all earning liberal salaries. They professed great interest in missions. On inquiry I found that the church was giving $25 a year to the cause. I attended a Convention at which a colored washerwoman put $200 into the missionary offering. It was her yearly custom. What made the difference between those two standards of giving? Simply the viewpoint. The church treated missions as a charity, the woman as a debt, and both gave accordingly. To them it was one among a score of equally important (or unimportant!) things; to her it was the one supreme thing. They played at missions as a sort of diversion; she worked at missions as the business of her life.

Christian reader, in which light have you regarded this work—as expressed by your prayers, your gifts, your efforts to go? Has your conscience been convicted of a debt you owe the heathen, or have only your emotions been stirred at times with a feeling of pity for them?

Let me repeat it; we OWE the heathen the gospel; we are their DEBTORS.

Out of gratitude for our salvation, since only "by the grace of God I am what I am";

Out of loyalty to Christ, who commissioned us to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature;

Out of compassion for heathen suffering and sorrow; and finally

Out of the realization that in the gospel we have the only remedy for their temporal ills and the only answer to their souls' eternal needs.

May God convict His children of their debts, and make them "ready, as much as in them is" to meet them! Then, at last, will there be no lack of missionaries to go, or intercessors to pray, or money to send. And may this conviction begin with YOU!—Alliance Weekly.

BOOK FOR YOUNG MEN.

"We have received a copy of the new book by B. J. Kendall, M. D., (Author of The Parents' Guide in Sex Problems) entitled 'The Secrets of Success for Boys and Young Men.' The book treats on Sex Hygiene, Medical Advice to Boys and Young Men, Preventing Consumption, How Boys Become Real Men, How Boys Fail to Become Men, Impure Thoughts, many other subjects important in making a good start towards strong clean, successful manhood. The book contains 118 pages. Price, bound in cloth. 50 cents; with paper binding, 25 cents. B. J. Kendall, M. D., Geneva, Illinois, is the publisher."—The Wisconsin Agriculturist, Racine, Wis.

The sovereign summons to men is to prayer. It is a call to use the great unused human resource of power. It is a call to every man to walk with the tread of a giant "an open but unfrequented path to immortality." Other lesser calls must die out in us if the present spiritual world crisis is to be met. Practical men of business say that this is the work of the minister or missionary, but Christ's call to prayer is not limited to any group of individuals or to a special section of the Church. The men of our time are discovering that they have a wealth of talent of which they did not dream—to bring things to pass by prayer. Intercession has ever been what Arthur Smith calls "The deeply buried talent."

Let us in the beginning frankly face the fact that there is no call which involves more of unwithholding consecration than the life of intercession. There is no service which demands so much of a man, which digs down so deep into his life, which floods with such a searching light all the methods and principles by which men govern their lives.

On the other hand let it not be forgotten that there is no human means of releasing such measureless force among mankind. This involves not simply a prayer for ourselves in a few hurried sentences at night, when too tired to remember what has been prayed for when the words have been said, not a few fragments of time given to this most important occupation, but prayer, central in life, having a clear space in which to live and breathe and yet not confined to times and seasons but mingling with the whole of life.—The Call of the World.

THE PASTOR AND CHURCH FINANCE.

The finances have been a perplexing problem to religious leaders and church workers, since the beginning of the Christian church. Ananias and Sapphira, no doubt, caused a great deal of trouble. And it was not long after this that the Grecians raised a disturbance because of the distribution of the funds voluntari'y laid at the apostles' feet.

The pastor has been in the thick of this discussion and disturbance from the first. 'Twas Peter that settled the Ananias matter, while it seems to have taken the combined wisdom of all the twelve to find a solution to the other.

In the church today the pastor is expected to occupy a prominent place in all such matters. As some one has said, "He is to devise the ways to get the means." It is his privilege and duty to lead and instruct his flock, both by precept and example. "Thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws; and shew them the way that they shall go, and the thing that they shall do." The pastor is the leader, not the task-master. Jesus told the disciples that they properly called Him Lord and Master, but He washed their feet and said, "I have left you an example."

"The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." The real shepherd is more concerned—is only concerned about the welfare of the flock, not the fleece and fat.

"Teach them to observe;" that is, to do. Teach means to inform; to impart knowledge. The pastor should inform his people about the various enterprises of the church. They should know where our foreign work is; how many missionaries we have; what the necessary yearly expense; and why. The story is told that two little boys met on the street one day, and one said, "Let's go fishing." The other declined and when pressed for a reason said he was going to a missionary meeting; that he had given them a penny last year and he was going now to find out what they had done with it. This is the attitude of most. They want to know what you have done with the penny.

They want to know, too, why they should contribute to build a church in California, or Raleigh, or Mill Town. They will never visit either place, and if those folks want a church let them build it. Why should they help to educate young men who want to preach? If they are the right kind they will educate themselves. This attitude is not altogether improper, either. In an honest objector, the objection will often give way before information. I do not mean that the coffers will immediately be filled as soon as the explanation is given, for here as elsewhere, "Line upon line, precept upon precept" will be found necessary, but when you have made plain to the mind of the members the reasonableness of the demand you have gone far toward a solution of the problem.

We should also teach them their own obligation.

First, God's word. "All the tithe of the land is the Lord's." "Honor the Lord with thy substance." "Bring ye all the tithes." "Bring an offering and come." "Concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, so do ye." And finally, Jesus said, "These ought ye to have done." That is, the paying of tithes, and the loving God and dealing justly and loving mercy were to be done.

Second, God's people have always practiced giving of their means to benevolent and religious purposes. Abraham paid tithes to Melchisedek. Jacob vowed to give a tenth of all his possessions to God. The organized church began, at once, in the wilderness, to give regularly and systematically to the support and maintenance of worship; for building the tabernacle, and properly supplying and furnishing it. The weak and despised Christian daily ministered to the poor, and contributed to the relief of those in distress, as well as to the support of the ministry. And ever since the members have given of their means to support the various institutions of the church. They have given money to build churches, pay pastors, to build and maintain schools, hospitals, and asylums, have helped to feed and clothe the hungry and destitute. Have sent missionaries to the neglected and neglectful at home, and to the benighted abroad.

I pause here to say that the benevolent institutions mentioned above are the product of Christianity. There are no hospitals for the insane, or the incurable; no schools for the deaf or blind; no homes for the orphan where there has been no contact with Christianity.

In teaching the obligation to give financial support I will mention lastly, in this connection, their personal support of this obligation. "In joining myself to this church I agree * * * to contribute as God gives me ability to the support of the Gospel ministry, and the benevolent enterprises of the church," makes it so plain that a child cannot fail to understand, nor the casuist reason away.

If the members did not make this plain and positive vow, they would be bound by the requirements of God's word. "Ye are not your own" is as true of the impenitent and unbelieving as of the believing, but having taken the vow, acknowledging the obligation, promising to meet it, the only thing left is to do it. The only pertinent questions are, How much will it take? and How much has God prospered me?

I believe many wish to do their duty, and some really want to know what their duty is, while many are willingly ignorant. Many, also, are hindered by the example of others. They see how little others give, and they go and do likewise.

What are we to do about these things? "To the law and to the testimony." "Bring all the tithes into the storehouse" needs to be iterated and reiterated. "Line upon line; line upon line." A patient mother was asked why she told her dull little son the same thing twenty times. She replied that if she had only told him nineteen times, her time and labor would have been lost, and the boy would have falied to learn the lesson.

"The entrance of Thy word giveth light." "As God has prospered" has a different meaning after the Word has really entered. Teach that a fair proportion is better, safer, and more satisfactory every way. "Upon the first day of the week, let each lay by him in store." Regular and frequent contributions are better for the contributor, and better for the work to be done, whether supporting the local church, or the missionary on the frontiers, or the one who has gone with the message beyond the seas. "Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn," means that the ox shall receive compensation while the work is being done. Paul applied this to the preacher. Some one has said, "He who gives quickly gives twice." I don't know whether this means that the gift that comes quickly does twice as much good, or that the one who gives quickly will give again. I believe in practice it will be both.

Next, I would say encourage them. Tell them, "God loves a cheerful giver." Tell them of the promises. He will "open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing" that the room you have will not be able to hold it all, but the barns will burst. I missed the quotation a little but when I wrote this I was thinking of a barn I saw some years ago that had actually burst with the great plenty. Tell them of the widow and her contribution that received the commendation of the Savior. Tell them the story of Hezekiah's visit to the temple; of his enquiring concerning the heaps of grain he found there, and the explanation given by the priests.

Tell them "so shall thy barns be filled with plenty." "Trust in the Lord and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed."

Set the example. "Be thou an example of believers." "In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works." "Like people, like priest" will show itself nowhere else sooner than here, in my opinion. I can not conceive of a people developing this grace who have for leaders a parsimonious pastor. A remark made in my presence a number of years ago impressed me greatly. A layman, himself none too liberal, said of a former pastor, Rev. W. L. Harris, who has since that time gone to his reward, "When he sends the hat around for money for any cause, he is always the first to contribute," speaking with approval and saying it always made him feel like he ought to give. I have heard laymen, themselves leaders in liberality, say that seeing the liberality of our preachers made them ashamed of themselves.

"He which soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly," is applicable not alone to the layman.

And let us remember and remind that "God is able to make all grace to abound towards you, that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work."

A final word. Keep at it. The only saints worth while are the persevering ones. The man who keeps at it is the one who succeeds. The story is told of General Grant that after the capture of Vicksburg a brother officer remonstrated with him for his rashness in pressing the attack without first preparing transportation for his army in case of failure, saying that he did not have transportation facilities for more than ten thousand of his forty or fifty thousand troops. Grant's reply was that transportation for ten thousand would have been ample if he had failed. He kept at it and won. Hammering on a cold iron will heat it after a while. The Indians produce fire by rubbing two pieces of wood together. This seems a slow process but it is better than freezing. "For precept must be upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little and there a little." "And thou shalt teach them diligently, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in the house (making a pastoral visit), and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou lyest down, and when thou risest up, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes, and bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and upon thy gates." An earnest persistence will win.

THE CHRIST OF THE ANDES.

The first anniversary, March 13, 1905, of the placing of the colossal statue of Christ on the Andean border between Chile and the Argentine Republic, 14,000 feet above the sea, has recalled the unique and impressive events which led to the erection of this remarkable peace monument. The story of this series of events is substantially as follows:

Five years ago these two prosperous and high-spirited republics of South America were on the verge of war. They were increasing their armaments to the utmost of their ability. They had each two gigantic warships of the latest pattern building in the shipyards of Europe. They were spending incredible sums of money upon these preparations for war, amounting, as was reported at the time to five dollars annually per capita of their population.

What brought them so near to conflict was the revival of an old dispute which had caused much trouble and expense in the past, about the boundary between them on the Andes, a controversy involving the question of the title to about eighty thousand square miles of territory. The dispute had been rendered more acute by the discovery that in the Patagonian section the boundary was not continuously marked by mountain crests, and that there were valuable rivers in the region sending their waters through the hills to the sea on the Chilean side. This discovery had caused Chile to put forward unexpected claims to certain parts of the region.

The British Ministers residing at Buenos Ayres and Santiago used their good offices with the two governments to prevent the calamity of war and to secure a peaceful settlement of the dispute. This effort to prevent hostilities was powerfully supported by Dr. Marcolino Benavente, Bishop of San Juan de Cuyo, Argentina, and Dr. Ramon Angel Jara, Bishop of San Carlos de Ancud, Chile. On Easter Sunday, 1900, during the festival of the Catholic Church at Buenos Ayres, Bishop Benavente made a fervent appeal in behalf of peace, and proposed that some day a statue of Christ should be placed on the Andean border between the two countries, where it might be seen by all comers and goers, and prevent, if possible, any recurrence of animosity and strife between the two republics. The two bishops traveled through their countries addressing crowds of men in the towns and villages. They were sustained by the local clergy and by the women, who labored enthusiastically for the policy of peace. Petitions were sent to the legislatures, and through these the executives were reached.

The result was that the treaty was entered into by the two governments submitting the controversy to the arbitration of the King of England. He entrusted the case to eminent jurists and expert geographers, who examined it carefully, and in due time submitted their decision, awarding a part of the disputed territory to one of the republics and a part to the other. The decision was cheerfully accepted by both.

Much gratified with the outcome of the arbitration, and urged forward by a powerful popular movement, the two governments then went further, and in June, 1903, concluded a treaty by the terms of which they pledged themselves for a period of five years to submit all controversies arising between them to arbitration, the first general arbitration treaty ever concluded. In a further treaty they agreed to reduce their armies to the proportions of police forces, to stop the building of the great battleships then under construction, and to diminish the naval armaments which they already possessed.

The provisions of these treaties, which have now been in force nearly two years, were carried out as fast as practicable. The land forces have been reduced, the heavy ordnance taken off the war vessels, and several of the vessels of the marine turned over to the commercial fleets. Work on the four great warships was immediately arrested, and some of them have been sold. One or two of them, unfortunately, went into the Japanese fleet off Port Arthur, in spite of the fact that both governments had, in the treaty, pledged themselves not to sell any ships to nations engaged in war. The vesels were bought under disguise by a firm in New York, and then turned over to Japan; after which neither of the governments would sell any vessels to either Russia or Japan.

The results of this disarmament—for it is a real disarmament—have been most remarkable. With the money saved by the lessening of military and naval expenses, internal and coast improvements have been made. Good roads have been constructed. Chile has turned an arsenal into a school for manual training. She is building a much needed breakwater in the harbor of Valparaiso, and has commenced systematically the improvement of her commercial facilities along the coast. One or two of Argentina's previous war vessels have gone into her commercial fleet and are now plying back and forth across the Atlantic in honorable and lucrative business. The great trans-Andean railway through the heart of the mountains, which will bring Buenos Ayres and Santiago within eighteen hours of each other and bind them together in the most intimate relations of trade and travel, will be completed this year.

But more significant than any of these material results has been the change in the attitude of the Argentines and Chileans toward each other. All the old bitterness and distrust have passed away, and the most cordial good feeling and confidence have taken their place.

The suggestion of Bishop Benavente as to the erection of a statue of Christ on the boundary at Puente del Inca was quickly carried into execution. As early as 1901, on the initiative of Senora de Costa, president of the Christian Mothers' Association of Buenos Ayres, one of the largest women's organizations in the world, the women of Buenos Ayres, who had already manifested the deepest interest in the new monument, undertook the task of securing funds and having a statue created. The work was entrusted to the young Argentine sculptor, Mateo Alonso. When his design was completed and accepted, the statue was cast at the arsenal of Buenos Ayres from old cannon taken from the ancient fortress outside of the city.

It was more than a year from the time that it was cast until it was placed in its destined position. On May 21, 1903, the Chilean representatives, bearing the treaties for final ratification, came by sea to Blenos Ayres. They were met down the river and escorted to the city by a large fleet of gaily decked steamers. For a week there was a round of festivities. When the treaties were finally signed on the 28th of May, Senora de Costa invited all the dignitaries present—cabinet officials, foreign ministers, bishops, newspaper men, generals, admirals, etc.—to inspect the statue of Christ in the courtyard of the college, and standing at its foot with the distinguished audience about her she pleaded that it might be placed on the highest accessible point of the Andes between the two countries.

It was not till in February, 1904, that the final steps were taken for its erection. It was carried by rail in huge crates from Buenos Ayres to Mendoza, then on gun carriages up the mountains, the soldiers and sailors themselves taking the ropes in critical place, where there was danger of the mules stumbling. Hundreds of persons had come up the night before and encamped on the ground to be present at the ceremony. The Argentines ranged themselves on the soil of Chile and the Chileans on the Argentine side. There was music and the booming of guns, whose echoes resounded through the mountains. The moment of unveiling, after the parts had been placed in position, was one of solemn silence. The statue was then dedicated to the whole world as a practical lesson of peace and goodwill. The ceremonies of the day, March 13, 1904, were closed, as the sun went down, with a prayer that love and kindness might penetrate the hearts of men everywhere.

The base of the statue is in granite. On this is a granite sphere, weighing some fourteen tons, on which the outlines of the world are sketched, resting upon a granite column twenty-two feet high. The figure of Christ above, in bronze, is twenty-six feet in height. The cross supported in His left hand is five feet higher. The right hand is stretched out in blessing. On the granite base are two bronze tablets, one of them given by the Workingmen's Union of Buenos Ayres, the other by the Working Women. One of them gives the record of the creation and erection of the statue; on the other are inscribed the words:

"Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than Argentines and Chileans break the peace to which they have pledged themselves at the feet of Christ the Redeemer."

It is not easy to compare events and say which is the greatest. But taking it all in all, the long quarrel of seventy years which is closed, the arbitration of the boundary dispute, the general treaty of arbitration and the practical disarmament which preceded it, the remarkable transformation of public opinion expressed in its consummation, and the sublime prophecy of peace for the future which it gives not only for Chile and Argentina, but for the whole world, the erection of the Christ of the Andes stands without parallel among the events of recent years.

—The man who borrows and doesn't return is one of the worst enemies we have. He troubles us more than we can tell. He promises to return so soon that we believe him at the time, and make no memorandum of the fact that he has borrowed. But days, weeks, and months pass, and we look for the thing borrowed, only to find that it is gone—borrowed, and so long ago that we can't recall who it was that borrowed it. Will the enemy that borrowed that directory of North Carolina post offices please retuurn it to this office at once?

—The last General Conference of the M. E. Church reduced the subscription price of a number of church papers to $1 a year. The Book Committee has found that as a result there has been a loss of $113,000 in a single year on three of the papers, and it has ordered a reduction in the size of the papers.

DIED.

On July the 12th, 1914, the death angel visited the home of Bro. Walter Sides and called from labor to reward his beloved wife, Sister Sallie Sides. Sister Sallie was one of Friendship's most faithful members, and one of the community's best women. No one was held in higher esteem by the community and her church than she. She was always kind and affable, with deep conviction and strong purpose. She will be missed greatly by her church and community, but most of all by her husband, children, and sister who nursed her so tenderly during her long-continued sickness. During all her sickness she was patient and submissive, often expresing her submission to His will, and her faith and trust in His love and care. In the last moment, pointing upward, she bade her loved ones to go with her. She fell asleep as only a Christian can do. She leaves a husband, the son of our late beloved Rev. F. A. Sides, five children, a number of brothers and sisters, of whom Rev. James Hornbuckle of the M. E. church is one, to mourn their loss.

To the bereaved we extend our heartfelt sympathies.

"Over the river, mother I see,
Fair as the morning, looking for me,
Free from her sorrow, grief and despair,
Waiting and watching patiently there."

She was laid to rest in Friendship cemetery. Funeral conducted by her pastor. W. D. Reed.

Kimbery.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kimbery was made intensely sad when death entered on July the 12th at 2 o'clock P. M. and claimed their little son, Eugene, Lawrence. He leaves father, mother, three brothers and one sister to mourn their loss. He suffered untold pain for several days, but God in his wisdom and mercy took Eugene to be with himself, free from all sorrow, sickness and pain, safe in the arms of Jesus. We feel especially bereaved in his death and we extend to the grief-stricken family our sincere sympathy. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. Pike, after which his body was laid to rest in Hickory Grove cemetery. His grave was covered with beautiful floral tributes from his relatives and friends. A Friend.

There is no place like home.

Brown.

Lula Alice Brown was born Feb. 21, 1872, married to H. H. Brown Jan. 8, 1893, died May 31, 1914. She leaves an aged mother, five brothers, two sisters, a husband and six children, and many other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

She made a profesion of religion very early in life, and joined Mt. Zion M. P. church, where she lived a consistent member until death. Her health had been failing for about 12 months and how great her sufferings were we cannot tell, but she bore it all patiently and cheerfully, greeting every one with a smile, and her foremost thoughts seemed to be for the comfort of others, disregarding her own feelings. All could truthfully say, "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness."

On Sunday morning one week before she died, she said to those of her friends present, "I would like to stay with you all and to care for my little children, but I shall have leave you, and all is well." What a great consolation are these words to the bereaved. We also extend our sympathy, but all this we know cannot heal the wound made by her death, but may the Lord give them strength to bear this trouble, and help them to press forward and prepare to meet her in the great beyond.

Her surroundings were such that she couldn't often attend Sunday school, but her faithfulness in sending her little children will not be forgotten. Some of her last words on Sunday morning before her spirit took its flight were, "The bell is ringing; children, get ready to go to Sunday school." May these last words sink deep in their hearts; and may they be as faithful in life as she desired them to be, even while she was suffering death.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor June 1st in the presence of a large assembly, gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to one they loved. The remains were laid to rest in the Mt. Zion cemetery to await the glorious resurrection when all shall come forth from the grave and all who have been faithful will then meet our loved ones to part no more. A. L. Hunter.

Rackley.

Lee Meadows, infant son of Mrs. Ida M. Rackley, of Glen Raven, died June 29, 1914. Little Lee was just a year and one month old when he was called by One that loved him best. "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." He who knoweth all thihngs best, knows when to call us from toil to rest.

The funeral was conducted by the writer at Glen Raven M. P. Church, and the body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Brower's Chapel, near Glen Raven. May the Lord comfort the bereaved mother and three brothers. "He is a present help in time of trouble."

O. B. Williams.

Mrs. Mary Anne Holt.

On May 20, 1914, just as nature was awaking to a new day, and all creation was giving praise to the great God and Creator, and while the flowers were perfuming the atmosphere, and the music of the sweet-noted songsters could be heard, the spirit of Mrs. Mary Anne Holt, relict of the late William Holt, took its departure to the better country. The end came so peacefully! While her granddaughter, Miss Iola Rich, was preparing to feed her, she noticed an unusual look on her countenance, and, on reaching her bedside, she drew just a few breaths. "The end of the righteous is peace." Few names were ever written on her friends' book of loved ones in more brilliant letters; but her name was also written in heaven—she had a record on high. Mrs. Holt was a Christian. She realized that God did not put her here just to eat, drink, and be merry, or hoard up money that it might be said of her that she was worth so many thousand dollars. But she realized, on the contrary, that we are worth just as much as we help the Master. So, through her long life of eighty-six years, she was always doing kind acts, speaking kind words to those with whom she came in contact. I recently heard one of her friends say, in speaking of her, that she was one of the best women she ever knew. "Much on her lips and more in her thoughts was that name above every name—Jesus."

I have known Mrs. Holt for many years, but not so intimately acquainted until last winter, when I spent several months boarding in the home, occasioned by teaching school. During the several months she was, with the exception of short intervals, perfectly helpless, but while this was true, she bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude and patience.

Mrs. Holt was for sixty-one years a member of Mt. Hermon Methodist Protestant church, and always attended services when her health permitted. When the infirmities of age gathered about her, yet, as was her custom, she was often seen at church. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, at Mt. Hermon, and she was buried in the cemetery there.

She has four children: namely, Mr. John Holt, of Raleigh; Mrs. M. M. Reitzel, of Burlington; Mrs. O. D. McPherson, of High Point; and Mrs. W. A. Rich, of Rock Creek, with whom she made her home and who administered unto her wants so tenderly. Mrs. Rich deserves special commendation for her kindness to her mother.

Hubert L. Isley.

—The Westinghouse strike is over. Eight thousand men and women returned to work this week.

Married.

On July 5, in the Methodist Protestant church at Albemarle, N. C., Mr. Isaac Mason and Miss Lolah Miller were married by the writer. Mr. Mason is a grandson of Rev. E. A. Plyler, and is a leading plumber at Baden, N. C. Miss Miller is a resident of Baden, is a young lady of rare grace and beauty.

W. D. Reed.

Married.

In the presence of the family and a few distinguished guests on June the 28th, at 6 A. M. Mr. L. W. Williams and Miss Maud Plyler were happily married, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. E. A. Plyler, Albemarle, N. C. Miss Maud is the daughter of our late beloved Rev. E. A. Plyler, who after receiving her education, has for some time occupied an important position in Charlotte.

Mr. Williams is a graduate of Kinston College, Pa. He is now engaged in business in Cincinnati, Ohio, to which place they went immediately after the ceremony. They were made one by her pastor. W. D. Reed.

—Rev. J. D. Williams is taking a four weeks' vacation at Teer, N. C.

—Bro. R. T. Pickens, of Jesup, Ga., who did not attend the meeting of General Conference representatives held July 2nd, writes that he expects to go to Columbus and that he thinks all should go.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard and wife came up the country this week for a few weeks "vacation". Bro. Pritchard will spend part of it in revival meetings, helping Bro. Bowman, then Bro. Powell. Mrs. Pritchard will visit her people in Siler City.

A CRUSADE AGAINST BLINDNESS.

One of the most distressing misfortunes which can befall a person is to lose one's sight. The large number of this class of our citizens is very great—one hundred thousand in America alone. There are nearly two thousand in North Carolina.

The question naturally arises, Is there any means to prevent thhis? Can anything be done to lessen the number of those thus afflicted? Not many can be fully and entirely relieved or cured. By skillful operations a few can secure at least partial relief, but the vast majority are doomed to a life of physical darkness. What, then, can be done to lessen the evil?

Prevention.

It is much more easy to prevent an evil than to cure, or eradicate it. Who can stay the ravages of the "White Plague"; who stop the progress of typhoid, malaria, or yellow fever? The only hope is in preventing them. So with blindness. Well, how?

Let us consider some of the most prolific causes of blindness. The statistics gathered by the authorities of the State School for the Blind at Raleigh show that of the 404 students enrolled during the biennial period 1910-1912, thirty became blind by accident; seventy-five were born blind (congenital); ninety-three are blind from ophthalmia neonatorum (blindness of the new-born), and ninety-nine from causes not named. The question occurs: Are any of these preventable? Yes, many of them. If parents had kept from their babies sharp-pointed instruments or objects—scissors, knives, pencils, sticks, etc.—and explosives, many of their children would now possess sight. If fewer cousins had married, if fewer congenitally blind persons, the number would have been decreased considerably. And if the eyes of every new-born baby had received proper attention within twenty-four hours after its birth; if they had been thoroughly washed in a solution of boracic acid, and then one drop of a one-per-cent solution of silver nitrate had been put in each eye, at least one-fourth of all these children would now have normal sight.

These latter are the offspring of parents at least one of whom has led an impure life, or has come in contact with some one who has. In this day, then, of germ theories, and germ transmission, would it not be wise that the eyes of every child, however pure and clean may have been the habits of its parents, should receive such care and treatment? Properly treated there can be no danger; neglected, no one knows what may result.

And the treatment will cost not more than ten cents and require only a few moments of time. Is it not worth the time? And yet I wish to throw out one warning, raise one danger signal. Never should a stronger solution of silver nitrate be used than one per cent. And never should a midwife, nurse, nor even a general practitioner undertake to prepare the prophylactic. This has been done by the experts in the profession and can be secured from any well equipped drug store in such quantity and shape as to render a mistake almost impossible. The little ampules contain two small receptacles, each containing eight drops, these ampules being hermetically sealed and the light entirely excluded. They are also dated, so as to insure against age and deterioration, and may be exchanged for new ones, if not used within the prescribed period.

I have not referred in the above to trachoma (granulated lids). This is a most painful and distressing disease of the eye, and there seems to be no known remedy. And it is also very contagious. Only recently an epiedmic of trachoma has broken out in certain counties in southwest Virginia, and in West Virginia. At last accounts there were four hundred and fifty cases of this frightful malady. Is there no relief for those thus afflicted? Isolation should be practiced in the most stringent form.

John E. Ray,
Principal State School for the Blind,
Raleigh, N. C.

Appreciating the necessity for training for a larger and more effective work as Christian people, the North Carolina State Christian Endeavor Union, at its annual convention in Greensboro last month, adopted the following resolution:

Resolution on training for more efficient Christian service:

Believing that the church should more practically and more largely meet the moral and spiritual needs of our communities, and believing further that the real purpose of the Christian Endeavor movement is to provide the inspiration and machinery for practical Christian service in the spirit of Christ, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the North Carolina State Christian Endeavor Union in its annual convention assembled in Greensboro June 5, 6, and 7, 1914, pledged itself to a program for the serious study of the Christian social and moral questions of our time, and the part the church must take in their solution. Be it further

Resolved, That we urge upon our members the obligation to adequately prepare themselves for efficient Christian service in the capacity of laymen, as well as in the capacity of ministers and missionaries.

The Christian Endeavor movement has always been pliable, adapting itself to the conditions and needs locally, as well as to the larger religious movements. This resolution was followed by the formation of a new department of the State work called the Educational Department, under the direction of Rev. E. J. Harold, Greensboro, N. C., through which the best books and literature on the subject of social service and necessary training therefor will be suggested to the local societies, and wherever possible, study groups organized for the concientious and systematic study of the great moral and social questions and responsibility of the church in their solution.

WORSHIP?"

As an instance of the profound ignorance of Christianity and its ideals which still prevails in Japan, even among the comparatively educated classes, Rev. Schuyler S. White, writing from Tsuyama, tells the following incident:—

"This fall a meeting of the Educational Association of the prefecture was held here. They borrowed our church for an evening of addresses. One of the Christians who attended overheard the following conversation between two teachers sitting in front of him.

" 'What is it the Christians worship, anyway?'

" 'I'm sure I don't know.'

" 'I guess it must be those objects on the platform.'

"The objects referred to were the three pulpit chairs with backs so shaped that the center ran up in an apex. It was evidently their first sight of such chairs.

"And these were teachers in the public schools; and this prefecture is among the most, if not indeed itself the most, advanced in the empire, educationally considered. Yet many people in the United States think there is no longer need of missionaries in Japan."

Mr. White gives another side of the story, however. As he reports his work he says:—

"This fall I have visited with my helper three large towns where in the past meetings have frequently been held. In one of them regular weekly services were held for several years, but the Christians have all moved from there now but two. We found quite a number in each place who expressed a desire to study Christianity, encouraging us to plan for regular visits after the colder weather is over, so that the people will come out.

"My chapel work in the eastern part of the city is very encouraging. The helper I now have is living there with his family and seems to be gradually getting in with the community, as has not hitherto been possible by simply going there to hold meetings. The Sunday school is flourishing, enrolling seventy members. At the recent Christmas celebration I had the pleasure of handing certificates to six pupils for perfect attendance during the year, one of them also receiving a copy of the New Testament, it being the fifth year in her case."—Missionary Herald.

THE CHRONIC CHINESE PUZZLE.

Dr. Arthur Smith writes:—

"Long before these lines can meet the reader's eye it will have been two full years since the definite and final abdication of the Manchu dynasty. When that occurred every one said, 'What next?' This is always the standard question in China. It is so now. These two years have been twenty-four months of interesting theatricals on a large stage, with real figures and heavy bets on the success of the drama. The government might have extinguished the rebellion which became a rvolution, but it did not. Last summer there was a 'second rebellion,' and the same government put it down summarily. In this effort Sun Yat Sen, Huang Hsing, and many other leaders were hopelessly discredited, and are now exiles.

"The most hopeless failure was the National Assembly or Parliament, an Occidental exotic not yet acclimated, that laboriously did nothing for seven months and was then snuffed out by the president. A majority of the members belonged to a 'party' that had fought the president at every step and did nothing themselves. On the memorable 4th of November, President Yuan dissolved this party, and there were not members enough left to make a quorum. Since then there is no 'representative body, but lately a 'political coucil,' which is composed of men chosen by the government and who will work with it. By the pragmatic test—the only available one in China—if it succeeds it was 'constitutional' and is just the thing. A more or less actual parliament—or a lower house—may meet later, but what the people want is the result, not the shell and the name. Financially the republic has belied its detractors, and of late the revenues are increasing beyond any expetations. Another huge loan will have to be negotiated ere many moons, but China's credit is improving. What is needed is peace and order.

"Unfortunately the latter is non-existent. There have been small rebellions in two or three cities that have been suppressed, but there is a wide-spread brigandag such as the Chinese have for ages been used to. The government does not know how to put this down. Tens of thousands of soldiers have been discharged, and these form the nucleus of robber bands. One desperado known as 'The White Wolf' has ravaged Honan for months, and the troops sent after him appear quite helpless. For the first time the republic has a strong and a comparatively united cabinet of able men. The premier has outlined his 'policy'—a feature in Chinese official life altogether new—in a comprehensive paper dealing most frankly with China's weakness and corruption. Can he carry out his wise plans? Every friend of China hopes so.

"There is a marked increase in the power of the central government, which is what is needed The next step must be to stop the vicious loan habit in the provinces—borrowing from Western powers on inadequate security—which may lead to serious politncal complications.

"Government education has never been at so low an ebb. Many alleged 'economies' turn out to be expensive follies in a new dress, for real statesmanship in China is scarce, though it does exist. Half of Mongolia is lost to China and the rest, as the auctioneers say, 'going'! Tibet seems likely to follow. The outlook for Christian missions, however, was never brighter."—Missionary Herald.

BOOKS OF VALUE TO THE MINISTER.

The Call of the World. It is written by W. E. Doughty, and contains only 111 pages. It covers the mission problem of the whole world. I have seen nothing which so clearly presents the world's needs, and so irresistibly presents the cause of missions. It is published by the Missionary Education Movement of the United States and Canada, New York, and costs 25 cents plus postage, which I suppose is eight or ten cents.

..The Emergency in China, by F. L. Hawks Pott. It is published by the Missionary Education Movement of the United States and Canada, New York, and costs fifty cents plus postage. This book is well written, and the person who is interested in the forces which have been operative in China, leading up to the revolution, and in the present needs of the nation, and the opportunity and responsibility of the church will find this book absorbingly interesting from start to finish.

Another book which I did not mention at the Summer Conference is The Japanese Nation, by Nitobe. It is published by Putnam's Sons, New York, and costs $1.50. It will give you a knowledge of Japan that you are not likely to get elsewhere. It confines itself to its land, its people, and its life, with special consideration to its relations with the United States. Incidentally you will get an insight into the Japanese mind that you have not had before. His discussion of Japan as a colonizer in the island of Formosa puts the other nations of the world to shame and pays for the book. It is the most delightful book I have read this year.

Another book is Bushido, by Nitobe, and and published by Putnam's Sons, New York. It costs $1.50. Bushido, the author tells us, is the soul of Japan. I think Dr. Tagg referred to this in one of his lectures. This was the spiritual force lying back of the Japanese character prior to the introduction of Christianity. You will be intensely interested in its study.

Right and Wrong Thinking and Their Results, by Aaron Martin Crane, published by Lothrop, Lee and Shepherd Co., of Boston, is worth reading by the minister. I do not remember what I paid for the book. I think it costs about $1.50. It contains 361 pages. Reading this book will not put you to sleep, but it may save you a great deal of suffering.

THE BIBLE SELF-VINDICATING.

A Hindoo was brought to forsake idolatry through a leaf of the Bible that came into his possession, upon which was the 51st Psalm, the prayer of David for cleansing. This was his gospel for twenty years. Then he met a missionary who gave him a Testament, when he exclaimed, "Twenty years I have walked by starlight, now I see the sun." When Wilmot, the infidel, lay dying, he placed his hand upon the Bible, and said solemnly and with energy, "The only objection against that is a bad life."—King's Business.

—Haitang is a Chinese island about 25 miles long, with a population of 70,000. About 37 years ago an inhabitant traveling on the mainland heard of Jesus from a fellow-traveler at a Chinese inn. He accepted the truth, returned to Haitang, and did not rest until he had carried the Gospel to every one of the 411 villages on the island. When the missionaries came about 10 years ago they found a prepared people. There are now preaching stations in 30 villages. Some of these poor village Christians give one-fourth of their income for the spread of the Gospel.

—W. J. Courtney of Dedham, Mass., will receive $300 through the will of Mrs. Mary V. Hill for the gallantry he displayed in sucking her finger seven years ago. Mrs. Hill was riding in a railroad train when a dog she carried in her lap showed signs of hydrophobia and bit her finger. Courtney, who was sitting near by, seized the bitten finger and drew out the infection. He had forgotten about the incident until informed of the bequest, which was designated by the testator "as a small remembrance of a courteous act."—Pathfinder.

Prof. Leduc, a French scientist, has discovered a system of local anesthesia for rendering patients locally insensible for operations. Galvanic currents of certain intensity and coming at regular intervals produce insensibility to pain in the part of the body to which they are applied and there are said to be none of the ill effects usually accompanying anesthesia by former methods.

—Australian Baptist: "A poor English costermonger went to a mission one night and asked if 'they had any more religion' there? When they asked him what he really wanted, he replied: 'I want you to give me some of the kind our Bess has'. It seemed that she had lived a stormy life until going to the mission, but she had become so changed, so gentle, so long-suffering, and sweet that her husband wanted for himself some of the kind of religion of which he had seen so good a sample."

—Is this true, or has some one's joke been taken seriously? The Australian Baptist says: "Even Baptists do strange things in America. Calvary Reformed church, Philadelphia, which has just started a choir of boy whistlers to lead the singing, is hardly so daring as the Lincoln Baptist Chapel, Cincinnati, for there the choir consists entirely of birds. The innovation was made two years ago, when forty canaries were hung in cages about the church, and trained to chirp to the accompaniment of the organ. Singing birds, also, are kept in Trinity Methodist church, Toronto, but they are allowed to warble as they will."

—Missionary Review: "A Buddhist priest in the Hokkaido recently came to a Christian doctor for treatment. The latter asked him about the present religious condition in Japan. The priest, not knowing that the doctor was a Christian, spoke his mind very freely. 'We are in very great trouble,' he said, 'and don't know what to do. Christianity has hitherto been without recognition and influence. As the government gave us their support, we were quite content. But by the recent action of the home department, Christianity has been elevated to the top, and we must now hustle, or we shall be left without following or influence.' "

Marvin Holt Hunter, son of Bro. and Sister C. G. Hunter, died June 20, 1914, aged 15 years, 3 months and 10 days. Marvin was a good and obedient child; frail in body, he never had the health to attend school until the last two years.

But with the limited schooling he received, he showed marked mental capacity, far above the average boy.

He was always different from most boys, he never acted a child, but a little man. He was a good Sunday school boy, standing at the head of his class in recitation and deportment.

About two months before his death he was stricken with complications. On Saturday evening, at 3:30 P. M., he peacefully passed away, as if going to sleep. The last half hour of his life was bright and he conversed wth those around his bedside. J. D. Anderson.

THE DAWDLE-BUG.

Did you ever hear of the dawdle-bug?
It loves a place that is warm and snug;
It never flies round, but creeps and crawls,
And on the sofa or hammock sprawls.
Listen! you'll hear its hum:
"In a minute I'll come—in a minute I'll come."

In the morning dressing, there is a tug,
If a boy has been stung by the dawdle-bug.
Breakfast table will have to wait;
School bell rings for a boy that's late;
Unlearned lessons, a dunce-cap tall,
And no time left for a game of ball.

Now the cure for the sting of the dawdle-bug
Lies neither in medicine, pill nor drug.
(Some say the oil of birch is good;
I haven't tried it, and never would.)
But the poison can't in the system lurk
Of a boy who is brisk in his play and work.

Dear Bro. Editor:

I was indeed glad to read the obituary of my Aunt Amy Scott, and to know that our pastor, Bro. Hunter, was so kind as to look up the dates, etc., and write it. I always regretted that no one wrote of the life and death of my niece, Maggie Moir Jackson, who has been departed three years the 20th of June. Bro. Ogburn was her pastor, and went to see her faithfully while she was sick, and went with the husband to Hurt, Va., to preach the funeral sermon, but by some oversight we all neglected to ask him to write, and no one wrote about her. Her husband is a member of the Baptist Church, while she was a member of Grace M. P., Greensboro. So many people do not think but that pastors will write anyway, but if we expect it, we should request them to do so. I often think that there is no one so fitted or suitable as a pastor, or near relative, one who was best acquainted. As Bro. Hunter has written concerning my aunt, Mrs. Amy Scott, I only wish to add a few lines. I always had much love and respect for her, from my childhood, but when my mother died, about three years after I was married, it was Aunt Amy who went home with my father from the funeral and remained with him the short fifteen months of his life, and for this act of kindness and sympathy my love and respect for her was made even stronger. I shall alway cherish her memory, and I expect to meet her in heaven sometime. It almost kindles a revival in my heart to think over what a time the meeting of loved ones will be.

Only about two weeks until the revival meeting at Mount Zion. I shall not be able to attend, but I shall pray for a great revival.

Uncle George Hunt is now the last one living of the Hunt family, of which my father was the oldest (Rev. I. N. H.) I want to learn all I can of truth from him while he lives, and I like to talk with him. I read the Herald with great interest, though away from my home church. I think there are as many as seven M. P.'s living in East Bend. With best wishes, I am

Very sincerely,

—Commenting on the alarming loss in the membership of the Presbyterian Church, averaging 42,000 for the six years since 1908, the Christian Work and Evangelist says the remedy lies "in the saving of the child for the church. In church after church throughout the United States, children are passing out of the Sunday school, not into the church, but into the world." These are words that should be taken seriously to heart by others besides Presbyterians. No church will be held blameless that neglects the children. "Feed my lambs" has divine authority back of it.—Selected.

TO CONTROL THE DRUG HABIT.

New York's much-heralded and very commendable anti-drug law went into effect Wednesday, July 1. Owing to the haste and confusion which marked the last days of the legislature, when the measure was passed, no appropriation was made for printing the order blanks, and it was feared by the friends of the law that this might defeat its enforcement. The state printer, however, has announced that he will provide the blanks, notwithstanding this neglect on the part of the legislature. The important feature of the law is that blanks, numbered consecutively, are furnished to druggists, so that the sales of chloral, opium, or their salts, alcohol or its derivatives may be accurately followed. Prescriptions for such drugs must be written on official order blanks, and physicians, druggists veterinaries, and dentists must record the name and address of each person for whom any of these drugs are prescribed. Violation of the law constitutes a misdemeanor and is punishable by imprisonment for one year, or a fine of $500, or both. It is further provided that magistrates and judges may commit those addicted to a drug habit to a state, county, or city hospital. Mrs William K. Vanderbilt is one of those most actively interested in this measure, her interest and that of others being aroused because of the alarming growth of the number of those addicted to the drug habit.—Zion's Herald.

Years ago a preacher had been discoursing in a Western town on the value of religion, when, on the conclusion of the service, a half-drunken fellow staggered forward and demanded, "Parson, tell me who made the devil?' Unabashed, the preacher, using the argumentum ad hominem, replied: "I'll answer that question if you will tell me who made that red nose on your face?" Thereupon the objector slunk away discomfited. He might have resisted a metaphysical apologetic, but he could not stand up against an exposure of his personal failings.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Piedmont Circuit.

Official members take notice: The 3rd quarterly conference will be held at Union Grove on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in this month. Preaching at eleven, business of the conference in the afternoon. We are very sorry that we were prevented from attending the Summer Conference; but circumstances were such that we could not be there. Will write more later.

July 11, 1914. A. D. Shelton.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.

Since my last report the death angel knocked at door of Bro. J. N. Kindley and called him over the river. While it means great sorrow to a widow and children to give up the father of the home, our heavenly Father is too wise to make a mistake. Bro. Kindley was 66 years old. He was buried at Pleasant Grove among a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends. He was a member of the M. P. church at Cid. Bro. J. B. Trogdon conducted the burial service. He leaves a wife and five children and one son by his first wife. His last words were that he was ready to die and content to go. Mr. Kindley will be greatly missed. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family and relatives.

Bro. J. B. Trogdon filled his appointment at Cid Sunday and delivered a soul-stirring sermon to a right large congregation. While his health is not so good he always brings good tidings from on high, and may his words be as seed sown on good ground. I guess our special meeting will be some time in August.

A well-wisher to the Herald and its many readers, Mrs. N. W. L.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.

We held our special meeting last week. At the beginning Mr. Bethea preached from the text: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." He also quoted this verse in many of his sermons throughout the week. We are impressed more forcibly than ever that the Way is straight and narrow and we should watch our lives daily to keep in the right way. A question arises here,—"Is the person who has a chance to attend S. S., and doesn't, a Christian?" Do you believe that the person who attends S. S. and doesn't study the lesson is a Christian? The S. S. lessons are sadly neglected. Oh for a zeal to put our best efforts into this work! But we must come back and talk about the meeting.

Mr. Bethea had a splendid plan for Bible study. He had carefully planned "The Believer's Alphabet", using one chart on which he had three letters for each service. These letters all pointed to the Precious Blood of Jesus. References were handed to be read as the sermon led up to them. This plan worked well. The music was a special feature. Prof. Pender, of Mebane, conducted the singing. We thank him for his help. The whole church was revived. There were about thirty conversions and reclamations.

Since Mr. Bethea has been on our work, the congregations have increased. We need a larger church to acommodate the people. The house is usually about filled for an ordinary service and when our special services come, we haven't enough room. Our Children's Day service yesterday was a success. Miss Jewel Floyd had trained the children. We thank her for her work. The collection amounted to about $18.50.

Now, since these special services have passed, we must watch ourselves lest we let some of our enthusiasm die down. We were taught yesterday that true greatness comes through service. Let's strive to become great through service for our King.

July 13, 1914. Hattie Harris.

Charlotte, Richland Ct.

Bro. Bowman filled his regular appointment here the first Sunday. He gave us another good sermon as usual.

Our Sunday school is doing fairly well; our attendance is very good this hot weather. We regret the loss of our teacher, Miss Nellie Clark, as she has married and left us recently.

Bro. Bowman will preach for us the fourth Sunday in July at three o'clock, instead of the first Sunday in August. He announced that Bro. Free from Brower's Chapel will be with us the first Sunday in August at eleven o'clock.

Our protracted meeting comes off the first Sunday in September. May we all pray for a success.

The third quaurterly conference was held here last Saturday. Bro. Ledford preached at 11 o'clock and business of the conference was gone into, after dinner. Bro. L. L. Wrenn was declared elected delegate to Annual Conference at Asheville. Bro. W. H. Kimrey, alternate.

Our pastor, Rev. W. A. Ledford, is doing good work on this circuit. He is not only liked by our own people, but by people of all denominations. He preached a splendid sermon Sunday night to a large congregation.

Our special meeting is to be held third Sunday in September.

Rev. S. W. Taylor, of Winston is to assist. We are anticipating his coming with a great deal of pleasure, as he was here two years ago, and we were all charmed with him as a man and a preacher. We hope to have Mr. T. O. Pender to assist with the singing.

It was my pleasure, accompanied by my wife, to attend service at Grace M. P. church in your city last Sunday, and to hear Rev. R. M. Andrews preach a splendid sermon. My wife and I both enjoyed it very much indeed. G. E. M.

I reached this field on the 18th of June and took up the work. And I find lots to do, but I am glad I can say that the people here are standing by me. I see lots for them to do yet, but they seem to be willing to do anything for their church. I have been to all of the work and I am planning now for my special meetings and I feel the need of all of the Herald readers' prayers that I might stay low at the Master's feet where he can use me for his glory. Pray for me. I remain, Yours in the fight for the cause of Jesus. T. E. Martin, Pastor.

Asheville.

I'm amused. Sunday morning a lady was present in the congregation from the eastern part of the State. She said after the service that when she read my letters in the Herald she thought I was about fifty years old, and when she saw me preaching Sunday morning she thought I was a boy. Being neither, what am I?

Well, we've been a long time coming to it, but have at last arrived. The contractors finished their work and, like the Arabs "have folded their tents, and silently stolen away". If the church were furnished now we would shout 'till you could hear the sound thereof all the way to the sea. But as it is we only have two lights in the auditorium of the church, and they are in one end of it, and are small and temporary, so that anyone sitting in the other side of the church sits in the shadow of a great darkness. And he sits on a rather uncomfortable rush bottom chair in lieu of a comfortable pew. And you ought to see the pulpit furniture! We can't go any faster than we have the means to go. But it seems a miracle that we have come thus far, and we expect to get the money somewhere somehow to have the building complete for conference. But you will have to help us.

The Ladies' Aid is planning to hold a series of sales in one of the stores uptown, and are expecting also to have a series of entertainments. All with the purpose, of course, of raising money to secure the $500 that it pledged this year. The Philathea class held a social a couple of weeks ago, and cleared $6.00. Everybody had a fine time.

We were glad to have Bro. George Harris and family worship with us Sunday morning. They are staying at Dula Springs near Asheville. Bro. Porter, from Pageland, was with us last Sunday. Bro. Garrett was here the first of last week to see after a couple of children whom we are getting into the Home. You ought to hear what these friends think of our church. Tickled? why they are just tickled to death. And it doesn't stop with their risibles, it shows itself in their bones. When Bro. Garrett got through being tickled he gave me a check for ten of his bones, and Bro. Harris told me he would send me twenty-five of his. I've been saying for some time that all it takes is a look at the church. One look means help. So if you don't want to help, you had better not expect to look.

Anderson and Yarborough.

We held memorial services the first Sunday in June at Yarboroughs church. Papers were prepared and read by different committees in memory of our deceased members. Mr. J. A. Tinsley gave us a splendid talk before reading his paper, telling how the church had been a blessing to him, calling many names that are gone. A splendid paper was read by Mr. E. M. D. Watson. The papers bore testimony of the efficient work of their deceased teacher, Mrs. S. J. Knox. The pastor read a paper in behalf of the church, speaking of all that have been called to their reward in the last two years. The song service was one of the enjoyable features of the service. Misses Lillie Yarborough and Helen Tinsley had much to do in making the music a success.

Mrs. L. H. Wilson and Mrs. Gwynn are getting on splendidly with their Home Department and cradle Roll work.

Pastors of Cross Anchor are conducting union services three Sunday nights out of each month at the school auditorium. This gives us three services on the first Sunday.

Second Sunday at Liberty Hill, took offering on conference claim which amounted to $33.00. At night Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pearson were received into the church. They come from the Baptist church. A full house and good attention.

Third Sunday at Fairview. A full house, good spirit manifested in service. Mr. Manie Jones received into the church on profession of faith. Offering for general interest $43.00. Splendid service at night.

Fourth Sunday at Harmony; offering Sunday morning $18.00, finishing their general interests. I preached from Rom. 11:20. Some of my people didn't know what about my views on this. I like to see them interested enough to think. Anderson Ct. voted me a two weeks' vacation in July. I will conduct a meeting in Hickory and then see if I can rest a little. I know little about a vacation, this being the first I have had. J. S. Williams, of Asheville, used to tell me how to be still. I hope to see him when I go through.

I am having plenty of automobile trouble, hot nights, some mosquitoes, sin and crime to deal with, but I still have old-time religion. I appreciate the fact that a great many of the Harmony people have agreed to pray for me in my special meetings. I am expecting victory.

W. A. Lamar.

Haw River, Graham and Haw River Ct.

Our church is making great progress; we have just finished setting up our new seats. We put in Andrews Opera Chairs at the cost of five hundred dollars, which we think is an improvement over the pews; we can seat more people, and give them more comfort than before. There is not a church in the county that has a better appearance on the inside than Haw River M. P. church. Sunday was a good day with us; the pastor preached at eleven A. M. and 8 P. M. Morning subject, "After a midnight struggle, a surrendered life". Text, Gen. 32:24. Evening subject, "The privilege of choice", text Joshua 24:15. We had large attentive congregations. After the morning sermon there were seven joined our church and were baptized by the pastor, Bro. Williams.

We will begin our revival Monday after the first Sunday in September. Bro. Linley Gerringer will be with us, as pastor's help. Pray for us that we may have an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon us.

Pleasant Grove, Davidson Circuit.

Last Sunday at 3 o'clock our pastor preached from the text St. John 10:10, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." The sermon was good and we are sure that all present were benefited by it. Our Sunday school is very good, although it is not as large in number as it ought to be. May the good Lord put it in the hearts of the people to go to Sunday school. Our protracted meeting will begin the second Sunday in August and we are hoping for a good meeting, and that many souls will be saved. Let all pray that it will be the best meeting ever held at old Pleasant Grove.

H. W. Surratt, Rep.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Circuit.

Our attendance was 74 last Sunday, which was a decided increase over the two previous Sundays.

Our pastor, Rev. W. A. Ledford, was also with us, and as usual, preached an excellent sermon.

We were glad to see so many out for preaching; hope they will continue to come.

We are planning to have our children's day the second Sunday in August. Our special meeting will also convene then; let us hope that it all will be a success. Our S. S. is getting better each Sunday. We wonder why it is that there are not many old people who take an interest in Sunday school. Why can't they come to S. S. as well as their children? If parents don't take an interest in this work, how can they expect their children to?

July 13. Lellia Lemmons, Rep.

Eden, Halifax Circuit.

Our regular preaching day, first Sunday; our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of course preached a good sermon, as he always does. The congregation was small, on account of having some rain that morning. We were very glad indeed to see so much work done on the vestibule; think we will have it all finished by the meeting, which is to be the first Sunday in August.

It was not the pleasure of the writer to attend the Union picnic at Brinkleyville, but understand it was a complete success in every way.

We are glad to say our pastor's wife is able to be out again, after being confined to her room with sickness. Mr. Pritchard and wife leave today for Siler City to visit Mrs. Pritchard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vestal. We hope for them a nice time.

Miss Annie White has returned home, after spending two weeks with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Porter, at Essex.

Miss Sallie May Neville is spending this week at Whitakers with her sister, Mrs. J. E. Stallings.

Mr. Ralph Willey, of Hampton, Va., has returned home after spending two weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Willey.

I will close, asking the prayers of all the people that we may have a glorious meeting. Reporter.

Mr. Butner preached a very interesting sermon for us last fourth Sunday. Mr. Butner's sister, Mrs. Spainhower, also being with us; we invite them to come again.

We are having a very good Sunday school at this place now; we have 108 on roll. This township S. S. convention will be held at Macedonia the fourth Sunday, July 26. We want to try and make it one of the best conventions that we have ever had.

Several of our people attended the birthday party, given by Miss Leota Hunter Saturday night; all report a real nice time. We wish for Miss Leota many more happy birthdays.

Our new pastor, Rev. T. E. Martin, has taken up the work with great enthusiasm and we are trusting that soon our church will be aroused to a sense of duty, and be a prosperous band of Christians.

I feel that we too often expect our pastor to do all the work that's to be done. But he can only do his part, and we as members should be on the alert to do our part.

We oft times say we need a "hustling pastor", and I'm sure we are convinced that we have one; for Bro. Martin is never idle. And now I think it would be well to change our motto, and say we need more hustling members. It takes this for the cause of God, to grow within us.

Let's try to make this year prosperous on the Buncombe Circuit.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment here the first Sunday, with an up lifting sermon from Gen. 32:28.

Quarterly Conference next Saturrday night at Lincolnton. Come, officials.

We commenced our meeting at Shelby yesterday. No one to lead in prayer or help me and I do not feel equal for the meeting, owing to my health, but two came forward for prayer in the morning. They had children's service at night; very good. Collection, $5.00. Mrs. Thomas Ramsey deserves about all the credit, for she had practically no help but the children. We will hold of nights this week if I can hold out..

Our attendance last Sunday was 273. We are still holding our attendance in spite of the extreme warm weather.

Our church services were well attended last Sunday. Bro. Curry gave us two very instructive and uplifting sermons. The subject of his morning discourse was, "The Post of Duty". At the evening service, which was attended largely by young people, the subject was "Foolish Agriculture".

The July business meeting of the church was held on Monday night of last week. The larger part of the meeting was devoted to reports of officers and committees, and considerable time was consumed in discussing the new Steward's Report System, which has been recently added to the business side of our church work. It was devised by our pastor, and will doubtless prove very successful when put in operation. At this meeting our pastor was granted a vacation covering a period of three weeks. It is a permanently established custom of our church to give the pastor a vacation each year.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Way spent a part of last week with relatives in Forsyth and Randolph Counties.

Bro. Curry is assisting Rev. L. W. Gerringer in a revival meeting near Kernersville, on Oak Ridge circuit, this week.

Next Sunday will be observed as "Home Department Day" in the Sunday school. A committee is preparing a program for the Sunday school hour, and we are hoping to have a good attendance, especially of the Home Department.

July 14, 1914. C. B. Way, Rep.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews announced last Sunday that there would be no preaching service in Grace Church next Sunday, it being the pastor's vacation time. He will take his family to Henderson and himself to Mt. Vernon Springs.

—Grace Sunday School held its annual picnic at Guilford Battle Ground Tuesday P. M., taking supper there. The attendance was good and the occasion was enjoyed by all, especially by the boys and girls.

THE SECRETS OF SUCCESS

For Boys and Young Men.

By B. J. Kendall, M. D.

Bishop Robert McIntyre, D. D., Oklahama City, Okla., writes: "Permit me to commend your sane, wholesome book on the burning questions and critical problems of youth, 'The Secrets of Success for Boys and Young Men.' It is readable, sound, scientific and high minded. Oh that they were in every American home. How much heartache and heartbreak would be averted. How much manhood and womanhood saved."

Gov. R. B. Glenn, Winston-Salem, N. C., writes: "I have read with a great deal of interest your book, 'The Secrets of Success for Boys and Young Men' and can commend it very highly. It tells with force the dangers that threaten young men, and warns them of the evils of vice as it affects their physical, mental and moral growth. While written specially for young men it would not be amiss for young girls also to read it. Chapters 3, 4 and 5 are especially fine and would lengthen the age of man if followed."

Congressman M. Clyde Kelly, Braddock, Pa., "I have read 'The Secrets of Success for Boys and Young Men' carefully and feel that it should be in the hands of every youth and young man in this country. It deals with a vitally important matter in direct fashion and yet free from the rough suggestiveness which sometimes mars such works."

Noble men who have read this book have said of it: "I would have given anything I possessed if I could have had this book to read when I was a boy." Parents, you should see to it that your boys have that opportunity. Price only 25c, and 50c for cloth binding, postpaid. B. J. Kendall, M. D., Geneva, Illinois.

In Memory.

It has pleased the all-wise God on the twenty-third day of June, to remove from earth to heaven Alfred M. Self, our beloved co-worker in the church and Sunday school. He professed faith in Christ in a camp meeting near what is now Center church. He did, as we believe, still love and cherish the memory of the old camp meetings. Some time after his profession he joined Sapling Ridge church, since which time he has lived a consistent Christian life and been a faithful worker in his church and Sunday school. He will be missed in his home, his comunnity, and more than all, in his church. For he was not only a good citizen, a good neighbor, a good man in church and Sunday school, but he was also a model husband and a kind father.

Children, sorrow not as those who have no hope, for while we grieve and lament, our loss is his eternal gain. No doubt he is now with his companion and children, safe in the arms of Jesus. We all hate to give him up, but we know that very soon we shall go. Our desire and prayer is that we may all be as ready and willing as Mr. Self.

The funeral service was conducted by Revs. Pike and Ledbetter. There was a large crowd of people at his burial service, which showed something of the respect and esteem they had for one so worthy.

Resolved—First, That we desire to extend to his sorrowing family our heartfelt sympathy. Let us all look to the same Savior whom he tried so closely to follow, as the one who can help in this hour of grief and sorrow.

Second, That we express our highest appreciation of the life and labor of the departed, and will ever hold in our hearts the memory of his life and devotion to his church.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday school, a copy sent to the M. P. Herald, and one to the Siler City Grit.

—Henry Drummond: "You will find, as you look back upon life, that the moments when you have really lived are the moments when you have done things in a spirit of love. As memory scans the past, above and beyond all the transitory pleasures of life there leap forward those supreme hours when you have been enabled to do unnoticed kindnesses to those around you, things too trifling to speak about, but which you feel have entered into your eternal life."

[illegible]OCTRINAL INHERITANCE.

[illegible]ot to the past is immeasurable. [illegible]n have labored and we have en-[illegible]o their labors to an extent that [illegible]not appreciate. What a long toil-[illegible]urney from what man was to what [illegible]s. In the beginning man found [illegible]lf, ignorant and unarmed, in a [illegible]rld full of terrors and mysteries.

About him lay the earth with its jungles and forests, its ferocious beasts, its poisonous reptiles, its swarms of noxious insects. Above him stretched the heavens, vast and mysterious and perplexing. Before him lay the awful depths of the unseen and eternal world.

Such a situation seems almost too much for even the spirit of man, but, summoning the energies of his being, man went forward. He had to think his way, work his way and fight his way at every step of progress. Thousands of years have now passed and the battle is still on: man is still thinking, still toiling and still fighting. But great are the victories already achieved. Man has struggled up from savagery to civilization. A three-fold conquest has been in great measure accomplished. The earth has been subdued. The wild beasts have been tamed or driven beyond the frontiers. The wilderness of vegetation has been analyzed, the wholesome not only discriminated from the noxious, but greatly improved and made to yield more abundantly for the use of man. The problems springing out of the relations of men to each other have been met and solved, giving to us the ethics and laws of the civilized nations. In the heavens order has been discovered, the laws of planetary motion revealed, and even the component elements of the distant stars laid bare. But not stopping here, the spirit of man has penetrated the unseen and eternal world and apprehended objects for his faith among its enduring realities.

It is to the substantial results of man's achievements in this sphere that I refer when I use the expression, "Our Doctrinal Inheritance". I would that we might better realize how great it is and how valuable it is and how important it is that we transmit it, improved if possible, at any rate unimpaired, to those who are to come after us.

There has been a natural and logical order in man's procedure with the great questions springing out of his infinite environment, though his progress has been interrupted by numerous errors into which he has temporarily fallen.

The first great question was that of the existence of God. When man began to think, it could not have been long, even in the childhood of the race, before he began to inquire after the underlying causes of the phenomena presented to his senses. When he became conscious of the possession of mind it must have occurred to him to enquire whether there is in the world any greater mind than the mind of man. Is there a being or are there beings of superhuman intelligence? Man did not have to wait for the developed skill of the dialectician before he began to reason. And the great questions of the world's origin and of man's own destiny could not be ignored.

What was in the beginning? There never was a time when there was nothing. Had there been, man's mind tells him, there would have been nothing still. Being is; therefore, being was. But what was the first being? Was it simply a mass of material substances, a collection of chemical elements? Antecedently that is as probable as any other supposition. But man had no occasion to consider the question antecedently. The problem for him was, to explain what is by what was. And in that which is there is the power and process of thought as well as the power and process of chemical action. Hence the power of thought must have been potentially or only potentially present in the beginning? Was mind actually or only potentially present in the beginning? Is mind an original or only a derived property of being? In man we find mind associated with brain: can there be mind without brain? Is mind simply the nth derived function of matter, an accidental product of physical organization?

This is a question that is still troubling some, but mankind long ago reached the conclusion which has become part of the daily thought of the enlightened portion of the world that mind was primordial. The individual man knows mind in himself by direct consciousness, but mind in others is known only by its effects. The evidences of mind appear in the works of men. Hence we believe that our fellowmen as well as ourselves are endowed with the power of thought. In precisely the same way do we reach the conclusion that there is a superhuman mind. In the vast structure of the world we see traces of intelligence, leading on strongly to the conclusion that the world had an intelligent Maker.

But may not the original being be endowed with both the power to think and with the properties of extension and chemical action? The question is too profound for man to answer positively. As a matter of fact, man comprises in his own being the power of thought in his mind and the properties of extension and chemical action in his body. Yet man consciously distinguishes his mind from his body and seems unable to identify the two as one being. He finds his body to be the subject and servant of his mind; and while the body exerts a constant influence upon the mind, still man is persistently conscious of a distinction between the two, as the mechanic is conscious of the distinction between his body and the machine he operates. Psychology leads man to the conception that the power of mind in the original being was separate from the powers of chemical and physical action. Whether matter is eternal is another question, but mind must have been primordial. There is and was superhuman intelligence; in the beginning there was God.

The importance of this first article of man's faith cannot be estimated. The difference between monotheism and polytheism is not so great as the difference between atheism and theism. It was a very great step forward and upward when man rose out of materialism into theism, but between poytheism and monotheism man had still to decide. Psychologically, polytheism seems to precede monotheism, but long ago enlightened man rejected belief in many gods for belief in one God. He was aided in making this advance by two great causes: first, his discovery in the progress of science of unity in the world, and, secondly, by divine revelation. The uniformity of nature proclaims the fact that God is one and not many, and the voice of revelation declares that the Lord our God is one Lord. An immediate corollary of monotheism is the greatness of God. Belief in a God great enough to make and rule this great world inspires man with reverence greater than the polytheist can feel. It also makes possible an undivided allegiance and thus affects most profoundly the moral life of man. Instead of the distracting effort to appease many diverse and conflicting deities, there may come into man's life the beauty of holiness and the joy of a perfect devotion.

With man's belief in a God distinct from matter came the desire to know God's relation to matter. Man is himself tied to the material world and his attitude toward it would be affected by his conception of God's relation to it. Is matter as old as God and independent of God, a thing which God must endeavor to make subject to His will without being able to exert an absolute control? Or is matter a creature of God, the product of His creative power, and a perfect servanat of His will? Or, thirdly, is matter, while distinguishable in thought from mind, is matter only another phase of God himself? Is matter the same being that thinks and moves in the order of the world? Is God all-inclusive in his being? Is matter therefore only one of the ways of God, one of the twofold or maybe manifold forms in which His infinite being expresses itself?

All these views have had their advocates, but the thought of mankind, under the light of divine revelation, has settled down in the second of these hypotheses, and the conception of God as Creator and of the material world as a creature of His will has become part of our doctrinal inheritnce. This belief is more important than it may seem. It makes for sane practical life. With Pantheism there is associated a paralyzing fatalism, and if God did not make the world, what assurance have we that He can control the world? There is comfort as well as inspiration and hope in the thought that our God is the supreme being.

Yet this view might become terrible to us. All depends on the attitude of God toward His creatures. What is God's attitude and disposition toward us? This is a thrillingly important question for man. If God be for us, who can be against us? And if God be against us, who can save us from His wrath?

This was not for man a pure question of intellect. Man's conscience awoke and it dawned upon him that God's attitude toward him might be dependent on his own attitude toward God. Man found in himself moral sense, the power to make moral distinctions, involving the recognition of his obligation to regard the will of his Creator. This great discovery transformed the world for man. God became to him a moral governor and he himself became a probationer. Man's conscience, approving the right and condemning the wrong, certifies to man that his Maker is a righteous Moral Governor who cannot tolerate iniquity but who looks with favor upon moral rectitude.

With man's discovery of the moral law came the humiliating discovery of his own inability to render a perfect obedience to it; he awoke to find himself a transgressor and to find in himself moral impotency that threatened to make him a perpetual transgressor. As he looked upon God the righteous governor and upon himself the perpetual sinner, he could but cry out, "Woe is me: I am undone. I have offended God and can never cease to offend Him." Out of this frantic terror came the prodigious efforts of men to appease the wrath of God through sacrifices and penances.

But the blood of goats and lambs could never take away sin and could never make man perfect and he was in desperation till the real sacrifice appeared—a sacrifice made not by man but by God Himself. That offering on Calvary gave man his first valid hope. In it he read the possibility of pardon and peace with God. How soothing, how consoling, how precious is the thought that God can be just and yet justify him that believeth in Jesus. As long as men have conscience and moral sense the Cross of Christ will be the supreme need of their distressed and sin-stained souls. Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greeks foolishness, is unto him that believeth, him that maketh trial of it, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. The God-man nailed to a tree may be to some simply an incredible or senseless spectacle, but the doctrine of the vicarious atonement meets a need so great and so distressing in the souls of men that what was incredible and meaningless becomes wisdom and power. What a priceless inheritance is this doctrine of the Cross of Calvary. This is the sledge hammer of God that breaks the adamant heart of sin. Before the Cross of Christ the impenitent become penitent, the soul distressed by sin finds hope, the moral be- ing is transformed, and there is a birth into a life that is noble, and everlasting. The spirit of m itself baptized—O marvel of m baptized with Holy Spirit of the God.

Man's religious experience brought to him a new conception He has been brought into living ship with God the Father, God and God the Holy Spirit. How be? Must he give up his mono Are there three Gods? This qu brought on perhaps the greatest sion of the Christian centuries. A subtlety of the Greek mind was emp ed in an effort to define the relationsh of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. How can fatherhood and sonship be reconciled with co-eternity? This was done through the conception of eternal generation. How can there be one God and yet three? The unity was found in the essence or substance of being; the distinction in personality. One looks with admiration on the profound thought given to these questions in the early Christian centuries. The result was the doctrine of the Trinity in which the mind of the church with only minor exceptions has found rest to this day.

Besides Trinitarianism there is Unitarianism which halfway denies revelation, and there is Deism, which wholly denies revelation. Perhaps it may not be unfair to remark that men's conceptions of God depend upon their relation to God. The deist knows God as a great King afar off because he has never come near to God. The Unitarian knows God as a rich and benevolent Father because he has not become conscious of the exceeding sinfulness and hatefulness of sin.

True religious experience tends to make men Trinitarians, and the doctrine of the Triune God should be prized by us not only because it is the product of the mighty labors of mighty intellects of the past, but because it satisfies the profoundest needs of our souls.

Time would fail us to tell of the great host of heresies that have been met and vanquished in relation to the person of Jesus Christ. Who was he and what was he? Only a man and an impostor at that, said the Jews. A good man, but deceived, said others. Only a man, but divinely inspired, a real and most worthy prophet, said others. A superhuman being, a divine being, but inferior to God, said still others. But higher and higher rose the thought of men concerning Jesus Christ till at length He was enthroned as very God at the right hand of the Father. How to conceive the union of God and man in the being of Jesus Christ has been a most perplexing problem with many proposed solutions, and to this day questions arise that none can answer, but the great Christian thinkers of the past have transmitted to the church of today a conception that both accords with Scripture and sets Jesus Christ before us as a real and mighty mediator between God and man, one who can be touched with a feeling of our infirmities and one who at the same time can touch and move the great heart of God in our behalf.

What would you take for your thought of Christ? Not all the world. But this is part of our doctrinal inheritance. It came down to us out of the past. Present day history confirms our thought of Christ. But present day history could not produce the thought. For it we are dependent on the testimony of past generations. Let us never forget that we too are called to be witnesses to those to come after us and to those outside the circle of light. In the past there were many who thought life itself not too great a sacrifice to give that they might offer an unfaltering testimony. Were they not justified? And should not the same spirit be in us? Yes!

In the cross of Christ we'll glory, towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story gathers round its head sublime.

But the thought of the past has been busy not only about God the Father and God the Son, but also about God the Holy Spirit. From the crude, impersonal conception of the casual reader of the Sacred Writings thought has been refined and elevated till today the conception is of a person equal in power to God the Father and God the Son, of the same eternal essence, and related to the other two persons of the Godhead through a perpetual procession from them. But in this dispensation of grace the Holy Spirit sustains a peculiar relation to the people of God on the earth. He is the quickening Spirit in their regeneration. He is the ever-present Comforter. He is the constant Guide. It is through His power that the Christian life manifests its peculiar fruitage of peace, of joy, of holy living and loving service and patient endurance in tribulation.

One of the greatest services of John and Charles Wesley was in awakening the thought of the world to the real work of the Holy Spirit in the religious life of men. They thus helped to transform Christianity from legalism into life. They set men to singing

Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove, With all thy quickening powers, Kindle a flame of sacred love In these cold hearts of ours.

Holy Spirit, faithful Guide, Ever near the Christian's side, Gently lead us by the hand, Pilgrims in a desert land.

It is perhaps the chief glory of Methodism that it has given true emphasis to the Holy Spirit's agency in making religion a matter of daily conscious experience. It has pointed out the futility and vanity of our religious profession when God does not work in us to will and to work, for His good pleasure. This tradition of Methodism forms no small part of our doctrinal inheritance and we should be thankful that we have been taught to believe in a salvation that can befelt on earth as well as hoped for in Heaven.

But the great intellects of the past have not only hewn out and perfected conceptions of God, but also conceptions of man. What is man? Whither is he tending? What are his possibilities and privileges? are some of the questions on which thought has dwelt with intensest interest.

Strange to say, man has found greater difficulty in understanding himself than in understanding God, and thought is today perhaps less settled over questions about man than over questions about God. We of the Methodit Protestant Church have inherited the conception that man's moral nature is corrupt, inclining him to evil. This is in accord with the facts of human life and is what the scientist would call a good working hypothesis. Man everywhere is a sinner and needs above all things to be saved from sin. Those who do not recognize the sinfulness of man may be moved to relieve their fellowmen, to feed [illegible] Roberts fifty years ago. It [illegible] hope and faith clothe the naked, which is very commendable, but they will make no effort to save men from the great evil of evils, sin. Whether man is every where a sinner because he inherited a corupt nature or because of ignorance and moral weakness may be honestly questioned, but it is all-important to see that man needs the power of the Gospel of Christ and of the divine agencies which the Gospel discloses to save him from sin, and this forms a valuable part of our doctrinal inheritance. If we are true to it, it will infuse into us a moral earnestness for the salvation of men from their natural state into a state of saving grace and it will move us to tell them of Christ, the only Savior from sin and its degrading and destructive power.

Yes, we have been taught to believe in the destructive power of sin. It is not simply a present disgrace, but a deadly destroyer which, if not overcome, will land the soul in eternal perdition. So dreadful is the fate of the unsaved sinner that the contemplation of it fills us with painful horror. In proportion as we love our fellowmen do we labor to save them from the ruin of sin. We cry aloud and spare not. All that the world can give seems to us as nothing in comparison with the loss of the soul. We endure hardship and suffer want and undergo great labor that we may warn men of the peril of sin. Those who went before us taught us to do this, and the more we do it, the more we are convinced that it should be done. Men are to be saved from themselves—from their own stupidity and blindness and inappreciation of the great things God has done for them.

A great part of our inheritance as Methodist Protestants is the doctrine of the brotherhood of Christians. This might almost be called our peculiar inheritance. I have been associated more or less with Christians of other denominations, both ministerial and lay. And from the observations I have made I can truly say that the spirit of Christian fraternity seems to have fuller and freer play among us than among others. I believe this is partly the result of our church polity, but I also believe that our peculiar polity is the result of this spirit of Christian fraternity. Men free from the spirit of worldly ambition and full of the spirit of the Master and having his conception of the brotherhood of His disciples, when left to themselves, just naturally associate themselves in accordance with the principles of our beloved church. God forbid that this spirit of fraternity should ever be destroyed or lost through any amalgation with others of a different spirit. How good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

There is not time here and now to enter into many particular questions that suggest themselves. Our inherited doctrines cover a wide field and touch many different topics. We are heirs of all the ages and of all the Christian countries. It is impossible for us to realize to what a great extent our peace of mind and our hope and our moral earnestness are due to the labors and mental conflicts of those who have gone before us.

Imagine a hunter of early times, armed only with bow and arrow and other feeble weapons of primitive man, going forth into the forest and being attacked at the same time by a lion and a fierce bear and a panther and an enraged elephant and a boa constrictor and a rattle-snake and a swarm of hornets? The occasion would be rather too much for his strength and his equipment. Imagine a young theologian going forth armed only with his native wit and such knowledge as his limited personal experience has given him and entering the arena of religious conflict. If not all in one day, in successive days, he has to meet Atheism and Arianism and Aristotelianism and Adventism and Calvinism and Deism and Dowieism and Epicureanism and Eutychianism and Ebionitism and Gnosticism and Latitudinarianism and Mohammedanism and Monergism and Mammonism and Materialism and Mysticism and Nestorianism and Pelagianism and Pantheism and Patripassianism and Paganism and Platonism and New Platonism and Rationalism and Russellism and Roman Catholicism and Skepticism and Socinianism and Sabellianism and Stoicism and Sensualism and Tetratheism and Universalism and Unitarianism, and many other nondescript but formidable isms that must be met in the conflict with error. In one of the fierce middle-age battles in Europe a terrible warrior and leader of his soldiers was slain. His dead body was tied upon his horse and placed in his accustomed place in the battle array in order that the sight of his face might strike terror into the hearts of his enemies who did not know that he had been slain.

Most of the false isms that confront us today have been slain in former conflicts and are not as formidable as they seem.

Let every young minister study the history of Christian doctrine and he will find ready prepaered to his hand powerful weapons with which he may easily overcome in the conflict with error. Paul described the armor with which to defend oneself against our great invisible foe. But we have foes in our own households and among our friends and associates—those whose minds pervert the truth and distort the faith and misconceive spiritual fact and see religious relations in false perspective. If we would not be misled by their false and imperfect vision we must clarify and confirm our views by the light of Christian doctrine. Fortunate are we that the light of revelation comes to us through the clarifying medium of centuries of Christian discussion.

SOME INFORMATION.

We have seven new churches under way of erection at this writing, and two others under consideration and there may be others.

Several are being improved by painting and adding vestibules, puting in recesses and new furniture. All the fields seem to be doing very well; some debts on some of the churches are being paid off and all of this taken together indicates progress.

Let us not lose sight of looking after the pastor's salary and the general interests, remember it's only about four months until our Annual Conference meets.

As soon as the special meeting season is over I expect to visit the balance of the fields in the District.

Be pleased to see the reports of the meetings as they are being held throughout the Conference written up by the pastors. C. A. Cecil.

A JEWISH MINISTER OF THE GOSPEL IN GREENSBORO.

Rev. J. H. Rosenberg, a member of the Second Presbyterian Church of Nashville, Tenn., preached in two of Greensboro's Presbyterian Churches last Sunday. He is an interesting speaker. He speaks of the part taken by Jews in the religious history of the world and of their connection with government and other important affairs of the world. He regards their dispersion as a providential event designed to bring blessing to the world in accordance with God's promise. He explains in a natural way the rejection of Jesus by the Jews, but is careful to say that in all Christian centuries the Jews have had among them many believers in Jesus. Jews that rejected Jesus expected the Messiah to be a greater law-giver than Moses, a greater general than Joshua, a greater king than David or Solomon. Because Jesus failed to measure up to these expectations, they could not believe that he was the Messiah. But the prophecies of the Old Testament can never be fulfilled if they were not fulfilled in Jesus, and the Jews are coming more and more to see that Jesus was the promised Messiah. Mr. Rosenberg is laboring for their conversion to Christiaanity, and bases his hope of success on the writings of Paul. He thinks that the Jews must be Christianized before the world can be completely evangelized.

M. P. CONFERENCE RATIFIES UNITED BRETHREN MERGER.

By unanimously adopting its special committee's recommendation for a merger, the general conference of the Methodist Protestant church of America Thursday night opened the way for uniting with the United Brethren church.

Special commissions of the two churches will confer before May 31, 1915, to consummate the merger of the two bodies into one church to be known as the United Protestant church. The new church will have a membership of 500,000. In Columbus the union will bring into the new church 1,600 members.

Delegates from Maryland and Georgia, who first opposed the union, were brought into line early Thursday and every opposition to the plan had been removed.

The general conference of the United Brethren church has endorsed the merger and the individual congregations of that church now are ratifying the action of the conference by referendum. The M. P. congregations already have sanctioned the union.

This special commission was named Thursday to act with the commission from the United Brethren church in finally effecting the union: Rev. L. E. Davis, Pittsburgh, president of the Conference; Rev. C. D. Sinkinson, New York; Rev. U. W. Morrison, West Virginia; Rev. T. L. Garrison, Texas; Rev. W. H. Bentley, Onondaga, N. Y.; Rev. C. E. Sheppard, Muskingum; Rev. D. S. Stephens, Oklahoma; Rev. J. S. Bowers, Maryland; R. T. Pickens, North Carolina; J. F. Howe, Missouri; J. E. Peterson, Iowa; Horace Link, Illinois; Rev. A. T. Simmons, Arkansas; A. T. Merriman, Indiana, and Ely D. Miller, Michigan.

President Davis was authorized to call a meeting of this commission as soon as the United Brethren commission is ready to report.—Columbus Citizen.

TESSIE'S TEXT.

"Bear ye one another's burdens."

Slowly Tessie read over the illuminated text that grandma had hung in her room. She thought it rather an inappropriate text for her room, because she was only seven, and you surely can't be expected to bear other people's burdens very well at seven. It would have been much beter, she thought, to have put it on Aunt Mary's wall, or big Brother Will's. Aunt Mary knew so much—oh, 'most everything there was to know!—and Brother Will was so strong. How easy it would be for them to bear the burdens of others. But she, Tessie, was little and weak and far from wise. What could she do?

A moment later, on her way downstairs, she heard grandpa say: "How I wish I had this letter mailed. But I do not feel as if I could walk five blocks in this hot sun."

"I'll mail it, grandpa," cried a joyous little voice, as Tessie flew for her hat. Why, here was the best chance in the world for bearing a burden for dear old grandfather, who was always so kind to her.

When she returned from her errand she dropped into the hammock on the porch, and lay swaying to and fro in the shade of the vines, enjoying the delicions breeze that had sprung up. Inside, she heard mamma say to grandma: "Did you ever see a baby so fretful? I have never had such a weary time trying to sew. And this dress must be finished for tomorrow night!"

Another chance to be a burden bearer, thought Tessie. She leaned in at the window. "Just hand me that cross baby, mama. I believe he will go to sleep for me out there in the hammock. It is so nice and cool now, in the shade."

So mama passed tne whining little bundle through the low window, and the little girl sang and swung him to sleep.

And this was how Tessie, who had never thought much about such things before, found that even a little child may help to bear the burdens of the world.—Canadian Churchman.

BOYS WE LIKE.

The boy who never makes fun of old age, no matter how decrepit or unfortunate or evil it may be. God's hand rests lovingly on the aged head.

Cheating is contemptible anywhere and at any age. His play should strengthen, not weaken, his character.

The boy who never calls anybody bad names, no matter what anybody calls him.

The boy who is never cruel.

The boy who never lies. Even white lies leave black spots on the character.

The boy who never makes fun of a companion because of a misfortune he could not help.

The boy who never hesitates to say "No" when asked to do a wrong thing.

The boy who never quarrels.

The boy who never forgets that God made him to be a joyous, loving, helpful being.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

—The afternoon Sunday School at the State Sanatorium for Tuberculosis has grown to be quite an important and pleasant feature of the weekly routine. The lesson is taught by Rev. W. B. Waff, of Conway, N. C. Dr. Waff is a Baptist minister, a patient in the Institution, who after the teaching of the lesson, delivers a short sermon. There is an average of from forty-five to fifty in attendance. Up to this time no one except patients and the medical and nursing staff have attended.

All the patients are much interested and seem to get a great deal of pleasure out of the service. The singing, which had recently been added, is a very enjoyable feature, which the bed-patients, who are unable to attend the service, get the benefit of and enjoy greatly. A Methodist minister is expected to conduct the next service.

While the Sunday afternoon service has been held for a considerable length of time, a regular Sunday School was organized in due form only last Sunday. Dr. P. P. McCain, Assist. Superintendent of the Institution, was made Superintendent of the Sunday School, Mr. W. F. Jordan, Secretary and Treasurer, and Miss Bertha Bowden, Librarian.

LITTLE JOHNNIE'S GRAVE.

I love to linger round the spot
Where sweetly sleeps my only boy,
'Tis there the pang of grief I feel
Is wont to soften into joy.

That little mound of muddy clay
Upheaved upon the tender breast.
I prize above earth's fertile fields,
With plenty crowned or verdure dressed.

I know the nobler part is gone—
The rest I would not, could not keep,
Yet with his dust I'll mix my tears,
For over such did Jesus weep.

I love his little ashes still,
Though underneath my feet they lie,
For God hath said they'll live again—
He loves them too—why may not I?

I love that dust! It once was lips,
Which he hath often pressed to mine—
I love that dust! It once was arms,
Which round my neck he loved to twine.

I love that dust! Hands once it was,
I've oft heard rapping at the door,
Or else perhaps a chair o'erturn,
Or strike the hammer on the floor.

That dust was feet, I often met
When nearly home I did appear—
That dust was once sweet face and eyes,
Which smiled a hearty welcome here.

That dust, a tongue, once sweetly spake,
How loud its songs! how full its glee!
When once a heart it beat a breast
Which felt the strongest love for me.

I love, I love, that dust I love,
But O I love the spirit more!
Better than all I love this thought—
I'll meet them both on Canaan's shore.

PICNIC POINTERS.

We are very glad to pass on the following suggestions for a good time at your picnic.

The band leads the way to a central spot, then each department follows its own flag to its own park-section for the egg hunt. Did you ever hunt eggs? We had real eggs one year, hard boiled, and when found they went to the dinner menu! Now we use wooden substitutes, colored dark red, the same ones year after year. The "egg-hunt committee" goes to the park early and hides the eggs. The hunt is limited in time and he who finds the most receives a prize. Each department is assigned a different section of the park, bounded by the drives. After that, all who wear the "9" are entitled to hunt for the golden egg, for which a special prize is awarded.

Then we have dinner.

After dinner our numbers are augmented by those who could not get away in the morning. They have come to see and share the games; the beginners are first, with a peanut-picking contest, and incidentally each one gets enough peanuts to satisfy him for a time, at least. Then there are running races, for boys and then for girls, as in all the succeeding departmental contests. The primary boys stage a leap-frog race, a football kicking contest, and the girls an egg-carrying race. The junior girls blow feathers toward the goal, and run zigzag everywhere. How elusive and mercurial a feather can be! Rope skipping is easier, or carrying a wand upright to the goal.

Other games follow rapidly. How many good ones there are! Which young lady will drive a nail most quickly? What boy can run to the rope stretched a hundred feet away, where his shoes and stockings lie, put them on, and be first at the starting point. Would he dress as quickly in the morning? How we shout at the tug-o'-war, thirty on a side! Lucky the rope is a strong one! Of course we have a hundred-yard dash, the relay runs, and a score of other good tests, while the balloons go up and the crowd cheers.

You must not forget that crowd on the side lines, rooting, talking, eating, singing—and enjoying every moment! It's a great sight.

Is it worth while? We believe it is.

Is it easy? No! What worth-while work is ever easy?

Don't you get tired of it? Before, yes! But by next year we are thoroughly rested and ready for another!

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Thomasville.

We held our third quarterly meeting Thursday night, July 16th, with very good attendance. The usual business transacted. Bro. T. G. Perry was elected delegate to Annual Conference; Bro. L. R. Loftin, alternate.

T. A. Williams.

La Grange Circoit.

We began our special meeting at Hickory Grove on last Sunday. The attendance from first to last was not so good as we had hoped.

Rev. R. S. Troxler came to uur assistance Monday, and preached at 11 A. M. to sixteen hearers. He preached at 8 P. M. every night until he left for home, Thursday morning. The attendance at night was fairly good. Bro. Troxler preached plain, wholesome sermons. He made a good impression on his hearers.

The meeting closed Friday night. There were five conversions. On the closing night nearly every one present gave us their hand as a token of an earnest desire to live a better life in the days to come.

There are many young men and young women here, who, if well trained, will make noble and useful men and women.

The membership at Hickory Grove are well able to support a preacher handsomely. They could do it easily, if they would work together, and take as much interest in church affairs as they do in secular matters.

The service at Grace church today at 11 A. M. was attended by a very small number of the members. There were not more than half a dozen of our people present. There were quite a number from other churches. There are a few faithful M. P's here—the very salt of the church—but the greater per cent. seem to have severed their church relation. Rev. Mr. Reitzel ocupied the pulpit at 8 P. M. and preached an interesting and helpful sermon.

Our special meeting is scheduled to begin here on the first Sunday in September. Dr. Swain will be our help. Pray for us.

July 19. Will H. Neese.

New Salem, Randleman Circuit.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely, not so many Sunday as usual. Our pastor could not be with us last Sunday as he is away helping Rev. W. F. Ashburn in a special meeting. Bro. Hinshaw filled the appointment with a helpful sermon. I am sure every one present enjoyed his message. Wish there could or would have been more present to hear him.

July 20, 1914.

Thomasville.

On Monday night, 13th, while we were sitting in our room two or three automobiles pulled up in front of our house and stopped. Before I could get to the door the people began to come in, and did not stop until 47 came in, each one bringing something we needed. They marched into the dining room. There we found the table just loaded down, and some things on the floor. Something for us to wear as well as eat. The people and articles were so numerous we will not try to mention the names of the ones that came or what they brought. But I suppose the pounding would have amounted to ten or twelve dollars. May the Lord bless each one that took part in it. He knows them by name, and may we endeavor to feed them spiritually while they are feeding these bodies of ours, and all be happy here, and happy in the world to come. T. A. Williams.

Shoals, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Circuit.

Since our last report our church has been repainted on outside, which greatly improves the appearance. Two of our young men, Messrs. Luther Kiger and Squire Hauser, took up the matter of raising money to have it done.

Glad to have our pastor preach for us twice a month (second Sunday and Sunday night) as he now does.

Our average Sunday School attendance for the first six months has been forty: collections, seventy-five cents; for 1913, same period, attendance, forty-one; collections, thirty-five cents.

Sorry the attendance did not increase rather than fall behind, but glad of the increase in collections, which is considerably due to our monthly orphanage collections. There were three Sundays this year and two last year which from unfavorable weather or other causes, had no school, that were not counted in the averages.

Hope the remaining part of the year will show an increase rather than decrease in attendance and interest.

July 14, 1914. Ira O. Hauser.

Shelby Circuit.

Rev. C. A. Cecil, Dear Bro.: We are still going on with our meeting at Shelby. We held our third quarterly conference at Lincolnton last Saturday night. Each appointment represented and a spiritual, harmonious conference. Bro. D. B. Johnson was declared delegate elect to represent this circuit at our next annual conference and Bro. C. W. Atkins was elected alternate. I think they both will go, as Bro. Atkins has relatives at Asheville and is also much interested in the cause Bro. Johnson will give a full report of Conference, etc.

Now he was elected according to the Discipline and our Annual Conference. I want to ask a few questions and hope you or some one will answer, so we will know what to do when we get there.

1. Is he to represent this work, or can from one to as many as want to "butt" in and worry the delegate and Stationing Committee?

2. Has any other member of the circuit a right to interfere with his business as a representative of the circuit, either as to boundaries, pastor or to try either in person or by letter at Conference?

3. Does it show the spirit of a Christian gentleman for anyone to try to do this?

4. Does it not belittle the delegate, the Stationing Committee and cause confusion in the estimation of others?

5. We are supposed to elect one of our best men from each charge to represent the charge, then to advise with him before he leaves the work for Conference? If the charge finds they were deceived and can not trust the delegate elected, had they not better have a call quarterly conference two weeks before the Annual Conference and try it over?

6. After the Stationing Committee is elected, is it not fair to equally consult each delegate and preacher or minister before he is assigned to any worrk?

7. Is it best to keep both in the dark till about the last hours of Conference?

The way things were at last Conference caused me to ask these questions. I heard several delegates say they never expected to attend another Conference as delegate. The Stationing Committee can say if they were not worried almost beyond the limit.

8. If we have mutual rights, why can't we do as we did 15 or 20 years ago, —have a consultation and prayer with the delegates and pastors? If we find either delegate of pastor is unreasonable, tell him so and tell him he is "in the box for a draw."

As I see it we meet to consider the best interests of our Father's kingdom and we are His children, and our Discipline says mutual rights, with all that means.

Back to Shelby. I appointed prayer meeting for Saturday night and Sunday morning. I preached at Lincolnton in the morning and came on to Shelby and preached at night to one of the largest congregations we have had yet. We may continue through the week as much interest is being manifested. Pray for us that the work may abide.

Fraternally,

July 20, 1914. C. E. M. Raper.

Charlotte.

I have just returned from Charlotte where I filled the pulpit of Rev. D. A. Braswell who is now in the East in revival meetings. Our people there are highly elated over the prospects for a church in the near future. The location has been wisely selected and is a corner lot on the street car line between Belmont and the public square. It is not in the mill district but is surrounded by beautiful residences. Restrictions are placed on all unsold lots which insures the building of no inferior houses. The city will not hesitate to attend the church because of its location. Men of wealth not of our church are looking with favor upon the enterprie. The lot has been donated to the church and the trustees now have a fee simple deed. The donor is a wealthy man and it is near his home. The interest he is taking in the matter brightens the future for us there. Another thing in our favor is that it is not near any other church. Bro. Braswell has certainly done his work well and our people there are well pleased. The way has been dark at times and some of us perhaps would have succumbed to the discouragements, but the mist has now cleared up to the extent that success is visible. Let us rejoice together and lend a helping hand.

No one has asked me to write this article, but I felt like our interested reader would like to know things concerning our work in Charlotte as viewed by an outsider. Geo. L. Reynolds.

Winston Salem.

I send you an extract of an article clipped from the Twin City Daily describing our annual S. S. outing at Nissen Park, Winston Salem, on the evening of the 16th of July. It was truly a pleasant gathering and "all went merry as a marriage bell". The tables set end to end were nearly or quite 100 feet long and were quite filled with most tempting viands. The presence of so many happy young people and a goodly number of old people together with our beloved pastor, Rev. S. W. Taylor, our genial superintendent, Rev. O. W. Hanner, and our jovial and witty brother, R. L. Hopper, added much to the occasion. Indeed, it really seemed that the benedictions of heaven rested upon us. The weather was exceptionally fine and the dark green woods surrounding the Park, and the lovely flowers and shrubbery and the beautiful gold-fish sporting in the ponds so gracefully presided over by water lilies, and the graceful swan and wild ducks and geese floating so smoothly over the water and a number of wild animals makes it an attractive place for an outing, as the street cars take us right to the spot, a distance of three miles from the city. And when Crouse's orchestra arrived late in the evening and discoursed the sweetest music to the joy of all present and the crowning event of the day and we decided that we would be glad to enjoy a repetition of a scene so agreeable and attractive. Here is the clipping:

"The annual outing by the Sunday school was an enjoyable event. It was one of those gatherings in which husbands and wives, uncles and aunts, brothers and sisters—and sweethearts—mingled and had a good time. The supper was spread on one long table and it was a most tempting display of fried chicken and every other good thing that might be named. The picture presented around the festive board must have been tempting to the hungry on-looker. That the hundreds of men, women and children did full justice to the spread goes without the saying. The happy throng at the close of the day's outing, were unanimous in the opinion that it was one of the very best of the many picnics ever given by the school, whose membership is composed of a splendid type of Christian citizenship.

"Nearly all the picnickers remained for the evening attractions, one of which was splendid moving pictures presented every night during the week by Capt. J. J. Sigg, a Prince of Good Fellows."

Pensacola.

We are preparing to build a new church. At a meeting of the trustees it was decided to build instead of repair the old house. While it is a heavy undertaking for this little congregation that is trying to support a pastor, they are willing to try, and expect to get through. The old house was taken down last week, and today (Monday) we are putting in the concrete foundation. When complete we hope to have one of the neatest little chapels in the district. Pray for the success of this work.

Homer Casto.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.

Bro. Ashburn has filled two appointments since our last report; he always has something good for us and we are glad when preaching day comes.

We had children's day and a picnic Saturday before the fourth Sunday in June. It was a success. Much credit is due to Mrs. John Dixon and Miss Jewel McCollum. Collection was $7.25. We were glad to have Bro. Lowdermilk and Bro. Ashburn both with us.

Sunday was our regular prayer-meeting day. There was a very good crowd out; the meeting was conducted by Bro. J. D. McCollum.

Protracted meeting begins next Sunday. Rev. A. G. Dixon is to help. We are expecting a good meeting.

Pray for us.

Lincolnton.

Our third quarterly conference, Shelby Circuit, convened in the Lincolnton church, 18th. All three churches well represented. A good report from each church on S. S.; also pastor's salary paid ahead at Caroleen and Lincolnton. Shelby just a little behind. The Lincolnton and Shelby churches are in splendid shape financially, and with what Conference has promised this year on the indebtedness of these two churches paid, we can easily take care of the little balance without any more help from Conference, after this year if there be any balance.

Our pastor preached a splendid sermon Sunday to an attentive congregation.

We had a C. E. float in 4th of July parade. We had in this float 22 C. E. members who sang, "Onward, Christian Soldiers". On the outside were the words, "Methodist Protestant Christian Endeavorers. For Christ and the church." The decoration was made up of red and white with a little blue and dotted with C. E. flags. The four horses es were dotted with C. E. flags. This float was a credit to the M. P. church and C. E. Society. We were cheered from the time we started in the street parade until it was over. We feel glad to know we presented or held up Christ to thirty or forty thousand people. The impressions made will last.

Our Sunday school seems to be taking on new life now. D. B. J.

Asheville.

The other day the preacher was uptown, the Congregational minister was also up-town and we talked it over. The conversation was on this order:

The Congregational minister, "How do you do, Bro. Bates. I'm glad to see you are getting along so well with your church building. You certainly have a splendid location. When I was here last summer looking over the situation, several of the members of my church went very carefully over all the available locations in the city, and I said to them as we came to the lot on which your church now stands, 'Brethren, this is the place for our church. This is the best location in the city.' "

The preacher, "Thank you, Doctor. But I'm mighty glad we got there first."

The other preacher: "The thing that caused me to give up my charge in Massachusetts, and come to Asheville, was the very evident need of community churches. I do not know of a city of this size anywhere where the need of community churches is so great. It is a city of great centralized churches, but with a tremendous population that is totally uncared for. The trouble with the city is that the churches have been trying to get the people to church instead of taking the church to the people."

And I said, under my breath of course, in order that the brother might not be shocked at my Methodistic fervor, "Amen to that." And it it weren't that it would sound so much like the women folks, I'd say, I told you so.

We have set aside the second week in August as Self-Denial week. We are hoping that at the close of the week we shall be able to lay upon the altar of the church a substantial gift as the expression of our devotion to the cause of Christ.

The Ladies' Aid made close to $7.00 at their sale last Saturday. The $500 due as this year's note on the lot is due and payable the first of next week. The Aid, which assumed the responsibility of getting the full amount of the note, lacks about $250.00 of having all of it in hand. But these folks don't know how to spell failure, so you may expect to hear that the whole amount has been raised.

Brethren, and I mean laymen as well as preachers, if you have any folks from your charges, who are in Asheville, or who contemplate coming either for health or for pleasure, won't you put me in touch with them? I promise you that I'll not bone them for money for the church. I should like, though, to be of any service possible to them while they are here. But I can't help them unless I know that they are here, and where they are. Bro. Quick has put me in touch with some of his members, and when some of Bro. Taylor's members were in Asheville on a visit, he wrote me, and I had great pleasure in meeting them.

The dollar given by Bro. Clinton was given some weeks ago but somehow or other I failed to give credit for it. I do so now. My wife and I spent afew hours very pleasantly with Col. Pickens the first of last week. You will be glad to know that he is as jolly as ever, still a dyed-in-the-wool Methodist Protestant, and greatly interested in the Asheville church. He was kind enough to give my wife a dollar for her class in addition to the amount put down to his credit in this list. Read what Mr. Garrett said in his last report.

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Giles Chapel, Richland Circuit.

Our pastor was again at his post of duty last Sunday and gave us an excellent sermon from Matthew 5:16. I think it was his best sermon yet. We certainly do appreciate Mr. Bowman's sermons. After the sermon communion service was held, using our new individual communion service. It certainly is nice. I think every church ought to have it, especially for its sanitation and its decency. I return thanks to all those who helped purchase this service.

We are expecting to have children's day perhaps about the first of September, and our special meeting will be on the standing appointment, third Sunday in September. We ask the prayers of the Christian people that we may have a glorious meeting. We ask our friends and relatives who have moved away and usually attend the meeting, to come again this year.

Mr. Chas. A. Hamlin has returned from Chicago, where he took a special course in school. On his way home he stopped over a few days in Indiana to visit relatives; he reports a splendid time.

Mr. W. C. York, one of our best members, has been on the sick list for some time, but seems to be improving now. We were glad to see him out at preaching and Sunday school Sunday.

I was real glad to have the pleasure of attending Grace M. P. church in Greensboro some time ago. I enjoyed Rev. Mr. Andrews' sermon very much. And in the evening of the same day I went down to High Point and attended Main St. M. P. church, at 7:30, and of course I enjoyed Mr. Dixon's sermon, as usual.

Well, I hope I am not making my communication too long.

Our young friend and neighbor, Mr. Eugene Williams, who holds a position with the Southern Express Co. in Danville, Va., visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Williams, a few days ago.

Mrs. W. R. Hamlin.

Moriah, Tabernacle Circuit.

As protracted meeting begins Sunday at Shady Grove, Bro. Johnson can not preach for us. We extend a hearty welcome to all to come to our Sunday school, the best place to be on Sunday. Our protracted meting begins the fourth Sunday in August. We expect to have our new church completed by that time. We kindly ask the prayers of readers that we may have a good meeting and accomplish great things for our Master.

Mr. Robert Kirkman, who has been in poor health quite a time, has gone to springs. We hope the good water and rest will help restore his good health.

Love to all.

—The Boston man was proudly exhibiting the sights of the city to his out-of-town friend and visibly swelled with pride while doing so. At each new object he remarked: "Boston is such a unique town!"

After enduring this every few minutes for several hours, the friend said impatiently:

"Lemme see. 'Unique'—that comes from unus, one, and equus, horse. Yes, you are right. Boston is certainly a unique town."—Ladies Home Journal.

THE A. M. B.

Of course, you do not know yet what those capitals stand for, but Betty does, and you have only to whisper them to her to see her blush a rosy red and toss her surly little head.

"But," she will laugh, "it was a lesson to me, and I am glad it happened anyway."

You see Betty was just eight years old and inclined to be very careless. If her mother sent her to the store to buy beans, she was sure to come back with peas; or if she was intructed to purchase butter, she would buy bread. And if an errand was to be executed after school, you could never be quite certain that Miss Betty would remember anything about it.

"Did you see Miss Vandermeter today?" asked Betty's mother, meeting her at the door one evening.

Betty stopped still on the doorstep. "I forgot it, mother," she answered.

"Oh, Betty," said her mother, reproachfully, "this is the third day that I have told you, and the house is just across from the school. How can you forget so many times!"

"I came out through the back yard today," Betty answered, contritely, "and I never thought about the dressmaker. I don't see why she doesn't have a telephone."

"That has nothing to do with your forgetfulness," said her mother. "I am afraid I will have to have my sewing done by some one who lives nearer, as I cannot go away up there to see her, and I cannot depend upon you to take my message. It is too bad, too, for I know she needs all of the work she can get."

"I will surely tell her tomorrow," promised Betty, earnestly.

But the next afternoon when school let out she was so busy thinking about her approaching birthday that she forgot the message completely.

"It is next Thursday," she said to herself. "Last year it was on Wednesday, I remember. I wonder if I shall have a party this year?"

Nothing at home had been said about a party, but nothing was ever said and the event was supposed to be in the nature of a surprise; but Betty always caught glimpses of the stealthy preparations and joyed accordingly.

"Of course there will be a party," she said to herself, going right past the dressmaker's house without a single thought of her errand. "It wouldn't be a birthday without a party."

She was still thinking about the coming event which she was confident would soon transpire when she hopped up the porch steps. Her mother was standing in the door. Then Betty remembered suddenly and hung her head shamefacedly.

Her mother saw the look and with a sigh opened the door.

"Oh, Betty, Betty," she said sadly, "something will surely happen to punish you if you do not try to do better."

"I do try," said Betty, "but it doesn't seem to do any good."

Mrs. Davis shook her head. "You do not try very hard," she sighed, or there would be a difference in your conduct."

"I am sure I do try," said Betty to herself, after her mother had put on her things and gone out in search of another seamstress. "I thought of it just before school closed." Then she fell to thinking of her approaching birthday again and forgot all about her failing, which was the Betty way, you know.

Monday came, and although Betty lingered in the halls as long as she dared before going to school, she could see no sign of any birthday preparations. Tuesday passed as uneventfully without any of the delightful air of mystery that usually preceded her birthday, and Betty commenced to be worried.

"Surely I will smell the cake baking tomorrow," she said, consolingly. "They always make the cake the morning before the party." And the next morning she made many unnecessary trips to the kitchen, during one of which she heard the cook regretting that they had no eggs.

"Hadn't I better stop on the way to school and order some?" asked Betty, anxiously.

"And have them send up a dozen tennis balls," sniffed the cook, who knew Miss Betty's failing. "No, the egg man comes tomorrow afternoon, and I guess we shall not need any before then."

Betty turned and walked rapidly out of the room to hide her tears. The day before her birthday and they did not need any eggs! And the birthday cake took six!

That day she did not study very attentively, and at supper she was unusually quiet, while she hurried away to bed a half-hour earlier than usual to wet her pillow with tears. But if she felt disappointment then, the following morning was heart-breaking. It was the custom of the family to greet the person whose birthday it was with the number of kisses corresponding to their years upon their arrival at the breakfast table, but this morning no one sang out "Birthday Greetings!" and no one kissed her.

Every one treated her as if she were a very ordinary little girl and not a birthday girl at all, and she was not even told to put on her best dress to wear to school. At 3 o'clock she sped home, thinking perhaps that they would have remembered and would be preparing to atone for their forgetfulness, but to her surprise the house seemed deserted.

"Where is mamma?" she asked the cook, whom she found in the garden.

"I think she went to town with Mrs. Sheffield," said Norah. "She called for her, and they went away together. Why, what's the matter?" For Betty had burst into tears and was running into the house as fast as her two fleet limbs could carry her. She flung herself down upon her own bed and sobbed unrestrainedly.

To think that mother—her mother—had gone away to town, leaving her alone on her birthday! Then she remembered her mother's words, "You surely will be punished if you do not try to do better!" That was the way that Betty remembered them, and this was the way that they had chosen to punish her! But it seemed a cruel, cruel way.

"But I guess I deserved it," Betty admitted at last, as she ceased her sobbing. "At any rate, I don't think I will ever forget again."

That night she pleaded a headache, and crept into bed without any supper, so that her mother was quite alarmed, and sat by her side putting cooling cloths upon her head until she fell asleep.

"Well, I am glad the day is over," she sighed to herself in the morning, when she awakened. When she went down to breakfast, no sooner had she opened the dining-room door than she was caught by half a dozen hands and kissed repeatedly. She struggled away and stared.

"A happy birthday," cried her father, and Brother Tom caught her up and hugged her. Betty stared, open mouthed.

"But yesterday"—she faltered.

"Yesterday?" Her mother's tones were puzzled.

"Yes, yesterday was my birthday," said Betty.

Her father led her to the calendar upon the wall. "See that," he said. "Today is the eighteenth."

Betty stared at the number in astonishment. "But last year my birthday came on Wednesday," she stammered.

Her father laughed heartily. "But you know that 1912 is leap year, don't you?" he said.

Betty hung her head. "I forgot about that," she confessed.

"But if you had looked at the calendar you would have known," her father told her.

"I didn't think to do that," Betty whispered. They did not say much because it was her birthday, but led her to the stack of presents beside her plate.

That morning, instead of going to school, Aunt Kate and Uncle John came in their touring car and took them all for a ride, after which they returned—not home—but to Aunt Kate's wonderful house, and here a gay mob of Betty's little friends burst in upon her.

"We thought we should really surprise you for once," exclaimed Aunt Kate, laughing, "so we decided to have the party here."

And such a party as it was! Never will Betty forget it.

"Even if I am allowed to," she laughs, for the story of how she had absent-mindedly anticipated her own birthday was too good a joke on her and too much of a lesson to be readily forgotten by her family. But after her day of misery Betty really did stop forgetting—not all at once, you understand, but gradually, until now she is the most dependable, trustworthy little maiden imaginable.

But just the same she always blushes when any one says "The A. M. B.," as you have guessed by now what it means—"The Absent-Minded Birthday."—Faye N. Merrimon, in Zion's Herald.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Burlington.

Last Sunday was observed as "Home Department Day" in our Sunday school. The attendance was 305, which was the largest attendance we have had this year. A program had been prepared and was carried out. Special music was rendered by the Sunday school orchestra, a quartette was sung by the Baraca quartet, and a short address by Bro. G. H. Boon on the Home Department and its purpose was made, which was full of encouragemen and inspiration, treating mainly on the history and accomplishments of the Home Department of our school. The members of the Home Department were seated in a body and were taught by Prof. D. C. Holt, Principal of Vaughan High School, who is spending the summer months at home. There are about forty members of the Home Department at the present time, and once each year they are invited to attend the Sunday school proper and be taught as a class.

On last Tuesday night, July 14th, the organized classes of our school held their monthly business meetings in their respective class rooms. After the business sessions, they assembled on the church lawn and enjoyed a watermelon feast, which was prepared and served by the Senior Baraca Class, assisted by the Junior Baraca Class. These meetings and social gatherings always prove very pleasant and most enjoyable by the young people.

The service last Sunday night was quite different and unlike any we have had in recent years. It was called a Bible reading service, and was conducted by Mr. Robert Parker, pastor of the Friends' church at Graham. Everybody was requested to bring their Bible and take part in the service, but there were comparatively few people who brought their Bibles. The service proved to be very helpful and interesting, but would have been much more so if each person had taken his Bible with him.

Mrs. Rev. Curry and children left last Saturday to spend a few weeks' vacation with her father, Rev. J. A. Stowe, near Asheboro.

Our pastor left Monday morning for Julian, ,N. C., where he goes to assist Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D., in a protracted meeting this week. From there he will go to Pinnacle, N. C., to help Rev. A. L. Hunter in a meeting. Our church service will be in charge of a visiting minister the next two Sundays.

The Christian Endeavor Society is still holding its meetings every Sunday evening at 7:30. Three new members were received last Sunday evening. The meetings are very interesting and helpful, and should be attended by more of our young people.

The Junior Philathea Class of our school held an ice cream supper on the church and parsonage lawn last Saturday night, which proved quite a success financially. About $20.00 was the profit realized from the sales of cream and cake and a contest for the most handsome young lady. Miss Reggie Moran was the successful contestant. The proceeds of the occasion were for the benefit of the Junior Philathea Class.

Thomasville,

On last Monday evening, July 13, the members of our church "pounded" the pastor, Bro. Williams. They brought in several kinds of good things and his table was covered.

Bro. Williams left us last Wednesday. He will be away for at least four weeks helping in special meetings at different places. While he is away the Rev. Mr. Matthews will be with us Sunday and Sunday night. Bro. Matthews was with us last Sunday and preached two very forceful sermons.

Our Sunday school is keeping up very well during the summer, especially the Baraca and Philathea classes. The Baraca Class has won the pennant offered by the Thomasville Baraca-Philathea Union to the Class which had the largest percentage of its members present at the monthly union meetings three times in succession.

Saturday, July 11, Mr. Laughlin, the teacher of the small boys' class, took his class out to the Brokaw estate on a picnic. The boys reported a great time. Mr. Laughlin is an efficient teacher and is well liked by his class.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.

Our pastor was with us again Sunday, preaching another one of his good sermons. There was a large congregation.

We are making preparation for children's day, which will be the second Sunday in August. Our special meeting will also commence in the afternoon. Bro. Edwards' pulpit help is Bro. Williams. We are working and looking forward for a good meting. Hope that everyone may be faithful and I am sure that there will be many souls saved. If we want anything good we must work for it. How good our hearts feel within us when we are doing the Lord's will. We ask the prayers of the Christian people. I will close, hoping to hear many good things from all of the meetings.

IN MEMORIAM.

Blackwelder.

Elizabeth Blackwelder died on the night of the 17th of July at her youngest daughter's, Mrs. David Adkins, and was buried by her husband in the old Zoar graveyard, Saturday afternoon, July 18th, at 3 o'clock. She was 84 years old and was Zoar's oldest member. She joined the church when she was very young and was a faithful church worker until she died. In her old days she attended her church whenever she was able. Her energy was undying. She always wanted to be doing something. She would rather knit than do anything else. When her daughter found her sitting in the door unconscious a little while after dinner, she had her knitting still clutched in her fingers.

Her funeral was preached by a Baptist minister, as our pastor, Bro. Waldrop, could not be gotten at the time.

She is survived by three daughters and one son, to mourn her loss, also a host of grandchildren. A Nephew.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR SCHOOLS.

For years the National Reform Association has been leading in an effort to have the churches and Christian people generally in our country observe the second Lord's Day of September as a Day of Prayer for Public Schools, coming as it does so near the opening of the school year. As heretofore the Association announces again this year its willingness to furnish free of charge to any pastor who will on this or an adjoining Lord's Day discuss the subject of Christian public education, and who has not hitherto been supplied, any one of its many documents on this theme. Among the latest issued are the following; "The Day of Prayer for Schools", unfolding the nature, purpose and reasons for observing the day; "Report of the Bible in the Schools", giving not only our national, but also the world status of Bible reading in the schools; "Christian Public Education", an argument in favor of a Christian public school system. OBSERVATIONS BY THE WAY.

Monticello.

Before my wife and I came to Charlottesville we had decided that we would, while we were here, visit Monticello. Saturday morning, July 18, furnished us the opportunity. We had arranged with those who sat at our table in the dining hall that we would all take the trip together. And so six of us went over to Madison Hall that morning, and finding that Mr. Prosperi, the gentleman who has charge of these trips, had not made sufficient arrangements for all who were there ready to go, we phoned to the livery stable down town and asked that a carriage be sent up at once. In due time the carriage came and we were on our way to the home of the author of the Declaration of Independence.

Monticello is about three miles east of the University of Virginia. To reach this place we went through the whole length of this quaint old town of Charlottesville. This gave us an opportunity to see certain parts of the town that we had not seen before. One thing that struck us was the number of houses that have boards or placards posted in the front yards marked "For Sale". In our home village it seems difficult for a man to buy property at any price, and here, so much is on the market, that we would judge that it is going cheap.

Th road to Monticello from the city is very interesting. Not far out we came to an iron bridge across Moses Creek. I had heard of men who were named Moses, but this was the first creek of the name I had ever seen. For more than half way, the road is along the side of Patterson Mountain. The road has been cut into the mountain side and the chestnut and oak overhang it and make it cool and shady. On the other side is a deep ravine which opens its engulfing jaws to receive the horse or the person who happens to pass too far that way. Doubtless many accidents would happen here were it not that a wire fence has been placed by the side of the road to save man and beast from the tragedies that might occur. One can almost reach the tops of the trees that grow from the bottom of the ravine as he rides along the road up the mountain.

After a long up hill drive we arrived at the entrance to the estate. The gate keeper has his home here. His wife looks after opening and closing the gate while the keeper himself works on the estate. A half mile drive up a steep but well kept road brought us to theJefferson cemetery. No place could be more inviting for the dead to sleep than on this lovely mountain side under the shade of the chestnuts and the oaks. It is a lovely place and every thing about it indicates the wisdom of the man who chose this to be his last resting place.

The following is told of how this spot was selected for the Jefferson family cemetery. During the time when Jefferson was a boy and in school while still his mother lived at Shadwell, Jefferson and his friend Dabney Carr would come to Monticello which was then covered with forest and spend parts of their vacation in study. Under a spreading oak they built a rustic seat and there they talked and whiled time away. The beauty of the spot so impressed itself upon them that they made an agreement that, whichever of the two died first, the other would bury him under the shade of the oak under which they had built their rustic seat.

Jefferson and Dabney Carr were very intimate. Something of the love that existed between David and Jonathan existed between them. Carr married Jefferson's sister Martha and they made their home at Shadwell.

While Jefferson was away in the service of his country, Carr died and was buried at Shadwell; but when Jefferson returned home, he remembered the pledge they had each given the other and so he had the body removed and buried beneath the oak, the stump of which is still standing in the cemetery. Here in this spot, on the mountain side of Mount Monticello lie the mortal remains not only of Dabney Carr, but of several of the Randolphs, the Carrs and the Jeffersons, names illustrious in the history of these United States.

The grave of Jefferson is marked by a plain and simple monument. Upon the base are several inscriptions. This is surmounted by a massive granite block of Doric plainness and symplicity, and this is surmounted by a shaft. The whole is about ten or twelve feet high. The only inscription on the shaft or monument is

Here was buried Thomas Jefferson Author of the Declaration of Independence of the Statute of Virginia for Religious Freedom and Father of the University of Virginia.

It is said that Jefferson had indicated during his life-time that he wished this inscription placed upon his tomb.

The monument that stands there is the third that has been placed above his grave. The first was placed there by Jefferson's grandson, Jefferson Randolph, the year after Jefferson's death. This was chipped away and carried off by relic hunters. In 1851 the professors in the University of Virginia placed a second monument over the grave, of like design as the first. In the course of time this also disappeared. Then several years ago Congress appropriated a sum of money for a monument, and, that the same fate might not befall it that had befallen the other two, a stout iron fence some ten feet high surmounted by a barbed wire was also placed around the cemetery. The third monument is still there and will probably remain for years to come.

Having paid our tokens of respect to Jefferson's last resting place, we went up to the top of the mountain and there before us was Monticello. A more beautiful place had never greeted our gaze. For miles and miles in every direction such a view of scenery, of mountain hill and vale, of fruitful field and peaceful valley lay before us as one rarely sees while traveling through this vale of tears. We felt as Moses must have felt as from Mount Nebo he viewed the promised land. The scene was enrapturing and transporting. The view was grand beyond description. Off to the West lay Charlottesville and the University that he planned and founded. It is said that while the University was in building Jefferson watched through a small telescope the progress of the work as he sat in his home at Monticello. If he saw anything was going wrong, he ordered his horse at once and was off in a gallop to the University. Thus in his declining years he tenderly watched his youngest and one among his greatest works.

But it will not be right to take so much space this week, and we must leave the description of Monticello until a later time. Since we have seen the home of this father of the Republic we find the same sense of reverence deepened in us that was born when we stood at Mount Vernon by the tomb of the Father of his Country and when we stood in Hollywood cemetery by the tombs of James Madison and of John Tyler and by that of Jefferson Davis, and when we stood at the Hermitage years ago and saw where Andrew Jackson sleeps and when we saw the tomb of James K. Polk, all of whom have made their names illustrious in the annals of their country and have done their part to maintain her dignity and honor.

The following conferences were not represented: Charleston (Colored), Ft. Smith, Japan, Mississippi, Missouri, Northwest Texas, South Carolina, Southwest Texas, Tennessee and Virginia. Total, 10.

When the name of Rev. F. T. Tagg was called he came forward and stated that while present he was there as editor of "The Methodist Protestant", to report the proceedings to his paper, and not as a representative of the General Conference, and therefore he must be considerd as ocnstructively absent, and his name was not again called during the session. He took no part in the Conference action further than to report the proceedings for this paper.

When the name of Rev. F. C. Klein was called, he stated that while he had great respect for the Maryland Conference, of which he is a member, that he was also a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, and a general officer in it, and therefore he would answer "Here."

When the name of T. R. Woodford was called he answered in about the same terms as did Mr. Klein and both took part in the proceedings of the Conference.

After the roll call a paper presented by Rev. Mr. Miller, of Muskingum, expressed in high terms the Conference appreciation of the work of Rev. L. E. Davis, in promoting this union movement, and the paper was unanimously adopted.

A pamphlet was distributed to the members entitled, "The Basis of Union," together with a history of the negotiations between the Methodist Protestant and the United Brethren in Christ. This is a document of about 18 printed pages which includes the resolutions adopted by the majority of the annual conferences, the call of the presidents, and the Basis of Union.

The paper was read by the secretary of the Conference, after which a motion was adopted to submit it to a committee of one from each conference represented.

At this juncture, Col. Barge, a representative from Georgia, offered a paper which he requested should go into the record, questioning the legality of the special session of the General Conference, and which proposed that the Conference do now adjourn." This paper was promptly laid on the table and then the vote was reconsidered and after much discussion was again voted down.

Rev. Geo. R. Brown offered a paper protesting that the constitutional and disciplinary requirements had not been fully recognized in the call for this Conference, in that due notice to all stations, circuits and missions should have been sent by the presidents before calling the Conference together. This paper was referred to a committee of five, which reported that there was nothing in it important or necessary for the General Conference to consider.

Colonel Barge then presented a paper in which he requested that the General Conference should take such action as, that in case of a merger of the two churches, any annual conference desiring not to go into the union should remain undisturbed and that the property, and vested interests of such conference should not be disturbed by any action of the united church. It was referred to a committee which reported that no annual conference has a right to make such a request and that the General Conference has no authority to grant such a request.

The Basis of Union was then read. Before any further action was taken the president took occasion to express his decision on certain questions as follows:

1. Does the special session legally call together the regular members of the General Conference as organized in 1912, or, is a new election required?

2. Does the fact that the Baltimore Conference adjourned sine die, in any manner affect the organic continuity of the General Conference?

To these questions the following answers were made:

1. On all grounds, constitutional and legislative, the organic composition of the General Conference remains the same as in the regular session of 1912. The members, as then recorded, are the members of the special session, without re-election; and the election of new members would be illegal.

The reasons for concludidng that the special session must be composed of the regular members of the General Conference are, in part, as follows:

a. Our Methodist Protestant Church is an ecclesiastical republic, modeled after the United States government by the declared intent of its founders; and our General Conference is our national Congress, its members being elected in terms of four years.

b. The organization of our General Conference throughout, with all its boards, commissions and officers, is in harmony with this interpretation.

c. The Constitution, Article 16, Section 1, clearly names extraordinary meetings of the General Conference "special sessions," thus simply and plainly distinguishing them from the regular and quadrennial session.

d. Our Constitution, in every case of important elections, makes provisions not only for the election itself, but for the manner of that election. The electoral college is prescribed for the election of representatives in the General Conference and when the convention now extinct was provided for, the law clearly stated that election thereto should proceed in the same manner as for the General Conference. But in providing for the special session, no provision whatever is made for an election or the manner thereof, clearly indicating that the members of the regular General Conference were to serve in the special session.

e. This special session is clearly made to signify a meeting of the General Conference by a resolution of the General Conference itself. (See minutes of the session of 1912.)

2. The adjournment of the Baltimore Conference, sine die, in no manner affects the organic continuity of the General Conference. Authorities of church and state alike, as well as the highest American experts in parliamentary law, are fully agreed that when an assembly has made provision for another meeting, adjournment sine die cannot possibly dissolve that assembly. And, in this case, we have both the constitutional provision, authorizing two-thirds of the whole number of the annual conferences to hold a special session, and a legislative provision, also, in the special resolution passed at Baltimore in 1912.

Has any annual conference the legal right to forbid its General Conference representatives to attend the special session?

No annual conference has the legal right to forbid its General Conference representatives to attend the special session. The annual conference may properly give specific instructions to its representatives as to any question within the scope of their General Conference duties. But when the annual conference has chosen its representative in the General Conference, through the prescribed agency of the Electoral College, those representatives become at once broadly denominational in character and each member becomes a responsible unit of the General Conference. And the larger claims and duties of representatives must follow the lines of larger jurisdicton. The annual conference, if permitted to exercise such power, would supplant the General Conference in one of its most elementary prerogatives; for the discipline makes the General Conference the judge of the qualifications of its own membership.

If the annual conference is competent to interpret law for the General Conference, or question its jurisdiction, then the quarterly conference is competent to interpret law for the annual conference and to question its jurisdiction. The parallel holds good; and the annual conference which pursues such a course is sowing broadcast in its own territory, the seeds of anarchy and confusion. It must be said, therefore, that the action of any annual conference forbidding its General Conference representatives to attend the special session, is null and void; and it becomes the loyal duty of such representatives to perform the mission assigned to them by the Electoral College.

These answers by the president of the General Conference were submitted to the executive committee, on the day the Conference met, and were approved. The action of the executive committee was submitted to the Conference and approved and endorsed as the law of the church.

The representatives of the Georgia Annual Conference, after having two papers rejected, decided that they could no longer continue in the body, and asked that their names be stricken from the list of representatives to the General Conference. The Conference decided that it had no authority whatever to strike the names of any delegates from that list.

The Conference then adjourned until Thursday morning. During almost the entire time of the forenoon session the committee on the "Basis of Union" was engaged in formulating its conclusions, and it was near the noon hour when they were ready to report. Their report was read and a motion made that it be printed before any further action was taken.

After a very considerable amount of discussion the following committee's report was adopted, with a few slight verbal changes as follows:

Columbus, Ohio, July 16, 1914.

Your committee appointed to consider the report of our Commission on Union with the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, reports as follows:

WHEREAS, Our Commission on Church Union appointed by the General Conference to negotiate a basis of union with the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has met with a Commission from the Church of the United Brethren in Christ and has agreed upon the Basis of Union, which Basis of Union our Commission has reported to this sesion of the General Conference;

WHEREAS, in the submission of the report on the Basis of Union, we regard the work of our Commission to be complete, in so far as it pertains to the Union of the Methodist Protestant Church, with the Church of the United Brethren in Christ;

Therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Conference hereby accepts and adopts the Basis of Union agred upon by our Commision and the said Commission of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. That we thank the Commission for their painstaking efforts in acomplishing this great work.

Resolved, Second, That we create a special commission of fifteen members, consisting of seven laymen and seven ministers and the president of this General Conference as ex-officio chairman, whose duty it shall be to meet at the earliest possible date with the Commision of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ to consider the further details in the process of union. That all memorials from annual conferences to this General Conference bearing upon the subject of union with the Church of the United Brethren in Christ be referred to this Joint Commission to be considered by it.

Resolved, Third, That when the membership of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ shall have ratified the Basis of Union herein adopted, the president of this General Conference is authorized to confer with the proper authorities of the General Conference of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ as to time and place of meeting and when agreed upon the president is hereby authorized to call this General Conference in session at the time and place arranged and agreed upon for a meeting of the General Conference of the United Brethren in Christ, and that we request that the same be not earlier than December 1, 1914, nor later than May 31, 1915, and that when this Conference adjourns it adjourns to reconvene at the call of the president.

Resolved, Fourthly, That the following persons shall compose the Special Commision:

Laymen—R. T. Pickens, North Carolina; J. F. Howe, Missouri; J. E. Peterson, Iowa; Horace Link, North Illinois; Dr. Simmons, Arkansas; A. T. Merriman, Indiana; Ely D. Miller, Michigan.

Before the close of the discussion, however, President Davis delivered a somewhat lengthy address, in which he reviewed the action which had been taken by the Commission and previous General Conferences and somewhat traced its history, and stated that the two churches agreed on four general principles as follows: "The mutual rights of the ministers and the laity"; "the equality of all ministers"; "the right of private judgment in questions of interpretation;" and "the right of appeal."

He said also that the United Brethren had conceded four points to the Methodist Protestant Church such as to allow two years connection to candidates for the itineracy; the word superintendent for bishops, etc.

At one time during the General Conference the president was asked to decide whether it was proper for this General Conference to take up other questions than the subject for which the Conference had been specifically called. His decision was that no other subjects could be taken up for consideration.

During the vote on the resolutions the delegates from Louisiana said that Article 10 in our Articles of Religion had been omitted in the Basis of Union, and that unless this article was embodied in the church articles of faith, they could not consent to become a part of the united church. The General Conference decided that it had no authority at this time to consider this question but that it was entirely proper that all such subjects could be sent to the United Conference when it meets for adjustment or adoption.

The spirit of the Conference was manifested very strongly in favor of union, and when the final vote was taken it was declared to be unanimously, but several who were present did not vote and by that, presumably, they expressed their dissent from this action.—The Methodist Protestant.

"COME UNTO ME."

In any kind of trouble or perplexity the first thing to do, not the second or the sixth, is to go to Christ.

It seems hard to get away from the notion that something else should be done first, before having our interview with him. We say to ourselves: "Now I must think this thing through; then I will pray about it." We fancy: "I must wait till I know whether or not that thing was wrong; then I shall ask to be forgiven." Or, how often! we say: "I must attend to this urgent matter first; then I will turn my mind toward Christ."

But always the first thing to do is to think of him. "Looking unto Jesus" should be the constant attitude of heart. Are you afraid something you did was wrong? Don't puzzle over it first and then ask him. Ask him first, and he will tell you. Are you afraid you have not yet been pardoned for some transgression? Don't try to figure out whether or not the sin has been forgiven; don't think you must get the assurance that it has been forgiven before you can talk with Christ again. Talk to him right away, first, before you find out anything. Ask him quickly to forgive you now, if he has not done so before. You will see him smiling upon you then, and the peace of forgiveness will steal into your anxious soul. Are you afraid there are unclean things still in your heart, which have not yet been removed by his grace? Don't struggle and fret and try to look back into your own brain. You can't do that. There's no light in your brain. All the light is in the sun. So all spiritual light is in Christ. Look straight at him and ask him if your heart is clean. He will show you if it is not. And while he is showing you you will be saying: "Lord, if thou wilt thou canst make me clean." And he will answer (you can hear him plainly if you listen quietly), "I will. Be thou made clean."

Are you perplexed about some course of action? Pray first, not second. Look at him; ask him about it; do your thinking and weighing and planning while you are looking at him. It is all the difference between finding your way in broad daylight or groping in the dark. Are you mourning grievously about something; has some real, some bitter sorrow come? Don't try first to adjust yourself to it; don't try to understand it; don't try to bear it. Look at him. You will see the rainbow through your tears. You will catch his smile again, a sad smile this time, because he is sorry for you. You will know it has hurt him, too. So shall you bear the sorrow together, and before you know it you will be singing. Later you will learn that grief has brought you some gift, some gain, some power you could have found no other way. But even before you learn this, you may come to thank him for the sorrow because it drove you closer to him and made you better acquainted with him.

No matter what the calamity, the perplexity, the condemnation, the need, look at him first; talk with him first; come to him—now.—Christian Herald.

TELL THE TRUTH.

Newspaper readers have been frequently horrified during recent weeks by the news of fresh discoveries of perjury in the events leading to the retrial of two prominent murder cases. One cannot read these accounts without being appalled at the ease with which some men and women will lie, even under oath. It makes the search for justice almost hopeless to have the way blocked by such a tangle of lies, contradictions, fresh confessions, and further lies.

There is urgent need for some new kind of insistent exhortation to tell the truth. A child ought to be brought up to shrink from lying as he shrinks from death. There ought to be a horror at any sort of deception or evasion, or anything that will, even by silence itself, mislead another. New laws are, indeed, being made and enforced, compelling manufacturers and merchants to tell the truth in advertising their wares. New laws are needed to compel newspapers to tell the truth even in cases that could not be covered by suits for libel. It is the newspaper man's business as well as the business man's obligation to tell the truth, and a lie ought to make a man a criminal.

It has been considered a deadly insult to be called a liar. It is a worse insult, an insult to oneself and to God, to be a liar. "Buy the truth, and sell it not." Cling to it, live by it. Think it; speak it; live it. Every lie is a step on the way of death. Lies make personal, social, business, political, judicial, ecclesiastical, national life unsound and unsafe. Let us build our lives, our homes, our churches and our commonwealth upon the Truth. —Christian Herald.

Belief in prayer and faith in a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God are far more general than the world imagines. This is the kind of faith the very simplicity of which confounds unbelief. To the Christian, it is the most natural thing in the world that he should take all his needs and his troubles to his Father, asking him in the name of his dear Son to give the help he has promised to all who come in faith, nothing doubting. And why not in sickness as well as in health? Did not God hear David when in his distress the king prayed to him who "forgiveth all thine iniquities and healeth all they diseases"? Many times in the Gospels is the fact emphasized that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick." Countless thousands to-day can testify that he is still the same prayer-answering God.

The English committee, which was appointed in October, 1911, examined many witnesses, and while there was a wide difference in detail, the mass of evidence submitted showing the power of prayer in sickness was convincing proof of the fact that the Lord's hand is not shortened, and that he is ever the same, ready to help those who trust in him.

This whole attractive subject is one familiar. They believe in prayer, and they believe also, in the great majority of cases, that they do right in applying the remedies at hand and asking him "who knoweth all our infirmities" to bless the means so employed. Then it becomes their duty to give him the glory, by gratefully acknowledging before the whole world the blessing received.—Christian Herald.

FOR A GREAT COMMONWEALTH.

From history we can learn that liberty and life were a unit, and that there was suffering wherever a people did not have liberty. The idea prevails that there ought to be slavery, and that some people ought to be under bondage so as to make greater advantages for others, but those who want slavery do not want to be the bondmen.

God hates slavery and oppression and he heard the groanings of Israel when they were under bondage in Egypt, and he took them out from that suffering state by the hand of Moses. After Israel were made safe on liberty's side of the Red Sea they were all a unit. Israel on the safe side of the Red Sea were a nation at once, and were the greatest nation that the world had ever seen. They were not called a rich people, but they were not poor; they had been poor in Egypt, and were all poor slaves—but after they were rescued so wonderfully from under the yoke of bondage they were established in liberty, and were all common people, and were in shape to enjoy their wealth. They were the greatest commonwealth that the world had ever seen. After they had successfully crossed over the bed of the Red Sea, dry shod, they became at once a rich commonwealth.

But they were not rich in money and lands and houses, but rich by being a united people under God. God allowed their strange case and then gave them deliverance for a great purpose, and we may assume that one great purpose was to show the necessity of mutual rights.

By having mutual rights throughout the congregation, all the people could be of one mind, and could be completely united. They were as a family, and were a right big family, being about two millions of people. If we would have safe government, we must live as one family.

Being numerous, and having many millions inside of a great nation, need not cause complication, but tryanny and ignorance have always come in the way. Moses was a very wise man, and being meek and large hearted, had nothing of tyranny in his disposition, as we read: "Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men that were upon the face of the earth." Moses was made responsible for the welfare of the host under his charge, and he was well able to be so responsible, because he had the grace of God, and was so wise and humble. Moses did not try to make wealth for himself, but he did his utmost to look after the interests of the people.

Israel must get from under bondage, and be free in order to worship God and educate and become intelligent. No people can get to their best while being enslaved, but all people have need of liberty in order to educate and enjoy life. What we usually term riches is not the thing to create wisdom and happiness, but a condition free of embarrassment is.

The millions of people who were living in the wilderness were not an idle people—and were not out there loafing. They were there engaged in the work of education and were there forty years.

It appears that Israel did not overwork, —but some of you do overwork, but you do not over educate. The common people do not educate enough, and many poor people have no chance to educate at all, and for this trouble other parties are more responsible than they are. Perhaps you intelligent men and women, who are fairly educated, are rather more responsible for the illiteracy of the very poor than are the rich. The vastly rich are not in shape to see the needs of the very poor people, nor are they able to see your real needs. They are not much in shape to see the good of liberty for the masses. If you are using the means of life and light in a way that it is your privilege to do, you are gaining knowledge such as the vastly rich have not got.

The children of the common people, those who are well to do, are in a safer place in life than are the children of the vastly rich. These plain facts go to prove that it is not best for a man's family to become very rich and to get in shape to have nothing to do but to take pleasure out of the world, because such a life tends to soften, to degenerate, as the Bible teaches: "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth."

Common people are God's choice of people and are his ideal for society. The Son of God made first choice to visit the poorest of people, but not that he wanted the people to be poor, but he helped the poor to relieve them so as to help them up. His mission was to preach the gospel to the poor so as to help them up to a happy life. Circumstances and the thousands of evidences go to prove that it is best for all the people to be common people. If all were alike, and no matter how well-to-do, all would then be rich, and then we, the people, would have the riches that God wants us to have.

God picked up a host of suffering slaves, and took them from under the iron hands of tyranny and carried them "on angels' wings" out from Egypt, and put them on the safe side of the great Red Sea, and fed them on angel's food. After they reached the privilege of living on the bread of heaven they were all common people, and were a rich people, were a commonwealth that was just rich enough, and yet they were a common people, had all things in common. God for a great example before the vain world took his people away from the rule of wealth, and put them in place for the rule of the commonwealth. W. F. Grabs.

HOW SOME FAMOUS SONGS WERE WRITTEN.

Hood's touching lyric, "The Song of the Shirt," was the work of an evening. Its author was prompted to write it by the condition of thousands of working women in the city of London. The effect of its production was foreseen by two persons—the poet's wife and Mark Lemon, editor of Punch.

"Now mind, Tom, mind my words," said his devoted wife. "This will tell wonderfully. It is one of the best things you have ever written."

Mr. Lemon, looking over his letters one morning, opened an envelope enclosing a poem which the writer said had been rejected by three London journals. He begged the editor to consign it to the wastebasket if it was not suitable for Punch, as the author "was sick of the sight of it." The poem was signed "Tom Hood," and it was entitled "The Song of the Shirt."

It was submitted to the weekly meeting of the editors, several of whom opposed its publication as unsuitable to the pages of a comic journal. Mr. Lemon, however, was so firmly impressed with its beauty that he published it on Dec. 16, 1843.

"The Song of the Shirt" trebled the sale of the paper, and created a profound sensation throughout Great Britain. People of every class were moved by its pathos. It was chanted by ballad singers in the streets of London, and drew tears from the eyes of princes. Some years after the author's death the English people erected a monument over his grave. The rich gave guineas, the laborers and sewing women gave shillings and pence. Sculptured on it is the inscription devised by himself, "He sung the song of the shirt."

"The Old Oaken Bucket" was written more than seventy years ago by a New York printer named Samuel Woodworth. He was in the habit of dropping into a noted drinking saloon kept by one Mallory. One day, after drinking a glass of brandy and water, he smacked his lips and declared that Mallory's brandy was superior to any drink he had ever tasted.

"No," said Mallory, "you are mistaken. There was a drink which, in the estimation of us both, far surpassed this."

"What was that?" incredulously asked Woodworth.

"The fresh water we used to drink from the old oaken bucket that hung in the well after returning from the fields on a sultry day."

"Very true," assented Woodworth, teardrops glistening in his eyes.

Retiring to his printing office, he seated himself at his desk and began to write. In half an hour

"The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket,
The moss-covered bucket, that hung in the well," was embalmed in an inspiring song that has become as familiar as a household word.

General W. H. Lytle wrote the famous poem, "I Am Dying, Egypt, Dying," at a late hour one night, after retiring from a social entertainment. Taking up a copy of Shakespeare, he opened it at the play of "Antony and Cleopatra," and the very first words that met his eyes were Antony's dying speech, "I am dying, Egypt, dying." He was so much impressed with them at the moment that he picked up a pen and, as he expressed it, "scribbled off the lines". It was soon after published in the "Cincinnati Commercial", and created a profound and deserved sensation.

"We Are Coming, Father Abraham," one of the most popular songs among the soldiers during the Civil War, was written by Prof. Luther Emerson. It was in 1862, after the President's call for 300,000 troops, and when he had read the call, Professor Emerson spent the evening in composing the famous war song, which at once caught the poplar fancy and had an immense sale.

Pope's ode, called "The Dying Christian to His Soul," has a history of its own which is curious and interesting. The Emperor Hadrian, whose reign extended into the second century after Christ, was a cultivator of literature in a desultory sort of way, and while upon his deathbed composed a little address to his soul, half playful and half pathetic, containing no thought above the level of heathenism, and yet so graceful in expression that it has survived pretty much all of the more ponderous works of his contemporaries. The serious aspect of Hadrian's "Animula" profoundly impressed Pope, who wrote a paraphrase commencing "Vital spirit of heavenly fire."

Some time later, in 1735, Pope published a metrical translation of it as follows:

"Ah, fleeting spirit, wandering fire!
That long has warmed my tender breast,
Must thou no more this frame inspire?
No more a cheerful pleasing guest?

"Whither, oh whither, art thou flying?
To what dark, undiscovered shore?
Thou seem'st all trembling, shivering, dying,
Thy wit and humor are no more."

The verses of the heathen emperor were by Pope baptized into the sentiments of Christianity, and they have since become the best known of all his writings.

When Thomas Moore made his passage down the St. Lawrence River, he jotted down in pencil upon the fly-leaf of a volume he was reading both the words and the melody of his Canadian boat song, which were suggested to him by the rude chants of the boatmen. The wind was so unfavorable that the passage occupied five days from Kingston to Montreal, and they were obliged to row all the way. The book was subsequently mislaid, and Moore did not find it for several years. Finally a young lady, into whose hands the volume had fallen, met the poet, and by chance spoke of the song and quoted the familiar lines,

"Faintly as tolls the evening chime
Our voices keep tune and our oars keep time."

Moore at once recognized the air as his own creation, made a copy of the lines, explained how they came to be written, and let the young lady retain the volume containing the original. The song was soon after published and has always been a favorite with the lovers of plaintive verse and romantic imagery.

The story of "Annie Laurie" is thus told in a letter to the "Chicago Herald: "The famous song, that is sung by all singers of the present day, I am informed is a mystery as to the author. I was raised on the next farm to James Laurie, Annie Laurie's father. I was acquainted with both her and her father, and also with the author of the song. Knowing these facts, I have been requested by my friends to give the public the benefit of my knowledge, which I have consented to do. Annie Laurie was born in 1827, and was about seventeen years old when the incident occurred which gave rise to the song bearing her name. James Laurie, Annie's father, was a farmer who lived on and owned a very large farm called Thaglestown, in Dumfrieshire, Scotland. He hired a great deal of help, and among those he employed was a man by the name of Wallace to act as foreman, and, while in his employ, Mr. Wallace fell in love with Annie, which fact her father soon discovered, and forthwith discharged him. He went to his home, which was in Maxwelton, and was taken sick the very night he reached there, and the next morning, when Miss Laurie heard of it, she came to his bedside and waited on him until he died, and on his deathbed he composed the song entitled 'Annie Laurie.' "

The poet Cowper, while in a state of mental derangement which plunged him into the depths of despondency, resolved to drown himself in the Thames. Accordingly he ordered a coachman, who was well acquainted with London, to drive him to Blackfriars Bridge. Unaccountably the man drove him all over the city without being able to find that locality. Whereupon Cowper's melancholy mood changed, and he directed the driver to take him home. Having reached his room, he composed that immortal hymn,

"God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform;
He plants His footsteps on the sea,
And rides upon the torm."

Poets find inspiration everywhere, and are often affected by what the ordinary observer passes carelessly by. Longfellow picked up a torn piece of newspaper one day, and the word "excelsior" happened to meet his eye. Straightway his imagination was aroused. Taking an old letter from his pocket, which chanced to be one from Charles Sumner, he crowded the back with verses. This was the first draft of that famous poem "Excelsior."

—Fred Myron Colby, in Zion's Herald.

—Bro. Andrews returned from Henderson last week and reported the death of Bro. Henry T. Powell, who held the position of municipal judge. He was ill three weeks of typhoid fever. This death is a very sad one, not only because it removes from our church and from the city a prominent and useful member, but more so because he leaves a young family. At the last Henderson Conference we were entertained in their home and learned to know our good brother as we had not known him before. The report of his death fills us with sadness and a peculiar sense of loss. May God comfort the bereaved ones!

OBSERVATIONS BY THE WAY.

Monticello.

Monticello commands a vision and a prospect far and wide. The mountain is nearly six hundred feet high and the valleys below with their wealth of gold and green present a pleasing view to the eyes of the beholder. One and one half miles to the east is the historic Rivanna on each side of which were encamped opposing armies during the civil war. It was here where the Southern army lying in camp played and sang one night the old song "Dixie" and those in blue answered back with "Yankee Doodle," where after several southern and northern airs had been flung back and forth in defiance, the southern band finally began playing the air "Home Sweet Home". Soon the men in blue heard the notes and every man in both armies joined together in a song in which both friend and foe may join and find comfort:

" 'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble there's no place like home;
A charm from the skies seems to welcome us there,
Which seek through the world is ne'er met with elsewhere."

The whole of the Rivanna valley lies at the foot of Mount Monticello and adown the valley rolls its silver stream with the beauties of orchard, meadow, and growing crops along its banks. And much of the slope of this mountain and other mountains nearby is covered with orchards where the trees are laden with luscious fruit.

To the west a view extending nearly fifty miles and covering an expanse of several hundred square miles and we see the peaks of the Blue Ridge. To the north the view presented covers miles and miles of the finest land in Virginia. To the south, about three or four miles away Patterson mountain and other hills of less pretentious height obstruct the view except that they give the beholder a panorama of mountain scenery that is bewitching to look upon. The tints of blue are so interwoven and mingled with the green of mountain forest and valley that they give a hazy appearance of peculiar beauty.

Jefferson inherited from his father nineteen hundred acres of land which possessions he increased until he owned five thousand acres by the time of the opening of the Revolution. Among his inherited possessions was Monticello mountain.

While yet a school boy at William and Mary he had his servants leveling the top of Mount Monticello for his future home that he was planning to build. In 1769 he began work on his new home, but so busy and so much engaged was he in public affairs that it was 1801 before the last nail was driven and the last coat of paint was placed on Monticello and the home was completed. So perfect were the plans for this home made by Jefferson himself that only one change was made in any important particular during all these thirty and two years of building. Seven years were spent from 1762 to 1769 in preparations to build. Thirty two years were spent in building, and Jefferson's account books show that the actual money cost of the home was $7,200.00.

In looking about the house we are struck with Jefferson's nice idea of privacy and rest. Monticello is a restful looking home. The servants' quarters are all away from the main residence as is also the kitchen. Here in the kitchen the food was prepared and through one of those ingeniously constructed underground passages the food was brought to and served in the dining room. The visitor scarcely ever caught sight of a servant. It was only through these two underground passages that the servants communicated with the house.

There is, in addition to these two large underground passages, deep and high enough for the tallest man to walk erect, another small secret underground passage a little more than large enough for a man to go through on his all fours. In those days of insecurity, of danger and war, it was well to have a secret way of escape so that if an enemy came upon a man unexpectedly, the man might have at least one chance of escape. It is said that when Tarleton came with his legions to Monticello to capture Jefferson, through this secret passage did Jefferson crawl and make his escape and Tarleton went back to Cornwallis without having captured his bird. They show us still the track made by Tarleton's horse on one of the steps of Monticello. Had it not been that Jefferson escaped he might have been one of those to whom Benjamin Franklin referred when he said after they had signed the Declaration of Independence in Independence Hall: "Gentlemen: we must all hang together or we will all hang apart." Jefferson escaped the fury of the British troops and lived to render his country still greater service.

In 1770 fire destroyed Shadwell, Jefferson's mother's home, and she came to live at Monticello.

Monticello is not without its romance. Jefferson, like other men, fell in love. He had gone from Monticello to meet the lady of his choice, having left strict orders that the servants should have all things ready against his return. The wedding was solemnized and Martha Wayles Skelton, a lovely and charming widow of twenty-two years, became Mrs. Jefferson. But on their trip to Monticello a heavy snow storm overtook them and by the time they arrived at Charlottesville the roads were almost impassable. The delay caused by the storm had thrown Jefferson late and the servants at Monticello waited in vain for their lord's return. Night came on and still the master of the house was not there. The appointed feast was cleared from the table in the dining hall and the servants after waiting and watching until a late hour retired to rest.

But love never freezes out, and Jefferson and his newly wedded bride mounted their horses, and, leaving their carriage behind, they set out for the home at Monticello some three miles distant, and finally arrived after midnight. The fires had all gone out. It was bitter cold. But the young benedict and his bride found some bread and a few other edibles and, after dining, retired for the night, without even awaking the servants. What must have been the servants' surprise the next morning, when they arose to find their master and their new mistress at home!

None of the numerous offices that Jefferson held while in the service of his country paid him a living salary. And too, his estates being left in the hands of servants, began to depreciate in value. The depreciation in money values also had made it hard for Jefferson to make ends meet. So he had to borrow money and borrow again. In his old days he left his estate in the hands of his devoted grandson, Jefferson Randolph, and this young man did everything in his power to keep things together. And when Jefferson died he did not really know the condition of his finances. When Jefferson died in 1826 it was found that his debts were forty thousand dollars in excess of the value of his property. This deficit was made good by Jefferson Randolph after some years of exertion and toil and the estate still remained in the hands of the family. But finally, through mismanagement, the estate passed out of the hands of the Jefferson family and it is now owned by Jefferson M. Levy who usually makes it his summer residence. And now, this home, the mecca of all American hearts, can only be visited at the will of a New York lawyer and none see within the walls without his special permission.

JEWISH RABBI PLEADS FOR BETTER RELATIONS WITH CHRISTIANS.

Rabbi Alexander Lyon, of Brooklyn, N. Y., spoke in Greensboro on Monday night, having been invited by the First Presbyterian Church and by the Jewish Synagogue. He spoke of the Jews and the Christians as the two superior classes of religionists in our country, and deplored the fact that there is prejudice and animosity between the two. He said there ought to be sympathy and fraternity because of all that is common to the two people. He referred especially to the fact that both worship the same Heavenly Father and both in this land have a common country—the only country the Jews have found since their dispersion that they can regard as their home.

He told how prejudice against the Jews prevented their obtaining employment, how it prevented their obtaining fair trials in court, and how it affects even little children on the play-grounds. His own little son had come in one day with his eyes full of tears because a Catholic woman not far away had forbidden her boy to play with the Lyon boy on the ground that the latter was a Jew. The little boy could not understand why that should make any difference.

Rabbi Lyon attributed the feeling against the Jews to the fact that they had crucified Christ. He admitted that some Jews were responsible for the crucifixion of Jesus, but did not think it fair to hold all Jews, even to this late day, responsible for it.

He said that he and his wife had been excluded from a number of hotels in this country for no other reason than that they are Jews.

Mr. Lyon is a rather pleasing speaker, and looks about as much like a Gentile as a Jew. He has just delivered a course of lectures at the State University in Chapel Hill.

If you don't see the report from your school in a reasonable time please drop me a card. The other week a contribution was lost in the mail and a prompt inquiry saved it.

Let contributions come in promptly so the Sunday schools will not think I am careless in reporting.

Let our pastors and Sunday school officers inform the people of the Children's Home and its needs.

The contributor sending in the contribution of $100.00 this week said her pastor had given a talk on the Home and its work and she had become interested. Will some one else do likewise?

We are in need of a matron. Please recommend a good woman.

Died.

Mary Clay Snotherly was born August 14, 1844, died June 29, 1914. Sister Snotherly was a daughter of R. E. Miller, Esq., and the wife of one of our pioneers of Methodism, William Snotherly, who survives her. She professed religion while young and joined the M. E. Church, South, it being most convenient to her, but after her marriage to Bro. Snotherly, she moved her membership to the M. P. Church with her husband, where she remained faithful until the end came. Sister Snotherly was an invalid for about 12 years, because of which she was confined to her room. During all these afflictions she was patient and trusting, never murmuring or complaining; but ever expressing the fact of her submission to His will.

One life has gone out from us seemingly without a shadow. We have never heard any one say aught against Sister Snotherly, but their mouths are filled with words of praise and commendation. Her life seems to have been in keeping with the perfect life. To her, we believe the end was joyous.

She leaves to mourn their loss four sisters, one of whom is the wife of our beloved John Snotherly of Albemarle; one brother, a husband and five children, one of whom is J. H. Snotherly, well known in our Conference. To all these we extend our heart-felt sympathies.

July 12, death entered the home of Mrs. May E. Evans and claimed her beloved sister, age seventeen years. She leaves two sisters and two brothers. She has gone to join her father and mother and four sisters gone on before. She was a member of the Methodist Protestant church five years. She often spoke of heaven during her sickness and prayed to die and go home to heaven where she could meet with Jesus and her loved ones. She talked as if she could see Jesus with her. She would often call on Jesus to help her bear her pain and to open the way that she might pass through. She requested her friends and loved ones to meet her in heaven. She made her home with her sister Florence until her death, then she went to make her home with her sister, Mrs. May Evans at Charlotte, N. C. She was brought back to Bessemer and her remains were laid to rest at Smyrna Church July 13. We feel our loss is her eternal gain. Grieve not for Essie, for she is waiting for you at the pearly gates.

Siler City.

Our pastor, Rev. W. A. Ledford, has been away for a week, assisting Bro. Gerringer in a meeting. Rev. J. F. Dosier preached for him third Sunday night. We were glad to have Bro. Dosier preach for us.

Rev. C. L. Whitaker, of Asheboro, spent the latter part of the week here, and preached for us Friday night. We enjoyed his sermon very much indeed.

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard have been visiting Mrs. Pritchard's parents.

Rev. C. A. Cecil: We closed our meeting at Shelby last night after holding twelve days. The church much revived, quite a number of reclamations and six converts. We had good-sized congregations. Last night between 50 and 100 came forward and gave me their hands and said they intended to live a better life and live right. Now if they will stick to it, and I believe they intend to do it. This makes my round of special meetings on this circuit, and I feel we are in work condition now. Pray for us.

I preached at Harris Chapel last Sunday at 11 A. M. The attendance was rather small. At 8 P. M. the children's service was held. The children did well. There are a number of children and young people here who have talents worth developing. The collection amounted to $1.85.

The special meeting is set to begin here on the fifth Sunday in August. Rev. G. W. Holmes is our expected help.

As this place hasn't had any report for a little while, you shouldn't became discouraged and think we are do-nothing people. For we are very busy indeed and are progressing very nicely. We held our children's Day service the last third Sunday. The children all did well and the singing band did excellently well with their new songs. Collection for the day was $13.26. We are very proud of our kind superintendent, Mr. C. H. Hill. Much credit is due to him and to Mrs. Hill for the training of the children. To me there is nothing sweeter than to see the little girls and boys have the love of God in their hearts and courage enough to get up before an audience and tell them of Jesus. I pray that they may grow stronger in faith and always be ready to help in any good cause.

We were glad to have our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, with us. He gave us a helpful talk. We ask the prayers of the kind editor and many readers that we may be an unbroken band around dear old Piney Grove. Much success to the Herald.

We held our protracted meeting the third Sunday in July and we had a good meeting; the Lord was with his people in convicting and converting power. While not a large number was converted, many felt the gentle wooings of the Spirit and were revived and made to rejoice in the Saviour's love. Our earnest Pastor had secured Bro. T. A. Williams and all our people were delighted with him as our help in the meeting; he did some most earnest preaching and was full of the love of God. Our pastor, Bro. Kennett, always gets good help in his meeting. Meeting closed Thursday with seven joining the church.

We are not holding a special children's day service, but are planning a Township Convention of all Sunday schools in the township the first Sunday in September, Saturday and Sunday. Each Sunday school in the township will be given time for recitations and song. We have secured the services of Senator A. D. Ivie of Leaksville to make us a lecture on Sunday school work. Our convention will be held at Palestine church.

July 12 we had our Sunday school, after which Bro. Hulin gave us a good sermon, which he never fails to do. He was going from there to attend the burial service of Mr. Isaac Doby, an aged man of near Newsome. We had a very good congregation; there were several visitors from other churches whom we were glad to see.

I am always glad to see the Herald. I love to read it, especially the letters from the churches. It makes us think more of our duty toward one another. My prayer is that we may all do our duty. There is something that we all can do. I can not see how people can do their duty and stay away from church when there is nothing in the way. I am always glad when the time comes to go to church.

Dear Bro. Cecil: The third quarterly conference met at Mt. Pleasant on the 25th of this month; all the churches were not represented but the busines was transacted in the usual way. The finances have been coming up better this quarter; we have had children's day service at two of the churches, Mt. Pleasant and Piney Grove. Collection: Piney Grove, $13.00; Mt. Pleasant, $3.43. This makes $29.43 we have collected. I believe we will pay every cent of every claim. I know they can if they will and I believe they will. The work is progresing nicely; we have some very enthusiastic people, while we have some that are not fit for wedge wood, but have much to be proud of and thank God for the men and women on this work that stand for the right and oppose the wrong wherever they meet it in any form and who go to Sunday school and preaching through hot and cold; but the sad thing about it is the world do not appreciate them as they should; if they did they would come to church.

Our special meeting will begin the first Sunday in August at Mt. Zion. Bro. J. W. Hulin will be my pulpit help. The meeting will begin at Canaan third Sunday in August. Bro. A. D. Shelton will be my help at this place. I ask all the readers to pray for the success of these meetings that many souls may be saved. Praying that the blessings of Heaven may rest upon all the brethren, that the Master's cause may spread this year as never before, fraternally,

Our special meeting began the third Sunday and continued until Friday night. Rev. W. A. Ledford assisted our pastor and preached some interesting and helpful sermons. He and Mr. Gerringer certainly worked earnestly and faithfully and we feel sure much good was accomplished—more perhaps than we now realize. There were nine who professed, three of whom joined the church. Rev. Mr. Loy as with us one day and preached an excellent sermon; one which we enjoyed very much.

Our Sunday schol is doing very nicely at present, also our prayer meeting. We have not had children's day service yet but may do so later.

Pray for us that we may become more interested in our church's work and do more for the Lord than we have been doing. Roella Pegg, Reporter.

Mount Zion.

Last Sunday I went up to that beautiful church to worship, to hear the preaching, the singing, and to see the people.

Bro. D. R. Williams, from High Point, is there helping Bro. Hunter preach. The above occasion was the first for me to hear Mr. Williams preach and to get a sight of his idea of hand shaking, etc. The "etc." is no little matter for this subject. Looking out at the window, the first I had of the new preacher was to see him heartily shaking hands, soon as he landed from the automobile—and they have several of the swift helps near Mt. Zion, owned by men who are themselves of that church. The new fashioned machines can be made to serve a great purpose by being made to serve and not to be allowed to break the sacredness of God's holy day—but many of them are being run too recklessly and on Sunday.

In connection with the preaching, the preacher told about a circumstance where revival was really stirred up. At a negro meeting, one of the white boys, on the outskirts of the congregation, offered a colored woman 25 cents to fire up and to start up a revival at once—but she suggested that she would need a whole $1; and the boys raised the whole amount needed. At once the revivalist walked and talked through the congregation, and soon got to shouting, and soon had the shouting and the noise up, such as the boys paid their money to hear. Seriously, perhaps there was no very off thing about that revival effort, unless it was in connection with the mean $1.

I liked the religious hand-shake that the preacher ordered soon after the sermon. He divided it by three propositions. 1. All who have been, or are feeling too far back in the spiritual and desire interest in prayer, come and shake hands with the preachers. Some of the leading members went up at once and gave a hearty hand-shake, and the effect was very good. 2. All who desire the prayer of the church for renewal and revival, etc., "Come up and shake our hand"; and there was a great hand-shaking at once by half the congregation and more, as it appeared. 3. Sinners were then requested to come up and give their hands for prayer, and some went up. However, preaching has its great importance, and the people have need to hear.

While it may really be the thing to do for the pious colored person to stir up a revival, as noted above, and for our pastors to order a religious form of hand-shaking, there are other better means of grace. A number of years ago I had occasion to go up to Mt. Zion, (not at the first of the meeting, but on Sunday after the meeting had been going on for a whole week). When I got there the experience meeting was going on. I went in at once, not thinking of saying a word, but soon as I got inside of the door I felt the moving, and soon as I got seated I felt to say a few words too. The idea by the above reference to means of grace is to say that we have the means of grace at hand in such intelligent light that it is plain that singing and praying and testifying right at the starting up of a protracted meeting is rather first. Whenever a people meet at the place of prayer, the thing to do is to, at once go at singing and praying and testifying—if any have a testimony to make, and we know that is is a reasonable thing to make testimony, as to make effort to sing and to pray.

There were, as it seems, persons at Mt. Zion last Sunday morning, who should have made testimony.

W. F. Grabs.

P. S. The house of Mr. W. N. Brown is a regular home for the visiting people, and especially at meeting times, and I went there to dinner. The spring is at some distance from the house of Bro. Brown, but it is worth a trip to see and to drink from, when any visit that home. Many tall apple trees now full of fruit are to be seen surounding the house of Bro. Brown —and the trees and spring help very much to make the suroundings look like home. At the spring, near two generations ago, the funeral of the aged woman, then of that place, Mrs. Spainhower, was preached by the Rev. Michael Doub.

There are now many descendants of that mother and grandmother and great grandmother Spainhower, connected with the churches of Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.

Brother Brown and Sister Brown make hospitality for the many people who visit and abide at their house—and when we bid good-by and start away, the welcome is heartily extended by both as they say "Come again." W. F. G.

In Loving Memory of Our Sunday School Children.

Twice within the past few months our Sunday school has been saddened by the death of some of our children. The first to go was little Mary Adnil Killibrew. Although her home was not here, she was school here. She was a bright and faithful member; she was taken sick and died in one week. How we missed her in our Sunday school, but we know she is safe.

The second to go was Larry Tucker, who was taken to the Richmond hospital on June 22nd for an operation for appendicitis, was in a critical condition from the very first, and yet we all hoped so much for his recovery, but somehow our Heavenly Father saw fit to remove him. Larry was faithful to his Sunday school; when not present it was because of duties to perform and not to loaf around the streets as so many do. It is hard for us to drop his name from our roll; but we hope his death may be the means of his entire family consecrating their lives to the service of "Him who doeth all things well". We are Resolved, First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, believing that what He does is always right, though we may not understand it.

Resolved, Second, That we will follow their example of faithfulness to our Sunday school.

Resolved, Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the families of each of these children.

We had 257 in Sunday school last Sunday, and the offering amounted to $10. The attendance in the Baraca class was 81, and the offering from the same class was $7.12. It was the last day of the contest, which explains why there was such a large attendance and an increase in the offering.

There were no preaching services Sunday. The committee on pulpit supply failed to secure anyone to fill the pulpit.

On next Sunday, we will have a preaching service at 11:00 A. M. Rev. Mr. Satterfield, of the Second Presbyterian Church, this city, will occupy the pulpit At 8:00 P. M., there will be a special service for the Baraca and Philathea classes. The services will be under the auspices of the Baraca class of our school. Mr. F. L. Atkinson, of Greensboro, will deliver an address on the Baraca work. The other Baraca and Philathea classes of the city will be invited to attend.

The Sunday school is to have a picnic in a week or two. A committee was appointed last Sunday to secure a place and recommend a time for the picnic. This is an occasion looked forward to with much interest and anxiety by the children, and, to a certain extent, by all of us. It is a time when we can stop our work, leave our shops and stores, and spend an evening together in a social, happy way, forgetting the cares and worries of life. C. B. Way, Reporter.

Our work here is gradually gaining. We have recently received two good members at Fairview. The parsonage has been repaired, the front porch being refloored, and banistered, which adds a great deal to the outside appearance. We are also hoping to paint in the near future.

The attendance at Sunday school has averaged from 150 to 180 all this hot weather. Attendance at preaching services good, I think better than last year. We have received many tokens of kindness since our last report. I do not think one could ask for a kinder people than we have here. May the Lord bless and reward each one of them for all the kindness they have shown us.

Death made sad the home of Bro. Alek Lowder when on July 16 Bro. Lowder was called from earth to reward. The bereaved have our sympathy.

Our hearts were made sad, again today, when death claimed Bro. R. H. Scarboro. Bro. Scarboro was visiting his children here at the time of his death. Mrs. Mary Earnhart, his daughter, and Mr. W. H. Scarboro, his son, are members of our church here. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones. Edw. Suits.

We are still living, if we are not writing so often. Our Sunday school is still increasing in interest; we've had a larger number for the last two Sundays than we've had for some time.

I do hope the older people will take more interest and help more than they have been; this seems to be our greatest trouble in keeping up the interest we would like to see.

We had memorial services the third Sunday in June, and while the drouth kept us from having flowers, as we would have liked to have, we had a very good service anyway.

Our pastor made us an interesting talk before noon, and we decorated our graves that had been neatly cleaned off the day before, then we had dinner. At evening service a short sermon by our pastor, also a talk by Mr. Levi McAdams. We feel that it is our duty to have decoration day each year and we've decided to have it the third Sunday in May each year. Nothing shows our respect for our dead more than decoration day. May there be many more such days.

Our pastor preached one of the best sermons on last preaching day that we have ever heard him preach, and we want him to do that every time because we know he can.

Our meeting will be held the second Sunday in August, with Rev. J. R. Hutton as help; hope we will have a good deep revival as of old. It would do our hearts good to see a good old time revival, reaching each member and all sinners. Pray for us that we may have showers of blessing.

On last Saturday President Cecil came to Friendship church and preached a splendid sermon which was very appropriate for that occasion.

After the sermon we had recess for dinner. The dinner was fine and what that hungry crowd did for it was a plenty.

At about one thirty o'clock the organ sounded the notice and the largest number I ever saw at a quarterly conference assembled to transact business of quarterly conference, President Cecil in the chair. Business transacted in the main without a riffle.

It was found that Bro. W. J. Berrier had received the majority of votes and was therefore declared elected delegate to represent the work in the Annual Conference. Bro. C. L. Hedrick was elected alternate.

The quarterly conference laid an assessment to pay the expenses of delegate and pastor to Annual Conference. This has been done each year since I have been pastor and I am sure I have appreciated it. The fourth quarterly conference will convene in Lexington. We return our most hearty thanks to Bro. Cecil for the much needed help he gave us.

We found old Friendship in a new dress, cement doorsteps, large new double doors, inside changed, roof and walls painted. Friendship is now neat and nice. It would, indeed, be hard to find a more faithful little band of church-members. They are a unit in good works.

Sunday, 11 A. M., our special meeting commenced with a beautiful children's day service. The children did excellently, after which a short address was made by pastor. Collection was $11.22—splendid for this church. Pastor preached to a full house in the afternoon.

Rev. Jesse E. Pritchard reached Lexington this A. M. on No. 11 and we were soon en route for Friendship. Found a good congregation waiting. Bro. Pritchard preached two good sermons to large and attentive audiences. Interest good. We are looking for a good meeting.

Yours truly, H. L. Powell.

We held our special meeting last week. Our pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, did all of the preaching, except on Tuesday, when Rev. Mr. Canipe, of the M. E. Church, dropped in and gave us a most impressive sermon. Mr. Bethea is what we call an old-time Gospel preacher. The word had effect and the truth sank deep into the hearts of many who attended the services. The church was greatly benefited and revived. Several conversions and reclamations. The attendance was better than I have ever seen it. People of other churches came in, and we all worked together in one great spirit, and indeed it was a glorious meeting.

We were glad to have with us on Wednesday one of our former pastors,, Rev. R. M. Andrews, of Greensboro. On Monday, during intermission, the third quarterly meeting was held. Every church on the charge was represented. Mr. Ollie Powell, of Mt. Carmel, was elected delegate to Annual Conference.

We had our children's sday the second Sunday morning. We had some fine recitations and the singing was great.

The protracted meting began in the afternoon with our pastor, Bro. Gerringer, in the pulpit: he preached a fine sermon. The church was filled both morning and evening. The meeting continued until Friday night. Rev. Geo. Curry, from Burlington, was Bro. Gerringer's help; he preached some fine sermons. We all learned to love him and hope he can come into our community again. We wish him much success in his work.

There was not as much revival as we had hoped to see, but it was not the preachers' fault, for I think they did their part and I hope that much good may yet come from it. I know some were benefited, if not all. Reporter.

July 24.

Asheville.

The last of February the Trustees, in order to make possible the completion of the church, bonded themselves for $1,000, the money to be repaid in two installments of $500 each, the whole amount to be paid within six months. It was an act of heroism, a test of faith. This body of men, so determined to have a church home here in Asheville, so impressed with the opportunity that presented itself to the congregation, that they were willing to make themselves responsible for this amount of money, when none of them could have paid down $200 to have saved himself. When the first note came due we lacked about $225 having enough to pay it and the trustees had to go down in their pockets and pay it. Most of them had to borrow their part. You will be glad to know that when the second note came due last week we lacked only $8.21 of having the entire amount. That was easily taken care of. We have to thank you all for helping us meet these notes. Without your help to have done so would have worked a tremendous hardship on some of the trustees. Now, with your assistance, we will go on with the furnishings for the church. It will take $1,200. You may be sure our people here will do their utmost to raise every possible dollar, but there is bound to be a considerable debt unless those who made pledges to the work here, or others who are interested, come to our help.

During the Summer Conference, several of the brethren, on the suggestion of Bro. Cecil, promised to take an offering in their churches for the Asheville church. The first one to make the promise good is Bro. J. R. Hutton, who sends an offering from the church at Gibsonville. And along with the offering he sends $5.00 for himself. Thank you, friends. I am reminded of those collections Paul took "for the poor saints at Jerusalem". We're mighty poor saints, spiritually, I fear, as well as financially.

The Ladies' Aid sale last Saturday netted $8.25. We had hoped to be able to meet the note of $500 on the lot when it came due—it is due tomorrow—but we will have to pay what we have and get an extension on the balance. We were knocked out of the Fourth of July sale at the Park, that last year netted about $115, and were by that much short of the $500 this year. The ladies are working hard, though, and I am sure they will raise the entire amount by conference.

We have just purchased fifty hymn books for the use of the Sunday school and the Sunday night service.

Miss S. W. Wilson, Harris Chapel, N. C.	1.00

In addition to the $5.00 Bro. Lamar gave for the Building Fund he gave our Sister Havener $5.00 for the Seating Fund. Four months until Conference—$1,200 to raise! Help!

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Circuit.

Rev. T. E. Davis filled Bro. Martin's appointment here last Sunday as he (Bro. Martin) is holding a revival at Jupiter. Bro. Davis' text was "Blessed are ye that know these things, if you do them." The sermon was heard by a large congregation. The collection was taken for the Children's Home, the total being $2.43. A fund is being raised through the faithful efforts of Bro. L. F. Eller, to re-paint the church.

We are still holding prayer services every Thursday evening at 8:30 and much good is being done. The young people are taking a great interest in the meeting.

The Sunday school is certainly on a boom. The average attendance almost equals the total enrollment. The attendance July 19 was the largest we have had for over three years.

The young people have singing at the church every Sunday afternoon at 4:30.

The attendance for the month of July: July 5, 65; July 12, 62; July 19, 78; July 26, 71.

Our pastor, assisted by Bro. J. H. Moton, will hold a revival at Clark's Chapel beginning the fourth Sunday in next month. Surely, the people around Clark's Chapel are doing things. Lester Watts.

Pleasant Grove, Lebanon Circuit.

We will have children's exercise in August. Bro. Loy was with us Sunday and delivered one of the best sermons yet; subject, "Remember Lot's wife." We enjoyed it very much. Bro. Charlie Reddick was with him. We were very glad to have Bro. Reddick with us. We recognized in him an old friend and acquaintance of twenty-five years ago. It did our heart good to meet him and find him on the Lord's side. He gave us a very good short talk.

Our special meeting is over; we had a good meeting: the church was greatly revived, we had six converts. Bro. D. R. Williams gave us a week of the ablest preaching the writer has ever listened to; may the Lord bless Bro. Williams. It does our heart good to meet him. Pleasant Grove organized prayer meeting for Wednesday night at 8 o'clock; are having a good meeting. Some of us, including the writer and wife, spent last Saturday eve with Bro. and Sister Loy and family; we enjoyed it very much indeed.

Perry.

Death came to the home of Bro. and Sister T. G. Perry July 25th, claiming their little son, Richard Clinard. Sunday afternoon at about 3 p. m the funeral service was conducted from the home. A large company of relatives and friends were present. Mr. Connell, Mr. Green, and Mr. Thompson sang very sweetly the song "Looking this way", after which scriptures relating to the death of the young were read, followed by a short talk by the writer. T. H. Matthews.

—Mr. Henry T. Powell, of Henderson, died Friday morning, July 24, and the funeral was held in the M. P. church, conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. D. Williams, Saturday at six o'clock.

THE CLASS IN THE COUNTRY.

Is there any problem confronting the Church whose solution would mean more than that of properly caring for the men and boys of the rural communities? It behooves the Church to give to the country, for the city's sake as well as the country's, the very best religious training.

There is no better plan for the molding of the characters of men than that of associating them together in organized classes for the systematic study of the Bible. The organized Bible class among men has worked wonders. There are those who say: "The organized adult Bible class is fine for the city, but it won't work in the country." It won't work anywhere of itself, but it can be worked. This writer believes that the difficulties in the city are harder to overcome than those in the country.

The first great essential is strong faith —faith in God and faith in man. Next to faith should come systematic endeavor. Go and look for men. Go to them in such a manner as to convince them that your mission is important to them and that they are important to your mission. Take their names and get them to promise to come to a mass meeting of men. You will be surprised to see how many will make the promise and keep it. With these anxious faces and honest hearts before you, you have the opportunity you seek. Ask them to organize for Bible study. The organized class can be made a success in the country.

SHORT CUTS.

The director of the art school was explaining the course to a prospective pupil. "I don't want to draw those stupid casts," she exclaimed. "They don't do any good, and they take so much time. I want to make something pretty, like that glass up there," and she pointed to the beautiful transparency that hung in the window with the morning sun streaming through it, a glass whose rich, blended tones and intricate design showed the results of patient years of an artist's life. It was with difficulty that the director convinced her that the casts had to come first—that there as no short cut to a knowledge of art.

We are all too apt to want results without being willing to work for them. We would like to be wise and respected, but we find it tiresome to study daily tasks and to do daily duties. We want to be free from petty anxieties about money, and think it would be delightful to have the fortune which some men have to draw upon; but we are not willing to pay the price they paid in effort and sacrifice of ease and pleasure. Yet experience shows that in most cases those who have had good things given them for which they have not paid the price of work have found them, in the long run, anything but good.

There is an old hymn which asks, "Must I be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease?" It is an ideal question. There is little danger that any of us will find ourselves so carried. Heaven is given as a free gift to faith, but we may be very sure that our faith is going to be tested by patient, toilful climbing up a steep road.—Clipping.

NO DANGER OF TOO MUCH LOVE.

When Jesus comes between true friends He does not separate, but He unites them. Some tell us that we must not love our dear ones too much, lest we make God jealous and He take them away. This is only pagan teaching. The man who had the best right to speak on this subject had a very different idea. He said if you cannot love your fellows on earth, how can you love your Father in heaven? The Master always stands between real friends, but ever to bring them closer. Formerly the ocean separated the continents; now it connects them. As we get to know more of the purpose of the Lord in our lives, we see that He alone makes great and abiding affection possible.—Sunday School Times.

THE CORAL BEADS.

On Rosa Burchett's seventh birthday her mother said to her: "Rosa, you are now old enough to be helpful at home, so from now on I shall expect you to keep the clothes-closet in your room very neat and clean. You must move everything out of it at least three times each week, and sweep in the corners very carefully. You must not throw your playthings in there upon the floor, but put them in their proper places each time. And now, because the work is new, I am going to give you something at the end of the first month. What would you like best?"

"A string of coral beads," replied Rosa, without hesitation.

The next day Rosa began her new task. The first two weeks she did her work carefully, moving out the shoe-box and her boxes of playthings each time she swept. Then she grew tired of taking so much trouble. It was so much easier to brush out the middle of the closet floor, and it seemed to her that the closet looked almost as well. Then she had so much more time to play.

At the close of the first month Rosa's mother said nothing about giving her the coral beads, and Rosa's guilty conscience kept her from asking for them.

The second month had almost passed when her mother said to her one day, "Rosa, why do you not wear the coral beads?"

"Why," cried Rosa in surprise, "Mother, you have never given them to me. Where are they?"

"Almost six weeks ago I put them under the shoe-box in the corner of your closet," replied her mother. "Do you think you deserve them, Rosa."

"No," replied honest little Rosa, blushing. "I know that I don't, mother, and I am sorry and ashamed; but if you will please keep them for two months I will do my very best to have earned them by then." That as the best punishment she could think of for herself.

"Very well," replied mother, "you shall have another chance."

After that I do not think any one could have hidden a pin in the closet that Rosa would not have found, for she kept her closet so very neat and clean.—Child's Hour.

THE LITTLE LOAF.

Many years ago there was a great famine in Germany, and the poor people suffered from hunger. A rich man who loved children sent for twenty of them and said to them: "In this basket there is a loaf for each of you. Take it and come back every day till the famine is over. I will give you a loaf each day."

The children were very hungry. They seized the basket and struggled to get at the largest loaf. They even forgot to thank the man who had been kind to them. After a few minutes of quarreling and snatching for bread, every one ran away with his loaf except one little girl named Gretchen. She stood there alone at a little distance from the gentleman. Then, smiling, she took up the last loaf, the smallest of all, and thanked him with all her heart.

Next day the children came again, and they behaved as badly as ever. Gretchen, who would not push with the rest, received only a tiny loaf, scarcely half the size of the others. But when she came home and her mother began to cut the loaf, out dropped six shining coins of silver.

"O Gretchen," exclaimed her mother, "this must be a mistake. The money does not belong to us. Run as quick as you can and take it back to the gentleman."

So Gretchen carried it back; but when she gave the gentleman her mother's message, he said: "No, no; it was not a mistake. I had the silver baked into the smallest loaf in order to reward you. Remember that the person who is contented to have a small loaf rather than quarrel for a larger one will find blessings that are better than money baked in bread."—Ella Lyman Cabot, in Ethics for Children.

THE SHELTER OF THE FOLD.

The prodigal sat downstairs in the dining room. The house was curiously quiet, though faint sounds came from the kitchen, where the evening dishes were being washed carefully so as not to disturb the hush. After a while his sister came to him. Her eyes were red, and her face was blotched and swollen. The prodigal got up awkwardly and shook hands.

"How are you, Salina?" he asked, returning her nerveless clasp.

"Pretty well," she said formally. "We didn't know you were back till yesterday. The last we heard you were in Montana."

"I was there for a couple of years. I —I just heard this morning about father. How is he?"

"Very low," she answered in a hushed tone. And then she began to cry noiselessly, without attempting to wipe away the tears that rolled down her pale cheeks. The prodigal put out his hand as if to comfort her; then he remembered and drew it back.

He looked strangely out of place in the room. He knew it all so well—the built-in corner cupboard, with the glass doors, and his mother's wedding cups on hooks just inside; the cover on the square table; the black marble clock on the mantel—it was all the same except that just beside him there was a buffet, new and showy, with a silver-plated tea set on the top. He divined that George had bought it.

His sister was not crying now. She was inspecting him—his shabby clothes, his frayed linen, the gray in his thinning hair. And then something in his face caught her attention—his chin was working convulsively, and there were tears in his sunken eyes. The lines left by years of dissipation were obliterated for the time, and there remained only grief and great regret.

"Would you like to go up?" she asked more kindly. "I don't think he will know you."

The prodigal creaked up the stairs after her. Instinctively he avoided the second step from the top; there had always been a loose board there.

"George isn't here," his sister whispered, turning, "and he can't get back until morning. The elders from the church have been taking turns at sitting up. Wait until I see if he is sleeping."

The prodigal stood on the little landing and waited. The house spread out on three sides of him, smaller than he had remembered it, but otherwise unchanged. How familiar was that confusion of books!

Even the wall paper was the same. Over in the corner behind the bookcases would be the pencil marks which had registered for years his annual gain in inches, only—he could not look. And there was his mother's picture in its black walnut frame, and under it George and himself in queer plaid dresses and black shoes with white buttons. He had been taller than George in those early days; it was a long time ago—a long time.

His sister came to the doorway.

"He won't know you," she said. "You can come in."

The prodigal moved over slowly and looked down at the old minister's face. The thin white hair was spread a little over the pillow, like an aureole, making the placid face, with its closed eyes, look frail, almost ethereal.

The man stooped and put his hand over his father's. The thin fingers gripped his and held them. There was something in the touch that brought a lump into the man's throat. After a moment, when the fingers did not relax, he slipped to his knees beside the bed.

An hour passed, and still the prodigal knelt beside the bed. Once some one creaked up the stairs and, after consultation with Salina, creaked down again. She came over and leaned down.

"I told Mr. Simpson you would stay for awhile," she said. "Will you?"

The old man stirred a little and wakened. His feeble hand was lifted slowly until it rested on the prodigal's bowed head.

"You have been a great joy to me, George," he said gently—"a great joy. I shall tell your mother. May God bless you!" The prodigal groaned. O, to turn up the light, to stand forth in his true colors for what he was, to beg forgiveness and a blessing for himself!

"George," the thin voice said again, "I have been thinking much about Henry." The prodigal drew in his breath sharply. "I seem to see him—in the corners of the room—everywhere."

If he could only say: "I am here." But the cowardice that had kept him away so long held him now.

The old man slept again. The prodigal still knelt, but now he was crying, sobbing noiselessly, his shabby coat heaving. Outside, in a chair in the dim hall, his sister slept, a shawl wrapped around her shoulders. The faint bluish gray of the early spring dawn came through the open window, and from some stable near came the stamping of horses. The prodigal got up stiffly and turned out the light. The slight motion roused the sleeper a little.

"He was always a high-spirited lad, mother," he said clearly. "His faults are of the head, not the heart. Don't cry, mother. He'll come back."

The prodigal gripped the foot of the bed with straining hands. The old man's eyes were open, looking at him.

"I have come, father," he said hoarsely. But the feeble mind had wandered. The minister was in his church again, looking down from the pulpit at the faces of his people. His voice was strong and full, and the son shrank back into the shadow.

"My friends, let us sing together this wonderful hymn: 'There were ninety and nine' "—The voice trailed off into silence. The old man lay there, very still. He scarcely breathed, and the pulse in his thin neck fluttered and almost stopped. And out of the shadow at the foot of the bed a man came and dropped on his knees.

"Father, father," he groaned, "don't you know me? It's Henry, father—Henry. I've come back."

The old man was smiling a little as if he already saw beyond the borderland. But at the voice he roused. He looked long and lingeringly into the eyes of the man beside the bed; then he lifted his hand in benediction and placed it on the bent, shaking head.

"Henry," he said softly, "Henry, my eldest son, may God bless you!" There was a great peace on his face. His voice was almost gone, but the prodigal caught the whispered words that were uttered: "For this, my son, was dead and is alive again; was lost and is found."

The room was very still; the faint, irregular breathing stopped. And on his knees beside the bed the prodigal watched and prayed.—Mary Roberts Rinehart, in the United Presbyterian.

Thus saith the law, as announced in a Brooklyn court. The supreme court has never passed on this question, however." Brother, this is no question for the Court. If your neighbor is going all over town telling everybody that you stole eggs from his hens' nests, what on earth do you care what the courts say? Your good name is at stake, and you care more for that than you do for a Court's decision. The verdict is that if you do you do not let that hen scratch all she wants in your front yard, and in your back yard, and in your garden, and on your back porch, and you leave her and her eggs alone, you are no Christian, and not fit to belong to a church. Go 'long with your Supreme Court decisions and take your medicine like a man.—Christian Sun.

TWOS AND TWOS.

By Victor P. Hammer.

Some things are strange in fiction,
And other things in fact;
But, of them all, the strangest
Is how they counteract.

For instance, when two marry,
The law says two are "one";
Yet, if "one" take a pullman,
It's tickets two or none.

When "one" goes to a playhouse
The fiction has no force;
Still, in a court of justice,
It means much in divorce.

Our marriage laws seem faulty;
Believe it, if you chooose;
Just wait for equal suffrage,
We'll, then, have "twos" and "twos".

DAISY'S TALENT.

Daisy walked home from church slowly, with her head bent as though she were thinking about something very important. Indeed, she was so much absorbed that she almost passed by her own gate. She did not get into the house right away. Instead she sat down on the front steps and buried her chin in her hands, still thinking.

And it was something important that made Daisy think so busily, for she had just heard a solemn sermon. Dr. Hayes had preached from the parable of the talents. I am sure that every child who reads this has heard that wonderful story which Jesus told his disciples. If not, ask some one to read it to you this very day, or, better, take down your Bible and read it yourself.

Dr. Hayes had said that everybody has at least one talent, and that no one has any right to bury his talents as did the wicked servant in the parable. It was just that part of the sermon that was making Daisy thoughtful. If Dr. Hayes had said that every one has a talent, then she must have one. But what could it be? She was not bright at school; her sisters and brothers always brought home better reports than Daisy. She was absent-minded, and so running errands could not be her talent. She was so awkward that she was more trouble than help in the kitchen, so cooking was certainly not her talent. Why, it seemed as if she had no talent at all.

The dinner bell tinkled, and Daisy went slowly into the house. She was very quiet all through the meal; but no one noticed her, for they were talking about other things. Daisy longed to ask her mother about the talent (mother would surely know if she had one), but there was no chance. Of course it would not do to ask her before the whole tableful of people.

After dinner Daisy went out on the steps (the back steps this time) and began puzzling over her talent again. You see she was eager to serve her Master, so that he would not be disappointed when the time came for her to render an account. But she wondered how she could use her talent if she did not know where the talent lay.

There was a scream from the side porch and then a volley of angry words. In a moment Daisy was around the house and in the midst of the disorder. Her little brothers, Ernest and Edwin, were quarreling over a whip; and Katie, the three-year-old baby sister, had fallen and bumped her head against a pillar.

It was wonderful how soon things straightened out after Daisy came. The little boys began to play peaceably, and little Katie dried her tears and was soon laughing over the funny antics of her older sister. When Daisy's mother came to the window, she smiled at what she saw below and went away for a nap.

Bedtime came and still Daisy had not discovered her talent. She had spent the afternoon on the side porch, and the three little children there left little time for thought. It was only when she was lying in her white bed that she found out.

Her mother came upstairs to kiss the children good night. When she came to where Daisy lay, she leaned down and patted her cheek, saying: "You have been a dear, helpful little girl this afternoon." And then came the wonderful part: "You have a real talent for helping mother over hard places."

Then Daisy went off to sleep happy. She could serve her Master now, for she knew where her talent lay. But the strangest part of it was that she had been doing it all the time without knowing it.—Edith Ernshaw, in the Christian Observer.

WIDE-SPREAD WAR IN ENROPE.

In the last few days war has broken out in Europe to such an appalling extent as to make the troubles in Mexico seem slight in comparison. First, Austria-Hungary declared war on Servia because of its refusal to meet certain demands growing out of the assassination of an archduke and his wife. Then Russia came to the help of Servia because of racial affinity. Then Germany because of friendship for Austria-Hungary took up arms against Russia. Then France and England came in against Germany. It is therefore a war involving all the great powers of Europe, and the results will be dreadful to contemplate if war is allowed to go on and work out its horrors. Let us hope and pray that the spirit of peace will yet prevail.

A few years ago it was felt and freely said that there will never be another war between two civilized nations. It was thought that nations would be content to arbitrate their differences, and Mr. Carnegie gave large money for the construction of a Palace of Peace. But as long as the nations keep themselves in readiness for war, there is danger of war breaking out. The world needs to get rid of the fallacy that the way to avoid war is to be ready for war. It is the individual that goes armed that is most likely to get into a fight, and it is the nation that maintains a great army and navy that is most likely to go to war.

The troubles in Mexico are by no means ended.

—Neutrality in the United States with respect to the war in Europe has been formally declared by President Wilson. This forbids merican citizens' aiding either party in the war.

AT TABERNACLE LAST SUNDAY.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. T. M. Johnson, we spent last Sunday at the church we first joined in boyhood and which we still regard as a sort of mother-church. The occasion was the beginning of the special meeting which by a standing agreement always comes the first Sunday in August.

There is an advantage in having such a rule. People for miles around learn of it, and know when to go.

The congregation last Sunday filled the large house, including the aisles, in both the forenoon and afternoon service. There were present Methodist Protestants, Presbyterians, Lutherans, Methodist Episcopals, Friends, and perhaps some of other denominations, besides some unchurched people. There are perhaps few places where congregations are so large and at the same time so orderly.

Rev. S. W. Taylor was expected as pulpit help after Sunday.

WHERE IS GOD'S HONOR?

Some of the great nations of Europe are fighting or getting ready to fight for the maintenance of their national honor. It does not seem to occur to them that in trying to honor themselves they are dishonoring God. God has said, "Thou shalt not kill." Does not disobedience to this commandment dishonor God?

God has said, "Them that honor Me, I will honor." There is much more honor in obeying God than in disobeying Him. The nation that honors God will be honored. The nation that makes more of its own honor than of God's need not be surprised to find itself greatly humiliated by the issues of battle.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION A NECESSITY.

By President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

State and Christian Collegess Should Cease Fighting Each Other.

It would be inexcusable folly for the Christian Colleges to wage war on the State institutions of higher learning. Both types of institutions are here to stay, and the sensible thing to do is to realize that fact and for each to get busy doing its special work. State institutions should cease to encourage their graduates to write theses on the narrowness and "unnecessity" of Christian Colleges and they in turn should try to forget the shortcomings of their competitors supported by the State. We have had crimination and recrimination long enough, and would do well to stick to our respective ideals and do our distinctive work with fidelity and earnestness and simplicity of heart.

What Some Countries Are Doing for Religion in Public Schools.

But it will not be amiss to characterize briefly the fundamental aims of State and Christian Colleges. Nor will it be amiss to recall that the United States is the only Christian nation which undertakes to educate without religious influence. The great Christian nations, like Germany, France, England, make provision even in their secondary schools for religious instruction, and they do well in so doing. The usual custom, modified to suit local conditions, is to have all the pupils go at certain hours each day to religious instructors of their parents' choice, where they are nurtured in the things of the Kingdom. It seems to me that this is a much more sensible plan than the diluted moral teaching advocated by some educational leaders for our own public schools. Religious instruction suited to the conscience of Protestants, Catholics, Jews, and free-thinkers would seem to be a colorless powerless thing, devoid of practical influence in touching the heart of children. For laugh at dogma though we may, yet we must all admit that Christian faith must assuredly rest upon it, if it is vitally to affect the character. The multiplicity of Protestant sects in this country, clamoring more for their distinctive differences than for the fundamentals of salvation, renders such a plan almost impossible with us except in the large centres of population. Therefore, it would seem that our present public school system, crowned by our great State institutions of higher and technical learning, is a fixture in our educational life.

The Aims of Our State Colleges.

Returning now to the distinctive aims of the two leading types of Colleges operating in our country, we may inquire first into the aim of the State College. The original of all State Colleges is the University of Virginia. Its founder was Thomas Jefferson. He was far-seeing enough to realize that this educational departure would affect wonderfully the life of the country and considered the fact of his origination of the idea of sufficient importance to warrant its inscription on his tombstone along with his claim to the authorship of the Declaration of Independence. What was Jefferson's idea in this educational innovation? His writings make it perfectly plain—that higher education should be free from religious control and that educated citizens might be had for the new nation. These are the aims of the State Colleges today—absolute freedom from religious control and the production of citizens. The atmosphere of the State school is patriotic, and patriotism is a great force. We cannot do without it. The State schools have certainly succeeded in that line of their aim. They have also succeeded in keeping themselves absolutely free from religious control. They are models of toleration, permitting students and faculty to believe and teach incidentally and practice in daily life any faith desired or any form of infidelity conceivable. The free-thinker and the devout Christian, whether in faculty or student body, are on equal terms. Thomas Jefferson could not have wished it to work out better than it has. And for those who believe these to be the aims of higher education we have no criticism—they have our sympathy and commiseration.

Aims of the Christian College.

The Christian College realizes the necessity for higher education that the best type of citizenship may result. It is opposed to sectarianism, except in rare instance, and these instances are growing rarer in view of the extreme toleration of the State colleges and of the steady growth of Christian liberality among the supporting constituencies. It does not believe in subjecting youth in its formative years to all the conflict of faith and skepticism that so universally rages around the State College, feeling that great harm is done the spiritual life of many in such a conflict, while willing to concede that trifling few may come out of it stronger, but yet battle-scarred and crippled. Its aim is character—Christian character, first and always. Its atmosphere is not less patriotic than that of the State College, but also definitely and distinctly and designedly Christian—not sectarian, not narrow, for there is no narrowness in Christ—but broadly and genuinely Christian. We believe that such institutions are a necessity in our country and shall expect the sun of its glory to set forever when they shall cease to exert their saving influence over the nation or depart from their noble aim and heritage.

The State Needs the Christian College.

The Christian College is a State necessity. This paradox is easy to justify and explain. Whoever has read history knows that the religious bond is mightier than even the patriotic bond in preserving national life. In the Jews we have an instance of the religious bond making a nation a unit, though dispersed over the face of the earth. No nation has ever been able to survive loss of faith in its gods, unless there came with that loss a compenating faith in the true God. No nation has ever survived the loss of faith in religion. Even the temporary enthronement of free-thinkers and skeptics in any land has brought always a quick harvest of inquisition and proscription, and the bloody havoc of the block or the guillotine. Some agency, therefore, to cultivate the intellect and the heart at the same time of the men and women who are to be leaders in the nation's life is essential. That agency is the Christian College.

A New Force in Modern College Life—Its Interpretation.

Recently a new type of higher educational institution has been foisted upon the United States—the independent College. The Carnegie Foundation has busied itself in this direction, not so much with the effort to induce philanthropists to found additional Colleges, as with the effort to wrest existing Colleges from their founders and lawful owners. The Carnegie hook is baited with gold, and has proved a most efficacious bait indeed. There is hardly a State in which some College has not had its charter amended in such manner as to wrest from its founders legal ownership of itself in the hope of a subsidy from the wily steel magnate in the form of an outright donation or of retiring allowances for aged teachers and discarded administrative officers. These Colleges of so-called larger freedom will eventually go the way of the older "free" institutions, like Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and the University of Chicago—that is to say, their atmosphere will be the same as that of the State institution, with patriotism left out as the distinctive aim,—an atmosphere of scholarship and learning. The so-called scientific spirit will characterize their life, the chief ingredient of which is the skeptical attitude toward everything until proved, even toward religion and the dearest moral standards of national greatness. Manifestly this type of institution can not save the nation, and really renders the necessity for the Christian institution more acute. America may yet rue the day when this insidious business of upsetting her conservators of national life began its despiritualizing campaign of iniquity and darkness.

What the Christian College Has Done For the State.

But has the Christian College shown itself to be a national necessity in the past? Aside from the theory of the situation, what has the record of more than a century to teach in substantiation of this claim? This is a fair challenge, and the facts are far more eloquent in enforcing our contention than any rhetoric or argumentation. We have had twenty-seven Presidents of the United States. Nineteen were College graduates. All but two of them were graduates of Christian Colleges. Our present Federal Supreme Court has eight College graduates, seven of whom came from Christian Colleges. Two-thirds of the members of Congress in both houses are graduates of these same Colleges, and three-fourths of the Governors of the various States. Practically all the teaching and administrative forces of the Christian Colleges are graduates of such Colleges, and forty per cent. of the same in the State and independent institutions are of like intellectual pedigree. Nineteen of the twenty-six literary lights of the first rank in America are graduates of your Christian Colleges. The great majority of the lawyers, physicians, and other professional men of large distinction are graduates of these same Colleges. A cursory glance through "Who's Who" will satisfy any one that the contribution of the Christian Colleges of the country to the aggressive leadership of our life in all its departments is far out of proportion to the number committed to their care and instruction. Yet the attendance on Christian Colleges is not increasing actually to any appreciable degree, but is decreasing relatively to a marked degree in the light of the unprecedented growth in enrollment of the State and independent institutions. The moral of these facts is suggestive of serious lowering of moral, intellectual, and professional standards unless the sober second thought for which the American people are proverbially noted shall turn the tide back into the safe channel of a century of magnificent achievement. Manifestly the State needs the Christian College.

The Church Cannot Do Without the Christian College.

But the Church needs it more—cannot possibly permit its extinction and will not. It is a matter of common knowledge that the Church has always led in education. The first Universities of the Christian world were officered by clergy only and not until 1482 did laymen acquire the right of serving on their teaching staffs. In our own country all education was of the Church till Thomas Jefferson in 1818 founded the University of Virginia. Even today of the somewhat more than four hundred Colleges in the United States above three hundred are of the Church. It would be equally gratifying to record that seventy-five per cent. of College students are enrolled with these Colleges, but the fact is far different and the disparity is growing annually greater. It is time that the American people, the people of her churches, I mean, were waking up to the enormity of a situation growing ominous with astonishing rapidity. I am no pessimist; I have confidence in the Christian College and its future, but I am not blind, nor can I call my hopes my facts. It is time to indulge in a little sober thinking along the line of eternal verities of education in their relation to national life and prosperity.

Its Special Work For the Curch.

But what special need has the Church for the Christian College? Here again let facts speak. They are eloquent and convincing. The Christian College furnishes eighty per cent. of the ministers of the country; all other educational institutions of the higher grade six per cent. Of foreign missionaries the proportion is greater—eighty-four per cent. from the Christian College as against seven per cent. from all other Colleges. More than ninety per cent. of the lay workers in the various communions are estimated to come from these same Christian Colleges. A great many young men decide on the ministry during their College career in these Colleges. In State Colleges many candidates for the ministry at entrance have chosen some other profession before graduation. The Y. M. C. A. is doing a noble work in many instances, but it cannot generate the spiritual atmosphere of the Church, and it is the atmosphere that makes life or death, not only physically, but also spiritually. The large decrease in candidates for the ministry, deplored by all, may be accounted for in part, no doubt, by the unparalleled growth in power and numbers of the State Colleges, whose students by the very necessity of their aims are not drawn toward the gospel ministry as the acme of professions. In our own State, one Christian College with 350 students had in theological seminaries during the year 1910, sixty-one graduates; the State University with twice as great an enrollment, only four. One Christian College in Virginia has, during all its existence, sent more than fifty per cent. of its graduates into the ministry, and all its graduates have been Christians. The Christian Colleges rarely graduate a student who is not a Christian, while the State and other Colleges show a record just the opposite. Without a doubt the Church, too, needs the Christian College.

What Relation Should Christian Men Assume Toward the Christian College?

This discussion would not be complete without an inquiry into the duty and privilege of Christian men toward these Colleges. There will be surely no opposing voice to the proposition that it is the duty of the Church to provide for higher education, nor to the correlative proposition that it is the privilege of Christian men and women to avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded for the very best results educationally for their children. The State Colleges are supported by taxation. Their teachers are well paid and retire—allowances are provided. The same is true of the independent Colleges, which are usually well endowed and for whose teachers the Carnegie Foundation makes generous provision. The teachers in the Christian Colleges are willing to serve an appreciative constituency at financial sacrifice often, but the Church should see to it that this sacrifice should be as small as possible and that provision is made for retiring allowances when old age renders further service impossible. No College can earn enough mony to pay its current expenses, to say nothing of interest on the cost of its plant. An endowment of $100,000 is required of all Colleges in many States, of $200,000 in others, none of which can be invested in buildings or equipment. This is done not so much to crush out the weaker Colleges, as in recognition of the fact that a College cannot do good work with a smaller productive income beyond tuition and fees from students. I have no doubt that Christians will realize the strategic value of these true Colleges and that generous provision in equipment and endowment will be made and an increase in enrollment both actual and relative will ultimately be accorded.

THE DISTRICT PARSONAGE LOT SECURED.

Believing that the members of our last Conference were in earnest, the committee elected to secure lot has purchased the lot on McIver St., Greensboro. The option expired the 31st of July and while there had been no general response to the appeal of the committee we felt that the property is worth every cent we have promised to pay, and possibly might bring more, so we paid the money we had raised on the lot, took a receipt and were given 30 days to raise the balance. We believe if the balance is secured within that time there will be no interest to pay.

We are urging all of our pastors to respond at once; take up the matter with your people and be sure to let us have the money before the 31st day of August.

The following amounts were received from the charges:

Greensville Ct., Bro. Highfill	$ 7.66
Lebanon, Bro. Loy	1.00
Asheboro, Bro. Ross	7.00
Concord, Bro. Suits	5.15
Granville Ct., Bro. Bethea	18.00
Tabernacle Ct., Bro. Johnson	35.00

We have assurances from Henderson and Grace, Greensboro, that the amounts will come in during present month.

Brethren, while the summer is not a good time to raise money in many of the charges, the amounts asked for are not large, being equal to the President's salary, and we believe your people will respond gladly to this appeal. Give them the opportunity to show their willing mind, and let this good work go on.

We have been looking for a line from our President on this matter and hope he can find time from his busy labors to give the cause a word of encouragement.

Very truly,

The Committee.

THE PRESIDENT'S PARSONAGE.

The option on the lot was about to expire. The committee had only a small per cent. of the money to pay the purchase price but paid what was in hand and took a receipt, thus binding the trade. The committee believed this was what the Conference would have them do, though th Conference had not said buy this particular lot by furnishing the full amount with which to pay. The committee is looking to the same folks that created the committee and authorized them to act, now to furnish the money with which to pay. But, brethren, was are now paying interest on the deferred payment, and besides it is for only a limited time that we can now hold the lot unless we pay for it in full. Of course, we shall not lose what we have put into the lot, but we want that the lot be ours and that we do not continue to pay interest. The plan has been explained. May we not have prompt responses? Send to Mr. T. A. Hunter, Treasurer, Greensboro, N. C.

RANDOM SHOTS.

If the unnatural habits and inclinations which we cultivate here below follow us beyond the grave, it will be hell sure enough, to fight these habits throughout eternity, without any possibility, or even hope, of gratification.

If some men cared as much for their soul as they do for their body, there would be fewer bony, backslidden, lazy lifeless, loveless church members.

If your whole past life were to be exhibited to-night at a moving picture "I wouldn't go," you say. Suppose God brings you face to face with it at judgment!

It never occurs to some people that a preacher has any bills to meet.- Consequently he is often times doomed to subsist on wind and water. I thank God that these things are free, else some fool would get a monopoly on them, and the poor unpaid preacher would either have to steal for a living, or perish to death.

One of these days that big estate to which you claim an indissoluble title, will narrow down to a six foot by four. Why not help the church a little? N.

COMMEMORATION OF THE TWO HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LIFE OF GEORGE WHITFIELD.

The fourteenth day of the coming December will be the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the birth of one of the mightiest ministers of the Gospel this land or any other has ever known; a man whom the sainted Toplady called "the Prince of Preachers"; a man concerning whom John Wesley in a memorial sermon said:

"Have we read or heard of any person since the Apostles, who testified the Gospel of the Grace of God through so wide a space, through so large a part of the habitable world? Have we read or heard of any person who called so many thousands, so many myriads of sinners to repentence? Above all, have we read or heard of any person who has been a blessed instrument in the hand of God of bringing so many sinners 'from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God?' "

This man was George Whitefield. His ministry was world-wide. Though no denomination bears his name, his ministry was sent as a gracious benediction upon the work of all denominations.

Thousands hung upon his words. In his Journal he speaks often of preaching to thirty thousand people at a single service. From among his converts there have arisen many of the ablest and truest ministers of the Gospel of various denominational affiliations who have helped to preserve down the ages the true and undiluted evangelical doctrine "once delivered to the Saints".

Not a little of the origin of some of our educational and religious institutions is traceable to the influences set in motion by his powerful ministry. This is true of Dartmouth; it is true of Princeton, as well as of similar institutions in Wales and elsewhere.

The Methodist Churches in Great Britain were in the beginning made up largely of his converts. The Baptist church gathered into itself many of the churches formed during the progres of what might be called the Whitefieldian movement. The Calvinistic-Methodist, or Presbyterian Church, of Wales, now the strongest church of that land, is directly and confessedly the child of his ministry. The Evangelical portion of the Church of England acknowledged with gratitude the fact of its own existence as due to his influence, while of orthodox Congregationalism one of his biographers, the Rev. J. F. Stearns, D. D., formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Newark, N. J., has remarked,

"It may be justly said to have been saved almost from extinction under God by the great revival to which this 'Burning and Shining Light' of his age contributed so much."

In accordance with the suggestion of a special committee appointed by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Commission on Evangelism, to which the matter was committed, suggests that it is not only eminently proper but a gracious obligation for the churches of the various denominations of this country as well as of others to remember on the date of this anniversary in proper and grateful ways this first and mighty international evangelist who was so marvelously used of God.

Accordingly it is urged that fitting and appropriate services be held in all our churches on the date mentioned, Sunday, December 14th. It is not meant that the sermon should be one of mere eulogy of the man but no occasion could present a finer opportunity to make a strong evangelistic appeal than the proper and moving reference to the life and work and death of this man whose ministry led uncounted thousands into the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

TALK THAT COUNTS.

Ephum Johnson was up before Judge Shimmerplate on a cruelty to animals charge.

"Deed Ah wasn't abusin' dat mule, Judge," the old man demurred.

"Did you not strike it repeatedly with a club?"

"Yassah."

"And do you not know that you can accomplish more with animals by speaking to them?"

"Yassah; but dis critter am diff'nt. He am so deef he caint heah me when Ah speaks to him in de usual way; so Ah has to comunicate wid him in de sign language."—Youngstown Telegram.

—A Presbyterian missionary in Persia estimates that there are now at least 1,000 Moslem boys and girls attending the 13 Christian schools in Persia. Miss Stockwell estimates that this number is twice what it was five years ago. The education of Moslems in Christian schools is, in fact, a very recent development, but the ambition of Mohammedan parents to secure good education for their children is rapidly overcoming all religious prejudices. Of this thousand nearly 700 are paying tuition, so that the movement is no pauper scheme to get something for nothing. There is no concession on religion to these Moslem schol-

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This insutution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists: men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

Blackwelder.

On Tuesday, July 28, death claimed Mr. Joe S. Blackwelder, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Blackwelder. He leaves a wife and two children, mother, father, and a number of brothers and sisters. Bro. Blackwelder had been in declining health for the past two or three months, but bore his suffering with all ease. He was a member of the Concord M. P. church, of which he was a loyal attendant. He will be missed in our prayer services, as he always took an active part and especially will he be missed by his Sunday school class.

The funeral was conducted at the church the same day Bro. Scarboro's was and the interment was made at Oak Wood cemetery. Roxie Little.

In Memoriam.

The late Henry Thurman Powell was born near Kittrell, Granville county, near Vance, in the year 1876; the second son of Erastus A. and Candace F. Powell. His education was begun at a country school near his home. Later he attended the Savage and Gilmer high schools in Henderson, and in 1896 matriculated at Trinity College, Durham, N. C., where he was an active leader in all phases of college life. In 1899 he entered the University Law School where his earnest love of the law won for him an enviable reputation, and was admitted to the bar by the Supreme Court of North Carolina in September, 1900.

Upon his admission to the bar, he returned to Henderson, and put out his shingle, filled with a boundless zeal and dauntless determination to be a lawyer of the first rank, in the county his family had been so closely identified with. and instrumental in the upbuilding of, since its creation. His sincerity of purpose. and efficiency and accuracy in business life, soon won for him a splendid reputation in his profession, and a desirable practice. While his keen sense of humor, his hearty laugh and the natural frankness of his expresion and unpretentiousness of his manner, together with his generous character and kind disposition, attracted to him a host of friends in every walk of life, whose many honors are the best tokens of their esteem. He was a member of the Sigma Mu Fraternity; a Master Mason; a Past Grand of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and a member of the Grand Tribunal of the Knights of Pythias. For a number of years he was secretary and treasurer of the Croatan Club and one of the leading spirits in that organization.

In 1905 he was happily married to Miss Carlia Harris, a daughter of Mr. George B. Harris of Henderson, N. C., and his name is perpetuated in their only child, Henry T. Powell.

For many years City Clerk of Henderson, and the most familiar man with its municipal affairs in the past decade, his interest and part in the development of the city was no small one. In 1908 he was eleted State Senator from the 17th District. As chairman of the Committee on Military affairs and member of the Committees on Revisal, Judicial Districts and Institutions for the Blind, and an ardent advocate for good roads, better schools and effective prohibition, he fulfilled his trust with honor to himself and credit to his constituents. Upon his return from the legislature, he was elected mayor of Henderson in May, 1909 and re-elected in 1910 without opposition. The following year he was appointed judge of the Recorder's Court of Henderson, by the legislature. As Recorder, the sterling metal, keenness of perception and fearless character of the man showed up in their best light. The result of which may be said to have been the most valuable period of his career of public service.

Placing the administration of justice on a higher scale and meting out to the law breaker his just deserts, without regard to rank or station. The town of Henderson again called for his services by electing him City Attorney in 1913 and again in 1914, which position he held at the time of his death.

One of the incorporators and promoters of the Law Building, and actively associated in a number of business enterprises, he was keenly interested in whatever contributed to the growth or welfare of Henderson. An earnest and devout member of the Methodist Protestant church and a teacher of the Baraca Class giving gladly of his means and his time to the service of his Master, whose call he answered to a higher kingdom on the 23rd day of July, 1914, leaving behind him in the memory of his family and friends, a noble example of a Christian gentleman; beautiful in his devotion to his family; admirable in his loyalty to his friends; lovable in his kindness to humanity in distress, a lawyer wise in his counsel, zealous in his cause and true to his clients.

Wherefore, The Bar of Henderson, feeling most deeply the loss of a comrade, whom we honored for his ability and loved for his personality, which rendered our daily lives brighter and happier, express to his family our tenderest sympathies, assuring them that every pang of grief for the loss of him touches the lawyers of Henderson, who respond thereto in affection; and we will long keep his memory green and hold in loving recollection his bright and charming personality.

In Testimony Whereof, copies of this memorial will be sent to his family; and spread upon the records of the Henderson Bar and presented to the Judge of the Superior Court of Vance county, at its next session, with the request that it be engrossed upon the records of the Court.

Henderson, N. C.,
July 24th, 1914.

Mr. Henry T. Powell, a lawyer of this city, died this morning at his home here, after an illness of three weeks, of typhoid fever. Mr. Powell was a native of this community; his ancestors having lived here for generations. His father was for about fifteen years sheriff if this county. He was of the age of thirty-seven years, and had been a member of the bar, in successful and active practice for about fourteen years; was educated at Trinity College and the University Law School; he was a member of the State Senate in the year 1909, and served for some time as mayor of Henderson, and also as Recorder of the Criminal Court. He was very popular and highly regarded by all; his death will be learned of with much regret by all classes.

Mr. Powell leaves a wife, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Harris, of this city, and one child, Henry, a boy of about seven years.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 5, and will be in charge of the Bar of this city.

Meetings of the Bar and the County Officers were held in the Court House this morning to take steps in connection with the funeral and a committee was appointed to prepare resolutions to be presented to an adjourned meeting.

Mr. Powell was a member of the Masonic Fraternity and of the K. of P., and possibly of other fraternal organizations.

—Just before the death of the Duke of Kent he laid his hands upon the girl head of Victoria and prayed that if she became Queen of England she might rule in the fear of the Lord. Fifty years later the Queen said: "That prayer has ever defined my ambition." If God's judgment of our work were our strongest motive for doing it well and at the right time, many more would receive the crown of faithfulness in this life as well as the crown of righteousness in the life to come.—Record of Christian Work.

—When the saloonkeepers are held responsible for crimes committed while the drinkers are under the influence of the whiskey sold, a long step has been taken. This was the case in Oakland, Cal., when Saloonkeeper Edw. Roderick's license was taken from him after Judge Thos. Power killed Chas. Quinton in self-defense when the latter, made drunk by Roderick's whiskey, attacked him.

—Thoughtfulness for others, generosity, modesty and self-respect are the qualities which make a real gentleman or lady, as distinguished from the veneered article which commonly goes by that name.—Thomas Huxley.

—Just the hen part of the farm business is bigger than the steel trust. Last year the gross income of the steel trust was about $700,000,000. But the gross income of farmers last year from poultry and eggs was $750,000,000—$535,000,000 for eggs alone.

—It is said that the very first convert to Christianity in Japan began with a young student who was engaged in translating the Gospel of John. It came about thus: An American lady went there with four or five missionaries. After some time this lady offered to teach English to a young Japanese and gave him the Gospel of John to translate. Shortly after, it was observed that he became very agitated and restless, walking up and down the room continually. At last he could contain himself no longer, and burst out with the question, "Who is this man about whom I am reading—the Jesus? You call him a man, but he must be God." Thus the written word proved itself "quick and powerful", Heb. 4:12, and was the means of saving a soul.

THE SONG OF DAVID.

He sang of God, the mighty source
Of all things, the stupendous force
On which all strength depends;
From whose right arm, beneath whose eyes
All period, power, and enterprise
Commences, reigns, and ends.

The world, the clustering spheres He made,
The glorious light, the soothing shade,
Dale, champaign, grove and hill;
The multitudinous abyss,
Where secrecy remains in bliss
And wisdom hides her skill.

Tell them, I AM, Jehovah said,
To Moses; while Earth heard in dread,
And, smitten to the heart,
At once, above, beneath, around,
All Nature, without voice or sound,
Replied, "O Lord, THOU ART."

—Rev. N. G. Bethea is helping Bro. Johnson at Moriah this week.

—Rev. H. M. Blair, editor of the Christian Advocate, preached a good sermon at Bethlehem camp meeting last Sunday.

—Rev. C. M. Compher, pastor of the Methonist Protestant Church in Lynchburg, Va., came on Monday and preached on Monday night, and since has been preaching morning and night in Grace Church, Greensboro. His preaching is characterized by a peculiar earnestness and effectiveness. One can see that he believes in preaching and feels that to be his business. Yet he also believes in personal work. It is our privilege to present to our readers this week one of his sermons. We are highly favored in having him work in our midst, and already feel that he has done good by coming. Bro. Andrews is leading the singing well, and the services are well attended. The people are giving interested attention and many are warming up for the work of soul-winning.

Bro. Andrews, we think, made a fortunate selection of gospel hymns for use in our meeting when he selected Alexande's Gospel Songs No. 2. There is life in these songs, because there is sense and truth and rapid movement in them. There is no raging about nothing in them but they get hold of one by their naturalness and true religiousness.

BEGINNING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

In the meeting of the Southern Amateur Journalists' Association held in this city last Saturday, Mr. Pierson, of Moravian Falls, editor of "The Fool Killer," told of his first newspaper venture. He had no printing press, but overcame that difficulty by making one out of wood with his saw and hammer. He had a few pounds of second-hand type. The larger letters were not complete in number, but he must set the heading of his paper out of them, and must choose a heading that did not contain any letters not present in the font. He finally decided on "Plain Talk." He printed and sold of the first two issues enough copies at 10 cents each to buy a better press, but "Plain Talk" seemed to lose some of its popularity after he got a better equipment for bringing it out. Curiosity was not so strong a factor in its support.

SOUL WINNING A DAILY PURSUIT.

By Rev. C. Morgan Compher.

"And he brought him to Jesus."—St. John 1:42.

The words of the text are in the wonderful call of the first Disciples and refer to the work of Andrew, who first found his own brother and brought to him the news of the discovery of the Christ and, "he brought him to Jesus." Andrew was content to drop out of sight, but his brother, how he develops into the masterful leader of men and the head of the Company of Apostles.

I recently heard of a church in which there was an organization whose object was that each member should win one soul to Christ and into the church every month. When I read it I said, "I should call that soul winning as a monthly pursuit. Then later I heard of a large Church in one of our Southern cities where there was a similar organization, the object of which was to win at least one soul to Christ and into the Church every week, and when I heard of that, I said, "I should call that soul winning as a weekly pursuit." The object of this sermon is to call the attention of the reader to soul winning as a daily pursuit.

We read of the Apostles that they went daily from house to house" teaching and preaching the Gospel of the kingdom, and it ought not to cause us any surprise to read, "That there was added unto the Church, daily, those that were being saved." It was the natural result of those who made soul winning a daily pursuit. It was the daily business of the Master and of the Apostles and it ought to be of all the members of any Church and Christians of all Creeds. The longer I live the more fully I am convinced that each pastor ought to be his own evangelist. God has not only saved you but has commissioned you to bring another to Himself. Especially is this true of the officials of any Church. Do you elders know that you are not only to be a "cup bearer," but that you are called of God to be a layman evangelist? Your first work and daily pursuit is to win souls for His kingdom. Trustee, do you realize that you are not only to have repairs made to the house of God, but you are called to be a layman evangelist? You are to seek souls for Christ's Kingdom and bring souls unto Him. Oh, Christian, man, woman, officer of the Church, have you a friend that you want to see saved? Then YOU bring him unto Jesus. While you cannot save him yourself, it is your privilege and duty to bring him unto Him who is mighty to save and strong to deliver all who come unto God by HIM.

It Is a Great Joy.

The greatest joy of my life is to get my man (or woman, as the case may be), and talk to them about Jesus Christ, and when there is no one else around, to win them to the blessed Saviour of men and get them where He can touch them, and I am satisfied. During the four years' ministry in this city I have seen more than three hundred and fifty persons led to Christ and nearly all of them came to Him in this way. Perhaps I should not write in this way, lest some should misunderstand me, but I hardly think any one could have been more embarrassed than I, or ill at ease than when I first undertook to speak a word for my blessed Lord. I confess that I let many opportunities go by but I learned my lesson in this way. I had an old friend in the central part of Virginia who was a trapper and a great fisherman. I hunted and fished with him often. I frequently felt I ought to speak to him about his soul, but I put it off from time to time. One day I had hunted with him all day and towards evening when we had started for home I did broach the subject to him, but did not press him for a decision. I was a long time going to sleep that night, and when sleep did come, I was restless. In the morning I learned that my old friend was dead; he had been struck by a train on his way home late that night. I went to his funeral; it was in the country; three other ministers of different denominations were there. They asked me to take a part. I told them I could not pray; I would rather not attempt to speak, but I would read. I did not tell them why, but I tried to hide behind the Word of God. Dear reader, I could not look the dead man in the face. Only God knows what that cost me. My eyes are full of tears now as I write. I can hardly see, but I had learned my lesson. I registered a solemn vow that never again would I let an opportunity go by when I could speak a word for my Lord and Master. I have tried so hard to keep it, and as I have tried, I have found it not only easy but the most pleasant task of my life as I try to make it a daily pursuit. The greatest blessings that I have ever received came to me in this way. What God has helped me to do, He can also help you to accomplish. Here is Andrew, backward, timid, finding Peter, his own brother, not knowing what to say to him, entering into no argument, but simply bringing him to Jesus. That settled it, for both. I wonder if you would forgive me if I relate one or two instances that came to me recently. It might make more clear what I mean, by soul winning as a daily pursuit.

People Waiting to be Led.

It was on a train. It was night. I had promised God that if He would give me a safe journey and bring me back to my wife and baby boy, that I would speak to some one every day about their soul. I had a wonderful day; all day I had seen passing by me in wonderful panarama, the wonderful works of God as the train slowly crossed the great Rocky Mountains. But now, people had retired and I among the number. Suddenly I remembered that I had not spoken to any one all day. I arose from my berth and dressed and went through the car hunting my man; he was not to be seen. I went throught the second, and the third and finally in the smoking compartment, I found him. He was the only man that I had seen. He was alone. After a few minutes conversation with him, I said "Have you found the dearest friend that a man ever had?" He looked surprised, and said, "I don't know what you mean." Then I placed my arm on his shoulder and said: "Do you know Jesus, are you a saved man?" And then as he talked, my heart grew tender for him. It was the story that I have heard, so many' many times—a good Christian home, he had wanted to see the world and had gone away and also away from God. It was too sacred to tell everything or anything he said. We sat there and talked for a long time, every one had gone to bed, and after a while I said, "Let us pray over it," and down on the floor of the smoker, I placed my arms about the neck of the poor fellow and just told God all about him and asked the Lord Jesus to make a new man out of him. I arose from my knees and said good-night and went to bed and went to sleep. At about three o'clock in the morning the curtains of the berth were pushed aside, a rude hand shook me and I woke with a start, only to look into the face of my man of the smoker. He took hold of both my hands and said, "I must get off in a few minutes, and I want to tell you, sir, that after you left me, I stayed right there, and I have settled it all. I am going home to May, (his wife) and tell her that God sent a man on the train to bring me to Jesus. Oh, sir, I got it," I knew what he had, I had it too. Tears rolled down his cheeks as he said goodby and again I thanked God for my man. I did not sleep any more, I was too happy to sleep. But, was it any more than I should have done? Suppose I had not gone after him, what then? I shudder to think of the answer, and so,

"I want every soul that is sad and forlorn,
To hear my Redeemer's sweet voice;
I want to see all who are weary and worn,
Come into His grace and rejoice."

Another Instance

Was a waiter at a hotel. I waited till all had gone from the table. I purposely had taken longer than usual for my meal. When the waiter came around, I said low to him, "Are you a Christian?" I saw tears come in his eyes as he picked up his tray of dishes and went out. I came down early to breakfast the next morning, he was there waiting. In substance this was his story. He had lost his Christian wife only a week before; and he had promised her that he would come to Christ that he might raise the little blue eyed baby boy that she had given to him, to be a Christian man, and he had not kept his word. He found it harder every day. I urged him to settle it right away, and told him that I would pray for him with all my heart, and I wanted him to settle it himself. That night about eleven o'clock there came a knock on my door, I was just falling asleep. It frightened me. I arose and opened the door. There stood my man. He buried his head on my shoulder and wept like a child over his new found joy. And I cried also. Never shall I forget how happy he was, and again I bowed by the side of my bed and said. "Father, I thank Thee, Oh, Father I thank Thee."

Waiting for You.

Your friend whom you love and trust. He is not a Christian and you are and a member of some Church, still you have never said a word to him about the salvation of his soul. Is it any wonder that he doubts your faith in Christ and comes to think that after all it certainly cannot mean all that people say, or you, his loved one, would tell him about it and ask him to come to Jesus. I have found so many times just that very thing, some one was waiting and it only needed a word to get them started on the way to the Son of God. Oh, my dear friend, Jesus must mean everything to you or else He means nothing to you. Which shall it be? May the Father help you see that it is as much your business to win people to the cross of His Son as any other person on earth. Fathers, have you spoken to your children, and tried to lead them to Jesus? They are expecting you to do it. May God help you. Mothers, have you spoken to your daughters? I believe that many a pure girl has gone astray because their mother has failed her in her duty here as well as her privilege. I remember to have had a mother to come to me and ask me to go and speak to her daughter about her soul. I found upon inquiry that she had never spoken herself, and so I said Yes, I will if you will speak to her first. She promised that she would and went home from Church, called her daughter up to her room and throwing her arms around her neck spoke to her about the salvation of her soul. To her surprise the young girl said, "Mother, I am so glad you did, I am so hungry to come to Jesus and I wanted you to tell me." The mother was as happy as the daughter. She just brought her own child to Jesus. This is what every mother ought to do. It is the natural way.

A Conviction.

It has pleased the Heavenly Father to honor me and give me a place where I may preach the matchless glories of the Blessed Son of God, not only in my pulpit, but on the other days as well. It may be an old fogy notion that I have, but it has about deepened into a conviction, that I need not wait till a special season of revival services to give the invitation to men to accept God's dear Son. Tho still a young man, I have learned that God can save folks any time we bring them to him, that He is not only waiting for it, but expects us to do our share in winning a world to Himself as our daily business. I have found that people expect us to do this kind of work and sometimes think it strange that we must have an evangelist to do it for us. Sometimes, I confess that I feel that way myself.

While it is a fact that we ourselves cannot save any one, still we can bring others to Him who is able to save to the uttermost, all who come unto God by Him. I do not know how others may feel, but that is my business, and I would not exchange places with any king on earth. As far as the world is concerned, I am a very poor man, all that I have is a lot in the cemetery where some day, kind hands will lay the worn out body, still I am immensely rich, for God has called me to be a worker together with Him in saving a world, and so, "We work and talk together, my Lord and I."

Jesus Calls You.

"Jesus calls for helpers true,
There is work for us to do;
To our Master much we owe;
Who will answer, who will go?

Precious ones for whom He died,
Yet are drifting with the tide;
Hark, the awful breakers roar,
Who will steer them safe to shore?

Christ has died, our souls to win,
And has pardoned all our sin,
All we have to Him we owe,
Now He needs us, let us go."

MRS. HO.

Mrs. Ho made her appearance in this world in the home of parents who were both quiet and mild in disposition and of ordinary intellectual ability. They suffered as severe persecution as any Christians we have known. They were not allowed to drink water from the wells, nor would the villagers accommodate them or lend a hand to help them in time of need, and finally drove them out of their home village, never to return. Soon after entering the church, the parents sent their only girl to the Pangkiachwang school. Because of unbinding her feet added persecution was suffered. Shu Kuei (later Mrs. Ho) was ambitious and very bright and did better work memorizing than most of her classmates. An only daughter, she was inclined to be selfish, and liked to have her own way. She was in school seven years. Then came the uprising of 1900, and, not knowing what the future might be, she was married to a lame man, Mr. Ho, a good scholar in mathematics and one of the teachers in the boys' school. Her marriage was the great disappointment of her life because it shut her out from finishing her education in Peking.

As time went on she raised a small family, five in all, three of whom are still living, the youngest a beautiful boy of five. The care of home, living on a small salary, her inability to pursue study and an unsatisfied desire to rise to a position which she could not be free to fill—these made her restive and restless and discontented with her lot. Then a sweet baby boy, the pride of the parents, was suddenly taken from her, and soon she was thrown into a state of melancholia, being sometimes almost beside herself, and in fact did try, as she told her husband later, to end her own life. Surely it was insanity that made the rope, the poison, the well or the knife seem better than life. But a kind Providence which she loved to own kept her from self-destruction. We fought our battles with her in these trying days, grieving to see her thus. When she had improved some, it was decided to give her a taste of the outside world in a trip to Peking to attend the graduating exercises of the first college class. This was a great delight to her. One day on the train it was suggested to her that she give up all seeking after positions such as some of the young unmarried girls held and find a larger, broader field for labor in the church, where more educated leaders were needed. It was certain that with her ability to write and to select and prepare topics for meetings, or lectures for women, she could easily fill such a place.

After her visit North she was a changed woman, her spirits had risen and she was ready to enter upon her new work. But, alas, before long these high spirits betokened the return of her old disease in another form. Again we battled with this great trial for several months, when with God's help she conquered herself, taking up her work again. She gave attention as was necessary to her neglected home duties and then to the church. One of the fragrant memories of her life was that of her home, where during the summer her voice was daily heard leading the singing in morning family prayers. Her husband was helpful and sympathetic in every phase of the home life and both shared in the desire to make a model Christian home. For almost a year she did her church work most faithfully and earnestly and was proving herself most efficient in every way. Here, near the close of the Chinese year and at the beginning of our year, Death claimed her suddenly for his own, and she was not, for God had taken her to Himself. No bright-colored clothes could be worn by the three motherless children at the New Year's season, the little boy's red hood was turned inside out, and white hair-strings with white shoes marked them as in mourning.

At the funeral of Mrs. Ho the words spoken by her friends were beautiful, tender, and true. Mr. Ho bore testimony to her Christian character, to her exemplary home life and to her ability as a housekeeper and said, "She has been a good and helpful wife to me." Her chief desire was to live and work for her Master, and her one ambition for her children was a Christian education at all costs to prepare them for useful lives in the Kingdom of God. For some time she had practised the laying aside of one-tenth of her wages, and it was a joy to her to help the poor or to contribute to the church or missionary society from this sum.

As I write of Mrs. Ho, I can but rejoice that God took her when and as He did, and yet she is missed wherever I go, and I wonder who will take her place. How much the preparation for life's work meant to her both in life and in death! —Mission Studies.

Trust in the Lord and do good.

A SUNDAY IN LEYDEN, HOLLAND.

The readers of Zion's Herald are tangential to Congregationalists in the flesh and one with them in the spirit. In Leyden, Holland, where I pen these lines, the Congregational Church existed 300 years ago in embryo. Here, among the freedom-loving Dutch, our Pilgrim Fathers were welcomed and for a dozen years lived, labored, and learned. William Bradford notably and others also were active in civic affairs. The lessons they received in democracy stood them well in their important role in government beyond the seas. Each Oct. 3 they saw the inhabitants enter church and thank God for deliverance from Spanish tyranny whose severity, for adequate expression, draws upon the vocabulary of the nether world. This annual observance, doubtless, inclined the Pilgrims to institute in the new world what has become our annual Thanksgiving Day. The thrift, the reverence for conscience, and the love of liberty exhibited by the Dutch were an inspiration to the Pilgrims in value beyond the price of figures that may follow the dollar mark. Hats off to the Dutch!

We have these treasures in earthen vessels. The Pilgrims while in Amsterdam, where they lived previously to coming here, were grievously rent by strife among themselves over some of their number indulging in the fashionable styles about them. The separation policy Abraham urged with Lot was adopted. Accordingly, those of the same mind about dress sought a new home in Leyden, then a city of 50,000. In trade it was next in importance to Amsterdam. Historically, it was of first importance, for its gallantry in withstanding Spain won freedom for the land.

The authorities of Leyden proffered an agreeable welcome, and hither our Pilgrim Fathers moved and here they enjoyed peace of soul and the labor of their hands. The hum of industry has never left Leyden. Ringing bicycles and tooting automobiles make walking in its streets an activity of both extremities—the head in watching and the feet in stepping lively.

Sunday morning I went to its largest church, St. Peter's, a Gothic structure of cathedral proportions. Ten feet from its walls once stood the house in which John Robinson lived, and within the church walls he is buried. The service began at 10 o'clock. I reached the door of the "Groote Kerk" at 10:30 o'clock, and "the door was shut". I found no fault with this stern rule enforced to prevent disturbing the service, but did with my sloth. Before starting for a train I inquire the hour and minute of its departure. I never saunter in thirty minutes late, berating the conductor for having started on time. Like the importunate man, I rapped at the sexton's apartment and he in mercy let me in. He told me I would be shown a seat in the church at the conclusion of the prayer. In the room I waited. Ushers were counting church money, which they put in bags and sealed.

The prayer concluded, I was taken through the choir. Previous to the Protestant Reformation St. Peter's belonged to the Roman Catholics, who decorated its walls with paintings. At the Reformation the church came into the hands of Protestants, who branded these paintings idolatrous and coated each of them with white paint, with a vigor, methinks, that dramatized Macbeth's execration, "Out, damned spot, out!" I could, however, discern the dimmed outlines of what, doubtless, were works of art.

The seat shown me faced the pulpit. It was a rainy day. I roughly counted the congregation as less than 400. I was told it was double that number on a clear day. Even so it would still be comparatively small, when we consider that 10,000 souls are connected with this church. People in the rural sections attend in larger proportion than those in cities. Languor in churchgoing in Holland tallies with the same malady in America.

The men and women sat apart in the service. They were about equal in number. The young were not as proportionately well represented as their elders. From the faces of the audience I judged them a substantial people. In plainness of dress they would be approved by Quakers. For their reverence saints would bless them.

The singing of Psalms, led by a precentor, was participated in by all. Their voices made melody unto the Lord, and the music touched my heart. "Concernin the collection," rather, collections, there were three, taken one following the other, the bags which received the offerings hung from pliable poles dexterously manipulated by the collectors. Practise makes perfect. The church at Marken attaches bells to the bags. Their jingle signals the ear, when the eye is jaded, to put the hand into the pocketbook. Some one playfully told me the bell is rung once for a copper deposit and twice for silver. The first collection in our service was for the poor, the second for benevolent institutions, which are many in Holland, the third for the current expenses of the church. The three collections required twenty minutes. They were, to my astonishment, lifted during the sermon, seemingly without disconcerting either the preacher or the hearers. Hearing a sermon and giving are parts of a divine service, each worthy of undivided attention. Is not a collection during a vocal selection, our custom in America, a liturgical misdemeanor as gross as is the custom here of taking a collection during the sermon? St. Peter's was built in 1315. This is 1914. Too many collections have not killed it. Autopsies on moribund churches might disclose too few collections more fatal than too many.

The pulpit in which John Robinson preached was occupied this morning by Rev. J. Schokking. His sermon was in a tongue unknown to me; but his spiritually illumined face, his rich-toned voice, and his pleasing gestures demonstrated the power of these auxiliaries in the effective proclamation of the Good News. His discourse was in two sections—a homiletic custom here. Immediately after the first section, in length about thirty minutes, a Psalm was sung. This interlude is principally to rest the preacher, after which he resumes, and for ten minutes makes the application of his sermon. Since a Christian sermon should be incarnated in the hearer's daily life, the emphasis thus given the application by making it so distinct a feature highly commends itself.

The preacher of the morning graduated in letters and in law, as well as in medicine. For a number of years he sat in Parliament. But when a statute was enacted invalidating the contemporaneous occupancy of a seat in Parliament and a pulpit, he relinquished the former and held fast to the latter. I met him at the close of the service. He used hospitality without grudging, and most cordially did he invite me to dine with him. He was also good enough to show me into his library. Here he opened Matthew Henry's "Commentaries," which confirmed my estimate of his devotional nature. He pointed with regard to Hodge's "Systematic Theology," which led me to suspect him a Calvinist. He is a conservative, following literally the Confession of Dort. Best of all, he is a Christian minister, with high thoughts warmed and adorned by a heart aglow with love and courtesy.

The renowned University of Leyden, founded in 1575 by Prince William of Orange, is within three minutes' walk. Here Arminius, dear to Methodists, was a professor. Its faculty of theology today is far along the radical wing in Biblical scholarship. This university, I fear, nourishes the faith once delivered to the saints stintedly. Only one or two of its theological professors attend church. They may deduce an endorsement for non-churchgoing from their exegesis of the passage: "And I saw no temple therein." If so, they have begun their heaven "ere their days on earth be passed." There are ways which seem right to some scholars, but the end thereof may not be construction but destruction. An attendance of twenty University of Leyden students at a service is large. This painful paucity is not surprising, for like teacher, like pupil.

The parish of St. Peter's is collegiate. Some of the Dutch Reformed Churches in New York city are the same. The Methodist circuit is a collegiate system. St. Peter's has four buildings in different parts of Leyden for worship, nine pastors, a number of deaconesses, and 30,000 members. Each of the pastors preaches in rotation in the churches. He averages three sermons in two Sundays; but in addition, holds various services outside of the parish. Each of the pastors receives a salary of $1,500 and is given a month's vacation. He provides his own house. He has some perquisites from baptisms, funerals and marriages. Marriages in Holland must be performed by the state. One or two days in the week newly wedded couples come to St. Peter's for the marital blessing. Any number may assemble at the same time. The pastor who preached last in the church is the officiating clergyman, and performs the ecclesiastical service without money and without price. If the couple selects other than a "public day," the groom pays $10 for opening the church and gives a fee to the clergyman whom the bride selects. Gifts from baptisms and funerals do not make the pastor's total perquisites large. In Holland a pastor's salary is slender, his perquisites slenderer, and his retiring allowance slenderest of all. "There is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches." Enough young men enter the ministry here to meet the demand. They are, as with us, the one and the many talented, and come mostly from homes whose "only riches is ignorance of wealth." Often their patience is sorely taxed in waiting for a pulpit to open. Scrambling at "the shearer's feast" for a "good appointment" appears not to be rife.

Permit me to use an hyperbole. Dry up the canals of Holland and they could be replenished by the inhabitants pouring into them, instead of down their throats, the beer and wine they consume in a season. This extravagant figure of speech, made in good humor, is suggested, perhaps, by the hosts I see in the dining-rooms of hotels and on the sidewalks in front of cafes, drinking. There is a temperance propaganda here in the Reformed Church. Some total abstainers are among them. May the "handful of corn wave like Lebanon."

Lynx-eyed as I hope I am for the good qualities in all Christian bodies, yet what I have seen and felt in Methodism, and an invaluable characteristic of it, namely, the Spirit bearing "witness with our spirit that we are the children of God"—this doctrine, with the unction and fervor which accompany it, infused into the Reformed Churches of the Netherlands, would be a most desirable and an inestimable blessing.

I wish we Methodists might fill our vessels with this oil, then raise our torches high enough for the rays to skirt the dikes of Holland, and add more warmth and light and luster to a people whose fathers were, with princely munificence, our spiritual benefactors.—Prof. W. J. Thompson, D. D., in Zion's Herald.

JOSEPH THOMAS, THE "WHITE PILGRIM."

On Thursday of last week, 142 descendants of this distinguished son of Alamance county, held a family reunion near Burlington. The principal address was by Dr. P. H. Fleming, a minister of the Christian Church. From his address we take the following sketch of the life of "The White Pilgrim:"

Joseph Thomas was born in Orange county, now Alamance, in 1791, at what was then known as Trollinger's bridge. He was the youngest of a family of nine. At the age of seven necessity compelled him to be separated from the home of his boyhood, and he was sent to "a strange and inhospitable roof." His favorite books at this period were the New Testament and the Economy of Life. After two years of this life of hardship his brother entered Joseph in school. In the neighborhood of his brother's the young lad came in touch with a friend who was sincere and who meant much to him in his after life. The friend was one Andrew Johnson. Johnson gave him board and furnished a tutor for him. Early in the life of Joseph Thomas there came the conviction that he must be a preacher of the Gospel. His family fought the idea, his friends discouraged; yet with his indomitable will he carried his purpose through. Even in the first days of his ministry, when he was called the "boy preacher" his conferees discouraged him, telling him that he was not called to preach. Hardships and pain of all manner was his. Forsaken by friends, a wanderer, he preached on. At first his efforts were of little avail. It drove him to more study and deeper thought. With the years there came to him a deep insight into the truths of God's word, and a convincing and forceful manner of speech. His discourses were famed for their logical trend, and wherever he went great good was wrought. His first essay as a traveling evangelist was with Elder J. Warren in a trip through the counties of Virginia. Even the elder did not understand the young man. Their relation together was unpleasant and of short duration. After a visit to his old home, the "white pilgrim" set out for a lonely tour through the west. He sold his possessions and dressed completely in white in emulation, as he believed, of apostolic example. Ever thereafter he kept this garb. Journeying alone over the wilds of the west, clad in white, preaching the Christ, the man Joseph Thomas became known as the "white pilgrim." He entered into many states. He preached hundreds, nay thousands of times. He gave up all and endured all for the sake of what he thought was right. And his reward was then the knowledge that mankind was better for his having lived, and is now that his life is worthy of emulation. He died afar at the age of 44. He sleeps in a little churchyard in New Jersey. He was publisher, poet, student and teacher. The fame of him has come down to us, the honor of his memory is a goodly possession.

RANDOLPH S. S. CONVENTION.

The Randolph County Sunday School association closed its 25th annual convention Thursday night at Liberty with an able address by Gilbert T. Stephenson, of Winston, on the subject, "The Sunday School Work a Man's Job." The convention began on Wednesday morning and for two days the representative workers of the county were earnestly and thoughtfully engaged in reviewing the work, studying conditions and planning for the future.

Steps were taken to advance the county from a "Banner" to a "Front Line" class.

The president, L. F. Ross, of Asheboro, in his address dealt briefly with the history and development of the association during the quarter of a century covered by its history, and set forth the actual conditions gathered by the township associations and tabulated by the present.

His report showed that since the first of May the 20 townships in the county had held conventions, but by far the best part of his report had to do with the plans and purposes of the association in the future, especially with reference to standards of organization and efficiency.

During the coming year the association contemplates canvassing every home in the county by townships, this canvass to be followed by a rally day to be observed uniformly by every school in the county. The association is also considering a circulating library for the teachers and workers of the county. Henceforth it is to be the policy of the association to do much work of an institutional character that will result in definite training for efficiency.

L. F. Ross, of Asheboro, was re-elected president, F. M. Wright, secretary-treasurer, and Hugh Parks, chairman of the executive committee. The superintendents of the various divisions and departments were also elected.—Daily News.

GET READY FOR RALLY DAY.

Here are some practical pointers for this important occasion.

No enterprise is rallied without personal work. If a business needs recuperation, the merchant must get out among possible customers and hustle for trade. If soldiers waver in a battle and retreat is imminent, the officers must rush in among the soldiers and by personal commands and exhortations turn retreat into advance. If a political party is losing ground, its leaders must organize meetings, argue with voters, shake hands vigorously, and make friends everywhere for themselves and the cause. Any attempt to rally an institution or a project by mechanical means without using the personal element is a foredoomed failure.

If you want a Rally Day that will really rally your Sunday school, the first step is to hold a meeting of the teachers and officers. Hold it at least a week ahead of Rally Day, and as much longer ahead as possible. Make every effort to get all the teachers there. Talk over each class and even each pupil with the most painstaking detail. Go from this meeting with the understanding that every teacher is to call on all her pupils within three days and win their promise to attend on Rally Day. On the evening of the third day you will meet again and report any failures. Each failure will mean another visit, perhaps this time by the superintendent or the assistant superintendent, who will talk the matter over with the parents, and perhaps prevent the loss of a pupil from the school.

Another important piece of preparation for Rally Day is the organization of a large committee to canvass for new pupils. The pastor will bring to this committee his full knowledge of newcomers to town. Each department of the school, down to the primary, will have full representation on this committee, the little ones calling on children of their own age and the older ones calling on the adults.

Our Board has prepared a great program for Rally Day, The Sunday School Four Square. Send for all the copies you need, free of charge, today, to C. H. Hubbell, Adrian, Michigan.

DELIGHTED.

That is verdict of all who have seen our new Rally Day program, The Sunday School Four Square. Already hundreds of copies have been ordered. The Board has prepared a program that will really help your school. It has educational value. Its enthusiastic and intelligent use will give your Sunday school a great day. A program has been mailed to all the Superintendents and pastors on our list. If you have not received one, we will gladly send it by return mail.

Remember the programs are sent free and prepaid. Send your order today to C. H. Hubbell, Adrian, Michigan.

RALLY DAY PROGRAM.

Bro. Hubbell has sent us a sample of our Rally Day program, "The Sunday School Four Square." It is attractive and interesting. We would call attention to its educational value. It accents the temperance teaching, mental value of teaching, decision for Christ and practical service on the part of the Sunday School.

It uses some of the great old hymns of the church, which the children ought to know and sing more often than they do.

These programs are sent free of charge, to all the schools who order them, by the Board of Young People's Work, Adrian, Michigan.

AN ANSWERED PRAYER.

It was a splendid home. A consecrated father and mother lived there. It was a heavenly place around its fireside; it was good to be there. One son from that home was preaching the gospel, another serving God with his means as a business man, the only daughter giving her life to the Master's work on Africa's soil. Above the door of that humble cottage a placard had been placed bearing the words, "God Bless our Home." Surely this had meant more than its mechanical value. It was a living prayer of the family, and had been answered.

O Thou, by Whom we come to God,
The Life, the Truth, the Way;
The path of prayer Thyself hath trod:
Lord, teach us how to pray!

—James Montgomery.

THE ARCTIC TEST.

Although the physical endurance of a polar explorer, no matter how great it is, will not compensate for a lack in him of the first two qualities of optimism and patience, which are moral or temperamental, it is essential that every man on an exploring expedition should be physically "fit." When a sledging party in the antarctic leaves its base, and works its way over the trackless snow, it must drag all its provisions and equipment; if any member of that party breaks down, not only is his death certain, but the lives of his companions are put into grave peril. The death of Captain Scott and three of his companions was mainly owing to the unlooked-for breakdown of Petty Officer Evans.

A man's physical endurance largely depends on his state of health and his personal habits. On no consideration would I ever take on an expedition to the polar regions a man who was a slave to any habit that did not make for good. In the polar regions intoxicating drinks are fatal, and a man addicted to strong drink is worse than useless. Likewise, a greedy man would be a trial to himself and to his companions. The explorer must be moderate in food and drink.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, in the Youth's Companion.

Our people are becoming more and more interested in the Children's Home. Bro. Stowe has informed me that the Quarterly Conference of Why Not Ct. has voted to raise $100.00 to support a child in the Home.

Miss Cora Redding, who has spent the summer here and did most efficient work has gone to her father's for a short rest, after which she will enter the Senior class at Salem College.

TAKE CARE OF THE BOYS.

Yes, fathers and mothers, it is your boys that need your most thoughtful care. It seems to be instinctive to parents to shield their girls from evil, to keep them from the sight and sound of sinful things. What mother would rest when evening comes if her little daughter were at large in the street, frequenting the village store, or hanging about the door of the drinking saloon. How many times is the son of ten years old away from the sight and sound of the mother at nightfall, breathing in a worse malaria than that from stagnant pools, from the rude talk of older boys, or of coarse vulgar men? Outgrow it, will they? Now and then a boy poisoned in childhood by vicious associates does live down the poison, and comes out a pure, clean man. But look over any community in search of the young men without guile, whose souls and bodies are clean, and are they the rule or the exception? Scrutinize the sisters of the same young men, and do you expect to find the spotless among them the rule or the exception? It is the curse of the world that its boys are cherished less sacredly than its girls! and they whose temptations to physical vices are strongest have the least done to fortify them against evil.

Do not say that because of the difference in their natures, boys and girls cannot be trained by the same standard of morality. It is a base libel upon manhood, fostered so long in the world that it has come almost to be believed. If the boys have greater temptations, so have they stronger powers of resistance, if these powers only are cultivated. But too often they are wholly neglected. Do not trust to the future to bring out your boys all right, for it will almost certainly bring them out scarred! Neither trust to their being above temptation. Know always where they are and what they are doing, and what are their inmost thoughts; and this, not by prying, tyrannical oversight of their movements, but with such a tender, yearning interest for their well-being that they love to open their souls to you. Some day these boys of yours will be seeking out mates, and you will expect them to bring to you spotless, high-minded girls. In receiving them, how can you think it honorable to give less in return than spotless, high-minded boys?

A PROUD SPIRIT.

A farmer planted some radish seeds, and when they had sprouted he said to his wife: "I am afraid I have planted these entirely too thick, and when they grow up a little more I'll pull the poorest of them out and give the rest more room to grow." Now, one of the young radishes heard this, and said to itself: "Now, I'll put all the nourishment I can gather into my leaves, and hustle out with my flowers, and I'll look so much prettier than the rest that I will surely be left to grow." So, it slyly and greedily reached out its roots and gathered in all the nourishment it could send up into its leaves which soon became taller and larger than all the rest, and it became proud and haughty and looked down upon them. The higher it held its head the higher it grew, and the higher it grew the more contempt it had for its neighbors, and the more it praised itself for being better than they. One day the farmer came out to thin them out, but after looking them over he exclaimed: "My! They are doing better than I expected, so I guess I'll let them all grow. But I might pull this thing up; it is all top and no root, and never will be good for anything." And up came the haughty one to perish all alone. God wants of us the same as the farmer wanted of the radish: the root (heart), not that which looks nice but is useless.—Selected.

HE FELL IN LOVE.

Dr. James Stalker had an experience in his early ministry which conveys a lesson of inestimable value to all ministers. Here is the eminent Scotch preacher's sweet little story:

"When I was first settled in a church I discovered a thing of which nobody had told me and which I had not anticipated, but which proved a tremendous aid in doing the work of the ministry. I fell in love with my congregation. I do not know how otherwise to express it. It was as genuine a blossom of the heart as any which I have ever experienced. It made it easy to do anything for my people; it made it a perfect joy to look them in the face on Sunday morning. I do not know whether this is an universal experience, but I should think it is not uncommon. For my part, I like to meet a man who thinks his own congregation, however small, the most important one among all the churches."

—The late Maharajah of Travancore had the reputation of being one of the most learned of all modern Hindu princes. Although he himself never accepted Christianity, yet he said these striking words about the Bible: "Where do the English people get their knowledge, intelligence, cleverness, and power? It is their Bible that gives it to them; and now they bring it to us, translate it into our language, and say, 'Take it, read it, examine it, and see if it is not good.' Of one thing I am convinced, that, do with it what we will, oppose it as we may, it is the Christian's Bible that will sooner or later work out the regeneration of our land."—Bible in the World.

Since my last report we have had the meeting at Mt. Elma and Rehoboth. We had no other preacher at these churches. At Mt. Elma we began Saturday night before the first Sunday in this month and closed the following Thursday night, having preaching morning and night. The rain kept some away, but all considered we had fair congregations and a good meeting. An organ will be placed in the church soon. We had some happy services, in which the pastor and people rejoiced. The church was revived. and two were added to the membership and one since the meeting.

At Rehoboth we began Saturday before the second Sunday in August at 11 o'clock, and closed Saturday night before the third Sunday. The third quarterly conference was held there at one o'clock the day the meeting began, having dinner on the ground. On the second Sunday we had Sunday school at ten, preaching at eleven, dinner on the ground, preaching at 2:30 and again at night, and during the week we had preaching morning and night. We had some good services, the people helping in experience meetings, prayer and song services. The people were happy and four united with the church. It was decided to put a new roof on the church and a committee was elected to have it done. J. H. Abernethy.

We held our first special meeting at Burke Chapel with Rev. O. D. Stacy as help. This was a good meeting; 10 or more converts, 3 accessions with a great revival in the church. The meeting was fine at the close and should have been continued. There is no reason why this should not become a good live church if Conference can put a man here who can give all his time. It would be as well to spend some money here for a year or two as elsewhere.

Our second meeting was at Shady Grove with Bro. J. W. Self to help. Here we did a good work in arousing the dead church and getting them in a fine working condition. One young man was happily converted. Bro. Garmon was with us with his usual zeal and earnestness. The meeting was continued one service longer or probably more. Pray for us. Two more meetings to be held.

W. P. Martin.

Asheville.

No, you're mistaken. The preacher at Asheville isn't dead, neither has the church at that place fallen on sleep. The preacher has been taking a rest, but the work of the church has been going on as usual.

Just after my last report, Bro. Havener made the book cases and installed them in the pastor's study at the church. Then the WillingWorker's class bought a desk, revolving chair, and rug, so that now, the preacher boasts one of the most complete studies in the Conference.

On Thursday last some of the men folks gathered at the church and proceeded to grade the lot. The work was in charge of Bro. Crane, a Baptist preacher, and an experienced grader, who gave his services, with a team and a couple of men. Some of the members who could not be present sent hands in their stead, so there was enough help to finish the work by quitting time. The appearance of the church is vastly improved. We have yet to lay the concrete walks from the sidewalk to the church entrances. Bro. Sol Carter has donated three loads of sand for this purpose, and we hope to have the work done shortly.

Our congregation last Sunday night had the pleasure of listening to a sermon preached by Rev. Ronalds Taylor, pastor of one of our churches in Baltimore. He is one of the preacher's classmates at College and Seminary, and has been spending a couple of weeks at the parsonage.

The church and neighborhood was greatly revived during the few days' meeting held the second week in August.

It was a glorious time of rejoicing indeed. The pastor and his help, brother Curry, worked faithfully. Each sermon was splendid. Bro. Curry seemed to know just what we all needed. Congregations averaged well and became more and more interested each day.

There were eighteen conversions and renewals, seven added to the church. We are sorry the meeting could not continue a few more days. There are still others we are interested in and anxious to see saved.

Pleasant Grove, Davidson Circuit.

Our special meeting began second Sunday in August and continued until the following Thursday night. Bro. Joel B. Trogdon, of Uwharrie Ct., was our pastor, John W. Hulin's pulpit help, and did most of the preaching and through his faithful work were two souls born into the kingdom of God. He preached some soul-stirring sermons. We all liked him so well; hope he will come again. Bro. Trogdon spent Thursday night with the writer and left for his home Friday morning very unwell; hope he soon recovered from his illness and is well.

Our Sunday school is somewhat dull; it seems as though so many of our scholars have somewhere to go rather than to Sunday school. I think we all ought to attend church services if we have the opportunity rather than to go to picnics, sociables or anywhere else. May the good Lord put it in the hearts of the people to study this matter carefully.

Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith on August 18, 1914, and took their little son, John Hulin, aged one year, eight months and seventeen days. The interment was at Pleasant Grove cemetery August 19, funeral services being conducted by our pastor, Rev. John W. Hulin.

He leaves a father, mother, two brothers and many loved ones to mourn their loss. Oh, how hard to stand by the little open grave and see the little white casket lowered into the earth. We know little John's spirit is with Jesus. This sweet bud of oprmise touched by the resistless fingers of disease closed its lovely eyes to all earthly scenes to open them on brighter ones. Oh, how lonely it seems to think little John is home no more. But Christ said, Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven. Kind Father, give us grace to submit to thy righteous will and be fully prepared to say, the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord.

We had our children's exercise August 22d. We had a very nice time indeed. We met at eleven o'clock and had a speech by Bro. Loy on our duty to our Sunday school, which was very good; then we had intermission for our public picnic. The good ladies gathered round the one hundred and twenty foot table and it was soon laden with all kinds of delicious things to eat; if we could we would love to congratulate the ladies on their success, but words fail us; but will say this, that we have attended several picnics, but this surpassed anything that we were ever at for beauty and delicious victuals. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves. Then after dinner the company again assembled in the church to hear the children go through their exercise. It did your soul good to see the little tots come out and recite; they acquitted themselves splendidly. The Sunday school is very much indebted to Miss Nora Hilton for training them. At the close of the exercise the children took their offering which amounted to $2.68, and every one went home feeling that it had been good to meet together.

Our third quarterly conference meets with Lebanon church Saturday, Aug. 29 at 2:30 P. M. We hope the official brethren will all be out with a good report.

A Great Revival at Shiloh, Yadkin College Circuit.

Rev. J. H. Bowman came to me on Saturday before third Sunday in August and when we reached old Shiloh on Sunday at 11 o'clock A. M. we were greeted by one of the largest congregations ever assembled there. Bro. Bowman had all the attentive hearers that this large church would hold and it seemed that the whole campus was alive with human beings. The Spirit of God was manifest from the beginning. Bro. Bowman commenced to preach plainly and forcibly, winning the esteem and confidence of the congregations. The service grew in interest from day to day till Thursday afternoon. The Spirit came in such power that it seemed that almost the entire congregation was filled with new wine, even the wine of the Spirit. It was indeed a manifestation of the Spirit's greatest power. We had this large church from comfortably full to overflowing each day.

I have been with Bro. Bowman in a great many gracious meetings and he has always done good preaching, but this time he excelled himself. My people were pleased and will never forget him or his sermons, especially the one delivered at 11 o'clock Thursday A. M. I had Bro. Fred Koonts and Jessie Evans out to get Bro. Bowman a purse as a slight token of our appreciation of his faithful services. They brought in seventeen dollars. I made no appeal to the congregation. This made it very gratifying on part of the pastor and I judge the congregation was also gratified.

I am now closing the fifth year and I can say with others, this was the greatest meeting held at Shiloh. Great because of the presence and power of the Spirit; because of the general revival of the church; because of the conviction of sinners. Some ten conversions: eight joined the church. We are all glad and happy and I believe old Shiloh is in the best shape she has been for years. To God be all the glory both now and forever, world without end, amen and amen.

H. L. Powell, Pastor.

We held our third quarterly meeting at Liberty Grove on Saturday before the second Sunday in this month, August. The usual business was transacted. Finances about as last year. We got out last year on finances. A canvass of the votes cast for delegate to next Annual Conference showed that W. M. Taylor, of St. Paul was elected, then J. W. Hopkins, of Brown Summit, was elected alternate. Our special meting will begin at Liberty Grove next Sunday, fifth Sunday.

Our special meeting began on the third Sunday with two services and dinner on ground. We had a good congregation that day. Bro. Davis gave us two good sermons to start with. Bro. N. G. Bethea came on Monday A. M. and preached the rest of the week; he gave us some of his soul-stirring sermons. We feel that we have all been greatly benefited by his sermons from day to day. We feel that it was good for us to be there. The church was revived and I trust that we will live better lives from this on. We had four accessions to the church and several reclaimed. We shall always be glad to have Bro. Bethea with us. On Thursday night Bro. Bethea sang a solo for us and had the congregation to sing the chorus with him. It was fine. We will think of him as we sing this and it means so much to us. Blessed "Whosoever"—that means me. We had a good number from other churches to worship with us.

On Tuesday quarterly conference was held at 2 o'clock. We are expecting to have children's service on the second Sunday night in September.

We were glad to have Miss Inez Gray and Bro. Julian, of Whitakers, with us this week; also Miss Sallie May Neville, of Enfield. Miss Lola Long, of Cedar Rock has returned home after spending a week with Miss Agnes Ivey. Mr. H. C. Neal went to Enfield Saturday on business.

We haven't had Sunday school for two Sundays now, but hope we will take a new start, as all of the special meetings are over. With best wishes to the Herald readers,

There were 72 present at Sunday school last Sunday, which is much better than it has been for the last three Sundays.

The school held its annual picnic at the church last Saturday and all seemed to enjoy themselves.

In the morning the choir sang several special selections and everybody was served lemonade, after which dinner was spread out under the trees. In the afternoon Bro. Martin made a very interesting talk on "Making Other People Happy."

Swings were provided for the children and plenty of ice cream and watermelon was furnished for the Sunday school classes. The watermelons were furnished by our superintendent, Mr. G. A. Webster, and Mr. L. F. Eller.

The special meeting began yesterday and Bro. Martin preached two very fine sermons. There was a good congregation out to hear him each time. Bro. J. H. Moton is coming Wednesday to help in the meeting.

Meeting at Shiloh.

I am just back from assisting Bro. Powell in a special meeting at Shiloh church on Yadkin College Circuit. The meeting began on the third Sunday and closed on Thursday following. Shiloh is one of our strongest country churches financially and numerically. The congregations were very large, I was told that as a whole perhaps the largest that have ever attended a special meeting at this place. The meeting was one of unusual importance. The meeting resulted in 8 conversions and eight accessions to the church, which was great considering the few unsaved people that were in attendance. The revival in the church seemed to be thorough and genuine, and was about the best I ever witnessed. But the greatness of this great meeting consisted in uniting and welding together the membership that I think will guarantee the safety of the church against a small opposing element that was endangering the peace and unity of the church. It seemed to be the mind of the better thinkers that the church is at the beginning of a career of greater usefulness, and I am sure by watchfulness, coolness and deliberate judgment that this will be so. Brethren, look for great things, expect great things, work for great things, and by a united effort the Lord will use you to the accomplishment of great things. This church is fully able to take care of a pastor, and I hope in the not very far future to hear of its being set off as a station. May God's Spirit lead to great usefulness.

The third quarterly conference was held at Charlotte Church on the 22d of August. The conference was not as well attended as it should have been, and yet I believe the absence of some was due to good reasons. The conference was an interesting one, the reports were reasonably good. The delegate elect and alternate will be announced in the paper later. The next quarterly conference will be held at Cedar Falls. I am engaged in a meeting this week at Brower's Chapel, Bro. Stowe assisting.

Grace Church, La Grange.

On Tuesday evening, August 18, a delivery boy was sent to our house by one of our male members, and presented to us five pounds sugar, eight pounds lard, and one quarter barrel flour. One hour later several children, together with a number of ladies, came bringing eggs, butter, lard, postum, grits, meal, crackers, ten pounds sugar, cheese and chicken. For these tokens of love and respect we are profoundly grateful.

Mr. J. G. Rogers, of Burlington, who has been visiting here attended our S. S. here Sunday. We were glad to have him with us and to open our school. We were glad also to have him in our home.

Little Dorothy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Graham, is very low with typhoid fever. There are several cases of fever in town.

Remember to pray for our meeting here the week following first Sunday in September. Will H. Neese.

La Grange, N. C., Aug. 25, 1914.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Circuit.

I will tell in part what a glorious time we had at our church yesterday. It was the closing day of Mr. Jarett's singing. There was a large attendance and good singing. Mr. Jarrett has labored so faithfully in teaching our school, and taught us many beautiful songs. Yesterday evening he had what I call an experience meeting, and I think he enjoyed it finely as he and several others were made to shout the praises aloud. We were sorry our pastor could not be with us yesterday. But owing to his special meeting at Mt. Pleasant he had to be away. We were pleased to have Mrs. Trogdon and children, also her sister, and while we enjoyed their presence I believe they enjoyed the exercise as well. And while we realized that we were benefited by being there, that there was room for more and many blessings in store for them if they had come and taken part.

Mr. Atlas Ridge's oldest daughter is very low with typhoid fever. His wife is in very bad health. I pray if it be God's will to restore them to perfect health again and to be ever present to comfort in time of afflictions.

We were glad to have my niece, Miss Ada Wood, of Thomasville, spend last week with us. We were sorry to have to part with her yesterday when she returned home. Mrs. C. H. Hill.

Burlington.

Our Sunday school had an increase in attendance last Sunday. There were 232 present. Several of our people have returned from their vacation trips.

Our pastor and family returned last Thursday. Bro. Curry gave us two good sermons Sunday. The attendance at both services was very good. The attendance at the evening service was much larger than usual, and the sermon was especially good.

Last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock Bro. Curry performed the ceremony that united in marriage Mr. Joseph Brooks and Miss Mary Anderson, both of Haw River. These young people are very popular at Haw River, and have a host of friends and admirers who wish for them a long and happy wedded life.

The condition of Bro. Geo. W. Coble continues very serious. He is being treated by the very best physicians, and is being waited on by a trained nurse. Everything is being done that human hands and medical skill can do for his recovery. Special prayers were offered in his behalf at Sunday school and the preaching service Sunday. We are still hopeful that he will yet recover, and we ask that the church in general remember this brother at a throne of grace.

Mrs. Workman, who has been confined with a protracted illness for several days, is very much improved, we are glad to report.

Mr. J. Hocutt Way, brother of the writer, who resides at Ramseur, N. C., is spending this week here visiting his mother and other relatives. He will enter the Senior class of Pleasant Garden High School at the opening of the fall term.

Miss Swannie Patterson, who spent the past two weeks at Asheville and other points of interest, returned last Monday. This was her annual vacation granted by her employer, "Uncle Samuel."

On Friday evening, Sept. 4, at 8 o'clock, the singing class of the Odd Fellows' Orphans' Home, Goldsboro, will give a concert in our church for the benefit of the I. O. O. F. Orphanage. We hope our people will show their appreciation of the work of this institution by attending this concert. It will be given under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. lodge at this place.

Next Saturday is the time for our annual picnic. Everything seems to be in readiness for the picnic, and we are anticipating a good time and a large attendance. We trust every M. P. school in the county will be represented. Come, and bring your baskets filled with "rations," and we will have an enjoyable day together. C. B. Way,

Bro. A. M. Hamilton will fill my appointments at Charlotte the fifth Sunday in August, 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. I hope all the members will turn out.

Our third quarterly conference will convene at Charlotte on Saturday night before the first Sunday in September. We want all the members of the quarterly conference present. D. A. Braswell.

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR

We had good congregations both at Flat Rock and Bethel last Sunday. At Bethel we were pleased to see so many of our new church members present. We were also much pleased to receive into the church a young married couple—Bro. Wm. M. Pope and wife. They give promise of becoming useful church members. Some of our regular "standbys" who usually sit to the right of the preacher and give him strong support, were absent and the preacher missed them much. If members of the church only knew how much their presence means to the pastor they would try to be present when not providentially prevented. Our parsonage property has been much improved by the town placing a concrete walk the entire length of the front of the lot which is 200 feet, and then to complete the improvement we have had concrete laid from the sidewalk to parsonage steps.

Mt. Hermon Circuit.

We have just closed a successful meeting at Mt. Hermon; results about a dozen conversions and reclamations, and seven accessions. Had no pulpit help except one sermon by Bro. Morgan of the Christian church. Last week we had a good meeting at Cedar Cliff. They say the best ever held there. Bro. G. L. Curry was the help and won all by his kindliness and simple, earnest gospel preaching. Eighteen conversions and reclamations, seven accessions. Thus far there have been about sixty conversions and reclamations, and 34 accessions this year.

Greensville Circuit.

The special meeting at Philadelphia church resulted in two professions. Vast crowds attended, the great majority to eat, walk around, talk and laugh, and a few to worship God. This is especially true of the Sunday congregations of nearly all the churches of this charge. I think the church was edified some. This meeting embraced the second Sunday. I had no pulpit help.

Our meeting began the third Sunday at Matthews and closed on Wednesday following. There were 5 or 6 professions and one accession. The dreadfully hot, dry and dusty weather militated much against this meeting and so many were kept away to cut and cure tobacco. Yet the church was full every day but one. I had the very acceptable services during the meeting of Rev. T. F. McCulloch, who gave us excellent sermons. I hope that much more good was done here than was apparent. If all the Christians and prohibitionists were as active and zealous as the whiskey agents are, how great the good that would be accomplished!

A SAND PARTY.

Gertrude ran down to the beach with her hair flying in the wind and the sunbeams playing hide and seek among her curls. Gertrude was one of the best-loved little girls on the Beach Row that summer. If she were in the play, the mothers looked out of their cottage doors and smiled and went contentedly about their work. They knew that Gertrude would keep everybody else busy and happy because she was so busy and happy herself.

Marjorie and Nellie were quarreling when Gertrude got down to the edge of the water, and Jack and Richard were about to have a fight. Gertrude did not ask them what was the matter. She knew it would not make them feel any happier to talk it all over. "Let's build a sand castle," she said eagerly, and all of the children out on the sand came running to help.

Jack and Richard had to run down to the water and bring their pails full of sea water, because the sand was too dry to build with. Then they all took their tools and began to dig and build with all their might. Gertrude said Richard should design the castle, because he could draw so well. This pleased Richard, and he did his best. They built a great square castle with four big rooms and a wide hall. They made it six feet square and then put a smaller second story on that. On one end they built up a great round tower as high as they could make the wet sand hold. Marjorie ran to the house and got her small flag to stick in the top of the tower, and it looked so fine a castle that Jack said it ought to have a moat around it like old-time castles did.

"What is a moat, mister?" asked Nellie, laughing, as if she thought Jack didn't know what he was talking about.

He did, though, for he told her: "A moat is a kind of ditch that they used to dig around a castle and then fill the ditch with water, so that no one could cross the water and get to the castle unless they let the drawbridge down. The drawbridge was a bridge that they fixed so it could be drawn up and then let down again."

"You know a lot," said Nellie admiringly.

Jack was glad that he remembered the things he read. "We'll get a curtain pole and stick it up in the ground for a flagpole," he said thoughtfully; "and then we will take a cord and tie it to the flagpole and then to our drawbridge and fix it so we can let it down and draw it up."

It took some time to get the drawbridge fixed and in good working order and longer to get the moat dug and then filled with water from the sea; but when it was all done twelve happy children joined hands and danced around the, castle, singing, "London Bridge is falling down, falling down," while Jack slowly raised and lowered his drawbridge to the music. The mothers in the cottages looked out at their doors and windows and smiled at the happy sound. Then the children decided to name their castle and called it "Castle Good Will." They brought shells from the beach and made the letters in white shells on the sand. It was a lot of fun, but it took some time to make the name all smooth and beautiful. When it was finished, though, and they began to think it must be dinner time, they looked up and saw mothers coming out of every cottage door with baskets in their hands. It was a regular procession of mothers, and each had a lovely basket of lunch for the castle builders. There was so much lunch and it was so nice that they found a shady place under the edge of a cliff and begged the mothers to stay and eat with them. The mothers stayed and had such a good time they said they would come again and eat lunch on the sand.—Francis McKinnon Morton, in Christian Advocate.

THE NEW SCHOLAR.

Lena was not going to school this spring. She became very lonely sometimes in the morning before Josephine came home. Josephine tried to remember things that happened to tell her. Today she had a big piece of news.

"There was a new scholar."

"How old is she?" asked Lena, much interested at once.

"About your age. Her name is Janet George. She and the family are going to live here."

It was great news to have a new scholar; but after all Josephine did not find very much to tell about her.

No, she wasn't very pretty.

"Her nose is small and her mouth is big. Her hair is straight, straw color, and her eyes just like everybody's—sort of blue, you know, but not very blue. She's thin. She's skinny, really. And she isn't far on in her lessons."

"She's a very disappointing person," said Lena, rather indignantly. "When we haven't had a new scholar for ever and ever so long, she might be a different one."

The next morning when Josephine started for school, she met the new scholar outside the gate.

"Why, do you live near here?" asked Josephine in surprise.

"Not very," said Janet, "I came to lend your sister a book. You know you said she was lonely while you were at school. This is a very entertaining book. Don't you think that she would like to read it?"

Josephine thanked her and ran back to the house with it. Lena loved books.

"Where is the post office?" asked Janet as they walked on together.

"Straight past the school," said Josephine. "But it's pretty far."

"I started early on purpose. I want to put in a letter for Miss Carewe."

"Did you know Miss Carewe when you came?" asked Josephine.

"No. But she dropped her bankbook and I took it to her. After that we were acquainted. She's old, and she hasn't anybody to go on errands, and I can just as well as not."

"She always can as well as not," Josephine told Lena at the end of a week, and at the end of a month she said the same thing.

"Janet can't remember sometimes how to spell things or how to do her examples, but she can remember beautifully how to help anybody. I think, for her age, for a girl, she must be almost as good as Abraham or Isaac or Jacob. The minister himself says that she's good; he ought to know."

Lena laughed a little.

"Think how disappointed in her we were at first! Because her hair was wispy, and her eyes weren't very blue, and she wasn't very far on. We didn't understand her, did we?"

"She is so pleasant," said Josephine. "She is so daily pleasant. It makes you forget all about not being pretty or—" Josephine did not say the other word, but Lena guessed it.

"I suppose," said Lena anxiously,

ROME AT HOME.

The following are a few extracts taken from a published article of Dr. D. G. Whittinghill, president of the Baptist Theological Seminary, Rome, Italy. The doctor has promised to send The Menace some interesting facts soon about the papacy in its home. At present he is in this country, but expects soon to return to Rome.

From a religious standpoint, Italy does not present a very optimistic outlook. The Italians, owing to their enforced relations with the Vatican, are nominally Catholics, but millions of them have absolutely abandoned the church and embraced atheism. There are at least three reasons why there is so much unbelief with us. First, the scandalous conduct of many priests, monks, nuns and the higher clergy, has thoroughly disgusted respectable people of all classes. They naturally wish to have nothing to do with a church whose representatives are no better than the average worldling. Secondly, men of intelligence cannot accept as true such doctrines as papal infallibility, transubstantiation, purgatory, auricular confession, mariolatry, the worship of relics and saints and similar absurd teachings. Thirdly, the hostile attitude of the Roman Church toward modern science and philosophy has driven many of Italy's most noted men away from the Roman Church. Learned Italians have not forgotten the treatment which Galileo and Giordano Bruno received from the Roman Church, nor are they unmindful of the fact that Roman Catholic Italy, France and Spain have more infidels to the population than any other countries in Christendom.

The recent suppression of four popes by Pius X. has made no small stir in clerical circles. Their names are Boniface VI., Boniface VII., John XVI., and Benedict X. These names have appeared for centuries in the official lists of the popes published by the Vatican. They are to be seen also in beautiful medallions in St. Paul's Church in Rome where all the popes, from St. Peter to the present incumbent, are visible. Pius X., however, has forgotten to tell us why he cancelled these names. Only two reasons could be given, either unworthiness or an illegal election. If these were his criterions, then why did he not cancel forty instead of four names? Why should he leave on the official list the names of Vigilius who starved his predecessor, Sylverius, to death; Sergius III., who became the father of Pope John XI. by an infamous woman; of John XII. elected Pope at 12 years of age, who was cruel, sacrilegious and a homicide; of Boniface VII, the first one who dared call himself the Vicar of Christ; of the notorious Alexander VI., the father of the unspeakable Caesar Borgia, and many others who obtained the papal throne by intrigue, graft and even fouler means? In view of such inexplicable acts, the Italian public is wondering whether gout or the loss of France or modernism has unsettled the Pope's mind.

Let us not falsely conclude that the punishment, humiliation and persecution to which these illustrious men, not to mention hunudreds of others less noted, have been shamelessly subjected, signifies the arrest of the movement. Not at all! Modernism is more alive than ever, especially in Italy. It is a well known fact that when a heretic is killed either literally or figuratively ten others rise up in his place. This has actually happened in Italy. Gennaro Avolio, who edits the "New Reform" has a following of about 500 priests not to count a multitude of laymen. Domenico Battaini has an equal following. Murri has even more. Minocchi at the University of Pisa has many friends among the cultured clergy, most of whom are also radicals. Not long since a petition signed by more than 5,000 priests asking to be released from the vow of celibacy was in vain presented to the Pope. These facts go far to prove beyond a doubt that modernism is a living issue that must be reckoned with, not only by the Vatican, but by all who labor for the truth in Roman Catholic countries where modernism has had its greatest triumphs.—The Menace

A TRANSFORMED LIFE.

"Teach her to pray; for that is the shortest road to understanding the truth," said an old man of seventy-six years as he brought his old wife of the same age to the lady teacher who had charge of the station class held in Cho Chou for the women and girls of that church. Now the little old man is a small farmer, and all his life has "eaten bitterness and sorrow." The first time the teacher saw him was one Sunday, twenty years ago, when he was an enquirer: all of a sudden, in the midst of the sermon, the chapel door was thrown open and a whirlwind, in the shape of a little old woman, seized the little old man by the collar, and, before anyone could come to the rescue, had him out in the courtyard where she berated him most soundly. Sunday after Sunday the little man went hungry because he would go to the chapel, and she openly declared war; not one mouthful of warm food would she prepare for any of her family who were following after the foreigners. "Ah, what makes him so patient? He did not use to be so, but was ever ready for a warm contest; is his patience not a positive proof that he has really taken of the foreigner's medicine, and in a hundred days will die?" Thus thought the little woman, and she set herself as a plaster to counteract the poison. Months came and grew into years, and gradually the change in the husband softened the little old woman, till one Sunday she appeared at the chapel simply saying, "My old partner is looking after the house today and I have come to church." As it happened, the lady teacher was there for a few days, and proposed to the helper's wife that the little old lady should be asked to stay as her guest for two days. "I know now why he wanted me to come today; you are kind; I did not think you were this way." And many such expressions were heard during the two days she remained. Thus little by little the seed of gentleness sown in the heart by the patient farmer brought its harvest, and two years ago when she came to her last illness, she constantly expressed herself as "happy" and "at rest in her heart."—Mission Studies.

"HE TOUCHED HER HAND AND THE FEVER LEFT HER."

The White-Man-of-God had been spending some weeks amongst the Congo towns in Africa and one evening climbed a steep path to a small town on the crown of a hill. The boys and the carriers blew their whistles to announce to the town's folk the arrival of a visitor, and a moment later several people came down the path to offer a welcome. Among others was an old woman, crying bitterly:—

"Oh, white man, I am so glad you have come to our town! My little girl is very ill."

"What is the matter with your little one?" asked the visitor.

"She has a great fire in her body, and it has been there for two moons."

When the missionary's eyes had become accustomed to the dark interior of the grass hut he could see, lying on a piece of mat in one corner of the only room, a girl about two years old. There was indeed a great fire in that little body, and he knew that many a strong man had given up the fight against the African fever before two months were out.

"And what are you doing for your little daughter, who is truly very ill?" he inquired.

"Every night," she replied, "when it is dark, I carry her down the path up which you came, white man, and when I come to the river at the botton I dip her in, and leave her there until all the fire has gone out of her body."

The missionary shuddered as he heard of the drastic treatment; but he could not blame the ignorant mother. Nobody had taught her better, and she did it because she loved her little one.

"Come," he said, "find me your big boiling pot. Fill it, and make the water warm."

When this was done, he sponged the dry, hot frame of the little girl, and borrowed a blanket from a kindly neighbor to wrap her in. Then, opening the wonderful medicine box, he took some quinine and administered it to his patient.

After the evening meal the folks of the town gathered round the white man to listen to his teaching. The great moon shone out, making the palms to shimmer in the silver light. The missionary tried to spiritualize to his listeners what had happened to the grass hut. He spoke to them of the Great Physician, who could not only cure them when they were sick and ill in body, but could take away the sin from their hearts and make them perfectly whole. Afterwards they sang together in their native tongue the translation of our evening hymn:—

"At even, ere the sun was set,
The sick, O Lord, around Thee lay;
Oh in what divers pains they met!
And with what joy they went away."

And in the closing prayer the white man prayed that the same loving Christ would come and lay his healing touch upon their little friend, that the fever might leave her.

Toward the end of the week, after making many visits to distant towns, the doctor arrived again one evening, and once more journeyed up the steep path. As usual, the carriers' whistles were blown, and at the top he found not the mother, weeping, but the little patient herself, still very weak and frail, only just able to stand; but the fever had gone and health and strength were beginning to come back.

That same evening the people gathered just where they had met a week before, and listened once more to the story of the Great Saviour. They sang again the evening hymn:—

"Thy touch has still its ancient power;
No word from Thee can fruitless fall:
Hear in this solemn evening hour,
And in Thy mercy heal us all."

They felt that the prayer offered in their town a week before had been directly answered, and the white man's great God had come and done exactly as they had asked him. So by the healing, rendered for Christ's sake to that little one, the hearts of all in the town were warmed toward the missionary, and to all he had to tell.

On the mission stations in Congo, and far away amongst the towns, God is in a wonderful way using the medical work as a means of bringing the people to the feet of Christ.—Exchange.

TO-DAY YOUR DAY.

Good days and bad days exist only in your own head. The weather has nothing to do with it. Each day is what you make it yourself. Bad weather is only an unfortunate opinion.

Suppose it is raining pitchforks. You get word that your salary has been doubled or that a forgotten uncle has left you a million dollars. What do you care about the weather then? Or suppose the person you love is dying. Unexpectedly a turn for the better comes. The doctor says your dear one will live. What if it is hotter than Tophet? It is a good day, a great day, a happy day.

It's what you think and feel about it that makes each day what it is. You within yourself can make each day a good day. Put down in the notebook of your soul the poet Runeberg's thought: "Each day is a life."

When you get up in the morning, throw back your shoulders and take a deep breath. Meet the new day like a man. Say to yourself: "Another day, another life!" For all we know, it may be the only day we'll ever have. Let's make it the best day we can. Let's strive to see that it is a day worth while. Let's move a step forward in our work. Let's do all the good we can. Let's get all the happiness we can today.

Right now is the only time you can control. Yesterday is a record. To-morrow is a secret. To-day is yours, is mine.

SHE DOETH LITTLE KINDNESSES.

She could not give much to the Lord's work; her scanty income barely sufficed herself and four small children. She could not spend much time visiting the poor and ill. Those sturdy boys coming home from school must find mother waiting. Yet the widow longed to do something for the Master—brighten some life, gladden some heart for his sake. The answer to her oft-repeated prayer appeared at her own door on a bleak winter day—that most seldom welcomed visitor, an agent.

The vendor of patent clothes hangers, a frail, slender body, blue with cold, drooping with fatigue, had scarcely begun her stereotyped speech when the widow glimpsed and grasped her opportunity. "Come right in and warm yourself by my fire. No; I can't buy, but do just have a cup of tea with me." And before the worn-out wanderer knew what was going on she was drawn into the cozy room and tucked up on the roomy sofa before the blaze, while her hostess bustled off to boil the kettle and cut the cake.

It was such a pleasure to see this tired soul refreshed and rested that the widow tried it again and again, substituting raspberry shrub for tea in summer, but with a welcome always warm, till never a woman came to the vine-clad cottage in the hope of sales but went away with comfort and sympathy instead. Nor did she fail to tell them of the "very present help" she herself had known in time of trouble.

"Yes, I've found a field of work 'at my door,' " confessed she after the minister broke in on her thus engaged. "Talk about cups of cold water, shrub and tea are my line."—Exchange.

LITTLE CHILDREN.

Blessings, blessings on the beds,
Whose white pillows softly bear
Rows of little shining heads
That have never known a care.

Pity for the heart that bleeds
In the homestead desolate,
Where no little troubling needs
Make the weary working wait.

Safely, safely to the fold
Bring them wheresoe'er they be
Thou, who saidst of them of old,
Suffer them to come to me.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

FALLS FROM THIRD STORY OF CONVENT.

Some of the Sisters of Mercy of the House of the Good Shepherd, at Ninetieth street and East End avenue, were aroused about 11:30 last nighht by moans that came from the yard.

Going out, they found seventeen-year-old Henrietta Healy of Hoboken dying half-conscious in the yard. She had been placed in the institution about two months ago by her mother. She was revived enough to tell her story. She had planned for some time, she said, to try to escape from the institution. Last night, after waiting until every one else was in bed and asleep, she had arisen, dressed herself and climbed out of the dormitory window on the third floor.

She had tried to work her way along a drain pipe, but had lost her hold and fallen.

In Bellevue Hospital it was said the girl probably had internal injuries, besides a fracture of one hip.—New York World, March 22, 1914.

The unanswered question: Why do girls hazard their lives to escape from these houses of Rome?—The Menace.

At the recent international convention of advertising men, the slogan, "Swat the lie" was adopted as a business battle cry. The "ad" men would have more truths published in alvertisements and fewer luring pictures. A protest was registered against the use of multigraph letters, in imitation of typewritten letters, that are sent out by numerous business houses for the reason that such letters are essentially of a deceptive character.

Pearce.

Adeline Pearce died Aug. 5, 1914, aged 78 years, 4 mos. and 26 days. A good Christian woman is gone, one that will be missed very much in her community, although of late years she has been in very feeble health, but we feel that our loss is Heaven's gain and we bow in humble submission to his will.

On Aug. 6 her remains were gently laid away in old Rocky River Cemetery among a host of friends and relatives. The floral offerings showed the esteem of the community. A Friend.

A CARD OF THANKS.

I want to return thanks for the kindness shown me by the friends and neighbors in the sickness and death of my mother, Adeline Pearce.

Birthday Party.

Aunt Sallie Foust, as she is called by most people who know her, was given a birthday surprise on Friday, Aug. 14.

All her family gathered at the old home and spent a most pleasant day. John A. Foust and Mrs. O. N. Hornaday were her only children. "Grannie" is the name twelve grand children and eight great grand children learned to know and to love. There are ten grand children living. All were present.

Dinner was served on the lawn under the maple trees, after which Grannie was led into the dining room where the birthday cake bearing ninety lighted candles, representing the years of her life, was placed.

Her maiden name was Sarah Catherine Albright. She was converted at Mount Hermon church in 1837, and about a year later joined Bethel Methodist Protestant church, near her home, on Alamance Circuit. In 1847 she was married to William Foust, who died about thirty years ago.

Until physical strength failed her she was faithful to attend her church. She was loyal to Christian duties, and now sits at eventide beside peaceful waters waiting the call Home. She speaks of her "going away," and to hear her, and to see the calm beautiful smile on her face, makes one know that nothing can be more splendid than a service of seventy-six years for the Master.

We hope that she may be left to us many days yet, that we may hear her experiences, and have her counsel.

—In North Dakota the Progressive Party failed to nominate a state ticket because it had fallen short of the number of votes necessary to secure a place on the official ballot. To nominate a candidate, it is necessary, under the law, that a party must have at least twenty-five per cent. of the vote cast for its candidate at the last previous election, and the North Dakota Progressives could get only 2,430 votes. So they were ruled out.

—Science and scientific men continue to render their verdicts against the use of alcoholic beverages and tobacco. In the National Conference on Race Betterment, Dr. von Kleinsmid, speaking of "Causes of Crime", said: "Society by its sale of tobacco and liquors encourages mental defection which results in crime. Whatever may be said in the way of excuse for the moderate use of alcoholic beverages and tobacco among adults, there can be no justification for the use of these drugs by adolescents." The "temperance tidal wave" gains momentum from every such testimony, or expression of opinion, as also from the action of great railroad companies and other corporations which now forbid their employees to use liquor both when on and when off duty.

A clergyman, on his way to a missionary meeting, overtook a boy and asked him about the road and where he was going.

"O!" he said, "I am going to the meeting to hear about the missionaries."

"Missionaries!" said the minister. "What do you know about the missionaries?"

"Why," said the boy, "I'm part of the concern. I've got a missionary box, and I always go to the missionary meeting."

Every child should feel that he is "part of the concern," and that his work is just as important as that of any one else.—Selected.

LIVE MUCH IN THE SUNSHINE.

Physicians give this advice sometimes, and isn't it good? What a great healer is the sunshine! It destroys disease germs, it fills the body with red blood, it brings the glow of health to the cheeks, it infuses strength into every limb and muscle.

And the same advice is just fine taken in a spiritual sense. There is a spiritual sunshine. It streams forth from the word of God. It flashes out in the promises. Its steady light beams upon us from the standing invitations of the Bible.

When you are melancholy, when the future looks dark, step out into the sunshine of God's word. Think of the abiding Presence, think of the constant Providence, think of the everlasting Love, think of the infinite Mercy, think of the freat Salvation able to save unto the uttermost.

If your sins trouble you and you seem hopelessly enslaved, think of the One who came all the long way from Heaven to save such as you. Think of the wonderful cleansing and renewing power of the Holy Spirit.

Turn your back upon the gloom and darkness and your face to the light. Get out into the pure and purifying sunshine of God's truth and abide there and health will come to your soul, happiness to yoor life, for God will restore unto you the great joy of His great salvation.

"O the blessed sunshine!"

—We are indebted to Mr. George Pritchett of this city for a copy of "Religious Ceremonies and Customs," a very interesting old book. It was published eighty years ago, but is full of well designed copper-plate engravings illustrating the religious ceremonies of many different peoples in different parts of the world, Christian and heathen. It is based on the larger work of Bernard Picart which was published only a little earlier.

THE DISTRICT PARSONAGE.

We presume that in the course of time every one of our charges will come forward with a contribution for the District Parsonage, but the delay of some is causing embarrassment to the purchasing committee. We trust that this hint will be taken seriously by those who have not yet realized the importance of acting promptly in the matter. The lot has been bought, and the honor of our Conference is at stake until it is fully paid for.

The history of the enterprise is as follows: President Cecil in his annual report to our last Annual Conference recommended that the Conference take some steps toward a district parsonage. The recommendation was referred to a committee which reported favorably and the Annual Conference adopted their report and appointed a committee to proceed with the enterprise. This committee held a number of meetings and gave the matter their careful attention and decided to buy a lot in Greensboro and build as soon as the means can be provided. The lot should be paid for soon. It cost $500 and thus far only about $180 has been paid in. We trust that others will come forward as soon as possible and relieve the committee of embarrassment.

The District Parsonage located in this central and accessible point will enable the man elected to serve as President to render a larger and better service to the church than he could under other conditions.

—Let us rejoice with Virginia! She has had a great victory against the liquor traffic. In the election on Tuesday, there was a majority of over 32,000 votes for state-wide prohibition. The vote is given as follows: "Drys," 77,453; local optionists, 44,618. Several cities went dry contrary to expectation. The only cities that gave a majority against prohibition were Richmond, Norfolk, Alexandria and Williamsburg. The prohibition law is to go into effect Nov. 1, 1916.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

Stop contentions, look to the Great Leader, listen for the answer, according to our great Leader's directions. Look in the Bible for it. We all know He is not the author of contention and strife, for He sent His Son into this world to bring peace and goodwill to all men. Dear brethren of the M. P. Church, I joined this church nearly fifty years ago when it was just getting out of its infancy, most of us poor, when our forefathers such as Alson Gray, Jacob Guyer, Cicero Harris, Joe Dunn, the Michauxs and many others had large fields of labor at small salaries and they only part paid, but we as a church have grown and prospered till now it is a strong church with good church houses, colleges and Children's Home; and now we have smaller charges with good salaries and the joy and comfort of saving hundreds of thousands into Christ's Kingdom. Our church has become a great power not only in the homeland but in the foreign field. But where are we now? Stop and think: a divided church, the world looking on, other churches telling us our doors are open. Can we not stop long enough to get our own people together and then decide whether we will remain M. P.'s or all go together to our sister church in peace. I have read the articles on both sides till I can't believe that God is leading. Now I don't accuse any one of doing wrong or intending wrong, but I am afraid that Satan has taken advantage of the move to take a long step into our ranks and get us divided in order to tear up the good work our church has done. We are already crippled in our work. Read the 80th Psalm of David and let us all call on our great Leader for help in this great time of need. Now if the leaders of this move knowing as they must know that there is great dissatisfaction as to the basis of union, push the matter to a close without the consent of the membership of the M. P. Church and leave part of our church without shelter, I would not want to go with them, nor if our sister church would receive one wing of a divided church and then claim the property of the whole church and leave the other wing out without shelter I would not want to go with them, but I don't believe our United Brethren will do that. I love our sister church and all God's people, but I love our government best, but if such is the case I will remain a M. P. though we may be reduced to a Gideon's band and left out of doors. We will trust our same leader to lead us to victory and go on singing,

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening powers;
Kindle a flame of sacred love
In these cold hearts of ours."

Now I have tried not to say anything harsh that would hurt any one's feelings. I remain your brother in Christ,

Peter Vuncannon.

POPULAR TALKS ON LAW.

Signing a Note.

By Walter K. Towers, A. B., of Mich.

One noon while Jason Edwards was sitting on the porch of his prosperous farm home, resting before he returned to the fields, a shiny top buggy drawn by a long-legged bay drew into the side yard and a brisk young man descended. He presented the card of the National Silo Co., and solicited an order. Mr. Edwards needed a silo and signed an order for one, to be erected later. He read the order carefully and noted its contents. It clearly read as an order for a silo, for the erection of which, if completed within sixty days after date, he was to pay $100.00.

No silo appeared, nor could Mr. Edwards locate the company, but he saw nothing to worry about until, sixty days later, a near-by bank presented to him for payment a note for $100.00 in regular form bearing his signature. He protested that he had signed no such note, yet acknowledged that it was his signature. Examination showed that it was one end of the silo order he had signed. It had been so worded and arranged that one end might be cut off leaving a promissory note in regular form. The bank insisted that it had paid full price for a regular note and as it was a "negotiable instrument" it was protected as a bona fide holder. Edwards sought advice and being told that he would have to pay the note did so.

Proper advice by a competent attorney would probably have saved Edwards $100 since few states will support such a note, signed under such circumstances. True, if one is induced to sign a negotiable note through fraud and that note is sold in ordinary course to a bank or in perfect honesty and good faith, paying full valne for an apparently regular instrument that is not yet due, the quality of negotiability is such that the purchaser will have better rights than the rogue who transferred it. Indeed, under such circumstances, the signer would have to pay the note. But rightly viewed, the case of Jason Edwards is not such a case. He was not induced by fraud to sign a note, because he did not sign a note. What he signed was an order. Having never signed a note, but something entirely different which was changed into a note, he is no more liable than if his signature was forged to a regular note. Yet it is not strange that many laymen have confused this rule and suffered needlessly when some of our courts have made the same mistane.

The other side of the picture is the fraud practiced on Allan McGoorty and his wife. Again a buggy came down the road, but it was driven wildly by an attractive young man, and to his arm clung a young woman. They paused at the hospitable-looking house for refuge and told of eloping from a cruel father. Now, all the world loves a lover, and the McGoortys were all assistance. Opportunely, quite by accident, of course, a clerical-looking gentleman appeared from the other direction. Yes, he would marry them, and did—at least, he went thru a ceremony. Of course, the bride wept, so did Mrs. McGoorty, and Mr. McGoorty blew his nose and found his eyes a bit dim. In the confusion the "Reverend" remarked that the witnesses must sign the certificate and pushed a paper toward them which they readily signed.

Three months later a bank produced the "marriage certificate" for payment. It was a regularly drawn note for $500. McGoorty had to pay it, as he was legally liable. He had committed the fault of failing to read what he signed. In his case he actually signed a note. Of course neither the "Reverend" nor his confederates could have collected from the McGoortys, but they had negotiated the note at the bank, which, having nothing to arouse its suspicions and knowing McGoorty's signature, purchased it for full value, whereupon the "Reverend" and his friends moved on to try their scheme in virgin soil, taking care to be well away when the notes fell due. Where one of two innocent persons must suffer the law takes the view that the one who by his carelessness made the fraud possible must foot the bill.

A similar result followed in the case of Clarence Tucker, who purchased and accepted a barrel of medicated calf meal, giving his note for $10 therefor. The bottom two-thirds of the barrel proved filled with sawdust, but by that time the bank had purchased the note and the agent had vanished. Tucker was legally bound to pay the note. The vendor of the meal could not have recovered the sum, but again the quality of negotiability protected the innocent purchaser, and the man who signed the note had to pay it. He had signed a note, and it having come into the hands of an innocent third party in due course of business, his liability was settled.

So when you sign a promissory note, drawn in the familiar form—sixty days after date, for value received, I promise to pay to the order of John Doe, the sum of One Hundred Dollars with interest at six per cent. per annum—remember that it is negotiable and so is a great deal like money in that it may be freely passed from hand to hand by simple indorsement on the back, and the man who comes by it honestly has full rights against the person who signs it.

In order to possess the quality of negotiability—to be able to pass from one to another by simple indorsement, giving to the person receiving it these superior rights—a note must conform to certain legal requirements. These are stated in the Negotiable Instruments Law, a uniform act which has been adopted in similar form by practically all of the states. In general the note must be in writing and signed by the maker. Writing in its legal sense includes printing, lithographs, etc.; and the signature may be an abbreviation or a "mark." Further, to be negotiable it must contain an unconditional promise to pay a certain sum in money. There must be no "if" about the promise to pay. Also it must be to pay money and not potatoes or nails. If you are having the house shingled and want to prevent the negotiating of a note you may give so that no one may secure from it better rights than the carpenter to whom you give it, you may do so by stating in the note that you promise to pay upon condition that the barn is shingled in accordance with the agreement.

To be negotiated a note must be payable on demand, or at a fixed or determinable future time. Naming a future date for payment, of course, fixes the time. So, too, it is regarded as a fixed time if payment is to be made at the happening of an event that is certain to occur. Sixty days from date is a determinable future time. Further, it must be payable to order or to bearer, these words of negotiability being necessary that the instrument may possess that quality. So notes are written "pay to the order of John Smith" and not just "pay to John Smith."

A note lacking the above requirements of negotiability may still be a good contract enforceable between the original parties according to its terms. But if the note be not negotiable and the man who made it has been swindled, he may make this defense against the person to whom he gave it.

A person who intends to bind himself by the note signs simply his own name. But mistakes are made by agents who do not intend to bind themselves, personally, but only their principals. Do not sign "John Jones, Agent for Samuel Smith," for that will make John Jones personally liable; but sign "Samuel Smith, by John Jones, Agent." A somewhat different rule prevails in the case of public officers for one acting in a public capacity may sign his own name as officer and bind his principals and not himself.

The notes of corporations and partnerships are signed by an officer or agent of the corporation or member of the partnership in the name of the company. A representative or partner who is held out to the world as having authority to sign notes, may bind the company even though he may have exceeded his authority. So if you are a partner, be cautious of the public authority that is given, really or apparently, to a partner whom you do not trust absolutely.

TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS OF N. C.

Greetings! I am sure you are delighted at the success already attained by the temperance forces of our state and nation. There is no doubt in my mind that in the near future the liquor traffic of this nation will be wiped out by a constitutional amendment; but prior to that time, I expect to see North Carolina a very dry state.

You have doubtless watched with interest of our State campaign, now being waged, to elect to the next General Assembly representatives that will give us a state-wide law that will forbid railroads and other public carriers from delivering liquor anywhere in the state. I feel sure that you want your school to add its moral influence to the movement to secure the above-mentioned legislation. At the same time, you can so instill the principle of total abstinence into our Sunday school boys and girls that the next generation will be freed from the liquor habit.

Our Sunday school leaders throughout the world have fixed upon November 8 as World's Temperance Sunday, when hundreds of thousands of children will be taught the advantage of total abstinence and when many thousands will sign the pledge. Many of the Sunday schools of this nation are going to give November 1 as their temperance Sunday in order that the moral influence of such a meeting may be brought directly to bear upon the general elections of November third. I hope your Sunday school will be one of this number.

The Anti-Saoon League is now offering to furnish, free, the very best temperance program and pledges provided for use in schools. The carrying out of this program on November first will primarily benefit every member of your Sunday school and also help the state and national campaigns for the extermination of the liquor traffic. Write at once to Rev. Howard H. Russell, Westerville, Ohio, for supplies and literature.

Yours to save boys and girls from the liquor habit,

R. L. Davis,
Supt. Temperance Dept. N. C. S. S. Association.

THE TIME OF ALL TIMES.

The unparalleled European conflict is markedly affecting our country, as is seen in the price of commodities, the great industries, the commercial centers, oversea commerce, etc.

The South and Southwest face a serous crisis, because they cannot sell or ship their cotton crop, their main source of income.

If substantial relief is not afforded, money will not be available, and the church will feel quickly the effects thereof.

If our receipts are reduced, it will distressingly embarrass the Board and its great and successful work abroad.

This is the time, therefore, when every pastor and every member, especially in those sections where the stringency is not felt so much, to send to me, as soon as possible, the assessment and special gifts.

Pastors, both in the Conferences yet to meet, and in those that have met, can thus render great aid to our needy foreign missionary work.

We are under solemn obligations to take care of our missionaries, our Japanese pastors, our schools, including the Nagoya College, and our properties in Japan, and your help is urgently needed now.

It is most deplorable that non-Christian peoples must look upon the awful spectacle of European nations, enriched with the blessings and forces of Christianity, now seeking to destroy each other.

This is indeed the time of all times for us to prosecute with increasing vigor and liberality our God-assigned missionary work, and thus exemplify the truth and power of our holy religion.

To fail to maintain our foreign missionary enterprise at this critical stage would only add to the harmful influence of this terrible war. Again, in the name of our Lord, I appeal for your immediate help—brother pastor, send on your assessment as soon as possible.

The Christ expects you to help Him save the world. Isn't it time you gave some worthy gift to make Him known in the dark lands?

A NIGHT LETTER FROM BRO GRABS.

I thank the Editor for the kind treatment, and would urge that he at once publish this article—following the one last week.

Yesterday I was down in Forsyth Co., and saw several places where the apples are hanging on the trees better than for us. They look unusually green and fresh —and the leaves of the trees look so very green and healthy, and remind one of the appearance of the apple trees in the mountains in October and later. I sprayed my trees a little, but the trees now being referred to were not sprayed—and this is rather a marvelous thing. Twenty-six years ago at this date, Sept. 21st, and a few days later, I was down in Randolph Co. and I saw Bonum apples at that time hanging well on the trees. There was a big frost on Sunday, 21st.

I heard Bro. Cecil preach at Gray's Chapel at 11 o'clock on that notable Sunday of 21st. I then for my first time met up with Mr. John Dosier, the father of our John Dosier—"John the Evangelist," as I now think to call him, and he is a man of God, called to preach, and is a worker who ought to be out preaching well as the preachers can wedge in service for him to do. Some preachers may find it lawful to do some plowing, but my modern evangelist was not and is not called to plow, no, not a furrow. He has not time to plow.

There are men who have no moral right to plow. There are thousands of boys whose business it is to do all the secular work—and are so called, if they would heed, but some are not obedient to their calling, but wish that they could go to war.

God's evangelists are all opposed to war and all of you ought to tell the people about how cruel war is—that "war is hell." The above is not quite what I started out to say, but I wish that the Editor would find space to publish. And too I think to say that if the Editor and "John the Evangelist" and "this poor man" had all of $40,000 in bank we could not hire the boys to do our work, but under God we have the honor of being bound to do our work ourselves. However, I started to write this venture-some article in order to say that those who want their pears to keep well into the winter should let them hang late as possible. Even if we have big frosts on the streams, the low grounds, the cold will not be apt to hurt the fruit. If pears and apples happen to get chilled a little, and still hang on the effects of the cold will grow out.

Pears that are now yellow on the trees had as well be pulled off. Green pears all improve by being laid up for a while. The pear is really a great fruit, but the blight is the trouble. The Garber is nearly blight-proof, and these pears are very fine and sweet and good to eat out of the hand.

This morning I got up before one o'clock and went and opened the shutters to my cellar house so as to let the fresh night air in. I will close it up soon after sunup. I have put the most of the Bonum apples in and have some pears in too. The various fruits are now fine, but at the mountains the winter apples do ten times better than for us. The Dula Beauty is now the fisest commercial apple in the State, but as for quality the Bonum is about the best apple for North Carolina.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Winston.

Now that the hot summer weather is over and our people are home from their vacations, we are trying to pull ourselves together for our fall and winter work. Last Sunday was our Rally Day. The Sunday school was better than it had been for sometime and the congregation at both the morning and evening service was larger than usual. Mr. C. W. Snider, president of the Forsyth Co. Sunday School Association, added interest to the Sunday school by his address. He spoke especially of the Home Department and Cradle Roll. His address was helpful. At the night service we were greatly pleased to have Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk with us. He preached an earnest sermon from John 3:36. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him. It will be highly gratifying to the many friends of Bro. Lowdermilk to know that his throat is much improved and that he hopes to be able to take work at the Asheville Conference.

Our Rally Day was timely and a success. The inspiration that it gave us will put us into our fall and winter work with warmer zeal and a stronger heart. The money raised by the different classes of the Sunday school on our piano debt was gratifying. Twenty-four dollars was raised for this purpose, leaving only a small balance yet to be raised.

Our fall meeting begins during the week following the second Sunday in October. Bro. J. D. Williams is to be with us during the meeting and do the preaching. We are exceedingly anxious for a good meeting, and are already working and praying to that end. Our night services are evangelistic. Why wait for the special meeting before we press the unsaved to decide for Christ? It may be too late then. S. W. Taylor, Pastor.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Sep. 23, 1914.

Charlotte Circuit.

We are in a meeting at Charlotte. Sunday was a good day for us. We had two good services, one at 11 A. M. and one at 8 P. M. The congregations were good. The services Monday and Tuesday were very good. It seems that we are at the door of a good revival. Our Sunday school has taken on new life. We had a number of new students to join Sunday. Miss Lucy Gale has charge of the Bible class for ladies which was organized the second Sunday in September, and she has put new life in the Sunday school. We are looking for good things for our little band at Charlotte in the future. We want every M. P. that has any interest in the M. P. Church or who has a few dollars that he or she wants to spend where it will count the most in building up the M. P. Church in N. C. to send it to us and let us use it in building a nice M. P. church at Charlotte. We have the deed for the church lot and we will soon have the deed for the parsonage lot. If you have any thing that you want to give toward building the M. P. church at Charlotte, you may send it to D. A. Braswell, Concord, N. C., and I will acknowledge it in the M. P. Herald. I feel like we as Methodist Protestants have much to live for. We have a good church. Yes, it is as good as the best and I am not ashamed that I am a Methodist Protestant and I shall not be ashamed to be found working in her ranks when the Master comes to call me from labor to reward. I am sure our fathers who gave their lives to build up the M. P. Church were not ashamed to be called from her membership to a home in heaven.

I want to say Amen to what our most worthy brother, Sam Harris, said in the Methodist Protestant a few days ago. He said, "We stand twenty thousand strong against the Union Movement," and I believe he is right. I have seen thousands of our good laymen and talked with many of them on the subject of Union since we have had the union fever in our ranks, and not very many of them are in favor of the union. Why should we hide away from our duty? If any of our most noble leaders have become discouraged and have fallen under the juniper tree let them take courage and come out and lead our beloved Zion on to victory. God has been with us. He is with us and He will be with us unto the end of the world.

Brother Ministers, did you read Bro. G. L. Reynolds' article in the M. P. Herald of Sept. 10 about our school work? Why not quit playing with our school work and unite our efforts and make our own school grow like other people who are no stronger than we are make theirs grow? I believe we will do better. I have more confidence in my church than to believe she will work for others and let her own go to the bad. Let each pastor do what he can to send some one to one of our own schools and encourage the men who want to make our people what they ought to be.

Fraternally,

D. A. Braswell.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Circuit.

Our special meeting began the third Sabbath. Mr. Trogdon preached at eleven to a large congregation. At three Mr. J. M. Varner filled the pulpit. Two good sermons. Monday Mr. Hulin came and stayed until the meeting closed, Friday night. We had learned to love Bro. Hulin as he had labored faithfully with us before. He is a man of God, one full of the Holy Ghost. Rev. Mr. Steadman, the M. E. minister of Farmer, came Wednesday and assisted Bros. Trogdon and Hulin. Did some good preaching. We all appreciated his help. There were several conversions, some to join the church, others to follow.

Mr. W. E. Hill, of Denton, visited his brother, C. H. Hill, last week and labored so faithfully and prayerfully. Also Mrs. J. F. Cameron, and children, of Denton, were welcomed in this community last week, as this was their home church for so many years. Our Sunday school lost some of its faithful attendants when they moved away. We were sorry to give them up. Mrs. Gurnea Royals, of Thomasville, R. F. D. 4, spent last week with home folks. Also Mrs. Van Wood, of Handy, and Mrs. Ira Ridge, of Canaan. Come again, girls. It fills our souls with love to see our girls as they grow into womanhood and take upon themselves the responsibilities of homes in other communities to come back to see us and to be working for the Lord. We do miss the girls so much in the church. Am proud to say that we realize of a truth the churches where they have gone are benefited by their coming into the communities. We do thank all that lent a helping hand and prayerful hearts toward the success of our meeting. We feel there was much good accomplished in the church and community.

Mrs. C. H. Hill.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Circuit.

The Sunday school last Sunday was the best we have had for some time. The number present was sixty-seven. After the classes were held, Mr. Fred Edwards made a very interesting talk on the lesson of "The Ten Virgins." He explained the lesson with some work on the Sunday school black-board. Then Mr. Carl Eller talked on last Sunday's lesson. He, with some very interesting and helpful work on the blackboard, showed the difference between the sheep and goats, also between the spiritual sheep and goats.

Bro. Martin filled his regular appointment at the church last Sunday evening at eight o'clock and preached a fine sermon. His text was: "For to be carnal mon. His text was: "For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace"; found in Romans 8: 6. Bro. Martin was also with us for prayer services last Thursday night.

All the women interested were asked to meet at the church Wednesday afternoon for the reorganization of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The young ladies intend to have a box supper soon to help pay for a library for the Sunday school. Lester Watts.

A Rally Day Testimonial.

One of our Pennsylvania workers writes as follows: "Many thanks for your promptness in sending the programs which we with one accord pronounce unusually good." We greatly appreciate this testimonial and we believe it expresses the sentiment of many of our Sunay school workers. In other words the Rally Day program issued by the Board of Young People's Work is better than usual. Orders are coming by every mail. The programs will give your school a great day. The offering will be credited on your assessment. Send for the programs now. Send all orders to Rev. C. H. Hubbell, Adrian, Mich.

A Lesson from Europe.

One lesson to be learned from the present war in Europe is one of preparation. It is very evident that in some parts the war was foreseen long in advance and active preparations were begun long ago for the present conflict. It goes far to explain the splendid conditions and fighting ability of some of the troops.

Why not be equally well prepared for the Master's work? The Sunday school teacher is in war. He has to battle with indifference and neglect and ignorance. One way to overcome these enemies is through preparation. A Teacher Training class helps you to prepare. Begin preparing now.

Remember the Board has an excellent book, Training the Teacher, paper, 35c, cloth, 50c. Send all orders to Rev. C. H. Hubbell, Adrian, Mich.

In May, last, the American Baptists celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of their organization as an independent mission body. It, like the American Board, got its instiration from the Andover praying band of young men. Mr. and Mrs. Adoniram Judson were the first missionaries employed by the young society, and Burma was their first field of labor. From this small beginning the work has increased until the Baptist Mission stations now circle the globe, including many European countries, where they claim a membership of 139,270. In non-Christian lands the Baptists have 127 mission stations, 791 missionaries, 1,575 organized churches, 166,330 church members, 6,106 native workers, with native contributions amounting in the year 1913 to $166,253. In the year 1912 $1,150,474.-47 were received for missions. Their strongest work is in Burma, South India, and China.

Reports from Africa show a very hopeful increase in interest in the work of the missionaries. Many of the tribes have sent messengers to the mission stations asking for Christian teachers. One Presbyterian Mission received 64 delegations in nine months, representing a population of over 120,000 people. In some cases the people build their own churches and many native missionaries are sent to neighboring villages and supported by native churches. It is said that no churches send out and support so many missionaries as do the African churches. In one case reported from South Africa a tribe of people waited twenty-five years for a missionary who had been promised them. When at last a young missionary on his way to open up new work came to that district he was met with great demonstrations which were explained when two men came forward and greeted him with—"We knew God would send us a missionary. All these years we've been praying for a teacher to come, and every day we have watched this trail for him,"

Have you tried millet and missed getting a good crop? Maybe it was not the fault of the millet. Was the soil wet and heavy when fitted and seeded? Under such conditions millet rarely does well. Give it a well-drained soil and make it good and rich at that. On a small piece one should grow more millet than any other fodder crop. The cows like it, and it makes them shell out the milk finely. Now is the time.—Farm Journal.

ABOUT SOME CHINESE SCHOLARSHIP CHILDREN.

(Written by Rev. Chas. S. Heininger, Kalgan, China.)

Sunshine Circle Missionary Band, Bellevue M. P. Church.

Nellie Kao is the girl for Bellevue. Now Nellie is called Moi Jung (Moy Roong) in Chinese, but as that is a perfectly Chinese name and not to be Anglicized, we'll take the other title. She is a preacher's daughter. Indeed her father and an uncle are two of our better educated and most experienced workers. Nellie is about twelve years old and has been studying in our school since it was opened about four years ago. We think that she is one of the girls who may take a longer course in school and so probably help in our work as a teacher or in some other capacity. I should also mention the fact that her mother, too, is an old school girl and one of our finest women. Her mother's brother is Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Tientsin and has visited America. He is away from Kalgan but hasn't forgotten his native place entirely and in America he got friends at Buffalo, N. Y., to provide scholarships for two boys. We hope Bellevue may some day be proud of their girl.

Paul Chang (Djang or at Kalgan just "jaw") was born either in December, 1902 or January, 1913, so he is now ten years old. I can't give you the date of his birth exactly as I have no comparative calendar for that year and he was born I know by the Chinese calendar on the last month and the 7th day. His "little name"—Chinese have several names in the course of their life,—was "La-ch'i" which translated means "Last month seventh day." How would the Bellevue children enjoy being named "December 7th, or whenever their birthday is? His name among the missionaries and church people is "Pao-loa" which is the name of the apostle Paul in Chinese. He also has a school name and when he grows up he'll have an official name as a Chinese citizen and if he becomes a real educated man he'll have a literary name, but you won't need to bother about those as yet. In English he'll always be Paul Chong.

Paul has had a sad childhood in some ways. He is motherless. His mother died when he was so young that he can't remember her. His father has been father and mother to him. Four years ago this fall Paul began to go to school. At first he studied in the Kalgan girl's school —there was no boys' school here then and the next year he began to attend the newly opened boys' school.

Paul has learned quite a little in these four years, I am sure and we hope he'll be a man worthy of your help. He isn't always as good as he should be. Several times he's had to be punished in school and out. Won't you pray that he'll be a good boy and that Jesus will help him to shun the bad and do the good.

Paul has had many advantages, too. His father has worked much for foreigners. He was my first Chinese servant and is now cooking for another missionary. So from little up Paul has been at church and often in the homes of the missionaries. His uncle—his father's brother—is a bookseller for the British Bible Society and one of the most faithful truly Christian Chinese I know. We hope Paul will be such a man too and every Bellevue friend of his from Pastor Hawkins down may be glad they helped him.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Little Girl Supported by Miss Julia Hickey, Sharpsburgh.

Martha Yong is the daughter of a Christian father. Her mother, however, has never united with the church. Her father had several years of training in mission schools including some time at Tung Chou College. On account of family reasons chiefly, the support of his aged father, who has just died and the ill-health of his wife, he has been unable to devote himself to Christian work. He lives in a village called Lee-tai Y'wang (I'll spell it to make it pronounceable) and sells medicine there and every fifth day at the market in the big city of Hsi-Ce-ying three or four miles away. He sells mostly foreign medicines and by study has made himself a sort of "doctor". Martha now is ten years of age. A year ago last October her father came to Kalgan and brought her to the school. So she is now just completing her second year's work. Martha is a very quiet little girl. From her childhood she never had her feet bound,—the only big-footed girl in her village and with few exceptions the only one in the region thereabouts.

What does she look like? Well, maybe we'll have some pictures there some day. She is a freckle-faced little girl, perhaps not too pretty, but we hope she has the beauty which goodness always brings, and may have it increasingly. I think Martha will be a good investment. She has a good Christian father who I believe will be likely to let her have a chance to gain an education and be glad to give her to the service of Christ and the church.

Mei Te means "Beautiful Virtue." Let us hope she may live up to her name.

Little Girl Supported by Cambridge Y. L. M. S.

Ysu Mei Te (May Dua it is pronounced) is one of our Kalgan schoolgirls and since the treasurer reports the scholarship from the Young Ladies Society of Cambridge, we want to assign her to them. She is about eleven years old and a round faced, rather ruddy-cheeked little Chinese girl. She has been in our school for four years and is one of the brighter pupils. Her paternal grand-parents are church members as well as her father. Her mother is dead and she makes her home with her grand-mother. Now so you—if you are not all too serious-minded—may appreciate her naughtiness, I'll tell you a story. One day little Mei Te with her cousin a little older asked to go home but were refused permission. So in the evening off they went without it almost two miles and right through the heart of the city. This is a trick for a Chinese girl. However, the heartless missionary went for them and about midnight they were hustled out of bed and escorted back to school. Yes, they cried about it but they also quit playing truant. However, you'll like her if you come and see her.

EIGHT WEEKS IN A CHAPEL.

I wonder how many of the boys and girls who will read this have ever grown tired of being in church and longed for the hour of closing, when you could run out into the bright sunshine and home to Sunday dinner. If you have ever felt like that, perhaps you will be interested to hear about some American boys and girls who once had to stay eight weeks in a little chapel and the compound surrounding it. without any fine Sunday dinner at all.

It was the time of the Boxer rebellion in China when all our brave missionaries were shut up for so long in the British legation at Peking. Among them were the missionaries' children, Dorothea Goodrich, Gardner Tewksbury, Ralph and Ernest Chapin, Ruth Ingram, and others, and the story of how they passed those long weeks, where they slept, what they had to eat, and what they did all day long is a very interesting one.

Very few had been able to bring a single toy or treasure with them. As many could only take from home what they could carry in their arms, the children had been obliged to help with the things which were really necessary. One little girl brought her dog, Dinger, with her. At first her mother said she must carry a pillow and tins of milk and jam, leaving the dog behind, for no one knew whether or not they would have enough to eat, but when she realized what it would mean to her little girl to leave her pet behind to an unknown fate, she said Dorothea might carry her dog if she could. It was a hard struggle, for he was restless and wanted to get down, but Dorothea persisted and held him tight all the way to the British compound.

He slept at her feet in the chapel all summer. Sometimes Dorothea was afraid there would not be enough to eat so that anything could be spared for her dog, but that day never came, and as Dinger was very fond of mule meat, he got along very well indeed.

Can you picture in your mind all these missionary families camped out at night in this little chapel? One mother and her two little girls were given for their bedroom two settees placed together under a large west window, just in front of the pulpit. At the end were three chairs where one of the little girls slept, and the mother and her other little daughter lay on the settees with their heads at opposite ends. This same corner was their dining room as well, for here they ate, sitting on their bed. There was no other place. At the end of the chapel, behind the altar rail, was a Congregational mother with two children, and on the other side a Presbyterian mother, also with two children. As for the pulpit, that was pushed back and served as a china closet. There were not enough dishes to go around, so that each one had to eat his or her breakfast exactly when his turn came, in order that the dishes might be used again by the people on the next bed.

The first corner to left as one entered the church, was the Methodist corner, and here was the Methodist bed. Like the bed described before, it was made of two benches placed together and short boards of varying thicknesses were laid across between them. But the interesting thing about it was the variety of treasures stored underneath; soap, a part of a telephone, a gun, the key of City Gate, stationery, shoes, overshoes, umbrellas, valises, bundles of clothing, books, souvenirs, eac.

There were fifteen children lodged in the chapel, five of them only babies. Perhaps you will wonder what they did all day long, and will think because there were so many of them that they must have had very fine times playing together. One of the greatest difficulties was that there was so little room to play.

A great deal of the time there was so much fighting that it was not safe to be out of doors. Then when the children ran into the chapel, the ladies would be so busy making sand bags for the defense of the compound that there was a very little chance for the children there either. So finally they would go out in the bomb-proof trenches, or perhaps up in the bell tower, which was a favorite playhouse for the little girls. Here they played with some of the few dolls they had brought with them. By some lucky chance there had been left at the legation a box of dolls dressed by a little Canadian servant maid for the missionaries. The dresses were made of little samples of cloth, but they had been very neatly sewed together, and there were nine of thm. What treasures! Then there were babies to tend, and some of the little girls made little sand bags and dolls' dresses out of the scraps of cloth that were left by their mothers. As for the boys they built miniature forts with little sand bags before the chapel and fought make-believe battles of their own. One boy writes of how he tried to build a house day after day with four sticks and a piece of cloth for a roof, and how every morning he found it blown down. Another interesting thing was to pick up each morning all the bullets which had been shot by the Boxers into the compound during the night. Some of them would be flattened out into very curious shapes and the boys would put them safely away in their pockets and cartridge belts.

What did they have to eat? Black bread, brown rice, mule and horse meat. There was no butter, and eggs and milk were a luxury to be used only for the babies and those who were sick. All the food was very carefully divided, just so much for each one, and all that was left over was faithfully saved. Out of the left-over pieces of bread, rice and cereals, were made "siege pancakes". At first these were eaten with molasses, but after the molasses gave out sugar was used. It was very hard to make any variety with so few materials at a cook's disposal, and one lady won genuine gratitude for herself by a famous pudding she invented, made with black rice, raisins and spices. There were a very few canned luxuries, such as sardines, canned fruit, etc., but these were only occasionally used, and then divided with the greatest care. One Sunday desert consisted of one macaroon, two nuts and two candies for each person.

Every child learned to eat just what was given him, for it was useless to ask for anything else, and once a little boy asked his mother if he had to eat the stones, too, that he found in his rice.

The days were passed by the children but the long hours of night were the hardest time for all. Sometimes the women could only sit on their beds on the floor in the darkness and soothe their frightened children as best they could. Lights were forbidden for fear of the sharpshooters. The bullets would whiz past the open windows and every one would keep as low as possible for safety's sake.

Second only to the bullets were the flies. For after the night attacks had ceased, sometime in the early hours of the morning the flies would begin to wake the children, and the babies would keep awake all the older people who had been watching in fear through the night. One mother found an old lace curtain which she mended with pieces of thin material and put over her boy in an effort to keep off the flies, the fleas and the mosquitoes. It was just at dawn one morning, and all the company in the little chapel were trying their best to drive away the flies and dream a little longer, when suddenly a little boy called out in a loud, clear voice, "I don't like flies." His mother tried to hush him at once, but every one in the chapel felt that they thoroughly agreed with his brief, emphatic speech.

It seems very strange that none were killed in this little chapel during the long siege weeks. The Chinese believed that suprnatural beings were guarding the missionaries overhead, and so they shot many bullets into the air, but the missionaries remained safe under God's loving protection. Not only were they saved from bullets, but from fire. This terrible danger was averted more than once, either by rain or by the changing of the wind, until even the Chinese believed that God put out the fires. Miss Nellie Russell wrote, "It must be an eye-opener to them that a few hundred could hold out against their thousands and an entire city. They said at first that in two days we would all be in their hands, and it is now two months; but it has not been by might nor power of men, but of God. There have been as wonderful providences and miracles as in the leading of the Jews out of Egypt."

Do you think that after such an experience you would never have wanted to see China again? Or perhaps you think that it was only the grown-up missionaries who were heroic enough to go back. But this is what one of our little girl heroines wrote, "I am very glad to be in America, but I will go back to China when God wants me to."—Mission Studies.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Burlington.

We are in the midst of our special meeting, and the interest is good, although the attendance is not what we would like to see. Bro. Bethea is giving us some great sermons, and the music, under the leadership of Prof. T. O. Pender, is the finest we have ever had here. We are hoping for a great outpouring of the Spirit, and ask the prayers of all that the meeting may be a great success, and that many souls may be born into the kingdom.

Our Sunday school is still going forward. There were 235 present last Sunday. Our Baraca and Philathea classes are largely responsible for our live Sundy school here. Out of the attendance of 235 last Sunday, the Baraca and Philathea classes furnished 125, as follows: Sr. Baracas, 51; Jr. Baracas, 22; Philatheas, 17; and Jr. Philatheas, 33. These classes are making special efforts during the meeting to bring their members to Christ. We believe that if more of our Sunday schools had these classes there would be better work done by them.

We note with regret the illness of Miss Lena Lineberry, one of our faithful teachers, but are glad to know she is improving.

Mrs. J. M. Hayes is also detained in her home on account of illness. We hope she will soon be well again.

Bro. Lassiter commenced his special meeting the 2d Sunday in Sept. We are always glad to have him with us. On Monday we had Bro. Moton with us.

We had a good meeting. He was the pulpit help the rest of the week. There were 42 converted or reclaimed and 16 joined church.

Our Sunday school is still alive.

Our special meeting began at Union Ridge 1st Sunday in Sept. Bro. Millaway came to us on Monday and did the preaching until Friday night; then he had to leave us. The pastor then preached until Wednesday night after the 2nd Sunday. We had only night service except two day-services. Bro. Millaway's preaching was plain and to the point, and as a result of the meeting 21 professed their faith in Christ, and 10 united with the church. The members tell me that the church is in the best shape that it has been in for years. There are great possibilities for this church, if it could have the proper attention. To God be all the glory.

Friendship—We are still on gaining ground. We have a good Sunday school. All attend well and much interest is taken. We have twelve on the cradle roll. Our Supt. has given the Sunday a singing school; we appreciate it very much. Mr. Fritts is a splendid teacher. On last Sunday the S. S. all met and gave our Supt., Mr. Byerly, a thanks-dinner. The table was spread on the front lawn. Our secretary, Mr. Roy Phillips, returned thanks with a word of prayer. We all enjoyed it very much. The evening was pleasantly spent in singing.

The fourth Sunday in July our special meeting began. Mr. Powell preached a very able sermon on Sunday; on Monday Rev. J. E. Pritchard came and did the rest of the preaching with some deep and earnest sermons. We enjoyed his stay very much. There were some reclamations and four joined the church which was greatly revived and benefited.

The fifth Sunday in August Brother Powell filled his appointment with a good sermon on the vows to the church. He also preached a very good sermon in June, especially to the young. Our S. S. is mostly young people.

Glen Raven, Graham and Haw River.

We are glad to be able to say that we have our church in Glen Raven completed, furnished, and all paid for. On last Sunday we had our dedication service. Rev. George W. Holmes preached the dedicatory sermon at eleven o'clock; after the sermon the church was presented to Brother Holmes by Mr. Mack Boon to be dedicated. After the dedication service we had the communion service. A large number communed.

After the noon hour had been enjoyed we reassembled, and Prof. Holmes again preached for us, a good sermon, which was enjoyed by all present. We have a small but neat church building, painted both inside and outside; new seats well varnished; floor in aisles and around chancel covered.

We wish to extend thanks to the Ladies' Aid Society for their donation of three beautiful pulpit chairs.

We will begin our special meeting 1st Sunday in October, Rev. Robt. L. Troxler being pastor's help. Please join us in prayer that we may have a great revival at Glen Raven.

We held our third quarterly conference last Saturday and had a fine time. Everybody seemed to be in a good humor. Brother S. C. Carter was elected delegate to the Annual Conference, Bro. W. R. Edmonds alternate. I am glad the people on Buncombe circuit are seeing the need of attending church and the congregations are still increasing, but there is room for more yet. Our next quarterly meeting will be held at Clark's Chapel on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in October, and I hope to see all of the work represented.

Yours in the fight, T. E. Martin.

Stanly Circuit.

Our third quarterly conference convened at Albemarle Sat. before the 2d Sunday in Sept. All the churches were represented. Reports were good. Bro. Wesley Hatly was elected delegate to Conference., Ex-Sheriff S. A. Green alternate.

Our church work at Porter's is moving on and will be ready for the special meeting to begin 4th Sunday in Sept.

I am glad I can say there are still some Methodist Protestants on Buncombe circuit. There are some people over here that are doing all they can for the work. I am glad the work is still improving. I never will forget how this people stood by me. The circuit came together and gave us a pounding. I could not tell what all they brought in, but they surely brought lots of good things to eat, and they never forgot my horse. So I hope to see many of the people getting back where they once were. I want all of the readers of this to stop getting cold, keep prayed up, packed up and looking up. Back in these mountains is the best place I ever saw to pray. Pray for me and this field. I remain yours in the fight,

We began our revival on Monday night after the first Sunday and closed Wednesday night after the second Sunay. Bro. L. W. Gerringer was pastor's help until Saturday; then came Rev. R. C. Stubbins and preached from Sunday until Wednesday. Both did good preaching. The church is greatly revived, and there were forty-six professions. We talked about closing the meeting on Tuesday night, but the Christians were so anxious that their friends and relatives be saved, we decided to pray and work in the revival one more day, and now we are so glad that we did, for the last service was the best of the whole ten days; there were fourteen professions during the last service Wednesday night; so we learned the lesson "to pray and not to faint."

Bro. Stubbins preached a special sermon to the children on Tuesday afternoon and a special sermon to the old folks Wednesday afternoon; both services were good ones and will long be remembered by the children and the old folks.

We hope to have Bro. Gerringer and Bro. Stubbins with us again. May God bless them in their work. Reporter.

Hebron, Lincoln Ct.

We are still living and we think we are doing well. The Hebron choir had a call to Hickory to sing for the M. E.'s first Sunday. We hired three cars and fifteen went. We reached Hickory at 9:30, sung for the Sunday school, then at 11 for preaching, and then to another church at 3, then back to the one we first sang at in the morning and sang for night service, and we reached home about 11 o'clock. They seem to be very kind and appreciative. They paid our fare and fed us bountifully of the good things of Hickory. Those that went were R. L. Boyles and wife, A. D. Willis and wife, W. F. Boyles and wife, Francis Boyles and wife, Fanny Boyles, Mrs. Ellen Sain, G. C. Boyles and daughter, Walter Sain and sister, Vashti Sain.

Bro. Morris preached at Hebron also that day and those that heard him said he preached a wonderful sermon, and we know he can do that.

We also had an annual singing convention at St. Peter's church near here. There were five choirs there. Some fine musical talent was displayed. Taking it all around it was fine and enjoyed by all present. This was on the fifth Sunday in August.

On Wednesday morn at about 9 o'clock death visited Mr. Frank McClure's home and took from him his companion, Mattie. She leaves six children; one preceded her to another world. She was laid to rest at Hebron Thursday. Funeral service was conducted by Bro. Short, a Baptist, as she belonged to that branch of the church. Reporter.

Asheville.

Attendance at the services, especially the night services, is on the increase. We have reason to believe that when the pews take the place of the present uncomfortable chairs, the attendance will be largely augmented. We are pleased to see a large numoer of strangers in the congregations.

The Philathea class held an ice cream supper last Tuesday night. The weather called for sweaters and coffee, but in spite of that the class cleared $13.85, which, with the amount in the treasury, has made it possible for the class to secure the pulpit, and a chair for the preacher. It will take two more chairs to make the furniture complete, and the class is hoping to have these in time for Conference.

We are much obliged to our friend the poet who has informed us of Bro. Millaway's weakness in regard to the beds he sleeps on (I should perhaps put it, in regard to the weakness of the beds upon which Bro. Millaway sleeps), and we have taken the advice to heart. We have some seasoned oak logs on the church lot, and I have a notion that perhaps our Bro. Havner can be prevailed upon to hew some timbers for a bed frame for Bro. M. to rest on in safety when he comes to Conference.

After a rest of a couple of weeks, the Ladies' Aid will resume the Saturday sales this coming Saturday. Considerable money that would not have come our way has resulted from these sales this year. The ladies are also planning for a bazaar to be held some time in December.

Just by way of curiosity I went over the other day the list of contributors to the Asheville church to see how many, preachers and laymen, out of the total membership of the Conference, had given anything to help build a church here. I find that not quite 200 laymen out of a total of 22,000 have made us glad by their gifts, but that on the contrary 25 out of the 83 preachers have given something. Of course the list of laymen would be swelled somewhat if I had a list of the contributors from Gibsonville, Siler City, Clark's Chapel, and Julian churches. But I am safe in saying that not more that 500 laymen in the North Carolina Conference, out of a total of 22,000, have so far assisted us. Say, are you among the 21,500? This is one time you would feel good on the minority side. Just send us a little gift—ten cents will do if you can't give away any more—and I'll put you down in my little red book, where you can keep company with the 500. In this case the 500 is a whole heap better than "the 400." Don't forget that offering from your church. It means so little to you—so much to us.

We had a glorious service Sunday. The attendance at Sunday school was good. We took up collection for the orphan's Home as we always do the third Sunday. Sunday was our regular preaching day. On account of helping in a meeting Bro. Ashburn was not with us. Bro. Cecil filled his appointment. He preached a strong and helpful sermon to a large congregation. Text, Psalms 137:5. We were so glad to have Bro. Cecil with us. It seemed like olden times for him to be back, for the people at Friendship church do love him so much.

A church of the Presbyterian Mission at Elat, West Africa, has nearly one thousand members. At a recent communion season one hundred and ninety-three were baptized, sixteen were taken into the church by letter, and thirty-four children were baptized. Writing of the occasion, the missionary in charge said it rained all the morning and "That cut down the crowd, for only a little over 6,000 were here."

Too often we overwork the lie that flatters us.

Be wiser than other people if you can, but do not tell them so.

"The beauty of the house is order, the blessing of the house is contentment, the glory of the house is hospitality, the crown of the house is godliness."

THE AUTHENTIC AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS HAN JWEI CHIH.

Translated and Paraphrased by Marian MacGown Evans

[The language of essays in China, even of schoolgirl essays, is so stilted and formal that I have not tried to keep to that style in the story of Jwei Chih, but have put her experience into more familiar speech.]

My home is in the country a few miles from Tientsin. I was born in the east room of the house on the north of the court. That is the room where my father and mother live and which I have always shared with them until I came to school last fall. The other rooms around the court belong to my older brothers and their families. Is is not queer that several of my nephews and nieces are older than I?

Though there were so many grandchildren, my parents and all my brothers were delighted when I was born. You see, all the older ones had been boys except one who died when she was very young and so my parents were glad to have a daughter. Besides, we are not poor, so they could afford to bring me up. Many parents are sorry to have girls come into the home just because they are so poor that there is never enough to eat, and as soon as a daughter is old enough to be of any real help she must be married. That costs a great deal and when it is over she belongs to another family and comes home only for short visits. However, even when people are well-to-do very few are as glad as my parents were when I was born. They have often told me how they rejoiced to have a daughter in their old age. Besides I was very pretty even when I was a tiny baby and always good, at least always except when they did not let me have what I wanted. Then I cried until they gave it to me. Here at school they call that naughty so I have learned not to cry here.

It is a nice big room in which I was born. Most of it is filled with a brick bed,—the kang. That was my playroom where my mother sewed and the women sat and talked. These foreigners use their beds only to sleep in, but our kangs are beds, chairs and stoves all in one. Whenever the food is cooked, the hot air and smoke from the fire go under the kang and make it warm and comfortable. You can get warm all over on a newly-heated kang. Our house has a brick floor and glass in the windows. That is because we have money. I never went out of our own yard much for it is not proper in China for girls to go about, but I have been in poor houses a few times when I was little. They have mud floors and paper windows and very little, dirty rooms filled with their grains and everything else they own. Our rooms are so large that we can keep them neat and clean. Besides, we have storerooms for our food and fuel and great wooden boxes in which to pack our clothes. It must be very miserable to be poor. Flood years it is worse. But it never made any difference to my family whether there were floods or not for our business is weaving straw. This is sent away to other countries so the work goes on about the same every year.

The first event I remember very distinctly is when my brother next older than I was married. I was six years old then and he was eighteen. There was great excitement for days beforehand. One room was especially prepared for him and his new wife. The other children and I were full of curiosity and interest. What would the new sister be like? What kind of clothes would she have? What presents would she bring? Would she be pretty? Such questions my mother and sisters-in-law and my aunts and their daughters-in-law talked about over and over. None of us had ever seen her, for she came from another village, but she had rich relatives near by so we knew that the family was a good one and well-to-do. About the girl herself we had only heard what the go-between said. Of course we knew we could not entirely rely upon that, still she dwelt so much upon the girl's beauty and sweetness as well as her skill in all household arts that I formed in my mind a picture of perfect loveliness and could not understand why my mother seemed so much less sure of the newcomer's charms. As for the men of the family, I do not remember that they had much to do with the affair. I certainly never connected my brother with it at all until later.

At last the day came. The bride had arrived by cart the night before and had been kept at the house of her relatives. In the early morning she was to come to us. Her boxes had been sent already and we had all spent a joyous afternoon looking over the contents. Every stitch of the clothes, the go-between told us, she had made herself. They were more beautiful than any others I had ever seen. Everyone exclaimed over them. The most critical woman could find no fault with either the material or the careful sewing. Ornaments there were too and household utensils. I was dazed and delighted by the array. Everyone kept complimenting my mother upon her new daughter-in-law. A girl who could sew like that would surely be a great help in a large household. We were indeed favored of the gods. Yet even I, in my childish excitement, could not fail to notice that my mother, though plainly cheered by the appearance of thrift in the boxes, was still worried. It made only a slight impression on me at the time. Afterwards I remembered.

I hardly slept that night. Indeed the preparations lasted until late and the music of the musicians hired for the occasion began while it was still dark. Long before light we were up and dressed in our best. The bride was to arrive at daybreak. I could hardly wait for the time when I should see her. I was all impatience until the moment the red bridal chair entered the court. Then of a sudden I was afraid. Perhaps it was the very great excitement, perhaps it was my brother's discomfort as he stood in the inner room waiting for his wife. I was afraid and would have hidden but that I could hear the new arrival being led in. I forgot everything else as I caught sight of the beautiful red garments which she wore. Her face was still covered by a piece of red cloth. It was for my brother, her husband, to lift that veil and see the woman who, for better or worse, was to be his companion for life. I turned to my mother with an exclamation of delight at the clothes and the embroidered shoes which the fairy princess wore, but for once my mother had no eyes for me. She was watching my brother's face as he lifted the square of red cloth. I turned to look. For the first time I realized that this meant something important to him. The girl herself was looking down as modest brides should do, so she could not see his expression, but I am sure she felt it. She knew, she must always have known how it would be. He did not speak. He simply stared. Then he turned away and somehow got out of the room. The women crowded in. The bride was lifted on the kang and we all saw and understood. Above the beautiful clothes there was a face, one half of which might have been pretty could one see it for the glaring ugliness of the other half. I had seen birthmarks before but never one like this, not only dark red in color, but swollen so that nose, lips and bulging eye stood out in awful hideousness.

It was my own voice that broke the silence, my own voice raised in a wail, "I thought she was to be beautiful and look at her! Oh-h-h!" and I flung myself into my mother's arms. That is all I remember distinctly. There is a dim, hazy recollection of the scornful comments of some of the neighbors, of the even more painful attempts of others to talk only of the clothes and the dowry, later of revilings of the go-between by all my family, of misery on the part of everyone. I can see my new sister-in-law sitting stonily without speaking most of the time, now and then sobbing and screaming in a paroxysm of anger and humiliation. I remember my brother, furious, moody, refusing to speak to his wife, blaming the whole world, even our parents, for his calamity. It is all a nightmare which has been a very real part of my own life ever since and which is only just beginning to change into something better.

Of course, the first fury passed away. There was nothing to be done. My brother wished to send the girl back, but her family were too influential for us to dare to do that. No, he must keep her and make the best of it. Besides, she was a good worker and, except for her rare outbursts, willing and obedient. She told me once that her mother had taught her ever since she was a tiny child that since she was hideous she must cultivate a good disposition and skill with her needle and in cooking, for only such traits could keep her mother-in-law and her husband's family from hating her. "Nothing can keep us from hating you," I cried. You see, I had so looked forward to her coming that I have never been able to forgive her for the cruel disappointment. The rest of the family have stopped being very unkind to her but neither my brother nor I hae tried to be anything else, at least, until these last months when my brother has been so different. How could one help hating anything so ugly?

Nothing else very important ever happened in my life until we began to think of my coming here to school. None of the other women in my family are educated and so at first they did not wish to have me come here. But it is stylish now for girls to know characters and especially to learn English. The daughters of some of my father's friends are in school and it troubled him to have them know more or have greater advantages than I. Besides he can never long refuse me what I ask and I wanted to come. I was tired of doing nothing. I am too old to play all the time, my parents do not wish me to be married yet, and I hate to sew. So there really is very little for me to do at home. My father's consent was not hard to gain. It was my mother and my aunts and my grandmothers and all the women relatives on both sides of the family who made the trouble. But I teased and cried and refused to eat until at last they consented.

I think, though, it was really my brother who decided the matter. He has been restless ever since he was marrid. No one would like to be always with a person so awful to look upon as his wife is. Perhaps that is why he is constantly going to the city to visit. He has usually come back more moody and cross than ever, but about a year ago he returned after a week's stay in Tientsin seeming somehow different,—quieter and less sullen. He said nothing then, but the next time he brought back the story of a doctrine he had heard—a strange tale it seemed to me—that there was only one true God; that he loved men and had come to earth to live their life and die for them; that he taught a gospel of love toward himself and all mankind.

Now we had already begun to lose faith in the old gods. So many changes have come to this country in the last few years and all our ideas have been so overturned that our religious ideas have been overturned too. Of course, there are a lot of people, especially in the country, who know very little of what has happened, but educated men like my father know. Even the women of such families are beginning to be interested in all that is taking place. So we were more willing than we should have been five years back to listen to what he had to say. It all sounded so good too, for we all know it would be nice if everyone would love everyone else. But all the time my brother was talking, I kept thinking, "You can't love your frightful wife. No one could love her. You might endure her but you could not love her. It sounds well, all this talk of love but it can't be done."

I think all the others had the same thoughts for none of us took much stock in what my brother said. He kept going to the city oftener than before and every time he came home he had more to tell of this Way of Love.. I doubt whether we ever should have noticed though had not he himself become gradually changed. None of us could help seeing that. We all spoke of it but I never realized how different he was until one day when I found my sister-in-law sitting on the kang, crying,—not screaming as she used to do when she was angry but just siting there with the tears running down her cheeks. When I asked her what was the matter she told me her husband had spoken to her with no look of disgust in his face. "He looked at me just as if I were like other people," she sobbed. "It is the first time in my life anyone ever looked at me like that. I want to die with the memory of that one look."

It had never occurred to me before that anyone so ugly could have feelings like the rest of us, but I suppose she has. It surprised me, but not so much as the fact that my brother could have looked at her in that way. As I said, it was the change in him that finally induced my mother to let me come here. He said that here they would teach me too of the doctrine of Love—that that was what the church taught and followed. They do teach it but I should never have believed that it could be followed were it not for my brother. I do not understand about it now, for I do not love my frightful sister yet. But I am sorry for her and I did not use to be that. I think I might be willing to love her and I did not want to when I first heard about it. Anyway I mean to speak kindly to her when I go home. They all tell me that is what Jesus would have done. I supose He would have but I should never have believed that ordinary people like ourselves could have done it if it had not been for my brother. He says it is Jesus in his heart that makes him able to forget her face and think only of her. I do not understand that very well. I only know he is nicer to live with than he used to be. He says people always are and that I should be better for letting Jesus inside my heart. I am not cross as I used to be but I have heard the teachers here say that I am stubborn and disobedient. I might be improved perhaps. I am not ready yet, but some day I may be.—Life and Light.

"We can all do more than we have done
And not be a whit the worse;
It never was loving that emptied the heart,
Or giving that emptied the purse."

HATS OFF!

All hail the simple id—i—ot
Who makes no claim to what he's not;
Who's just a fool, a straight-out one,
And doesn't pose as Solomon.
Not he with fact-congested pate
Whom knowledge can not educate,
Though fourteen universities
Confer on him their high degrees;
But just the simple imbecile
Whose wit and pretense both are nil.
How much the fool who's just a fool
Excels the one who's been to school!

LITTLE POLLY'S POME.

I like to watch the cows and think
Of all it means to me.
At home when I have milk to drink
Or sometimes cream in tea.
Because I do not see the cow
I never think about it;
But on the farm I wonder how
We could get on without it.

I stood for quite a while to-day
To see how milk is made,
I watched a flock of cows when they were feeding in the shade.
And they would eat some grass at first
And then they went and stood
Right in the brook to cure their thirst
And then they chewed their cud.

And most important it would seem
Is this strange cud they chew,
Because it turns to milk and cream
As soon as they are through.
At milking time the farmer takes
The milk and cream so sweet,
And with the cream he often makes
The butter that we eat.

So here with milk and cream to drink
And butter, too, you see,
I like to watch the cow and think.
Of all it means to me.

THE CHILD IN THE MIDST.

When the Lord of the great and the little,
The Potter whose hand shapes our clay,
Sets a child in the midst of the market
Where the world-people chatter all day,
Sets a child with its innocent suestions,
Its flower-face dimpled and fine
In the very heart's core of the clamor,
A thought of the Maker Divine,

And men in their lust for dominion,
Their madness for silver and gold,
Crush the beauty and charm from that spirit,
Make the flower-face withered and old,

Bind the hands and the feet with a tether
That childhood can never untie;
Deem not that Jehovah unheeding
Looks down from the heights of the sky.

"Brown's an inquisitive chap. Coming home from the club last night he climbed up a high post to see what the sign was on the top."

"What was it?"

"Wet paint!"—Judge.

Since I bought my new car—fine!
Friends show up from near and far;
But Green's friends outnumber mine,
For he has a bigger car.

A LESSON IN TRUSTFULNESS.

In a poor but thrifty peasant's home sat a young mother plying her needle in the autumn twilight, for the wee Willie whose ringing laughter from the little garden told its own sweet tale. The husband sat near his wife in that weary listlessness which is made such a luxury by a hard day's toil. "How shall we ever get on when winter comes, George? 'Tis hard enough in summer; what will it be then?" That qhestion awoke something within that man's slumbering soul that sent a quiet glow over every look and tone.

"Mary, lass, what art making there?"

"A warm winter coat for Willie, George."

"I guessed as much. Does the young rogue know about it?"

"Not he, dear lamb!"

"Won't you tell him to hinder his worrying about winter?"

"He worry! Why, hearken to him, George. He's as happy as the day is long; and even if he has the sense to think about winter, he'd trust mother to keep him warm."

"Aye, lass, and it would seem the boy is wiser than his mother."

Mary's eyes filled as she caught her husband's upward look, and the cloud of distrust was rolled from the hearth by their child's trustfulness.—Selected.

Not he with fact—congested pate

"Admit into thy silent heart
The notes of but one bird,
And instantly thy soul will join
In jubilant accord.

"The perfume of a single flower
Inhale like breath of God,
And in the garden of thy heart
A thousand buds will nod.

"Toward one star in heaven's expanse
Direct thy spirit's flight,
And thou wilt have in the wide world,
My child, enough delight."

JUST ONE WORLD.

By Mrs. J. F. Leebach.

O, the weary months they used to take,
To travel from East to West,
Crawling along in a wagon-train—
Though they did their very best!
But now, as we fly with the speed of steam
From Maine to the Golden Gates,
We think no more about "East" and "West"—
It's just United States!

O, the weary weeks they used to spend
In going across the sea!
We talked of the "New World" then, and "Old"—
As if such things could be!
But China's our next door neighbor now,
And India not far away;
We talk no longer of "Old and "New"—
It's just one world today!

And all the people in all the lands
Are just like me and you;
We don't talk now of "foreigners"
They're brothers, and sisters, too!
And when we have learned to help them all,
And to know them, heart to heart,
This world of ours, and God's world above,
Will not be far apart!

IN MEMORIAM.

I saw the rosebush in the garden bear
A solitary rosebud, blushing red.
Its sweetness and its fragrance filled the air.
The charm of fragrant sweetness crowned its head.

Today, my searching eyes saw barren stalk;
The bleakness of the winter chilled the air.
Can gushing tear-gland ease the bursting heart,
When roseate beauty turns to paleness bare?

Be still, my heart. The gardener plucked the rose,
And bore it to his palace crystal bright,
That, in the sun-glow, it might sooner bloom,
Escaping chill and darkness of the night.

—Fred Keightley Gamble.

If your neighbor goes in debt for an adjoining fifty, don't feel that you must do the same thing or get left. Envy is the worst incentive possible for any kind of farm operation. Keep your head, be satisfied with what you have, and do your level best.

ANOTHER SUICIDE CASE.

"It's another suicide case" is the announcement that interrupts the routine of the doctor in his office.

"Is the patient here?" a necessary query, for often the magic of the foreign medicine is supposed to be such that mail or messenger treatment suffices.

"Yes, and she ate a whole package." Enough, and I stand not on the order of my going. This means that the patient, always a woman, has soaked the heads from ten boxes of matches, and then swallowed the infernal soup, it might be called. But there is really no reason why one should hasten, for if these patients come to us promptly, we almost never lose the case. So our first query of the mother is:

"When did she take the match poison?"

"Three days ago." We are alarmed and note that the girl is suffering not a little. (She is but 20 years of age.) She is assigned a room, and later we find that the reason they came so tardily was partly because the farm animals are so busy, and partly because they thought she might get well anyway!

As she is a little more comfortable, we recognize her, or think she has been here before. "Is this not Chi Tsi?" is asked.

"Yes," replies the mother, "she was here three or four years ago, that time she jumped in the well." We recall that she twice tried to end her life by jumping in the village well, and after the last one of those trials she had come because of the very poor physical condition in the unsuccessful attempt had left her.

Chi Tsi had a pretty good night the first night, but could not retain much of the liquid nourishment given her. Her mother proved a poor nurse, and after a few days we began to be alarmed and sent for the father. We wanted him here anyway, as we suspected he was mixed up in the troubles that had led to the attempt. He no more than visited briefly, and then returned, seeming to core little whether the troublesome daughter lived or not, for are not daughters always a source of expense, and then as they become useful do they not go as daughters-in-law to other homes?

That the trouble was in her own home was the only unusual feature of the sad case. All were busy in the harvest field, and the mother said she would go to the field to work. But, instead, she went to the home of relatives where there was some sort of a quarrel. The father heard something of this, and when he came home neither ate anything. The daughter-cook felt it was a slight to her cooking. There were more words, and Chi Tsi reflected that life was hardly worth while. All she had in store was the career of the oppressed daughter-in-law| Rarely is such a career satisfactory, though ideal family life is not unknown, especially among Christians.

That night Chi Tsi managed to get 60 "cash" together and with these (value 1½ cents) bought a package of ten boxes of tiny matches, in number about 1,000. The "Infernal soup" that she made may have had a bad taste, but she reasoned, as she said herself, that life had no attractions.

After a week of effort in the hospital there was little hope for the life, and ten days after coming she slipped beyond. Perhaps we could have done more for her, and when the new hospitals are built (at Techow) and we have trained nurses, there will be more hope for such cases.

The same week that Chi Tsi came to us there were four other cases of much the same kind, only all of them, as is the rule, were daughters-in-law. All of them recovered, and all thus had some grim revenge on the mother-in-law or other trouble-causes.—Mission Studies.

All great and noble souls experience times of depression. Life seems a humdrum and only one weary routine. The skeptical query as to the worth of living obtrudes itself upon us. The distinguished statesman, Mr. Gladstone, tired out by the cares and perplexities of office, one exclaimed: "I'm leading a dog's life!" "A St. Bernard dog's life," instantly remarked a quick-witted friend. The happy conceit took hold of Gladstone's imagination. He never again complained that he was leading a dog's life. Often the routine service is our most heroic achievement.—Nichols.

The light falls upon the rich man's orchids, and also blesses the poor man's box of mignonette. It floods the majestic cathedral; it fills the humble chapel on the moor; it steals through the chinks of a gipsy's tent. Jesus blesses the widow with two mites, and also Zaccheus, "chief among the publicans, and rich." He makes a friend of Peter, an unlearned fisherman, and of Nichodemus, "a ruler of the Jews." A WORTHY INSTITUTION.

It is a pleasure to the many friends of Elon College in this town to know that this college had one of the largest enrollment at its opening last week that it has ever had.

This college is fast growing in the esteem of the public throughout this section, and is taking its place and being recognized as one of the best co-educational institutions in the south.

We have watched the growth of this college with much interest and we have noted the character of its work, the kind of students attending, and we have been impressed with the culture and refinement of its student body; the high standard maintained in its teaching force, and we have known that the college must grow and prosper. We have known that its merits would be recognized and appreciated.

Under the directorship of Dr. Harper the college has grown rapidly since his election. He is one of the most practical school men we have ever known. An untiring worker, a believer in printer's ink, a hard student, a deep thinker, he is just the man to have at the head of a thoroughly deserving institution of this kind, and we predict that before many years pass this will be one of the most heavily endowed, best patronized colleges in this whole section of the south.

We are further delighted to know that the attendance from this county is increasing each year. Without regard to denomination, we can fully recommend this college to the people of our county as a place where their sons and daughters will receive the best that can be given in education.—Reprinted from the Burlington News by request.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

GIFTS FROM THE POOR.

"A touching result of Christian development is noted in the actual gifts to the Centenary Thank Offering in India of the A. B. C. M. F., totalling 14,000 rupees and representing giving of a rare type. Hundreds of Christians—servants, teachers, preachers, and others had given the entire month's salary to this fund, in addition to their regular gifts to the church. Pupils in many schools had worked in play hours and given up from their scanty food and clothing, to give to this thank-offering. The treasurer of the fund said his experience this year had convinced him that the churches could give more and could rise to higher responsibilities than they had ever dreamed of as possible. Many have felt as never before the reality of religion and its high demand on all their powers. Probably the largest gift of all from this great festival, is the definite decision that in the new century the people themselves will support and control their own pastors and churches."—Sel.

—Rev. H. L. Powell stopped in our office last Saturday on his way to Giles Chapel to assist Bro. Bowman.

Sin is the greatest and most perplexing problem in the world today. Sin brought the Son of God down to this world, and caused his suffering and death. It causes all the heartaches and trouble and sorrow. It defiles, defames, and disgraces. It is unmerciful: it blights the character of both young and old; it steals the affections of fathers and mothers and children: it breaks up homes, sends men to the penitentiaries, steals the virtue of our fair daughters, makes drunkards, murderers, robbers, and gamblers of our young men. In short, it closes its eyes to all that is shameful and disgraceful and plunges the souls of its adherents down to ruin and destruction.—R. H. Craig.

The life of the Christian is seen through the body and is an outward manifestation of an inward divine work.

He who takes care of our justification, sanctification and adoption will guide our footsteps through an educated conscience to His Glory.

New Year's Day is probably the greatest of all the holidays in this country. More people flock out on the streets than on any other day. The festivities are continued for several days. We have nothing in America that corresponds with this. Over in Minatogawa, on the border between the old and new city of Kobe, there is a magnificent new theater. Along the four streets converging at the new theater thousands of people are surging in and out all day long and well into the night for three days. Near by is a large open common. The second day after New Year's I was there and witnessed an interesting scene. In one part of the common a Buddhist priest was haranguing to crowds gathered about him, but in another part of that common a thousand people heard Rev. Mr. Kagaw and his band of evangelists preaching and singing the gospel from a wagon. The Buddhists quit and went away. The Christian preachers held right on for two hours, and the people listened with remarkably close attention. Of course in the crowd were one or more the worse for drink, but in general the quietness and attention would compare well with similar crowds in the open in Nashville or Atlanta or New Orleans. After being permitted to mount that wagon and speak briefly, we began the distribution of tracts and booklets. The people were so eager that it was impossible to hand out the tracts fast enough. Do facts like these indicate that we have lost our opportunity in Japan? —Rev. J. C. Calhoun, Kobe, Japan.

We are having a great revival in N. Main St. M. P. Church. Rev. Leonard B. Smith of Baltimore is Bro. Dixon's help. Bro. Smith is popular with all classes, but especially among the young people. Imagine our joy when nine of our children in the Home walked up of their own will and gave their lives to Jesus. I have talked with them and they all understand what they did. Attending Sunday school and preaching regularly and home training caused these children to accept Jesus as their Savior. Pray that we may have divine guidance to feed these lambs and rear them to be an honor to the church and a glory to God. H. A. Garrett.

Married.

At the home of Mr. D. F. Montgomery, at Haw River, on Wednesday afternoon at two thirty o'clock, Miss Ola Montgomery became the bride of Mr. John Thompson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. B. Williams, assisted by Rev. R. C. Stubbins. It was a dark, cloudy, rainy day, but just as the ceremony was being performed the sun shone beautifully through the window of the west room of the Montgomery home, and seemed to make the bride and groom more cheerful than before.

Mr. Thompson is a prosperous farmer of the Hawleld section; Mrs. Thompson is a beautiful Christian woman. Both are young and happy. We wish for them a long and happy wedded life. They left just after the ceremony for Mr. Thompson's home where they will reside.

TRUTH SHALL SURVIVE.

James Russell Lowell.

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of truth with falsehood,
For the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah,
Off'ring each the bloom or blight,
And the choice goes by forever
'Twixt that darkness and that light.

Then to side with truth is noble,
When we share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause bring fame and profit,
And 'tis prosperous to be just;
Then it is the brave man chooses,
While the coward stands aside
Till the multitude make virtue
Of the faith they had denied.

By the light of burning martyrs
Jesus' bleeding feet I track,
Toiling up new Calvaries ever
With the cross that turns not back;
New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast of truth.

Though the cause of evil prosper,
Yet 'tis truth alone is strong;
Though her portion be the scaffold,
And upon the throne be wrong—
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,

—Twenty-five years ago Count Ito, then the leading statesman of Japan, made the statement: "I regard religion as quite necessary to a nation's life." At the recent dedication of the Y. M. C. A. building in Kobe, Count Okuna, the present leader of the liberal party, said: "Any nation that neglects the spiritual in the education of its citizens, though it may flourish for a time, must eventually decay. The origin of civilization is to be found in the teaching of the Sage of Judea, by whom alone the moral dynamic is supplied."

—More than sixty years ago two Samoan Christians purposed to evangelize Niue, or Savage Island. They were seized, their clothing was torn off in order to see the color of their skin, and the fowls and pigs brought with them were butchered and eaten, but the book which they carried and with which they seemed to converse frightened the savages. They thought it had magic powers, and feared to kill those under its protection.

Seven years later there was a strong church on that island. In 1861 the Gospel of Mark was translated. When it was brought from England the natives sat up the whole first night reading it. During recent years the natives of the island have maintained a number of evangelists in New Guinea, who come home at intervals and, telling of the blessings of God on their work, strengthen the faith of their brethren.—The Missionary Review of the World.

—The Home Board Indian Mission work is greatly blessed and the red people are very appreciative of what the Baptists are doing for them. This is also in a peculiar sense a blessing to the people who support it. We know of no missionary activity which is more likely to thrill the observer with a definite sense of the power of the gospel than that by which these heathen Indians are transformed into docile, industrious and generous-hearted children of God. We have before us a story of the Oklahoma Indian Baptist Association composed of the Wild Tribes which took place in July. They met to consider as well as they knew the affairs of the mutual concern of the churches but as usual their warmest concern was for the conversion of unsaved Indians. This concern resulted in the saving and baptizing of forty-eight during the association meeting.

—An exchange tells how difficult it was for the late pope to get a drink after ordering a glass of water: "Fully ten minutes passed before the prelate returned to the library, followed by an attendant and a waiter. The latter carried a silver tray with a glass of water on it. The prelate, the attendant, and the waiter made a deep genuflection when the door was opened. They crossed the room and made a second genuflection when they were half way to the pope's chair, and a third when they got near the pope. Then the attendant took the glass off the tray and handed it to the pope. The same ceremony was repeated after the pope had drunk the water. Turning to the doctor, the pope then said: 'I wanted to show you how difficult it is for me to get a glass of water, and I hope you will not blame me for neglecting the cure and not drinking more water. I hate to disturb three men and make them kneel six times every time I want a drink of water. I tried to get the water myself but I have been told that, being a sovereign, I must not serve myself.'" He did not know the joy of dipping water out of a mountain spring with a gourd.

Many of our Baptist Baraca asd Philathea classes are becoming Berean and Fidelis classes, and are lining up with their own denomination. This is happening in nearly every large town in the State, and in the smaller towns, villages and even in the country. We are glad to see Baptist people getting in line with their own people. Let these new classes send to our Sunday School Board at Nashville, Tenn., and get the handsome charter and hang it in your class room. —The Baptist Messenger.

—More than 250 Protestant clergymen are bearing arms in the French army, according to a statement issued by S. Earl Taylor, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, while nearly all of the German Methodist ministers engaged in missionary and religious work in South Germany have been called to the colors. The Methodist Theological School at Frankfort, Germany, has been closed, most of the students having been drafted into the army.

A QUESTION.

We want to ask one question. We do not wish to hurt any one's feelings or detract from any earnest minister of the Gospel one iota of sincerity when standing before an audience to preach.

Now the question is: What good does a minister accomplish when preaching to an intelligent congregation when he yells at the top of his voice, stamps with his feet, and claps his hands as though he were trying to drive a lot of cattle out of a cornfield. You may think quite differently from this writer on this subject. Please give us your opinion.

A Methodist Protestant.

We doubt whether the things mentioned do any good, unless it is in the way of keeping some drowsy listener awake. Those who do these things either do them unconsciously or else they imagine that good is accomplished by these accompaniments, by attracting attention. To us they detract from the attention we would give to the message. But perhaps some of our readers can give a justification of these practices. Editor.

DOES WAR SIGNIFY CHRISTIANITY'S FAILURE?

The failure is not Christianity's, it is a failure of those in civil authority who misdirect those over whom they have temporal power, leading them to blood-shed and death; it is the failure of those spiritual leaders who have kept men from the direct reading and private interpretation of the Bible; it is the failure of those who have set up fine-spun theories for conducting the affairs of men in the place of instructing men to be led by a Holy Spirit illumination of the Scriptures; it is the failure of men who have erected such aims as commercial aggrandizement for national life, at the unwarranted expense of other nations; it is the failure of men who have not allowed the higher, spiritual nature to rule them and who have thrown their subjects into war; it is the failure of men, greedy for possessions, power, fame; it is the failure of men who profess Christianity, but who believe that material gain and wealth are more to be desired than spiritual riches.

Oh, that men would avail themselves of all the grace and spiritual strength proffered them! They would then be in the church of the living God; they would then be Spirit-led instead of man-led. Onlookers would no longer say that Christianity fails, for it would be evident that war and its accompanying horrors are the result of sin in the hearts of men. The church of God cannot break down, but every church of man sooner or later will. —The Gospel Trumpet.

MORE THAN WE ASK OR THINK

"He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty" (Psa. 91:1). This text is taken from a psalm that abounds with the most gracious promises of protection, care, and deliverance for a certain class of people. These pople belong to that class who have left the sinful world and have been received into the secret place of the Most High. Here, under the shadow of his wings, in the sacred nearness of his presence, they are safe from the various trials that may come upon them from any outside source.

The wings of Omnipotence are around us, and although Satan may hurl cruel darts at us, yet before they can reach us they must pass through the wings of God; and if we are truly in his embrace, with our hearts fixed on him, the poisoned arrows of the enemy will be turned away from us.

The Scriptures inform us that the One under whose protecting shadow we are abiding is able at all times to effect for us the utmost deliverance from all ills that may arise against us. He "is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think" (Eph. 3:20); he upholds "all things by the word of his power" (Heb. 1:3); "the Lord God omnipotent reigneth" (Rev. 19:6). These inspired statements form a solid platform upon which our faith can rest with sure and perfect confidence as we defy the enemy; for the promises of God, the same as other promises, become real to us only as we know that the One who promised is able to perform all that he has spoken.

Aside from the testimony of the Word, a survey of the marvelous creation will convince us that he is indeed able to do exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think. When we look at the star-spangled heavens on a clear night we are made to wonder at the power that could guide all the various orbs we see; when we call the telescope to assist our eyes, and penetrate into the profound depths of space, and find its immensity filled with stars and worlds all testifying to the divine Hand that made and guides them; and since the very atoms we breathe every time we fill our lungs are in themselves as wonderful in structure as is the mighty solar system of which the world is only a small unit, we begin to behold the perfect protection that is afforded us while we abide under the wings of Him who is indeed rightly called Almighty. How safe we must be at all times if we could only realize it!

Concerning God's willingness there can be no doubt. Look at the "I will's" in this ninety-first Psalm, commencing at the fourteenth verse. "I will deliver him," "I will set him on high," "I will answer him," "I will be with him in trouble," "I will . . . honor him," "With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation." We should indeed approach boldly the throne of grace, seeing we have such assurance of help in every time of need; for he will indeed do more abundantly than we ask or think.—James Turner, in The Gospel Trumpet.

THE POWER OF CHRIST TO SAVE.

One of the great questions among people to-day is how to be delivered from sin, and when is this possible.

Sin is everywhere present, and all mankind are more or less conscious of having had sin in the heart and life. All men "have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." "There is none righteous, no, not one." "They are all gone out of the way" (see Rom. 3:10-23). This is true of every son begotten of Adam's fallen offspring. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way" (Isa. 53:6). "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." "If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us" (I Jno. 1: 8, 10).

Although these last two quotations are addressed to Christians, they are to be understood in the light of the others we have referred to. They declare the universality of the sinfulness of man, and his need of a Savior. While John wrote these undeniable facts, the object of his writing was that the believers whom he was addressing should avoid sinning. "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not" (1 John 2: 1). This introduces us to another important point.

Must Christians Commit Sin?

There is scarcely any consideration connected with religious life, more important than this. Compared with this one, all others are of minor unimportance. This is fundamental in its nature, for it deals with the very nature of the atonement made by Christ on Calvary. The qoestion may be more simply and directly constructed thus: "Does the blood of Christ really cleanse from sin? If so, when?"

We are told by the inspired writer that "if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). All sin? Such is the fact stated.

How did John know this? What authority did he have for such a sweeping assertion? If we take this statement for its face value, it plainly teaches that the obedient believer, walking with God in the gospel light, is kept pure from sin. The word "cleanseth" is in the active voice, present tense, and implies that while the believer follows God, the blood keeps him clean from sin: that now while we walk as Christ walked we are kept from sinning. This is implied or clearly taught in many other scriptures. "Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not." "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; his seed remaineth in him: and he can not sin, because he is born of God" (1 John 3: 6, 9). "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not" (1 John 5: 18). Also, we are taught that "where sin abounded, grace did much more abound" (Rom. 5: 20). Of the nature and power of Christ's atonement it is further declared, "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness" (1 Peter 2: 24). But again we ask the question,

Does Christ Really Deliver Us from Sin?

Here we encounter some dispute. Some say, "Yes, relatively, but not consciously nor absolutely." This kind of answer involves us in another question: "Is there sin apart from a consciousness of sin?" We answer, No; not in this dispensation. In support of this emphatic negative answer, we appeal to the conditions pledged by God in the new covenant: "I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts" (Jer. 31: 33). Paul appeals to this same prophecy, and proves it to be the law of Christ (see Heb. 8: 6-13). "I will put my law into their minds, and write them in their hearts." This is the law of Christ. There is no other law that God writes on our hearts, and there is no other law of God in force since the Holy Spirit came on Pentecost. This is the only law through which God deals with men. The Holy Spirit reproves men of sin, Jesus said, "because they believe not on me" (1 Jno. 16: 9). Laws that are written on the heart and in the mind are clear to our consciousness. We cannot have them there without knowing it. A transgression of that law written on our consciousness is a conscious transgression. As there is no other law by which we are governed or judged by God, so there can be no such thing as sinning against God without knowing it. In this Christian era there is no sin of ignorance. Sin lies only in our consciousness.

When John said the blood "cleanseth from all sin," he meant a conscious experience of cleansing. When Peter referred to "being dead to sins," he meant we were consciously so, and had no conscious experience of sinfulness.

Paul met this great question with a very decisive and powerful argument. "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" (Rom. 6: 12). We reecho the question, How? it is absolutely illogical and unreasonable that we who are dead to sin should still practise it. Abounding grace means death to sin, and "he that is dead is freed from sin" (v. 7).

We do not, as Christians, have to sin. Christ the deliverer has brought conscious deliverance from all sin to man, to be experienced now in this present world. "Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him" (Heb. 7: 25).—J. C. B., in The Gospel Trumpet.

—Rev. H. L. Powell went to Liberty yesterday on private business.

—A soldier, writing about his experiences in the first battle, said that when the soldiers were asked why they went forward, in attacking the enemy, nearly all of them replied: "I went forward because my lieutenant went forward." The soldiers will follow their leaders. The same thing is true in the Lord's work. The leaders must be brave and face forward. Their comrades in a holy warfare will follow them. If they are ever scared they must say nothing about it. Soldiers will follow a general who betrays his fear in only one direction.

—It is said that probably 100,000 boys and girls now study English in Japanese secondary schools. A recent ten-day conference of 500 teachers of English in that country was conducted entirely in English and Baron Kikuchi, president of the Imperial University, presided. Many professors from universities attended. It is claimed for English that it will be quite universal in Japan within a few generations.

—In Norway since the beginning of the war the sale and manufacture of liquor has been prohibited that the grain thus used may go to the feeding of the people. The Presbyterian Advance wisely remarks that in such a time of general distress it is easy to see that the people need bread and do not need the products of the breweries; but what is true in war time is just as true in times of peace. The cost of living would be permanently reduced and the whole people would be constantly better nourished if all the grain used in all the breweries and distilleries were converted into bread.

—Missionary W. Carey Newton writes: "Conditions have vastly changed in China and Hwanghien within a year. The new republic was largely manned by Christian forces and was openly favorable to Christianity. The present government, which is a republic only in name, has no Christian in its service whom I know. It is Confucian in principle and idolatrous in practice. But it is decidedly the best government China has ever known. The public schools are anti-Christian and we cannot educate our students in them. The republican idea never took hold of more than a tenth of the people, if we take queue cutting as evidence. Of the tenth who sacrificed queues many are growing them again. The temples are being repaired with great expenditure in this section. For the first time in the memory of man the Hwanghien city walls are being rebuilt in the broken down places. How does this affect our work? There is not a mass movement towards us, as there was a year or two ago. Those who come are Christians, and the average of social standing is better than we have known. Our schools have all the students they can accommodate and they pay tuition. But we must have better schools than formerly."

—Li Hung Chang, the richest man in the Chines empire, wrote some memoirs in which he remarked: "I remember when I was a youth at Lou Chow that riches and promotions seemed as very rare gifts if the celestial regions. But I have found that neither great wealth nor distinguished decorations, nor both put together, will guarantee a man against unrest of mind or turmoil of soul. How great an honorable is the peacock's feathers of the throne, yet how much easier rests the head on goose feathers."

—About ten years after the Wiiliams-Brown meeting held at Richland Springs a little boy whose father and sister had joined the Baptist church, suddenly asked his mother when the next Baptist church was coming to town, saying that he wanted to join. The mother quietly informed him that the Baptist church remained here and met every Sunday. Many church members practice the idea that the boy had. They are very prominent in the big meeting and then they go home and have to work so hard through the week that they can't come to church on Sunday. J. R. Magill calls them "oncers." May their tribe decrease, as they are mighty little account to the church and in their luke-warm condition nauseate the Lord who saved them. They ought to learn that the Baptist church is doing business all the time and needs their help, and, above everything else, they need to present themselves in the regular services in order to live right and serve well.--E. D. Morgan in Central Messenger.

—The complete immigration statistics for the fiscal year ending June 30 were given out only recently. The total number of foreigners who entered our country during the twelve months was 1,218,580. This was an increase of only about 20,000 over the preceding year, but represents a large gain over the figures for 1912 and 1911. But for the falling off in immigration for June the fiscal year just closed would have recorded by far the largest number of any year in our history. The next few months will, of course, show few coming to our land from Europe, but many returning to the home lands to take part in the war.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR

Since writing of old Double Springs Camp Ground we have learned some additional historical facts connected with the old-time camp meetings held at that place. Last week we spent a day with Mrs. Minerva Highfill nd her daughter, Miss Emma. Sister Highfill says she was converted at Double Springs the 8th day of August, 1843—seventy-one years ago, quite a long walk with God. She is the mother if 19 children, among them Hev. D. A. Highfill. Sister Highfill is very feeble and quietly awaits the summons to "pass over the river and rest under the shade of the trees."

The other incident is that at the time of the last camp meeting Bro. J. B. Ogburn was a babe. His parents were tenting—one day the baby was missing—a search was instituted; finally he was found behind a trunk in the tent where, presumably, he had crawled. The presumption is that he was a very active baby and he developed into a very active and energetic man. He hopes to attend the Asheville Conference as delegate from Flat Rock circuit.

Mrs. Nancy Pegram, one of our aged Bethel members, recently had the misfortune to fall and break an arm.

Mrs. Rebecca Ogburn has been confined to her room for some three weeks or more. She is one of Flat Rock's most loyal and faithful members, always the pastor's friend and helper. May she soon be out again.

Our Flat Rock special meeting is to begin the 4th Sunday in this month with Rev. D. R. Williams as pulpit help. We are praying for a meeting of great power.

We have already had more accessions to the churches this year than for any one year since 1901, and a great meeting at Flat Rock would be a fitting climax to the year's work. May the Lord grant it unto us, and He will if we do our part.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference.

This will be held in Gideon's Grove church on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in November. We hope to have a large attendance and the best reports ever. We wish for all the pastors a successful closing up of the year's work and we are praying for a great Conference at Asheville.

Stokesdale, Oct. 12.

Asheville.

Notice is hereby given to all delegates and preachers who read last week's report, and are preparing to bring their stoves with them along with their suit cases, that the aforesaid stoves will not be needed. Mr. George Shehan, a member of the Episcopal church, but a nephew of our Mrs. Council, has just presented our church with a second-hand hot-air furnace, in splendid condition, and it is being installed in the church this week. You can imagine how glad the gift made us, and what a tremendous burden it lifted from our shoulders. It will cost us about $75 to have the furnace taken from its present position, and placed, complete, in the church, but that amount isn't nearly so difficult to raise as $250 or $300, what we expected to have to spend.

Just one year ago this Wednesday, Oct. 14, 1913, the first spadeful of earth for the foundation of the church was removed. We have reason to praise God for the way in which He has worked together with us this year in the erection of this church. It is one of the finest fruits of faith that this preacher knows of, or ever expects to see. There have been many dark days since the work began, days when faith got weak, and when some if us were almost afraid to go on, but we are at the place now where we can look back and see the hand of God. This is Jehovah's house, and we have but helped Him build it.

You understand, of course, that there is still considerable debt, and that money is urgently needed to secure equipment, and to pay for some of the things that were not in the building contract. This includes balance needed to pay for the pews when they come, amount due on the windows that have not been taken by individuals, and so forth. That's the reason I have been talking about money in every letter this year, urging all who have pledged anything to the building of a church here, to make good their promise, and trying to get the friends who did not have an opportunity to make a pledge to make a voluntary contribution. This membership of less than a hundred, who can be counted on as substantial help, have raised this year very close to $3,000. They have toiled and sacrificed as few congregations. They have done their best. They still need your help.

Asheville Church Building Fund

Mr. T. T. Hicks, Henderson, N. C. $50.00
Mr. J. W. Boyles, Thomasville 5.00
Mr. R. D. Ellis 25.00

Bro. Hicks had a pledge of $50.00, and we are very happy that he has canceled it. Bro. Boyles hdd no pledge, but sent the money because of the need here. Bro. Ellis, son of Bro. and Mrs. W. J. Ellis, of Winston-Salem, promised his mother when she was here last summer that he would make a contribution to the church here. He has just made good. Thank you, friends. You don't know how much it helps. C. W. Bates, Pas.

Burlington.

Our Sunday-school made a very good record last Sunday, the attendance being 188. We hope to bring the attendance up to and above 200 next Sunday. The Baraca class will start a contest next Sunday, and there will doubtless be "something doing" in the class for the next ten Sundays.

The congregation at the church service Sunday was almost as usual. At the morning service Bro. Curry preached a special sermon to the new members who recently joined the church. He preached a good sermon from Rev. 2: 10, "Be thou faithful until death and I will give thee a crown of life." At the close of the service, the following persons united with the church, the first two on profession of faith and the latter by letters: Hoit and Hallie McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Chrisco, and Mrs. Ida Madden Thomas. Mr. and Mrs. Chrisco came from Welch Memorial, High Point, and Mrs. Thomas from Saxapahaw charge. This makes 12 persons that have joined our church the past two Sundays.

We are glad to report that Miss Lena Lineberry, Mrs. J. M. Hayes and Mrs. G. L. Amick, who have been on the sick list for some time, are improving rapidly, and we trust that they will soon be completely recovered and able to attend church again. We are sorry to note the illness of Mrs. J. B. Turner, who has been very sick for the past few days.

Our pastor was called to Lexington last Wednesday morning to attend the funeral of his grandmother, who died on Tuesday. He returned on Thursday.

Bro. L. W. Holt spent Sunday with the M. P.'s at Mebane. He went upon invitation from the M. P. Sunday-school, and assisted in the organization of a Baraca and Philathea class each. Bro. Holt takes great pride in Sunday-school work, especially in the Baraca and Philathea classes. We wish we had more such men as Bro. Holt.

Bro. T. T. Stafford, our genial and efficient Sunday-school secretary, is spending his vacation this week in the eastern part of the State. C. B. Way, Rep.

Our pastor being absent, Mr. A. J. Harris, of Henderson, filled his appointment here Sunday last. To say that Bro. Harris did well is not saying as much as I would like to say. I mean to say that I think he did very well. The special words that he gave to the boys were good.

His brother, Dr. Harris, brought him out there and he too was a help by assisting in the singing.

Reidsville.

Our pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, held his regular appointment here Sunday, preaching two splendid sermons for us. A very good attendance, but would have been glad to have more out to hear these good tidings Bro. Lowdermilk so carefully prepared for us.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 we had the pleasure of having with us Mr. J. Norman Wills from Greensboro who made an address on Sunday-school work which was enjoyed by all who heard him. After the address some organizing of new classes was done, and we want to organize some more classes next Sunday and get more life in our school. Our Sunday school attendance has inceased and now we want to increase interest in the work. Pray for us that we may succeed. The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly meeting Monday, the 12th, at the Parsonage; it was enjoyed by all that attended. We are very sorry indeed to hear of Bro. Raper's illness; our prayers are that he may soon be restored to health and strength, and may the dear Lord be very near his beloved family in their hours of trials and troubles. Reporter.

A good day Sunday, Oct. 11. Attendance at Sunday-school, 75. The Sunday school has increased until the average attendance is nearly 100. Rev. H. S. B. Thompson is the efficient superintendent and is "on his job."

There were 14 additions to the membership of the church yesterday; 11 by certificate. C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Ct.

We are still moving on; our Sunday school is coming back together after protracted meetings are over. We are having a live S. S.; all are interested and much good is being accomplished. Our pastor, W. A. Ledford, was with us again last Sunday and preached one of his best sermons. His subject was Sympathy, and I am sure if we would do as he told us weewould do a lot better than we do.

I don't think I ever heard a better sermon than he preached to us Sunday.

We were also glad to have Mr. Ledford with us for Sunday-school. He taught the advanced class. The time is drawing near when Mr. Ledford will not be with us, but hope we will be fortunate enough to have him with us another year; he is doing a great deal of good work here, and I am sure we will miss him.

Our attendance in the prayer services is not what it should be. We had a very interesting prayer meeting Sunday eve.

It isn't long until our Sunday school convention and I hope the choir will soon get busy in preparing the music. We were glad to have Mr. Smith of Siler City worship with us Sunday. Mrs. Wells does not seem to improve much. We trust that she will soon be better and hope for her a speedy recovery. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Our Sunday school and prayer meetings are doing nicely The older people seem to be taking more interest and it encourages us so much. A number of our young people have gone away either to attend or teach school and we certainly miss them.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment last Sunday with an ercellent sermon, as usual. He knows how to preach and does not fail to do so.

Roella Pegg, Rep.

Eden, Halifax Ct.

Yesterday, second Sunday, Pres. Cecil delivered a plain and helpful sermon to an attentive congregation. On the first Sun., our regular preaching day, we were entirely rained out. The time is passing, we have only one more preaching Sunday before Conference. We want every assessment paid in full so our pastor can go with a good report. We have reorganized our Sunday school after having closed a month on account of meetings. We have good attendance and good reports. Every one has a hearty welcome to our little Sunday school at the McDaniel School House. Hope a large number, especially the official members, will attend the fourth quarterly conference to be held at Bethesda church Friday before the fourth Sunday in Oct. There will be preaching in the morning at eleven o'clock, then dinner, and the conference in the afternoon. We were favored with a good sermon from one of our former pastors some time ago, Rev. L. W. Gerringer. We will be very glad to have you, Mr. Gerringer, any time you can come. Irene Hawkins.

Cid, Uwharrie Ct.

The special meeting closed at Jerusalem last Wednesday night. There were seven converts, but as Bro. Trogdon was called home Wednesday to conduct a funeral of a Miss Rice at Farmer, the doors of the church were not opened. There was some most excellent preaching done by Bro. Hulin and also by Bro. Trogdon, as they always bring something that is worth listening to. The church was right much revived, but the results were not what we would have liked to see, but I believe that their words will still ring on for ages. Bro. Torgdon filled his appointment at Cid Sunday and also preached Sunday night for us. His sermons were almost enough to raise the dead, and I truly hope that his words sank into some sinner's heart that he may repent before it is too late. We all want Bro. Trogdon to return to us again next year and we want to pay him every cent we promised him and more, too, if we can.

We had the pleasure of having Miss Alleda Trogdon with us Sunday and we enjoyed her visit in our home, for we have learned to love that dear family.

Mr. N. Cockreham's family are going to move to Ga. We regret very much to lose them. Mr. Walter Kearns of High Point attended the services at Cid Sunday. We were glad to have him in the choir. I was so glad to see in the Herald such a good number of souls being saved at High Point, for the towns need it as well as the country.

Yours for Christ, Mrs. N. W. Lanier.

Shelby, Shelby Ct.

I am not a reporter (we haven't any at Shelby church), but I wish to remind the members of this circuit and especially the ones of Shelby church that it is only one week until the fourth quarterly conference and five weeks until the Asheville Annual Conference, and this means that we must go to work, for we are badly behind with our pastor's salary and other claims. It certainly would be embarrassing for the delegate to go to Conference with the claims unpaid. And if we as Christians could realize the needful condition of our pastor and family we would awake out of sleep and be about our Father's business.

Bro. Raper has certainly been faithful to his work this year and has gone lots of times when he was not able to go and he is now in the hospital at Rutherfordton and will undergo an operation on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. We ask the readers of the Herald to join us in prayer that if it is the Lord's will he will return to us in better health.

Bro. D. B. Johnson will hold the quarterly conference for Bro. Raper at Shelby church, Oct. 17, at 7:30 o'clock p. m. We hope to have full attendance and good reports from all the churches.

I again urge that we the members of Shelby church get to work and get our pastor's salary, for he is badly in need of it and he where he cannot help us now.

Best wishes to the Herald readers.

Our special meeting began the fourth Sunday in Sept. and continued till Friday evening. We had a good meeting; some interest manifested on Sunday, one conversion.

Rev. J. H. Moton was pulpit help and help it was; he is one of the best preachers I ever heard preach. If people were not convicted and converted under his preaching I don't know what would convert them. About forty conversions and reclamations, 15 or more joined the church. We were glad to have Bro. Moton and so sorry when he had to leave. When Bro. Moton was about to leave a good brother spoke out and said we had better speak to him to come back next year. We were glad to have him spend a night in our home while here; we will gladly welcome him again.

We were glad to have Mrs. D. R. Williams of High Point and Rev. R. C. Stubbins' sister, Miss Myrtle, of Durham, to worship with us during our revival.

We had 120 at S. S. last Sunday. We feel encouraged to see so many out. We were glad to get our new organ in time for the meeting; 'tis quite an improvement over the old one.

Mrs. S. M. Kirkland and son have returned to Durham after spending some time with us and attending the revival.

Rev R. C. Stubbins is helping Rev. J. D. Williams in a revival at Henderson this week. Mrs. Stubbins and little Louise are in Durham with relatives.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Circuit.

We began the last quarter of this year with a very good attendance last Sunday. The number present was sixty.

The young ladies have decided to have a box supper next Saturday night to help pay for the library for the Sunday school.

The young people did not have singing at the church last Sunday afternoon on account of the services at the Christian church near here.

We still have prayer services every Thursday night and the young people are taking a great interest in the services.

New Union Redeemed.

For a long time our church in Richland circuit seemingly has been nearly dead, and the circuit minister has apparently left us out to die. But thanks be to God who never deserts His people, He sent dear brother George A. Laughlin, who held a protracted meeting for one week with great success. Never did any brother work more faithfully than he. Eight professed, and many reclaimed. The people shouted and praised the Lord and it seemed like good old times at Union when I was a boy. Glory be to God for His goodness in sending such a faithful servant among us who is loved by all. Thanks to Miss Ethel Allred who was faithful in giving us good music.

Your brother, W. R. Ashworth.

We have just closed a very successful meeting at Union Grove. Bro. Geo. E. Hunt and Bro. W. P. Martin were our preaching help. We cannot speak too highly of the work and preaching of these brethren. The church was greatly revived; the people praised God in the old-time way. The meeting resulted in 20 or more conversions and 11 joined our church. On Friday, the last day of the meeting, the people of Union Grove and perhaps as many of other denominations and especially the Baptist people took an active and a very interesting part in the annual birthday dinner of Bro. Hunt.

We regret very much indeed that the Rev. Mr. Wetherman, the Baptist minister who always takes the lead on these occasions, could not be with us, but Bro. Jennings, whom we love and esteem very highly, took the place of Bro. Wetherman, and made a nice talk and called Bro. Hunt to bless the table, then we had all things common. J. W. Self.

All the officials are requested to be present, as this is an important conference. The pastor's salary for another year is fixed at this time and each church should be represented, and say what they will do about it, else they must accept what the conference does.

Since our last report death has visited our community and taken the spirit of Mrs. Geo. Wagner from earth to its eternal home in glory. Grandma Wagner, as we all called her, was a good old woman, one that everybody loved that came in contact with her. She was one of the oldest people in this community, being 90 years, 6 months, and 16 days old. She seemed to be ready and willing to go, only waiting for the time to come. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, assisted by Rev. Jacob Leonard, of Lexington, after which her remains were laid to rest in Bethesda cemetery to await the resurrection of the dead. May the Lord bless her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren and may they live such pure and holy lives as did she.

Bro. Powell filled his appointment at Bethesda last Sunday. He gave us some more gospel truths. Our Sunday school is moving on nicely under Bro. R. E. Leonard as our Supt.

Our fourth quarterly conference will convene at West Lexington church on next Saturday, the 17th. Let all of the official members come.

Mr. Cleve Conrad is at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Conrad. Cleve has been with the navy of the U. S. in Port Royal, S. C., and other points for over four years, and talks of going back to it again. Chas. M. Yokley.

OUR ANNA.

The hour hand of the big clock in the counting-room of the great Rulofson factory was just at ten when the door of the private office opened, and the master appeared in the doorway.

He beckoned the waiting messenger to him.

"Go to the cabinet shop," he said, "and tell the foreman to send Rudolph Jenson to me. Tell him I am waiting."

The boy sped away and the master returned to his desk.

He was a tall man of perhaps two-and-thirty, with a well-knit figure and a resolute face. It was a kindly face, too, and as he sat drumming with his fingers on the mass of papers before him a smile played about the firm mouth. Evidently his thoughts for the moment were on some pleasant subject.

A low rap on the door drew his attention. "Come in," he called.

The door slowly opened and an old man entered. He was in his working-man's garb, bareheaded, and with lots of shavings clinging to his jacket and overalls. He stooped a little as he stepped forward.

"Good morning, Mr. Rulofson, sir," he said with a slight German accent. "You sent for me?" His voice slightly quavered as he asked the question.

"Yes, Mr. Jenson," replied the master; "sit down here." And he pointed to a chair close by the desk. As the old man stiffly seated himself the kindly smile lingered about the young man's mouth, yet the old man looked at him with a troubled glance.

"You let me speak, Mr. Rulofson?" he asked, as he pulled nervously at his thick gray beard. "Maybe I can make some explanations. I don't blame Peterson. Peterson is a good foreman. He did just right to report me. I was late twice, and I am not quite so quick with my hands as I was. I know it. I am sixty-four years old, Mr. Rulofson, sir." He leaned a little forward and rubbed his gnarled fingers through his grizzly hair.

"Yes, yes, I know. That makes no difference. Work is work."

He opened up his hands and held their palms upward before his breast. They were eloquent witnesses of a life of toil. Bent and gnarled and knotted, they told of continuous weary hours with tools and lathe. Rulofson looked at the old man's hands, and the smile on his pleasant face faded.

"Mr. Jenson," he began.

"One moment, Mr. Rulofson, sir," the old man interrupted, "I don't haf nothing to say against Peterson. He is a very goot workman, and a fine foreman. Yes, that is right. He is looking out for your interests, Mr. Rulofson. He says to himself, 'The old man is getting clumsy. He is not worth what we pay him. A younger man could do the work for less money. He has been here a long time. I will not discharge him myself. I will report him to Mr. Rulofson. He was a friend of the old man Rulofson. The old man's boy will let him down easy.'" He paused a moment and slowly rubbed his hand thru his grizzled hair. But before the younger man could interrupt he hastily resumed. "I was in the factory twenty years before Peterson came. Yes. When your father started out in business he sent for me and said, 'Jenson, if you will promise to be a man, I will give you work.' He was goot to me. I was always too fond of the beer, and the singing, and the gardens. Your father was different, Mr. Rulofson. He was full of ambitions. He climbed up; I stood still."

"I am quite sure my father never forgot you," said the younger man.

"No, he never forgot me. The last day he visited the factory he called from the doorway of the shop, 'Hullo there, Jenson, old fellow.' I remember chust how he looked when he said it. Your father was always quite as goot to me as I deserved. It took me such a wery long time to settle down to work. I would go out with the young fellows and maybe it would be two, three days before I would come back to the works. Yet your father kept me right along. Sometimes he would talk to me about my foolishness, sometimes he would only shake his head. But he kept me. And then I married Lena. Then I quit my old ways. But my chance was gone. My ambition was gone with my youth. I could never be anything but a cabinet maker, Mr. Rulofson, and for three and twenty years your father had no employee more faithful than Rudolph Jenson."

"I have heard my father speak of you in the kindliest manner," said the younger man. "You know that the business cares were many and that in later years his health was poor. Yet I am quite sure he never forgot you."

"I am glad to know it," said the old man. "We were very wide apart. Yet we started together. My family was as good as yours, Mr Rulofson, sir. My father was a chapel-meister, my oldest brother a professor at Bonn, my younger brother a captain of Austrian cavalry. Even the black sheep of the family, poor Rudolph Jenson, was a wery goot cabinet-make—in his day."

He laughed a little harshly as he leaned forward.

"Mr. Rulofson, sir," he slowly said, "for three and twenty years I had no reason to ask a favor of your father. I did my tasks well. He had no better workman. Now it is different. I am old. My hand is no longer my trusty servant. I come to ask you a great favor, Mr. Rulofson, sir. Do not discharge me quite yet. Let me stay a little longer." He help up his hand quickly as the younger man tried to speak. "Wait, Mr. Rulofson, sir. I want to explain. I want to tell you why I ask this favor. It is not for myself. I haf a daughter. When my Lena went away, she left me a little girl, a little Anna. For twenty years that child has been all there is in life for me. I was her nurse, her guide, her teacher, her friend. You can't understand this. Mr. Rulofson, sir. Nobody but a father can. Some day you may."

He paused and wiped his forehead with a huge handkerchief that he dragged from an inner pocket. Philip Rulofson leaned back in his chair with his eyes fixed on the old man's troubled face and made no further effort to interrupt him.

"She grew up a beautiful girl," the old man resumed. "A beautiful girl and a dutiful girl. As I watched her growing I made up my mind that she should be a lady. I would devote all I could earn to adding to my child's attractions. She had lessons in music, in German and French. Sometimes it pinched pretty hard, but I never wished to hold back a penny from her. No, I watched her grow up so beautiful, and gentle, and accomplished and my heart swelled with joy. Sometimes I would whisper, 'Look down, Lena, and see what I am trying to do for our child.'"

He paused again and slowly wiped his forehead.

"Maybe I detain you too long, Mr. Rulofson, sir," he said.

"Go on," said Philip.

"When she was eighteen," the other continued, "she asked me if I could send her to college. She thought if she went, you see, that it would give her a better chance to teach—for she had set her heart on teaching. I sent her to the college of her choice, and there is no better in the land. It almost broke my heart to let her go—we had been together so long, but I knew it would be only a father's selfishness to keep her with me. Three years she has been in college, and three times she has come back to me—ah those beautiful visits!"

He broke abruptly and looked at Philip.

"You see I'm getting old, Mr. Rulofson, sir. I talk so much.'

"Go on," said the yonnger man.

"So my Anna has now less than a year to stay in the college," the other resumed. "And then she will be graduated mit high honors. Then she will be a lady mit all the accomplishments that money could find. She will teach, perhaps. Maybe she will marry some goot man who is worthy of her. Her old father will not stand in the way. He will keep himself quite out of sight."

He paused once more and looked appealingly to the younger man.

"Maybe you see how it is," he timidly said.

"See what?" inquired the youngerman.

"Ah!" cried the other, "I thought I made it so plain. Don't you see that if I am discharged I cannot keep my Anna in the school? She will have to leave, and she will get no diploma, she may not even have a chance to teach. Don't you see that she will not be a finished lady?"

He looked at the young man eagerly, and his lip trembled and the perspiration shone on his broad forehead.

"Mr. Jensen," said the younger man, kindly, "I have a favor to ask."

"I have been told this story before," Philip Rulofson went on, "but I was glad to hear it from your lips. It came to me the first time from your daughter Anna."

"My Anna!" murmured the other.

"Yes," said Philip Rulofson. He arose from his chair and stood before the old man. He spoke rapidly. "I met your daughter at a little gathering at the home of a friend in the college town. That was six months ago. I have met her many times since. Yesterday she told me of her father."

"Ah," murmured the old man; "she should not have done that. It was not necessary. Nobody needs to know."

"I had asked her to be my wife," said Philip Rulofson, "and she sent me to you."

"What is that?" cried the old man.

"Father Jenson," said Philip, "will you give me Anna?"

The old man arose. His legs trembled, his eyes were dim.

"God is goot," he murmured, as he gripped the young man's hand in his rough palm. "I gif her to you, son of my dead friend."

There was a little silence as the men stood with clasped hands.

Then a smile broke over the old man's rugged face.

"So I am not to be discharged?" he said.

"No," laughed Philip.

"Vell," said the old man, "I surely deserve to be. I've lost a full hour of precious time. What will Peterson say? I must get back to my lathe. Good-by, Philip."

'Good-by, Father Jenson."

But the old man paused in the doorway. His face softened, his eyes grew moist, his voice trembled.

"You will be goot to my Anna?" he asked.

"Our Anna," said Philip Rulofson.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Reunion.

Sep. 8 was a great day at Bro. A. M. Isley's one mile south of Bellemont in Alamance county. It was a Sharpe reunion. Of course everybody there was not a Sharpe, but most of them were related to the Sharpes or wanted to be. One man had to go back three generations to get related, but you could not tell from the way he ate and swelled around but what he was full-blooded. Yes, sir; it was a regular crowd of Sharps and yet there was not a confidence man in the crowd. Why, to show you how they went at it, let me tell you. They went to the woods, cut the logs, hauled them to the sawmill, gave a special order and had the material cut to build the table which was one hundred and nine feet and a half long and four feet wide. The bracings were strong and well arranged, somewhat on the cantilever bridge style. When I first saw the thing I wondered why it was built on such a principle, but when I saw what it had to hold it was no longer a mystery. Yes, it was called a Sharpe reunion, and I guess it was, for I saw two or three John Sharpes, and there was Julius Sharpe, Mary Sharpe, Luddy Sharpe, Lewis Sharpe, James Sharpe, Lacy Sharpe, Sarah Sharpe, Joel Sharpe and a host of other Sharpes too numerous to mention, besides one or two Sharpes who had gotten Holt of something else, but were just as loyal at dinner time as any body else. The brass band from Burlington was there to enliven the occasion and Mr. Walter Sharpe of Burlington delivered an address showing some of the things the Sharpe family had done. Then dinner. Bro. C. H. Whitaker returned thanks and the people got busy. I never saw a crowd try harder to eat it all up, though in perfect order, for I have never seen a more orderly crowd, but I never saw a crowd make such a dismal failure. Why, it seemed to me that there was more on the table when everybody had enough than the people had eaten.

Wife and I had to leave about three in the afternoon. If I remember correctly, they had registered over 262 names and were still registering. Bro. John Sharpe of Bellemont was eighty-one that day. I do not know whether any one else was born on that day or not, but I do know we all want to repeat the glad day as soon as possible. Everybody had a good time. Usually on such occasions some are at a loss and do not fall in with the general jollification, but it was so hearty and full of good cheer that even the little children as well as the old had a good time. After dinner Hon. Jacob A. Long of Graham, N. C., made a very interesting address on the Sharpe family and its relation to many other families in the Piedmont section as well as in the far West.

It was greatly regretted by many that Bro. John Dixon, who married a Sharpe, was sick and unable to be there. Before dinner everybody had a good appetite and after dinner tite and appe (tight and happy). W. E. Swain.

THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1914. NUMBER 49.

—We print this week two articles from The Religious Telescope, organ of the United Brethren Church. They were sent us by a brother that has been much interested in the union movement. We print them that all our readers may understand the course of the union movement and know more of the thought and spirit of the United Brethren. Whether the union is ever consummated or not, the spirit manifested in these articles will elicit the kindly regard of our people. We presume that other articles on the same subject from other bishops will appear in the Telencope, and no one need be surprised to find after all the bishops have spoken that they decide to refer the matter to their General Conference in its next regular session in 1917.

This turn which the union movement has taken may surprise some, but we think the United Brethren leaders are to be commended for their desire to avoid doing violence to the sentiments of minorities in both churches. Minorities are sometimes right and are always worthy of respectful consideration.

A number of charges have not been heard from yet, and Conference is only three weeks off. —We are pleased to receive a kind letter from Rev. J. W. Frank, formerly of our Annual Conference, and now a missionary in Nakatsu, Oita Ken, Japan. He is happy and mission work and it is unfortunate that our church did not have an opportunity for him of this kind. He sends an article which we hope to present to our readers next week.

NOTICE.

We will issue no paper the week the Annual Conference begins. The duties of the editor in connection with the Conference and the distance of the seat of Conference from our office make this imperative under present conditions. We expect to make up to our readers by issuing a number Christmas week when we usually suspend. We make this announcement now that those who have matter for publication before Conference may send it in in time.

A STRIKING STORY.

We recall a striking story from the lips of a friend. A lady was summering in Switzerland. One day she started out for a stroll. Presently, as she climbed the mountain side, she came to a shepherd's hut. She walked to the door and looked in. There sat the shepherd. About him lay his flock. Near at hand on a pile of straw, lay a single sheep. It seemed to be suffering. Scanning it closely, the lady saw that its leg was broken. At once her sympathy went out to the suffering sheep. She looked up inquiringly to the shepherd, "How did it happen?" she said. To her amazement the shepherd answered: "Madam, I broke that sheep's leg." A look of pain swept over the visitor's face. Seeing it, the shepherd went on: "Madam, of all the sheep of my flock, this one was the most wayward. It never would follow in the pathway, in which I was leading the flock. It wandered to the verge of many a perilous cliff and dizzy abyss. And not only was it disobedient itself, but was ever leading the other sheep of my flock astray. I had before had experience with sheep of this kind. So I broke its leg. The first day I went to it with food, it tried to bite me. I left it alone for a couple of days. Then I went back to it. And now it not only took the food, but licked my hand and showed every sign of submission and affection. And now let me tell you something. When this sheep is well, as it soon will be, it will be the model sheep of my flock. No sheep will hear my voice so quickly. None will follow so closely at my side. Instead of leading its mates astray, it will now be an example and a guide for the wayward ones, leading them, with itself, in the path of obedience to my call. In short, a complete transformation will have come into the life of this wayward sheep. It has learned obedience through its sufferings."—Exchange.

—Bro. Whitaker and our Asheboro people are to have rally day next Sunday.

—Our district is larger than formerly, but President Cecil seems to be able to go over it in a year.

—The Asheville people should know it, if you expect to have "your name in the pot." Send it on without delay.

—The war reports are becoming wearisome by their monotony. No decisive results appear. Let not familiarity deaden us to the fearful criminality of the conflict. The crime is the worse because of the fact that the first World Conference of the Churches for International Peace was held in Constance, Germany, early in August. In spite of its appeal, the powers proceeded to war.

—This seems to have been a good year for our church in North Carolina. We expect reports at Asheville to show progress both in increasing membership and in the creation of church property. May the Lord lead us in the Conference, that our forces may be best disposed for the work of next year.

CHURCH UNION VOTE.

BY BISHOP W. M. WEEKLEY OF THE UNITED BRETHREN.

Negotiations looking toward the union of the United Brethren and Methodist Protestant churches have been in process now for quite a while, but for some reason, or reasons,, both denominations are getting farther away from union all the time if the plan worked out by the joint commission is to be considered the basis. Opposition and complications have arisen on both sides that were not thought of in the beginning, hence we do well to pause and consider the whole question in the light of these developments, and thus endeavor to reach a conclusion that will prevent disruption in both churches.

What every sane unionist wants is a coming together that will mean organic oneness from top to bottom. A union that will leave out a large per cent. of both denominations would be no union at all, but would be the means of bitter divisions, followed by years of costly litigation.

The United Brethren Church is not ready for union, and in saying this I think I voice largely the sentiments of an overwhelming majority of the East District, which comprises a large portion of the Church's numerical strength; not only so, but the same feeling prevails extensively throughout other parts of the Church. I base this conclusion upon reports which come from men of sound judgment and keen discernment. It was my feeling a year ago that the syllabus agreed upon by the commission should be handed down to our people at an early date for final decision, but so many things have transpired since then—things which the General Conference did not dream of, and such an adverse sentiment in some quarters has made itself known and felt—that the propriety of a referendum vote this side the next General Conference may be seriously questioned.

Recently I wrote to each of our superintendents in the United States as follows: "Shall the Board of Bishops submit the question of church union to the people, or refer it back to the General Conference for further consideration?" This plain question was put without any comment on my part. Up to this time I have received replies from thirty-three. Of this number, six say submit, one is undecided, while twenty-six favor referring the matter back to the General Conference. Those favoring a vote at present, or soon, represent 52,924, while those who would refer the question back to the General Conference represent 239,094. A few of the superintendents of the smaller conferences have not replied yet.

These facts and figures are full of significance, and we do well to ponder them. Of all men in the Church, the superintendents ought to know what the feeling of our people is on the union question, and they do; hence their views should add further caution against undue haste in thrusting upon our members something they are not ready for.

In view of existing conditions I ask, Shall we submit the union proposition? Shall the columns of the Telescope be thrown wide open again for a pro-and-con discussion of the question? Is it wise to open the way thru the Church's main organ for criminations and recriminations among disputants over this matter? Let the reader judge.

In the meantime our Methodist Protestant brethren are having a serious experience. They are badly divided. The great Maryland Conference will not come into the union if it should be voted. Nor would the North Carolina Conference come in on the present basis. I get my information from union men of high standing—men who know the sentiments of these great bodies as perhaps no others do. Maryland has 28,637 members and North Carolina 21,805, and these two hold one-third of all the Church's property. Other southern conferences will refuse to enter a union unless the whole matter as agreed upon by a joint general conference is referred back to them for approval, and unless such changes are made as will conform to their peculiar views on certain doctrinal questions. As I write I have before me letters from leaders in these conferences who, in a cool, dispassionate way, have penned the deepest, gravest convictions of their hearts. And, I must say, these conditions have created unrest among our own people, especially in the East, and caused them to question the propriety of going further at present in the union movement. They naturally and wisely raise the question as to why we should give up our name and unite with another church, when so large a part of that church, and a part so important, never will enter the new organization.

The convention held by the members of the Maryland Conference a year ago, and the paper adopted by it, led our people to see that that conference would not identify itself with the plan of union agreed upon by the commission. Then the fiery discussion at its last regular session, which lasted many hours, over technical questions relating to union, only confirmed their judgment as to the conference's attitude. As to what this and other conferences have done, I have no criticism. I recognize the fact that they a perfect right to do as they think best. This is a free country. Likewise, United Brethren have a right to think for themselves, and to make their own deductions from what they see and hear. Why make our people think they are voting on union with another church when it is clear that that body is divided, and will so remain? We must be fair and honest.

I write with a deeply-felt sorrow, but before God I believe all I have said is true; and much more, just as true, might be written. Personally, I stand for union, and always have. The strongest opposers of union on my district who have discussed the subject with me know that I have held firmly to my convictions; but I am one of the last men in the Church to press a proposition that will make trouble. I have said from the beginning, and reaffirm it now, that if we have union it must be well-nigh unanimously agreed to by our people. I never will consent to a union that would leave the new church with fewer members than the United Brethren Church now has. And in saying this I think I express the sentiment of ninety per cent. of our membership.

When I was a presiding elder, we tried to unite two local congregations that were only two miles apart. There was no question but they ought to build a new church-house at a central point and become one. Not a single good argument was made against it; but it could not be done without wrecking both societies. Some of the best families in both said emphatically that they would never go into such an arrangement. Then what? Go ahead anyhow, and eliminate those families, and thus open the way for another denomination to come into the neighborhood? No, no. We said, "It must not be pushed farther at this time, or we will have no organization at all." So the matter rested. And it thus rests to this day. I still feel that the two societies ought to have gone together; my views have not changed an iota. But they did not want the arrangement, and—well, that ended it. The people are supreme. So in this larger movement. I have my honest conviction touching union among churches similar in faith and polity, as do thousands of others, but in view of the unrest that prevails we must wait. For any man or set of men to take the lines in their hands and try to push matters at a Jehu speed, attempting at the same time to ride rough-shod over everything and everybody in the way, is a species of bad statesmanship which would not commend itself to the more considerate among church people. Any movement that will create serious bickerings and alienations in local churches and in annual conferences is not, and cannot be, conducive to the best interests of the greater kingdom. The handwriting on the wall seems clear and expressive; we must wait patiently until the finger of providence clearly points out the next thing to be done.—The Religious Telescope.

CHURCH UNION VOTE.

BISHOP C. J. KEPHART, KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

Believing that the interests of the kingdom of Christ would be promoted by closer organic union of Protestantism, I have been and am in favor of the proposed union of the United Brethren and Methodist Protestant denominations as a step in the right direction, provided such union can be so effected that there will be one instead of three resultant denominations, and that without extended and hurtful litigation.

Being asked for my views upon the present situation, I here express, as comperhensively as I can in brief space, my statements relating to conditions and events at and since the last General Conference.

I should have been glad to see the General Conference, after considering tentatively the proposed plan of union, refer the matter back to the joint commission for further study and revision during the present quadrennium, with a view to further maturing of plans so as to reach the most perfect conclusions possible. My observation is that God takes plenty of time in working out great problems, and that haste in matters of this kind endangers success.

The resolutions adopted by General Conference were, by myself at least, understood to imply that a uniform resolution should be submitted to the annual conferences, by the adoption or rejection of which they would express their approval or disapproval of the syllabus and plan of union. Such uniform resolution was not submitted to the conferences.

Some months after the General Conference, I awakened to the fact that the plan of action of the General Conference, embodied in the resolutions above referred to, was the expression of the sentiment of the General Conference, and was not based upon any constitutional provision of the denomination; and, also, that this action of General Conference was not within the limits of its prescribed authority. Perhaps I should have awakened sooner, but I did not. I consulted an attorney of widely acknowledged ability, and he, without knowing my view, expressed practically the same, and gave me a written opinion to that effect.

At the last meeting of our commission it was decided to ask for a meeting of the joint commission, to determine mutually upon further plans of action. Perhaps there was nothing binding the Methodist Protestant commission to comply with this request, except the obligation that grows out of mutual interest, which, it seems to me, should have led to a compliance with this request.

Instead of doing this, they called their General Conference, and technically at least completed the arrangement from their side; but their completing of it leaves it a very open question as to how large a part of that denomination will actually come into the union if plans are consummated, and also as to how much of litigation will be entailed.

Besides this, they prescribed a time limit within which the union must be effected. Legally, and speaking for themselves only, they no doubt had the right to do that; but it is in effect presenting to us an ultimatum, a plan not the most conducive to the promotion of unity, to say the least.

These facts, with others, combine to create a condition of dissatisfaction and uncertainty among large bodies of our people, so much so that it does not now seem at all probable that the required majority, three-fourths of those voting, will be secured for the union; this, besides the fact that one of our strongest conferences has decided that it will not act in the matter at all. Hence, even if this majority of those voting should be secured for the union, there very certainly would be destructive litigation, if not actual division.

In view of these things, it seems to me that, much as I desire to see the union effected, wisdom dictates that the entire matter be referred back to the General Conference, and thus avoid the division and dissension that we know would arise if the referendum vote were ordered.—The Religious Telescope of October 14th.

REV. BARTHOLOMEW LIGHTFOOT.

Who is he and where was he brought up? From what distinguished parentage did he come? The name smacks of reverence some, of sacred writings some and of literature some. In the old times names indicated character. I wonder if it is true now. If so I am glad the Reverend Brother is Lightfoot and not the other extreme. But isn't the good brother zealous? My! my! All the opposition is based on prejudice, and Bros. Dosier, Vuncannon and I in particular! Doesn't he shoot straight from the shoulder, though? I would be inclined to go to the mourner's bench; but being classed with Bro. Dosier I must not do that! "And the union is a foregone conclusion"! I didn't know that. I don't believe I ever would have known it but for the reverend brother's kind information. This shows how important it is to have good literature in our homes. I had actually gotten it into my head (possibly by prejudice and if so I mourn) that none of the eastern conferences wanted the union—that none of them were striving for a Bishopric—that none of the southern conferences would stand for it; and the U. B. Church had intelligently and consistently and respectfully given the matter up. My Reverend Brother Lightfoot must really excuse me, being a layman, and being prejudiced (which I sorely lament) for not being able to keep up with the progress of affairs. My business affairs have to be attended to; for I have had nine children to educate so that they may be able to keep up with the procession. So you see I am not all bad---I read some and reach the best conclusions possible to a mind blinded by prejudice (for which I am very sorry). Possibly it is dear old Dr. Tagg's fault? He asked that we stop writing and perhaps I might have known better but for that? However I did not read Bishop William M. Weekly's article in The Religious Telescope of October 14 and also one in the same paper by Bishop Cyrus J. Kephart and I can't reach any such conclusions as the Reverend Bartholomew Lightfoot reaches. I really didn't know any thing about the foregoneness of the thing. I thought I was conscientious, intelligent and consistent in the matter; but perhaps it is prejudice and if it is I mourn!

THE STORY OF BILLY AND BESSIE RYAN.

There lay in a little room, in a miserable wreck of a house, one of several that formed a filthy court in the most slimy and unsavory region of St. Luke's parish—a decent working widow of about forty-five, who was helplessly ill and could barely move hand or foot. At a glance a visitor could see that the room, though devoid of every comfort, was neat and kept scrupulously clean. The woman had struck her leg and the blow had caused a wound which had formed into an ugly and festering ulcer. As long as she was able to walk she had gone as an outpatient to the nearest hospital. There she lay in the dripping, dreary days of the late autumn months, unhelped and helpless.

But her chief care was about her children, little Billy and Bessie. She prayed to God for them. She had under her pillow a leaf of a well-known weekly Christian paper containing an account of one Dr. Barnardo's cases of rescue, which concluded with the statement that "No destitute child is ever turned away from his door;" and the poor soul in her distress took this leaf, read it over and over again, and asked the Lord that her little ones might be taken in there. Let us now see how little Billy fares on the first night of our story.

"Matches, sir?" said a piping, timid voice to a gentleman who hurries out of Moorgate Street Station, thinking of the business transacted at a board meeting of a Society in which he was interested. And he glanced down at the shoeless feet of the little fellow who stood by in the murky, fitful light of that damp night. "Matches, sir?" he repeated, making bold because the gentleman had turned and was looking at him. "Two a ha' penny! (one cent) Two boxes a ha' penny, sir. Buy 'em, sir!" persisted the diminutive seller, as he kept beside the gentleman who was hurrying home. Then he added, in order to make the more sure of doing business: "Could give yer three, but there ain't much profit!"

At this the gentleman paused, and took a good look at the little street merchant. But the gentleman must himself tell us what further took place in this interview, and what it led to.

I saw a sight, common enough, alas! in London; a little street vendor, shoeless and stockingless, his bare feet muddied, his trousers ragged, his jacket torn. Trousers and jacket were all he had to cover him from the drizzling rain and the shivering fog. A queer little old patched cap was perched on one side of his head in a knowing fashion, pathetically at variance with the sad lines of his face. The child looked to me about eight years of age; but I guessed him to be about nine, for he was of stunted growth.

"Sold much to-day?" I inquired. He shook his head.

"Six boxes ain't much; only t'ree ha' pence for the lot."

"Who sent you out?"

"Mother."

"And why does mother send out a little chap like you?"

"She can't help it; she's werry bad."

"Where is she?"

"Home."

"Anybody else there?"

"Sissy."

"Do you make much money?"

"Sometimes, if I'm lucky."

"Are you often lucky?"

"Not 'xactly often; I wor in real luck yesterday."

"How's that?"

"Such a nice gemman came along, and says he, 'You are a pore little chap,' and he gave me a shilling. Oh! he wor a nice gemman, he wor!"

My young companion had wasted no words, and now, when such emphasis was laid upon this particular gentleman, I felt sure he was being held up for imitation!

"Why don't you go home with your three ha' pence?" I continued.

"'Taint no use," said the boy. "'Taint no use going home with littler nor sixpence."

"Must you always have sixpence?"

The little head nodded quickly and emphatically. Clearly sixpence was the irreducible minimum!

At this gentleman's request the little fellow told him where he lived. "Come on with me," the gentleman said, "and I will see your mother. I am a doctor, and perhaps I can do her some good."

By this time our reader will have divined who this gentleman was—Dr. Barnardo himself, now hurrying on his errand of mercy, guided by the pattering feet of Billy.

On reaching No. 13, Plough Court, St. Luke's, where the mother and two children dwelt, the little fellow led his visitor up a flight of creaky and filthy stairs, holding him tightly with his own small, thin hand, and then, on reaching the back room on the top floor, ran in first. The doctor waited outside. In a few moments the door was thrown open, and a weak voice said, "Come in, sir." Dr Barnardo found the room literally devoid of furniture. "There was no chair to sit down on; no table to fill up the bare floor space. Yet there was a marvelous air of peace and even of comfort in that empty garret! All, for instance, was wondrously clean. And one felt that there was a decent and gracious air about the place that spoke well for its human occupants." A poor, decent-looking woman lay on a heap of rags on the floor. A few words of sympathy and explanation led to the telling of her simple story. But the doctor did not, as yet, say who he was; neither had the family any idea. "By the side of the woman stood a little girl of about six years of age--'our Bess,' she called her, a bright-eyed, winsome little lassie."

When the suffering woman was asked why she did not go into a hospital, the answer she gave made the visitor regret that he had made the suggestion. "What would become of the children?" said the poor woman. "Billy might do for a bit by himself—he is a brave lad! But our Bess—." And then the poor mother broke down in tears, but in a moment she had recovered herself, and then her calm and resolute face revealed where Billy got his bravery.

"Well, then, why not try to get the children into some Home or Refuge, while you are taken to the hospital and properly treated?" "Ah, yes sir!" she replied eagerly. "That's what I would like; but then I don't know how to set about it."

"Look here, sir," continued the woman, and she put the leaf about one of Dr. Barnardo's own Rescues in his hand, saying, "Read that, sir! I have been hoping and praying that God would let Billy and Bess get in there. I know they'd be safe, and they'd both be together, and then I'd go in cheerful to the 'ospital!"

Her visitor felt with deep emotion that he could not keep her longer without telling her who he was. "My name is Barnardo," he said, and forthwith informed her that he had a great many boys and girls like hers in his charge, and that was why he had asked her little boy to bring him to her; and now, if she was willing, he would take Billy and Bessie and keep them while she was away.

With wonder and amazement, and tears the poor mother called her children. "Billy!" and he was promptly at her side. "Bess, dear!" and then, holding the two children in her trembling hands, she said, "This is the gentleman that has all the little boys and girls. I told you God would hear me, and now He's just sent him here to take and keep you both until I am well again."—African Friend.

MARRIED.

On Thursday morning, October 29th, at ten o'clock, Miss Anna Meade Michaux was united in marriage to Rev. J. S. Williams, of Asheville, in Grace Methodist Protestant Church, Greensboro. The wedding ceremony, which was beautiful in its simplicity, was performed by Rev. R. M. Andrews, the pastor of the church.

Shortly before the bridal pair entered the church, the organist, Miss Willie Lee Clapp, played the Poccato, by Rogers, after which Mrs. Ernest Teague, the leading soprano of the Grace Church choir, sang "The Thought of Thee."

There were no attendants, Miss Michaux entering upon the arm of the groom. The ushers, Messrs. J. M. Millikan, R. H. Brooks, J. Norman and E. S. Wills, preceded them down the aisle, where they stood before a chancel banked with palms and ferns, while the impressive words of the wedding ceremony were spoken.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue broadcloth, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

Rev. J. S. Williams is too well known to the readers of the Herald to need any words of introduction. He was pastor of Grace Church a number of years ago, serving later Halifex Circuit, Henderson Station and High Point. From High Point he went to Asheville, as pastor of the Methodist Protestant Mission. During his pastorate he was greatly impressed with the needs of the suffering people who go to Asheville in quest of health, to whom he ministered faithfully. Three years ago, with the consent of the Annual Conference he accepted the chaplaincy of a mission exclusively for the benefit of the sick and needy, to whom he has been a veritable angel of mercy.

The bride is a daughter of the late Rev. R. R. Michaux, and is a woman of rare force of character, as well as of unusual personal charm. For a number of years, she was the very efficient Primary Sperintendent of Grace Sunday School. She was a member of the Faculty of the State Normal College until recently, as one of the Supervising Teachers of the Training School. She has been interested in various movements looking to the social and educational advancement of the State, and is recognized as an authority in educational matters in her department.

Among the guests present were the President of the State Normal College, Dr. J. I. Foust, and wife; many members of the faculty and of the student body of the College; Dr. and Mrs. T. H. McConnell, of Graham; Mrs. T. H. Crocker, of Middleburg; Mrs. J. R. Reitzel and daughter, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, Captain and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Rev. and Mrs A. G. Dixon, and Mrs. Sallie Welburn, of High Point; Mr. W. J. Williams, of Rockingham, a brother of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Fannie Kirkpatrick, of Summerfield.

While in the city, Mr. Williams was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Brooks. Mr. and Mrs. J. Norman Wills entertained the bridal pair, and the members of the immediate family, at dinner on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams left by automobile for High Point shortly after the ceremony, where they lunched with Mrs. J. R. Reitzel, leaving for the western part of the state early in the afternoon. They will be at home in Asheville after November 15. J. N. W.

SOME COMMON ERRORS.

Mistakes of life, as Judge Rentoul told the Bartholomew Club of London, are:

To expect to set up our own standard of right and wrong and expect everybody to conform to it.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mold the dispositions of everybody alike.

Not to yield in unimportant trifles.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to alleviate, if we can, all that needs alleviation.

Not to make allowance for the weakness of others.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

VANCE CT.—I visited this field on the 21st and 22nd of Oct. and went to all the churches; not a large attendance at any one of the churches: all the appointments were in the week, and the people were very busy. I found the field in good condition for work, and the people pleased with their pastor and his work. Finance behind, but from what I could find out the pastor will be paid in full, and he and his people want to meet all the other claims, but the low prices for cotton etc. will make it hard for them to do so. If this field with many others would raise some of their general interests claims in the early part of the year it would be better and much easier to raise the whole amount of all of the claims. Bro. Burgess is popular and his return is desired so far as I could learn; but Conference may see it best to send him to some other charge. My claim overpaid at New Hope and Flat Rock and will be paid in full at Harris Chapel.

GILLBURG STA.—Bro. Burgess is pastor of this church. I preached on Thursday night to a good congregation taking in consideration the rain. This church seems to be in good working condition and the building is in good repair. Finances well in hand. My claim paid.

GRANVILLE CT.—Bro. Bethea met me at Gillburg and took me to the parsonage to spend the night. I visited all of the churches on this field and held the fourth quarterly conference atUnion Chapel on Saturday; a good conference and well attended. The finance is in very good condition on this field. Rehoboth paid up in full and the balance will pay out before the pastor goes to Conference. The pastor read his quarterly report which was splendid and I think it will be published in the Herald. All of the church buildings are in good condition and the entire field is in good condition. Bro. Bethea was unanimously asked to return by the quarterly conference but he is like the balance, he is liable to be changed; but I see or know of no reason why at this writing. Claim paid.

HENDERSON STATION.—I preached to a very good congregation on Saturday night. This is a loyal good people and so far as I remember have always met the Conference claims in full. I should be glad for our church here to increase more rapidly in membership if it could be so. I'm sure the pastor and membership are looking well to this and all other interests of the church. The pastor was not at home and I did not find out as to all the particular workings of the church, but so far as I did learn everything was moving along nicely. My claim paid. I was glad to be in the homes of these pastors and see their families. Sorry to find J. D. W., Jr., sick with rheumatism; hope he will soon be well. I omitted to say that Harris Chapel on Vance Ct. has been improved to such an extent that if it did not occupy the same location one would not know that it was the same church.

This completes my notes from the field. I trust we may have a profitable and pleasant Conference.

C. A. Cecil

STANLY CT.—Our fourth quarterly will be held at Porter's on Monday after the 2nd Sunday in November.

W. D. Reed.

ASHEVILLE.—We had a good day yesterday. The attendance at Sunday school was better than usual, and so was the attendance at both of the preaching services.

The Ladies' Aid held another sale Saturday, and cleared $10.60. They held a sale two weeks ago that I failed to report. At that sale $8.06 was made. The ladies are hoping to have at least one more sale before the end of the Conference year. So far this year the ladies have made a little over $300. It will probably reach $350 when all moneys are in.

I was on the point of writing that the preachers and delegates had better bring their rocking chairs with them when they came to Conference if they wanted a comfortable seat, when I got word that the pews had been shipped. I hope they will get here in time to be set up for you to sit in them, and I think they will.

We were glad to have Mrs. C. E. Wilbur and daughter with us at church Sunday. Mrs. Wilbur is the wife of Doctor Wilbur, the editor of our Sunday school literature. They are expecting to spend the winter in Asheville.

That reception had to be put off from last Friday to this Monday. We'll tell you all about it next week.

And still more of the work of Providence. You may remember that when we first started getting the plans for the building, I wrote that Mr. T. E. Davis, our architect, stated that he would not make any charge for drawing the plans or superintending the erection of the building. I was in his office to-day, and he gave me receipted bills for both the plans and the work, in all amounting to $278.87. Did it make us happy? Well, I should say so.

About those pews. The company had written us, that, in accordance with the terms of the contract, they had made draft on one of the local banks for one-half the contract price ($240), which must be paid when the seats arrive before we can take them from the depot. We have in the bank to meet the claim about $50 or $60. Unless our friends are good to us, we will have to borrow about $200 to meet the claim. How about it, folks? Won't you give us a lift? Just one last big effort and the thing is done.

Asheville Church Building Fund.—Col. S. V. Pickens, Hendersonville, $25; Mrs. Mary J. Hunter, Wilmington, $3; Mr. G. A. Webster, Weaverville, $2; Mrs. Martha Roberts, Jupiter, $1; Mrs. ————, $.50; Mr. T. E. Davis, three and one-half per cent. of the contract price of the church, for plans, $214.79; Mr. T. E. Davis, for his wife, $34.08; Mr. T. E. Davis, for Eilene Davis, $15; Mr. T. E. Davis, for Alma Davis, $15.

Ever faithful Col. Pickens! With his face turned toward the land that is very far off he is not unmindful of the need close at home. And these other gifts, our hearts go out in thankfulness for these. May God bless the givers.

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

FRIENDSHIP, YADKIN COL. CT.—Our pastor, Mr. Powell, filled his last appointment for this year last Sunday with a very good sermon. He has been with us five years and we don't feel that we can give him up; we all love him and we want him back; we believe he has done much good on the circuit. The fourth Sunday in September

Prof. W. T. Totten preached for us as our pastor was absent; he gave us a very good sermon. We were glad to have Professor with us again. We were also glad to have Misses Totten and Chaifin worship with us. We are still having a good Sunday school; we were indeed glad to have our pastor conduct it for us Sunday. Reporter.

BURLINGTON.—There was no report made by your Burlington reporter last week. We were very busy with other work and asked our pastor to make the report. As he is very busy getting ready for Conference, we presume he did not find time to write.

Our attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was 242. The attendance on the previous Sunday was 207. By comparing these figures you can see that we are increasing our attendance considerably. The Senior Baracas began an attendance contest last Sunday, which will continue for ten weeks. These contests always prove very interesting and beneficial in building up the class and enlarging the membership list.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held on Thursday night, Nov. 5, at 7:30 o'clock. We trust that there will be a full attendance of the members of the conference. Matters of vital importance concerning our church will be considered. Every member is urgently requested to be present.

The Junior Philathea class of our Sunday school will have a Halloween oyster supper next Saturday night. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the class. We can truthfully say that this class of young girls deserves the encouragement and hearty support of our Sunday-school and church, and we trust that our people will show their appreciation of what this class is doing by attending the supper and helping a worthy cause. The supper will be given in a vacant building of the business section of the city.

Mrs. J. M. Hayes, who was carried to Rex Hospital a few weeks ago, returned home last Wednesday. Her condition is slightly improved, but she is still in a very critical condition. We hope she will continue to improve and be fully restored to health again.——We are sorry to report that Miss Rosa Williams, who recently joined our church, was taken to the hospital at Raleigh last Sunday morning. We did not learn of the nature of the illness, but hope it is not serious. We trust the operation will be successful and hope for her a speedy recovery.——Rev. J. R. Hutton, of Greensboro, was in Burlington a short while Monday. He is conducting a special meeting at Carolina Mills this week.

The date for the Annual Conference is rapidly approaching, only three weeks ahead. We hope to finish the year's work and raise all claims by the 10th of November. We have done a good work during the year, and expect to go to Conference with a good report.

GRAHAM AND HAW RIVER.—We will hold our fourth quarterly conference Saturday afternoon before the second Sunday in November. A full attendance is expected. Have your reports made out, and be ready to read them before the conference. Business of great importance to come up. We will meet promptly at three o'clock in the Graham church. Brethren, we expect you to be present.

O. B. Williams, Pastor.

GRAHAM.—Our pastor preached last Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. The weather was very threatening at the morning service; our congregation was rather small, but we had ten more in the Sunday school than we did the Sunday before, and more than we had a year ago. Our Sunday school keeps up well here. Don't forget, offering first Sunday is for Children's Home.

Mrs. James Black recently entertained her Sunday-school class at her home. There were thirty boys and girls of the class No. 1 present. They enjoyed the refreshments of fruits, cream and cake very much. Mrs. Black is one of our best teachers.——Nina Holt, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Holt, has returned from Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where a specialist had been consulted, and is now in a hospital in Salisbury for treatment. Let us pray that little Nina may recover.

GRANVILLE.—Our President has come and gone and his visit to Granville charge was both pleasant and profitable. Good and helpful sermons. Large attendance at fourth quarterly conference. Harmonious session. Many vital topics in regard to church law were discussed. Some churches are paid out, others expecting to pay every cent of every claim. This has been a good year with us notwithstanding the short crops and low prices. We have received into the church this year on this charge 34 and are expecting some more before going to Conference. We thank God for the progress made.

We appreciate material gifts coming to us from the following good folks: Sisters William Garrett, Crystal Bobbitt, Robert Van Dyke, John Overton, T. P. Stewart, Minnie Pardue, W. C. Rogers, Lee Mitchell, James Garrett; also from Bros. J. W. Davis, N. B. Patton, T. P. Stewart, Joe Cheatham, E. T. Bobbitt, and E. T. Ball. Thank you, friends. Granville people are kind and appreciative and we shall not complain if we are assigned here for another year; for it has been four years of work that has been done with pleasure because of the help and co-operation given.

May the good Lord smile upon us in Annual Conference and send us out filled with the Spirit for another year's work. Sincerely, N. G. Bethea.

CLEVELAND CIRCUIT.—Our special meetings for this Conference year are a thing of the past. The first was at Pleasant Hill, which began the 3rd Sunday in July. Monday, Bro. Moton came to our assistance and did most of the preaching. The church was revived and ten came to the altar and professed faith in Christ; only two joined the church. This seemed strange to the writer; so I inquired into the matter and was told that all the others were members there and at Knob Creek. There must be a microbe that causes so many to backslide. I find it wherever I go. Our next was at Kistlers beginning the fourth Sunday in July. Bro. Morris, pastor of Lincoln Ct., was our pulpit help and did good and acceptable work. There were eleven conversions and three accessions. More sliding. Our third pitched battle was at Oak Grove the first Sun. in Aug. with Bro. Moton behind the book board. Here Bro. M. did most of the preaching notwithstanding we had agreed to preach sermon about. I soon decided that he could do it so much better than I could, so I insisted on his filling the place several times that it was my time to wabble in, but I had to square accounts later. The church was thoroughly revived. Fifteen conversions and seven accessions. Our special effort at Mt. Moriah began the 2nd Sun. in Sept. Bro. Moton came Monday and preached all but one sermon to the close of the meeting Thursday evening. There were thirty-eight conversions and sixteen accessions. Bro. Moton preached the Gospel at each place in that spirit which plainly said, "I firmly believe just what I am preaching." The people believed it likewise. Our fifth and last special meeting began the 2nd Sun. evening in October and closed Tues. evening with six conversions and one accession.

There have been 75 conversions and 30 accessions on this work this year. The spiritual condition of the whole circuit seems to be very good. W. C. Lassiter.

———o———

Halifax Circuit.—The 4th Sunday in Sept. we began our revival meeting at Ringwood with Rev. H. L. Powell as pulpit help. There was a large congregation on Sunday but during the week the congregations were not large. Bro. Powell did some splendid preaching and the people were delighted with him and his work. The meeting resulted in two professions and two accessions.

The first Sunday afternoon in Oct. we began our meeting at Union. The pastor preached on Sunday and on Monday Rev. C. J. Edwards came and preached until Thursday night, when the meeting closed. Bro. Edwards' work was very acceptable and he made a good impression upon the people. There were three professions and three accessions. This closed our revival work for this year. We have had in all this year eighteen professions and sixteen accessions.

Pres. Cecil visited this work Oct. 10-12. His visit was an inspiration to us. Bro. Cecil was finally persuaded to preach the dedicatory sermon at Union church on the 2nd Sunday in Oct. His sermon was highly enjoyed by all who heard it. After the sermon Bro. B. F. Lewis, chairman of the building committee, presented the church for dedication. This new church is a monument to the perseverance of the faithful few who have labored earnestly to build a house of worship of which they are not ashamed. And one of the best things about it is that the people of the community largely built the church so that they themselves have something to rejoice over.

The 4th quarterly conference was held at Bethesda on Oct. 23rd. Rev. Rufus Bradley of the M. E. Church preached a splendid sermon at eleven o'clock and the Q. C. was held in the afternoon. All the churches were represented and the meeting was the most pleasant and harmonious that this writer has ever attended. Finances were considerably behind, but it is still hoped that everything will come up before conference. The salary for next year was fixed at $720 with the understanding that $60 is to be paid by the people at the Fosburgh Camp who had asked to be supplied another year.

When the time came to instruct the delegate the pastor announced that on account of his wife's health he could not return to this work another year. After some discussion it was decided not to instruct the delegate to the next Annual Conference. Will say that whoever is assigned to this work by the next Annual Conference will fall into the hands of as kind a people as this writer has ever seen.——Miss Jennie Lewis of Union church is a welcome visitor at the parsonage. J. E. Pritchard.

Midway, Haw River Ct.—Our pastor, Bro. Ashburn, preached an excellent sermon Sunday to a very good congregation. We feel that all who heard this sermon were greatly benefited. The second Sunday in November will be the last appointment for this Conference year. We hope to have Bro. Ashburn returned for another year; don't think we could get a pastor to suit us better and one who would be loved better by both young and old.

Our S. S. is doing very well, but not as well as might be; so many of our young people are away now in school and some teaching. Misses House and Leatherwood have come back to teach our school again. We are glad to welcome them back; they are such a help in the S. S. and in singing.——Prayer meetings every third Sunday are very well attended.——With best wishes to the Herald,

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was almost back to the average. There were sixty-five present. The young ladies' class got the banner in attendance, but the young men still hold the banner in collection. It is very seldom that the young ladies can beat the young men out of the banner in attendance.——The fourth quarterly conference of this circuit was held at Clark's Chapel last Saturday. Bro. Martin preached in the morning after which dinner was served picnic fashion under the pines. The business of the circuit was attended to in the afternoon. Every church on this circuit had delegates at the conference with the exception of Terry's Fork. Bro. Martin filled his regular appointment here Sunday and preached one of his fine sermons. There was a mistake made in the report last week concerning Bro. Martin not preaching here any more after last Sunday. He wil l preach again the third Sunday night in November. Bro. Martin is liked by all who come in contact with him.——There will be a box supper at the Murphy Hill school house next Saturday night and a party of the young people of this Sunday school are planning to go. SOME COMMON ERRORS.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To live as if the moment, the time, the day were so important that it would live forever.

To estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.

SHALL NOT A MOTHER FIGHT FOR HER YOUNG?

Five o'clock in the afternoon, and she was just through with the vaccinations! The doctor gave a sigh of relief at the thought of the work done. Then another sigh, this time of regret, followed involuntarily as she thought of the many still needing vaccination, while she had only one tube of vaccine left, and that must be kept for some of the missionaries. Small-pox was ravaging the Yangtze valley and everywhere a heavy toll in human lives was being exacted. It was a sore vexation that, even though she telegraphed for fresh vaccine, it could not be received for seven or eight days; for alas! China was still living in the Middle Ages, and communication was yet more difficult in the winter.

Still, she was glad that she had vaccinated the children of the shop-keeper across the way, even though it had taken some of her vaccine, and the rest of the schoolgirls must wait until more should come. The poor mother had come with her two boys and, weeping bitterly, had thrown herself on the ground and begged the doctor to have mercy on her and save these two sons. She had just lost one son from smallpox and sould not bear the thought of another's going the same way.

Meditating thus, in tired fashion, the doctor went into the Bible woman's room to change her dress hurriedly, for she had yet to go outside the city, and the gates closed early on acocunt of the unsettled condition of the country. As she dressed, she received a message that Mrs. Yu, one of the day school teachers, wished to see her on business.

"Oh, dear!" said the doctor, "I hope she hasn't brought anyone to be vaccinated. Please tell her to come in here, to save time."

Mrs. Yu, who was tall and gawky, came into the room, and at once plunged into business. "Doctor, can you take an in-patient? I have a sister-in-law who would like to come. She has an inflamed eye."

From her description the doctor gathered that the trouble was chronig and not especially serious, so she asked casually, "Is your sister-in-law's home in the country?"

"No, she lives in town."

"Then why can she not come every day, as a dispensary patient?"

"She prefers to become an in-patient, for she hopes to get well faster that way."

"In that case, of course she may come."

"She has several children, and would like to bring them, too, to be vaccinated."

Instantly the doctor was suspicious, for hospital work was new in Nanchang, and she often had trouble in persuading people to come in: and here was an entire family, eager to come. So she said, "Has she had smallpox or measles in the famil ily?"

"No," was the ready answer.

"Well, she must be fleeing from smallpox or measles," said the doctor with conviction. She knew the habit her people had of fleeing in terror from a disease, in the hope of staying the scourge, a plan that works admirably in the case of cholera or the plague.

"No," came the emphatic answer again. "My sister-in-law has been used to the hospital in Kiukiang, so she desires to come here to have the children vaccinated and taken care of in the best way possible."

It sounded plausible, and Mrs. Yu was a Christian, so the doctor half believed, but added, "Our vaccine will not be here for a few days."

"That will not matter; they can wait here. They are here now."

At this the doctor fairly gasped, but ordered a nurse to go and make up six beds, for a nurse was to be included in the party. When the door closed upon Mrs. Yu, the doctor turned to the Bible woman, Mrs. Yen, and said, "Don't you think that her story is rather queer?"

Mrs. Yen nodded and said sagely, "Either she is fleeing from smallpox or she is in trouble over a lawsuit and people are after her."

"Well, let's hope that everything is all right," said the doctor; and telling the assistant to look after the newcomers she went off, feeling a bit depressed.

..ow the assistant, Miss Hsia, had been associated with the medical work in Nanchang since its beginning, and knew every quirk and turn of its expansion. She knew exactly how big a deficit there was in the exchequer. She knew, also, that the last cases of scarlet fever and diphtheria occurring in the hospital had been a great expense, for without an isolation ward it was no small problem to prevent the spread of infection. That the patients had recovered and involved no one else was a source of joy to the doctor, but the weeks of anxiety and care shared by all were not soon to be forgotten.

Then the rooms rented outside, the rooms fumigated inside, the extra "amahs" hired, the bucketsful of disinfectant required, and the injections of antitoxin for nurses as well as patients, had made the bills run up. The doctor had sighed, "Oh, if they could have granted us an isolation ward! It seems as if I have more than I can bear, for I am risking all the patients who come here."

Through six long, dreary weeks the nurses and "amahs" had sat up night and day with little Mary, who had diphtheria. Who can imagine the weary vigils at the gatehouse, where the child had to be kept during the coldest days of the winter? The damp, cold earth floor and the freezing atmosphere had worked havoc with the faithful watchers, so that one had fainted and another had taken a bad cold and must needs be invalided herself. Knowing all this, the assistant did not favor having a family fall sick with smallpox in the hospital.

Like a wary campaigner she approached the enemy in the rear, and when the mother had gone home to get some clothes and the nurse was feeding the baby, she called the older boys and began to question them gently.

"Have you had the heavenly joy (smallpox) in your family?"

"Yes," the oldest boy answered unhesitatingly.

"Did anyone die from it?"

"Yes, one of my brothers died from it on New Year's Eve, and another is dying now."

The mystery was solved. No wonder they had come to the hospital in a hurry.

The assistant took counsel with the doctor's sister, who was visiting her, and they decided to send the children home immediately. The doctor was notoriously soft-hearted and she might be induced, against her better judgment, to let the children stay, so it would be well to let them go before she returned.

When the nurse was told that she must take the children home because there was no isolation ward and they could not risk having them ill with smallpox in the hospital, the woman was frightened and insisted vehemently that the children did not know what they were saying. But as the oldest boy was over twelve years old, there could be little doubt that he spoke the truth, and the nurse had to turn sadly homeward.

Then the assistant and the doctor's sister waited on the stone step for the children's mother. When she came, and they told her that they knew the truth, she stood stunned for a time and did not try to deny anything; for did not her voice, hoarse from weeping, betray her? Then she turned like a tigress and demanded to know who had sent her children home in the doctor's absence. When told that it was the doctor's sister, and she had a right to do it, the woman

OBITUARY.

WELCH.—The funeral services of Mr. J. J. Welch were held in North Main Street Methodist Protestant Church, in High Point, on Tuesday, Oct. 20th, at 2 p. m. The pastor was assisted in the service by Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, of the M. E. Church, South, and by Revs. C. L. Whitaker, W. R. Lowdermilk, R. M. Andrews, and L. W. Gerringer. Revs. D. R. Williams and I. I. York were also present. A splendid paper from the pen of Rev. F. T. Tagg, D. D., was read at the service. A large audience of sympathizing friends attested the high esteem in which Bro. Welch was held. The floral offering was one of the largest and most beautiful we have ever seen.

The following is the paper read by the pastor:

MR. J. J. WELCH.

We are here in this church room that Bro. J. J. Welch loved so dearly to pay this tribute of respect and love to his memory. It is so fitting that this service be held here; for there is perhaps no spot on earth that he loved more dearly than this, unless it be his own home. Bro. Welch was a son of William and Elizabeth Welch, was born January 25, 1840, died Oct. 18, 1914, aged 74 years, 8 months and 13 days. He was married to Miss Elizabeth T. Pickett, daughter of Samuel J. and Asemith Pickett. To this union one child was born, Miss Florence, who became Mrs. J. W. Harris. His wife together with their daughter and her husband and their two children survive to mourn their loss. There is also a laarge family connection who feel sorely bereft. And also a great company of friends who feel very deeply their loss. In fact, all of us are just such friends; for, I think, "Uncle Jap" had not an enemy anywhere. We all loved him.

Bro. Welch was born and reared in Guilford county, and was educated at Oak Ridge Institute, and at Kernersville. It was while in school at the latter place that his country called for his services, and he volunteered to serve the cause of the South. He has never been one to parade that fact, but he served his country nobly and well in the Civil War, and then, following the example of Robert E. Lee, he has been greater in peace than in war.

He was a man full of kind deeds and good works which he did, but he never spoke of them and did not want others to praise his works in his presence. He was indeed a great (nd good) man, but he didn't want anything said about it. He came the most nearly practicing literally the precept given by the Savior when He said, "Let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth", of any one I have ever known.

If I were taking a text, and had time to develop it with reference to the life of our fallen brother, I would direct your attention to Psalm 37:37, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace." That verse is taken out of a psalm which draws a vivid contrast between the godly man and the ungodly man. The contrast here is this. The Psalmist said, "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree. Yet he passed away, and lo! he was not; yea, I sought him, but he could not be found. Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace." Bro. Welch wouldn't want me to say of him today that he was a perfect man; for he realized his imperfections so much more than any one else did. Some of you knew him earlier in life than I did, and consequently knew him when he was not so nearly perfect. But he came as near growing up into perfection as mortals ever do. I have known him intimately and loved him for six years, and if he had faults I never saw them. I have never seen him angry. I never heard him speak harshly to any one. I never heard him speak uncharitably or unchristianly about anybody. And he would have disdained to take advantage of his fellowman even in the smallest thing. He loved his home, he loved his church, he loved his town and his country. And he was ever mindful of the welfare and happiness of those about him, even from the child to the man of his own age on the streets; and from the servant in his home to his partner in the financial world. And Jesus said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one toward another." Bro. Welch abounded in the grace of human kindness. The Word says, Prov. 16: 31-32, "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness. He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." In our home we often spoke of the beauty of his character, and his gray locks were certainly a crown of glory; for he walked in the way of righteousness. He certainly ruled his own spirit, and so was greater than he that taketh a city.

Bro. Welch was a quiet, unassuming Christian gentleman, who had the respect and the esteem and the love of all who knew him.

He was an ideal husband and father, always solicitous and full of love for those whom God had given him. He did his best to anticipate their desires, and to grant them even before they were asked.

He was a most honored and valued citizen and for more than 30 years has been one of the leading spirits in the development of this splendid city, with its great business concerns. He was successful as a financier, and others recognized his ability and wisdom, hence his counsel was sought by his fellowmen. And that he was recognized as a wise counselor is shown by the positions of trust he held in the business concerns of High Point.

Bro. Welch was a member of this church, a member of the board of trustees. He loved his church dearly, and when well enough was always in his place, and no one listened to the truth more responsively than did he. No man was more faithful to the services and to the calls of this church than was he. Nowhere will he be missed more than here, except possibly in his home. He was my friend and brother, indeed, he seemed to me like a father. I could always go to him for advice, knowing that I'd get the very best counsel. I shall miss him. We shall all miss him, every way we turn we shall miss him.

To the Children's Home, near town, Bro. Welch was the largest contributor. And to that Home he not only contributed of his means, but his very heart and life went out in anxiety for its success. He and his good wife are the ones who made it possible for us to have that beautiful spot where that magnificent Home now stands, and will stand for the years to come to do splendid work in the name of their Savior. His home, his family, this church, and this community have all sustained a great loss. But "we sorrow not as those who have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him." "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." "Let me live the life of the righteous and let my last end be like his."

High Point, N. C., Oct. 21, 1914.

WINN'S ALARM CLOCK.

Winn Gardner was going to visit his grandmother. Winn was anticipating the visit with a great deal of pleasure. Grandmother Gardner lived on a farm, and kept all sorts of interesting animals, from a cat to a peacock.

The cat did not interest Winn very much from the fact that they had one at home. But the peacock! Winn had done nothing but talk about it for a week. He had read about peacocks and seen pictures of them in books; but to see a live one spread its tail and strut about had been beyond the little boy's wildest expectations.

Winn was to make the journey, a distance of some 20 miles, alone. This was another important event in his life. He was also for the first time entrusted with the responsibility of packing his own suitcase.

"Things that we begin to do early in life are never so hard to do when we grow older," his mother assured him, as she stood watching and directing the eventful operation. "I would put your underwear at the bottom, and your suit and outing-shirts on top; they will not get mussed," she advised. Then his mother was suddenly called away.

"I am sure that you can finish your packing without my assistance, you have begun so nicely," she encouraged. Then, remembering that Winn had rather a bad habit of depending on an alarm clock to awaken him mornings, she called back: "Tuck your little clock in the middle, with soft things around it."

"Yes'm," Winn answered.

Just then, however, he thought of his handkerchiefs; and while he was getting these and stowing them away, the alarm clock slipped his mind.

Winn's father accompanied him to the train and carried his suitcase. As he handed it to Winn after he had selected a seat on the shady side of the car, he said: "I hope you haven't forgotten anything, son. I hear you did your own packing."

"No, papa, I am sure that I haven't forgotten a thing," Winn responded, with some pride.

"Well, good by. Be a good boy, and above all things, don't be a 'hug-the-bed' and oversleep. Your grandmother is an early riser, you know," his father said as he jumped off the train.

How glad Winn was that the little alarm clock was ticking in his suitcase, although he did not mention the fact of its being there to his father, for he was rather ashamed that he had to depend upon it.

The moving panorama outside the car window was so interesting that Winn could hardly realize the twenty-mile ride was ended when the conductor approached him and said: "Well, my little man, I reckon I'll have to drop you out here."

Grandfather Gardner was there to meet him. As Winn climbed into the wagon he thought of his alarm clock, and cautioned his grandfather about handling his suitcase.

"I don't reckon you'll need an alarm clock up at the farm, sonny. We've got one of the cutest ones there you ever saw," Grandfather Gardner replied, with a twinkle in his eye.

"Well, but I have to keep this in my own room, because—because I—sometimes oversleep, and mother says that grandmother is an early riser," Winn confessed in a rather shamefaced way.

"Ha! ha! ha! But this little alarm clock of ours visits every room, every morning. It's as regular as the sun," laughed grandfather.

Winn's eyes opened wide, as he stammered: "I—I—don't think I quite understand."

"Well you'll hear from it tomorrow morning, and then you'll understand," his grandfather promised.

Of course the first thing that Winn wanted to do was to go over the farm, and, as it happened, the first creature that he met was the wonderful peacock, with its tail spread and all the beautiful feathers catching gleams of sunlight. Following close behind the peacock was a black and white cat. But while the peacock strutted by Winn in a very lordly manner, without so much as a glance at him, the cat was inclined to be more friendly, and hunched around his feet, and purred a very cordial greeting.

"You'll like Alexander when you get acquainted with him," Winn's grandfather assured him. And Alexander mewed softly as if to emphasize the statement.

Winn went to bed early, for he was very tired. As he unpacked his suitcase he discovered that he had, after all forgotten his alarm clock. Then he suddenly recollected that his grandfather had spoken about some kind of an alarm clock on the farm, and he began to wonder what sort of a clock it could be that could wander about the house. He made up his mind that his own might not be needed as he tumbled into bed and was soon fast asleep.

It was neither the birds nor an alarm clock, however, that aroused Winn from his refreshing sleep. When he opened his eyes it was to look into the face of his sociable little friend Alexander, who was gently biting his chin.

"Why, Alexander! I wonder if you can be the alarm clock that grandfather told me about last night. Do you visit every room and wake people up by biting their chins?" Winn exclaimed, putting his arms affectionately around the loving little cat.

"Meow!" Alexander answered. And Winn was sure it meant yes.—Helen M. Richardson in Zion's Herald.

Are you a disciple of the Lord Jesus? If so, He says to you, "I am with you alway." That overflows all the regrets of the past and all the possibilities of the future, and most certainly includes the present. Therefore, at this very moment, as surely as your eyes rest on this page, so surely is the Lord Jesus with you. "I am" is neither "I was," nor "I will be." It is always abreast of our lives, always encompassing us with salvation. It is a splendid, perpetual now.

turned and went away without another word.

What non-Christian could blame her for her lies? Shall not a mother fight for her young? She was but obeying her primal instincts in this effort on their behalf.

When the doctor returned, she found the two sitting on the steps, waiting for her. A panic had seized them, and they did not know whether they had done right or wrong. When they told her, the doctor simply sighed and said, "I suppose it was best for them to go home." But her heart ached at the thought that she had been found lacking when the woman turned to her for help. To think that in this city of a million there was not a single isolation ward! She must pray and have more faith, and then surely the Lord would supply the need.—Woman's Missionary Friend.

HOW A MOTHER FOUND HER LONG-LOST SON.

In the October Woman's Home Companion a minister tells a remarkable story entitled "The Shadow on the Screen." It is the second of a series of articles telling of his pastoral experiences with women. In this story the minister tells of a woman in his congregation whose son ran away from home and was gone for six years. In the meantime the woman's husband had died and she had moved to an eastern city. One night in the church a magic lantern lecture was being given and between two slides a man rose in front of the lantern in the gallery so that his head intercepted the light and his silhouette was thrown sharply on the gleaming circle in the middle of the screen. What happened is described as follows:

"The shadow was there only an instant; the man dropped back in his seat and the operator flashed on the screen the baptism picture. But in that moment the congregation was startled by a piercing cry from under the gallery.

"'My son, my boy, oh, Sammy, my boy,' cried the voice in agonizing appeal.

"I recognized the voice. 'Turn on the lights,' I said firmly.

"An usher in the rear snapped on one of the electric lights, and looking in that direction I saw the Widow Martin rushing for the gallery door.

"'Sammy,' she called, 'your mother is coming for you, Sammy.' She seemed to have cleared the stairway in a single bound, for before I quite realized what had happened she was in the gallery and, following the light of the stereopticon down to the front row of seats, threw her arm about the neck of the tall young man whose shadow had appeared upon the screen.

"While the congregation was composing itself for the benediction I sent an usher to bring Mrs. Martin and her boy to my study and there I found them, smiling through their tears.

"'He has come back,' cried the mother, holding the arm of the big fine-featured lad. 'Oh, Doctor, at evening time there was light!'

"He told her that night about his wanderings and how his letters had not reached her, and how he had gone back to Haydensburg and from there had traced her to the city. All day he had tramped about through the unfamiliar city streets, and drawn by the lights and music had at length wandered into the church."

PUT IN HUMAN INTEREST.

An old negro preacher ays The Atlanta Constitution, gave as his text: "De tree is known by its fruit, an' it's des impossible to shake de possum down."

After the benediction an old brother said to him:

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

FOURTH QUARTERLY REPORT, GRANVILLE CT.

WITH SYNOPSIS OF THE WORK OF THE PAST FOUR YEARS.

Dear Brethren:—This brings us to the close of another Conference year. The Lord has been good to us this year in many ways for which we should be thankful. This has been the best year, taking all the work into consideration since I have been your pastor. We have made substantial gains along all lines. Our revivals have been of unusual power and our work has taken on new life in many ways. Some members have been taken into the church this year that promise to be of great help to the charge in a spiritual way as well as financial. Our Sunday schools are doing the best work done, according to my understanding of it, at all the places where we have a school and we have them at all the churches except Antioch, and I think with the increased activity we can begin a school there next year. This is as it should be, for if we ever develop leaders to take the place of those who are doing the real work in the church we must give more attention to our Sunday school work. It takes more religion to follow than it does to lead. That is the reason that a great many are not in the Sunday school work I am sure. That is why many people criticise so severely the leaders including the pastor; for if they are not asked about everything that is done they are ready to say, "Well, it's not my job and therefore I will let the ones that have undertaken it do it and if they fail it is not my lookout." Some members talk about supporting the church and the meetings in the summer when they mean nothing more than what they pay and a ham of meat. While that is a part of it, the only thing that is going to keep the church alive is a spirit of Christianity, that is, forgiveness as Jesus counted it and consecration to his ideals instead of our own. Hard words and criticisms should be avoided by the officials as well as by the preacher. If the pastor condemns, we say he is personal; we can say what we please as we think about each other, and that is our privilege. Ignorance or an un-Christian spirit is the cause of all this. We can take whichever is the cause in our lives if we are guilty. When a business matter came up in the early Christian church the disciples said, "Look ye out seven men filled with the Holy Ghost to attend to these matters." Now my exhortation to you brethren is this: Let every man of you that accepts an office for next year accept it because you want to glorify God. Let the church give her places to men that are worthy and not simply to keep some one in a good humor. There are too many complimentary offices in the church to-day I am satisfied. You want a pastor that has at least sometime in his life been accused of having religion. The Bible makes the same demand of the leaders and membership. We need men of every church that go to the quarterly conferences to do good and not just go at some particular time to logroll a measure that suits their own particular whims. Whoever may be your pastor next year I exhort you to do your best to make it a year that shall lift you up in the divine life, as well as others, and by giving your support because he is God's servant, and not simply because he pleases your personal fancy, and in so doing you will prove yourself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

As to the work for this quarter, I beg to submit the following report: Sermons, 25; visits, 74; funerals, 1. Total sermons for year, 80; total number of visits for year, 367; total number of funerals for year, 20. Sermons for the four years, 298. Visits for the four years, 1,331. Funerals for the four years, 55.

There has been an increase for the four years in the number of church papers taken on the charge from 25 to 75, making a gain of 50 which I think in a large measure accounts for the increased activity in church work. One who reads his church paper will be interested in the church to that degree that his loyalty will not be changed by every passing breeze. I think that the testimony of every thinking person is that the church member who reads his church paper is as a rule a faithful one. How can you be interested in that of which you do not know? If one hears only the calls of his own church, his local church, he does not develop in liberality because his interests are local, and when our interests are local only they are as a rule selfish.

In the past four years there have been many material improvements made at the parsonage. A good convenient barn has been built, a substantial lot fence, pasture fence remodeled, a garden fence bought from my predecessor, screens put to all the doors and windows, the yard fenced in, three nice closets built within for canned fruit, bedding, and clothing. The cook room has had shelves put into it, also the pantry. A sink has been put into the cook room, a pump put into the porch which is a great convenience; two rooms nicely papered; the building partly furnished with heavy furniture, such as bedsteads, stoves, dressers, safe, chairs &c., all at a cost of $463.55, of which your present pastor paid $218.95. This is quite an improvement when you consider that there was not even a shelf in the pantry four years ago. There are other improvements that could be made that would make your parsonage a more attractive and convenient place to live.

Rehoboth church has been remodeled at a cost of something over $600, a new individual communion set, mahogany collection plates, a number of new song books.

Antioch has a new individual communion set and new hymnals. Mt. Carmel has new song books and has paid off an old debt that a few of the brethren had been carrying for some time, the amount being over $250. Union Chapel has put in a new organ and new song books. Besides this you have furnished a room at the Children's Home known as The Granville Circuit Room of which you should be proud. You have big stock in the building and now you are taking stock in something that will live after all these material things have perished. This charge is contributing about enough to support four children if the present plans are kept going and this, dear brethren, is what will count; for under the present management we have a man that is looking well to the spiritual as well as to the physical and mental. Remember this institution when you make your will and possibly you will leave something that will be doing good after you are in eternity.

I have tried to help out of the salary that you have paid me, in all these improvements, and for the incidental calls outside the parsonage improvements and what I have contributed at Conference and in other places we at home have given you back $85.36, which added to the amount spent in parsonage improvement is $26 over a tenth of the salary received in the four years that I have served you provided I receive the full amount promised for this year. I am not giving you these figures in any spirit of boastfulness nor of complaint; for it is one of the joys of my life to give to good purposes, and I am sure if we would all give more we would prosper more in every way. The whole amount raised on the charge for the four years counting this year an average with all collections in, will be $7,152.50; of this amount, $2,650 has been paid in pastor's salary or an average of $662.25 per year. If any of you can live on that amount and pay out the same in proportion for good purposes I want to extend to yo ua hand of sympathy and of good will, for I know that you have done some close figuring to do so. If you can do on less than that I would like to know how it is done. I need the advice you can give.

We have had on this charge during this time 286 conversions and 121 accessions, or 52 over one-fourth of the present memberhsip. I am so glad to report this, as some one might think that the financial side was the only thing we had been looking after. You have many noble characters on your work. Some of the very salt of the earth. You have folk here who have joined the church and the Lord and whoever their pastor is they remember to whom they owe their allegiance and work right on, it matters not to them what the enemy may do to retard the progress of the church. You have also as bright young people as are to be found anywhere and I am expecting that many of them will in the future bring to you great joy because of your fidelity in giving to them examples worthy of emulation. Men of the church, your children are watching you and the influence of your acts will effect them in many ways that you think not at present. Do not let them suffer because of your lack of being true to the spirit of Jesus.

There is one other matter that you might be interested in that I might speak of, and that is the help that you have given through your pastor to people of other charges, for you have helped me to do good in other places as you have prayed and spoken kindly to me of my work in other fields in the last four years. I have assisted in 26 meetings and have had in this special work 328 conversions. So your prayers and kind words have enabled me to be of some service at other places for which I thank God. Some charges object to their preacher being gone at any time, but to my mind this gives you an interest in other fields that you will not otherwise have. And the good way for any field to get their pastor so no one else will want him is to object to his ever going away.

I want to say this, that in all my rounds in North Carolina for the past two years I have found no charge that will excel this one in singing and attentive listeners. Of course we have a few who sleep a little occasionally during service, but the pastor never complains at that, for these never criticise the preaching as I have ever heard.

I appreciate to the fullest extent what each one has done to make my stay here pleasant and profitable in a spiritual way, as you know by experience at the present price of things that it could not be in a material way at the amount I have gotten for my labor; but I am looking to a better time when the rewards for faithful labor will be given out and I am at least hoping to have some sheaves to put down at the Master's feet. If I have said anything at any time that may have seemed harsh it was done in a spirit of love and with a desire to be helpful, though my intentions may have been misjudged. I have tried to be faithful and though I have made mistakes and some of the things that I have done have been misjudged I am glad that I have a clear conscience that I have tried to treat every one aright. I have not done all that I wished to see done, but I have spent no time in idleness and have gone at times beyond my strength for the good of my physical condition, to keep the work going.

I trust that next year may be one of great material and spiritual prosperity to each one of you and may you live long to do good and not evil. I know of no better way to close this report than in the words of the apostle when he said: "And now, brethren, I commend you to God and to the word of his grace which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." Sincerely your pastor,

N. G. Bethea.

OUR ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

NOTES OF PROCEEDINGS.

After the opening with appropriate devotional service, on Wednesday morning, President Cecil read his annual report, and the officers were elected. Rev. C. A. Cecil was elected president on the first ballot and Rev. N. G. Bethea was elected secretary. Rev. T. M. Johnson was elected as the ministerial member of the stationing committee and Bro. O. W. Hanner as the lay member. Pres. Cecil was made the stationing committee for Bro. Johnson and for the charge represented by Bro. Hanner.

In the evening an address of welcome was made by Judge Cooke, representing the mayor of Asheville. Rev. G. W. Holmes responded happily in behalf of the Conference. A meeting of the Conference Brotherhood followed, Rev. J. H. Moton presiding. The secretary, Rev. J. A. Burgess, made report for the year. A resolution introduced by Rev. S. W. Taylor was adopted, providing for sick benefits, each ministerial member to pay dues of ten cents a week during the illness of a brother for ten weeks or less.

Each morning session was opened with devotional exercises, better attended and more earnestly engaged in than usual, we thought.

The following new candidates for our ministry were reported: R. A. Swaringen, W. B. Surratt, D. T. Surratt, T. E. Martin, J. W. Allred.

The first day of conference forty-six ministers and thirty-four laymen responded to their names at roll call. More came in later.

The following visiting brethren were in attendance part of the time, making interesting and inspiring addresses in regard to various general interests of the church: Rev. F. C. Klein, secretary and treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions, Rev. C. H. Beck, secretary and treasurer of the Board of Home Missions; Rev. H. L. Elderdice, president of Westminster Theological Seminary; Rev. C. E. Wilbur, editor of our Sunday school literature, and member of the World's S. S. Association's Commission Five to visit the Orient in the interest of Sunday school work. Dr. Wilbur gave a lecture illustrated with stereopticon views on our mission work in Japan and China.

It was ordered that our Conference Journals from 1902 to the present be bound in volumes, together with the Journals of the General Conference, and that hereafter typewritten copies of the Journal be prepared with a view to insertion in a loose-leaf binder.

The Superannuate Fund Society had a meeting of extraordinary interest on Thursday at 11 a. m., Rev. T. M. Johnson presiding. Addresses were made by Rev. W. F. Kennett, J. H. Moton, and A. G. Dixon. Rev. F. C. Klein told how the Maryland Conference addedd $10,000 to their fund of $100,000 for Superannuated Ministers by a whirlwind canvass. Rev. T. M. Johnson proposed that those willing to pledge themselves to help raise for the superannuated ministers an amount exceeding four per cent. of the pastor's salary to make it manifest. Bro. L. L. Wrenn, of Siler City, made a very earnest speech in favor of making the assessment for superannuated ministers ten per cent. of the pastor's salary. He declared his belief that the pastors had not done their full part in making known conditions, and that laymen would do better if they knew the facts. A motion to make the assessment for superannuated ministers five per cent. of the pastor' salary prevailed.

On Friday morning a letter was read from Rev. W. F. Ashburn in Baltimore stating that his son had been operated on, but that the operation was only partially successful. The Conference directed that a letter of sympathy and appreciation be sent to Bro. Ashburn.

It was directed that the Conference Sermon by Rev. A. G. Dixon be published in the Herald.

In considering the report of the Committee on Sunday Schools, Rev. S. W. Taylor raised the question as to who should appoint Sunday school teachers. It was stated that there is a tendency to allow children to select their own teachers. Several spoke on this question, and it seemed to be the general opinion that teachers should be appointed by the superintendent after conferring with the pastor.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard urged the importance of pastors organizing teacher training classes and encouraging the training of Sunday school teachers.

Bro. Shaw, of High Point, asked about selecting teachers for organized classes. Rev. S. W. Taylor replied that it is all right for adult classes to select their own teachers, but that they should not seek to divorce themselves from the Sunday school. The election of teacher should be subject to the approval of the superintendent and pastor.

Rev. J. D. Williams said he believed that Sunday school superintendents should be examined as to doctrine, and that the creeds of teachers should be known; that he knew of an infidel teaching a class of young ladies in Sunday-school.

President Cecil called attention to the legal mode of electing Sunday school superintendent. Rev. A. L. Hunter said that he does not let babies vote in electing superintendent, that he had had experience with the plan and found it impracticable. The president remarked that a Sunday-school superintendent not legally elected does not become a member of the quarterly conference.

Rev. L. W. Gerringer asked whether it is allowable to elect a man of another denomination for Sunday school superintendent when the church has no suitable man. Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk thought that might be admissible in certain cases.

CONSECRATION.

I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service, Romans 12:1. This exhortation is introduced in a pleading, effective manner. "I beseech (entreat) you, brethren." Though Paul was the great Apostle, he calls these least Christians "brethren;" addresses in terms of entreaty and affection, these Roman converts whom he had never seen.

This is the gospel way: the way that prompts the missionary to enter into the lives of his Oriental neighbors; to greet the brown skins of India as comrades; to grasp the hand of the black man of Africa as the hand of a brother.

I shall never forget, on reaching Lumbwa, the characteristic smile and welcoming handshake of my big chief-pupil Arap Bargochut. From that day the passion of my heart for the souls of these black heathen has burned within me, the desire of my life answered forever in Africa.

To "present your bodies a living sacrifice," alluding to the sacrifices under the law, which were presented before God at the altar. "Your bodies"—your whole selves. The offering was sacrificed by the priest, but presented by the one who offered, who transferred to God his whole right, title and interest by laying his hand on the head of the beast for offering.

The presenting of our bodies to God implies the avoidance of sins that are committed with or against the body.

"Yield the members of our bodies as instruments of righteousness." To keep in remembrance that these bodies of ours are the temples of the Holy Ghost.

Antiquity in Africa spells sanctity: precedent, not principle, their black law is tersely expressed in Dan Crawford's translated Bantu song:

"A well worn trail is a very good thing;
It must lead up to a very great king.
And, so, with customs of days of yore,
We do what millions have done before.'

These black, black hearts in their black bodies, slaves for centuries to sin in its most awful forms of vice and crime, entreated by the word of God, cleansed by the One Great Sacrifice of atonement, wooed by the love of this atoning Christ, refusing to do what "millions have done before" in the "well worn path of precedent"; choosing God's way, accepting God's customs, strive not to yield their bodies longer to lust of self and filthy desires.

"Rags", the Arabs call our black people, but rags make the whitest paper, you know, and "what man can do in the paper line, surely God can surpass in souls."

An old man came to us with the question, "What shall I do with my wife who keeps running away from me? If I were not a Christian I would beat her."

Another brought his son to us to punish for laziness and disobedience, saying, "If I were as I once was I would kill him; as a Christian I dare not touch him for fear of committing this sin."

Mangesoi failed to measure up to the heathen standard of a son-in-law, depriving himself of the family privileges—because, as a Christian, he could not invite his relatives and friends to a bridegroom's customary beer-drinking.

This presenting of the body to God implies not only that our bodies must not be made the instruments of sin and uncleanness, but be put to holy uses, as the vessels of the tabernacle were holy—being devoted to God's service. We glorify Him in the use of the body as a servant of the soul, set apart for God.

Because of her intense desire to read God's word, a little child persisted in coming to school, tho' each day she was beaten severely and cruelly bitten by her mad heathen father She wore the usual heavy brass bracelets and her arms were so swollen and horribly lacerated it took hours to remove the brass circles and still she begged to be allowed to come.

Another young girl is suffering daily persecution, hiding on the mission grounds to avoid being forced into their vile marriage preliminaries.

A body sincerely devoted to God is a living sacrifice. Herein lies the great paradox. Christ says—"If any man wishes to go where I go, he must renounce self." Paul spells s-e-l-f backward with an added letter h—f-l-e-s-h, deny the flesh—die to self daily. Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone, but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."

I must tell of the fruit being borne by this dying to self in the lives of some of my pupils.

By the bravery and truthfulness of these men, refusing big money bribes, accepting daily persecution and at the risk of life and property, the witch doctor, god of our people, and his brother allies are deported and Arap Bargochut is government appointed chief of the whole Lumbwa tribe. Christianity in lieu of witchcraft, a follower of Christ the head man and leader of fifty thousand people.

Black Diamond, we call him. Black as coal—diamonds are made of soot. The miracle of how we can never know, but we do know that God came into this sin-charred life and by His miracle touch, there glows in the midst of our black Lumbwa province this transformed life of childlike obedient trust and by its faithful light, in touch with God, other diamonds flash out of this "quondam soot."

I beseech you by the mercies of God. An argument most sweetly cogent. Too many times we take our temporal blessings as a matter of fact. His daily gifts, "mercies new every morning." "There's a wideness in God's mercy like the wideness of the sea." The greatest mercy of all, is that Christ made Himself an offering for sin, gave Himself for us and gives Himself to us. And in His great mercy we have His Written Word. And isn't it wonderful the adaptability of the Word to all nations and tribes under the sun, lending itself to such marvelously free translations in all the many tongues and dialects.

Do you remember these words in the "Virginian"? "Middlin' doctors are pore and middlin' lawyers are pore, but keep me from the middlin' man of God."

What shall we render unto God for all these His mercies? Are we willing to pay the price, to be an out and out Christian, to deny the flesh, to die to self daily? God would rather have an open enemy than a "middlin' friend," one He can never depend upon. Can He depend upon me? Can He depend upon you?

"There are no more scathing words of denunciation in the Scriptures than those directed against the inhabitants of Meroz. Why? What had they done? They had a chance to help God against His enemies and they just sat still. They hindered because they did not help.

What a lot of Meroz people there are to-day! While vast continents are wrapped in spiritual darkness and millions have never heard the Name that is above every name, these Merozites in the church do nothing. Never for a moment have they entered into sympathy with Jesus over the lost.

It is as certain as anything can be that no man can present his body without getting God's way of looking at this world of sinning, suffering men. No man can be a "living sacrifice" without something of Christ's passion for souls. Moffatt, that great missionary king amongst men, before leaving for Africa said, "Oh, that I had a thousand lives and a thousand bodies, all of them should be devoted to no other employment but to preach Christ to these degraded, despised, yet beloved mortals."

In the Middle Ages belief in the power of a talisman was widespread. Sir Walter Scott wrote a book about one which had the supposed efficacy to heal and to extract poisons. Present bodies "acceptable unto God." "The son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister." These words, the epitome of Christ's life, should be the talisman of all Christians, engraven forever on the fleshly tablets of the heart. To seek to serve others is to save self. Mastering by ministering.

A widowed mother had two sons—her only means of support. One was called to go as a missionary. The other felt that he should study medicine, and by this means support both his mother and brother. Just as he was prepared to take up his life work of support God took him. Returning from the funeral of this son, the brother said softly to his mother, "Of course now, mother, I give up all hopes of going out as a missionary. I feel my place is with you." A look of saddened wonder stole over the face of the mother and she replied, "My heart is heavy with this loss, do you wish to add to its burden? No, my son. I could not, dare not hinder the work and call of God." The young man accepting this living sacrifice, telling that lonely and beloved mother good-bye, renounced self and went where Christ would go.

He did a mighty work for God, but he never saw that mother again. "Ministry, service, tears, to serve the Master."

"Measure thy life by loss instead of gain. Not by the wine drunk but by the wine poured forth. For love's strength standeth in love's sacrifice. And who so suffers most hath most to gain." Anna T. Jones.

Choosing the Unpleasant Place.—There is a domestic servant, one of the best Christians I ever knew, who for ten years has been doing service in a family of avowed atheists. It is true they never interfere with her belief, and they respect her goodnss; but the whole atmosphere i s uncongenial, and she sees and hears a hundred things which trouble and wound her finest feelings. She might have gone to fifty happier and better paid places, and I have often asked: "Why do you not make a change?" She invariably answers: "Christ has put me here to bear witness for him, and if I leave there will be no one left to keep the light burning."—Sunday School Chronicle.

The Ladies' Aid of Burlington have remembered their boy with winter clothing. Rehoboth church and Sunday school are supporting two children in the Home. $9.07 of the $25 reported from them is Sunday egg money. Try the Sunday egg plan. Every one who has reported says it works fine. Listen! here comes a letter from away over in Texas saying, "Our S. S. has set aside the contribution of the first Sunday in each month for the benefit of the orphans that are in your Home; we feel that we would like to be of service to them although our mite is small, we feel that it will be of some service to them, however small it may be. We are truly glad that we have a Home in the name of the Methodist Protestant Church for the fatherless and motherless little ones." This letter brought $6.40.

Don't let strangers have a greater interest in the Home than our own Sunday schools. 131 Sunday schools in the North Carolina Conference did not contribute to the Home last year. 123 S. S.'s contributed, 29 of which contributed monthly. We are going to have a greater contribution from the S. S.'s this year. The brethren at our Annual Conference gladdened my heart when they promised to do more for the Home in the future. I just have that confidence in our people to believe they are going to keep their promise. I heard good news from some of our sister conferences that will be in some of my later reports.

Thank Offering.—Miss Nannie J. Pratt, Raleigh, $10; Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates, Asheville, $2.50; Mrs. S. T. Kiger, King, 50c; Miss Lena Hammer, Wagram, $5. Total, $18.00. H. A. Garrett.

—Our Conference at Asheville was treated to a regular blizzard on Thursday night. When we went into the church the stars were shining overhead, and when we came out two hours later the ground was covered and the air was filled with snow and the wind was sharp and cutting. But Asheville people said this was extraordinary for that region.

(Begun on page one.)

After the report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance was read, it was decided that there should be a sermon on the subject once a year at each church.

The propriety of holding quarterly conference on Sunday was called in question. Bro. Gerringer stated that he had tried it one time because of the plea that the attendance might be better, but that the result was that the attendance was poorer than usual.

Sunday visiting when it interferes with church and Sunday school attendance was condemned by some of the speakers. Others said the way to treat Sunday visitors is to take them with you to church or Sunday school.

On Friday night, after the excellent address by Rev. C. H. Beck on Home Mission work, a freewill offering was received for the Asheville church, amounting to $305.50. Bro. Bethea brought a smile to every face by some apt stories, and added to the pleasure of giving.

The Blue Ridge and Atlantic Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was sitting in Asheville at the same time with our Conference, and sent fraternal messengers to our Conference and we to their Conference. Ours were Revs. Holmes, Curry, and Lindley. Not satisfied with this, though our representatives made very warm fraternal addresses, Bishop Henderson proposed that the two conferences meet together for an hour. The proposition was accepted, and on Saturday at 2 p. m., their body came to our church and were welcomed in a brief address by one of our number, after which Bishop Henderson made an address of considerable length at the end of which President Cecil called for the singing of "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and the benediction by Bishop Henderson.

The Committee on Church Extension proposed to increase the assessment to $4,000. Bro. J. Norman Wills called attention to the fact that a smaller assessment had not been paid, and questioned the wisdom of increasing to the amount named. The matter was again referred to the committee, and they reported in favor of a more earnest effort to raise the full amount previously laid, $3,000.

President Cecil stated that nine churches were in process of construction the past year.

A number of laymen made brief addresses in favor of bringing up the full assessment for the general interests.

In his address on Saturday Dr. Klein stated that we have 434 young men in our Nagoya College and that 117 were turned away for want of room. In point of numbers, this surpasses any one of our colleges in this country.

Dr. Wilbur referred to the New Guide and asked that the importance of putting it into the hands of our Sunday school scholars be urged upon the attention of Sunday-school superintendents.

The Conference Faculty made an important recommendation, which was adopted, regarding the classification of our ministers in the Journal, including those studying in our colleges with a view to our ministry.

This year the pastors reported in person, reading their reports from forms provided. A similar plan had been tried before, but this was more satisfactory, and we heard no objection to it except that it took so much time. To us it was interesting, and the time taken may be materially lessened by omitting explanations of failures and simply reporting things accomplished.

The Report of the Trustees of the M. P. Publishing House, after giving the usual information, stated that the trustees are proceeding in accordance with the request made a year ago to secure a new charter in view of taking in the college enterprise. They recommended that the number of trustees be increased to fifteen and reported the election of the following additional trustees subject to the approval of the Annual Conference: Dr. W. R. Goley, L. L. Wrenn, J. E. Swain, Revs. S. W. Taylor, G. E. Curry, and J. F. McCulloch. The report elicited some questions, but after a brief discussion it was unanimously adopted.

The new church enterprise in Charlotte received attention. It was decided that President Cecil and another to be appointed should visit Charlotte and advise the Brd. of Church Extension, who should give such aid as conditions will warrant and available funds will permit.

The District Parsonage movement was discussed, and the committee was continued and authorized to buy the lot agreed upon. The Conference showed a disposition to carry the enterprise on to a successful conclusion.

It was hoped that all business would be disposed of before Monday noon, but the Stationing Committee was not quite ready to report. Conference adjourned Monday afternoon. A vote of thanks was tendered the Asheville people for their splendid entertainment and a prayer was offered for God's abundant blessing upon them.

The next Conference is to be held in Grace Church, Greensboro, beginning Wednesday before the fourth Sunday in November, 1915.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Dr. Tagg was missed much.

—President Harper, of Elon College, sent greetings.

—Rev. H. W. Braswell was not present this year, but sent his report.

—Dr. Klein was introduced as "the man with the multigraph smile."

—Bro. Bates will take a well-earned rest for a little time before beginning the new year's work.

—Mrs. J. B. O'Briant and Mrs. Swaringer accompanied their husbands to Conference.

—Bro. Jasper Roberts, of Jupiter, was a visitor at Conference.

—We were sorry to hear that Dr. Gill had been injured in an accident and was confined to bed.

—Mrs. Dr. Wilbur and her daughter were attendants at most of our Conference sessions.

—Rev. L. W. Gerringer was elected press correspondent for next Conference.

—S. B. Stephens who preached one year with us has been preaching in the M. E. Church the past year.

—Rev. O. P. Routh, formerly of our Conference, was seen standing at a station between Asheville and Salisbury.

—One of our brethren in Asheville is said to have entertained ten members of Conference!

—Dr. C. E. Wilbur will remain in Asheville for a few weeks. He will preach in our Asheville church next Sunday.

—Mr. Reiner represented the Methodist Protestant and the Baltimore Book Concern, and sang several solos to the delight of the audience.

—Rev. Lyman E. Davis, president of our General Conference, sent greetings to our Conference and said he hopes to visit our district in a few months.

—Dr. Geo. R. Brown was kept from Conference by a telegram calling him to a funeral in West Virginia. Dr. Elderdice represented his work before the Conference.

—Dr. Elderdice compared the pessimistic Methodist Protestant who appears here and there to a man he met in Mechanicsburg, Ohio, who told him that he gets only two things out of life—his victuals and his clothes, and his victuals don't agree with him and his clothes don't fit him.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett said that Bro. Bates is the only man in all the land that can make an appeal for help every week and make it interesting every time. Bro. Bates promised to continue this feature of our paper.

—Rev. C. E. M. Raper has just returned from the hospital, where he was operated upon for stomach disease. He is still very infirm, and was not able to attend Conference.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett felt constrained to go home before Conference closed on account of the ill health of Mrs. Kennett.

—We were pleased to meet in Asheville a number whose names were very familiar to us because they were on our subscription list, but whose faces we had not seen.

—Rev. H. L. Powell was elected to preach the Conference Sermon; J. F. McCulloch, alternate. Rev. J. A. Burgess was elected to preach the Ordination Sermon; Rev. J. H. Stowe, alternate. This for next Conference.

—Bro. Bates felt constrained to call the attention of some to the fact that the church registers were made for heating purposes and not for cuspidors; and that it is forbidden by law in Asheville to expectorate in public buildings.

—Rev. J. S. Williams reported that he had made 2,070 calls on the sick the past year,—an average of nearly six a day. This does not represent near all his work. He meets trains to receive visitors coming in quest of health, he writes letters for the sick, he does many services that his office imposes upon him.

—Our home during Conference was with Bro. Roy Schreyer in his pleasant new home. We roomed with him at the last Liberty Conference, and found from his daily letters home that there was something in Asheville in which he was greatly interested. We have found out what it was: he was recently married then, and we have no word of censure for his state of mind at that time. His wife was Miss Vinetta McIntyre, a delegate to our Annual Conference at High Point some years ago. They have two bright children, Eva and George, and are a happy family. We could have asked for no better entertainment, and my feeling is shared by four fellow-guests—Rev. J. F. Allred, Rev. G. L. Reynolds, and Bros. Holt and Morgan. Bro. Schreyer is the Sunday school superintendent at our church and Mrs. Schreyer is one of the teachers, besides being music teacher all the week.

—Many of our members visited Grove Park Inn, notable for its style of architecture. It is built of unhewn stones of many kinds and shapes and sizes. It is an immense building and charges extravagantly for its service, but it is full of guests and is to be enlarged. It was built with money made by selling Grove's Chill Tonic and other medicines. It is on a mountain side overlooking parts of Asheville and the surrounding country. But we will stop elsewhere when we visit Asheville.

THE PEACE PALACE.

We do not think of the Czar of Russia as a very peaceful, happy ruler, but it was he who first proposed the International Peace Conference. On the 24th of August, 1898, the representatives of all the foreign nations in St. Petersburg received something that surprised them very much. The Czar proposed that all the civilized nations of the world should meet through representatives in a great Peace Conference to discuss ways by which world peace might be established and the dreadful expense which each nation was put to, to keep prepared for possible wars, reduced.

Some thought this a queer proposal to come from a ruler like the Czar, but it was a splendid one.

The Czar thought it would not be wise to have the conference meet in the capitol of any of the great powers, but proposed that it be held in Holland.

I wish to tell you about the beautiful palace which was built for the home of this Conference. It is in a great garden where once upon a time Wilhelmina, a little girl queen of Holland, doubtless played, since it then belonged to the palace of her grandmother.

Andrew Carnegie gave one million five hundred thousand dollars to build it, and it is as large and beautiful as any king's palace.

The materials used in building the palace are brick and stone, and the steep sloping roofs that look so pretty in the picture, are of blue slate. Behind the palace are a garden and a splendid old grove of trees and in front of it is a wide terrace.

Inside, it is as beautiful as you would think a palace should be. Each nation has furnished some decoration or ornament or part of the building. The magnificent main staircase of onyx was the gift of Mexico. The seven stained glass windows that light this stairway were given by Holland. Great Britain gave four more large stained glass windows that light the great Court Room.

France hung the smaller court room beside it with the famous Gobelin Tapestry. Brazil furnished mahogany for finishing the great court.

Germany gave the two mounted gates for the entrance to the grounds and Belgium, the bronze doors for the front entrance of the building.

Norway's gift was the granite for the arcade and the balustrade around the terrace; Denmark's the fountain in the central court. Sweden furnished the granite for the basement; Greece and Italy the marble for the main corridor. Russia gave a Malachite Vase eleven feet high, to stand in the hall in front of the main entrance.

Switzerland presented the clock in the tower. Japan gave wonderful gold-embroidered tapestries for the administration offices. It is said that these tapestries embroidered all over with birds, flowers and fishes, have no equal in the world.

The gift of the United States is a beautiful group of statuary, representing "Peace through Justice." It is placed on the main landing of the onyx stairway.

Does it not seem beautiful to think of all these nations contributing and working together to make a Palace of Peace?

Just as the boys I told you about last month should have taken their quarrel about the lantern to their father, so all nations might take their quarrels to this beautiful palace and have them settled without the horrors of war and bloodshed.

Ada Blair.

Rev. Bartholomew Liightfoot, Dear Brother:

You surprise me greatly by assuring me that you are in fact a minister. You surprise me more by saying that I reflected on your family and ancestry. That is impossible; because I did not and do not know who you are. I supposed you had assumed the title (Reverend) as well as the name; so I apologize for any reference to your family, past, present, or future; for I know nothing of them in any way. Remember now I do not sneer at you.

However, it does look like a pity that I must not notice "There is no reason for opposition to the union, Bros. S. R. Harris, Peter Vuncannon, and Rev. J. F. Dosier to the ontrary notwithstanding." You must see that I didn't select you "to be pounced upon." You selected me and two others and I leave it to you to say who is aggrieved. You ask: "Am I not entitled to a little respect?" I think you are.

You say in your paragraph 12: "I believe the opposition to the union is based upon prejudice and self-will." Now really I think you are entitled to change your mind about that too.

Now as to the name: I have very carefully read Paris's History and found nothing there to give me light on his history. I have examined Wheeler's History of North Carolina, but the name was not in the index, but I at last found the name without other reference except that he represented his county in the legislature. I report this "without prejudice" because this fact alone indicates neither greatness nor the lack of it. Now I really think you ought to find it in your preacher heart to forgive; because I have done my best to "do you fair;" and have actually found you in the list of the dead, if not among the prophets of the living.

I want to thank you for classing me with Brothers Dosier and Vuncannon because I think them distinguished company. If our church had heeded the things we have said and written and had not placed the facts we stated to the account of prejudice the union question would have been settled long ago as far as it concerns us.

Assuring you again that I highly esteem God's prophets and that I have no desire to harm their feelings or reputations and also assuring you that I did not and could not have any personal feelings in the matter, I am yours very respectfully,

S. R. Harris.

The Morning Watch is essential. You must not face the day till you have faced God, nor look into the face of others till you have looked into His. You cannot expect to be vigorous if the day begins only in your strength, or if you neglect to put on and readjust the spiritual armor. —Robert F. Horton, D. D., in Sunday School Times.

Rev. J. F. Allred and Bro. W. C. Jones, of Franklinsville, called for a little while on their way from Conference.

—The blizzard made us change our minds about sightseeing on Saturday afternoon.

HOW TO STIMULATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The Bible school in comparison with the day school is decidedly handicapped in three points; viz., discipline, obligation to prepare lessons, and regularity of attendance.

The day school has authority to enforce these matters, but the Bible school depends on the cooperation of parents (often lacking) and the interest of the pupil. The matter of attendance alone is a problem. Too many Sunday-school scholars consider they confer a favor on the teachers and school by coming to Sunday school, and we are all familiar with the marked increase in punctuality and attendance just before picnic time or Christmas entertainment.

The problem befor us is how to get the pupils to come as promptly and as regularly as they do to day school.

Let me cite a few means the Sunday school at High Point has found useful. For a number of years we have used the Little's Cross and Crown system of pins. A bronze pin is awarded for attendance on time every Sunday for a quarter.

After a second perfect quarter the bronze (or celluloid) pin is exchanged for a brass one and so on, a better pin being given for each added quarter of perfect attendance. This is a decided stimulus to many both old and young and several have finally gained the glory of the so-called "fifth year bar."

Another device we use is to have on a large blackboard hung up before the closing exercises, the name of each class with its teacher's name in red if on time, or in white if late, the number in class that day and the amount of each class contribution. The class in the younger section of the school which contributes the most per capita as well as the class in the older section, is give nhonorable mention.

Right here a plan we haven't yet tried would be valuable: to make special mention of any class which has every member present on time.

Our latest scheme is to have large framed record cards for each class—about 12x20 inches, to be placed conspicuously in each class room. The teacher marks these in lead but before the next session the secretary fills the space opposite each name with a large red rubber stamp (on time) or a crescent marked 'late,' but if absent space is left. In this way the pupils can easily keep watch of the attendance and each will, we hope, strive to have after his name a long stretch of red blocks. Nothing has been said of the most important and best ways of increasing and maintaining attendance; by earnest and interesting teaching, a real interest in pupils in and out of class, and by a wholesome class spirit. These we all realize are essential but the other devices may be used too.

EUROPE'S WARNING TO AMERICA.

"O Republic of the West, do not follow my example! There are ways which seem right to a nation, but they lead down at last to the chambers of death. Do not believe the creed which we have long accepted. Armaments are not guarantees of peace. They are not insurance. They are not instruments of reason or righteousness. They create first suspicion, then hatred, and at last lead young men by the million to the fields of blood. Do not choose the path which we have followed. Work out your destiny along a different line. Make the new world different from the old.

"Beware of guns. Banish the implements of hate from before your eyes. Take your mind off the machinery of slaughter. Cease to delight in the engines of destruc tion. Trust in reason. Have faith in brotherhood. Believe in love. Build your civilization on the principle of good will. Bind all the nations of the Western Hemisphere into a federation which, by its fidelity to the law of kindness and its devotion to the Prince of Peace, shall become at once the inspiration and hope of the world!"—Rev. C. E. Jefferson, D. D., in The Independent

"THOU CROWNEST THE YEAR WITH THY GOODNESS."

The Year has sped onward, the World has whirled sunward,
Thanksgiving! Thanksgiving again!
Hear the "hills shout for joy," and the "trees clap their hands."
Thanksgiving, Thanksgiving again!

O praise Him, ye people, by hamlet and steeple!
Your bounty fling wide from your hands,
Vie with woods and with dales, with the hills and the vales,
For the need, in all of the lands.

Let the praise of all Nature, the hearts of all people
And the hands of the children of men
Commingle and well, commingle and swell—
Into Pacans of Praise—thro' all of the days,
Thanksgiving, Thanksgiving again!

R. D. W.

WE DO WRONG WHEN WE FRET.

Fret not thyself because of evil doers,
Neither be thou envious of them that work unrighteousness.
For they shall soon be cut down like the grass,
And wither as the green herb.
Trust in the Lord and do good;
So shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.
Delight thyself also in the Lord;
And he will give thee the desires of thy heart.
Commit thy way unto the Lord;
Trust also in him and he will bring it to pass.
And he will make thy righteousness to go forth as the light,
And thy justice as the noonday.
Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him:
Fret not thyself because of him that prospereth in his way,
Because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.
Cease from anger, and forsake wrath:
Fret not thyself, it tendeth only to evil-doing.

—From the Thirty-seventh Psalm.

REPORT OF DISTRICT PARSONAGE COMMITTEE.

Rev. T. E. Davis, Roanoke Circuit,	$11.93
Rev. R. C. Stubbins, Orange Circuit,	7.00
Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, Bal. Reidsville Circuit	1.50
Total	$20.43

T. A. Hunter, Treasurer.

(Begun on page one.)

—Rev. R. A. Swaringen was ordained on Sunday morning after the ordination sermon was preached by Rev. C. H. Whitaker. Revs. G. F. Millaway and J. F. McCulloch assisted in the ordination.

—Rev. A. G. Dixon spoke of the great assistance Bro. Bates had received from his helpmeet in the work at Asheville, but we believe she is too modest to believe that she has done more than any other preacher's wife would have done under like circumstances.

—Rev. J. S. Williams was asked for by the Good Samaritan Mission as their chaplain. Dr. Campbell, of the Presbyterian Church in Asheville, came before our Conference to bear testimony to the good work of Bro. Williams and to ask for his services further.

—Nearly twenty churches were thrown open to our Conference for pulpit supply on Sunday. This gave work to quite a number of our ministers on Sunday, as most of these were open for two services, morning and night.

—The Summer Conference was discussed one day and received many glowing testimonies to its usefulness and great value to our ministers. We trust the next one will be attended by still more.

—Memorial services were held Sunday afternoon in honor of the memory of those who have departed the past year. Papers were read concerning Rev. W. D. Fogleman and J. L. Giles, and many of the brethren spoke briefly and feelingly of these and certain lay brethren who have been taken from us the past year. Particularly mentioned were Dr. J. R. Reitzel, J. J. Welch, and Mrs. McPherson, of High Point, and H. T. Powell and his father and mother, of Henderson.

—Bro. T. A. Hunter, of Greensboro, presided over the meeting on Children's Home night. Supt. Garrett made his report, showing the affairs of the home to be economically managed, but also indicating that a larger work could be done if all our people would engage as some are engaging in the support of the Home. Supt. Garrett thinks that it would add new interest to every one of our Sunday schools to make a monthly offering for the fatherless children in the Home.

—We trust that Bro. Harris's apology will be accepted by Rev. Bartholomew Lightfoot and that their controversy is at end. If the real identity of the user of the assumed name had been known, we believe that no unpleasantness would have arisen. It is proper to used a nom de plume sometimes, but one should avoid all personal reflections more carefully when hiding behind an assumed name.

—The new Asheville church surpassed our expectation, both in size and quality. It is substantially built, it is neat and pretty, and it is large enough to seat from 400 to 500 people. Our people there have made a heroic effort and deserve the help of all well-disposed people everywhere in paying off the debt they were compelled to contract in building their church.

Bro. Bates stated that some who had pledged money for the Asheville church and had not paid it had written explaining that they made the pledges out of regard for Rev. J. S. Williams and Miss Jessie Williams. He thought that both these would like it better if the pledges were paid, as both are still strong friends of the Asheville church enterprise.

—Rev. W. F. Ashburn has moved with his family to Liberty, N. C. He went to Baltimore just before Conference to take his little son for an operation made necessary by an injury received from an automobile some weeks ago. The injury was serious and the outcome of the operation was doubtful. Bro. Ashburn wished to have the best surgical service and chose to incur greater expense and go to Baltimore.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We hope to have your co-operation in getting every member of our church to make a donation to the Children's Home on Thanksgiving of an amount equal to one day's income or one day's wages.

If not convenient to take the offering on Thanksgiving, let it be taken any time between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Respectfully, J. M. Millikan, Chmn. Brd. Trustees.

Alamance Circuit.—Greeting: Having been re-assigned to your work I wish to say that all appointments will be met as announced for December. I trust that all members will be present as new officers are to be elected, Class Books revised. Let us meet and begin the work at the beginning of the Conference year. Select real live men for your stewards and class leaders. Let us work together for the upbuilding of His Kingdom. Fraternally,

J. A. Ledbetter.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—There were only 54 present at Sunday school last Sunday, which is about ten below the average for the entire year. We are very glad indeed to say that we won the banner for attendance this year. Bro. Geo. L. Curry presented the banner to the school last Sunday after which he preached a most excellent and helpful sermon. His text was "What I have written, I have written," found in John 19:22. We were blessed with three preaching services last Sunday on account of the Annual Conference being held in Asheville. Bro. Curry preached in the morning, Bro. Stacy in the afternoon, and Bro. Troxler at night. Each one preached a fine sermon. After Bro. Troxler's sermon he was asked to sing "Oh, where is my boy to-night?" after which the choir sang several special selections. We had with us at each service during the day several members of the Annual Conference. We are assured that we will have Bro. Martin as pastor for the coming year. He has a great work started on this circuit and especially at this church. Every one seemed pleased with Bro. Martin the six months he has been with us and we are glad he is to be with us again for the coming year. Lester Watts.

Weaverville, Nov. 24.

Burlington Briefs.—Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 175, an increase of 41 over the preceding Sunday.

A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the Christmas exercise. The children of our school always enjoy these exercises, and are anxious for the time to come when they can recite and sing about old Santa.

We will observe Thanksgiving Day on Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock. Special sermon will be preached by our pastor and appropriate music will be rendered by the choir.

We are very grateful to the Annual Conference for its action in returning Rev. Geo. L. Curry to the pastorate of the Burlington church for another year. We launch out into the activities and duties of the new conference year with much enthusiasm and renewed energy; with a larger vision of accomplishing greater things for the Master. We start off with two great objects in view; first, to advance and enlarge the spiritual interests of the church in general, and, second, to reduce as much as possible the indebtedness of the church and parsonage buildings.

Wishing the readers of the Herald unbounded success in the work of advancing the cause of Christ,

Nov. 25, 1914. C. B. Way, Rep.

—Act faithfully according to thy degree of light, and what God giveth thee to see; and thou shalt see more clearly. Hearken to the low whispers of His voice within thee, and thou shalt hear more distinctly. Above all, do not stifle any motions of conscience. Meditate daily on the things of Eternity; and, by the grace of God, do something daily which thou wouldst wish to have done when that day cometh. Above all things, in all things, "look unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of thy faith." If thou failest, look to Him to uphold thee; if stumblest, hold swift His hand to help thee; if thou fallest, lie not hopelessly there, but look to Him to raise thee; if, by His grace, thou doest well, look to Him in thanksgiving, that He has helped thee, and pray that thou mayest do better.—Edward B. Pusey.

A PASTORAL LETTER ON THE WAR.

The Bishop of Western New York (Protestant Episcopal) lately put forth a Pastoral Letter relating to the war, which is dated London, September 1st. The bishop expresses the belief that the outburst of war must be attributed to none other than the devil himself. He asks, however, that the conditions in each of the militant countries be considered as showing how this satanic power should have become possible. He points to the "fierce militarism of Germany," its materialism, its anarchy, its "Godless Socialism," and the large amount of denial of the faith in its halls of learning. He points to France "trampling officially on all religions, persecuting priests and nuns and driving them forth to homelessness and hunger and hardship unutterable; degrading and defiling churches; exhibiting laughing Gallios on its boulevards as they sip their absinthe or tell the filthy tale; legalizing vice and even making a merit of the social evil." He points to Austria, "with its superstition and its materialistic people." He points to Russia as illiterate, ruled with a rod of iron, wielding the knout and persecuting the Hebrew, holding the Pole under hard rule, and with its superstitions in the Church. He points to Servia "with the mailed fist that strikes the killing blow without remorse." He points to Belgium whose chief ruler was a scandal among the peoples of the earth through his blotted life and unclean deeds, through his cruelties and despotism and the murderous hand among the tribes of the dark continent. The Congo atrocities, apparently unrebuked by the national voice, seemed to present that land as the abettor of monstrous crimes and of a tyranny that was reeking with blood and cruel deviltry." He points to England, our own mother land, which was caught in the very act of despoiling the Church at the time war burst upon it. He holds that the act of disendowment of the Church in Wales "is to commit the awful crime of sacrilege, to violate the Saviour's Bride, to rob Almighty God. For such a horrible sin, so flagitious a crime, will not—may we say—has not, God to-day called to account?"

Bishop Walker recognizes, however, that our own land is far from untainted in much that he attributes to these other nations. He calls us to a severe national self-examination. "Are our national sins reaping their award of penalty? The godlessness of society; the impurity of the dance and of the novel of the times; the gambling and over-reaching in speculation and in ordinary business; the untruth and dishonesty that characterize many schemes of finance; the neglected Church, the desecrated Lord's Day; the violated Decalogue; the extravagance and luxury and waste; the bitterness of political parties; the oppression of capital and the hate by labor of the employer; the unjust legislation, the enactment of statutes for political profit; the law that benefits one and unrighteously injures another's interest; the recklessness and worldliness and scandal that characterize society; the awful growth and flaunting defiance of that curse of the world, the divorce evil:—all these, truly our national sins, have they brought us the whip of punishment and the solemn rebuke of our patient Saviour?

"Time will reveal whether greater woe and deeper depths of sorrow shall be ours, whether there shall be a graver shaking of this country out of its arrogant complacency and its wilful social wrong and its presumptuous sin. Repentance, renewal, the righteous life—for these let us, as individuals, as a nation, search and pray."—The Living Church.

Bro. Hinshaw, of Randleman, who will probably enter the ministry, was at Conference as delegate from his charge.

—Bro. Chas. B. Way attended the Asheville Conference as delegate and remained to the end, but this did not prevent his sending a report from his church this week.

—News comes from Petrograd of a great victory of the Russians over the Germans; but reports emanating from that source are to be received, if at all, with great allowance. Etiquette there requires that the Czar's battles be reported as victories, no matter how disastrous.

—Grace church held its Thanksgiving service last night in connection with the midweek prayer meeting. A Thanksgiving offering was made to the Children's Home. Our pastor called on quite a number to name the thing for which they should be most grateful. Several different answers were given: Christ, the Savior; the open Bible; our creation in the image of God; a tidal wave making for civic righteousness; good health; peace; plenty; good business year; a clear conviction that our church (Methodist Protestant denomination) has a distinctive work to do in the world.

OPINIONS OF THE WAR.

Poor Peace Insurance.

Arming to keep the peace, a favorite oratorical policy with the jingoes of all nations, never before appeared quite so absurd as at the present moment. It ought never to have currency again, even among the thoughtless, after the present troubles in Europe. Every power in Europe has been arming itself for years—to keep the peace, of course. Great armaments were to prevent war. Billions were spent for this supposed "insurance."

And now Europe is war mad from end to end. The continent was made a tinder box by all this "arming against war," and a madman in Bosnia set a match to it. Like a spark dropped into a roomful of explosives, it starts a conflagration which no one can control. A man armed to the teeth with a chip on his shoulder invites a fight. So does a nation similarly equipped. And a nation is no more justified thus to arm herself and go out seeking trouble than is an individual.

The next time some minister or legislator argues for bigger armaments in order to avert war it will be in order for some one familiar with the events of the summer of 1914 to recall him to his senses. One way to prevent a tinder-box fire is not to provide the tinder-box.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Armaments Do Not Preserve Peace.

All the loudly proclaimed pretensions of professional militarists that huge armaments and incessant preparation for war are the best assurances that can be had of the preservation of peace are disproved. There never was a time when Europe was more fully armed, and there never was a more needless and wicked war than that into which Europe has suddenly plunged.—New York World.

War a Bearer of Poverty.

A general war is not a bearer of prosperity. One country like the United States might profit for a time from the distress of others, but in the long run the heavy burdens under which the warring nations would stagger on when peace had come would be handicaps from which no part of the world could wholly escape.—The Iron Age.

The Reckoning.

What do they reck who sit aloft on thrones,
Or in the chambered chancelleries apart,
Playing the game of state with subtle art,
If so be they may win, what wretched groans
Rise from red fields, what unrecorded bones
Bleach within shallow graves, what bitter smart
Pierces the widowed or the orphaned heart—
The unhooded horror for which naught atones?

A word, a pen-stroke, and this might not be!
But vengeance, power-lust, festering jealousy
Triumph, and grim carnage stalks abroad.
Hark. Hear that ominous bugle on the wind.
And they who might have stayed it, shall they find
No reckoning within the courts of God?

—Clinton Scollard in the New York Sun.

Three Kings.

The human mind cannot yet begin to grasp the consequences. One of them, however, seems plainly written in the book of the future. It is that, after this most awful and most wicked of all wars is over, the power of life and death over millions of men, the right to decree the ruin of industry and commerce and finance, with untold human misery stalking through the land like a plague, will be taken away from three men. No safe prediction of actual results of battle can be made. Dynasties may crumble before all is done; empires change their form of government. But whatever happens, Europe—humanity—will not settle back again into a position enabling three Emperors—one of them senile, another subject to melancholia, and the third often showing signs of disturbed mental balance—to give, on their individual choice or whim, the signal for destruction and massacre.—New York Evening Post.

Whom the Gods Would Destroy.

When the work of devastation is done there will be left the stricken, sobered peoples. Every family will have lost father or son, husband or brother. Resources will have been swept away. Industry will be paralyzed. Farms will have been stripped, villages, towns and cities desolated. But fortitude and courage will be left, and men will set themselves about the task of building a new civilization.

They will not be tolerant then of pious hypocrites asserting divine right, and claiming to be vicegerents of God. They will not be tolerant of taxes for the wanton expenditures of royal families. They will not deprive themselves of the necessaries of life to enrich the manufacturers of artillery and powder. They will cross these items from their ledgers and turn their attention to the creation of a social order under which men and women who are content to dwell peaceably on their own reservations can enjoy liberty and pursue happiness.

Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad. Mad with the lust of power, drunk with their own egotism, the Head Devils have signed their own doom. Their days are numbered. The monarchs must go—and go they will.—The Independent.

OVER-SENSITIVENESS.

There are some people, yes, many people, always looking out for slights. They cannot carry on the daily intercourse of the family without some offense is imagined. If they meet an acquaintance on the street who happens to be preoccupied with business they attribute his abstraction to some mood personal to themselves and take umbrage accordingly. They lay on others the fact of their irritability. A fit of indisposition makes them see impertinence in every one they come in contact with. Innocent persons, who never dreamed of giving offense are astonished to find some unfortunate word or momentary taciturnity mistaken for an insult.

To say the least, the habit is unfortunate. There are people in this world who have something to do besides talking, joking, and complimenting. There are persons who get too weary to answer foolish questions repeated again and again. There are persons who now and then appreciate the privilege of a moment's thought or silence, and it is not needful for over-sensitive persons to construe weariness and care and labor into indifference, unkindness or contempt.

It is far wiser to take the more charitable view of our fellow beings and not suppose a slight is intended unless the slight is open and direct. After all, life takes its hues in a great degree from the color of our mind. If we are frank and generous, the world treats us kindly. If, on the contrary, we are suspicious, men learn to be cold and cautious toward us. Let a person get the reputation of being touchy, and everybody is under more or less constraint, and in this way the chance of an imaginary offense is vastly increased.—Selected.

THE GOD WHO COUNTS.

"The hairs of your head are all numbered." "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing?"

These verses passed through my mind, as I watched the sparrows on the lawn, and later on, when I unfastened the long plaits of a friend's hair.

"Just to think of it," I said, as she shook out the long, wavy masses over her shoulders, "God counts all these." Yes, and God is very accurate, too, when it comes to counting money. And then memory brought the following incidents to mind:

The Continental post had just come in, and Edward and Emily Newton were poring over the contents of their many letters, for Mr. Newton was an active and aggressive worker among Italian and French speaking people. Presently Mrs. Newton let a letter fall from her hand, exclaiming:

"Edward, whatever shall we do? The rents of two halls are due, and Lorenzo's salary must be paid without delay, and we want a clear £50."

"What shall we do, my dear?" said Mr. Newton, looking up from his letters with shining eyes, for they told of progress in the work, and of souls saved. "We must do what we always have done, go to our Father and Divine Banker. The silver and the gold are His. He has never failed us yet."

"But, Edward, the money ought to go at once, to-day, and we have not a penny of it."

"Well," he answered calmly, "if it must go to-day, He will send it to-day," and then he added slowly: "He that spared not His own Son * * * how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Come, dear, let us go to our room, and we will ask our Father to send it without delay. And of course, we shall get the right amount, for you must remember that God knows how to count."

They were guests in a little country house, and I also was in the house at the same time. Having reached their long, low bedroom, the two windows of which looked out upon the lawn, they closed the door, and went into the presence chamber of their Father-Banker to plead for—just fifty pounds.

Across the passage was another room, and at the same hour was kneeling a little old lady—their hostess. A quaint little old lady she was, who wore short petticoats, and caps like those of a Quakeress, with the soft, white hair drawn down on each side of her beautiful old face. She was always simply, not to say poorly, dressed. "The less for self, the more for God," was her life-long motto. Economy was the rule in every detail of her household. Her daughters were known laughingly to rebel at some of what they thought to be her "tiresome economies."

To-day she was praying, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do? Give some help to these dear servants of Thine, now under my roof? Yes, Lord! And how much shall I give? £50? Yes, Lord."

Yes; the "God who counts" dictated the exact sum that the two across the landing were asking for at that very moment!

And so her ever-ready check book was taken out, and a check for £50 written. And soon the dainty little figure was out on the landing listening to sounds from below. Ah, that was surely a man's voice, and in prayer, too! And she stood outside their door, and, at the first pause, knocked for admittance.

Emily Newton opened the door. "Come in, dear friend come in."

"Not just now, my dear; I only came to give you this: it is from the Lord for your work," and gently waving off thanks, she determinedly shut the door, and tripped back to her own room, happy and smiling.

The Newtons opened the envelope—and out fell the check for £50.

"Oh, Edward, here is the exact sum we have been asking for! How wonderful!"

"Very gracious, dearest; but not so very wonderful, since He is wonderful. You must not forget that God can count!"

* * * * * * * * * * *

"Here is the account; we must have £20 0s. 9d.; where is it to come from?" So said a friend of mine one day, when a bill came in, in connection with the grand mission with which he was connected. And he, too, prayed, telling his Father the exact amount needed. And presently the post brought him a letter, and out fell a check for £20.

"Twenty pounds!" I said, laughing, as he told me the story; "but what about the ninepence?"

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM."

A little child—one winter day—gift of all the ages—
Looked up and smiled, and in that smile fled wisdom of the Sages.
In that little smile of Trust, flashed key to Life Eternal,
Cooed the babe a song of Heaven, changed Winter Winds to Vernal.

O little child—now maiden grown—and entering Life's grand palace,
In that little smile of Trust lies sweetness for Life's chalice.
O Heart of Love! around—above, the Power of All the Ages.
O Heart of Love, O little child, lend wisdom to the sages.
Yea—grant us all—each great, new day
A heart of Love,
A smile of Trust
To fill Life's Pages.

HOW GOD HELPED.

Most Christian people have been aware of times in their experience when God has enabled them safely to pass thru dark places. It has usually been renewed strength and courage or a sustaining confidence in His wisdom and goodness which has been vouchsafed. But there have been times, however, when God has seemed to make material succor available for those who trust Him and who are in straits. Such manifestations of the loving Father's care are very precious to those who have been thus preserved.

One who is now pastor of a Methodist church in Vermont told his fraternity mates, when he had reached his senior year in Wesleyan University, of the struggle he had had when a freshman to get through the year, and how God seemed to have sent help when he was upon the point of giving up. He had been granted a tuition scholarship and a little other outside help, but, even with that aid, he had subsisted for most of the year upon oatmeal and bread. By spring his meager resources had become exhausted, and he had begun to feel the pinch of real poverty. He had made his great need a matter of earnest prayer and endeavor, but conditions seemed to be growing worse. At length, finding himself with nothing to eat, and too proud to tell of his plight, he made up his mind to leave college and go to work.

That night, while he was packing up his books, there was a click at the letter slot in the door and an envelope was dropped into the room, and, upon opening it, he found a five-dollar bill. That bill tided him over the turning point in his life, for it gave him courage and help to complete the college year. He never discovered, he said, who gave him the money, and up to the time he received the gift it was his thought that no one knew of his need.

Surely, "the Lord preserveth all them that love him," and there are many of His children who are ready to testify that "he will fulfil the desire of them that fear him." —Zion's Herald.

—The report of the Stationing Committee at our Annual Conference is said to have given general satisfaction. We believe the committee never tried harder to satisfy all; if they did not succeed, it must have been because it was impossible.

—The first woman to lay down her life for her country in the present war was probably Mme. Favre-Schwarz, wife of one of the richest men in Alsace-Lorraine. She was shot by the Germans after a courtmartial, having been accused of attempting to blow up the important tunnel on the line of the Rhine.

—Mrs. Annette Abbott Adams, of San Francisco, has been appointed as assistant United States district attorney. Mrs. Adams is the first woman appointed to that position in this country. She is also the first professional woman to receive an appointment from the President.

—The State Supreme Court sustains the Porter heirs against our Guilford County Commissioners in the suit regarding the Court House site.

—Mr. Ernest Pugh, of Greensboro, was married this week to Miss Neese, daughter of Greensboro's marblecutter, Mr. Neese.

—The town of Brea, Calif., wanted a church and so a large number of men from the surrounding country volunteered their services to build one. All hands turned in and helped. Work was begun early in the morning, and by nightfall the building was all completed, so that evangelistic services were held in it.—The Pathfifinfidler.

"To what do you attribute your longevity?" asked the reporter.

"My which?" queried the oldest inhabitant.

"Your longevity," repeated the reporter.

"Never had it. As far as I can remember, I ain't never had no such complaint."—Tit-Bits.

Willie—Uncle, did you ever play Indian in your life?

Uncle—Indeed, no! Why do you ask?

Willie—Because I saw a scalp on your bedroom table.

"What happened to him?" asked the Boob.

"He got so far behind in his room rent that he had to marry his landlady," replied the Grouch.—Cin. Enquirer.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

"I'm coming to that," he said. "In the envelope there were nine stamps, and in the letter occurred these words:

"I am just putting in all the stamps that are left in my stamp case, as I am sure you must have a great many letters to write! Ninepence is all I have left."

And so it came to pass that there was the twenty pounds and nine pence, the needed sum, exactly. Yes; God knows how to count, and He never makes a mistake. Oh, make a friend of this Almighty One, for those who wholly trust Him find Him wholly true.—M. Hickley, in Our Own Magazine.

BEARS DIDN'T KEEP THIS BOY FROM SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Children find so many excuses for not going to Sunday school and parents accept excuses of that kind more easily than any others, and more often than they should.

A test of the reasonableness of the excuse should be: Would the same objection keep him away from the day school?

In the pioneer days the God-fearing settlers did not let wolves, bears, lynxes or even Indians keep them from God's house. And men with guns nearly always accompanied the women and children. The Heidelberg Teacher gives the following incident:

An Essex, Mass., lad was coming along a rough hewn path alone, when he noted two bear cubs directly in his way. They were like great kittens, and cunning enough, and naturally he approached to play with them, when, of a sudden, the mother bear, angered at this interference with her offspring, dashed at him out of the bushes, furiously!

He was surprised and startled enough by her sudden onrush, but retained his presence of mind completely, nevertheless. To turn and run was impossible. What should he do?

He chanced to be carrying is his hand at the time a knotted pine stick in lieu of a club, and as the bear dashed at him he held it firmly forward and shoved it into her wide open, savage mouth! It stopped her instantly, and the more she thrashed and plunged to be rid of it, the more firmly its jagged points became imbedded in the membrane of her throat.

Seeing her predicament, the lad was away in a moment at the top of his speed, and safely escaped.

Should not the young folks of to-day, who live in the midst of untold comforts, protected and safe-guarded at every point, deem themselves in duty bound to be as zealous and loyal for church and school as were the boys and girls in the wilderness?

The desire to do good works ofttimes so predominates over the determination to be inwardly right with God, as to prevent the paying of proper attention to the latter requirement. It is true we are called both to be good, and to do good, but the divine order is, first be; then do as a result of being. Unless this order is followed, we are acting contrary to the plan and will of God. In the performance of good works Self may be fed and strengthened, but in the determination to be good, the death sentence of Self is declared.—Words of Faith.

A SKEPTIC REBUKED.

An English earl, who was a skeptic, was traveling not long ago in the Fiji Islands. "You are a great chief," he said to one man, "and it is a pity for you to listen to those missionaries. Nobody believes any more in that old book, called the Bible, that they try to teach you, that you have been so foolish as to be taken in by, nor in that story of Jesus Christ—we have all learned better."

The eyes of the chief flashed as he replied: "Do you see that great stone over there? On that stone we crushed the heads of our victims to death. Do you see that native oven over yonder? In that oven we roasted the human bodies for our great feasts. Now, if it hadn't been for the good missionaries and that old book, and the great love of Jesus Christ which has changed us from savages into God's children, you would never leave this spot. You have reason to thank God for the Gospel, for without it you would be roasted in yonder oven, and we would feast on you in no time."

While scholars are searching the ruins of ancient Babylon and Thebes for evidences of Bible truth, the living evidences on missionary fields outshine all others.—Sel.

JOY TO THE WORLD.

A poor little street girl was taken sick one Christmas and was carried to the hospital. While there she heard the story of Jesus' coming into the world to save us. It was all new to her, and the knowledge made her very happy as she lay upon her little cot.

One day the nurse came around at the usual hour, and "Little Broomstick" (that was her street name) held her by the hand and whispered: "I'm havin' real good times here—ever such good times. S'pose I'll have to go away; but I'll take the good time along—some of it, anyhow. Did you know about Jesus being born,"

"Yes," replied the nurse, "I know. Sh-sh-sh! Don't talk any more. You will disturb others, and do yourself no good."

The child paid no heed to this. Instead, she continued: "You did? You knew about Jesus being born? I thought you looked as if you didn't, and I was going to tell you."

"Why, how do I look?" asked the nurse, forgetting her own orders in her curiosity.

"Oh, just like most o' folks—kind 'o glum. I should not think you'd ever look glum if you knowed about Jesus being born."—Selected.

THE TRACT TEST.—A New England sea-captain made a voyage to India. While in port there a wealthy Malay merchant came on board, who asked him if he had any tracts he could part with. "What do you want with English tracts? You cannot read them." "True; but I have use for them nevertheless," said the Malay through his interpreter. "Whenever one of your country or of England calls on me to trade I put a tract in his way, and watch him. If he reads it with interest, I infer that he will not cheat me. If he throws it aside with contempt, or with an oath of profanity, I have no more to do with him. I cannot trust him."—E. S. Gunn, in S. S. Times.

THE GRACE OF HUMILITY.

We often hear people complaining that they are not appreciated; the papers do not publish their mighty works; the church does not recognize their merits; the community does not elect them to office. Many of these disappointed men are prominent in Christian churches. Where is modesty? Where is meekness? Where is the spirit of the Master?

A few days ago a boy of seven years of age fell from a pier into the East River and a lady who saw his peril ran for help. The first person she met was a neatly dressed gentleman who had just landed in New York from a New Haven boat. He dropped his suitcase, plunged into the water and succeeded in getting the boy aboard a sand barge. A patrolman found them on the barge and asked the name of the heroic rescuer. His reply was:

"That is not necessary. Just show me a place where I can change my clothes; that is all I want."

He was led to a nearby seaman's lodging house, changed his clothes, stuffing the wet suit into his grip, but steadfastly refused to reveal his identity."

"I only did my duty," said he, "only a little thing, unworthy of any notice in the papers or public praise."

Blessed is the man who can render heroic service beautifully. To murmur and complain because our services are not appreciated and we do not receive honorable mention is not beauitful.—Christian Advocate.

NEW THINGS.—To those in Christ, all things are not only new, but they are growing constantly newer. In the old world and with the old man it is just the other way. Things are always getting older, until life gets to be an insufferable burden, a dreary round, a wretched repetition, and we see backs bent with nothing but pure sorrow, and heads white with none other sickness than vexation of spirit, and men brought to the grave because life was too wearisome to be supported any longer. But in the new world and with the new man the whole is reversed. Every day more of the old is weeded out, more of the new is coming in. Life is "fresher and freer," and fuller of promise. There are new discoveries of the Father's love, new revelations of Christ's grace, new experiences of the Saviour's comfort. Life becomes interesting and grand beyond belief.—Robert W. Barbour.

HARDEST THING FIRST.

There is never so easy a time to do a hard thing as the first opportunity we get for its doing. Every postponement then only makes the task harder. It may seem stupendously hard when we first face it; but if that is the time we ought to do it, it will never be so easy again. Efficient workers have learned, therefore, always to put their hardest tasks ahead of their easier ones, when they can take their choice. The early morning, immediately upon entering the day's work, is a good time to plunge into the hardest things that await us. After that it is a simple matter to pass on to the easier tasks, and get them done. But how often we take the invitingly easier ones first, and find by night time that the day has been frittered away on them, while the hardest one is left over to be done "tomorrow," as it has been for many days in the past. Rising up early in the morning seemed to be a favorite practise among the Bible men of strength when they had hard work on hand. We may be sure they did not rise up early in order to do the thing late that afternoon. With most of us, hardest things first, or hardest things not at all, must become the habit of our life.—Selected.

IN TIME OF TROUBLE

Say:

First: He brought me here. It is by His will I am in this strait place; in that I will rest.

Next: He will keep me in His love, and give me grace in this trial to behave as His child.

Then: He will make the trial a blessing, teaching me the lesson He wants me to learn, and working in me the grace He intends for me.

Last: In His good time He can bring me out again, how and when He knows.

Say—I am here—

1—By God's appointment.
2—In God's keeping.
3—Under His training.
4—For His time. ANDREW MURRAY.

GIVE LITTLE GIFTS.

A woman's paper recently gave a true story, which should carry a suggestion to every reader. A woman of means and culture suddenly discovered one day that she was growing old. Her house was filled with beautiful objects; the accumulation of a lifetime.

"I have enjoyed them long enough," she said. "It is time I was done with the care of things. If I give them now to the right people they will be useful; if they are disposed of indiscriminately when I am dead they will be of little value."

She proceeded, therefore, to give away her treasures where they were needed and would be valued.

To a worker among children in the slums went a stereopticon; books to poor little libraries in the country, photographs to schools. To a hospital for sick children she sent a collection of scrap books. "Gather up the fragments, that nothing be lost," was the motto.

None of us can realize how many hungry poor are waiting for all the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table.

The old magazines thrust into the wastebasket would bring a happy hour to some tired woman on a western ranch. The odd bits of silk and muslin on the floor of the sewing room would give delight to the crippled children in a hospital ward.

It is much easier to give a note or check than to find where the trifles are needed, and then to send the trifles.

"I have no time for trifles," we plead every day. But Christ found time, not only to bless the children, but to take them in His arms before He blessed them, although He had but three years of public life in which to do His Father's business in the world. Was not that His Father's business?—Selected.

LIBERAL THEOLOGY.

He was taking a tramp through the country, and stopped at a farmhouse to get a glass of milk. Stepping up to the open kitchen door he saw within seated in a rocker a gray-haired old lady, spectacles on her nose, open Bible on her lap.

"I see you're reading the good Book."

"When you get to my age it's a good thing to do. You know what the Lord says: 'Have your house in order lest I come.'"

"You look as though you have your house as the Lord tells you to have it," said he, his eyes resting on her kindly, old face.

"Pretty much so," she replied a little wearied. "I've got all the rooms on the top floor calcimined and papered, I have got new rag carpet in the dining-room, and this kitchen floor has just been painted. But I haven't been able to get down into the cellar yet to whitewash it. I guess, though, that if the Lord comes before I get round to it he will remember that I'm an old woman and he'll overlook the cellar."—Sel.

VOLUME XXI. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSD AY, DECEMBER 3, 1914. NUMBER 2.

THE BOOK OF GOD.

Such is the Bible. Even if we could not believe in the divine inspiration of the authorship of the book, we must still regard it as pre-eminentlly the "Book of God" because it everywhere makes us conscious of God. In its account of the origin of the world, it brings in the divine agency as the sole cause. In its narration of the events of history, it never overlooks the Power above man,—personal conscious, intelligent, purposive. In referring to the great cataclasms in nature, it sees God behind them all, controlling them all and making them serve His purposes. In the windup of our world's history, God is to be present as the arbiter of human destiny.

On almost every page of every book of the Bible save one (the Book of Esther from which the name of God was purposely omitted) some name of God appears. And in the exceptional book, it is evident that the writer thought of God as exercising constant control over the affairs of men, delivering those who regard Him and causing the mischief devised by the wicked to return upon their own heads.

The Bible is th Book of God and also the Book of Man, in a sense, because its great theme is God and Man and the relation of one to the other. Man never understands himself till he reads the Bible and sees himself as God sees him.

The Bible is not a book to be classed with other books. There is none like it. Its uniqueness is in both its mode of treatment and its subject matter. It deals with man's highest interests, not in a specluative, but in an authoritative way. Other books may raise questions in our minds and gain our attention: this book commands us with an authority that we can disregard only at infinite peril and loss.

What blessedness the Bible brings into the human life that is ordered thereby. What confusion does it bring to those who would disregard God and push on in the way of their own inclinations and will. The Bible is a book of power. If it is not permitted to bless, it will inevitably cause distress and despair. No other book so affects the feelings of men. Yet the Bible is the gentlest of books.

The Bible, while the Book of God, is not a book to be worshiped or superstitiously used. It everywhere points men to God and seeks to make men intelligent worshipers of God.

There can be but one Bible because there is but one God and one way to God. Let us prize the Bible and thank God for its holy light in the awful darkness of our sin and ignorance.

—An elderly member of our church remarked this morning after looking over the list of our pastors for the coming year: "There has been a great change in our preachers in the last twenty-five years." He realized this better than we did, and we turned to the records to ascertain the facts. We found that of the sixty-four pastors assigned this year, only ten were in our ministry twenty-five years ago. What changes time brings on! We are all passing on with a fearful swiftness that should make us constantly sober and ever careful to do the work given us while the day lasts.

—Another brother after looking over the list of pastoral appointments said: "Not many changes this year." The exact number of fields to change pastors is seventeen, one more than one-fourth of all.

—We are pained to learn that Rev. T. J. Ogburn had the misfortune to break an arm while engaged in moving his goods to his new charge, Huntersville and Mt. Zion. He is said to be getting on well on the way to recovery.

A note from Bro. Ashburn in Baltimore states that there is not much change in the condition of his little son who suffered an injury of one kidney in an automobile accident. There is some fear that another operation may be necessary, in which case Mrs. Ashburn will be sent for. Bro. Ashburn expresses appreciation of the kindness of members and Junior Christian Endeavorers of Broadway M. P. Church, Baltimore, in sending flowers to the little boy at the hospital.

Bro. Madison Brown, of Julian, was in our office this morning. We had not seen him since he suffered a decline in health some months ago. He placd himself in a sanitarium for a time and has taken special care of his health, and as a result he has more than regained his former weight. He now feels strong, but is advised by his physician that he would better not return to regular work for some time yet. Bro. Brown is one of our best laymen, and we hope for him complete recovery.

THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

I have just finished reading a booklet with the above title written by Dr. H. L. Elderdice.

It is in Dr. Elderdice's usual clear and pleasing style, and I found it both interesting and instructive.

It is in an almost unoccupied field and, I think, fills a real need. I have never seen anything much on the subject and had been wanting just such a discussion of it. In fact, I had been thinking of writing Dr. Elderdice for help on the subject when I found that he had written this booklet.

If I should preach on the subject I should draw largely from this booklet; and better than my preaching on it, I believe would be to put it into the hands of any young man whom I might think called to preach.

I would commend it to all our ministers, to all young men studying for the ministry or contemplating it, and also to any laymen who are interested in getting men of the right kind into the ministry.

ON THE TIBETAN BORDER.

The Home of a Living Buddha.

Siningfu, August 10.

It was a lovely morning when we left Sining for Paienrong, a small city sixty li sooth-east of Sining. The route is very mountainous. The first day we traveled twenty-seven miles, reaching the inn at dusk. The inn was a miserable hole. There was one large room with three kangs or brick beds, which can be heated with manure. We chose the kang nearest the cooking stove, as men on the other kang were smoking opium. There was just room for the three of us to lie down and we could not undress much, as the old landlady and her daughter were interested in all we did. In the middle of the night my companion had to get up twice to rake some fire out, as his place was far too hot: he was sleeping in the middle. We were glad when it was day to get out and have a little fresh air. The following day we traveled thirty-three miles, crossing one mountain and four hills.

At Paienrong.

There was still a good deal of snow in the mountain crevices. Half way up the mountain side we met a Tibetan on horseback, hunting after his wife who had run away. They had had a row and he had beaten her, and as soon as he was out of the way she took her departure. He was very anxious to find her, more perhaps for the financial loss her disappearance entailed than out of love for her. From the mountain top a lovely panorama spread before us on the south side.

Paienrong, which we reached at dusk, is a small walled city with a population of 300 families, 200 Chinese and 100 Moslem, with 250 Moslem families in the suburb. The Chinese population in the district is meager. The Moslems occupy most of the villages on highways, but the chief population are the Tibetans, who live in the villages in the hills round about. The city stands very high, exposed to all the winds of winter. We remained there a week, looking for a house to rent, selling books and preaching.

Then we made our way to the home of Ke Rung-tsen, a living Buddha, a member of the Red sect, and a friend of mine. For many years I have had a standing invitation to go and visit him. Now an opportunity presented itself. We left at noon, and in crossing the mountain snow fell and in the evening we reached a small village, where we found a resting plare for the night in the home of a Moslem. The following morning we continued on our journey another ten miles, and then came to the Yellow River. Some men and women were busy washing for gold, but they do not make a fat living out of it. We crossed the river in a large ferry and three more miles west, parallel with the river, brought us to the home of the living Buddha.

A Kindly Welcome.

They had been expecting us for two or three days. As soon as it was known we had arrived at the big door, a host of priests came running along the courtyard to meet us and stood on both sides as we entered, welcoming us with "De mo yin, De mo yin." (We hope you are well), to which I replied also in Tibetan "De-mo, De-mo." (Quite well, thank you). We were shown into the best guest room, which was prepared for us; a long room 30 by 10 ft. with a ceiling papered with a bright, highly colored, foreign wall-paper, with a very gaudy pattern. Food was speedily brought in, consisting of bread and tea with milk and sugar in it; then later on came meat and vegetables. After we had a rest, our host, the Living Buddha, himself came to welcome us. We stayed with him four and a half days, and had a good rest which I enjoyed very much, having been alone in the work all the winter.

Where the Buddha Lives.

The home of the Living Buddha consists of three large courtyards, the back of the building overlooking the Yellow River on which bank it stands. In the centre courtyard, on the north side, is the Living Buddha's private temple, a two-storied building, the upper room containing several large cases full of gods. In the courtyard to the right are the guest rooms and the rooms of his chief stewards, with an orchard on the southern side. In the courtyard to the left are the Living Buddha's own private rooms. On the west side, looking out into a large orchard and under some large trees, was an awning, and under the awning a camp-bed standing upon a Persian carpet, where the Buddha enjoys his nap. Adjoining is a large vegetable garden, and beyond that westward a small park in which a large bathing cistern was being dug out by Moslem men and women, the men doing the digging and the women carrying the earth away. Rather a novel thing to see a bathing cistern being made to be used by Tibetans. They are not afraid of the water, for every day we saw them floating down the Yellow River with the current, aided by an inflated hide.

A Small Operation.

In the orchard I performed a small operation on the Buddha, which had to be done in secrecy, namely, the extraction of a tooth. Being a god worshiped by the people, it was necessary that none of his adherents should see his blood, so the orchard door was barred. Only my companion and I and the Buddha's own faithful servant were allowed inside. It was the work of a moment and out the troubler came, and great care was taken that not a drop of blood should be seen anywhere. This is the second tooth I have extracted for this Living Buddha. He would not allow me to extract the first one, until I promised I would give him the tooth, as it would never do for a living god to have any imperfection; so when he dies the tooth will be placed in his mouth.

The Story of a Black Eye.

Many years ago another Living Buddha, a friend of ours, was traveling from one Lamasery to another. It was winter time, and as they were crossing the river on an ice bridge, he fell and the mule getting a little fright started and hit him in the eye with its hoof, making it black and blue, and very much swollen. He came and stayed with us all night, and a lotion soon took down the swelling. He did not leave for his home till noon, so that he might reach the Lamasery at night, when so one could see his bruised eye, for a living god shoul l not have any mischief befall him. For three weeks he confined himself to his room as being indisposed, and the usual purple paper was pasted outside the door as a sign that he was sick and no one should enter. When his eye was thoroughly well he made his appearance once more.

The Buddha's Possessions.

During our stay with the Living Buddha he showed us over the whole of his premises. Foreign stoves, a sewing machine, magnetic battery, a bicycle, foreign crockery, foreign candies, lamps, glass ware, etc., were among his posessions. He even had lemon peel, but the strangest thing of all was that this Living Buddha had a wife and four children.

On inquiry why he was married, the following reason was given me. It was found out (by necromancy, I suppose) that this was the last incarnation, that he would return no more to this world. To him with all his affluence and comfort this world was not such a bad place to live in after all, so he was sorry to say good bye for ever; therefore to avoid the catastrophe of being lost in Nirvana, and to secure a safe return to this world, he married a wife, destroyed his accumulated merit and will have to begin over again.

Honored by All Men.

Every day during our stay, pilgrims arrived to pay homage to this living god, bringing with them all kinds of presents. The pilgrims came into the room where the Buddha was, bowed down before him three times, unfurled a scarf of blessing, then in half bent form approached the Buddha with the scarf covering both their hands. He received it, touched their heads with his fingers and gave them a scarf in return. The smile that lit up their faces after receiving his blessing showed how much they valued it, and revealed to us on-lookers something of the power and influence of these Living Buddhas and the great obstacles to be overcome ere this people be brought under power of the Gospel.

Week of Prayer in a Lamasery.

During our stay about twenty priests came down from the Lamasery to hold a week of special prayer. This Living Buddha rules over twenty-eight Lamaseries. The prayers began very early in the morning and with the exception of a rest at meal times they were kept up all day long.

The prayer meeting was held in the upper room where all the gods are. The priests were squatted on small square mats in two rows facing each other. Each one had a hand-bell, a drum, rattle bones, "thunder bolts" and small pair of metallic cymbals. The leader led off in a monotone voice, and they all followed; then would come the ringing of the bells, the beating of the drums or clanging of cymbals, then they would chant again, and then another din—and at times bells, drums, cymbals all going together—a terrible din, and this was to continue a whole week. They had made hundreds of little gods of barley flour with butter for eyes, ears, nose and mouth. As the men sat performing their ceremonies, sometimes grinning at each other, some of them looked more like demons than human beings.—N. C. D. N.

Note.—A member of the Kalgan church, baptized last year, a young man of promise, has gone as an assistant to one of the missionaries who made this trip. From Paienrong as headquarters he will work to gain the Tibetans. C. S. H.

ANSWERED PRAYER.

He asked for strength that he might achieve. He was made weak that he might obey.

He asked for health that he might do greater things. He was given infirmity that he might do better things.

He asked for riches that he might be happy. He was given poverty that he might be wise.

He asked for power that he might enjoy the praise of men. He was given weakness that he might feel the need of God.

He asked for all things that he might enjoy life. He was given life that he might enjoy all things. He was given nothing he asked for, more than he hoped for.

His prayer is unanswered. He is most blest.—From the Congregationalist.

—An old Scotch lady had the habit of driving to church. Her coachman, when he considered the sermon nearly at an end, would slip quietly out to have the carriage ready. One Sunday, John, after hanging about the door, grew impatient. Creeping down the aisle toward his mistress, he whispered, "Is he no near dune yet?" "Dune!" returned the old lady, in high indignation, for her patience had long been exhausted, "he's dune half an hour since, but he'll na stop."—Exchange.

—The curate of a large and fashionable church was endeavoring to teach the significance of white to a Sunday school class.

"Why," said he, "is a bride invariably clothed in white at her marriage?" As no one answered, he explained, "White stands for joy and the wedding day is the most joyous occasion of a woman's life."

A small boy asked, "Why do the men wear black?"—Ex.

—As a result of co-operation between the University of Wisconsin and the city officials of Madison, a new police regulation will require every young man who enters a saloon with the intention of purchasing liquor to sign a statement in the presence of witnesses to the effect that he is over twenty-one years of age. This measure has been adopted in an effort to keep freshmen and all minors away from saloons.

—Under the title of "Our Visionary President," George Creel has written for the December Century an interpretation of Woodrow Wilson, discussing in detail the president's hold on his party, his stand on all the questions which he has been called to meet, the isolation of his position, the grounds for the claim that he is the exponent of American idealism, and his belief that no man since Lincoln has niched himself so ineradicably in the confidence of his people.

—The United States public health service is winning a victory in its campaign against that mysterious affliction, pellagra. It announces that the disease is wholly a matter of diet; and that abundant and proper food works a cure within four weeks. The service has also proved that the disease is neither contagious nor infectious, and has wholly discredited the story that the cause is the eating of corn meal that has mildewed or that has become otherwise contaminated.—Youth's Companion.

—God wants self-denying giving. Who can look at the Japanese temple, with its coil of rope—larger than a ship's hawser, and weighing a ton and a half, made from the hair of Buddha's worshipers, and used to lift timbers and stones to their places in the temple building—without feeling the rebuke implied to our self-sparing gifts? The wealth of church members in Protestant communions is by the census, at least $10,000,000,000. Their contributions average one-sixteenth of a cent for every dollar or one dollar in about $1,600.—A. T. Pierson, D. D.

—Shailer Mathews: "A danger to which Protestantism—particularly progressive Protestantism—in America is exposed, is that its churches shall become mere agents of social service. There are many people who, in reaction from extreme orthodoxy, have come to feel that the sole business of the church is to push social reform. But we cannot let social service take the place of God. People cannot be amused into conscientiousness. Picnics are not the equivalents of prayer meetings, and Sunday school baseball leagues have not yet developed into revivals."

—In a clarion call to the church to obey the divine call of opportunity, Dr. Egbert W. Smith, executive secretary of Foreign Missions of the Southern Presbyterian Church, gives some striking facts. He says: "Recently in Japan a religious census was taken of the students in the Imperial University at Tokio. The census showed Shintoists 8, Buddhists 50, Christians 60, Atheists 1,500, Agnostics 3,000. Of the more than 4,600 students 4,500 were found to be avowedly and often boastfully without any religion; with what results upon character you can guess, in a land where one woman of every seven between the ages of 15 and 35 is a professional temptress."—Baptist World.

—The story is told of a brilliant Oxford student who had just offered himself to the missionary society for African service. Some one remonstrated with him, telling him that he would die in a year or two and that he was throwing his life away. The student answered: "I think it is with African missions as with the building of a great bridge. You know many stones have to be placed in the earth unseen to be a foundation for the bridge. If Jesus wants me to be one of the unseen stones lying in an African grave, I am satisfied to be such, certain as I am the final result will be a Christian Africa." It is a fact that this young man died after a few years there.—Selected.

A WORD FOR THE ORPHAN.

This would be a cold bleak world if there were no sentiment in it. And it would be an aimless, pusillanimous sort of existence that did not rest upon sound business principles.

Sentiment is the great driving force in the world today. It is the mainspring that makes possible and insures the happy homes, and it does credit to every heart that cherishes it.

It is business that regulates and promotes the good work that sentiment brings to life, giving strength and success without violating its beauty of conception, and proves true the great wisdom that is its very core. It is business that corroborates the dictations of sentiment that lead to the care for children who are destitute. It tells us that it is not only beautiful to do this but that it is a financial investment that pays a big dividend. It tells us that it is better, it is cheaper, it is more economical, to maintain a child for a few short years at a small expense, than it is to allow it to undergo the ultimately expensive and heartbreaking experience that is the unhappy lot of nearly every homeless, destitute child.

In giving you a happy Thanksgiving, may we not ask you to meditate upon the condition of the innumerable orphan children that are crying out in great need? Can you not find a greater interest in the big business of child saving and partially express your thanks for the many good things that have befallen you by helping the orphan?

R. L. Brown, Supt. Oxford Orphanage.

Welch.—At a meeting of the fourth quarterly conference of the North Main St. Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, N. C., held Nov. 11, 1914, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father in his all-wise providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our Brother J. J. Welch, who was so well loved, and who was so faithful as a member of this body, and whose wise counsel we will so greatly miss in our deliberations, and

Whereas it is the desire of this conference to express our deep affection and appreciation of his beautiful life and character, therefore, be it resolved,

1. That the quarterly conference of the North Main St. Methodist Protestant Church has lost one of its most devoted counselors and that the local church as well as the church at large one of its most loyal members.

2. That the Methodist Protestant Children's Home, in which he was so deeply interested and to which he was one of the largest contributors will feel his death most keenly.

3. That we extend our sincere condolence to the bereaved family.

4. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the conference, a copy sent to the family and a copy sent to our church and local papers for publication.

Mr. John Suits, of Guilford Ct., remembered the Home with another one of his pigs. We could use another one.

The children were all made happy on the arrival of a beautiful Angora goat, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Cable, Benaja, N. C. "Aunt Lizzie" Welch, Capt. Rankin, Dr. Coe and J. A. Gray sent us two big fat turkeys for Thanksgiving, and some one from Proximity Station, Greensboro, sent us a barrel of fine winesap apples grown at Blowing Rock, N. C. They are the finest we have ever received. In the afternoon of Thanksgiving Mr. Hal Bencini came out from High Point with a lot of canned goods and jellies prepared by his good wife. Imagine how we felt when he told us that he had come out to select his room to furnish. He selected it and now only two more remain unprovided for. Won't some of our readers take those? It would be such a nice Christmas present for the Home. Decide to do that and notify me at once and I'll have name plate on the door for you before Christmas or put it on that morning if you prefer which would be a nice thing to do.

Two little girls in Wilmington, Sara and Annie McCulloch, sent four pillows for four little children who have no parents to provide for them.

We felt so thankful for what is being done for the work, that a short program was prepared and rendered in the afternoon and I want to assure you that had you been present your heart would have been made to rejoice because you had helped these little ones.

Just after singing our songs of praise our hearts were made sad when we learned that death had removed another one of the trustees of the Children's Home. This time Prof. Martin H. Holt answered the call. He was deeply interested in the Home. He was the friend of the young man. The writer feels the loss very keenly, having been under the direction of him and his brother more than two years. The Home extends to the bereaved its tenderest sympathy.

A CURRANT BUN UPON THE WATERS.

The great depot was crowded. There were hundreds of American and English tourists, anxious to escape from the pretty Swiss town. War was raging outside the mountain-ringed little republic, and no one knew how soon war might be raging inside it, though every one hoped that peace might prevail in what has been called the "playground of Europe."

But the trains were so hopelessly crowded that many of those waiting knew that they must wait still longer, until the next one came, in three, perhaps five hours' time.

Among the group nearest to the time-table stood Frank and Hilda Gray. Father, mother, and Aunt Carry were close at hand, talking earnestly, but in low tones. Somehow, every one was speaking very quietly!

Frank and Hilda Gray were cousins. Hilda was Aunt Carry's little daughter, and Aunt Carry was a widow. When Frank had been told, so far away in Massachusetts, that Hilda would be of the traveling party, he had not received the news joyfully. A girl might be a great nuisance —there were so many things, delightful things, that girls couldn't do and they were always getting tired and stopping fun!

But Hilda, though only nine, did not prove a nuisance at all! In fact, there were times, when the grown-ups were reading newspapers and guidebooks, and talking among themselves, that Frank was rather glad of her companionship. She was always ready to try to do what he wanted, and always seemed interested in seeing the things he most wanted to see, such as aeroplanes.

One, two, three hours passed. No train. Four hours. Still no train.

"Can't we go somewhere for something to eat?" asked mother, looking at the children.

"And lose our place?" replied father. "It may mean losing all chance of moving today, and money is getting very scarce."

"I could slip through and buy some buns," said Aunt Carry. "You four can hold my place."

So, as a little boy once said in his composition, "she did and they did." She soon came back with a very large paper bag of currant buns.

"Prices doubled," she remarked. "I bought three each. We may be very glad of them for dinner!"

Frank and Hilda were exceedingly hungry. The buns were delightfully large, very sweet, and plentifully dotted with currants. Nothing could have tasted better.

"I had hard work to get back," remarked Aunt Carry, between bites. "People are pouring into the depot."

They were pouring so fast that by and by the crowds began to press upon Frank and Hilda. Aunt Carry lifted her daughter to a little ledge on the wall, and father hoisted Frank onto his own broad shoulder.

Frank and Hilda were still close together, and could see the swaying people just below them.

"Oh, look!" cried Hilda. "Look at that little girl between two big men. She'll get hurt!"

Frank looked down. A small child, in the peasant dress of the locality, was wedged between two men, porters, both fighting their way to the bulletin board.

"Daddy!" Frank touched his father's face. "Do look at that little girl near your feet."

To look with father was to act, as Frank knew. In a minute, Mr. Gray had handed his son to his wife, and picked up the little girl, just as she fell. Not a moment too soon!

She muttered some words of thanks, very softly, and then began to cry.

"She's hungry," said Frank. "Mother, can't she have a bun?"

GOD HEARS PRAYER.

As a boy I remember reading one of my father's books entitled "Touching Incidents and Remarkable Answers to Prayer." Little of it has remained with me but the title. There is a prayer-hearing God watching over us. Recently I have had experience in a matter where God's remarkable answer to prayer is to me very evident. I have thought my telling it might help some one else, so pardon my telling it and all the references to various persons which must be made in order to help you appreciate the situation.

The matter I refer to has to do with the employment of Mr. Carl G. Soderbom of Hsuanhuafu as a missionary of the W. F. M. S. at Kalgan. The facts concerning the action of the Executive Committee at home are mostly drawn from a letter by Mrs. L. B. Hull of that committee. It makes so manifest the hand of God in a matter where I already felt that God had answered that I have been deeply affected by it.

Some months ago a friend told me that Mr. Soderbom of Hsuanhuafu, the mission station nearest to us, was on the point of leaving mission work and going into secular work. His reasons for so doing were because of his insufficient salary, the necessity of educating his boys, and the fact that their society desired to give up work in the province of Chihli and confine themselves to work in Shansi province. Mr. and Mrs. Soderbom had worked at Hsuanhua for eighteen years and could not easily leave their children in Christ Jesus at that place. The friend suggested to me that as our society was needing more workers we might consider employing Mr. Soderbom and so save him to mission work. I at once thought favorably of the suggestion and got into communication with him. I need not refer to many things in our previous conversations when neither of us had any thoughts of such a thing that prepared the way for us. We had in work before been led to see each other face to face and discuss some of the deepest problems of the mission field. God had prepared us for each other.

Gaining his consent I wrote our committee at home. He insisted that I was not to press upon them for favorable action, —that if God wanted it He would provide. So I wrote to the secretary. In a short time I had a nice letter from one of the friends telling me that much as they desired to grant my request and employ Mr. Soderbom they were unable to do so. Then I let the matter drop and in my report to the society last May did not renew the request.

In June I received the report of the action of the Society taken at Greensboro. This was the report of the Committee on Foreign Work and contained no reference to the coming of any missionary to China as do the minutes received later. A week or so later I received a request for further information concerning Mr. Soderbom and supposed in the absence of other recruits the Society was considering employing him. At once I sent a full statement and with references to missionaries in America who knew the Soderboms. But before this letter could reach America Mr. Soderbom wrote me that he had an offer from the agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society at Shanghai to work in their head office. What was to be done? The offer was better financially than any our Society could give him, the work was important Christian work and, moreover, it was uncertain what the final word from home would be. Yet after almost counting on the help of Mr. and Mrs. Soderbom, it did not seem right that the work here should suffer so. There was but one way open and that was to cable to America.

So on July 20th I cabled the committee. By using a code book I put quite an appeal into four or five words. But alas! the telegraph operator somewhere blundered. One letter wrong made the whole message senseless, and the friend in America never got the Chinese puzzle solved until the mails slowly gave him the clue. Meanwhile there was gloom in China. I had written the Bible Society agent to give us time but he needed a man and must have a speedy reply. Certainly his insistence that Mr. Soderbom was the man he needed—and he knows the missionaries of China as few others do—did not make my anguish of soul at fear of losing a colleague any the less. We prayed for an answer, but none came. Twelve days pass,—no answer and Shanghai must have word. Again we cable. This time a short one in plain English and direct to our friend, the treasurer. She does not know the why of it, but she gets her committee together as we shall see. Meanwhile we wait. Four days more pass. Shanghai must be answered. We had prayed so. There was no answer. How trying to our faith! I cannot hope longer, so I tell Mr. Soderbom that he and his wife must decide whether or not to go to Shanghai. I could offer no hope, but as a brother in Christ only offer to do what I could personally for him, whatever he did. I almost felt like I was delivering a sentence of death, not so much on his hopes as on mine for the work—the work God gave me. It was hard and bitter, yet prayer and lingering faith helped. My ordeal was over. What that good man and his wife said and did I do not know. They later told me they had refused the offer at Shanghai and returned to their work. I went about my tasks and down the country at Yucho, a hundred miles away. Work always gives one relief, even a great mission field carried alone.

But how did God deal with that band of women at home? "The cablegram came—we called together the ladies in the city—and sent to Steubenville for Mrs. Chandler, and Mrs. E. telegraphed to Mrs. Stephens to send her the letter back,"—the copy of my letter written early in July about Mr. Soderbom. "We realized when the cable"—it was of course my second but the first for them—"came that it was a time of great importance and all went prayerfully to that meeting. The letter with one from Mrs. Stephens came during the meeting, and after reading it and knowing the worth of those good people it seemed as if we must send you the cable you so desired immediately. Hard as it may be for you to realize I believe we all wanted it as much as you did. We do know how you will need some one to take your place when the time for the furlough comes"—"and we want to do the best we can by you." But the lack of money as they were expecting to send out Mr. and Mrs. Knox this fall though still lacking the last word from them—the lack of money and other difficulties seemed insurmountable obstacles. "And with our hearts heavy with sorrow for you in your anxiety and our own anxiety over the outcome, we adjourned, having given instruction for instant communication with the Knoxes and Mr. Baer." (Mr. Baer is the man who had generously pledged himself to give the bulk of the Knoxes' salary. I don't know him but would like to. Kalgan people must some day arise and call him blessed.)

"We failed—God withheld them—"however, to instruct any one to write to you because we felt that every day the matter could be decided and we could tell you definitely what had been done. We prayed to God that whatever the crisis there in China might be, that demanded our immediate decision, He would work with us and if it would be for the best of the cause, He would make the way plain for us to have Mr. and Mrs. Soderbom in our employ.

"Then came entirely satisfactory reports from Mr. asd Mrs. Knox and then the wonderful offer of Mr. Baer to pay $400.00 on Mr. Soderbom's salary, and at a called meeting we praised God and sent the cable to you. . . Perhaps the cable reached you too late and Mr. Soderbom had given his word elsewhere; if so, we are grieved for you and yet we believe that if the Lord needed him in that particular place, He would have kept him for you and us." Yes, God kept him.

That cable reached Kalgan all right. I was still in the outstations. My wife says something always happens when I am away. It may only be thieves or a looting and revolt of the soldiers, but something always happens. By that something she means something bad, but I still keep going and leave her alone at times. This time something different happened. Saturday, August 22, the cablegram came. "There was just time," my wife said, "to bundle Helmar, Helen and Martha, my two baby girls, you know, into their clothes and catch the train to Hsuanhuafu." She wanted to see the light on their faces when the Soderboms saw the cable. "Employ Soderbom," it said. Perhaps some such a light was on my face when I entered a carpenter shop—the owner is a Christian—and I got my first letters for eight days and one told me of the cablegram. There was joy then, there was greater joy a couple of days ago when I learned that we are also to have Mr. and Mrs. Knox with us. The deepest joy though is in my heart as I see so clearly the hand of God in it. God is with us. My heart says that some one has learned to pray and oh, Kalgan, that means great things for you. It may be the good women at Pittsburgh blessed with those meetings led by Billy Sunday. It may be we are learning. "Lord, teach us to pray."

When I think that after much prayer and much appeal to the church God is giving Kalgan and the great field round about such workers as the Soderboms with experience and their sweet Christian spirit and the Knoxes with youth and surely Christian zeal and consecration, I could almost say with Simeon of old, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace." It is enough of a task for any man to lay the burden of the hundreds of thousands of the Kalgan field on the heart and consciences of the Methodist Protestant Church. If ever I can do that, it will be enough, for then may the people of this dark region with Simeon say, "For mine eyes have seen thy salvation which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel."

But remember prayer. "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain and it rained not, . . . and he prayed again and the heavens gave rain." "Lord, teach us to pray."

EAGER FOR THE BIBLE.

The following extract from a Prague colporter's report gives a glimpse of an opportunity which the missionaries make the most of:—

"I kept thinking what could be done for the soldiers that I saw everywhere. I decided to apply to the County Commissioner for the right to give away to the soldiers Gospels and Testaments such as I had and could get. I presented the petition; it was granted. I was given permission to distribute the Scriptures freely at the railroad station here, where all trains must wait some time.

"I began. I have had great joy in the work. Lieutenants and common soldiers have received the Word gladly. Gendarmes received the Gospels very gladly. The soldiers stationed here almost to a man were glad to get the Word of God. I sold Bibles. [Sometimes a colporter must work days to sell so many Bibles.—J. S. P.]

"The first night I could not sleep for joy. God had suddenly given me such a sudden and unlooked for opportunity to work.

"And the trains begas to come in with the wounded and captives. The Red Cross Society west through the cars with tea, and I went with them carrying God's Word. Oh, how gladly the wounded held up their hands and begged for a Gospel, and thanked me so heartily! But it pained me so that I did not have any for the Russians and Servians and Hungarians and Poles. Some of the soldiers leaving for the war begged with tears for a Gospel to take with them.

"I wrote to every one who would be likely to have a supply of Gospels and Testaments to send them to me. Packages kept coming in. Some sent tracts and booklets. I distributed everything that I had and all that was sent.

"During the two weeks I distributed 6,000 copies of the Word of God, besides many, many tracts.

"Now I am writing a letter of thanks to the County Commissioner. I hope I can get permission to continue this work. Cannot you get some funds to carry on this work? We have been praying that God would awaken a longing for his Word and our prayers are now answered."—From The Missionary Herald.

THE SHANSI FLOODS.

Rev. Watts O. Pye, writing from Fenchow on August 25, reports the damage and discouragement caused by the floods earlier in the year. He says:—

"As we get information from the different centers of our field which have been cut off from all communication so long, we are able to see more clearly the damage resulting from the heavy rains and floods, both to our own church people and to our chapels, schools and other property. It is proving more serious than we had expected. No buildings were destroyed totally, as is the case with so many of the people in the flooded districts; but many places are more or less damaged or we have had to make smaller or larger contributions towards the task of building embankments for the protection of towns, to keep out the steadily rising water on all sides. One of the serious losses was at an outstation, where some 600 feet of compound wall was completely destroyed. and will have to be rebuilt. The walls of some of the buildings there are also badly damaged, but I think nothing can be done to them.

"At Liu Lin Chen the water rose to a depth of 5 feet all through the chapel and schoolrooms. and was still deeper in the buildings on lower ground. We hope the foundations of these buildings have not been hurt; but as most of them are simply caves in the side of the hill, and with no vestilation save the door in front, it will be long before they are dry enough to be really healthful for use. All the kangs, etc., will have to be repaired before they can be used. All text and reference books in the school library on the four shelves over which the water rose are a total loss, and not a few other things are gone. Fortunately the water came during the night, when no children were there. The teachers who sleep in the compound were only able to escape themselves, and have also lost most of their own personal belongings. In other places walls have given way, and if not fallen are leaning badly and must be brought back into place; and Chinese roofs, soaked through and through have with the moving of walls also sunk and must be replaced.

"This, of course, is only property, but it is a serious thing, for repairs in some cases must be made before the building is safe or usable. The suffering of the people is the thing really sickening. Six families of our church people came yesterday, numbering twesty-seven persons, whose houses are washed away and are without a roof or even a handful to eat. Winter is coming, and how they are to be fed and kept alive I don't see."—Missionary Herald.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

THE POSTAL CARD W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR.

The Annual Conference.—I presume Editor McCulloch will give a full account of the work of our Annual Conference held in Asheville. My home was with Bro. J. W. Barrett and family at No. 9, Cumberland Avenue. Bro. Barrett is one of the most enthusiastic Methodist Protestants I have ever known and Sister Barrett and their daughter, Miss Effie, stand with him in all the work of the church. Bro. Barrett, as delegate, took me to my first work, Buncombe Circuit, and sold me—on time— the good horse I rode over the mountains of Buncombe the first two years of my ministry. From the day I reached Buncombe Circuit for my first pastorate "Jake Barrett" has been my staunch friend and it was a delight to me to be entertained in his pleasant home during the days I was at Conference. On Saturday a. m., feeling that it was my duty to return to my home, Bro. Barrett rose at 4:30 a. m., and gave me coffee with toast light bread, ham etc., and then went with me to Park Square and put me on street car for Biltmore station where at 6:38 I boarded No. 36.

A Wonderful Experience.—I have crossed the Blue Ridge many times; but last Saturday morning was different from all other experiences—I had never crossed before at that hour of the day—the early morning. As we approached the Blue Ridge I sat by a window and gazed with rapture on the wonderful panorama before me; presently the towering peaks began to light up as if a fire was being kindled and in a little while the mountain glowed with a soft light radiant with God's glory. As I sat and gazed with awe and wonder I said to myself, "The fires of God are being kindled in His glorious mountains"— and then I said, "O God, Thou art worthy of all praise and adoration," and I bowed my head and worshiped and prayed "O God, bless our Annual Conference, and may the fire be kindled afresh on the altar of every church." And then as I gazed and wondered still, I said, "I am not surprised that there are sun worshipers in the world." That morning I saw the glory of God in nature as I had never seen it before and I shall ever be a better man and shall feel that God is nearer than ever before. That one hour, while crossing the Ridge with my face to the east, and with the glory of God lighting up the mountains, is worth many times the cost of a trip to western North Carolina.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—Bro. Cecil was with us Tuesday after the second Sunday in October; he delivered a good, helpful sermon to a large congregation. It was good and helpful to us. We are always glad to have our president with us and to hear the good message he brings us: it helps us and makes life worth while. Bro. Edwards filled his regular appointment here, Sunday, preaching a good sermon; there was a large congregation to hear him. Bro. Edwards has preached for us two years. We have learned to love him and want him to be with us in the coming year if the Conference see fit to send him back. Sunday was communion day with us; a good many partook. One of our good members, Mrs. Pair, has been confined to her room for a good while, not able to do any thing. We are hoping and praying for her a speedy recovery.——Mr. Jesse Pittard had the misfortune to lose by fire; his corn crib, buggy shed, hen house and all of his chickens got burned up except one. We hope that he may soon have his buildings up again.

Vannah Shearin, Reporter.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Ct.—The delegate from this work reports our same pastor another year in which we are all well pleased. We have learned to love Bro. Trogdon and family by being with them four years, and every year brings us nearer and dearer to each other, as is the case on every charge where pastor and people work together for the Kingdom of Heaven. If all of our lives were filled with all the enjoyment the whole year through as the Conference week is to both pastors and delegates, life would be easy sailing. But we have to have some thorns among the roses to make the fragrance sweeter. Mr. Hill reported that he never spent a more pleasant week in Conference than at Asheville. While he enjoyed meeting with our former pastors and good people all over the work that he had met before, he was delighted in meeting with several he never had met bfore. He learned to love them all. Many words of praise and thankfulness does he bestow upon Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Havner and children for the kindness shown him and others in their home. They gained a warm place in our hearts by their hospitality that will never be forgotten. God being our helper, let us do a greater work the coming year than ever before. We have elected our new superintendent, also assistant, for the coming year; Mr. W. B. Delk and Ray R. Hill. We hope for a good record the coming year. I love to read reports from both pastors and people all over the work. I wish them all a successful year.

Mrs. C. H. Hill.

Richland Circuit.—If not providentially hindered I expect to fill all the appointments made by Bro. Bowman on this charge for December, beginning at Browers the 1st Sunday at 11 a. m. and Charlotte same day at 3 p. m.

Liberty, N. C. D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Yadkin College Ct.—To the six churches, greeting. At our Annual Conference which adjourned in the M. P. Church in the city of Asheville on Nov. 23, 1914, I was reassigned to this charge for the sixth year. I returned to Lexington Nov. 24 and am on job for another year. This work has steadily grown and is now one of our strongest charges. I am glad to be with this kind people for another year. May we still have the co-operation of each church in extending our Master's Kingdom. Many kindnesses have been shown us each succeeding year. I feel I should make special mention of an act of kindness shown me by the good people of Shiloh. After the brethren had overpaid an increased salary there, I noticed a strange moving among the brethren; in a few minutes the pastor's attention was called and a purse of fifteen dollars was presented by our Brother Surratt to buy the pastor an overcoat This was a gift much appreciated.

Our first quarterly conference will convene at Shiloh on Saturday before 3rd Sunday in December. President Cecil will preach at 11 o'clock, dinner, business of quarterly conference. Bro. Cecil will also remain with me and preach at Shiloh at 11 o'clock on Sunday, W. Lexington Sunday night. Hope we will have as many from each church as can possibly come to hear Bro. Cecil on Saturday, and then you can make arrangements to hear him on Sunday also. We want to make this meeting a kind of Circuit Rally, as Bro. Cecil will hardly get to visit any other churches on this charge.

May the blessings of Heaven be upon our beloved Zion.

H. L. Powell.

Asheville.—Bro. Bates and his wife have gone somewhere. They left soon after the Annual Conference adjourned; they had not returned to-day at 12 o'clock, but we had the pleasure of hearing Bro. C. E. Wilbur preach from the 13th and 14th verses of the third chapter of Philippians. He taught us to forget those things which are behind and press toward the mark for the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. I think we will do better in the future.

We have had the Annual Conference and that was a great help for us. The members of our little band are lifted up. We feel like we had been honored by the Annual Conference coming to Asheville. We are glad of the many hand-shakes and acquaintances and the many things that happened that will cause us to love each other. We are glad the editor of the M. P. Herald was with us. We feel like every family of our membership will take the Herald this next year. We want to thank the members of the Annual Conference for that good collection that you all gave us. We think Bro. Bates and his wife will return very soon; they are resting a little bit—the first rest they have had in twelve months.

J. W. Barrett.

11-29-1914.

Burlington.—Last Sunday was a most pleasant and enjoyable day with the Burlington Sunday school and church. The program was changed for the Sunday-school and preaching service. Because of the Baraca-Philathea conference which was in session in our city, we had several visitors in the Sunday-school and at the eleven o'clock service. The Baraca class was delighted to have Mr. J. M. Stone, of Greensboro, in the class and was fortunate to have him teach the lesson. The Sunday-school was very much pleased with a short but interesting talk from Mr. Stone. The Junior Philathea class was delighted with a talk from Miss Faw, of Winston-Salem. Many others whose names we did not learn, were present. We were very glad indeed to have these visitors in our school. The attendance was 208.

At the 11 o'clock service Rev. W. E. Swain, D. D., of Mebane, preached for us. Dr. Swain used as text "Ask, and it shall be given you." Matt. 7:7. His discourse was very helpful and inspiring. The installation service, which was to have been held at this hour, was postponed until next Sunday.

The writer was delighted with the opportunity of representing the Burlington church in the Annual Conference at Asheville. It was a rare privilege and one that was highly appreciated. We cannot refrain from referring to the ideal manner in which the Asheville people entertained the Conference and their generous hospitality that was lavished upon the visiting ministers and delegates. The Conference was the best and most harmonious that it has been my pleasure to attend. Much praise and credit is due Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Bates for their untiring efforts in providing for the members of Conference.

Miss Ila Stafford, one of our most efficient and faithful Sunday-school teachers, is spending a few weeks in Randolph county, the guest of Rev. W. M. Pike and family. Miss Ila is greatly missed during her absence, as she is always present at every service and business meeting of the church. Few members are as faithful and loyal to the church as Miss Ila.

The first business meeting of the church was held Tuesday night of this week. Reports from various church officers were made. Dr. W. A. Hornaday, the chairman of the new Board of Stewards, made a very encouraging report, stating that our people were taking hold of the envelope system which has been adopted by the church. Much interest is being manifested in the new system by the church officials, and the finances of the church promise to be conducted on a good basis. Other business of minor importance was transacted. C. B. Way was re-elected reporter to the Herald over his protest. The meeting has been changed from "business meeting" to "church conference." The time for holding the conference was changed from the first to the second Tuesday of each month. The meeting was well attended.

Miss Rosa Williams, who recently had the misfortune of getting her wrist broken, is at her home near Snow Camp, in this county.

We hope to be able to make a better report next week, and thereby make up for the missing quality of this report.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

Giles Chapel, Richland Ct.—Bro. Bowman came to fill his last appointment on the 3rd Sunday before Conference. Only five present; he didn't preach, but read a Psalm and made some comments afterwards. We joined in conversation on church matters for about two hours. Finally Bro. Bowman said he would go home with the writer and get his horse fed as he was determined to drive home that evening; but he didn't need anything as he had eaten a very late breakfast, but asked the writer's advice about it. Of course the writer freely advised that a preacher should make us of all such opportunities. Bro. Bowman took our advise, and we were glad.

About three o'clock Bro. Bowman bade us good-bye, not "farewell," for we expected he would return to the work again. But in a few days the local papers announced that Bro. Bowman had gone to Society. We were astonished at this. We couldn't call to our memory such a place and the minutes of our Conference couldn't enlighten us. And we wondered what it could mean. We had read a great deal about Society, we had heard preachers preach about Society, but we were not satisfied. We have heard of preachers going to other Conferences, but we had never heard of one going to Society before. We couldn't think we had paid him enough to spoil him. When we remembered that we had fallen short a few dollars of the amount promised him we wondered if we would be held responsible for having ruined a good preacher. But we couldn't think Bro. Bowman would quit preaching and go into the Society business. However, we almost wished we

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address had gone to Conference with him, thinking he might take our advice some more, but consoled ourself the best we could in our dilemma. We have heard many good things about the people of Asheville, and personally knowing our president as we do and that he would fearlessly speak out in meetin' for right, then we anxiously awaited the arrival of the Herald, to be enlightened, for we wanted this Society business 'splained and that mighty quick, too. When we got the Herald, we looked hastily for Bro. Bowman and found he had gone to Siler City; then we became reconciled about the society he would keep.

We are sorry to give Bro. Bowman up. We loved him and enjoyed his coming to our home as well as his preaching. Our new pastor, Bro. Highfill, comes to us as a man of experience and well known to some of us older ones, having been pastor of the work several years ago. We join him in his labor and hope for a successful year's work. May the blessing of Almighty God crown the effort pur forth with success. May we be a better people, with more love and more liberality, looking to the thing necessary to make a pastor happy and enjoy his sojourn among us.

PROFESSOR MARTIN HIX HOLT IS DEAD.

After an illness of several months Professor Martin H. Holt, of Oak Ridge, passed from this life to the abundant life beyond. It was on Thanksgiving day that he left his loved ones and friends to mourn their loss while he joined in thanksgiving around God's eternal throne. Professor Holt was born near Oak Ridge January 9, 1855. He was married December 19, 1878, to Miss Mary Lambeth, of Guilford County. To this union were born three children, one dying in infancy. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Lambeth Holt, and his daughter, Mrs. J. T. Bennet, of San Diego, Cal., and his son, John Harvey Holt, of Oak Ridge.

Professor Holt will be greatly missed. The educational interest of North Carolina will miss him. Especially will Oak Ridge Institute, where he spent most of his life and in which he was most interested, miss him. He will be missed also by the Deaf and Dumb School at Morganton. He had served on the Board of Directors of that school from the time it was established until the time of his death, at which time he was president of the board.

While Professor Holt found time for interest in the Deaf and Dumb School at Morganton, and in better government and better citizenship—for he served his state as member of the legislature from Guilford County—still the work that lay nearest to his heart was the work of teaching boys. From early manhood he has taught boys. He was the boy's teacher and the boy's friend. And to-day Professor Holt lives in the lives of ten thousand men of North Carolina and other states who sat at his feet and learned how to become useful men. He is not dead; he has only been transplanted to a higher, fuller, and better life; and his works do follow him in the works of those he has helped and blessed.

The Methodist Protestant church will miss him. His pastor will miss him. There was encouragement in the kindly smile and warm grasp of the hand with which he always greeted his pastor. He stood firmly by the church of his choice; and when the church building burnt and it became necessary to rebuild he was among the most liberal contributors.

His home will miss him. Yes, his home will miss him more than can ever be known. How his dear good wife will miss him. "We have been so happy together all these years and now he has left me" were her words to her pastor the day Professor Holt left her to join in eternal thanksgiving around the throne. And I have been told that Professor Holt never left the house for his school work while roses were in bloom without a rose bud in the lapel of his coat, placed there by his good wife. And when I looked upon his remains a short while before he was placed beneath the ground I saw there in the lapel of his coat the last rose bud she will ever place there in this life.

May He who wept with Mary and Martha at the tomb of their brother bless and comfort the bereaved wife and son and daughter, and all loved ones until that day when they shall all again join with Professor Holt in the land where flowers do not fade, where pain and sorrow find no place, and where loved ones part no more. We grieve; that is human, but we would grieve less if we would only remember that the angels of grief are often God's angels of mercy.

"With silence only as their benediction,
God's angels come
Where, in the shadow of a great affliction,
The soul sits dumb!
Yet, would I say what thy own heart approveth!
Our Father's will,
Calling to Him the dear one whom He loveth,
Is mercy still.
Not upon thee or thine the solemn angel
Hath evil wrought;
The funeral anthem is a glad evangel—
The good die not!
God calls our loved ones, but we lose not wholly
What He hath given;
They live on earth, in thought and deed, as truly
As in heaven."

Linley W. Gerringer, Pastor.

Smith.—Again a gloom of sadness has fallen over our church and community by the sudden death of one of our young members, Robert Irven Smith. He was born December 28, 1893, and died Nov. 22, 1914. On the morning of Nov. 22, he took his gun and went out for a little hunt. It was while punching in a hollow tree that his gun accidentally went off, the effects of which resulted in his death a few hours later. He was hurried to St. Leo Hospital and every thing that skilled physicians could do to relieve his suffering was done. But God said, "It is enough: come up higher," and Irven fell asleep in Jesus.

A few years ago he made a profession of religion and joined Sandy Ridge church where he remained a member until his death. But there are so many snares and temptations of to-day to lead our young men astray, and it seems that he had fallen into some of these. But after the accident occurred, he began praying and prayed without ceasing until he felt that the Lord had forgiven his sins. Then he called his mother to the bedside and told her that he was ready to go. What a great consolation this must be to the bereaved family, which consists of father, mother, one brother and sister, grandfather and grandmother, with a host of other relatives and friends. Irven was always considered one of Sandy Ridge's nicest young men, and was liked by all who knew him. Burial services were conducted by his former pastor, Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk and members of the Junior order of which he was a member. The remains were then laid to rest and loved ones covered his grave with beautiful flowers. To the bereaved ones we extend our sympathy, but this we know cannot heal the wound made by his death, but in Christ there is consolation. Through Him we look beyond the cold damp tomb to that glorious resurrection morn when we shall rise from the grave and meet our loved ones to part no more. A Friend.

(Begun on page five.)

"I have given two away to hungry children," said Aunt Carry. "I think we must keep these."

Frank was silent for a minute. The tears of the little girl continued to flow. Frank knew he was to have another bun, even if two had been given away. But he was very hungry! He certainly wanted that bun himself! Then he looked at the pitiful little face.

"We could give her half each," suggested Hilda, who had understood.

"Yes, mother," he touched his mother's arm. "May Hilda and I have our next bun?"

Father and Aunt Carry were talking very hard. Mother took two buns from the bag Aunt Carry held, and gave the children one each.

"I'll give her mine." Frank did so as he spoke. "No, you keep yours, Hilda."

"No, no, she's to have half of mine," insisted his little cousin, and broke her own. So Frank's self-sacrifice was confined to his taking the smaller half!

The porters, meanwhile, had forced their way to the board and put up a notice. It was to the effect that the next train would start in half an hour, from another part of the platform.

As soon as those about the bulletin board understood this, they turned about to march to that place! But the news flew through the crowd, and those who were on the outside of it, who had seemed the farthest from any chance of reaching the train, now rejoiced, for they were the nearest.

"My child!"

A third porter spoke, and seized the little girl, who was eating her bun. He asked for an explanation of her position, but she began chattering gayly.

"Look at that mass of people," cried Aunt Carry, in despair. "We shall never get through them. We cannot make this train!"

"But look at the board—that is worse!" said mother. "It's the last train to-night!"

"We shall not even make the boat—we shall lose our passages." Aunt Carry looked very pale. "Oh, Robert! Try to force a way through."

But father—who was also Robert—shook his head.

"Too many women and children," he said. "A man—an American—can't push through them. We must wait."

"But to wait is terrible!" Aunt Carry seemed ready to cry. "With our passage taken, if only we can reach the dock."

A little hand touched Mr. Gray's face, just as Robert's had done, a while ago. He turned. Close to him stood the porter, the child in his arms.

"You pick up my child—he"—the porter looked at Frank—"feed her. Come this way."

He led them round a corner, through some offices, and out at another door. There stood the train, with people—oh, so many!—crowding into it.

"There won't be any room," said mother, who was following father, with Frank in his arms, and holding on to Hilda's hand—Hilda, perched up high in Aunt Carry's arms. "See, they are like—like bees on a milk pail."

But the porter led them to the baggage car, and helped them up. The little girl was smiling at Frank and Hilda.

Just as they stood safe, at least, on the train, an officer came up. He ordered them to get down, and spoke very angrily to the porter, who looked extremely frightened.

"Oh, what does he say?" cried mother to Aunt Carry.

Aunt Carry translated.

"He says the porter is off duty, and has no business in the depot at this hour. He accuses the porter of taking a bribe," she said.

But the porter began to talk fast and pleadingly. The little girl went on calmly eating the bun!

"Please say what he says, Aunt Carry," begged Frank.

"He is telling that the little girl went into the depot to look for him, and might have been killed but for your father," Aunt Carry interpreted. "And he seems pleased, too, about the bun."

The officer began to look less stern. He glanced at the child almost tenderly. Perhaps he had children of his own. He turned and spoke to Mr. Gray, but Aunt Carry interpreted again.

"Have you given money to this man?"

"No, sir, no."

"Nothing but this bun?"

"Nothing."

"Who gave the bun?"

"I did!" cried Frank, eagerly, thinking that giving it might get the giver into trouble, and always ready to take his share of the blame. "She looked hungry."

Aunt Carry also translated this, and then the officer's smile became a laugh. He climbed up into the baggage car, examined the passports, scrawled something on them, and then again said, "Descend."

They descended. He led them to a special car and put them in. Then a signal was given. He stepped back. The train started off.

As Frank looked from the window, the little girl waved her hand at him. She had finished the bun, but one currant was near her mouth. It fell off as she smiled, and Frank and Hilda laughed.

"A lucky bun for us," said Father. "I'm glad you gave it, Frank."

"I'm glad," mother added, "that you did, Frank. That is the way to go through life—helping where you can."—Frances Harmer, in Zion's Herald.

THE JAPANESE WOMAN OF TOMORROW.

Miss Hide Ijuin, Kobe, Japan.

(Miss Ijuin is one of the Japanese teachers in Kobe College. She has studied in the United States and prepared this article in the English language.)

"Woman, though her birth be humble, may yet live in splendor," is a well-known saying among the Japanese, and used to be the only comfort to mothers who had a daughter in the family, for the birth of a girl was always considered a burden or a torture to the family. Never has her birth been really a subject for congratulation among the Japanese. In fact, it was rather a disgrace to have many girls in the family, and very often when there was such an arrival, no intelligence was sent either to the relatives or the friends. Even at this civilized age of the twentieth century, there are many families which conscientiously neglect to inform their friends of the coming of a girl.

Because she was considered low and contemptible, she has never been permitted to asociate socially with boys. Even when she grew older, she was very seldom introduced into society. It might be fairer to say that she never was. And there was no need of her going out, for all the pleasures of the seasons and entertainments which were allowed her brothers had never been dreamed of as something that could be enjoyed by her. So she stayed at home and helped her mother.

This contempt for woman has undoubtedly come from the customs surviving from the constant wars in which women took no conspicuous part. But the principal cause was the teachings of Confucianism.

Most of the fruits of civilization which appeared in Asia were carried into Japan, and the Buddhism which had lost its power in its own country—India—also came to Japan and sprouted even in new forms of religion, such as "Nichiren" and "Shinshu," and these sects harmonized with the national life of the Japanese, and for hundreds of years this Buddhism controlled the faith of the nation. The teachings of Confucianism and Mencianism, which were considered merely the visionary views of scholars and book-lovers, when they had come to Japan, were adopted as the most important rules of morality of the nation, and all the ethical teachings were modeled from first to last from them.

Japan, from her national characteristics, had woven a characteristic civilization, adopting Buddhism as her warp and Confucianism as her woof. Here was "Bushido" or the morals of Chivalry; here was the belief of the common people.

Woman was thought of as a lower being, for Confucianism not only set up a distinction in morality between men and women, but asserted that woman is inferior to man radically and intuitively. From this point of view, many instructions or rules were laid down for her. Thus the fate of woman, not only in Japan but in all the other eastern countries, has been fixed by this dogmatic judgment. She was enslaved by these teachings of Buddhism and Confucianism. Whether in the society of knight or of the common people, the woman was really in a pitiable situation.

Japan from her earliest days was, by no means, without some renowned literary women and women of noble character, but woman's education was always thought of as useless, and her chief mission in life was household management. So she was excluded from all the privileges of the world, and yet she was by no means a poor craftsman. She had a pretty fair education of the hand and a pretty fair knowledge of technique. She was encouraged to undertake every household affair; she learned spinning, silk-worm raising, weaving and sewing, besides elaborate cookery. Though she had never been to school to learn these household affairs as we do in these days at different schools, she could not help acquiring a knowledge of this working world in some way or other, for she had actually lived in it. In early Japanese life there was hardly a home in which the girl did not receive a large number of technical courses, in which the woman was always teaching by doing and the girl was always learning by imitating. In her youth she learned it with her mother, and after she married, with her mother-in-law, and in her old age she taught her daughters and granddaughters, and all this made her a skilful craftsman. Thus every house was a factory.

But the age in which the training of a girl only in these household affairs sufficed for the demands of society, has passed away. And society is no longer satisfied by sending only her son to school, but must send her daughter, too; she, too, must have five years of high school; she, too, wishes to make a specialty of some subject besides her six years in the elementary school and five years in high school. But why should she not have those eleven years of schooling when her brother spends three or more years in the university? But she is a girl, you say. Yes, but what if anything should happen to her brother who is to support the family? What if he should fail to discharge his great responsibility? What if her husband should suddenly be overtaken by misfortune and the support of the family should fall upon her? Is it not wiser for her to prepare herself for these emergencies? Would she not feel safer when a storm rages against her?

Japan, which has neither departed from her peculiar civilization of the East, nor established herself fully among the western civilizations, must suffer woman in this complicated society to make circumstances to suit herself—circumstances that shall be favorable, not only to herself, but also to the cause of humanity. For the world of woman, which had been very limited, has now enlarged its surroundings to include the whole world. Here woman's edhcation has come to be advocated, and the woman whose only mission was believed to be child-bearing, has passed away and the age of her exertion as her husband's fellow-worker has arrived: and in order to do that thoroughly she must have a fair understanding of her husband's occupation; she must have skill in social intercourse with her husband's colleagues and friends; she must have ability to look after the family—all in this world of rapid progress.

In Japan, as well as in all other civilized nations, the introduction of machines deprives woman of many private occupations. She is now obliged to go down town to get everything—actually everything—from the hairpins on her head even to the stockings on her feet.

When the writer was a little girl, her mother and grandmother used to make cords with which to tie up ladies' hair, and it felt very comfortable, but lately, we do not use them any more; instead, we do up our hair with those abominable horse-shoe shaped bits of cellulose called hairpins, which often stand straight on our heads, and half a dozen of them sometimes fight with their legs on the top of our heads, so that sometimes we wonder if a porcupine feels in the same way with the long needles on his body.

When the writer first went to school, about twenty-five years ago, the first lesson she had with her sewing teacher, was how to make or to sew her "tabi" (stockings). O! how hard she cried over it, for it was a difficult lesson. Everybody would admit now that tabi-making needs an expert—no wonder that she cried. She also remembers how she was taught weaving and how she made her own school dress; but before she learned the weaving of silk cloth, her family began to take so much interest in girls' education that she was obliged to leave all her handwork. Because of that great interest in education in her family, she was encouraged to make use of every possible opportunity that could be desired by any Japanese girl, but which to many of them is denied. She has enjoyed those precious privileges thoroughly, and is grateful for them now.

When every technical task is transferred from homes to factories, the girl herself is saved from many troubles, but that means an extra expense to her father. In other words, she is in one way or other, constantly tormenting her father in order to get all her needs supplied. She does not mean to ask for any luxury, but how can she help worrying her father when the cost of living has lately increased so tremendously?

In her late wars with China and Russia, Japan has joined the ranks of the other Great Powers, and has been improving with very great strides, politically, educationally, and socially, but with the tremendous sacrifice of one kind or another on the part of the nation; yes, a tremendous sacrifice; for to live up to her reputation with the other first-class powers, her standard in society, in the market, in education, in fact, in everything, must be raised. And as a result, Japan has doubled the prices of eatables; nay, she has trebled them; her other expenses, such as house rent and clothing, are still more astounding.

In looking at the statistics in England, we find that she went up merely one per cent. in prices within the last ten years, and even America less than two per cent. Moreover, in these countries the workmen's wages have greatly increased with the going up of the the living expenses and the increasing rates have nearly been equalized. We admit that it is a necessary fact that with the national progress, living becomes more and more difficult. But in Japan the rate of increase in wages is far behind the rise in living expenses; this tremendous increase in the cost of living within the last five years in Japan has found no equal in the history of the world.—Mission Studies.

—In the recent religious census of Nashville, taken by fifteen hundred workers under the direction of Mr. Arthur Flake, there were 60,000 names listed. We had been accustomed to think of Nashville as a Methodist city—the Methodist Jerusalem. It seems, however, that it is a Baptist city, at least counting all those with Baptist predilections and not simply members of churches. Evidently, though, there must be a good many trunk Baptists in Nashville, for, out of the 20,000 names, there are less than 5,000 members of Baptist churches. Where are the others?—Baptist Messenger.

—Those Methodist Protestant ministers who have been made miserable by their failure to induce all resident Methodist Protestants to join their churches may, on the principle that misery loves company, find some comfort in the above statement that there are more than 15,000 Baptists in Nashville who have not placed their membership in the churches there.

It will be remembered that Friedmann came from Germany with his agent, claiming to have discovered a turtle serum, which was a cure for tuberculosis. He treated some persons in New York who claimed to be cured, but fought shy of any real investigation by physicians, although medical societies offered him every opportunity. The government health department, at Washington, undertook a long investigation to see if the methods had any merit and found them worthless. In a few cases there was an improvement in the condition of the patient, which was perhaps due to hope on his part. But in about one-fourth of the cases treated the result was injurious, ulcers being developed with no benefit. The 'cure' must be set down among the many fakes."

THE CRY OF THE TIMES TO THE CHURCHES.

What is happening in Christendom today should startle every Christian into thoughtfulness. How is it possible for such things to happen in even a nominally Christian land? Things in which the actors are professedly Christian people. Yes, things undertaken with a prayer to the holy Christ for His sanction and help. The war in Europe is so antagonistic to the spirit of Christ that its occurrence was not thought possible a year or two ago. But it has come in all its dreadful criminality and cruelty and other monstrous iniquities, such as the white slave trade and the trade in liquor and deadly cigarettes, are lifting up their heads in Christian lands. These things are a challenge to Christian people of every denomination throughout the world. Conditions prove that the Christian church has a mighty work to do in stemming the tide of evil. In many cases the church must do its first work over again and do it more carefully. There has not always been care enough to distinguish Christianity from its counterfeits. The church has been too easy going. In its eagerness to grow larger it has not had due regard to the character of the materials added to its membership. It has been satisfied with too little evidence of piety. It has not hewn to the line. It has permitted worldliness to encroach upon it.

The times are calling for a new assertion of Christianity—an expression so pure and so strong and so sane that its contrast with and superiority to all competitors will be evident The church is to be the light of the world, but it has allowed its light to burn dim. It needs to trim its lamps and replenish them with the oil of divine grace. In every country, in every city, in every locality, the call of the times may be heard, addressing itself to all who have named the name of Christ and urging upon them that they depart from iniquity, that they put on the whole armor of God, and fight valiantly for the triumph of true Christianity. To arms! To arms! Satan and all the hosts of evil are to be vanquished with the weapons that God has provided, and Christ is to be enthroned and worshiped in every land and by every soul. We cannot be too earnest. Our labors cannot be too abundant. The zeal of God should consume us. The issues at stake are far greater than those for which all Europe in arms contends today. May God help every Christian to see his part and do his duty in this critical and decisive hour.

—We are glad to print an article from Bro. S. R. Harris on Public Prayer. He says some things that perhaps others have thought but never said. It is an important subject and we are glad Bro. Harris has called the attention of all who lead in public prayer to the matter. What is wanted is real prayer and not mere formal praying. The appropriate prayer will of course vary with the occasion. Even the Lord's Prayer was not given to be used on all occasions, as our Lord showed by His own example. The length of the prayer, too, will vary with the occasion. Prayers may be too short as well as too long. Praying to occupy time is an abomination to God and man. Bro. Harris mentions several kinds of objectionable prayers, among them a prayer made up of old prayer phrases. This is bad enough, at best, but it becomes intolerable when the leader blunders through the phrases, substituting outlandish words not found in the dictionary similar in sound. Prayer book prayers are used by some, but it is a poor practice. We are reminded of a story told of the late Rev. E. A. Plyler. It was in a revival meeting and the altar was filled with earnest seekers after peace with God. A brother was called on to lead in prayer, and responded with a rambling effort in which he prayed for the kings and presidents and governors and all in places of authority. He at length concluded, and when he did Bro. Plyler was upon his feet in a moment and said in his emphatic manner: "Such prayers as that will kill any meeting." Then turning to a good old brother he said, "Brother Jones, you come forwad here and pray for these poor penitents."

A CHINESE ANDREW AND HIS VILLAGE CHURCH.

Brief mention is made of Andrew's name in the Scriptures. Yet in one little sentence of six words, "And he brought him to Jesus," we have the record of a work done by him which forms a link that has well nigh encircled the globe.

Some one has said if Peter can be called the father of the three thousand converts at Pentecost, Andrew can be called their grandfather, for he enjoys the enviable distinction of leading the great Pentecostal preacher to Christ. His name, however, is not usually associated with the famous great, but with the humble and obscure who are hidden away from the world's view.

Wu Kam Kwong is the name of another Andrew, who lives in an obscure village in China, near Siu Lam. He is a simple tiller of the soil, working side by side with his villagers in the great struggle for existence in a land of poverty. After hearing the gospel for some time with more or less interest in the message, he one day happened into our chapel and heard the preacher preaching from the text, "Now is the accepted time." The words gripped him and brought him to immediate decision for Christ.

Returning to his village, he, Andrew-like, told others of his new-found Savior. Some scoffed, a few scolded, and others persecuted, but he continued his testimony until today we can look at fourteen young men, and of each one say, "And he brought him to Jesus." After winning the first five or six, he concluded their village should have a preaching chapel. How could they obtain this? The mission could make no promise of help. They themselves were poor, very poor. What could they do? They could do one thing which all faithful Christians should do—deny themselves. This they did. After collecting about two-thirds the amount needed for renting a chapel, some of the Siu Lam brethren helped with the remainder.

A small building was rented, seated, lighted, and furnished with Bibles and hymn-books. After returning from the field each evening, this faithful witness calls his villagers together in the little chapel, where they sing, pray, and read the Bible, after which the leader gives a brief exposition of the Word. The singing may not always have a tune, but the spirit of praise is there, coming from sincere hearts, which makes it acceptable to God.

The exposition of the Scriptures, too, is necessarily not very profound. The leader had had no special training beyond what he has learned from the preaching services at Siu Lam. But, like the blind man, he can say, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." And the people are convinced of this, for they have the daily witness before their eyes of a changed life. They behold a man who like themselves once bowed to wooden gods, cheated his neighbors, lied, gambled, swore, and stole, now worshiping the true and living God, with a clean, honest life.

They are sometimes disposed to depreciate or reject the message of the gospel, but here is the power of a saved life turned loose on them which they can neither gainsay nor resist. So, when this man "points to Christ's redeeming blood and cries, 'Behold, the way to God,'" there is a power in his words that commands attention.

There is this remarkable thing, too, about his candidates for baptism: up to the present there have been fifteen, only one of whom has been refused. These candidates have not only a knowledge of the way of salvation, but a clear testimony of the power of salvation. Their lives substantiate this, as a few instances will indicate.

A short time ago one of this man's converts came to me for spiritual advice. His uncle had died, leaving possessions worth over a thousand dollars, with no heir. According to Chinese custom, this young man, by buying water from the gods to wash the corpse, and the performance of a few other heathen rites, would become the legal heir. A thousand dollars would naturally look big to a poor, struggling young laborer. His father, too, had commanded him to observe the custom. To refuse would expose him to the charge of being unfilial, and to the ridicule of friends. It was a trying position; but like the three Hebrew children, he could say, "I am not careful to answer thee in this matter." His heart was fixed, trusting in the Lord. "Be true" meant more to him than money or friends. He could not deny his Lord.

When the father saw that his son was determined to be true to Christ in this matter, he relented and did not require him to take any part in the heathen rites. This was due no doubt to answered prayer. "Truly the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations."

Some time ago I preached a rather strong sermon on concealed sin. One of this man's converts was present. The next day in prayer-meeting he broke down and wept bitterly. With tears streaming down his face and his strong frame shaking with emotion, he confessed publicly his concealed sin. He had yielded to the influence of relatives and worshiped idols This confession may not seem to be anything remarkable to an American reader, but if you lived in South China you would know how rare it is to see a man weep for his sins or confess publicly. Nothing but a real work of the Spirit and genuine repentance would produce this.

Perhaps one of the most gratifying things is the progress this little church is making toward self-support. Last year the Siu Lam brethren helped them some with their rent. This year they are paying all the rent and current expenses themselves. Their gifts per member average about three times as much as the Siu Lam church, which has been established over ten years.

Last Sunday I again visited this little company and administered the communion. It was a sight that must have rejoiced the heart of our Master as this faithful witness carried the holy emblems to his little flock, who with bowed heads and prayerful hearts remembered the Lord's death in the presence of many fellow-villagers. To each one of the flock he might have said with Paul: "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? For ye are our glory and joy."

It is such fruit that gladdens the heart of the missionary and makes him feel that it is worth while to be in China, forasmuch as he knows his labor is not in vain in the Lord.—Woman's Evangel.

CHRISTMAS.

With carols glad and swelling hymns of praise
We celebrate anew that wondrous birth
At which the angel choir sang "Peace on earth,
Good will to men," and shepherds stilled their lays.
Upon a manger fell the Star's bright rays,
And there,' mid scenes of poverty and dearth,
The Orient laid its gifts of royal worth,
While joy unbroken mingled with amaze.

Ne'er can the lapsing centuries obscure
The lustre of that blessed natal morn
When Christ and hope were given to the race.
Then rang the knell of bondage for the poor,
And man, though clad in rags and held in scorn,
Achieves the heights or crosses trackless space.

KEEPING CHRISTMAS.

It is a good thing to observe Christmas Day. The mere marking of times and seasons when men agree to stop work and make merry together is a wise and wholesome custom. It helps one to feel the supremacy of the common life over the individual life. It reminds a man to set his little watch now and then, by the great clock of humanity.

But there is a better thing than observing Christmas Day, and that is keeping Christmas. Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people and to remember what other peple have done for you; to ignore what the world owes you and to think what you owe the world; to put yoor rights in the background, your duties in the middle distance, and your chances to do a little more than your duty in the foreground; to see that your fellowmen are just as real as you are, and try to look behind their faces to their hearts hungry for joy; to own that probably the only good reason for your existence is not what you are going to get out of life, but what you are going to give to life; to close your book of complaints against the management of the universe and look around for a place where you can sow a few seeds of happiness? Are you willing to do these things for even a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of those who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to bear in mind the things that our people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want without waiting for you to tell them; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open? Are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to believe that love is the strongest thing in the world—stronger than hate, stronger than evil, stronger than death—and that the blessed life that began in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago is the image and brightness of the Eternal Love? Then you can keep Christmas. And if you can keep it for a day, why not always? But you cannot keep it alone.—Henry Van Dyke.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

"There are many of us older persons, far too many in fact, who believe that Santa Claus is a myth; that there is no such person, and it may be true that there is no such person, but it is quite true that Santa Claus personified to our childish hearts some very real facts, facts that ought to be real to us if we live to be a hundred. Let us agree then that Santa Claus is a spirit, the spirit of Christmas. And he is jolly and joyous and loving spirit, never a frown on his brow, because he apparently never received anything in return for all his gifts. But he always does get something back, as every one will who gives in the spirit of Christmas; and if we do not give in that spirit we will surely be disappointed in the returns.

The spirit of Christmas always remembers that the "gift without the giver is bare." But if the gift is given of love, then the returns are just as sure as anything can be, even if they do not come in a material form.

Christmas itself commemorates the fact that a gift was offered to all humanity that all humanity cannot repay in kind, or in equivalent, except to accept that gift in the spirit of the Giver, love; and the perfection of that Gift was that He gave Himself. And so may that spirit of Christmas be born in our hearts, that shall endure not for a season, but for all time that is allotted to us, and for all eternity. —Selected.

ARE BAPTISTS PROTESTANTS?

The question proposed has two answers, both yes and no. The answer yes contradicts the facts of history and yet it is true in the usage of language in present day terms when their status in history has been made clear.,

Protestantism arose in the year 1529—April 19—with Martin Luther who was irreconcilable to the Baptist position and whose protests were solemnly aimed at the Roman pontiff alone and the Reformation began within the Roman hierarchy for the purpose of reforming the Church so-called. The Baptists then and always protested but stood without and aloof from all human liturgies. Luther and the reformers accepted the Baptist position only in part, adopting the sufficiency of the Bible as his guide in the doctrines of justification. individual responsibility and freedom of conscience. The Baptist of his time, and always since, held fast to personal faith before baptism and to baptism on a public profession of faith before church membership and allows greater latitude in other doctrinal respects. They obeyed the civil magistrate but disputed the claims he made to episcopal and papal power and always stood for religious liberty and the personal right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. conforming himself to the Lord Jesus Christ, the Great Head of the church and answerable to Him alone. These tenets of doctrine have stood from the days of John the Baptist and wherever you find them you may safely say that those holding them were Baptist in doctrine if not in name.

In the second place, no, for the reason that Baptists never had their origin within the so-called Romish Church nor in the Lutheran nor in the English nor in the Swiss neither in the Scottish, but had their origin in a remote antiquity. The early Baptists in North Carolina together with the Quakers are always spoken of in Hawkes' History and in the letters of the Episcopal clergymen as Dissenters, and Nonconformists to the Episcopal rituals. When the war of the Revolution came to an end and the Protestant Episcopal body was organized in 1784 the position of the Baptists of America was accepted and the word Protestant came into use, but this does not imply that the full Baptist position regarding a New Testament Church was accepted. It was simply a rearrangement of the Protestant Rituals to the prevailing peace and national polity which prevailed at the close of the American war with Great Britain.

No, the Baptists, properly speaking, are not Protestants, but as Dissenters they are the winners of the great victory of conscience over oppression. Others enjoy the fruits of their victory and all by the charity of language are now spoken of as Protestants, but the Baptists are not protestants. W. H. Eller.

"Thou hast bravely done thy part,
Noble mind and tender heart.
Sown, that other hands might reap,
Watched, that other eyes might sleep.
And, whatever cares oppressed,
Toiled, that others might have rest.
Sorrow bore a passport free
To thy ready charity.
Angels have recorded true
Kindly deeds no mortal knew."

PUBLIC PRAYER.

I wonder if public prayer is helpful to the ordinary worshiper. Not whether it might not be; but whether the kind we hear ordinarily is helpful is a serious question. I sometimes hear a prayer that is all prayer and not an address to the congregation, and such are usually short and incline one to worship. But the speeches that are made sometimes ten or fifteen minutes long punctuated with gestures and beating with the fists and clapping of the hands do not help me. I heard a preacher sometime ago "address a congregation in prayer" and after I began to wonder how long he would keep it up I looked at my watch and found that he actually spoke fifteen minutes more. Of course that was very extraordinary, but so long as possibilities of that kind are hanging around we do not know what to expect. I think that prayers should be so direct and so short that people would not dread them. I have come to an age that a preacher can't fool me by requesting everybody to kneel. I have risked it too many times and nine times in ten I get mad and wish that I had made myself comfortable in body while I was supposed to listen to the harangue. The prayers that have appealed to me most have not been over two minutes long. I have never heard one five minutes long that did not seem sacrilegious.

I do not think a prayer should be a discourse on prayer, nor a sermonette on the text of the day, nor a repetition of all the old prayer phrases that we ever heard, nor even a string of Bible quotations. Precatory oratory disgusts me and I cannot help it. Praying in the past tense potential mood disgusts me too. I acknowledge my absolute inability to give a sample of a proper prayer, but I do know it should pertain to the present and to conditions which are immanent and to things in which we are interested. I cannot bear to hear a fellow start off by saying 'we prostrate ourselves before Thee on the bended knees of our sinful bodies" etc. In my private devotions I kneel and I feel like it is the only proper attitude for me; and yet I never think of such a thing in church except to avoid it. Some people begin their public prayers with an attempt to describe the Infinite God when they ought to know that the more they try, the more they fail, as if they could set bounds to the boundless.

I write this in no spirit of criticism but hoping that the services of the sanctuary may be made more helpful. I wish to state also that there is no personal allusion to any one preacher or layman who will probably read this and yet I would very much regret it if any one should disregard it for that reason. S. R. Harris.

CHRISTMAS REMEMBRANCE FOR THE CHILDREN IN THE CHILDREN'S HOME.

The joy of Christmas giving is in giving to those who need. Will not every boy and girl in the Methodist Protestant Church send something to the children in the Children's Home? They will be glad to have you think of them. Suppose we all make this a Box Christmas for the Children's Home. The names and ages of the children in the Home will be found below. Let each one have something from every circuit. It would be a good plan to have wooden boxes at the church and let all boxes be sent there. Anything will be acceptable. The girls like things just like all girls like and the boys are real boys, too. Mr. and Mrs. Garrett will be glad to see boxes of sweet and Irish potatoes, apples, canned goods, &c. Instead of having this a receiving Christmas, let's join in making it a giving Christmas.. One church last year had stockings made of red calico, each stocking had one child's name on it. They were given out to persons who gladly filled them. This plan can be used with the boxes. Fix your boxes up early and have them ready for either one of the following:—

Boys.—Clell Clouse, (age) 17; LeRoy Sikes, 15; R. Hall Brown, 13; Colon Haltom, 13; Herbert Haltom, 11; Adam Shoe, 11; Glenn Newel, 9; Billie Shoe, 9; Bynum Phillips, 8; Boney Tweed, 8; Clyde Brown, 8; Willie Upton, 7; Odell Sykes, 5; Hobart Brown, 4; Robert Brown, 4; Palmer Phillips, 4.

Girls.—Bess Morris, 16; Bessie Clouse, 15; Ethel Brown, 15; Robbie Clouse, 14; Carrie Newell, 12; May Sykes, 11; Esther Tarkington, 11; Bertha Brown, 10; Pauline Haltom, 9; Emma Upton, 8; Lucy Tweed, 6; Dorothy Haltom, 6.

Will the ministers and Sunday-school teachers not make above announcement and aid in this undertaking?

R. C. Stubbins' little daughter sent us her pet hen. She is very much interested in our children.

Did you ever think what little things mean? Look at the contributions from the sale of corn. Mrs. W. H. Gaither gave these children 100 grains of corn each and the result shows $4.05 from their labor and the little effort that she made.

Though the days have been dreary many of our friends have sent sunshine and cheer into the Home. Have you ever thought of what you might do to help those who have been more unfortunate than you? If you haven't, sit down and think prayerfully, and I believe you will be moved to act. If you can't decide just what would be best, write the Superintendent who will be glad to assist you. Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Pickett contributed $75 of the amount reported from High Point with the understanding that it was to furnish a room in the Home. This is the second room taken by High Point people within the last ten days. Only one more room needs to be provided for. What individual, church or circuit will take that one? It would be a fitting memorial to some friend or member of your family. Or if you prefer, you could make a Christmas gift to the Home, which would be appropriate as it is a room wherelittle ones sleep and slumber while angels hover o'er them. H. A. Garrett.

A STRIKING ILLUSTRATION OF THE IMPORTANCE OF ORPHANAGES.

A young man just blooming into manhood was tried in the United States Court here this week, which shows the importance of the work our Children's Home is doing in caring for the homeless children. The parents of this young man lived in Baltimore and his mother died when he was four years old. His father turned him over to some irresponsible people, and when he was about twelve years old he left Baltimore and drifted from place to place, first to Virginia, from there to Washington City, back to Baltimore, from there to Canada and from there to North Carolina, winding up by being indicted here for forging checks. The young man went on the witness stand and gave a full statement of the facts in his case. Every one present was impressed with the frankness of the boy in giving an account of his checkered career. During the entire trial I was thinking of our Children's Home. This boy is one of the brightest boys I have ever seen on the witness stand, and I have been a court official twenty years. If this boy could have been placed in an institution such as our Children's Home no doubt he would have made a great man. I wish every member of our church could have been present at this trial and if they had and had been impressed as I was I am sure none of our churches would fail to take the Thank offering which I have requested them to take between now and Christmas, and I am quite sure the collection would be many times what it will be. We have some bright boys in the Home, and if all we do is to save one of them from a life like the one I have related I am sure our efforts will not be in vain. And when we can believe that every boy that is brought up at the Home will make a good citizen we should be willing to make any sacrifice in our power for its support.

PASTORAL CHANGES.

After traveling in the last few weeks more than 2,200 miles, seeing life as I have scarcely ever seen it before; witnessing many painful changes and ending it all by being confined to my bed under a doctor's care; I have decided to give some of my observations and meditations as to pastoral changes and relations. Permit me to preface my remarks by saying that all my relations with former pastors have been pleasant and I have never been hampered in the least with any of the things I shall mention.

When should a pastor move or change pastorates? The opportune time seems to me to be in the midst of his most successful work and at the time of his greatest popularity; for then the preacher can get another good charge and a good man will be glad to succeed him. No charge wants a rundown preacher and no preacher wants a dead charge. I don't mind preaching funerals occasionally, but hate to do all my preaching to the dead. Before you outlive your usefulness on any field by all means get away, thereby permitting you and your members to have pleasant and fond remembrances of your pastorate.

Conference should mark the line of demarcation or departing. I have no sympathy whatever with the old pastor hanging on, holding farewell services, fifth Sunday appointments, etc., before going to his new field (if he has one). If he was wanted back perhaps he would have been sent back by the Conference. Let him go directly to his new work; get out of the way, vacate the parsonage and work for his successor. The new preacher is the one in whom all are interested, anxious to see and get acquainted with. The old preacher gets to shake the people's hands again; a few scattering nickles and dimes; has an opportunity to play on the people's emotions; to get his itching ears soothed with pleasant words and saddest of all during these days, in case he doesn't like his successor, can largely destroy his usefulness on that field.

I have heard of ministers' failing on fields and thereafter busied themselves trying to destroy the work of their successors. I recall a certain man now who said that the place would "go to the dogs" when he left, and since that time has stood in the way of that would-be progressive church, placing obstacles and barriers in the way of the church. He has done all in his power to bring his prediction to pass, little recognizing the fact, that it is far better to be known as a false prophet than to stand in the way, work for and endeavor to destroy the work of the Lord.

A deal has been said and written regarding ministers visiting and writing back on their former charges. Whether this is allowable or not depends entirely on the motives and characters of the former pastors. If the motive is to hold up the present pastor's hands, make him more useful and at the same time bring the ones visited or written to nearer God and a greater help to the church, I fail to see the harm in either visiting or writing back occasionally. Most of us have more than we can do on our own field, which is our duty to do, without meddling on the other man's. Some of our brethren write, fish and slime around after marriage fees, funerals, etc., saying hard things, administering stinging rebukes; which must be offensive to both God and man. Good it would be for such if they were in their graves. All are not of the latter type, but on the contrary a marginal few.

HUMAN LIFE.

Sunday, Nov. 15, I went up to Mt. Zion to the burial of the Rev. John J. Setleff. Bro. Setleff has been one of the self-denying, hard workers in the service of the Lord. I hope to see a report of the funeral occasion from one of Mt. Zion and from others, but I feel to write an article for the church paper. Bro. Setleff—his life would remind us of that one of old—such as we get from the sacred pages of the Bible. "Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations; ask thy father, and he will show thee, thy elders and they will tell thee" He was one of the good Sunday-school workers also. He took great interest in people, and had a high regard for what we call the common-wealth, hence he believed strictly in mutual rights; a thing that ought to be taught and ought to be practised out in church and state.

He believed in educating the people, and all the people, the poor included. The life of Bro. Setleff was one of farming and teaching and preaching. (When but a small boy I went to school to him one summer, at a place called Crooked Run.)

Later in life I became more interested in the teachings that came by Bro. Setleff, by hearing him talk in his quiet manner and in hearing him preach. As to his preaching, he really improved for me from the first to the last. I heard him preach his last sermon at Tabernacle in Forsyth Co.

When at Tabernacle, serving for his last time, he was above the age of 80 years—and died at the age of 86 or 87 years.

He had an excellent memory and remembered much about people, had something of the fine talents, was good in music, was one of the good singers, and was able to use some of the fine instruments of music—was good at the organ.

When he visited a family he was happy in talking about God and salvation, and he took a special delight in singing songs and making music for the people in their homes and at the church. He had a faculty of selecting the very appropriate songs for special occasions, and took a delight in choosing peculiar songs for burial services. Having such a good memory, he was able to talk very intelligently about the things of the past in connection with the life at hand. However, Bro. Setleff belonged to that class of ministers who are not independent of secular labor, and thus are not able to give all their time to preaching and teaching the people; and there are many ministers thus situated. I venture into this subject without being advised by any person, and must ask for the indulgence of those who may know better than I am now able to say.

Rev. T. H. Stimpson preached the funeral of the Rev. John Setleff, and the meeting was so peculiar that I chose at the first to head my report of the occasion "Human Life." I note this in order to say that Bro. Stimpson belongs to the class of humble ministers with the subject of this sketch, and as a class there are no harder-worked people—and they, by the force of circumstances, are called to do the most for the least of any class—and financial ease is never their portion. Joseph and Moses and Stephen all three tried to show the church (the people) how to make life and liberty safe for all, but the adverse that burned John Huss alive and stoned Stephen has prevailed so far as to allow us only a foretaste of mutual rights

The adverse of the desired liberty has turned all Europe down to war and savagery, but the Word of God is still open to the world, and would lead us to real human life and liberty. We are very much indebted to the hard-worked and over-worked class (and especially to the aged), as those mentioned above—and we are obligated to honor them according to their works.

When I thought of this effort I had three persons in mind to refer to. The third person represents a humble class—and one peculiar. At the funeral an aged man, 73 years old, one not able to read, being seemingly destitute of what we call education, was called on to lead one of the prayers. The good man is active in the work of the church, is good to exhort and to lead in public prayer. We are at liberty to believe in education, and we are duty bound to act out the faith, but God calls a few of those who can't read to pray and talk in the church—and they are not to be despised.

Moses and the prophets try to show us how all may be educated, and this easier than not, but that which forces war and oppression and savagery on the world opposes.

The aged minister and the other real representatives now being mentioned all belong to the self-denying class that are "the salt of the earth," and we do well to respect their interests and to make life pleasant for them. The class represented by the humble man who is laboring near the "four score years," do no task us for financial aid (they not being ministers and having never been taught), but they deserve the liberties and the honor due, and we are more or less depending upon them for the helping hand that is peculiar to those who are very humble in all the walks of life. I now think to mention a peculiar occasion.

About seven years ago I happened to meet the man who is now seventy-three years old at his church, and where he was the class leader, and with a brother older than he, and his uncle.

The older man had never learned to read, but he had reached the way of the righteousness of God, and he too could pray in public, and talk to the people about God and Heaven and salvation, but the people in that quiet class meeting were but one of the congregation able to read. However we had the reading of the Scriptures and all talked to our congregation and all led in public prayer, and we had hand-shaking, and had a revival meeting.

At that humble service we had "free speech" and "mutual rights." The good and great man of Baltimore, Md., who wrote more extensively than any other man on the polity of mutual rights, had an exalted view of that which would give liberty and free speech and success to all classes. The great man Joseph, although confined to Egypt, tried to arrange for a rich commonwealth—one so rich as to put education and success inside of every home, and for every person.

By reading the Bible closely we can learn that Joseph and Moses and Stephen believed in a polity that would lift up all to a common level—even to the life and education and liberty for every poor child. However, "the kings of the earth" do not believe in these things, but are trampling the charitable and the pentecostal under foot while they rather choose to oppress the poor and do make Europe run with blood. The righteous people are obligated to pray that these times of savagery may be shortened.

God calls men to preach, and a peculiar thing is that people who are not educated are called to work in the church. There are numbers of men, with whom I am acquainted that are good workers in the church but who are not able to read—still all should be educated. I can only urge for the full extent of what I would term the whole of mutual rights by urging for universal education and such as would lift up the poorest case to the fullness of liberty.

I once had a private talk with a man, a teacher and a preacher, who seemed to have an idea that only the well able should have public liberties in the affairs of the church—and there are numbers who are as he intimated: but if he and his class would deal justly about their policy let them come over and help us to educate all the people, and we would educate the poor first (if we had to reverse a little) and in so doing we would be and do as Moses and the prophets have taught us to do. These facts are of so great import that none are able to comprehend the extent.

The Christian religion and free speech and mutual rights all belong together—and for this cause education is for all.

WARNING TO GIRLS.

The following warning to girls, issued by the National Vigilance Association of Scotland, is worthy of the serious attention of young girls in America going from home, especially from rural sections to the great cities of the United States.

1. Never speak to strangers, either men or women, in the streets, in shops, in stations, in trains, in lonely country roads, or in places of amusement.

2. Never ask the way of any but officials on duty, such as policemen, railway officials or postmen.

3. Never loiter or stand about alone in the street; and if accosted by a stranger (whether man or woman), walk toward the nearest policeman.

4. Never consent to accompany a woman home who apparently faints in the street, but call a policeman and leave the case to him.

5. Never accept a lift offered by a stranger in a motor car, taxicab, or vehicle of any description.

6. Never go to an address given by a stranger, nor enter any house, restaurant or place of amusement on the invitation of a stranger.

7. Never go with a stranger, however dressed, who brings a story of your friends having suffered from accident or being suddenly taken ill, as this is a common device to kidnap girls.

8. Never accept sweets, food, or drink offered by a stranger.

9. Never take a situation away from home, and especially abroad, without first making strict inquiries.

10. Never go to any town for even one night without knowing of some safe lodging place.

11. Never emigrate without first applying for information and advice to some person whom you can trust, such as your minister.—Selected.

CHRIST IN US.

"Has someone seen Christ in you today?
Christian, look into your life, I pray:
The little things you've done or said,
Did they accord with the way you prayed?
Have your thoughts been pure, your words been kind?
Have you sought to have the Savior's mind?
The world, with a criticising view,
Has watched—but did it see Christ in you?"

RUSSIA GOES "DRY."

The latest surprise from Russia is that the Czar has ended the sale of vodka. A marvelous change has already come over the esprit de corps of the Russian Army. The civilized world has known very little of this wonderful country with its extensive wheat-fields, its untold mineral and arboreal wealth and its eighty millions of population. Russia has more men at her disposal for military service than any other nation in Europe or America. While Germany adds to her population at the rate of one million souls a year and Britain three hundred and fifty thousand a year, Russia has an annual addition of three million. It is only a question of time before Russia will become one of the dominant powers of Europe. Napoleon's prediction that Europe will become Republican or Cossack in a hundred years awaits fulfillment. The Russian army will have a permanent part to play in the ultimate results. To get an adequate conception of this strong army of the Allies, read THE RUSSIAN ARMY FROM WITHIN by W. Barnes Steveni, who for twenty-five years was the special correspondent for London from Russia. You will find out some surprising facts about the Russian peasant, who is the backbone of the army, about Ivan, the Russian "Tommy Adkins," the Cossacks, the military maneuvers, discipline and schools of Russia, and the speedy way in which the Russians learned the lessons of defeat from Japan.

NEW TESTAMENTS FOR THE SOLDIERS.

"A million nickels from a million Sunday-school scholars for a million Testaments for a million soldiers in the hospitals, camps, war-prisons and battlefields of the Great War." This is the present slogan of the American Section of the World's Sunday school Association, in an appeal just sent out through the press to Sunday-schools of all denominations all over the United States.

The Executive Committee of the World's Sunday School Association, of which Mr. H. J. Heinz is chairman, and whose membership includes a number of prominent American business men among whom is the Hon. John Wanamaker, is behind the plan and will bear the administrative expense of the movement, so that every nickel contributed by every child will go, every penny of it, into a Testament for a soldier or sailor. On the European fields the distributing machinery of the various national Bible Societies will be used, so that there will be no expense to the senders and no overlapping of gifts.

The sympathies of the American people have been drawn out by the sufferings of non-combatants in the war zone and have found expression in multiplied agencies for relief by gifts of food and clothing. There would seem, however, to have been no wide popular appeal on behalf of the spiritual side of life under the terrible conditions prevailing in Europe. It was thought fitting that an organization in a neutral country, non-sectarian and interdenominational, whose main purpose is a dissemination of knowledge of the Bible, should bring to the men who every day face death and eternity the message of the Prince of Peace.

It is doubly fitting that this should be done by the Sunday school scholars. The nickel is within the financial reach of all. For the price of a car-fare or a soda a child can put a Testament into the hands of a wounded soldier or prisoner of war and gain access with the Christian message to a man in the most serious time of his life. It is estimated that there are now at least a million men detained either in hospitals or in prison-camps.

The World's Sunday School Association will supply each child who gives a nickel for a Testament a pretty little souvenir bookmark, which will serve both as an official receipt and as a life-long reminder of the part the child had in ministering to the highest needs of the soldiers in the present war. These bookmarks will be sent without cost in quantities desired to any Sunday-school superintendent who will undertake to use them in his school and who will write for them to the World's Sunday School Association, Metropolitan Tower, New York City. Remittances should be sent to Arthur M. Harris, Treasurer, at this address.

THE JOY BELLS.

Cora A. M. Dolson.

The Christmas bells ring out once more,
And holly wreathes each post and door.
"Good cheer, good will, and love to all!"
Across the land the joy-bells call.

In every village, every town,
The mistletoe and holly crown,
By willing hands are hung in place,
While smiling secrets wreathe each face.

"Come home, come home!" the joy-bells call,
Though home be cabin, flat, or hall.
There is no place like home to see,
The stocking gift, the Christmna tree.

May grief and strife be banished wide,
From every home at Christmastide;
And hearts proclaim that Love is King,
While loud and sweet the joy-bells ring.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Having been appointed to do evangelistic work by the Rev. C. A. Cecil, I am ready to help any pastor who may need me, if I can get a plan that will justify me. Any pastor wishing my help will write me at once so I can arrange to help. I can work until April 1st and during the fall months. Let us pray for great revivals and begin now and continue until the power comes upon the church. W. P. Martin.

Asheville.—Zip! Boom!! :BANG!!! No, don't duck your heads. It isn't a German invasion, but the opening gun of a new campaign to get rid of the debt on the Asheville church. Not all the debt, but the part that is pressing us; that is, about $900. The loan of $2,000 from the Board of Home Missions the local church will take care of, for it can be paid at the rate of $200 a year, without interest, and when the first payment is due, in October, we will be in a position to meet it. But the other debt we cannot meet without assistance, and immediate assistance at that. We have just received word that the notes on the lot have been sold, and the man who now owns them wants $400 at once—the balance on this year's note. A note comes due in February for $195, the balance due on the seats. Our people have gone the limit, for the present, and, alone, are unable to meet the obligations.

Yes, it's the opening gun. From the defenses of need, across the field of want, against the citadels of plenty, I hope the shot will shatter hard hearts, rip open closed pocket books, and send forth an ambassage with bills and checks. If it does, we'll spike the gun, put a muffler on the repeating rifle, and raise the flag of truce. If it does not, we'll have to wage the campaign all winter, and maybe through next summer. Better capitulate now! Especially you who haven't paid your pledges. There's no escape. The general has plenty of ammunition, and the Editor has placed his columns at my disposal. Many of you surrendered in the last campaign, but there are still a goodly number hidden behind the ramparts of indifference. Charge! Give them no quarter until they shell out!

In the meantime, I'll execute a flank movement, and tell you how thoroughly our people enjoyed the Conference. It was a great thing for the church. The town has a new appreciation of the denomination that it did not have before. Our people are inspired with new courage. We are glad indeed for the expressions of appreciation that have appeared in the letters from the delegates and preachers who attended the Conference. Whatever it has meant to you, it has meant infinitely more to the Asheville church. And the influence and inspiration will last long.

We held election of officers in the Sunday school yesterday. Bro. Ed. Swain is the new Superintendent. Plans are already on foot for greatly increasing the efficiency of the Sunday school work here. Teachers will be elected next Sunday.

The banner for the Conference Assessments was left at the Asheville church. If the church that claims it wants it, it had better hurry up, or we'll claim it. Possession is nine points of the law, you know.

Week before last, Bro. J. M. Blackwelder and his wife sent a basket of good things around to the parsonage. If you want to see this preacher eat feed him on rabbit. Chicken isn't in it with rabbit. There was a rabbit in that basket, and saur krout(Um!), and other things.

Just before Conference some of the members of the Clark's Chapel appointment on Buncombe circuit, sent a donation to the Asheville preacher, and during Conference Bro. Lucius Eller from that appointment brought in butter, eggs and a five-pound bucket of honey. You folks that ate at the parsonage know now why you got so much to eat. We are deeply grateful for these kindnesses. C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Richland Circuit.—The first quarterly conference of this charge is hereby announced to be held at Cedar Falls on Saturday before the 4th Sunday of this month (December) at 2 p. m. All official members are urgently requested to be present, as some important business is to be attended to. One item of business is the making of a plan of appointments for the year. D. A. Highfill, Pas.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Ct.—Mt. Lebanon, and I think the entire circuit, is glad to have Bro. O'Briant back for another year. This begins his fourth year on this work. Think it looks good for both pastor and people. Folks all the time changing preachers are something like "hoss" jockeys. Something wrong. Bro. O'Briant is a good man. He has a knack of getting folks to do things without letting them feel that he is making them do. Then he can praise them a little and it doesn't sound like flattery. Good sense with religion goes a long way. The third Sunday in December we are expecting a special service at Mt. Lebanon with St. Paul M. E. pastor and congregation and the Junior Order and Daughters of Liberty. Hope the preachers can get the members of the fraternal orders to love the Lord and his cause as well as they do their order.

Bro. W. A. Lamb is our S. S. Supt. We keep him in the harness pretty regularly and he's a true puller. Had a very good school Sunday considering the bad weather. Beginning to talk about Christmas. Bro. R. W. Lineberry was not well enough to be at church Sunday. We surely miss one so regular as he is when he is away. Bro. and Sister J. F. Kennett can only attend church once in a while. We love to have the young people, but there is something inspiring about old soldiers that helps oh! so much. We are hoping for a good year. L. R. Hughes.

Midway, Haw River Ct.—We learn that we have our same pastor for another year, in which we are well pleased. We have learned to love Bro. Ashburn very much and we hope that pastor and people will work together and that we will have a glorious year. We are sorry to know that Bro. Ashburn's little boy shows but little improvement. May the Lord comfort them in their trouble, and we hope and pray that the little boy will soon be better. We have reorganized S. S. with L. R. Dixon as Supt., G. R. Wright, assistant, E. J. Elmore, Sec., Charlie Vernon, assistant, Miss Vera Howe, organist, and Miss Pearl Haynes, assistant. Teachers: J. D. McCollum, John Dixon, Ella Apple, Miss Howe, Pearl Haynes, Bessie Bartee, Mamie Bartee, Sallie Dixon, Miss Leatherwood, Viola McCollum, and G. R. Wright. We expect to have S. S. through the winter. There were not very many out last Sunday on account of bad weather. Wishing the Herald and all its readers a successful year, Ella Dixon Apple.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—We had a good attendance at Sunday school last Sunday, although it was a cloudy, gloomy day. The school was not so good on Nov. 29 on account of the rain. There were only 39 present on Nov. 29 and 51 last Sunday. The school is completing the most successful year in its history, but we are expecting greater things for the coming year. Mr. G. A. Webster, who has been our superintendent for the past year, has been a great help to the school as well as to the church, and we are very glad indeed to say that he was re-elected for superintendent for the coming year last Sunday. The old secretary was re-elected with Mr. Grady Mackey as assistant, Miss Louise Cheek was elected treasurer, Miss Beth Peeke organist, and Mr. B. R. Watts was elected assistant superintendent. Mr. Watts was also elected teacher of class No. 5. The teachers for the other classes are to be elected next Sunday. Several of the men and boys were to meet at the church today to prepare wood for the church for the winter. This is something that is done every year, and as we can get the wood on the church property we can save some little expense.

We have a cheap although a most excellent plan for keeping our church clean and in good order. Several of the members of the Sunday school promised to take it turn about and sweep and clean up the church, and as there are several on the list, one person has to sweep only about once every three or four months. We have tried this for some time and it has proved very satisfactory.

Miss Estie Swain, who has been a member of the Asheville M. P. Sunday school, joined the school at Clark's Chapel last Sunday. We are very glad indeed to have her with us. Lester Watts.

Weaverville, December 7.

Greensboro.—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society met with Mrs. J. Norman Wills Dec 7th. Owing to the very inclement weather the attendance was not as large as usual. A very interesting program was rendered. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. J. F. McCulloch. Duet by Mrs. R. M. Andrews and sister, Miss Ethel Harris. Also a solo by Mrs. T. B. Ogburn. We are studying "The Child in the Midst," and the subject for the afternoon was "The Child at Home." Miss Frances Sutton told us in a very interesting way how the children in Mohammedan homes were trained. She spoke of children in other parts of heathendom and then told us of a home where our Christian missionaries had gone. In this home where polygamy with all its attendant evils had reigned, the missionary caused the dark hut of one room, where the entire family, male and female, were huddled in darkness, and had to crawl about in smoke and filth, to be changed into a house with windows and separate rooms; and instead of creeping about on hands and knees, have chairs. This talk was interesting, and at its close our president, Mrs. W. K. Hartsell, made an earnest appeal to all and especially to the mothers, to try to bring this subject home to themselves and urged us to try to do more for the little children in heathen lands. The usual business was transacted, after which Mrs. Wills served refreshments. Harris Glascock, M. D.

Piney Grove, Siler City Ct.—Bro. Bowman, our pastor for this year, was around the first Sunday. He never fails, if health permits him to go. The bad weather never hinders him. He made a good talk from the 15th Psalm. Not many out on account of bad weather. Some people won't go to preaching when it is cloudy, but it hardly ever gets too bad for them to go visiting. I think if we can go to a neighbor's house we can go to church.——I attended the Sunday school convention at Hickory Grove M. P. Church last Sunday, the fifth. It was a bad day, not very many out. I wish more could have been there and heard the good talks made by Dr. T. D. Gregg and Rev. W. M. Pike on Sunday school and the teacher's duty to his class. If we Sunday school teachers would realize what depends on us we would do differently from what we do.

I guess our Sunday school will go into winter quarters until April, as the weather is bad and people can hardly go when it is snowing or raining.

As Bro. Ledford did not come back we all wish for him a prosperous year. May the Lord bless him in his entire work. May we all try to do better in the future than we have in the past. May the Lord bless all pastors and people this new year. Nettie McPherson, Rep.

December 7, 1914.

Burlington.—Despite the threatening, cold weather we had a good attendance at Sunday school and the preaching services last Sunday. The attendance at Sunday school was 201. The chairman of the Christmas entertainment committee, Bro. G. L. Amick, reported to the school that the committee had decided to use "White Gifts for the King" for the exercise. This exercise will consist largely of music, but a few recitations will be given. The gifts may be either money or the consecration of and the giving to the great King for service the lives of those who may desire to do so. The committee has arranged to begin the practice for the exercise one night this week.

The eleven o'clock service Sunday morning was largely attended and proved to be the most impressive service that we have ever had. It was, in part, unique in its nature. The pastor did not preach a sermon, but instead he conducted the installation service, which had been postponed for some time. Immediately following the installation service the Lord's Supper was administered. These two services combined made one of the best and most impressive services that has ever been held in the

A PIONEER STORY OF A GRATEFUL INDIAN.

In the early days, as the old frontiersmen say, my father and mother were among the first settlers of Montana. They have often refused to have their names in print, so I will omit them in deference to their wishes. My mother was the very first white woman to arrive in the now prosperous and wholly civilized state of Montana, then a vast sparsely-settled territory inhabited mostly by Indians and desperadoes. My father was a brave man, a fearless rider and noted athlete, and a dead shot. The Indians both feared and loved him. They called him the White Wolf. He was a splendid specimen of manly strength and beauty—he stood six feet high in his stockings, and weighed more than two hundred pounds; his skin was very fair, his eyes of Irish type, known as gray-blue, his hair bright brown and curly; he was so quick and strong that the Indians delighted in his deeds of prowess. He was also a famous hunter.

My mother, on the contrary, was a little delicate creature, who could stand upright beneath her young husband's extended arm; her complexion was as fair and smooth as a lily petal, with the flush of perfect health shining rosily beneath; her lips were scarlet; her hair, long, wavy, abundant and silken, was soft and as black and glossy as the raven's wing; but her chief beauty lay in her large brown eyes—so velvety, soft and yet so brilliant, while a smile generally lurked in their clear depths. The Indians thought my mother wonderfully beautiful. They called her Smiling Eyes, the White Lily, Little Girl not Afraid and many other terms of endearment.

My parents lived among the friendly Flatheads in perfect safety and security for many years. My father, having the prospector's lust for gold in his veins, was often absent from home for days at a time, leaving my mother lonely but contented in her pioneer home. You who have lived such lives as they, or who are the children of pioneer parents, can readily understand the loneliness and isolation of my mother's life, and how she would stand long minutes at a time scanning the lonely road for a sign of her absent one's return, and her glad haste in preparing food for him when a small cloud of dust in the distance heralded his approach. Why, her loneliness was so great that even "sunbaked" faces of the friendly red men were sometimes welcome as a relief to her from solitude.

One day she was standing in her doorway, shading her eyes with her hands and gazing anxiously along the road, longing for some sign of his return, when she saw horsemen approaching, though they were still some distance from home. She began the preparation of a meal, knowing that my father and the comrades who usually accompanied him on his prospecting excursions would be hungry and weary, and that the food would be so welcome. Every little while she would go to the door and gaze longingly over the road, anxious for his return. When the meal was almost ready, she went to the door, with a glad smile of welcome on her lips, but her heart almost stopped beating, so great was her surprise and terror, for the horsemen were almost at her door, and instead of my father and his friends, there was a band of Indian warriors, hideous in war paint and feathers, and with fresh scalps in evidence! She turned faint with horror, but knowing that they had already seen her and that escape was impossible (after concealing her two pretty baby girls beneath her bed, and carelessly throwing a buffalo robe over the edge of the bed), she went bravely forward to meet them, with a prayer to her Maker for strength and help.

The chief and his braves dismounted at her door, and seeing every evidence of a meal being prepared, demanded food for all. You can imagine her dismay—for her larder was not as easily replenished as in these days of fast freights, the telephone and accommodating grocers. In those days the staple foods were brought in great bulk over long and perilous roads by freighters with mule teams, or "pack trains," as they were called, and it took the prospectors' "dust and nuggets" in great quantities to purchase them. But there was no way but to yield to the chief's demands, so, with outward calm and no sign of her sinking heart, she placed the food prepared with such loving forethought for my father, before the savages.

Mother now discovered that in their midst was a captive Indian, a poor young lad from the Pintos, or now commonly called the Ute tribe. He was the son of a chief, and considered a very great capture by the cruel Shoshones, who now held him. She noticed that he was bound by leather thongs so cruelly tight that his flesh was lacerated and bleeding. Taking her courage in both hands (so my father used to say) she went to the old chief, Tin Doy, and begged him to release the young brave, telling him she would feed him and care for his wounds. Tin Doy refused with stern and haughty manner, and bade her be silent. But the look of anguish in the young brave's eyes and his famished gaze following the food as she placed it, in all its savory freshness, before the Shoshones, was too much for my dear young mother, so she stood again before the chief, pleading thus, for she spoke the Indian tongue:

"Tin Doy, to-day you have won a great victory over your enemies; you have taken many scalps and many ponies; you have lost none of your own braves. If you do not release this poor boy and allow me to care for him, to-night he will die; you can not hold him captive, for the Great Spirit will call him to the happy hunting grounds; his blood will be upon your head: you will go on your way but to no more victory; a powerful tribe will attack you, burn your village, take your ponies, take your women and children, kill your old men, and you, Tin Doy, will die."

All this she said with her fair young face lifted, and gazing straight into his cruel eyes. At first he listened with astonishment, then, turning to his braves, he commanded them not to molest her, saying, "This paleface girl is not afraid; she is braver than the bravest warrior; leave her in peace, the Great Spirit guards her."

Then he bade her release the captive. With swift fingers she loosened the cruel bonds, with gentle hands bathed his bleeding wounds, covering them with a soothing ointment and bandages of softest linen. Then with her own delicate hands she lifted his weary head and fed the famished youth and gave him cool and nourishing drinks. Then turning to the chief, she said, "Tin Doy, the Great Spirit will bless you. Give him a pony, and let him go in peace." To her surprise the red chief did as she requested.

After they had all mounted and ridden away, my dear young mother knelt and thanked God for his preserving care. Then she sought her little ones in their hiding place. They were quietly sleeping, their chubby arms intertwined, their bonny heads close together.

You can imagine my father's surprise and thanksgiving, when, returning and seeing every evidence of the passing of a war party, he found his wife and babies safe, instead of the ashes of his lonely home, as he had expected. His wonder knew no bounds, as mother related this true story to him.

Many years later my parents had removed to a more comfortable and less remote home. One day mother was surprised to see an Indian brave approaching her home, bearing with him a splendid haunch of venison. He stopped and laid it at her feet, making signs that it was a thank offering, and she was astonished to find this was the young brave whose life she had won from the Sho-shones so long ago.

Many years have passed since then. My sweet mother is now a great-grandmother; my dear old father long since passed to his reward. But in my mother's sheltered home she still remembers those perilous times and tells us with a shudder of the fierce faces of Tin Doy and his braves on that day, and speaks with thanksgiving of that Protecting Power which rules heaven and earth, and I, too, humbly thank Him that she was spared to tell me this tale as I have told it to you.—Selected.

BETHLEHEM.

O to have dwelt in Bethlehem
When the star of the Lord shone bright!
To have sheltered the only wanderers
On that blessed Christmas night;
To have kissed the tender, wayworn feet
Of the mother undefiled,
And with reverent wonder and deep delight,
To have tended the holy Child!

Hush! Such a glory was not for thee;
But that care may still be thine;
For are there not little ones to aid
For the sake of the Child divine?
Are there no wandering pilgrims now,
To thy heart and thy home to take?
And are there no mothers whose weary hearts
You can comfort for Mary's sake?

—Adelaide Proctor.

There is a man who knows probably more than any one else in America about the outlook for Tsingtau as it affects Germany, China, Japan, and Christian missions. He has lived for years in the city that is now the Asiatic center of the world-war. He is in America today. He has written for The Sunday School Times "The Startling Inside Story of Tsingtau," which will soon be published, with illustrations. His story amazes, thrills, shocks, convinces. He has written also a terrible account of what twentieth century fighting is. When sending one of his manuscripts to the Times, he said, "Cut out what you want to, but keep the spinal column of war repulsiveness." Readers will find that the spinal column is there when his massages reach their eyes.

These articles are part of an extraordinary series of articles upon the European war now being published in The Sunday School Times, which will include a letter from Bill Sunday on "What the War Means to Me"; an article by Mabel Thorp Boardman on "How We do the Work of the Red Cross"; "The War and the Jew," by David Baron of London; "What the War Means to Women," by the Widow of General Pickett, and searching articles on prophecy and missions as bearing on the War.

THE ROLL THAT NEVER GETS STALE

It is an unusual roll that never becomes stale. Many people are so insistent upon having strictly fresh bread and rolls that they expect the baker to have them fresh not only every day but every morning and afternoon. Many Sunday-schools use rolls too—large picture rolls, containing thirteen lectures each illustrating the lessons of a quarter.

These picture rolls are eagerly desired by every missionary on every foreign field. They are used in teaching the Bible both in Sunday schools and in the pulpit. A crowd can always be gathered on a street corner where one of these colored pictures is shown, and the Gospel is preached with the pictured truth as the graphic text. The rolls thus become to many the very Bread of Life.

Have you some old picture rolls in your Sunday-school rubbish box or stored away in a closet accumulating dust? When they have served you please don't throw them away. You can send them out on another mission of blessing. The World's Sunday School Association has a plan for keeping rolls fresh—a "Department for Utilizing Surplus Material"—which will assist you in placing these pictures and other gifts in the hands of a missionary of your own denomination. For full particulars address the Superintendent of that department, Rev. Samuel D. Price, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York. You should indicate your religious denomination by its full and exact name, and enclose a stamp for reply.

WHY THE SUNDAY SCHOOL IS A VITAL NECESSITY IN CHINA.

1. There are 100,000,000 children under 10 years of age in China. In the near future they may be taught almost entirely under a Government system of education, and will be less accessible to the Christian day-school. The Sunday-school must give them religious education.

2. The Chinese Christian Churches generally lack young men and maidens. Congregations are 80 per cent. adults, and many little children, but few youths between 15 and 25 years of age. They must be won and held for Christ by the placing of a new emphasis upon the departments of the Sunday-school which minister to this age.

3. A church which gives itself mainly to winning new converts, as the church in China naturally does, is in constant danger of neglecting them when they have been won. The Bible School has a necessary place in the continued nurture after they have entered into full membership in the churches. This is a phase of Sunday-school work as yet largely undeveloped.

4. The youth of the boarding schools and colleges need to be trained in voluntary Christian service. The training of leaders from among the promising young people for the work of the local church falls naturally to the Sunday-school.

The laymen of the churches need a wide field for expressional activity in real Christian service. The Sunday-school affords it.

World's Sunday School Assoc.

We have erred for years in our failure to use the Sunday schools for the enlargement of our missionary income.. If the congregations will take care of the pitiful assessments, and the Board will appeal to the Sunday schools for a quarter of a million dollars per year, it can be easily raised; and that amount, in addition to our present resources, would make a new era in our mission work. When we consider the facts that some schools give as much as five hundred dollars, many of them one hundred, most of them something, and that an average of sixteen dollars to the school would bring in the large sum mentioned above, we cannot but see the practicability of that plan for an increase in our funds.

Both of these movements will require proper agencies and a considerable amount of labor, but surely the results at this critical time would justify any amount of work that might be demanded.—Bishop James Atkins.

We await the coming of the church statesman who can evolve a plan by which the whole membership of the church may be mobilized and made effective in this war upon ignorance and sin. Is it not time for us to raise the question as to whether or not we have fallen into a routine method of obtaining missionary money which by its very lack of freshness and originality is shaming the cause which it essays to help?

MATERNITY.

Within the crib that stands beside my bed
A little form in sweet abandon lies;
And as I bend above, with misty eyes,
I know how Mary's heart was comforted.
O World of Mothers! Blest are we who know
The ecstasy—the deep, God-given thrill
That Mary felt, when all the earth was still,
In that Judean starlight, long ago.

Burlington M. P. Church. In the installation service, the various officers of the church, including stewards, class leaders, church and parsonage trustees, Sunday school superintendent, church treasurer, chairman and secretary of church conference, choir master, treasurer of building fund, and organist, were called to the front of the altar railing, almost 25 in number (about 15 being absent), and given a few simple obligations. When the officers had received the obligations the members of the church were asked to stand and pledge themselves to stand by and support the officers in their work. While the officers stood around the altar and the members were standing in the congregation, the pastor offered special prayer, invoking divine benedictions upon each officer and member and for the work of the new Conference year. This service was so touching and impressive that many were made to realize more fully their responsibility to the church and to God. Bro. L. W. Holt, who is one of our oldest members, made a few remarks at the close of the service, expressing his appreciation of the service and stating that he had never witnessed such a beautiful and inspiring service. The idea of holding this installation service originated in the mind of our pastor, Bro. Curry, who is always on the alert for the things that will benefit or advance the church in any way. We are not only fortunate in having a good preacher, but we have a good pastor, the best that can be had, we think.

We have been visited again by the grim hand of death. Another one of our good women has been summoned to her heavenly home to reap the reward that awaits all who have fought a good fight with sin, kept the faith and finished the course of life. Mrs. Emily Minnis, wife of Mr. J A. Minnis, died last Tuesday night, Dec. 1st. Mrs. Minnis had suffered for several weeks and everything possible was done for her, but all efforts to restore her failed, and she passed peacefully out into the spirit world. The deceased was a truly good woman, a loving mother, and a consistent member of our church. She is survived by a husband and four children, three of whom are members of our church. The funeral service was conducted at the church Thursday afternoon by Bro. Curry, assisted by Rev. J. B. Gibble, rector of the Church of the Holy Comforter.

The regular monthly meeting of the Baraca-Philathea City Union was held in our church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. One feature of the meeting was the election of officers. Dr. W. A. Hornaday of our church was honored with the office of vice president of the union.

Our pastor conducted the funeral of an aged lady at Haw River last Saturday afternoon.

Bro. J. B. Turner spent last Sunday with his mother, Mrs. C. L. Turner, at Lexington, N. C. His little daughter, Effie, who has been at Lexington with her grandmother, returned with Bro. Turner.

His mother came back with him to spend a while here.

The envelope that we are to use this year started last Sunday. We are very well pleased and greatly encouraged with the system and the manner in which our people are taking hold of the plan. Over 100 envelopes were used last Sunday, which indicates that the system will be a success. C. B. Way, Reporter.

THE POSTAL CARD W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR.

My Friend.—In the passing of Prof Martin H. Holt, of Oak Ridge Institute, one of the best friends I have ever had was taken from labor to reward. When I was a young man and when he was a young man Prof. Holt came to Tabernacle Academy as principal of the school. During the time he was there a meeting of great power was held in Tabernacle church. During the meeting I began to lead in public prayer and to testify to the saving power of Jesus Christ. Toward the close of the meeting he came to me and holding me by the hand in that warm cordial grasp characteristic of him, he said, "Fillmore, I believe the Lord has a work for you to do and I want to help you to get ready for that work." He then added, "I haven't much of the goods of this world, but thank God I have robust health and some education and if you will come to school tuition shall not cost you one cent so long as I can teach you." Before that I had often felt that some day I must preach the gospel, but I had told no one—that day Prof. Holt "took me by the right hand and lifted me up" and helped me to decide the great question of my life work. I went to school to him at Tabernacle and also at Oak Ridge after he had associated himself with his brother, Prof. J. Allen Holt, in the great work which they have accomplished there. From the day he "took me by the right hand" at Tabernacle until the day of his death he was my friend and he is yet my "translated friend." A few days before his death he requested that A. G. Dixon, W. R. Lowdermilk, and W. F. Kennett should speak at his funeral service. Bro. Dixon spoke of him especially as an educator of very high rank. Bro. Lowdermilk emphasized his home life and W. F. Kennett spoke of him as "A Friend." Few men in North Carolina have accomplished so much for church and state as Profs. J. Allen and Martin H. Holt. Thousands of men all over the South who have been helped by them in preparing for life's work will be sad of heart when they learn that "Professor Martin" has passed to his reward. May we all meet him in that "brighter world beyond the sunset's radiant glow."

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Ct.—Well, our former pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, has been returned to us for another year and has entered upon his duties as pastor. He preached for us the fifth Sunday in November, preaching a Thanksgiving sermon. We trust that, with the cooperation of laity and pastor, this will be a good year for us financially and spiritually.

Our new Sunday school officers are: Supt., A. A. Sharpe; Asst. Supt., George F. Thompson; Sec.-Treas., Walter Wood. A committee has been appointed to arrange a program for a Christmas entertainment.

The writer spent Nov. 27, 28, 29, in Burlington, attending the Baraca-Philathea Conference as a delegate from Mt. Hermon Baraca class. Hubert L. Isley.

December 5.

Montour, Idaho.—I send you one dollar for the M. P. Herald.. I love my church paper. Father subscribed for the Methodist Protestant paper for me before I was grown. The paper is so much help to me. When I read pieces in the paper about the good meetings you all have back there it makes me happy and I feel like saying, Glory to God! If God were to call me I feel like I would be saved. I will live a Methodist Protestant as long as I live. There are no Methodist Protestants here; I wish there were. I was sorry to read of Cousin Cicero Patterson's death and Brother Jesse Giles.' We used to live close to him. I have seen him get happy many times. He was a good man. I was glad to hear of Bro. Geo. Laughlin having a good meeting. Sometime ago I went to see them when I was back there. He is a good man. I used to hear his father preach. I can see many names in the paper of people I used to know. Mrs. Susie Jarrell.

Shelby.—I take this method to thank the many who have so kindly inquired about me since this affliction has fallen upon me; also for the many prayers and good wishes. They performed two operations. One was a very serious one; they made a new opening in the stomach as the other had about closed. The other for appendicitis. I was on the table about two and a half hours. My pulse stayed normal except for a few minutes: the physicians wondered at it, and told me it was very remarkable. I said I do not wonder at it, for there were many prayers offered for my recovery. We thank those who wrote my wife and daughter as well as to me while I was in the hospital. Especial mention: Bro. Cecil has written us four times, notwithstanding his busy time just before Conference, and has had time since. He is not only a splendid executive, but he looks after his sick sheep as well. Also Bro. J. Norman Wills has found time amidst his busy life to write us words of encouragement. Sisters D. L. Carroll of Reidsville, and Bro. and Sister T. F. Humphreys, of Bethany church, have by their timely encouragement helped us to pull out of the hardest place of our lives. The Conference has remembered us very kindly and substantially, through one of its agents. While it is limited, in this hour of affliction and helplessness it is greatly appreciated. Words fail. Also Bro. D. B. Johnson, of Lincolnton, wrote us several times and offered to do anything he could. Bros. C. W. Atkins and Watkins of Caroleen came to see me, also Bro. J. F. Carter and two or three other gentlemen of Shelby. The doctors of Rutherfordton were very kind indeed to me and insisted on my remaining two weeks or a month longer. They let me come home with the understanding that I was to take good care, write them often, and do no work of any kind for a long time yet, and they write me once a week and caution me. They say after I get well, and they are sure I will if I will take their advice, I will be the stoutest I have been in years. I will close by saying we will be here for some time and many thanks and still ask for your prayers. C. E. M. Raper and Family.

—This is our rainy season.

OBITUARY.

Johnson.—On Sept. 15, 1914, the death angel came and took from our midst George Pinkney Johnson, commonly called Uncle Pinkney. He was 81 years, six months and twenty-four days old. On Jan. 12, 1860, he married Miss Temperance Taylor Mann who preceded him to the glory land several years ago. They settled in the neighborhood of Brown's Chapel M. E. Church and united with it. About 41 years ago he moved near Concord M. P. Church and united with it and remained a consistent and loyal member until death. Some years after moving to this neighborhood, there being no children of his own, he adopted a very young boy whom he cared for as his own. His adopted son when grown married and lived with him and cared for him until the end.

The life of Bro. Johnson deserves more than a passing notice. He was a very lively man and had a host of friends.

He was faithful attendant of the church and Sabbath school. Often in revival meetings he would be filled to overflowing and the shouts of Uncle Pinkney will be missed by many. He was an official member most of the time and was faithful in the discharge of duties. He met with a severe accident about 18 years ago, but recovered and was very active until a few months ago when he began to fail. He had dropsy and he was fully aware that the end was near. He was cheerful and bore his afflictions patiently, leaving the blessed assurance that all was well with him. His pastor, Rev. G. W. Holmes, conducted his funeral at Concord M. P. Church on Sept. 16, 1914, and his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at that place amid a sorrowing host of relatives and friends. He belonged to the Masons and was buried by them.

The light of his presence has drifted away and there is left a feeling of desolation, relieved only by his beautiful life and the hope of meeting him again in the glory world.

Whereas our Heavenly Father in his wise providence has seen best to remove from our midst our beloved brother, resolved (1) That in his death the church and Sunday school have lost a most faithful and loyal member, the home one whose place cannot be filled by any one else, and the community a kind and noble man. (2) That we tender the family and relatives in this sore bereavement our warm and loving sympathy and point them to the tender mercies of his Lord and Savior. (3) That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication and a copy be furnished the bereaved family.

A SIMPLE STATEMENT.

Will say that the rumor that I have had offered me a salary of $50 per month during the year just closing is a mistake. I've had no salary offered of any kind. By the blessing of the Lord I've been able to earn something, but not a support. I know my own home situation better than any one else. My wife's health is such as to preclude my being away from home long at a time. And, I myself, have never fully recovered from ten years' sojourn in the extreme East. Four years of which I endured heart trouble, kidney and liver and bowel trouble—my feet and ankles swelling, and heart beating from 80 to 120 much of the time. Would saw wood a little while and do other things, and then have to lie down on the bed. Had to walk very slowly. Could say much, but this is enough.

J. F. Dosier

Worthville, Randleman Ct.—We had a very interesting school yesterday. Number present, 41, very good for the inclement weather. The first Sunday being the day for the election of officers, the following were elected: R. W. Giles, Supt.; W. P. Craven, Asst.; Colon Allred, Sec. and Treas.; Assist., Miss Florence Hilliard.

We are well pleased to have Bro. O'Briant and his dear wife with us again for another year. We have learned to love them so much. They have accomplished great good since coming to this work. Pray for us that we may do a greater work for Christ in the coming year. Mrs. W. P. Craven who has been sick for some time does not improve much, we are very sorry to note. Florence Myrick, Rep.

Welch Memorial Church.— The work is still moving on nicely. Bro. Williams preached Sunday morning a good sermon to a good congregation, considering the weather. Bro. Williams has been our pastor for three years and we have learned to love him and his family and are glad they are to remain with us another year. May we all work for this to be the best year in the history of this church.——We were pleased to have Bro. R. C. Stubbins, his wife and little daughter worship with us last Sunday. He preached for us Sunday night an excellent sermon. Sorry the weather was so that more could not be out to hear him. We hope to have them again. They are stopping with Bro. Williams until they get moved into the parsonage at Lebanon. Our Sunday-school is moving along very well. Of course there could and ought to be a larger attendance, but it seems that there are people that just will not take any interest in Sunday school or church work. Oh, may we all take on new life and be more interested in our Master's work. Pray for us. Rep.

—Christmas shopping has already begun.

—J. Milton Causey, of Tabernacle, and Miss Emma Coble, of Climax, were married in Greensboro, Dec. 1st, the editor of the Herald officiating.

—Time fails us on a few reports this week. They will appear next week.

A Letter to Anderson and Yarborough Charges—Dear Brethren and Sisters: For the fifth time I have been assigned to you as pastor. Whether it is best I cannot tell. I trust it is. For the past four years I have been surrounded by a great field white unto harvest. Harvest time is a time when laborers are in demand. Harvest time calls for tremendous exertion. Reapers must go to the grain. It is a time of great anxiety. A day lost may mean a crop lost. It is a time of gladness when the grain is in the garner. We have looked over the field with anxiety. The great waste of human life has often broken our heart. We have gone forth to reap. We have rejoiced over the gathering of the few. To say we have been faithful might not be true in every sense. But now we begin another year's work, the harvest is great and the laborers few. We need your co-operation more than ever during our pastorate. The old, young, middle-aged, are all called to the work. We look over the field to see at least eight thousand dollars of material improvements, paying debts, building and beautifying our property. And let us in Christ's name do more. But let us not forget our greatest privilege is that of saving the lost, encouraging the discouraged, and strengthening the feeble in Jesus' precious name. Our field is large, you know, and calls for hard labor for your pastor. Be patient and I will do my best. Hardships are his portion as well as yours. But no hardship has overtaken me yet that has taken the joy out of my labor among you. Thirty, forty, and sixty-mile drives in rain, cold, mud, and heat; sleepless nights, for often I have not retired at night. I count it all a privilege that I may save some. My happiest moments have been in my greatest sacrifice for your welfare. I appreciate your faithfulness. We have had about 150 accessions to the church, with very few losses., which ought to enable us to pay our claims to the mission boards early in the year. Let each member begin to be much in prayer Don't hinder but help us, help us. Our King shall be glorified, our homes will be blessed. I am yours, sharing the responsibility with you. W. A. Lamar.

P. S.—This letter to be read at each church by one of the officials. W.A.L.

Hayes-Wall.—A very qoiet marriage took place Sunday afternoon, Dec. 6, at New Salem, in the home of the bride's father, Mr. G. B. Wall. Mr. Chas. W. Hayes and Miss Virginia Wall were the happy coople. Mr. Hayes is a young man of most excellent qualities, while Miss Wall is one of New Salem's most useful girls. She having served as organist in New Salem church for a number of years. We are pleased to note that New Salem will not lose these young people, as they will continue to live in the community. Their many friends wish for them a happy and prosperous journey throug life. The undersigned officiated. J. B. O'Briant.

Greensboro.—Grace Church held its first quarterly conference last night following the prayer meeting. Members of the prayer meeting remained and took interest in the business of the quarterly confernce, the transaction of which was marked by an unusual evidence of interest on the part of members themselves. Grace church seems to be entering upon a period of greater activity.

Any church wishing to entertain the Young People's Convention to be held either in March or April as authorized by the last Annual Conference will please notify the undersigned as early as possible, as the place must be decided on early. One place has already invited it and perhaps there are others. Let us hear from you.

THE EASTER SERVICE.

The Easter Service for 1915 is now ready. Samples are being sent to all of the pastors and Sunday-school superintendents whose names are on file in this office. If any one does not receive the sample, it will be due either to miscarriage or to the fact that his name is not on file here. We want to place a copy of this service in the hands of every superintendent and pastor at an early date. We will also send sample copy to Sunday school choristers, if they will be so kind as to send us a postal card, making such request. They would be included in our sample mailing list if their names and addresses were on file here.

We believe this service is superior to anything which has yet been offered by this Board. We have eliminated all advertising this year and the booklet contains 20 pages, including the cover. There are ten songs; five by Charles H. Gabriel and five by B. D. Ackley. All of these are splendid productions. The music, while of high grade, is not too difficult for the ordinary school. Three pages which have heretofore been used for advertising, this year carry recitations and exercises for use of the Sunday schools. In eliminating our advertising, we have cut off one source of income from the Easter program, but we believe that the greater popularity of the service will justify this change of plan.

We want to furnish these programs to every Methodist Protestant Sunday school free of all cost to them. The Easter offering has become a very important part of the income of the Board of Home Missions and we earnestly hope that no Sunday school will disappoint us this year.

ASHEVILLE CHURCH BUILDING FUND.

Rev. W. A. Ledford, So. Amboy,
New Jersey, ... $2.00

I want to put in a good long list next week. Won't you help me do it?

C. W. Bates.

"THE PASTOR'S DISCRETIONARY FUND."

Just a few days ago my attention was called to a very novel calendar gotten out by a prominent church in Philadelphia. On the margin were brief notices of different things of interest connected with the church. The thing that was of special interest to me was The Pastor's Discretionary Fund. The name for such a fund was new to me but the idea was not. I have often felt the need of such a fund, as I am sure other pastors have. A great many little things that need to be done for the church are being discovered from time to time by the pastor, but because he does not care to go to the church treasurer so often, and many times it is not convenient to do so, many things that really should be done are frequently neglected. If the pastor were provided with a Discretionary fund, these things could be attended to and the church treasurer would not be troubled.

—Let those of us who are not poets be content to express our thoughts in prose.

—We had to cut some reports almost to the bone this week, and then could not get all in.

—Do not fail to read the story of "The Man Who was too Busy to Find the Child." It begins on second page.

—Rev. A. O. Lindley: "I want to congratulate Bro. Curry and the publisher for both the quality and the neatness of the Conference Journal."

—We thank the lay brother who offers to send us sermons for publication, but would inform him that it is only occasionally that we can find space for a sermon.

—About twenty-five years ago Herbert Spencer in announcing his purpose to publish his Synthetic Philosophy made the statement that he expected his work to fill the place that had been filled by the Bible as an authority over the morals of men. At any rate that is what we understood him to mean at the time when we read the statement. His thought was the men were about to lose faith in the Bible, and that it would be a dreadful thing for the morals of the world to be left without any authority in ethics. So he set himself to the audacious task of providing for this great need of mankind. We thought Mr. Spencer's presumption was ridiculous then, and it seems much more so now. His Synthetic Philosophy is known only to a few scholars, while the Bible is sold and read and believed in more than ever before.

—A beautiful story is going the rounds concerning Wilbur Wright's fidelity to his religious convictions. He was abroad and at the high tide of his first foreign success, being everywhere acclaimed as "The Emperor of the Air". One day the king of Spain came to see his aeroplane. An orderly approached the famous aviator and said, "His majesty would like to see you fly." Courteously but firmly, Mr. Wright at once replied, "I am very sorry, but we never fly on Sunday"

THE NEW YEAR.

While with ceaseless course the sun
Hasted through the former year,
Many souls their race have run,
Nevermore to meet us here:
Fixed in an eternal state,
They have done with all below;
We a little longer wait,
But how little none can know.

As the winged arrow flies
Speedily the mark to find;
As the lightning from the skies
Darts and leave sno trace behind,
Swiftly thus our fleeting days
Bear us down life's rapid stream;
Upward, Lord, our spirits raise,
All below is but a dream.

Thanks for mercies past receive;
Pardon for our sins renew;
Teach us henceforth how to live,,
With eternity in view:
Bless thy word to young and old;
Fill us with a Savior's love;
And when life's short tale is told,
May we dwell with thee above.

THE MAN WHO WAS TOO BUSY TO FIND THE CHILD.

Like the curtains of a sanctuary the shadowy twilight of a winter's evening gathered around the village of Bethlehem. As the shadows deepened, lights were kindled one by one in the windows of white-washed houses which stood like square blocks of marble rising tier on tier toward the summit of the hill on which the town was built. Toward the north, the south and the east the slopes of this same hill were trimly terraced in gardens, vineyards and orchards of olive, lemon, citron, almond and pomegranate. So trim and regular were these terraces that they looked like broad flights of steps leading down from the village to the fields of the shepherds where flocks were being folded for the night.

On the eastern slope somewhat below the town a man was still busily working in his orchard. Among his neighbors he was known as a prudent, thrifty and successful husbandman, the owner of several of the most fruitful vineyards and gardens. His name was Ben David. He had just dismissed a score of laborers who had been helping him gather the harvest of citrons and of lemons which ripen in December, and now, as if reluctant to leave his task, he stood for a moment gazing back at the well-kept orchard and then out over the fields of the shepherds and on into the east, where the reflection of the sunset still lingered upon the heights of Moab, in wondrous tints of purple and of lavender. As he gazed he bent his head in reverence, for though he was a busy man he believed in the God of his fathers, whose glory the heavens declare and whose handiwork the firmament showeth. Then he murmured to himself, "I do not think enough of these things. I am too much occupied with the gardens and the orchards. I must not lose the things that are most worth while."

Turning quickly, he mounted the hill toward the town, passed in through the eastern gate, and soon found his own substantial house bordering the main road of the village. There he devoured with healthy appetite the evening meal which the servants set before him, and going out into the quiet night he sat down on the steps of the house and began to figure on the value of the crop of citrons and lemons which had just been gathered. It had been a good season for the orchards. He was so absorbed in this calculation that he did not hear the laughter of the children playing in the streets, nor did he notice the frequent passage of neighbors and friends before his door. Suddenly, however, he was aware that a group of persons had stopped before his house, and looking up he saw the bent form of a woman sitting wearily upon a patient little beast while the man who was her attendant had approached the steps of the house, and lifting a noble face upon which anxiety was written, he asked if they might find lodging for the night. They had visited the inn, he explained, and it was overcrowded. The wife was weary and ill, and they needed refuge.

Now, Ben David was not a hard-hearted man, but he had lived mostly for himself. It was not his habit to think much of others. Accustomed to independence of thought and action he did not relish the restraints imposed by hospitality. He knew there were rooms in his spacious house that with a little attention from the servants might be made ready for these guests, but it would involve obligations of courtesy on his part which just then he felt he was too busy to undertake. After a moment's reflection he answered, not unkindly but not altogether truly, that he had no room to spare.

Just then the woman lifted her face, which had been muffled in her garments. The light of the open door fell full upon it. It was a countenance on which purity and pain were mingled in a wondrous way. In it there seemed to be such depth of yearning and wistful appeal that it made upon Ben David a distinct and indelible impression —so much so that he was about to change his mind, but it was too late. The man had descended the steps, and the little group had passed on into the darkness of the unlighted street.

Ben David rose, entered the house, and somewhat impatiently bade the servant unroll his sleeping mat upon the floor. He was vexed with himself and could not sleep. Tossing restlessly upon his pillow, he thought of that wistful face of pain and its appeal, to which he had not responded. Verily, he was growing too hard and selfish. As the night wore on he heard without in the street the hurried steps of men and the murmur of their voices vibrant with suppressed excitement. Rising he went to the window, and looking out he saw the familiar forms of shepherds who kept their flocks in the fields below his orchards. Calling to one of them, he asked whither they were bound and what brought them to the city at such an hour.

The man paused long enough to tell him a story almost too strange to be true. "Tonight," he said, "as we watched our flocks, drowsing about the fire, the starry heavens above us seemed to burst into blossom like a rose, and out of the pulsing heart of it there fell the music of celestial voices, telling us of a wondrous child who had been born this night in Bethlehem, whose coming would be glad tidings of great joy to all people." Under the spell of the vision, he said, they hastened to the town. The watchman at the gate, wondering at their story, let them in. Searching everywhere, they saw at last a light burning dimly in the rock-cut stable of the Khan of Chimham, and there, lying in the straw among the wakeful cattle, they had found the wondrous child. They had been too amazed to speak at first, but now, returning, their tongues were loosed, and they were glorifying God for all the things which they had seen and heard.

When the man had gone, Ben David stood a long time at the window wondering at the things which had been told him by the shepherds. The deep religious instincts of his forefathers stirred within him. He remembered all the wistful hopes and dreams which centered about the mystical figure of the Messiah. Was this indeed the long-expected King? It was not likely. Would the Messiah be born in a manger? Tomorrow at least he would satisfy himself. In the morning he would find the child. Returning to his bed, he slept until the gray dawn crept reverently in through the windows as if the day were on its knees.

Ben David rose softly, for the vision of the night was still upon him, but he remembered also the harvest of citrons and of lemons which was not fully gathered. The laborers would be waiting for his instructions, the merchant would be on hand to bargain for the crop, and he must hasten his steps; but in the evening he would surely take the time to find the child. The day passed, the fruit was gathered, the bargain was made; but when the twilight came again he was weary with his work and hungry for his evening meal, and he said, "Tomorrow I will find the child." And so it always was. In the morning he would say, "Tonight I will find the child," and in the evening he would say, "Tomorrow I will find the child."

So the days passed into weeks and the weeks slipped into months and the spring had come, vibrant with the song of birds and heavy with the fragrance of flowers. The almond trees were all abloom in the orchards and their fragrance filled the streets of Bethlehem with subtle sweetness. Ben David sat again on the steps of his house in the cool of the evening. He was figuring on the almond harvest which promised to be so abundant. He was thinking of the gold that would be offered for his crop, and the new vineyard which would be purchased with the money.

Lo, as he sat there he heard the silver tinkle of camel bells coming in through the eastern gate, and the shuffling tread of heavy beasts and the clank of swords and ornaments. Looking up, Ben David saw a rare sight for the quiet little town of Bethlehem. He could scarcely believe his eyes, for here came three stately men with snowy hair and long white beards who sat high on swinging camels decked with crimson cloths. Three kings they surely were, for they were clothed in purple and fine linen. Jewels glistened in their garments and a host of servants followed at their heels. Ben David salaamed with great respect, and descending to the street he plucked one of the attendants by the coat and said, "Peace be to you, sir. Who may these three kings be and what high mission brings them to our humble village?" Before the man could reply, one of the stately strangers, bending from his camel, said to the Bethlehemite: "Good sir, can you tell us, where is He that is born King of the Jews, for we have seen His star in the east and are come to worship Him?" Then pointing with his finger, he directed his gaze toward a brilliant star which seemed to hang like a silver lamp over the caravansary of Chimham.

"Ah," said Ben David, as memory stirred within him, "it must be the child you seek."

"Yes," said the stranger, "it is the Child—the royal Child."

"Then," said Ben David, "you will find Him yonder," and he directed their steps toward the caravansary.

The procession swung on down the street. When the tinkle of the camel bells had ceased, Ben David re-entered his house, wondering again within himself. Once more deep religious instincts stirred within him, and the wistful hopes of his fathers came to him. "Is it possible," he murmured, "that this child is really He?" And he could not sleep for thinking. He was vexed with his own indifference and said, "I have been too careless. Tomorrow I will surely find the child."

But in the morning men were waiting for him at the door and a merchant had come to bargain for the almond harvest and the trees had need of pruning, and he must be at his task. And so it always was. Day after day he said, "Tomorrow I will take the time to find the child." But alas, the morrow never came. Days wore into weeks, weeks into months, and months now journeyed into years. Ben David was an old man now. His hair, too, was white and his beard was long and gray. He looked as stately as one of those three kings he had seen so many years before. He no longer worked in the orchards. Younger men now kept the vineyards, and he lived prosperously on the rich fruitage of his thrift.

But though prosperous he was not content. He had not entirely forgotten the child. He sometimes wondered what had become of him. Lately there had begun to drift into Bethlehem from the north rumors of a wondrous peasant-teacher from Nazareth of Galilee whom thousands sometimes followed; who laid his hand with healing upon the sick folk, and who spoke golden words which once heard could never be forgotten. Ben David speculated who this might be and faintly wished that he might find him.

Once more it was springtime, the fragrance of the almonds was in the air. The Passover season had come, and Ben David went up with others to Jerusalem to attend the feast. Drifting idly with the crowds of pilgrims who thronged the streets in holiday attire, he found himself one day not far away from that green hill outside the city wall where three grim crosses, with their weight of human woe, lifted themselves against a stormy sky. He heard the roar of people as they boiled against that cross like angry waves, and turning to a citizen of Jerusalem, he asked, "What may these things mean?"

"Hast thou not heard of the prophet of Nazareth," said the other, "whom the rulers are crucifying because he stirreth up the people?"

Ben David made no answer, but pushed his way through the crowd until he stood close to the heart of this strange tragedy. There he looked and listened and pondered. What a wondrous face was that upon the cross! Surely this man deserved better of his nation. Had he done anything but good? Rumor spoke only well of him. And who was this woman kneeling there in such a broken, pitiful agony of suffering? Just then the man upon the cross spoke to the woman kneeling at his feet. He uttered the one word "Mother." At that the woman lifted her face. The full light of the stormy sky fell upon it, and in an instant Ben David knew it. The years had left their mark upon it, but it was the same expression of mingled purity and pain. It was the face of one into whose heart a sword had entered, and in Ben David's memory it looked up at him again out of the dusk of a December evening more than thirty years before. It made upon him the same strange impression. Lifting his glance for a moment to the wondrous face of the man upon the cross, Ben David realized as in a flash of light that at last he had found the child.

But it was too late. His long delay had lost for him the boon of the divine Companion. He turned sadly away and was among those who returned to Jerusalem that day smiting upon their breasts in an agony of remorse. Tossing restlessly upon his bed that night in the caravansary at Jerusalem, he thought of many things.

Memory traveled back across the years to that December twilight when there was no room in the inn and he, sitting on the steps of his spacious house, had listened in vain to the appeal for shelter. He heard again in the silent streets of Bethlehem the hurrying steps of the shepherds. He saw again in the dusk the three stately kings with snowy beards and heard the tinkle of their camel bells. He remembered the deep stirrings of his soul and his oft-repeated but never-realized resolution to find the child. He cursed himself for his indifference. He knew now that he had been a hard, self-centered man, too much concerned with the orchards and the gardens.

Then up out of the depths of his consciousness like an unsealed fountain gushed strange words from the Sacred Scriptures of his people—words that he thought he had forgotten. "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." Somehow those words connected themselves with the face of the man upon the cross. Then Ben David knew it was not too late. Tears of repentance lay hot upon his cheeks, but hope shone through them as stars that glint from out a misty sky.

They will tell you in Bethlehem how Ben David spent the last declining years of his life. He mellowed and softened like the ripening fruit of his own orchards. His house was full of hospitality. No traveler sought refuge there in vain. If there was one anhungered he fed him. If there was one athirst he gave him drink. If there was one sick or in prison he visited him. He was as busy in doing good as he had been in tilling his gardens. He talked always of the Child, and in the quiet evenings he would gather the youth of Bethlehem about him in the mouth of the cave where Christ was born. There he would rehearse the wondrous story, dwell sadly upon his own long delay, and urge upon them all the immediacy of finding and following the Child who alone could give them joy and peace and satisfaction.—Lucius H. Bugbee, D. D., in Zion's Herald.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.—I visited this field on the 16th and 17th. Bros. Suits and Watson met me at the station and I spent the night with Bro. Levi Watson. On Sat. a. m., we drove to Mt. Zion for the first quarterly conference. Preaching at 11 o'clock. Not a large congregation. After dinner the conference was held. Bro. Whitaker said it was the best attendance he had seen lately, but from the list of names called I did not consider it a very full attendance. The business was transacted in a very pleasant manner and all seemed to be interested. The conference recommended to the local churches the plan suggested by the Annual Conference for collecting pastor's salary and general interests.

A small amount was raised to assist the pastor in furnishing the parsonage. All parsonages should be furnished with heavy furniture, and I am pleased to see this being done on several of our fields.

Bro. Suits is heartily received by all the churches so far as I learned and he said he had never had a more hearty reception in his ministry. May the Lord abundantly bless him and his people. I preached at Pilot on Saturday night to a splendid congregation of young folks. Spent the night with Bro. J. F. Whitaker; he was to take me to Shoals but he and Bro. W. H. Hauser decided on account of the rain that it was not necessary to go. So Bro. W.'s son took me near Bro. Brown's and Bro. Suits took me to the parsonage where I took supper and preached at Pinnacle and spent the night with Bro. Watson again, and at 9:42 I started for home. My claim paid.

My next appointment is Thomasville.

C. A. Cecil.

P. S.—Thanks to Bro. Curry and his people for sending my salary in advance. C. A. C.

Anderson and Yarborough.—We spent ten days after Conf. with Rev. D. R. Proffett in revival work. The meeting was a success considering the rough weather; 45 souls claimed to get into the Kingdom. Where only one or two men were praying in public in the community 25 or 30 were praying when the meeting closed: 18 gave names for membership. Nearly half enough money was raised to build a new church. I enjoyed my visit.

I am very grateful to Mr. and Mrs Levi McLean for a nice hog packed and sent to us by freight. Also Dr. McLean for two cases of can goods and barrel of apples.

We are expecting a good year. Our people are at least one year behind financially. It will take many of our people two years to pay the indebtedness of this year and live. I am going to emphasize the importance of returning to God and give them the promise of Joel 2:24, 25. "I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten; the canker worm and the caterpillar and the palmer worm, my great army which I sent among you." These are times that call for courage, sacrifice, and faith.

Bro. C. A. Moore, of Harmony, is still indisposed. He is a warm friend and a good man. Many of the Harmony congregation presented our family with presents, as usual.

Mrs. Dan Yarborough has been indisposed for a few weeks; hope she will soon be out again. Mr. John Yarborough is now in his new home near the Yarborough home. It is one of the best in that country.

Our ladies' home missionary society is studying a book. The title, "The Church in the Open Country." Taught by Mrs. E. M. D. Watson.

Bro. Tinsley has been re-elected as Supt. of Yarborough S. S.

Ladies' Aid of Fair View has purchased an individual communion set.

We had the pleasure of preaching a few times for one of our town pastors in Easley during the holidays. Several professed to be saved. One man who had quit the church for years brought his letter back.

The watch service New Year's night was well attended. My hour to preach was ten o'clock. A late hour but a good crowd. At twelve o'clock the power fell. Many praised the Lord. A good hour to begin a new year with.

W. A. Lamar.

High Point.—Hurrah for Burlington! We haven't yet come up to their 300-mark, but we expect to reach it soon in our Sunday school. Perhaps by that time, though, they will be beyond that mark. Anyway, on last Sunday in the midst of a heavy downpour of rain the people kept coming until our attendance at S. S. was 189, and something like the same number at the morning preaching service.

The preacher and his family here have not been pounded quite so heavily as some of our brethren on circuits report, but during this last week, for about three days, packages kept coming from the grocery store and from homes into the parsonage until quite a little store of good things was received by the preacher and his family from the good people of this charge. In fact, there have been very few days since the beginning of the Christmas holidays that we have not received some substantial tokens of appreciation from some of our people. We thank them for their kindness, and feel constrained to renew our efforts to try to serve them better.

It would be encouraging and helpful, I think, if more of the reporters and pastors would give the number attending Sunday school. Why not have a lively contest in our Sunday-schools throughout the entire Conference? It seems to me that it will inspire us all to do better if reporters will give numbers.

The Sunday school is the very workshop of the church where most of the finished product of newborn souls is turned out for the Master. Yours in His Service, A. G. Dixon.

High Point, Jan. 18.

Canaan, Piedmont Ct.—We are having our S. S. and prayer meeting right on through the winter except a few times when the weather was too bad to get out. G. L. Motsinger.

Hawkins' Chapel, Littleton Ct.—We are glad to have Bro. Edwards back with us. He preached a good sermon to a large congregation last Sun.

Another one of our members has died,—Miss Elizabeth Edmonds. She was good and faithful and attended her church when her health would permit. She has been unable to attend church for a long time. She leaves a sister and many friends. Vannah Shearin.

Alleghany, Davidson Ct.—Our pastor, Rev. J. W. Hulin, was with us last Sunday and preached a good sermon. We are glad to have him back.

Aunt Nancy Smith died on the 11th and was buried beside her husband at Alleghany. She was a good woman, loved by all. She loved the church. She was helpless and could not go to church, but she always wanted to know how the church was getting along. She was nearly 80 years old and had been a member of the church for a long time. She has six living sons and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren. May they so live as to meet her in Heaven.

Sunday is the time set to reorganize our S. S. We hope that all will come out and take part and that we may have good school.—Mr. Eli Allred has been sick for some time, but is better. We ask prayer that he may soon be well. May we all look to the Lord for His blessing. Abigail Coggin.

Corinth, Littleton Ct.—Many hearts were made glad by Br. Edwards' return to this work. He has worked hard for its upbuilding, but not alone, for he has some helpful members at each church. At Littleton some of the members with him are putting forth their best efforts to make their church work a success. Their S. S. is growing in interest and number.

Mr. Marion Morris's daughters, Eula, Nora and Mary, got up a box supper some weeks ago and raised over $20 to help buy a carpet for our church.

Some weeks ago Mrs. Bob Harper died. Last Friday Uncle Bob—her husband—died. He had been helpless a long time. He was an old soldier, a good farmer, and an efficient member of this church. His wife belonged here also.

Went to see "Uncle Bill" Morris, Sunday. He, too, is living that sad, helpless life, on crutches. Miss Nora Morris is able to get out of her room again, having suffered several days with something like acute rheumatism.

Mr. Clarence Carter has gone into mercantile business with his brother, J. Emmett Carter, at Rosemary, N. C.

Mrs. Jessie Carter is having her land surveyed, giving each child his portion while she lives.

Mrs. Nannie Pepper who kept Central at Aurelian Springs for the last three years, has built and moved on land Mrs W. E. Fletcher, her aunt, gave her; is next door neighbor to Mrs. Geo Barnes.

Mr. G. S. Barnes and wife, of Newport News, Va., spent the month of Dec. with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. L. Barnes.

First quarterly conference meets in Littleton Wednesday. Rev. R. A. Swaringen to preach at 11 o'clock, after which the ladies will serve dinner. Conference convenes afternoon.

Fannie Barnes, Rep.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Ct.—On Sunday our pastor preached two excellent sermons. Immediately after the forenoon service a business meeting was held and new officers elected, the class book revised, and the Sunday school reorganized. Also at the close of the service one new member was received into the church.

Owing to rough weather and sickness we have had no S. S. for two months, but we have resolved to begin with the new year and make it better than ever before. Since my last report we have lost by death one of our brightest young men, Bro. Irvin Smith.

We are indeed glad to have our same pastor back this year, and if we church members will assist and encourage him as we should much good in many ways will be accomplished. We think he is the very man for this work.

Roella Pegg, Reporter.

Caroleen.—Our new pastor, Rev. J. D. Morris, preached for us Dec. 27th. Two excellent sermons. First Quar. Conf. convened Dec. 26th. We had with us from Lincolnton Mr. D. B. Johnson, also Mr. R. G. Wood. We were glad indeed to have them with us. We were delighted to have Bro. Johnson in our home Sat. night, also our pastor Sunday. Our S. S. is doing nicely. Our regular attendance is about 120. I have a class of little boys which I am very much interested in. I have from 18 to 26 almost every Sunday. Mr. C. W. Atkins is our Supt. We all like him. Mr. T. S. McFarland is teacher of the Baraca class; Mrs. Buckner is teacher of the Philathea class. We have a good choir. Edna McFarland is organist; Mr. Watkins is leader.

Miss Maud Bess and Mr. Beem were married at the home of the bride's mother Dec. 31st. Miss Maud was one of our most efficient Sunday school teachers. We wish for them a long and happy life. Myrtle McFarland.

Reidsville.—We are glad to have our same good pastor and wife, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, and we feel that great good can be accomplished this year if the church and Sunday school will only co-operate with them in the great work that is to be done here. On account of the disagreeable weather there has been a rather small attendance at both Sunday school and church services, but we trust that we will have a much larger attendance at both services, and also at the Wed. night meetings which are so inspiring and helpful to all who attend. Come out, dear friends, and see what you have been missing. Our pastor preached two excellent sermons for us last Sunday.

Our Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly meeting at the parsonage on the 3rd of January. The Society was invited to come and spend the day and about ten of us enjoyed a most delicious dinner so carefully and well prepared by the hostess and the whole day was one long to be remembered by all who attended. We are sorry indeed to report Mrs. Lowdermilk being quite sick with La Grippe; we trust she will soon be out again. Reporter..

Pleasant Gap, Ivy Ct.—We are glad to have Bro. Martin with us again. He started his new work Jan. 3rd with a good sermon. We were well pleased with Bro. Martin's work last year and we are hoping that the work will be in good shape before long. He has a large work but he never falters when there's good to be done. Pray for us that we may have a successful year.

—Bro. J. M. Brown, of Guilford College, is doing jury service in the Superior Court here this week.

THE CONSTITUTION AND DISCIPLINE OF THE M. P. CHURCH.

Where could we go to find a better government or even its equivalent? I believe if it is properly understood and strictly followed it is the best church government in the world! And that is why I am a Methodist Protestant, and stand uncompromisingly opposed to all unions that require any material changes in our government. It is wise to let well enough alone, and unwise to accept something not so good as that we already have. I believe it has been said that the "best government is the one best administered." In this there is much truth, from the fact that a good law not properly enforced or executed may have in many respects the effects of a bad law.

Hence, I do not believe that any man should be received into our Annual Conference and sent out to preach and execute our discipline, unless he understands the laws of our church; for no man can be expected to execute a law he does not understand himself. We would do well to be more strict in our examinations of candidates for membership in our Conference. If we do not understand the laws of our own church, we may pass resolutions in our conferences that would be in direct conflict with the Constitution of the M. P. Church and thereby do untold harm.

We also find the laws referring to the trial of all ministers belonging to the Annual Conference who may violate the laws of the M. P. Church. Turn to page 52, section 7. Here the law plainly says that "the official notifications, appointment of the committee and similar duties shall be performed by the president of the Annual Conference,—or such minister as he may appoint for the purpose," &c.

Why should these things be performed by the president? Answer, because the president is the Conference in the interval of Conference, and the law does not give authority to proceed with the trial to any one else, and if the president does not, and will not, the whole church is powerless to do anything before the Annual Conference shall convene again; and the offender can go on, doing all kinds of devilment until the Annual Conference meets again, which may be nearly a year! Now then turn to the Discipline, page 62, Sec. 4, and we find that our forefathers were too wise to give an offender time to almost ruin the church before being brought to trial. On page 62 of our Discipline, Sec. 4, latter part, the law plainly says, "When charges are preferred in the interval of Conference the president shall appoint the prosecutor." Here we see that if charges are preferred against a minister during Conference, then the Conference shall appoint the pronecutor; but if in the interval of Conference, the president shall appoint the prosecutor.

This is conclusive proof that should charges be preferred against a ministerial member of the Annual Conference during the interval of Conference, it is the plain duty of the president to proceed, appointing the prosecutor as the law provides, and proceed according to law.

As regards the law on page 53, Sec. 8, founded on Matt. 18:15-17, viz., "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee," &c. Now this refers to cases of personal offenses, such as a misunderstanding about business transactions, and that only. And the law in the latter part of Sec. 8 which says, "In default of pursuing the above course here recommended, no charge shall lie against a minister or member." This means that no charge against a minister or member of crookedness shall lie, except the parties bringing the charge have complied with the directions laid down by our Savior in Matt. 18:15-17. And it does not mean that if charges of lying, drunkenness, stealing, fighting, etc., are brought against a minister or member, that they shall not be tried except the parties bringing the charges have complied with Matt. 18:15-17.

It would be absurd to place any other construction on the law above referred to! Suppose charges are brought against a minister or member who is a perfect giant, having an ungovernable temper, so much so that everybody is afraid to speak to him about his improper conduct, would any one contend that no charges could be legally brought against such a one, unless some one could be fohnd brave enough to follow the law laid down in Matt. 18:15-17. It would be unreasonable, to say the least of it.

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

Some of the older members of the Herald family have been writing upon the subjects of "Prayer," "Old Time Religion," etc., and I have read these with interest. There is another topic which I would be glad for somebody to take up and I don't know how to express it except in these words, "The good-time ideas of to-day," or "Sweet Sixteen." Now, it has been just a few years since I was sixteen, it's true, and it seems to me these few years have brought about many changes. I am in a position to observe as I've been working with the boys and girls of this age in my S. S. class and, too, sometimes we "young folks" spend social evenings together. These are bright young men and young ladies and we want them to see that the church in the future will be "run" by them. Not only do I know about conditions in our own community, but as I visit, sometimes in towns and cities, I can't help but compare life with what it was even five or ten years ago. Five years ago I did not know anything about the "Daughters of Zion walking with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet." Isaiah says, "In that day the Lord will take away the beauty of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their cauls and their round tires like the moon, the chains, and the bracelets, and the mufflers, the bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the headbands, and the tablets, and the earrings, the rings, and nose-jewels, the changeable suits of apparel, and the mantles, and the wimples and the crisping pins, the glasses, and the fine linen, and the hoods and the veils." What would Isaiah say if he were among us today? My! some of the young ladies try to pose like the disgusting pictures in the fashion books! Ask your grown brother when you get home, "How did I look today?" Yes, he will tell you how you looked! I'll tell you it is a blessing for a girl to have a grown brother, anyway. Some men are the "disciples of custom" too. Not only do we find the flippant young miss, but the giddy cigarette fiend, who stands around and likes to speak of his father as "the squire," "the old man," "the governor," etc. And beware of the girl who calls her mother "my maternal ancestor," or "the old woman."

We find so many boys who are cowards. Pistol shots tell on them. Go to a country party and when the crowd disperses, you hear promiscuous shooting any time. We did not hear this a few years ago. I heard a young man say recently that prosperity didn't agree with people. Until the last six months we had never seen such prosperous times. Now, I did not mean to write in a pessimistic mood, for I heartily approve of wholesome pleasure. It is good to see a buoyant, happy life. Solomon said, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones." There is nothing which would seem to me a better compliment than to have it said, "She is so jolly—always cheerful." "An ounce of cheerfulness is worth a pound of sadness to serve God with." "You find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people. Why not make earnest effort to confer that pleasure upon others?" I like the little song:

Always cheerful, always cheerful,
Why should murmuring enter there?
When our kind and loving Father
Makes us children of His care?

Carlyle said, "Piety does not mean that a man should make a sour face about things, and refuse to enjoy in moderation what his Maker has given." Indeed, the pious life is the happiest life. Here is the real essence of what I am saying: Don't let's let the frivolities of modern pleasure "sap up" the good that we ought to be able to do. We were taught in our last S. S. lesson about different gods of today,—fashion, money, self, society, pleasure, cigarettes, drink, etc. These are real golden calves. Don't let these gods keep you from spending several hours each week in the study of the S. S. lesson. My conscience would hurt if I did this.

Let's be careful in our conversation. Some young ladies don't mind taking the Lord's name in vain. Yes, we hear this too! To my mind one of the worst sins is slander. What's the use in passing on the ugly things we hear about our neighbors. "Who steals my purse steals trash; but who steals my good name steals that which enriches him not and makes me poor indeed." Running down the character of another is a form of stealing, did you know it?

"There is so much good in the worst of us
And so much bad in the best of us
That it ill becomes any of us
To talk about the rest of us."

Now in the beginning of the new year let us realize that it is worth while to avail ourselves of the many opportunities of advancing God's Kingdom. Let the giddy, frivolous worldly lusts go and take hold of something which will not perish. With this little clipping from the Sunday School Times I close:

HATTIE HARRIS.

THE STORY THE OLD CANVASSER TOLD.

"Good morning, madam. Can I interest you i nmy line of specialties?"

It was the same old inquiry that was made at my door that bright spring morning; but, ordinary as the words might be, I realized instinctively that it was no ordinary canvasser that thus addressed me. Voice, manner, and pronunciation evidenced that my caller was a man of culture and refinement. The slender form and slightly stooping shoulders bore witness to scholarly habits.

It is a pathetic sight and one which strongly appeals to me to see an aged person striving to eke out a scanty living by going about with the inevitable handbag of light wares, seeking patronage from house to house. The man who stood at my door was apparently about seventy years of age; and as his goods were staples of which I happened to be in need, I gladly invited him in to sit and rest while I made my selection. Always on the alert for a story, especially one from real life in its infinite phases, I felt that there was one not far to seek.

"Sir," I remarked, busying myself among his goods, "I perceive that you are a man with a past; you have not always been a canvasser. Am I warranted in asking what part in the world's work you have taken in other days?"

His answer was a question. "What would you fancy?" he asked with a quiet smile.

"As you stood at the door," I made answer, "I was reminded of words spoken long ago by a brave soldier: 'I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus.'" I believe, sir, that you are a retired minister."

The "light that never was on land or sea" lighted up the worn old face at this evidence of soul recognition. The stooping shoulders straightened.

"You have rightly judged. I retired from the ministry five years ago after spending forty years as an ambassador for my King."

"Forty years in the service of the Church!" I exclaimed. "And now"—I paused with a deprecating glance at the scattered wares about me.

"Yes, I understand," he answered gently. "Yet you must not feel that 'some strange thing' has befallen me. I am only one in a goodly company. It is a very simple story," he continued, "and one often duplicated among my brethren. Do you care to hear it?"

I assured him of my interest, and the gently modulated voice continued: "From the time I was called to the ministry I felt that I was peculiarly fitted for the home missionary field, and the first twenty years after my ordination were spent in the lumber and mining districts of Northern Michigan. You know what that means. It paid in glorious experiences, but in little else. The last twenty years of my ministry were spent in more remunerative fields. Yet, owing to the force of circumstances, 'mother' and I have come down to our threescore years and ten with no other earthly welth than two splendid sons and a little home back East worth a few hundred dollars. There were four children in the little home missionary parsonage, one of whom passed away in childhood. It was a long, hard pull to see our boys through college, but we had our reward."

Again the brave old face was lighted up.

"Yes," he repeated, "we had our reward; for they were both called to the foreign mission field. One is in China, the other in Central Africa. We last saw them two years ago. . . .We shall not see them again till we hold our family reunion on the other side."

I had ceased to examine the samples before me. I was looking on the drama of a life; I was listening to music from the harp strings of a human heart.

"Our daughter," continued the old soldier of the cross, while the harp strings were swept still more tenderly, "our daughter developed talents that justified us in giving her the best musical education that our means could command. But just as she had begun what promised to prove a successful career, she failed so rapidly in health that an immediate change of climate was the only hope held out to us for her recovery. It has been such a comfort to me that at that time, in addition to securing our little home, I had gathered together a few hundred dollars, which enabled mother and Nellie to come to your own beautiful Pasadena, while I carried on the work at home the best I could alone. But the disease had become thoroughly intrenched before we had even suspected. We did all we could; . . . They were here a year; . . . then mother came home alone, leaving Nellie sleeping in beautiful Mountain View. We had always been so thankful that our little savings held out until she was past all need of earthly comforts."

There was a long pause ere he resumed his story.

"That was the last year of my ministry. Soon after my own failing health made us long for a warmer climate; and last fall we sold such of our goods as we could realize the most from, rented the little home, and turned our faces toward the sunset. It was natural that we should come to Pasadena. Perhaps you understand the attraction of a distant grave."

Aye, I understand. "And your resources?" I asked impulsively.

"The little home rents for six dollars per month when it is occupied. I receive a small sum from the Ministerial Relief Fund. You know there are so many demands on the Church in these days," he added apologetically. "Then I have this little work; it is about all I am able to do. Some days I make as much as fifty cents on my sales, and mother is a capital manager, you see."

Yes, it was obvious that "mother" was a capital manager. "But what of the coming years?" I asked. "The time may come that you will not be able to do even this work."

A shadow fell athwart the face opposite me, but only for a moment.

"Ah, dear madam, God does not come to the end of his resources when we come to ours." And then, as if forgetful of my presence, he repeated softly: " 'I have been young, and now I am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

. . . . . .

Since that spring morning there have been many precious interviews with the man of God and also with "mother," the "capital manager" who served her apprenticeship long ago in the home mission parsonage. The old handbag is still in evidence, and with it the bearer carries a benediction to those who have hearts to understand; and I rejoice that occasionally at least I have "entertained angels" not "unawares."

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

—o—

Woman's Home Missionary Society, Henderson.—To put our "best foot foremost", I will say that our society agreed and has kept the agreement to support an orphan in our Children's Home. We agreed in response to Mrs. Hammer's appeal, with the understanding that it would cost $60. We kept the agreement after the announcement that it would require $100. This work has caused more enthusiasm in our society than all other endeavors combined. Illustrating this fact I will say that at our meeting in January, 1914, the president requested each member to make at least 25 cts. and report at the next meeting. We had no definite aim except to increase the interest and attendance; and thought we ought to raise a fund to be applied to whatever emergency might arise. This little work put new life into the society, but when Mrs. Hammer's appeal came for the support of an orphan, our little band of seventeen members rallied to the idea and we accepted the proposition heartily. Some agreed to pay the 25 cts. a month; but all saw that would not "fill the bill." One woman made $15 making maids' caps, aprons or any thing she could dispose of, others also made aprons and sold them. Mrs. Eugene Falkner who received the prize Bible for talent money made $5 selling butterfly aprons and gave us although she did not belong to our society. It required not a little personal effort to interest all the women of our church; but by continued visiting, phoning and writing letters we have succeeded thus far to some extent. Only a few were unwilling to take part in the work, and I feel sure that all who participated have enjoyed it. We worked with our hands to accomplish the purpose; one woman who is a great-grandmother made tatting and sold it to help the cause along; and our prayer goes with our gift that our boy, Colon Haltom, may be a blessing to himself and to the world. Besides these individual efforts we held one social and one organ recital which together netted about $25. At the December meeting some of us were determined that the $100 should be raised and it was easy. One woman's contribution did not get in in time, as she was sick, so we had in the treasury $4.60 at the January meeting and raised $7.40 without a money speech at all, and sent to Mr. Garrett Jan. 7th check for $12, the first installment for 1915. At the meeting, our new president, Miss Mary Young, made a good talk and thought it a good time to choose whom we would serve. Mrs. F. R. Harris suggested that we all commit to memory and pray the 23rd and 24th verses of the 139th Psalm. After the business of the society was finished Mrs. F. R. Harris, with whom our societies meet during the winter months, read "Old Sandy, the Moonshiner," and I am sure we all felt like doing more for humanity than we did before. Corresponding Secy.

A Card of Thanks.—We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for the kindness shown us during the sickness and death of our dear husband and father. Our vocabulary is too limited to express our thanks, so this is in lieu of words. May the good Lord bless you all.

Mrs. E. A. Isley and Children.

Eden, Halifax Ct.—Pastor Swaringen delivered a helpful and stirring sermon to an attentive congregation last Sunday. We thank the Conference for sending us such a fine preacher.

Nearly all of the amount due former pastor was raised Sunday. The stewards and trustees were re-elected.

Communion service at our next service, first Sun. in Feb.

Some of the girls around the church will re-open Sunday school next Sun. at 2 p. m.——Mr. Lonnie Williams returned to Raleigh, but not to attend school, for in a few days he came back bringing with him his wife. They will make their home near the church. We will be very glad to have his wife worship with us.

We do not think the Conference could have sent us a pastor we liked any better. His wife and children form a most interesting family with which we are well pleased. Irene Hawkins.

ASHEVILLE.—Yesterday was a gloomy, rainy day, and I looked for a poor attendance, but I got badly fooled. We lacked only six of having as many in Sunday school as last Sunday, a beautiful day. And, best of all, nine new scholars were enrolled. The morning preaching service was well attended. So with the C. E. and the night service. Six new members were added to the Christian Endeavor Society, with more to follow. If the next two Sundays are as good as the past three, this month will be the banner month of the present pastorate. Yes, you old croakers, we're coming! And the great hope of the church here lies in the fact that while adults are few, particularly men folks, there is a splendid body of young people, who are enthusiastically in love with our church. A revival that will sweep these into the Kingdom, and line them up for definite Christian life and work, is the only thing needed to crown this work with complete success. Do not fail to be much in prayer for this, for our sakes; but most of all for Christ's sake. If he cannot honor what has been done here, and cannot crown it with the blessing of the Holy Spirit, it has been done in vain.

After I had gotten to the point of almost absolute discouragement and despondency in regard to an answer to my continued appeals for money to help pay off our pressing indebtedness, I got a letter the latter part of the week from Bro. —— in which he says, "I don't think it will do for you to send in a report without something to report, so I am sending my pledge for $10.00 with the express understanding that you do not use my name in the paper." You might have a thought like that and send us your pledge. Oh, come on, folks. The preacher is getting bald, and gray-headed, and as lean as the whittled end of a tooth pick, talking to you about this. The whole Herald force is getting provoked at my continuous song. The Editor is tired of correcting my copy, and the compositor is getting cross-eyed looking at it. Relieve the strain all around and send us the money you have been going to send for the last two years. If you can't give just now, pledge, and tell us when you can pay it. It looks like I'd have to take another round of letter writing to those who have already pledged, but I hate to do that because it takes so much of my time that ought to be spent at other things. You can relieve me of writing to you, at least, if you will send your part. The money is very greatly needed. It is your opportunity for service. Come on!

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Shoals, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Ch.—We reorganized S. S. the first Sunday with a very good enrollment. Our attendance last Sunday was 62; collection good, which we donate to the Children's Home every second Sunday. Think we should be very loyal to our S. S.

We were very glad to have our new preacher, Mr. Suits, with us Sunday. [illegible] wish for him great success and we think with the co-operation of the people he will surely have it.

Mrs. Rebecca Hauser, one of our faithful S. S. attendants, passed away Jan. 6th. She had been in feeble health for some time. We realize that she will be missed greatly in this community. While it is our loss it is her eternal gain.

With best wishes to the Herald,

Maple Springs S. S. is so much interested in the Children's Home that the school voted to do without the usual Christmas candy and send the money to the Home instead of buying candy for themselves. That school is getting in a good healthy growing condition. The Baraca Class at Pleasant Union has sent us two substantial lap robes. We need just two more so each seat will have one. (The hack has four seats.) We have learned that this is a promising class, one that will mean much to the church and the Children's Home.

If you want to send us something and don't know whether to or not, just write me and find out.

Be getting ready with your good news and then send it in, that is the way to keep us wearing a bright face. Some have sent us letters that are making us smile. Some time later we will tell you all about it. H. A. Garrett.

DENTON HIGH SCHOOL.—We are now in the third week of the Spring Term and everything is going well and the future for the school has never been brighter. We have never had a better set of students than we now have. The business department is doing good work and is adding much to the school. I am now more fully convinced that the school here is a permanent institution. Whenever the church takes hold of this school as other churches take hold of their schools, we will go forward by leaps and bounds. We now have 29 boarding students, and a better local patronage than was expected. Give us your influence.

Married.—On Jan. 7th, at the home of the bride in Albemarle, Mrs. E. A. Plyler, widow of our beloved Rev. E. A. Plyler, and Bro. Martin F. Furr, of Plyler, and one of our best men, were united in marriage by the writer. Two of our best people have decided to walk life's lane together, and we predict for them a happy future. In advance of the wedding day, our church at Albemarle made Bro. Furr Supt. of Sunday school. They will live in Albemarle. W. D. Reed.

On Jan. 7th, Miss Lee Shoe and Daniel Eudy were married. Miss Lee is one of our faithful members of Friendship church, and one of our best girls. Mr. Eudy is a member of Salem M. E. church, and is a bright young man. Our best wishes follow them.

—We have received another suggestion as to the expenditure of our fund for the enlargement of the Herald's circulation. All received are good.

RUSSELLISM AND THE "SECOND CHANCE."

I. M. HALDEMAN, D. D.

Russellism wrests the Scripture in an effort to try to make it teach a gospel of a second chance for the wicked after death. There is not a word in all Scripture about a gospel preached after death to those who shall be raised from the dead.

Our Lord Jesus Christ has settled this doctrine of "another chance." He says those who do not believe in him in this world shall not see life (that is, they shall not be made partakers of his life) and the wrath of God abideth on them (John 3:36.)

If they do not see the life of Christ when they die, then the wrath of God is abiding upon them when they die. If the wrath of God is abiding upon them when they enter into the state of death, then the wrath of God is abiding upon them after they die; and because it is an abiding wrath, or as the word means, a remaining wrath, it abides or remains upon them while they are dead; and since the wrath of God is an abiding or remaining wrath, those who die under it cannot, in the very nature of the case, have a second chance.

Our Lord settled this question of the second chance in that story he told of the rich man in hell (hades). The substance and meaning of the story is that death fixes doom.

The rich man wanted to get out of hell. Abraham tells him that between the righteous and the unrighteous after they are dead there is a great gulf fixed, a gulf that never can be crossed. In repeating the words of Abraham and thus authorizing them, our Lord teaches with terrific emphasis that death fixes doom; as death meets you, eternity keeps you: There is no second chance. Now—not tomorrow! Now only is the day and opportunity of salvation.

When Russellism talks of a second chance, it is covering over the mouth of hell with dry sticks. Those who listen to Russellism, who are deceived enough to believe in a second chance, will step on these sticks, break through and fall into hell.

RUSSELLISM IS A DO-NOTHING DOCTRINE.

Russellism has no place for missions! It would be a screaming farce for Russellism to believe in missions. If all men who die—those who live wicked lives here and those who die in lands where the gospel does not reach them and those who deliberately reject it when they do hear it—if all those who have died without Christ are to be raised from the dead and given a second chance to hear the gospel; if the experiences of past wickedness, and the consciousness of having had a stupendous miracle wrought in their behalf in bringing them back to life shall tend (as Russellism teaches) to make them accept the gospel when offered the second time, then, there is no need of missions.

All you have to do is to let unsaved people and nations go their gait. All you have to do is to let the unrighteous die; they will turn up at the last, each one guaranteed to hear in his own tongue the wonderful works and words of God, and, by reason of the everlasting destruction some of them have endured for some thousands of years, thoroughly predisposed to believe.

Under such circumstances to send out a single missionary or to spend fifty cents on the foreign field would be a criminal waste of men and money.

PUTS A PREMIUM ON WICKEDNESS.

More than that! If Russellism be true; if all men who die out of Christ will sooner or later have a chance to belong to Christ, no matter how wickedly they may have lived here, then, there is no saving necessity to preach the gospel even now. There is no need of a church at all.

Russellism puts a premium on wickedness. You can eat, drink and be merry, do all the wickedness you like; you can lie, cheat, swear, murder, and then when you die, whether it be in bed, at the end of the hangman's rope, or in the electric chair, you will go out of existence. After a while God will call you into existence again. You will know that God has so called you. You will realize all that God has said is true, and when you hear this gospel, you will (Russellism says) be led irresistibly to believe; or, if you prefer it, you can immediately go out of existence again into the dreamless sleep of everlasting destruction.

Why then should any one be a Christian? Why should any one deny himself "the pleasures of sin for a season," when it is absolutely certain that hereafter, if he wished, he might, without worry and fret take the everlasting life he did not care to possess here?

MONEY EASY FOR THE GOSPEL OF NO HELL

Russellism has no trouble in obtaining money. People are willing to give money and give it freely to those whom they believe able to prove there is no hell, no eternal, conscious suffering for sin, and this is the gospel Russellism preaches night and day.

Nothing the thieves, the murderers, the open and secret sinners would better like than to know that they have two chances after death—either to believe a repeated gospel, or to be annihilated forever. Thus Russellism puts a premium on sin and a discount on Christian virtue.

Russellism tries to save its face by talking about a few "elect" in this dispensation who by self-sacrifice, by putting to death the self-life, may attain to inherent life, to what it calls "immortality."

Russellism may deceive a few by teaching that there is a distinction between inherent life earned in this age through self-mortification, and the everlasting life to be given (for mere believing) to the pell mell crowd that shall come up at last in the pell mell resurrection. But this scheme, this doctrine of election through self-killing, the idea that by self-denial the old Adam nature, human nature itself may be destroyed, and the self-denier attain to immortality—this scheme as a universal and deterrent force against the laxity it sows with the other hand will not and does not work.

THE BABYLONIANISM OF PROPHECY.

Nay! Let Russellism become the dominating religion in this world and sooner or later, all the pent-up wickedness and salaciousness in human nature will break over its pent and flow out in a wild and devastating flood of immeasurable and riotous sin.

A few dupes here and there may go round the country trying to earn the Russellism patent of immortality by acting as colporteurs, selling, or giving away "Studies in the Scriptures," but the great mass will in one way or another break loose from restraint and say, "Why should we worry? Everlasting life will be good enough for us; on with the dance, fill the beaker to the brim; we will wait our second chance and keep an eye open all the while to the rebate on the second chance—the final annihilation that is always a refuge of endless peace."

Thus Russellism is one of the signs of the last times.

Its proper title should be Babylonianism.

Babylon means—confusion, mixture. It is a mixture of all the odds and ends of ecclesiastical heresies and infidelities which have been analyzed, torn to pieces, cast out and trampled under foot by the Church through the succeeding centuries of its divine yet Devil-assaulted history.

Russellism betrays its origin. The Lord warned us that the activity of the Devil in the closing hours of this age would not be the activity of horn and hoof, but the activity of the counterfeit.

The Devil would come in the name of Christ. He would transform himself into an angel of light. His ministers would pose as ministers of righteousness. He should do miracles that would deceive all but the elect—and very nearly deceive them. The Devil has coined and patented a numerous lot of very successful counterfeits. Here are some of them:

Unitarianism.
Universalism.
Swedenborgianism.
New Thought.
Emmanuelism.
Christian Science.
Russellism, or as it sometimes called—Millennial Dawnism.

CATCHES DISCIPLES OF A MUTILATED BIBLE.

All these counterfeits deceive unwary souls. But this Russellism is exceedingly successful in catching a certain class: those who are tired, and sick unto death, of being preached to about the life that now is, about socialism, about regeneration of human society, about bettering the natural man and bettering the natural man's world; and who never hear, or scarcely ever hear from the pulpit, anything definite, or honest, or worth while about the life to come, about the great hereafter—about eternity; tired to their very souls of being preached to about the politics of this world and very little about the Politeuma or polities of the country, "over there"; people who are tired of hearing the minister in the pulpit quote some theological German infidel, throw doubt on the book of Genesis, send them guessing about Moses and in the end leave them a crumpled-up Bible—a Bible with many of the leaves torn out, and no certainty as to whether the rest will not have to go. Russellism gets many who are of this disposition, by its continuous dealing with the question of death here and life hereafter; by its constant talk about and appeal to the future; by its bold announcement that it stands for a whole Bible; by its aggressive claim of certainty, precision and definiteness of statement; by mapping out the ages to come and thus making the future intensely vital and attractive.

There are honest folk who love the Bible, yearn to know something of the morrow of eternity, and are ready to respond to the teaching that professes to come with a "thus saith the Lord.."

PRETENDED INSURANCE AGAINST HELL.

But Russellism is bound to catch another class. Sure and certain to catch them, befool and ruin them, now and forever: all those who want a religion that will insure them against hell, against continued conscious punishment for any sin they may commit. Thus Russellism plans its counterfeit religion that it may catch and deceive both the honest and the dishonest; both those who really want to know abiut God and the hereafter of the soul, and those who are anxious to go on serving the Devil with guaranteed impunity.

This is Russellism or Millennial Dawnism, the great counterfeit. This is the false and blasphemous religion which today all over the earth, like a foul gangrene, like a hidden cancer, like a loathsome pestilence, is destroying the souls of men, putting to shame the name, and setting aside the glory of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Let no one who loves his Bible or believes in a saving Christ be deceived for one moment by this thing that, like the Devil, glibly quotes Scripture (but like the Devil only to pervert it) and like Anti-Christ himself comes in the name of Christ.

Be not deceived! Test it by its relation to the eternal deity of God's Christ, by the truth of his resurrection to an immortal human body; and as aqua fortis reveals the brass and false metal in the counterfeit, so will the eternal Scripture truths show the debased thing that endeavors to pass itself off as the pure gold of God.

Let no one who is living in sin, and making his or her soul a moral sewer through which the black tide of lust and self-gratification may flow unhindered; let no one such deceive himself or herself with the false hops that death ends all, that there will be a second chance, or that at the end, eternal destruction may be the panacea for every sorrow and for every ill.

Nay! let the voice out of hell (in that story for which the Son of God has made himself responsible as exact truth), let the voice of Dives ring down through all the ages in all the accents of eternal woe to your soul: "I am tormented in this flame."

EXHORTATION TO THE MISLED.

If any of you who read have been beguiled by Russellism, I would with all my soul exhort you to turn away from it, from the false hopes it offers and the false Christ it presents; from the disembodied, formless ghost which trades in His Holy Name, and gibbers and simulates as any boneless ghost of the pit. Turn from it before your spiritual possibilities and mental faculties are helplessly paralyzed. Turn from it to that Christ who from all eternity has been the Voice and the Word of God; who from all eternity has been the outgoing and forthputting of God; who in his glorified humanity and his unchanged, eternal deity is our great God and Saviour, Jesus Christ, able to save unto the uttermost all who come unto God by faith in him; that Saviour who has said: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest;" that living, human yet divine, Saviour who says today to all the sons of men wherever they may be, or in whatever state of sin or woe, or sorrow, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out;" that blessed Saviour whose word of promise to his troubled disciples ere he left them to ascend to heaven was: "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also;" that glorious and glorified, loving, shining, resplendent and ever-comforting Saviour, whose last word from heaven to the Church he loves and for which he shed his blood is: "Surely I come quickly."

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

MECKLENBURG CT.—We had one of the sweetest services today I have ever witnessed. God sent His Holy Spirit to fill many of our hearts as we worshiped him the first Sunday in the new year, and the first Sunday in our new church. Things were new: new year, new church, new life, new love and three new members were received; namely, Mrs. C. W. Porter, Grandma Thompson, and Miss Maude Stallings (into full membership). So we feel that we are starting off nicely at this place.

We began our church here on Sept. 1, 1914. The saws and hammers have been almost constantly ringing ever since. On Thurs. morning, Dec. 24, it was seen that we could make that day "moving day," and when night came we were ready for the first preaching service in the new church.

We look back at the old store house where we had been worshiping and said, Old Storehouse, you are sacred. God has blessed us under your roof. You have let us be warm in the summer time and cold in the winter time We are glad you are there, or we might not have any place to worship in. So we are going to leave you. God has given us a house better than you are to worship in. Good bye.!

We would love to mention all whh have helped to build this church. But we can't. God knows all of them, and may He bless each one is my prayer. I believe that God heard every stroke of the saws and hammers as the work went on. And He meets with us now

I want to take this means of thanking every one that contributed to our collector (Miss Maude Stallings) at our Conference held in Asheville. The amount paid and pledged was from $10 down. But the greatest amount paid was 25c. I [illegible] an infirm old gentleman, a confederate soldier, a man of God, gave all the money he had, 25c. May God's blessing rest upon him.

We thank all who gave us help. We are still needing money, and feel like we would be just as much thankful for some more as we were for that, if any one feels disposed to give.

We think the work will go on nicely this year.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Beulah church on Sat. at 2 o'clock, Feb. 13th. Hope to see all the official members present.

H. E. Waldrop, Pastor.

—Sunday was a good day with us: the attendance at both Sunday school and church was the best in a long time, and we raised $26 on District Parsonage. S. W. Taylor.

Jan. 11, 1915.

GRACE CHURCH, GREENSBORO.—Since we last reported there have been several items of more than passing interest which should have received consideration from us, but two weeks ago we fell into the hands of La Grippe and were kept there so closely that all other matters were dismissed for the tmie being.

The Children's Christmas exercise given Wednesday after Christmas was most splendidly gotten up and all of the children rendered their parts very well; thus reflecting credit on Mrs. W K. Hartsell by whose training they were prepared. This exercise was followed on Sunday night by the White Gifts for the King. This was the second time we used this exercise and can recommend it most heartily to every Sunday school that wants to cultivate the real spirit of Christmas giving. The exercise was followed by a well rendered cantata, "The Star of Bethlehem," by the church choir.

Fuller returns of our last year's debt raising campaign revealed that about $2,500 had been secured, and we expect to close the canvass this week with fully that much to be paid during the present year.

We must take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation of the many kindnesses received while wewere shut in with the grip. There were so many evidences of love and esteem from this kind people that we feel that even a bad case of grip can have some compensations.

We had been remembered in many substantial ways by a number of friends during the holidays, so much so that we felt like calling names in cold metal, but managed to refrain ourselves. Still these evidences are none the less precious, and will make the work of the remaining months of the year seem lighter than it otherwise could have been. R. M. Andrews, Pastor.

GREENVILLE CT.—The first quarterly conference wil meet with the people of Hobbs' Chapel on Sat., Jan. 30. At 11 a. m., preaching; business in the afternoon. I would strongly urge that a large delegation of the official members present themselves.

D. T. Surratt, Pastor.

Triplet, Va., Jan. 16, 1915.

BURLINGTON.

The Mid-week Prayer Meeting.—Mrs. J. B. Cheeke was the leader last week, and conducted the meeting in quite a novel manner. She took up the study of the book of Esther, and read the story of Queen Esther. Others spoke of the other characters closely related to Esther. The lesson was a beautiful and inspiring one. The attendance was very good.

The Sunday school.—Last Sunday was a rainy day, but there were 163 on hand, an excellent attendance for such a day. The Sec. of the Home Department made a report which gave a splendid showing for the members.

Preaching Services.—The morning service was attended by a fairly good congregation. Pastor preached a good sermon. The evening congregation was composed largely of the Christian Endeavorers.

C. E. Society.—At 7 o'clock the society met. The attendance was not as large as usual, but those present were interested and attentive listeners. Dr. Hornady acted as leader. In the business session the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. G. Rogers, president; Elsie Moser, vice president; C. B. Way, secretary; and Thelma Moran, Treasurer.

The Sick.—A few of our people are sick; mong them are: Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. Quakenbush and Bro. C. R. Way. We are glad to report that they are better. We missed our organist, Mrs. Curry. She was kept away by sickness. Her absence is always noted with regret, as her presence and service mean much to the Sunday-school and church services.

Should Reporters Sign Name?—It is the opinion of the writer that all reporters, both pastors and laymen, should sign their names to all reports and articles. We believe the people at a station as on a circuit would appreciate the reports and "interrogations" more if the name of the writer appeared at the close of the report. Let us have the opinion of other reporters in regard to this idea.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

MOCKSVILLE CT.—Our first quarterly conference will be held at Bethel Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in Feb. A large attendance is very much desired. Come and help us transact the business. T. A. Williams.

—President Cecil will preach in the Thomasville M. P. Church next Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Fairfield, Gaston Ct.—I filled the usual appointment at Fairfield church last Sunday, completing my first round on the work. The attendance was small, due mainly to measles and mud. There are good working members here, and with proper help and encouragement, they will, I believe, do their part.

Will H. Neese.

Friendship, Yadkin College Ct.—We are very glad to have Bro Powell as our pastor again. Owing to bad weather our Sunday school has stopped for the winter. We regret it very much. We had a splendid Sunday school. We had a nice little treat and entertainment Christmas. Best wishes for 1915.

Reporter.

YADKIN COLLEGE CT.—I must tell you how I spent Xmas and what Santa Claus did for us. It was raining, you know! But he came just the same. Good things to eat have been coming all along. I never call names or enumerate articles given, as they have been so numerous and space limited and Peter ———— says we should not. God knows them and will reward them. So I will at once begin to tell about Xmas

First, I went to the Xmas entertainment at Bethesda on the 24th. I wish you could have all been there. It was grand! These folks never do things by halves. They are a great people for variety. This time it was novel. The presents showed to the greatest advantage. The children did well. And to be sure our efficient organist (Miss Bessie Wagner) had a real treat for us all in the way of Xmas music, music suitable and rendered to the edification of every one present.

Now comes the happy time for all of us children—the distribution of presents. And oh! the happy faces! Every one of us received, even the pastor and his children, received a nice treat. Still there remained a covered heap about the altar that looked suspicious. When uncovered it revealed a large pantry supply from a bag of flour down to a glass of jelly. Our affable young brother, Obie Wagner, was chosen to present this to the pastor, in behalf of the good people of that community, whom he represented as the happiest little boy there. That happy little fellow, of course, accepted these nice eatables in behalf of himself and all the little eaters at house. The little boys and myself packed all we could on our buggy and started for home, leaving another heavy load to be taken later. When we reached home we found them smiling there, for their hearts had already been made glad by a half barrel of flour left by Bro. W. J. Berrier and a nice turkey left by Mr. John Q. Finch. After supper myself and children went to W. Lexington to enjoy another Xmas tree and entertainment. The program was fine and would do credit to any people. I doubt whether there was a more tastily decorated church and a better rendered program in town. Here the pastor was remembered with a large and ample treat for each one of us.

Good things have still been coming in since Xmas. On New Year's Day I received $10 as a gift from one of our young men of Shiloh, Bro. Richard Berrier, who now resides in Jacksonville, Fla. This young brother left his father's home about three and a half years ago to seek his fortune. He is a young man of character, pure and noble. When he left home to start business for himself he took the Lord in to be his partner and he is succeeding. He is now worth several thousand dollars. He gives the Lord His tenth. He has sent two one hundred dollar Cks. to his father in the last six months as a part of his tenth money to be used on his church in whatever way his father and pastor may think best to use it. May the Lord continue to bless him and give to the church more such young men. This young man is worthy of imitation in every respect. His education limited, his muscles strong, a will of steel, his purity shines like the lustrous gold. He seeks not his own but another's good. Visits no place where a Christian need be ashamed to be seen.

Well, old stick-in-the-mud lurks around in these diggings. The roads are almost impassable. I passed a man on my way to my appointment last Sunday morning—hailed him, Hurra for good roads! He replied, "I say hurra for the man who has moral courage and grit enough to undertake over these roads."

We are moving on with our work, though the rain and the mud have driven our country Sunday schools into winter quarters. We are not dead, however. Bethesda has decided to make an offering to the Children's Home on each second Sunday, as this is our preaching day, until they start up the Sunday school again. After preaching last Sunday I went home with Brother Birt Wagner, ate a good dinner, then baptized his little son Raymond and infant daughter Susie. These are sweet children and their parents are trying to bring them up in the Lord. May they ever have His sustaining grace.

The pastor united in matrimony at parsonage last Sunday night Mr. Lewis Farrabee to Miss Bulah Shoaf. They left this a. m. for Winston-Salem. May the Lord bless them in their journey through life.

We are having a whooping time—six of the children have whooping cough.

Yours in His Name, H. L. Powell.

Piney Grove, Siler City Ct.—Bro. Bowman preached a good sermon on first Sunday; a good attendance considering the weather.

Charlie Smith has been called to his reward; he was buried at Piney Grove the 3rd Sunday. May the Lord bless the wife and five small children.

Yesterday was the first Sunday the children of Mr. Peter McPherson had the privilege of being together since they began to marry and have homes of their own. There was a dinner prepared at Minter Brower's for them; they were all there and all husbands and wives sat down at the table at once. There are eight children, six girls and two boys, all married but two girls.

There is some sickness in the community, some typhoid fever.

Mr. W. B. Cooper had the misfortune to get his eight-room house burned down last Thursday night. One of his sons lived in the house. His property all got burned, but a few clothes. Mr. Cooper lives at Siler City; his house was four miles north of Siler City.—Miss Fleta Kivett who is in Greensboro has been down spending the holitays at home with her father and mother six miles north of Siler City. She returns today where she accepts a position as clerk at Kress & Company's..

We hope for this year to be the best one yet. May we all do our best.

Nettie McPherson, Reporter.

Jan. 4, 1915.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—Only 56 in S. S. last Sunday. Rev. Jim Bassett preached at 11 a. m. to a very good congregation. Bro. Bassett will teach a two weeks' singing school beginning last Monday night. It will be a school not only for those who pay but for the whole community.

Weaverville, Jan. 12.

—Mrs. June Williams, of Madison, is visiting her friend, Mrs. Gant, in this city.

Oak Ridge Ct.—The first quarterly conference was held at Sandy Ridge Jan. 9th. There was a good attendance from all churches except from Kernersville. The pastor was surprised and disappointed that the brethren and sisters of the Kernersville church did not think the Lord's work of enough importance to attend this conference. I must be frank about this matter. I really think that such indifference to the church work on the part of official members demands frankness. I can think of no reason why Kernersville was not represented. The cause for this church not being represented was indifference. Yes, plain indifference. Indifference to the claims of God and his church to a part of our time. I know that out of twelve or fifteen officials you could have been represented. I repeat it, indifference kept you away. But the business of the conference had to be attended to whether you were there or not. The usual order of business was transacted without friction. The pastor was again surprised when some of the brethren came to the conference asking that the assessment for their church be reduced. The Lord has been blessing our people with good crops, with health, and with material blessings without number, and yet they want to do less for Him and His Kingdom. I fear we are not dealing fairly with the Lord. Malachi once asked a question that I wish a great number of people would think about. Here is the question: "Will a man rob God?" Then he adds, "Yet ye rob me." Read a little further on. "But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." Get your Bible and read the four chapters of the book of Malachi for yourself. If we all would read and obey what the Lord says to us through his prophet Malachi, the Lord's work would not suffer as much in the coming days as it has in the past.

The financial report for last year was encouraging when compared with the year before. However, it was not a report of which to be proud. We ought not to be satisfied until we have done our best. I appealed to the official members present to help me raise every cent of every claim this year. I now appeal to every member of the church on Oak Ridge Ct. who reads this paper to help me do this. Our ambition and aim should not be lower than this. The best we can do for God is the least that should satisfy us. Not only should we try to do our best for God by supporting his church financially, but we should look after the spiritual interest of his Kingdom. I also appealed to the official members to help me in this. I now appeal to all who read this to help. I need your help, I want your help, and God wants your help. Let us work and pray for the salvation of the unsaved of our circuit and for the building up of ourselves in things spiriual.

Now some one who reads this might think that my meals don't agree with me, and that I am taking it out on my church members. No, no, my friends, my digestion is all right, and I am at peace with all the world. These are just some plain facts and truths that my church members need to think about. And I might as well add, that a great many of somebody else's church members need to think about these things.

Think of this for a minute. The Oak Ridge church is almost completed. We hope to hold services in it the 4th Sunday in this month. Then on the 4th Sunday in Feb. we want to have a formal opening service. President Cecil is expected to be with us that day. There may be two services, one at eleven, the other at night. We are anxious that all our members be present that day. And we invite all friends of the church to come and rejoice with us. It will be an occasion for rejoicing. We have here at Oak Ridge one of the neatest, prettiest little churches you have ever seen. Come see it the fourth Sun. in Feb. Remember the date and plan to be there. Your friend and pastor, Linley W. Gerringer.

The Postal Card—W. F. Kennett, Ed.

The new calendar year brought us good weather and a fine congregation gathered at Bethel the 1st Sunday in the new year. The sermon was by Paul S. Kennett. An offering of $7.23 was made to our Children's Home. Saturday before the 2nd Sunday we held our 1st quarterly conference in Flat Rock Church. The day was fine; but the roads were awful—except where sand-clayed. All the churches were represented and the spirit of the conference was excellent. Flat Rock led in number of officials present, there being seven from this church. Bethel led in report on pastor's salary, paying $40, full amount for the quarter. General interests will be in the hands of ladies who are to be elected by the churches—except for superannuates: the pastor is to collect for this cause. We believe it would be well for this important interest to be put into the hands of the pastor and that in this way the full amount on every charge can be raised. Note what Bro. Swaringen says in last week's Herald on this interest.

Paul S. Kennett, after spending the holidays with his parents, has returned to Westminster Theological Seminary. He writes that four sons of ministers are in his class. Our people continue to pound us on the installment plan. Last week Bro. N. T. Pegram killed 1,441 pounds of pork and divided liberally with his pastor—haslet, sausage, backbone, spare ribs, and lard fell to our lot and for good measure a sack of very fine eastern yams, and Sister Pegram added a nice cake of butter to improve the yams in the eating. Bro. and Sister P. L. Wilson sent their annual pounding of sausage, back bone and spare ribs and sweet potatoes. Sister Gordon added to their pounding which came before Christmas. We appreciate all these good things, but more than all the spirit of love which prompted the giving. Yes, and one good lady friend brought us two cans of brains—a splendid thing for a preacher to have and use freely; but these were pigs' brains and this good lady knew that we liked them. Our year's work is starting well and we are hoping, praying and working for the best year we have ever had.

Mrs. June Williams, of Madison, one of our very best Flat Rock members, recently spent a short time in Stokesdale to the delight of her friends here. She formerly lived in Stokesdale.

Best wishes for all for 1915.

St. Paul.—The Sunday school rooms are nearly completed, and are splendid additions to the church. There is a marked change in this church in interest now and two years ago. There were present in Sunday school last Sunday 104, raining, too. A new stove was placed in the church last Saturday. We are glad to note that Esther Kennett, little daughter of C. O. and Laura Kennett, is improving some. She has been confined to her bed eleven weeks with typhoid fever. We hope to see her in Sunday school again shortly. G. F. Millaway.

—One reason for believing that the Philistines came from Crete is the fact that they appear on Egyptian monuments with the peculiar Cretan headdress, a disc ornamented with a feather.

—The Bible is the only true light in the midst of the twilight or darkness of human thoughts by which all must be brought back from errors who would come into possession of the highest of eternal truth.

—The latest church statistics give Burma 240,081 church members These are divided as follows: Baptists, 122,266; Roman Catholics, 60,282; Anglicans, 20,734; Methodists, 1,675. There are 876 Baptist churches, 717 of them self-supporting.

—Billy Sunday had quite an ovation when he arrived in Philadelphia on January 2 ready for his ten weeks' campaign. The city has made large preparation for his coming, and two daily papers—the North American and the Evening Ledger—are planning feature reports daily.

—The greater your wants, the greater God's goodness in supplying them. The greater your enemies the greater the display of God's power in subduing them. The greater your unworthiness, the greater His grace in saving you. The greater your trials, the greater the comforts of His Spirit, and the greater the joy in which they shall end.—The Christian.

—India has 242,000 square miles of forests, under more scientific management than we have in this country. Her splendid system of irrigation leads the world with 42,000 miles of irrigating canals, which have redeemed more than 20,000,000 acres of waste land.

—In Brazil the census of 1890 returned 12,213,346 of the population, or approximately 85 per cent. as illiterate. In Chile 1,981,061 were returned in 1907 as illiterate or approximately 60 per cent. In Argentine 50.5 per cent. of the population over six years of age and in Bolivia nearly 80 per centage of the population over seven years of age are illiterate.

—In the United States there is one ordained minister to every 594 people; in Africa there is one to every 82,152 people; in Korea there is one to every 123,711 people; in Japan there is one to every 172,538 people; in India there is one to every 321,448 people; in China there is one to every 467,462 people. There are 1,557 principal cities in China unoccupied by missionaries.

—In order to prevent the students of the Tokyo Seminary from getting too absorbed in their books and thus out of touch with men who are fighting life's battles, a hall has been opened where the students, under the direction of the faculty and a trained evangelist are brought in touch with all classes of men and taught to do practical Christian work.

—The reports of the United States Commission on Education show that north of the Mason and Dixon line there are 467 non-sectarian secondary schools, while those under religious control are distributed as follows: Baptist, nineteen; Episcopal, seventy; Friends, thirty-four; Lutheran, forty-two; Methodist, thirty; Presbyterian, fifteen; Roman Catholic, 601; other denominations, sixty-eight.

—Total abstinence as the most direct method of suppressing the liquor traffic was urged by Secretary of State Bryan, before the annual meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. "There may be differences of opinion as to methods of suppression," the secretary said, "but it must be agreed that the man who shuts off the demand for liquor at his own mouth decreases the traffic most directly."

—In 1859 there were no hospitals in Japan. Foul and loathsome disease was open and public. Every third person was pock-marked. Blindness was shockingly common, and smallpox was prevalent and frequently epidemic. Sore heads were disgustingly prevalent, while consumption made frightful ravages. A deformed child was never seen; none were allowed to survive their birth. In 1909 there were over a thousand public hospitals in Japan. The number has been largely increased since then.

—When Stanley, starting in 1874, made his journey of 999 days across Africa in the course of 7,000 miles he never met a Christian. There was not a mission station church or school in all that track. Now the chain of missions is complete from Mambara to the mouth of the Congo, and there are considerably over 100,000 native Christians. When Hudson Taylor reached China in 1854 there were practically no missionaries in the inland provinces; now there are over 1,000.

—United States Senator Vardeman, so the story goes, once rented a plot of several acres to one of his black neighbors. The land was to be planted in corn, and the senator, then ex-governor, was to receive one-fourth. The corn was duly harvested but the senator did not receive his fourth. Meeting the negro one day he said:

"Look here, Sam, have you harvested your corn?"

"Yes, sah, boss, long ago."

"Well, wasn't I to get a fourth?"

"Yes, sah, boss, dat's de truf, but dar wasn't no fo'th. Dar wuz jes' three loads an' dey was mine."

There are some white people who treat the Lord in the same fashion.

THEORIES OF THE ATONEMENT.

These change from age to age. They are like the theories of physical science in this respect. Both classes of theories are simply attempts on the part of the mind of man to penetrate depths too profound for his measuring line. Man will probably in this stage of his existence never be able to understand the ultimate constitution of matter, and will never be able to see and set forth all that is involved in that great transaction in which Jesus Christ made atonement for the sins of the world. But men will continue to try to understand and to express their futile conceptions in the form of theories, which they will offer to their fellowmen as explanations but which will soon be seen to be either no explanation at all or only a partial explanation.

How supremely fortunate it is that we do not have to understand the atonement before we can believe in it and avail ourselves of the infinite and indispensable benefits of it! Christ said, "Blessed is he who shall find no occasion of stumbling in me," and Paul spoke of Christ crucified as a stumbling-block to the Jews and as foolishness to the Greeks. It is so to this day. Men do not refuse to eat bread because they cannot understand how bread can nourish their bodies, but they refuse to believe in the atonement of Christ because they cannot understand it. How very, very sad!

HOW TO MAKE A CHURCH BECOME EXTINCT.

There are several ways to do it. We will try here to tell of just one way. It is a very simple way, and it will work in any kind of a community,—city, village, or country. It has been tried, and always with success.

Here it is: Neglect the young people. Never give them anything to do in the church or of a religious character out of the church. Always fill the offices of the church with the same old set of old men. Elect for Sunday-school superintendent the oldest, stupidest man in the community. For class leaders choose men that are dried up with dyspepsia and blue with liver complaint. For stewards, choose men of the greatest inactivity, the most crippled with rheumatism—(they might run away with the church's money if they were supple). And be especially careful in making up the choir to see that no one gets into it that can sing. Choose only old people with cracked voices or catarrhal noses, having the desired nasal twang. Of course they will attempt to sing only the most ancient and the most doleful hymns in the most doleful manner.

Persist in this policy for a few years, and your church property will be for sale. The young people will all have gone to some other church or to the world or to the devil.

Thank you, friends. You don't know how it helps.

Burlington S. S. has sent to be forwarded to the Gifts" offering. We will take pleasure in forwarding it.

—Elwood Kirkman, of Pleasant Garden, died last Sunday, of pneumonia, aged 62. He was a quiet man and industrious citizen.

—An interdenominational Sunday-school teacher-training school is being organized in Greensboro. It will hold weekly meetings for lectures and class instruction during the spring.

—Raymond Chrismer, of Sunbury, Pa., a school boy, accidentally upset his ink bottle, splashing some of the ink into his eyes. It is feared that he will never be able to see again, as some element in the ink seems to have destroyed or paralyzed the optic nerve.

—Bro. Cecil said last Sunday that it is his aim to preach helpfully. He had long ago, if he had ever had it, renounced the thought of preaching for reputation as a preacher. A preacher must reach this feeling that Bro. Cecil expressed before he is prepared to do much good as a preacher. If he does not desire to preach helpfully, he will not help many people much. We were glad that Bro. Cecil paid us this visit and preached us this helpful sermon.

—We are glad to present to our readers this week pictures of Rev. F. C. Klein and of his new printing machine, the Multigraph. This machine he hopes will add greatly to his effectiveness in the work for foreign missions. We hope he will not become so enamored of it that he cannot leave it, for the people like to hear him speak.

READING THE UPTURNED LINE.

Six persons have sent their guesses about the inverted line printed last week and the week before. A Virginia reader guesses there were "nine words" and does not try to guess what the words were.. A Manson, N. C., reader guesses, "We all sincerely." This fits logically, but is not long enough to fill the line. A minister came into our office and guessed, "He preached an able sermon." A Climax girl of eleven thinks the line must have read—"He preached an interesting sermon so we", both of which are good guesses. A young lady in the Children's Home also guesses well. She sends this: "We enjoyed the sermon and we"—Mr. Elmer Hauser, of Shoals, sends this: "He preached an excellent sermon and we". This seems to be the best guess, for the line did actually say, "He preached an excellent sermon. We". The present will therfore be sent to Elmer Hauser.

WHERE GRACE TRIUMPHED.

Commander Eva Booth tells a touching story of her work in the slums of London, in which the tenderness as well as the power of the gospel is well depicted. One afternoon she came home somewhat weary and sat down for an afternoon cup of tea. She started the little fire burning in the open grate and sat down beside it.

"Presently," she says, "a woman came in clad very much as I was clad. 'O, come along, Meg,' I said; 'it is a long time since I have seen you.' She sat down before the fire, but did not speak. She looked into the flickering embers as the red shone out and the flames burst through, then looked up, but she did not speak. I looked at her and saw that there was great pain in her face and that her eyes were swollen and red, and then she said: 'They lie when they say she died of cancer. She did not die of cancer. They lie when they say she died of fever. She did not die of fever. She did not die of anything but the blow of that monster brute of a husband of hers, who knocked her down like a brute when she pleaded with him not to take the little dresses from the babies that she made out of her scanty skirt to pay for drink. That's what she died of.' She went on and said: 'I wish I had never heard of her; I wish I had never seen her when she fastened those big eyes on me and said: "Meg, I would be glad to go, I would. Life has been very hard with me, Meg, and I would like to rest but for the babies. O Meg, how can I leave those little defenseless, helpless babies?" Then she lifted up her eyes in that damp cellar where she was dying and seemed to be far beyond, and she cried: "O God, have mercy, forgive me all my errings and all my sins; and when I am gone from this earth, O, in thy pity look after and protect my two poor, helpless little babies." And then a terrible shiver came over her, and she threw her hands up toward my neck and said: 'Meg, Meg, do your best for the babies."' Meg kissed her, and she fell back dead. She said she was no sooner dead than that monster stripped these two babies of their little shoes and went and put them over the counter of the saloon for drink. 'O,' she said, 'I wish I had never heard it! I wish I had never seen those eyes as they looked at me. What can I do for those babies? I have no shelter for myself.' 'Is he out all the time?' I asked. She said he would be out that night. He was always in the saloon until they threw him out about twelve o'clock. 'Don't worry," I said; 'I will look after those babies.'

"At ten o'clock I took my shawl and wound it around my head and shoulders, and I said to the lieutenant: 'Come along; and when we get to a certain court you stay behind, and I will go on, and you stay there until you see me again.' 'You may be sure I shall stay there; and if you don't come quick, I shall come after you,' she said.

"That night, dodging under heads of horses and avoiding bicycle wheels, crowds of newspaper boys and flower girls, I made my way until I got behind it all, down into a dark alley; then I went down steps into a kind of a little dwelling, and I found my way to a basement. At first, I could not see my way, but finally I discovered a kind of ladder staircase going down, and it swayed beneath my tread as I carefully went down it. Then I went into the cellar and heard something like the whine of an animal, but at first I could not see any living being there. Then the lamp that God never forgets to hang in the black shelter of the night threw its silvery rays; and as I followed the rays they lighted upon the two tiny heads, one of a little child about three that you would have taken for eighteen months, and the other of a child a little over twelve months, just in their little ragged shirts. The older girl was trying to be mother in that cold, damp cellar to that baby. I listened; no sound. I took my shawl and laid it down over them. The elder child backed against the damp wall like a scared animal. I put my hands behind the little back and kissed the pale brow, wrapping her in the shawl. Then I put the baby in her arms and covered the shawl over both of them and picked them up. I listened again; no sound. Then I climbed the staircase and made my way up to the broad thoroughfare. My heart beat loudly. I thought I heard somebody shout 'Police,' and then I thought I heard a heavy footstep, but I never looked behind. Never look behind when you are in a holy purpose or doing a good work. I reached home; then a little warm water, a little bread and milk were given the babies and a few little comforts.

"We loved the babies, and we kissed them; we fed them. Three days afterwards, again in the afternoon, I was watching the kettle boil, and I heard a heavy step on the stair. The lieutenant put down a loaf of bread she was cutting and said: 'He—he—he—he is coming; he is coming!' 'The father of the children? You stay there, and I will go down and speak to him,' I said. I pulled myself up to my full height, I stretched my shoulders back to their full breadth, and I went down the staircase; but before I got to the bottom the oaths came out, and the foul air of the court burst up that stairway. When he saw me coming, he looked up at me (he was a very big, tall, strong man); he clenched his fists and said he would break every bone in my body if I came one step nearer. I went straight on down the stairway. He said he would stamp on me and wring my neck like a chicken's. (I was not much more than a chicken in those days.) I went up to him and said: 'What do you want?' And he told me what he wanted; that he wanted his own children; that he would have me arrested; that I was a kidnaper; he would have me thrown in jail; he wanted his own children. 'You are not going to have them,' I said. I looked at the weight of his fist, and I looked at the passion in his face, and I looked at him sway here and there, for he was half intoxicated. How could I, I asked myself, put those babies back and leave them in his care and keeping? 'You are not going to have them,' I said; 'but I will tell you what I will do: I will show them to you. I want you to see them. Follow me if you will.' And I went up the stairs. He came after me, shaking the whole house. The lieutenant was at the door and threw it wide open, and the man followed me. There were the bare, white walls of the room; there was a white table cloth on the table and a little jug with three or four pansies; there was the bright fire, with the kettle polished so that you could see your face in it. I do not believe he had seen anything so white and clean for many years. What it was, I cannot say—whether it was the clean room or whether it was the one verse that shone out in bright letters on the white wall: 'He loved us, and gave himself for us.' I do not know; but when he got to the threshold of the door he halted. He took his crownless hat off his head and came into the room. He took another step and put his hat on again, and then he took it off again. I caught hold of his ragged sleeve and said: 'Come along; I want you to come in.' He went to the bedside of the two babies that were sleeping. According to the habit of the elder, it had the younger nestled upon its tiny shoulder, and there lay the little golden-haired babes.

"I shall never forget the look of that man as he looked at them. I said: 'There they are, your little children, your two little baby girls. You remember when God gave them to you first, how proud you were. You remember when their lips could first murmur the word 'papa,' and when they twined their little tender arms about your strong neck how glad and proud you were. You remember her who gave them to you, whom you promised to cherish and to love one morning when the sun shone bright, when you put upon her slender finger the little circlet that said she would have the protection of your strong arm. There they are, her little baby girls and yours.'

"The man's heart broke. He got down on his knees, and tears came fast, and the angels came into the room. The babies woke up, and they cried; he cried; I cried, and the lieutenant cried; and the angels seemed to crowd that room and spread their wings of light and blessing on our heads as we lifted him with his heavy heart to the wondrous, limitless love of the great, everlasting Redeemer; and as he wiped the tears away he asked me if I thought he could ever be forgiven. He knew he had killed their mother. He told me about his horrible thirst for drink. But God saved him as he has saved tens of thousands since."—Home Herald.

INVIOLATE VOWS.

I have not dipped my pen in the serpent's venom, nor had my tongue clothed with cutting invectives patterned after the "modern boomerang," paving the way for this discussion, but on the contrary it has been prompted by the laxity of promises and the prevalence of broken vows. It has been my lot to deal with the public for some time, to study humanity from many different angles, and what I am about to say has been burdening me for some time. I desire to register my emphatic disapproval, bitterest indignation and harshest denunciation possible to the way so many church members disregard and totally ignore their promises, pledges and vows. The prevailing tendency is not to hear, "His word is as good as his bond," but—"Well, promises like pie crust are easily broken."

There are a few unpleasant words in the English vocabulary that some of us would like to see obsolete; among which are "liars," "rebels" and "anarchists." They are objectionable because of the horrible associations and blighting consequences they suggest. Let us study them for awhile, to learn whether they are really needed now adays. A liar is one who knowingly utters a falsehood; promising to do one thing and wilfully does another, proving himself a liar in both word and deed. A rebel is one who turns away from the authority of his rulers and government, endeavoring to be a law unto himself. An anarchist is one who deliberately sets aside law and order regardless of serious consequences.

Hundreds of people join the church, in the presence of God and the church pledge themselves unreservedly to support and abide by the laws of the church; distinctly specifying to "agree to all its rules of government and to contribute as God gives ability for the support of the gospel ministry and benevolent enterprises of the church." In the face of this vow, which is as plain and unmistakable as the noonday sun, they go year in and year out without contributing a cent to the support of the church in any way. Knowing their duty and what they of their own free will and choosing, obligate themselves to do; refusing to do what they ought and had promised to do. It is just in plain English—lying. It does us good sometimes to strip things of their verbiage and look at them.

When people join a church, thereby agreeing to all its rules of government, they have no right to say, "Now we will obey this rule and we don't just agree to that one, so we will set it aside." They have a perfect right after joining and further investigating, if they find themselves deceived and dissatisfied, to leave the church, but not to remain in it and refuse to be governed by it. To illustrate my meaning: when I was pastor on Siler City Ct. (and they are as loyal and God-fearing as the average) one church on the circuit informed me that they had agreed not to pay the Superannuate Assessment, but that they would pay the rest. What was that but ignoring and rebelling against the authority of the church; setting aside a portion of the laws they had agreed to accept and support, becoming a law unto themselves and becoming rebels and anarchists in that particular.

It was disappointing to me to hear any one refuse to pay the Superannuate assessment; while all the assessments are worthy, commendable and should receive the united support of each local church, yet it seems to me that the Superannuate assessment is the most worthy of them all, if I may be allowed to make any distinction. Yet I have found it the most difficult to collect of all the items on the list. Many refusing to contribute to these "heroes of peace," who have worn themselves out, doing largely sacrificial service for their God and humanity; willing to let them like old boats lie to one side till they rot and waste away. How much self-denial, privation, bitter struggling and hardships endured one can read between the lines in the following biographies, yet none of them appear in the story; it is just "All joy." "Aged 85 years. Retired at 80. Ministry 52 years. Active 44 years. Served one charge of four country churches 40 years. Traveled 50,000 miles on horseback, not counting pastoral visits. About 50 conversions annually. Caused 15 young men to enter the ministry. Average salary $200. Wife died at 82." Some say, "I don't mind supporting the minister, but his family is what I object to," but hear me:—"Husband in active ministry 26 years. Average salary $600. Died in 1911. A son missionary in Alaska, a daugh-is no more necessary to its acquisition and enjoyment than understanding the manner of conversion is to the enjoyment of the Christian life. We know the college course gives this power and we know this power is necessary to the individual who is to lead the world to redemption, and we who are wise will never rest till we have it or till those dependent upon us for their outlook on life through our efforts have had it or have had the opportunity to have it.

REVIVAL MEETINGS—LARGE CIRCUITS—SMALL SALARIES.

I am of the opinion that our revival meetings on circuits are entirely too short. At many places they begin on Sunday and close the following Thursday. Only five days in which to revive the church, and save the sinners! That is just about long enough to awaken real interest. I believe that we should begin our revivals with the understanding that they would continue twelve or fifteen days. "Billy" Sunday is conducting a campaign of ten weeks in Philadelphia. No evangelist would think of opening a revival meeting with the understanding that it would close in four or five days. But there are six churches on this circuit, and we could not hold two weeks' revivals at each church this year, for that would require three months of the pastor's time. But instead of holding a five days' meeting at each church, would it not be better to have a two weeks' meeting at three of the churches this year, and then have two weeks' meetings at the other three churches next year? I have an idea that one meeting of two weeks would be preferable every second year, or even every third year, to having a five days' meeting every year. I want the experienced ministers to tell us whether or not our revival meetings are too short. If you agree with me that they are, then the only remedy I see is to have them every two years instead of annually, or make the circuits smaller. But if the circuits were smaller, the people would have to pay more, or reduce the pastors' salaries. If there are any laymen who want our salaries reduced, I would be pleased to hear from you. I think that the brethren who represented—or misrepresented—some of the churches on Oak Ridge Ct. at their quarterly conference are surely about the only ones who want to reduce their pastor's salary. The members of this circuit don't want to reduce the pastor's salary, if I may judge by what I have heard. I am not surprised, Bro. Gerringer, that you were "surprised" when some of the churches wanted their assessments reduced. When a man is willing to spend nine or ten of the best years of his life, and go in debt several hundred dollars, in order that he may prepare himself to preach the Gospel effectively, and then that man's members are not willing to pay such a man $650, it looks to me like ingratitude, and if there is anything that will kill a minister, teacher, parent, or any one else quicker than ingratitude, I don't know what it is. Bro. Gerringer was considered one of the strongest men in the Seminary while he was attending school there, and yet his circuit is asking him to serve for $650 or less, while his classmates in the Michigan and Muskingum Conferences are receiving $1,000 and $1,200 salaries. Brethren, I believe that you do appreciate Bro. Gerringer, but if you do, show it by paying $800 or $1,000 pastor's salary, and all of your general interests. After reading Bro. Gerringer's report yesterday, one of my leading young men asked me why the Methodist Protestant Church pays smaller salaries than other denominations. I could not answer his question, and so I pass it on hoping that some minister or layman will answer it. I am delighted with the outlook for this circuit, and yet when the assessments were being made at one of my churches, I could not get a single man to assess himself over $10 for pastor's salary and general interests. I would consider $25 a reasonable amount for several of these same men to pay to their church, but then the assessments for the church are so small that they can pay it without any one paying over $10. I have one church on this circuit that could pay nearly $800 pastor's salary a year by averaging ten cents a member each Sunday, and they could easily do that, for while some would not pay more than five cents each Sunday, others could and would pay at least fifty cents each week if they had preaching every Sabbath. Laymen, wouldn't you rather have more service from your pastor and pay more? I am sure you would have a more prosperous church, and I am sure that God would bless you individually for making some sacrifice. I know that we ministers would prefer serving smaller circuits, for I feel that I cannot give any large circuit the attention it should have even though I may labor ever so diligently. Now the stations must not think that we don't have anything to say about them, for I believe that the circuits are increasing salaries faster than our stations. Some of us cannot imagine why a station like High Point would allow a man like Bro. Dixon to serve them for $1,000 a year when they know that the M. E. Church, Presbyterian, Congregational, and other denominations would gladly pay him $2,000 or $2,500. And what is true of this station and the circuits that I have mentioned, is true of many of our stations and circuits. Ministers and lay members are "wondering" why Winston-Salem allows a man like Bro. Taylor to serve them for $900. Some of our circuits are now paying $800 and $850 pastor's salary, and that is more to live on in the country than $1,200 or $1,300 in a city like Greensboro or Henderson. "Why do Methodist Protestants pay less than other denominations?" I am anxious for an answer from minister or lay member. Don't think that I have the dyspepsia, nor that there is malaria in my system, for I am quite well, thank you. Don't think that my people have quit pounding me, either; for yesterday a week ago Bro. R. A. Hardy of Lee's Chapel slipped a ham into my buggy, and also gave me all the corn that I could haul in my buggy. Yesterday Mrs. Whitehurst of Ringwood church told me that she would send us some hens soon, so you see I am not uneasy about starving. All of my churches have adopted the budget system and the stewards will collect pastor's salary and all of the general interests, and I feel sure that every church will pay every cent of every claim. No, I am happy, but I just want some information about the length of revivals, the size of circuits, and the amount of pastors' salaries. A Loyal Methodist Protestant,

R. A. Swaringen, Pastor of Halifax Ct.

AN ANSWER TO ONE OF THOSE QUESTIONS.

While visiting at a quarterly conference on a neighboring circuit I heard a prominent layman make this startling statement: "The Methodist Protestant Church pays less than any other denomination that I know of, half of its members paying nothing at all. The cause of this is our poor system of finances." Our poor financial system! I was not willing to believe that our people are "closer" than members of other denominations, and when I heard that man say that a poor system of finances was the cause I readily agreed with him. But if our system is poor, we will be held responsible if we do not change it.

I think that it is an established fact that the envelope plan is the best one for a station, and yet I would like to know how many of our stations use that plan. I do not believe that there is a woman or a child, unless it is an extreme case, who is a member of the M. P. Church that could not bring five cents for pastor's salary each Sunday. Surely many would bring 25 or 50 cents each Sunday, thus making an average of at least ten cents every Sunday. High Point—I refer to this station, not that it pays less in proportion to membership than any other station, but because I happened to refer to it in my other article—reports 316 members on roll. An average of ten cents each Sunday to the pastor would amount to $1,642 annually. Concord reports 411 members, and paid only $625 pastor's salary last year. If they would average only five cents each Sunday, they would pay their pastor $1,068.60 annually. It is true that one of their churches is in the country and gets preaching only once a month, and their town church is largely made up of laboring people, yet you would insult these good people to tell them that they were not able to pay an average of ten cents a member each Sunday, for if I am not mistaken, there is at least one man there who pays one tenth of his income which amounts to possibly $75 a year or $1.50 each Sunday. Henderson church pays an average of over ten cents per member for each Sunday. I do not know whether this is a result of the envelope plan causing each member to pay a part, or whether they have a few wealthy men who pay liberally. I wish that we could use the envelope plan on the circuits, for we could pay more and pay it easier. If the members of Oak Ridge Ct. would pay an average of five cents a week, they would pay their pastor $1,040.00 salary annually. I believe that they are able to do this, and I believe they are willing to do this, if the N. C. Conference had such a system. Yadkin College Ct. reports 724 members last year, and yet the report in the Journal shows that they did not pay all of the $750.00 pastor's salary before the Annual Conference. I notice, however, that they promise their pastor $850.00 this year. If they would pay an average of five cents a member per week, they would pay Bro. Powell $1,882.40. "Too much! It would make Bro. Powell rich!" Well, how would you like to divide your Ct., and pay two pastors $900 each, and get twice as much preaching? Bro. Powell, why don't more of your people try paying the tenth like Bro. Berrier does? Are they afraid that God will prosper them? I would advise them not to try it, if they do not want to prosper. But many of our people on all circuits are not willing to trust God with one tenth of their income, and "half of them pay nothing at all." If not more than half of our members pay any thing, that is one of the reasons that we pay small salaries. Would a better system cause the other half to pay? I believe that it would cause some of them to pay. What shall we do with those members that absolutely refuse to pay any at all? Our Discipline says—page 32—that persons who have ceased to take an interest in the church, may be dropped from the record by a vote of the church. Have people who pay nothing ceased to take an interest in the church, or is it a result of the wrong kind of training? I am inclined to believe that they have had poor training, and that they have lost their religion too, if they ever had any, and I believe that their names should be dropped after fair warning, if they still refuse to contribute. If any member of my Ct. refuses to contribute this year, I hope that the church will vote to drop that name, or that the stewards of that church together with their entire families and the family of the pastor, will get together at that person's house, and spend at least one week with him, unless he commits suicide before the expiration of that time.

THE SINEWS OF WAR.

No European nation could wage warfare without men, munition and money, and your Board of Foreign Missions cannot carry on your great and growing work in Japan without the necessary money. We have a splendid corps of workers, pastors, teachers, etc., and tremendous opportunities among several millions of people, but the church is not supplying enough money to equip, maintain and develop the successful enterprise.

The assessment from your charge is now needed, brother. Your special gift will be a great help if sent now. The C. E. Society's contribution for their missionary would aid the board. Send it as soon as possible.

This is for You.—Some folks are sorry they didn't give on Multigraph. Procession's over. We're starting something now, no fuss, no delay. Need $75 for large roll top desk, oak vertical letter files, fireproof safe. Makes you smile. I'm smiling, because your gift's coming right off. My faith, your gift. Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.

A TREE WORTH ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

The government has received $99.40 in settlement for a single sugar pine tree which was cut in trespass in the Stanislaus National Forest, in California, and which yielded more than enough actual lumber to build a good-sized suburban frame house. The tree scaled 18,933 board feet and was valued at $5.25 per thousand feet. Not many trees contain enough lumber to build a two-foot board walk nearly two miles long, and this is believed to be the first case on record in which a single tree felled in a National Forest was valued at almost $100 on the stump, although National Forest timber is frequently sold at considerably higher rates.

PERMANENT ELEMENTS OF EDUCATION.

BY PRESIDENT W. A. HARPER

Education's Permanent Elements Make it Worth While.—It is the permanent elements of education that justify the vast expenditure of money for it and the enlistment of hundreds of thousands of teachers in its army of workers. More than 400 colleges and universities with more than ten thousand teachers and more than 400,000 students, with endowment aggregating more than a billion dollars, make up the higher educational budget of the United States. More than 18,000,000 pupils taught by more than half a million teachers receiving salaries out of the public exchequer aggregating more than $500,000,000 annually represent numerically the American people's interest in secondary education. And these expenditures in money and in human energy are increasing every year. It is because we have seen, or think we have, certain abiding elements in education that we are willing to invest men and money in it in such bewildering proportions. We have found, or think we have, that education pays well for every dollar invested in it and for every particle of neural force devoted to its acquisition. The American people sit at the feet of the pedagogue during the formative period of childhood and adolescence and far into that of early man- and womanhood, as no other people ever have, and they do it because of the permanent elements thyy have seen in education.

I. Practical Information.—Among these permanent elements the practical American would place foremost practical information, knowledge equipping directly for some vocation, skill contributing to wealth production and industrial success. We have departed far from the old notion that a gentleman should have no business. The American gentleman with no business is your tramp or jail-bird. We believe that work ennobles man and consider every loafer a parasite, whether he be rich or poor. Educatioin ought to be practical and it ought to assist in achieving material success. It always has and it always will, or it will cease to be. In insisting on the practical benefits of education, however, there is involved the danger of stunting the finer sensibilities of the soul and reducing life to materialism only. We must all make our living—that is materialistic—and that living should be the best of which we are capable—that is crass materialism, and yet I believe in it. I would include in "best", however, many things which the extreme materialist would rigorously exclude. I would not be content with muck-raking only; I would occasionally peep at the stars.

In our insistence on practical education we should put the emphasis on education, rather than practical. Man is the most important element in education, not practicability. You can never make a first-rate lawyer out of a man God has set aside to till the soil, and the best way to make of him the most efficient farmer possible is to give him acquaintance with life in the large as well as with the practical, technical training required of the farmer. The best man is your broad, catholic, sympathetic man, and this holds true whether he be a farmer, a mechanic or a professional man, and this type of man, the man who makes his living and at the same time lives a life, this type of man will help forward the life of every man who feels the impulse of his energy or even remotely is touched by his influence. The narrow specialist, the man who has confined himself to one thing to the exclusion of everything else, who has seen in education only practical information and in life only his own vocation,—that man may make his millions, may stand at the top of his profession, but his own life will be poor in the elements that really make living worth while—poor in the things that elevate human life above mere animal existence and bring it close to God. This is not decrying success. This is not decrying material success. It is pleading for man as the master of materialism as against man enslaved to his own acquisitions. And it is a plea that needs to be made. Short-sighted educationists,, mad with desire for popularity, are enunciating in catching phrases the gospel of mammon and the mmammonites are saying "amen and amen." They would eliminate from our schools all but practical studies and they would introduce vocational training everywhere possible. They would convert our schools into apprentice shops and put under the ban of disapproval every ideal save that of materialistic success. We need apprentice shops, but we need schools also. Our schools will quicken our ideals. Our apprentice shops will enable us to work out in material form these ideals. But if our schools become apprentice shops, where will our ideals be?

The Old Countries are no Safe Criterion for America.—The advocates of vocational training and practical education as the only worthy aim of our educational system do not help their cause when they cite the examples of foreign countries as justifying their reform. They forget that life in those countries is cast in certain moulds, and that there is very little, if any, transference from one stratum of society to another. Sons and daughters of the nobles will be nobles and the children of artisans will follow their forebears. Not so in America, where even the humblest can aim at the highest station. In the old country there is very little need for the quickening of ideals, but in America such quickening is the secret of our glory and the destiny of our future. Yet even in the old countries, there exist two types of education—practical for the children of the poor and the artisans, and classical for the education of the professional and higher classes. We shall likely come to some such arrangement in this country, but as between the vocational school only and the classical school only, there can be but one choice for a mation whose national greatness is dependent upon the ideals that stir the heart's blood of its every citizen.

And yet I am willing to grant that education should give practical information, that it should give special training, that it should yield expert skill for the work of life, but not to the exclusion of those studies which really enrich life and render it worth while. We need specialization and vocational training and practical education and we will have them, but in their getting let us not forget that idealism too is a potent factor in human progress, and even a more potent factor than realism, which would not be and could not be without idealism as the fuel producing its energy. Let us put our emphasis on man and life first and on specialism and making a living next and in sweet self-forgetfulness realize our best selves and live our best lives. Education animated and controlled by such a spirit cannot but yield us the best results in terms of life and in point of practical information—not the information that narrows and belittles man, but that broadens and uplifts and exalts him.

II. Mental Power.—There can be no more inviting claim set forth for education's necessity than that it generates mental power, for it is to mental power that we must look as the source of human progress. From his eyes down no man is worth more than $1.50 a day, but he who is thoroughly developed from his eyes up may command a salary mounting up to startling proportions. Mental power—that is the difference; and that is the sort of power we have the right to expect from our educational system.

We have the right to inquire of any institution offering us its services or seeking our support what it can do in the matter of generating mental power. Does it propose to take the undeveloped human being and to make him into a man remarkable for his mental grasp? If so, it is entitled to our respect and should have our support. If it merely proposes to train him more deftly and skillfully as an animal, with little or no attention to mental power, then we should look elsewhere for education. There is a vital difference between skill and power. Skill enables us to utilize power, it is the belting that transfers the power from the dynamo to the wheels and the machinery of the plant, but is powerless without the dynamo, the source of power. We need to consider this carefully in deciding as between schools and colleges. Your special schools put the emphasis on skill; your colleges put it on power. Our normal schools train—they do not educate. They give skill—they do not give power. The normal school reviews carefully the ground covered by the grammar and high school curriculum. It adds to that methods of teaching and practice in teaching, but makes no advance in general education. Normal graduates for the first few months outshine in the classroom the college graduates, because of their skill. They are limited in power, however, and their superiority is brief and momentary. As soon as experience gives the college graduate skill, her magnificent power places her in a different class as a teacher and she far outdistances her normal trained competitors. It is power that counts, not skill, because power will express itself and skill is its handmaid.

A Case in Point.—What has been said of teaching applies equally well to every other vocation. The other day I read the curriculum of a far-famed technical school—a curriculum that was designed to produce civil and electrical engineers. It had the smell of the shop. I could see almost nothing in it but machinery and the whirr of the wheels was almost audible as I read. Three courses in English, one in Political Economy, two in German or French, with technical mathematics and applied science with shop work—that was the curriculum offered as constituting an education, with no history and no philosophy and no acquaintance with the great literature of the world and no real knowledge in the liberalizing sense of either English, Mathematics, or Natural or Social Science. Those who are thus educated may repair railroads and operate machinery, but they will never tunnel under the Hudson nor construct the Panama Canal nor invent any contrivance for the uplift of man. Your great engineers are they who have been thoroughly educated before their special training began, whose special training has been the belting and shafting by which their previously generated mental power and acumen were applied to the practical problems of their profession.

These principles apply to the farmer, to the business man, to the mechanic, to the minister, to the physician, to the lawyer, to every type of man. The narrow man must necessarily work in grooves. He is not broad enough to avoid ruts. He is powerless to strike out along new lines, because he is limited in horizon, deficient in vision, and devoid of ideals. What does he know of England who only England knows? What does he know of medicine who only medicine knows? Such narrowness yields skill, but not power, and power makes the wheels of life go and keeps them from moving always in the same old way.

The College Course Generates Mental Power Generously.—The college course, following the proper sort of preparatory education, is able to develop this needful mental power. It enlarges the vision, quickens the ideals, strengthens every mental faculty—and these are the mainsprings of power in the mental realm. The college curriculum interprets the past, lays bare the present, and unfolds the future, thus laying a solid foundation for the understanding of life and the cultivation of the judgment. In History the student sees the passions of men at play under all circumstances. He is thus enabled to weigh the problems of life in a sure balance, and he who knows his history well will not be easily lured into hurtful schemes of wild-cat reform. Language and literature enlarges his life by revealing to him the aims, ambitions, and ideals of every conceivable type of man. His sympathies are thus quickened and he is better able to help his fellows to the light, basing his helpfulness on the enlarged experience in living offered all who ramble widely in literature s paradise of charm. Social Science gives him insight into the institutional life of man and qualifies him to understand the intricate problems of government and society. Natural Science will show him nature and nature's God, and through this knowledge he will be prepared to turn natural forces into helpful channels of human uplift. Mathematics will not only teach him painstaking exactness in thinking, but will encourage him to expect definite results from definite forces in composition. The man who knows his higher mathematics—his calculus and his conic sections—will be no easy prey to schemers and charlatans with pet theories of great deliverance to man through insignificant social alterations. And philosophy, in which should be included ethics and Bible study, will bring him face to face with men's highest hopes and holiest aspirations, and no man who has felt his soul stir in the presence of these transcendent problems with their attendant hopes can be other than a new man for his experience. The man who has covered the gamut of life—past, present, and future—as it is revealed in the college curriculum, becomes a man of power, of mental power. We may not be able to ferret out the physics or the chemistry or the biology of it, but we know that it is even so. One day perhaps we shall understand the process of it, but such understanding ter a missionary in China," and yet another: "Aged 88 years. Lives with daughter. Husband died in 1901. Ministry 52 years. Salary $75 to $100 per year." These are now living and hundreds of others and many of them the builders of our own "Beloved Zion" could tell like stories.

The M. P. Discipline for 1912 states: "It shall be the duty of each pastor to present to the people of his charge annually the claims of the respective general interests of the church." I have known M. P. preachers to refuse to collect or make any attempt to collect or even present certain items of the general interests, because of some grievance against the benevolent enterprise, or that they personally didn't agree to certain assessments. The church as a whole and the local conference has charge of these assessments and know what is best. If the minister is not interested in the workings of the church, let him get out or the Conference should kick him out. How under heaven can we expect to succeed with rebels in the pulpits and liars in the pews. Preachers and laymen attend Conference, vote jointly and unanimously to give a collection from the Sunday school monthly to the Children's Home; return to thei respective fields and sing during the year till you would think their skull was endangered,

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

Yet they never take a collection or send the orphans a cent. No wonder so many preachers are "shelved" prematurely, and numerous little churches are eking out their painful existence, with their glory long since departed. Better conditions will prevail when both preachers and laity become the embodiment of the truth they profess; "their words as good as their bonds," holding the spirit of the law sacred and their vows inviolate. W. A. Ledford.

Sometime since there appeared in the Herald an article on the time of the meeting of the next session of our Conference in which my name appeared as a member of the Standing District Committee.

I did not think that I was a member of that committee. On consulting the Journal, I found on page 11 that I was a member thereof and on page 33 that I was not. Now, am I? or am I not? Who can tell? As page 33 comes after page 11, I suppose that I am not. I was present when the committee was elected, and had I been one of the members, I think that I would have remembered it.

I also found on page 4 of the Journal that Wm. Porter was an unstationed minister, and on page 57 that he was left in the hands of the president at his own request.

I further found on page 4 a Conference Roll, which contains the names of unordained men and of others who have not been elected to Conference membership. Is a man's name entitled to a place on the Conference roll before he has been elected to membership?

We have the best Journal we have had since '89, from which time I have a complete file (and I have been publisher), and I am sure that the publisher will not object to attention being called to these errors.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Greensboro.—Last Sunday at 11 a. m. I preached to a very good congregation, taking all things into consideration. The Sunday school was well attended and a good interest manifested, and the work is growing in interest in this department, so said the pastor. Bro. Andrews is beginning his third year and seems to have the work well in hand, and is starting off with the year's work nicely. This church have plans and they work them. They are steadily decreasing their indebtedness. I took dinner with the pastor and wife. Claim paid.

St. Paul.—Preached here at 7:30 on Sunday night; attendance good. The new Sunday-school rooms add much to the interest of their school. The membership is encouraged and are expecting to do a good year's work, and I am sure if they co-operate with the pastor good will be accomplished. When I visit the balance of this field I will write some more. Spent the night with Bro. Millaway. Claim paid at this church. C. A. Cecil.

Burlington.—The attendance at S. S. last Sunday was 232. The weather was unfavorable and has been for several Sundays, but we have had a good average attendance this year.——Beginning with last Sunday a record of attendance at the church services will be made. The attendance at the morning service was 152. There was no service in the evening, as a union service was held in the First Baptist church, in which most of the pastors and church people of the town participated.

The C. E. Society met at 6:15 p. m. Sunday, and the attendance was very good. Bro. W. A. Glenn was the leader, and the meeting was a very interesting and helpful one.——The midweek prayer service was conducted by Mrs. G. L. Curry last week. The book of Ruth was the subject of discussion. Several talks were made upon the various phases of the subject by different members and the service was one of much interest and inspiration.

A very quiet marriage occurred at the parsonage last Sunday morning at 10:30 when our pastor, Bro. Curry, spoke the words that united in holy matrimony Bro. Jno. Snotherly of the Haw River M. P. Church and Miss Edna Weatherspoon of this place. The ceremony was very beautifully and impressively performed the words being spoken from memory. We wish this couple a long and happy wedded life.——Bro. Cad R. Way, who was stricken down with a severe attack of La Grippe and pneumonia a few weeks ago, has recovered and was present at the church service Sunday morning.——The regular monthly church conference will be held next Tuesday night, Feb. 9th, at 7:30. There are matters of vital importance to come before the meeting, so every member, as well as every official, of the church is urgently requested to be present. We trust that there will be a large attendance. C. B. Way, Rep.

Mt. Pleasant, Piedmont Ct.—Bro. Shelton filled his appointment 4th Sunday. The day was very cold and the congregation was small, but we can always count on the faithful few, who will go to church if it does rain and hail.——Mrs. Fannie Osborne departed this life Jan. 22, and was buried at Mt. Pleasant the 23d; funeral conducted by her pastor, Rev. A. D. Shelton. She is survived by husband and four small children. Deceased was about 32 years old and held in high esteem by her neighbors.——Mrs. R. B. Clinard, who lives near Mt. Pleasant, a very old lady, is very sick and not expected to survive. She is not of our church but most of her family are and we deeply sympathize with them through the long sickness of their mother.——We have started out this year to try to do a better year's work for the Master. Our S. S. went into winter quarters but will start up again as soon as the ground hog gets through with us. This ought not to be; if the people would take a deeper interest in the Sunday-school we would have less trouble with the other part of the church work. Another thing: we have set out to try to get our church paper in more of our homes, which I think would add inspiration to a large extent. With best wishes for the success of the Herald, I am yours for a prosperous year. J. R. Stone.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Ct.—How a Revival Started the Past Year.—A few people had been holding cottage prayer-meetings in two or three homes a week in different parts of the community. Needless to say the church stayed alive. The spiritual condition of the church was about as good at the beginning of this meeting as at the close of the last meeting. I made a 32-mile trip to get into one of these cottage prayer-meetings. I found at least 50 or 60 people present; at the close they asked me to start a meeting. We began a ten days' campaign of personal evangelism. In the midst of rough, rainy weather, out in the open country. The meeting resulted in 50 or more conversions, a great revival in the church; sixteen have joined our church, some more are to be received, and a few will join other churches.

A sweeter and more helpful meeting one seldom has an opportunity of attending. Such conviction for sin I have never seen; twenty-two heads of families converted. All except one set up family altars. In one little congregation of less than 75 people 22 family altars were represented; most of these were started before the meeting. I don't believe that a profession with a head of a family counts for much if a family altar does not result from it. We have had three good meetings in fifteen months at this little church with an increase of forty members. W. A. Lamar.

Bethel, Alamance Ct.—It has been some time since we have had a report from Bethel, as reporter has been busy. Hope to do better in future or perhaps have some one else report who has more time. We are very glad to have our highly esteemed pastor, Rev. J. A. Ledbetter, with us again for another year and hope to have him remain with us for quite a while yet. May God help us all as members of Bethel church to give him our hearty co-operation in all church work. He has filled two appointments at Bethel for this year and preached excellent sermons, as he always does. We are having a new addition built to the church, which when completed and church painted inside and out will add much to the appearance and convenience of the church.——Our S. S. was reorganized by re-electing Mr. G. R. Roberson Supt., with Mr. A. L. Foust assistant and Mr. J. M. Foust Sec. Most of the teachers were re-elected. Hope as the weather gets better to have a good attendance and to make our Sunday school for this year the best on record. We have a flourishing school at Bethel under the management of Prof. D. K. Isley and Miss Addie Belle Lewis. The children are making rapid progress and people are well pleased with results.——Mrs. Betsey Bailey, mother of Mr. T. B. Bailey, is right sick at his home.——The wedding bells have been ringing around Bethel. Mr. Everett Stout and Miss Mary Bailey were married since our last report, and also Mr. Rufus Woody and Miss Ollie Pickard, and Mr. Sam. Bailey and Miss Rosa Baley, and Mr. Julius Payne and Miss Mary McPherson.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Ct.—Owing to the weather, the S. S. attendance for the past month has been below the average, but we hope it will be better next month. The attendance in Jan. was as follows: 3rd, 81; 10th, 97; 17th, 33; 24th, 40; 31st, 54. Average, 61.

Edith Caroline Curtis.—On Jan. 22, 1915, death by diphtheria came into the home of Bro. and Sister J. W. Curtis, Liberty, N. C., and removed little Edith Caroline, their little girl, four years old, from earth to the mansions above. She was a bright and sweet little Sunday school child. She loved her teacher, Mrs. R. E. Patterson, and her teacher loved her. Bro. and Sister Curtis have the sympathy of their many friends in this sore bereavement. The funeral service was conducted from the home, Jan. 23rd, by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. C. Kennett, after which the remains were laid to rest in Liberty cemetery.

As a token of love and sympathy there were many beautiful floral offerings. Those present from a distance were W. R. Rankin, Greensboro, Mrs. Hassie Frazier and Mr. Brower York, Millboro, Mrs. Dr. John Swain, Asheboro, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brower and Miss Ida Williams, of Sandy Creek. G. F. Millaway.

"Please read me the poem you're reading, mother," begged a little boy sweetly.

"But I'm afraid it's too old for you, dear," his mother answered. "I'm afraid you wouldn't be able to understand it."

"Oh, yes, I would," was the calm answer, "so long as you didn't try to explain."

A demure little Boston maiden was walking down a fashionable Back Bay street, when she met an elderly friend of the family.

"How old are you, my little dear?" he questioned.

"Seven."

"And how is it you are out walking without your mother?"

"Oh, mama doesn't go in for exercise. Really, we have very little in common, mama and I."

CHILDREN'S HOME . . . . REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT.

Brown Summit S. S., $1.11; Miss Ruth Mitchell, Guilford Ct., Sunday eggs, 75c; Miss Maartha Parsons, 50c; Beginners' Class, Harmony S. S., S. C., $1; Bellemont S. S., Mt. Hermon Ct., $2.96; Asheboro S. S., $4.10. Total, $10.36.

Thank Offering.—Shady Grove, Tabernacle Ct., $1.10; Goose Grease Co., Greensboro, 1 dozen Mothers' Joy, 25c size; Mr. J. C. Causey, Mt. Pleasant Ct., 1 dozen cans fruit; Mrs. D. J. Holmes, Winterpock, Va., 1 quilt; Mrs. J. J. Welch, High Point, one Bu. Irish potatoes.

If you can't have Sunday school on account of inclement weather take the collection when you have preaching, or send direct to me and I'll give your Sunday school credit if you want it that way. The Home has good credit in High Point with the merchants and we want to maintain it. To do that, we must continue to be prompt to pay the bills. We can't do that unless we have the money. Don't forget the little ones!

Some of our pastors don't seem to understand what I want in asking for Sunday school Supts., the S. S. and address. Example: Mt. Hermon S. S., A. A. Sharp, Supt., Burlington, N. C., Route 7. If you give names and addresses only I can't tell what church each one represents, and that is one of the very important things that I wish to know. Pastors, please let me hear from you promptly. Drop me a card as soon as you read this. It will be greatly appreciated. Yours in the work, H. A. Garrett.

OBITUARY.

Little Rachel, the sixteen-months old daughter of Ed. and Pattie Stone, was taken away unexpectedly last Saturday afternoon, having been sick only a few hours. Since her mother's affliction little Rachel had made her home with her grandparents, Bro. and Sister Lewis Stone, where she had received every care that could be given from those who loved her so fondly. She was a very bright child and was the idol of the home at Grandpa Stone's. She had been there just long enough to entwine around the hearts of the home to that degree that it seems so hard to part with her. Seemingly the light of that home has gone out, but look up, dear people; that is only another heavenly attraction for you. So often we stop and question the doings of our Heavenly Father, as we cannot understand His doings and His ways are past finding out; but some time we will know. Some day the silver threads will be caught up again. Even here we often look back and see the good that came to us through some seeming calamity at the time of its happening.

"God knows the way, He holds the key,
He guides with unerring hand:
Sometime with tearless eye we'll see
And then up there we'll understand."

The little body in which dwelt the little spirit was laid to rest by loving hands in the family plot in Union Chapel cemetery from whence with her and those who will in the future sleep by her side should death come to the other members of the family before that day when we shall all arise to be judged according to the deeds done in the body. May our spirits be as guileless as the little one just gone in advance of us. N. G. Bethea.

WESTMINSTER THEOLOG. SEMINARY NOTES.

Wilson spent their vacation in revival work at Catoctin where fourteen persons made their first professions of faith.

Jan. 12. The Rev. Paul Nicou, field secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in theological seminaries, delivered a fine address to the students in chapel.

Jan. 13. Mr. K. K. Haddaway, of Baltimore, enrolled as a student in the Seminary and entered the Junior class.

Jan. 14. Rev. J. S. Bowers, D. D., president of the Maryland Conference, delivered the first Chapel Lecture of the new term. The address was full of inspiration.

Jan. 18. Dr. Feeman has gone to Adrian, Mich., to attend the meeting of the Board of Young People's Work.

Jan. 21. Rev. C. L. Whitaker of the North Carolina Conference gave the Chapel Lecture on "Service and Suffering."

Jan. 22. "The Immigrant in America", an illustrated lecture, was given by the missionary committee of the Seminary Y. M. C. A. The students have expressed their appreciation of this plan of education along missionary lines. The lectures and accompanying lantern slides can be secured for a small rental fee. We believe this work is worth while and should be carried on still farther.

Married.—On December 27 at 2 p. m. at the home of the bride near Union Church, Mr. N. M. Cousins of the M. E. Church, South, and Miss Jennie Lewis, one of our sweetest and best girls, were united in marriage by the writer in the presence of a large number of their friends and relatives. After the ceremony they left for Enfield where they took a train for their future home in Richmond, Va. We congratulate Mr. Cousins upon his choice of a wife, but his gain is our loss, for we regret very much to lose her from our midst. We pray that God's richest blessings may ever rest upon them, and may they be a blessing to each other and to all whom they come in contact with. R. A. Swaringen.

Married at the M. P. Parsonage, Pinnacle.—Dec. 9th, 1914, Mr. Hubert Gordon to Miss Fland Kallam. Dec. 17th, 1914, Mr. J. Nat Jones to Miss Mary Allen; the writer officiating. We wish for them a happy voyage through life. A. L. Hunter.

—Bro. S. V. Pickens and his good wife are now basking in the mild climate of Apopka, Florida. We almost envy them the privilege, but we would not be willing to get sick for the privilege of wintering in Florida.

WHY WE SHOULD NOT INCREASE OUR ARMAMENTS.

There are various reasons why the United States should not contract the disease of large armaments. It is a contagious disease and one with which the news of the present day infects large classes of our citizens.

These classes are composed of (1) those who are connected with the army or navy, who give their time and scientific knowledge to the study of the past and future of war; (2) those who directly, or at second-hand, expect to profit commercially by a war or an armed peace, and (3) those honest patriots who really believe the various stories of expected attacks upon our national integrity or prosperity induced by the hate or avarice of other nations.

The first class is happily small, due to our peaceful traditions. Its members are, however, active and, in proportion to their numbers, influential. They have developed their subject into one of considerable interest and scientific expansion. They are intelligent and mostly sincere and patriotic. The second class need have little consideration. They are, as many Americans, after business profits, and if the preaching of the doctrines of war pays they will use their great influence upon public opinion, through the press, to fill their private coffers. There are more of them in the aggregate than one generally recognizes.

The third class is made up of men who are open to conviction and will ultimately determine the question. The following considerations may appeal to some of them:

It is not likely that any of the nations now at war in Europe will be ready to attack the United States for several decades. In the meantime any guns or gunboats we choose to make will be antiquated and a dead loss. These nations, let the war eventuate as it will, will be burdened with fearful taxes, with crippled industries, with abundant memories of the horrors of the battlefield and the suffering of the non-combatant part of the population. Nothing but the most flagrant attack by us, or a combination of conditions which no one can foresee, could induce one or a group of them to enter upon the tremendously expensive and probably uncertain and unprofitable task of an expedition against the United States. For a hundred years, except for the farcical Spanish naval journey to the West Indies, there has been no attack, and during the most of this time our preparations have been far less adequate than now.

Nor is there any more danger from Japan. Everyone who has felt the temper of the Japanese government and people is sure that neither interest nor desire exists for an American war, a war which would be without prospect of final success and would break them down with financial burdens they are in no condition to stand. If we would bring half the thought and influence to bear on our government to make it absolutely just and generous in our treatment of other nations, that some of us spend in fearful anticipations of what will never come, we will be immune from war for a generation ahead. These considerations might induce us at least to postpone our great expenditures till the lessons and the results of the present war are more clearly seen.

Again if we, as we hope, shall some time in the near future be able to act as a mediator and peacemaker among the warring nations, we must approach the issue with clean hands and free from the suspicion of ulterior motives. We must say to them in a voice which they will respect, that we have nothing to gain from them in the way of territory or national privileges. We have only a little army for police purposes and a navy not strong enough for aggression. We have made no preparations to grasp anything for ourselves. We should, if they wish, willingly act as arbiter or simply provide the machinery for their own negotiations. We want, for the good of all, peace restored on a satisfactory, permanent basis, and we hope to gain for ourselves nothing but our share of the blessings which will follow this consummation. Only in this way can we do our duty.

If we begin to arm because we are behind in the race for armaments there is no end to the process except a great war. With every increase abroad there will be a new cry for new appropriations here. The burden of taxation, now already being severely felt in certain quarters, will grow by leaps. Now two-thirds of our national expenditures go to warlike purposes, including pensions. This vast sum will be increased much more rapidly than our resources, and either added taxes or the withdrawal of aid from internal developments will follow. How much wiser to make our potential resources of use to our people and the world, food and clothing cheaper, wages better and more homes happy, than to go into this unproductive venture, which, as present conditions show, always ends in war!

"Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap," and beginning on a course of warlike preparation, with the general awakening of the military spirit and the contagious enthusiasm which will follow, fanned by our increasing army and navy followers, and the commercial interests, will put us in such a condition that on the least provocation we will place our equipment in action. Armaments mean war. Dependence upon justice means peace and we shall reap as we sow.

What then are the duties of American citizens in this crisis?

To develop a universal feeling, to allay race and national prejudices and suspicions which often ripen into war.

To cultivate a judicial attitude which will take the viewpoint of an alien nation and appreciate its reasonable demands.

To limit commercial ambitions and methods, both individual and national, to such an extent as to recognize the just rights and proper desires of others.

To discourage the military spirit in our men and boys, the growth of a military class, the development of military and naval equipment in our nation.

To base our moral ideals upon the New Testament and have faith that they will carry us through even when we can not clearly see the future way.

To nourish within ourselves and our neighbors the Christian spirit, so that as far as in us lies there can be no war; to do our full duty by moral methods and then trust to the care and providence of God. Isaac Sharpless.

CHARLES H. HUBBELL.

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE BY DANIEL A. POLING.

By five high and immutable standards Charles H. Hubbell was a great man.

He was great because he was glad. He was the most uniformly happy man I have ever known, and his joy contagious. His humor, which was irrepressible and irresistible, was never unkind; for, even as I never heard from his lips a tainted story, I never knew his wit to hurt. He was the delight of little children, for no child could resist his smile, and his laugh I shall never hear the like of again.

Although God did not give him the voice of an artist, he had a musician's soul. How his eyes kindled, how his face lighted, under the spell of a great convention's singing! He loved poetry, and feasted upon poems of the heart. He was in love with life; and his joy was the joy that drives clouds, lessens loads, lifts sorrows, and places songs on the lips of the world. His religion was a religion of happiness. Had I not known that religion was glad before I met Charles Hubbell, after looking into his eyes, after clasping his hand, after listening to his voice, I should have known that it is joy forevermore.

Charles Hubbell was great because he was friendly.

And his friendship was not narrow or partial, for he lived in "a house by the side of the road" and was "a friend to man." Religion inspires us to "love those we do not like," but he liked to love everybody.

I never heard him speak an unkind word about another. I have seen him pained; I have seen his lips drawn and quivering from a hurt; but I never saw him angry. How enthusiastic he became when we talked about his friends! they were always the most wonderful people in the world.

The real measure of his friendship was in this, that it made friendly men. He wa s a successful promoter of brotherhood. A world of Charlie Hubbells would be a world of universal peace.

But I cannot still the crying of my own heart today; he was my friend. And what a friend he was! how loyal to every relation of friendship! I have never loved a man I more fully trusted; no friend has ever blessed me more. I shall grow hungry for him on the long road, hungry for his smile, hungry for his letters, hungry—hungry for him.

Charles Hubbell was great because he toiled.

And the fruits of his hands are beyond numbering. He was a constructive builder, and his labors abide. As the forerunner of State Christian Endeavor field-secretaries for seven years he literally poured out his life for the young people of Ohio and of the world, and when, obedient to the call of his church, he set himself again to the pioneer task of establishing a new department of religious activity, he left to the young people's movement of the Kingdom an organization that for efficiency and practical results remains a pattern for all similar organizations throughout the earth.

To-day in the room of his books and papers, so full of the things his busy hands so lately touched, I saw a wall motto of simple verses, the last of which is,

"Do not rust;
Work—trust."

His life was that. This man "burned out for God." He worked riotously. He worked indefatigably. He worked and rested not; worked without consideration for himself. He worked too hard. He drove every energy of his body at unceasing and heart-breaking speed. He consumed the vital forces of his being until when disease smote him there remained no reserve strength.

But stay your criticism. He was God's man. The passion that dried up his blood and sapped his bones was the passion of the Kingdom, the passion that has opened a way out of every wilderness of sin, the passion that has established every work of righteousness.

Charles Hubbell was great because he was unselfish.

He more than any other man I have thus intimately known preferred another's good above his own good. He rejoiced as much in the success of his brothers as he did in his own success. I am sure that his joy in the success of others was greater than his rejoicings in personal triumphs, and the latter no man ever heard him talk about.

I find myself speaking in superlatives; but, conscious as I am of the careless ease with which men employ words, and realizing, too, that promptings of the heart in an hour like this do not always follow the calmer judgments of the mind, I say—and it is not the utterance of a just-formed conclusion—that Charles Hubbell was the most unselfish man I have ever known.

Charles Hubbell was great because he was good.

He was a man of prayer, and therefore a man of power. I seach for words to tell what he was intellectually, morally, and spiritually; and I do not find the words. I know that he was big of mind and heart, an inspirational genius, a prophet of the universal kingdom, and a lover of men. But the one word that is more satisfying than any other as I think of my friend to-day is the word "good." His strength was "as the strength of ten" because his heart was pure.

For eight years I have followed his trail through Ohio and across the land, and everywhere it runs high and clear with blazes that no man can mistake. Nowhere is there the hint of evil thought or word or deed. I cannot imagine a truer Christian than Charlie Hubbell.

And he is not dead! They do not die who live as he lived. He is not away. He is here. He is crowned. He lives in deeds; he lives in lives he blessed; he lives forevermore. We who weep for a friend, with those who mourn for a husband and father, sorrow not as those who are without hope, for we shal lmeet again in the morning.

Let others sing of battle-fields
  Where mighty warriors fall;
The thunder of the cannonade,
  The martial bugle-call.
For I would sing a nobler song
  Of one who wore no sword,
But battled on to victories,
  With "love" the conquering word.

THE ANIMALS' CHRISTMAS TREE.

"Mother, may I buy a Christmas tree with the money that Aunt Mary gave me?" asked John, one morning.

"Why, what do you want a Christmas tree for, John? You know that Santa Claus always brings you one."

"It isn't for me," answered John. "I want it for the animals in the barn."

"But, John," replied Mother, "a Christmas tree would not mean anything to the animals."

"Oh yes, it would, Mother, because I am going to put presents on it," answered John.

"All right," said Mother, smiling. "You may get it."

John bought the tree; and that evening asked Father to fasten it into a block of wood, so that it would stand firmly in the middle of the barn floor.

The next day he asked Mother if she would save all the bones, parings, and other leavings from the table for him. He also asked her to give him some milk, cube sugars, apples, and nuts.

"What do you intend to do with these?" asked Mother.

"Wait until tomorrow, and you shall see," answered John.

Christmas morning came, and John hurried out to the barn to trim his tree for the animals.

Under the tree he placed a large bowl full of milk for Kitty, and next to it a box full of parings for Piggywee. On one branch he tied a bunch of hay and some cubes of sugar for the horse, Old Bob. On another he fastened several apples for Boss, and some bones for Rover. On the top of the tree he set a basketful of nuts for his pet squirrel, Bushy-tail.

When all was finished, John ran and called Mother and Father, and they laughed aloud when they saw what he had done. It was the funniest Christmas tree they had ever seen.

Then they helped John bring in the animals, and before long, Kitty, Piggywee, Old Bob, Boss, Rover, and Bushy-tail were enjoying their Christmas presents. It was a happy sight to see all the animals eating and drinking on or under the one tree.

Mother, Father, and John were so pleased that they decided to have a Christmas tree for the animals every year.—Leila Enders in Our Dumb Animals.

In a primary room the teacher pointed out a letter and asked little Sammy to name it.

"O," answered the child, correctly.

"Good, Sammie! You're doing well. And what," pointing to C, "is this letter?"

"It's the same, only somebody's bit a piece out of it."

—Fly poison has killed many children. Beware!

Mrs. Smith was showing a new hall tree she had recently purchased, when little Samuel came in and neglected to remove his hat. Thinking to teach him a lesson, she said:

"Samuel, what did I buy that hall tree for?"

"For $1.98," answered Samuel promptly, "but you said I wasn't to tell anybody."

Mebane.—Sunday school attendance for Jan.: 3rd, 86; 10th, 110; 17th, 112; 24th, 68; 31st, 112. No. on roll, 140. Average attendance for month, 101. We hope to improve as soon as the weather permits. We have three organized classes: Baraca, Senior Philathea and Junior Philathea. They are all doing finely. We hope to have a Junior Baraca class soon. L. F. Wilkinson, Sec. & Treas.

Reidsville.—The first quarterly conference met here Jan. 11th. Each church was represented. Bro. J. A. Gunn was re-elected secretary. All members seemed interested in the work, and a good spirit prevailed. The conference voted to raise $560 this year on parsonage debt. Of that amount Reidsville is asked to raise $320, Bethany $160, and Sandy Cross $80. The next quarterly conference is to meet at Sandy Cross.——During the holidays the occupants of the parsonage received as presents the following: a nice turkey, flour, fresh meats, fruits, and other nice Christmas gifts. Many thanks to each one who so kindly remembered us. Trusting that this will be a good year for the entire work and that each member will do his or her part to make it so, I am, Your Pastor,

E. G. Lowdermilk.

Asheville.—The preacher was "dead broke" last week and didn't have money enough to mail a report to the Herald, so this week one of the good women of the church here, who said she missed my report, gave me money enough to mail two reports, so I'm good for the next two weeks anyway. There's a hint here for the preachers who don't write regularly, or at all, to the church paper. You can increase the subscription list a whole heap quicker by writing to it than by talking about it. My people take the paper because there are reports in it from the local church; they want my reports in each week because they take the paper. Instead of 1,600 subscribers to the Herald there ought to be not less than 4,000, and I believe there would be if the preachers reported a little more frequently.

I don't want you to take it that we are complaining about being broke. Not complaining but explaining. There are no happier preacher-folks in North Carolina than this preacher and his wife, not even Bro. and Mrs. Bethea, with that new baby. We're happy in spite of the lack of a postage stamp. Happy because the work here is prospering. This has been the best month, in spite of four bad rainy, ugly, disagreeable, horrid, and so forth, Sundays out of five, since the present pastorate began. One new member was received into the church last Sunday week. There are about ten on the waiting list for membership, who will join as soon as their letters are received. And still other prospective members.

And we're happy, too, because our pleas for help have had some response, as the list indicates. But just a little bit worried because the response has not been greater. This is the situation. Two notes, one for $260, the other for $190, due March 1st. A note on the lot for $400 six months overdue. Not more than $75 in the bank to meet the total. Up against it! Are you folks glad of the success of the Asheville church? Do you want it to go on to greater success? If you do, come on and help. The membership here has done its best, and that best is the marvel of the city. The Lord helps those who help themselves. If you'll let Him, He'll use you as His instrument for helping us. It may not be much you can give, but a lot of littles makes a pile of much. Got a money order for fifty cents this week, and tickled to death. Somebody made a sacrifice. You do the same and the thing is done. I'm getting so tired of this! Please let me rest, But I can't do it until you come across. C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Fairview and Gibsonville.—A few days before Christmas we got in our new home at Gibsonville. The people received us very kindly, and also gave us a Christmas pounding to the amount of $20. It was appreciated greatly at this time. We thank these people for this kindly deed, and may the Lord belss them in return wonderfully.

Our Sunday schools are doing good work at each church, and we are looking forward to a good year for this charge. J. W. Self.

Friendship, Yadkin College Ct.—Pastor Powell filled his appointment the fourth Sunday with a splendid sermon. We are praying for a great work this year in the church and community. Some are in sin. Let us reach out and bring them in.——We are glad to have Mrs. S. A. Shoop join our church and were glad to have her and Mr. Shoop and Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Miller worship with us Sunday. Reporter.

Charlotte Ct.—Dear Bro. Cecil: Our first quarterly conference convened at Mill Grove on Sat. before the 2nd Sun. in Jan. All the churches were represented except Pine Bluff. The usual business was transacted in a good spirit. The finance is very much behind. I think it will move up when the weather gets warm and fair. There were some good resolutions passed in the conference, and I hope they will be carried out. The conference decided to pay pastor's salary by the month. There has been about $12 paid on back salary at Love's Grove. We have received tokens of kindness in various ways since Conference, for which we are thankful. The bad weather has hindered the progress of the work, but we are not dead. We are making some headway in the work. We have received a few new members since Conference.——I am sure that our people at Edenton will be glad to learn that Bro. B. Fletcher and his daughter Maud Fletcher are at Charlotte and have united with our church there. They are fine singers and will be a great help to our cause at Charlotte. They were once members of our church at Edenton.

We are planning to build a church at Charlotte just like the one at Asheville. We have elected a secretary and treasurer and we have started a building fund; each one is to pay in some amount each Sunday. We want to build the foundation this spring. We want our people and friends to give all they can to swell the building fund. You may send the money to me at Concord, N. C., or to Bro. R. S. Garmon, 36 Howell Arcade, Charlotte, N. C. If every Methodist Protestant in the State will give what they can, we can soon have a church at Charlotte we will all be proud of. D. A. Braswell.

Randleman Ct.—Our first quarterly conference met at Mt. Lebanon with not a large attendance but all the churches represented. Business was gone through with as usual and in Christian spirit. Stewards' reports were better than that of first conference of 1914. Sunday school superintendents' reports were not flatttering, but we think very good considering the kind of weather we have had.

Last Sunday was 5th Sunday and we had no day appointment, and as we never get to be in S. S. with New Salem people, we took advantage of this day to visit their S. S. Bro. R. S. Caudle, the Supt., with his willing helpers, has built up a S. S. there that is interesting. They have plans under way to make some improvements yet, and are planning for a rally day during the summer. They are also talking painting now and it is to be hoped that the trustees will get to their backs and make this real and not just talk. After S. S. we were invited to dinner at Miss Lou Fogleman's. Myself, wife, and Bro. R. S. Caudle, Sister Caudle and Miss Cox, the school teacher at New Salem, went over, for we knew something was ahead. Only those who have visited this home and shared of its hospitalities always given to preachers and others, know what this means. This proved to be Miss Lou's birthday and, well, I will not even make an attempt to mention what good things she had prepared for us to eat, but sure any one that could not eat a "square meal" from her table could not eat anywhere or no how. Well, we ate, yes, we ate and then ate some more.

Later we visited Bro. J. N. Caudle who is one of our oldest men and faithful soldiers and who has been very sick for a few days. Found him improving some and able to sit up a little while at a time.

We preached at Mt. Lebanon at night and the day was ended. J. B. O'Briant.

Stanley Circuit.—Since our first quarterly conference the following will be the plan of appointments:

Friendship, 1st and 3rd Sundays, at 11 a. m.

Albemarle, 1st and 2nd Sundays, at night.

Also 4th Sunday at 11 a. m.

Porter's, 2nd Sunday at 11 a. m., 4th. Sun., 3 p. m.

This plan will hold until a change is announced.

Gibsonville.—As I have been elected S. S. reporter I will make a short report this week. We reorganized S. S. first Sun. in Jan. Supt., D. M. Davidson; Assistant, J. C. Voorhees; Sec., Fred Ridge; Asst., Fred Moize; Teachers, W. J. Jennings, Prof. E. L. Daughtry, Mrs. Sallie A. Huff, Mrs. D. M. Davidson, Mrs. W. J. Jennings, and Miss Minnie Allred.

The attendance and collections for Jan. as follow:

1st Sun., attendance, 106; collection, $2.75.

2nd Sunday, attendance, 119; collection, $2.68.

3rd Sunday, attendance, 80; collection, $2.82.

4th Sunday, attendance, 90; collection, $5.25.

5th Sunday, attendance, 80; collection, $3.08.

Our attendance is off considerably on account of bad weather. Reporter.

High Point.—The attendance at Sunday school for the last two Sundays was 207 and 196. Very good, we think, considering the rain and cold, and also considering the epidemic of mumps among our children. The attendance at the morning preaching services has been good, but evening congregations are small. We are expecting better things when the sunshiny Sundays come. Yours in His name. A. G. Dixon, Pastor.

High Point, Feb. 2.

St. Paul.—Our S. S. is off some owing to the rough weather, but we feel thankful it has held up as well as it has. We had 109 present last Sunday. We had a good congregation at both services. Bro. G. F. Millaway preached a good sermon at 11 o'clock and our president, Bro. C. A. Cecil, preached for us at night and gave us some good points to note. We enjoyed both sermons fine.

Lula May, Reporter.

THE GREATEST GERMAN.

The English-speaking world has never had a keener interest in Germany and the Germans than it has at the present moment. In all the popular magazines, in all the more serious periodicals, even in the daily press we are confronted with articles and essays on the German people, their ideas and aspirations. Many of these articles naturally emanate from sources that are unfriendly. Nevertheless it is certain that the Americans, at least, are making a serious effort to understand the spirit of Germany, and the views of Germany's great thinkers. We are reading of Frederick the Great, and Von Moltke, of Treitschke, Bernhardi, and Nietsche, of Bismarck and William II. But the man who really wishes to know the German character must go far back of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, and seek it in the greatest German, Martin Luther.

There is probably no man that has ever lived about whose life and opinions so great a literature has been produced. In 1909 an incomplete list of Luther literature comprised over two thousand titles, including more than 200 biographies in ten different languages.

All who are really interested in Germany and the Germans, and who would like to know something of this greatest of the Germans at first hand, will welcome the announcement that a ten-volume translation of his most important works is shortly to appear, published by the A. J. Holman Company of Philadelphia.

The translation is the work of a group of scholars who have been devoting years to the study of Luther and his times, and each volume will be provided with an introduction and explanatory notes. This great task has been undertaken with a view to exhibiting the true Luther and the whole Luther, in all his many-sided activity. The first volume will appear in April, and will be followed shortly by the second and second ones.—Publishers' announcement.

THEORIES OF THE ATONEMENT.

—o—

Dear Editor:

I note your article on the fact that there are different views of the atonement. You do not give the view of Catholic and Protestant churches, that is, the view generally accepted by those churches.

Is this the orthodox statement of it: Man was created pure—Adam: that he disobeyed and fell and was rendered impure, and as he became, all his descendants were, are, impure, sinful, wicked, out of harmony with the Creator and therefore necessarily to be punished forever: that the Creator in the council of His own will concluded, whether before or after the fall it is not known or believed, to arrange a plan by which the whole human race—descendants of Adam, might be forgiven for this inherited and accumulated sin and restored to His favor. That plan was that the Creator should be created and born in the form of a man, of a woman, and should permit Himself in this human form to be put to death by men, and that His suffering and death would be by Him, the Creator accepted as a sacrifice and atonement to Himself for the sins of all who should accept it and believe it in this time to come. And that there is no other means or method of salvation under heaven among men. T. T. Hicks.

2-8-1915.

It would be impossible in a word to answer Bro. Hicks' question. Either "yes" or "no" would be misleading. He brings in the doctrine of total depravity and inherited sinfulness, which is no essential part of the theory of the atonement. Whether man is totally depraved or not; whether sinfulness is transmissible from father to son or not, history shows in man's moral life need of atonement, that is, some means of bringing man into harmony with God in the true relationship of filial obedience. The Bible teaches that the object of Christ's death on the cross was to effect this atonement, this reconciliation. How it may effect it is the question that has brought forth various theories, and we presume that still other theories will appear in the future development of human thought. Protestant theory has not been identical with Roman Catholic theory. Protestants generally we believe have accepted Anselm's view of the vicarious nature of Christ's sufferings, regarding them as intended to satisfy the demands of divine justice and make possible man's pardon instead of man's punishment. Roman Catholics, following Abelard, have thought of Christ's sufferings not as vicarious or expiatory, not as intended to affect the divine attitude toward sinful man, but as intended simply to affect man himself, fill him with sorrow, and lead him to repentance. Roman Catholics see no reason why God may not arbitrarily pardon offenders when they repent. Protestants have felt the need of some satisfaction for the past life of sin, and have found their comfort in believing that the sacrifice of Christ makes it possible for the sins of the past to be blotted out so that they will no more stand against us. Conscience seems to demand an expiatory offering, and no other than the offering of the Son of God and the Son of Man seems to have dignity and worth enough to meet the end. Thoughtful heathen have been greatly distressed by the consciousness of sin and have done penance and suffered much but found no peace till they found it in hearing about and believing in the Sacrifice on Calvary.

Fleming H. Revell Co., of New York, have a new book which Bro. Hicks and others would delight to read. It is entitled "The Atonement and Personality." The author, Dr. McNeily, is a man of both breadth and depth, who has made a special study of theories of the atonement. The book costs $2.50.

We meant to say last week that we had received $12.83 from Burlington S. S. for the Belgian sufferers contributed in their "White Gifts for the King" and that we would take pleasure in forwarding it. We have forwarded it to J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, who promise to send it to the proper parties without charge.

—We will try the plan of tabulating the weekly reports of Sunday-school attendance instead of printing in the reports of churches concerning other matters. It will save space and facilitate comparison.

—Yes, Brother Hughes, there are two extremes: one, when the old people monopolize church affairs, to the exclusion of the young from all part; the other, when the old people drop everything and leave all to the young people. You suggest the golden mean, when all work together, each in his place and doing his part.

—We thank Bro. B. T. Baynes, of Grace Sunday-school, this city, for the monthly reports of Sunday-school attendance. We would be glad to have reports at the end of every month from all our schools. We can tabulate them in the manner indicated this week so that each report will occupy but a single line in the paper.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

The last Annual Conference authorized the Board of Young People's Work to hold a convention some time this spring. The Board has agreed on Thomasville Methodist Protestant church as the place and April 23 to 25 as the time. The convention will begin Friday afternoon and close Sunday night.

Who are to come? The Board has decided to insist on each pastor being present and is asking each church in the N. C. Conference to send two delegates. Delegates will receive free entertainment and of course there will be some offerings taken to which the delegates will be asked to contribute.

Who will be the speakers? Dr. H. L. Feeman, Professor of the department of Practical Theology in Westminster Theological Seminary, has accepted an invitation to be present and other able speakers will be here. It is the purpose of the Board to have some of the very best material of the denomination present.

Begin now to make your plans to come! Let each pastor see to it that two delegates are appointed from each church, then let him insist on their coming.

The need of such a convention is obvious. We have not had anything of the kind so our young people have had nothing in the way of conventions except as they have gone off to some other denomination to get it.

A full programme will be published later and all the details will be worked out. Until then YOU BE PLANNING TO COME. J. E. Pritchard, Chmn. of Brd.

PERMANENT ELEMENTS IN EDUCATION.

By Pres. W. A. Harper.

III. Processes of Work.—If college did no more for a man than cultivate correct habits of work and thought, it would on that score only be entitled to every man's respect and support. The regular recurrence of college duties may be inconvenient at times, but so are the duties of the work-a-day world. The punctual performance of these duties will tell wonderfully in after years, when the stress and the storm of life's obligations gather thick and fast about us. Every college man has in his vocational duties after graduation had occasion to feel grateful to the routine exacted by the rules and regulations of his college days. He may have found them interfering with his pleasures and desires at times and he may have yielded a half-hearted obedience, when he was under obligation to attend class rather than witness a great athletic contest in a near-by city, but in his maturer years when the self-discipline thus achieved has brought him the needful resolution for sticking to his duties in the face of discouragements or inviting pleasure, his mind will revert to the old scenes and gratitude will well up within him for lasting benefits received.

But it may be objected that such discipline can be had in a store or a factory or the army. In a sense this is true, but with a vital difference. In a store or a factory or the army, the duties are prescribed and the "boss" under whatever title enforces strict adherence thereto or discharges the refractory employee. There is not much opportunity for the display of the will power in making choice between duties that may be neglected and pleasures that bid for indulgence. No such seminary for the development of the will has ever been devised as the small college, where parental care is showered over all and where duties and pleasures involving the will's cultivation and development are plenteously supplied. To this benign opportunity for strengthening the will throu' exercise the vocations of daily life can offer no parallel.

But far more valuable than the inculcation of correct habits of work and thought is the acquaintance the college course gives with the field of universal knowledge and the processes of attacking the problems that demand solution at our hands. It is not required that a man shall remember all he learns during his college days in order to profit by his study. He may forget all the Latin and Greek he ever knew and not be able to demonstrate a single proposition in geometry nor perform a single experiment in science. He may not be able to recall the facts of history nor the schools of philosophy, and yet have in the mastery of these items of forgotten lore acquired such insight into the methods of attacking difficult problems that he is qualified for leadership in the affairs of life, and where other men falter and untimately go down in the fierce onslaught, he calmly and serenely and self-confidently because of his rare insight into the processes of grappling with difficult situations goes on to rich and satisfying achievement. Let the college man who shrinks from the tangled maze of his daily allotment of Greek and Latin or higher mathematics content himself with the sweet thought that in their mastery he is destined to discover the golden threads of the most effective processes of work—a discovery that shall give him a tremendous lead in the race of life. And further let him consider that his wide acquaintance with truth as the college course opens it up to him will stand him in good stead in coming days and enable him with little effort to keep himself informed or to inform himself as to any matter involving expert skill in investigation. The training of the will through manifold moral decisions, the inculcation of correct habits of work and thought, the insight into the effective processes of grappling with difficult situations, and the possession of a wide range of knowledge connected with the ability to investigate for himself any particular realm of it—these are priceless boons of college education and happy is the man who fortunately is possessed of them.

IV. General Culture.—Note that I did not say polish, but culture. Polish is put on from the outside. It is a veneer and its thinness is easily discernible by all. But culture is from within out. It does not come off because it is not put on. There are schools which essay to teach culture. They really teach polish—what might perhaps be dubbed culturine—and their product is distasteful to all who really know what true culture is. The graduates of such schools know the latest styles of dress and the names of the newest indigestible viands and the tricks of entertaining and are past masters in idleness and frivolity. "They are experts at playing bridge, but veriest ignoramuses at playing Bridget." If they are possessed of culture, the less we have of it the better.

The culture for which I plead is that which Matthew Arnold described as acquaintance with the best that has been thought, said, and done in man's history. Such acquaintance gives dignity, gives charm, gives worth to its possessor. Such a person is refined, genuinely refined, because his refinement is the outcropping of his soul and not the habiliment of a groom. He is cultured, genuinely cultured, because high thinking always takes practical form in culture that cannot fail—culture as high above that which comes of fashionable living as a real man is above his pampered horse or a real woman is above her fondled poodle. The man or woman of culture is at home in the kitchen or the workshop, in the parlor, in society, in educated circles, among the unlearned, amid wealth or poverty, everywhere or anywhere and at any time. His culture does not puff him up, but makes him the servant of all his fellows, and wherever there is human need to be satisfied he has found his friend and neighbor. Such culture comes unconsciously, as a by product. It comes without being sought for, but when it has come, what a richness, what a joy, what a halo of glory it lends the life of its possessor and of every one with whom he comes in contact! And nothing else can yield it so sweetly as the college course.

V. Christian Character.—But the crowning contribution of education to life-equipment is Christian character. Nothing else can take its place. And the education which fails in this respect has failed beyond redemption. It becomes the enemy of progress and should be cast into outer darkness. A man without character, without Christian character, is a danger to our civilization, and the better he is educated the greater menace he becomes to our free institutions. We want education and we will have it; but we want education based on Christian character even more, and we are determined to have it. We will not permit any maudlin sentimentality in regard to the necessity of free thought to rob us of the most vital element in any education—character and the God that makes character possible. We believe in the right of each individual to choose his own religious faith, but we also believe that the educational system should make it easy, not hard, for him to have faith at all. Freedom of thought is not synonymous with skepticism and infidelity and if it is, we will have no more freedom of thought. The American people have issued their ultimatum to this fetish of a deluded age. They have said to it: "You shall not crucify the most priceless possession of life, Christian character, on your cross of free thought. Christian character has been our nation's bulwark in all our generations. It has brought us to leadership in national and private life. It has been our pillar of fire by night and our pillar of cloud by day. It is to us evidence that the God of our fathers is with us yet, and you shall not sacrifice this glorious heritage on your altar of free thought. If you reducation cannot give us as its crowning work the sweet fruitage and exquisite charm of Christian character, then we will dwell with the Lord in the tents of the untutored and the unlearned''! So say the American people and so say we.

And yet there are institutions in this Christian land, in this land where the sentiments just expressed represent the mature judgment of ninety per cent. and more of our people, in this Christian land of whose Christian ideals bodying themselves forth in most humanitarian methods and institutions we are pardonably proud, in this delightful Christian land, ''Where the weak grow strong and the strong grow great'', there are educational institutions from which young men and women, the flower of our country, each year emerge after four years of study and research with no more conception of the true God and of their relationship to Him or of His relationship to society than if they had been educated in the jungles of Africa? Isn't it awful? It is more than awful, but the day of redemption is at hand. We have scented the enemy and he is ours. We will never give up the battle, but will fight it out along this line if it takes us our life-time. And when we pass off the arena, we will transmit the feud to our children and they to theirs, till the virus of this deadly heresy has been absolutely eliminated from the veins of our national life. We value education, but we value Christian character. The beauty of it is that we can have both if we will, and we will.

CREDULITY.

My! What a capacity for believing our Baptist brethren must have. I have flattered myself with the idea that I am a pretty good hand at believing, but I can not keep within hollowing distance of them. The trouble with me perhaps is that I cannot believe off-hand. I must have a reason for it. ''Thus saith the Lord'' is all I want. My troubles are over then. They can beat me out of sight if indeed they themselves believe some things they subscribe to. They must truly believe what they consent to or appear before God and man in a false light. A serious thing for the writer. Not many years ago, nor many miles from where this is written, a Baptist minister immersed several young men one morning at ten o'clock, and at the church he said to them, ''Young men, you were saved this morning at ten o'clock.'' This is too tough for me. I have made no progress at believing this yet. I can easily btlieve that they were saved at the church or any where else as to that, when they gave up sin and trusted in Christ, but to believe that they were saved the hour and minute he immersed them is too tough a proposition for me. If I knew just when they were saved, whether it was when they went down into the water, or whether it was when they reached the surface of the water, or midway. Now if I knew just when that saving took place it might give me some toe-hold to begin believing it. If they were saved, I say if in the water, then they were sinners when they reached the water and we have no means of knowing how much farther. This makes it still more difficult to believe. I have immersed quite a number myself but did not know I was saving anybody by it. I thought the Lord had done that before. I have always firmly believed that a sinner, an unbeliever, went into the water a dry sinner and came out a wet one. The gentleman who informed me of this ten o'clock saving business is of the same opinion, judging from the after-life of those immersed that morning.

As to ''close communion'' I have plenty of time on that, for hundreds of them have not succeeded in believing that themselves. I do not blame them a bit, for there is not a single scrap of Scripture to help them. I suppose they were like the Roman Catholics' purgatory—saw the need of it and made one themselves.

By far the hardest and toughest problem ever handed over to me to believe is that [illegible] last. [illegible] coming so I can persevere. So you see this doctrine is no good to me. I must keep at it all the time and then I get scared pretty badly sometimes. I was told a week or so ago that the Lord would not let one die until he was ready, for heaven, I suppose. I would be glad to see the Scriptures that teach that. It must be in their Bible, for it is not in mine. They evidently believe that doctrine and believe it with a vim if the following is true, which I sincerely hope is not. About twenty years ago, in a little town in Western North Carolina, a young man was engaged to marry a young lady. The said young man was a victim of strong drink and in defense of his daughter the father objected to the match. This so enraged the would-be groom that he in a state of almost beastly intoxication, went to the girl's home with a pistol in each hand, demanding the daughter or the father's life. There was no other chance for the gentleman to save his own life but to shoot the drunken wretch, which he did, killing him instantly. So plain was the case that the jury acquitted him on the spot. The strange part about this sad affair is that a Baptist minister in good standing and indeed a good man, is said to have stood at the open grave of that man who died drunk and with murder in his heart and said he was saved, for he himself had baptized him and received him into the church. Revolting as this seems to us and much as we hope that it is a mistake and that the Rev. gentleman made no such remarks at that grave, yet he is said to have said the same thing over the remains of a young man who died suddenly, at a ball game, and whose last word was an oath. The question is, was he consistent? If those young men were saved that morning at ten o'clock, at the time they were immersed, then those young men were saved when they were immersed, for both ministers were good men and of the same denomination. If those fellows had been Methodist Protestants, we would have had them in hell at once, or believed them there, at least, and been warning their companions to live a different life for fear of the same fate. We M. P. preachers are mighty big cowards when it comes to living in the service of the devil and trusting to get to heaven just at the last. Numbers of members may do it but not without warning from us. It is no trouble at all to believe that our Baptist brethren are an average good people and that their ministers are honest and sincere in their belief, teaching what [illegible]

ON CHINA'S SACRED MOUNTAIN

Yesterday was a great feast day, the ninth of the ninth month, and many people went up the mountain to worship, while some of our women went to preach. The temple of the Sleeping Goddess is not far from here and this is the day when with great ceremony, they put her wadded clothes on and put her to bed for the winter. In the spring there is another great day when she gets up, puts on her summer clothes and sits in a chair.

The goddess is made of wood, life-sized and jointed, and is very uncanny. One day I took hold of her and stood her up, and she felt as if she were alive.—Effie G. Young in Missionary Review.

The rolling centuries come and go,
And Christ's dominion stretches on;
His empire, silnetly and slow,
Rises o'er empires lost and gone;
His march is strong—his conquests sure—
His kingdom founded to endure.

—I. N. Tarbox.

TOMMY'S PRAYER.

During the years I was at work in the slums of southeast London, writes Philip I. Roberts, the following example of a simple faith came to my knowledge. A poor little slum child of about eleven develped a malady which demanded an instant operation. He was taken to Guy's Hospital, where the great doctor who examined him told him there was just a fighting chance for his life.

The seats of the operating table, rising tier above tier like the gallery of a church were filled with long rows of students who had come to witness the greatest surgeon of his time use the knife. The little patient was brought in, and during some preliminaries, placed in a cushioned chair. Looking round at the great throng of men, he said timidly to one of the assistant doctors: "Please sir, I should be very glad if one of you gentlemen would say just a little prayer for me."

There was a profound silence. Nobody moved, so the little slum child knelt down and said: "Dear Jesus, I'm only a poor, weak, little lad, but, please, I'd like to live. So, dear Jesus, please help this kind gentleman, so that he shall do his work right. Amen." Having said that, the boy climbed on the table and lay back with a smile lighting up his face.

The great surgeon stood at the head of the table, fully aware that he was about to perform an operation that would test his skill to the utmost. For a moment or [redacted]ed. The students [redacted]d before, and this [redacted]. Never had they seen condition now augured but ill for the life of the waif. Yet as he looked on the still moving lips of the prostrate boy, a great calm stole over the doctor. He commenced to operate, and immediately realized that the slum child's prayer was being answered. Coolness of head, steadiness of hand, and delicacy of touch all came as they were needed, to the skillful surgeon.

Next morning the surgeon stood in the ward by the bedside of his little patient, taking his hand he said: "Well, Tommy, Jesus heard your prayer yesterday." A confident smile lit up the boy's face as he answered: "I knew he would." Then his features clouded over, and he said: "You were very good to me, too, doctor. And I have nothing to give—nothing at all." Then a happy thought came to him and his face lit up again, and he whispered, "But I can keep on praying to Jesus for you, can't I?" A great lump came into the doctor's throat. "That you can," he answered huskily, "and that will be better than any sort of money, for God knows I need the prayers of one like you."

BRO. KLEIN'S MULTIGRAPH.

Here is what Bro. Klein says about it: "We have ordered one of the very latest [redacted] made in the factory at Cleveland, O., and it is sent directly to this office. Its work is to produce any number of actually type-written letters, cards, and so forth, by means of typewriter type, using a typewriter ribbon, striking a rubber cylinder similar to the typewriter platen.'

"When you turn the wheel, the left hand drum, which holds the type in grooves, revolves and the indicator moves to the type character desired. Pulling the trigger in the center of the machine operates a mechanism which forces the type from the left into the groove of the right-hand or printing drum. The two operations are rapid. Reverse them, and they distribute the type bars in the grooves of the left-hand drum.

"When a line of type has been set in the printing-drum, it is fastened by a metal clip or band, and the next line is started. Corrections are easily and quickly made.

"The printing drum is operated by a hand crank, having a cyclometer which counts the sheets as impressions are made.

"This drum is covered with a broad typewriter ribbon working automatically [redacted] in the opening at the back. The segment of the printing drum may be removed and the drum kept [redacted] use, and another segment put on the drum [redacted] new work. We are most grateful for this splendid acquisition to the Board's office equipment."

This machine is the gift of 129 persons in 2 conferences. Bro. Klein has now received the machine and is happy.

"Happy"—did I say? No, he still wants a filing cabinet and other conveniences. Will some other friends in the west come in their mites to help complete the equipment?

There is a [redacted] war in Europe will end in a few weeks as suddenly as it began. It might be so. A few men started the war and a few men might stop it. Great is the responsibility of those men.

RUTH'S CHOICE.

Every person's life in a large measure is dependent upon the choice he makes. The story of Ruth sets before us a good example in making a wise choice. As we read Ruth 1: 16, 17, we are impressed at once with the deep love Ruth had for those who love the Lord. Some may say, why was it that Ruth wanted to go with Naomi at this particular time? She loved the Lord and she desired to associate with His people. What if all the mothers and mothers-in-law would have a Christian character that would reflect upon all their children's lives while in the valley of decision. Shall mother's people be my people, and her God my God? Or, on the other hand, while in the valley of choice will we bid mothers and fathers good-by and turn back into the world without them? The young man never gets to the place in life when he doesn't need the advice of parents, if they have the love of Jesus in their hearts.

We never know what will be the fruits of the choice we make. God has great purposes hidden in our lives which depend upon our choice. Perhaps Ruth never made a greater step in her life than when she chose to come to the land of God's people. Yet with all the influence father and mother can give us we are undecided in our choice. But we have one consolation. We can do as Martin Luther once said: "Here I stand: I can do no otherwise. God help me. Amen."

SOME REASONS WHY WE SHOULD TRAIN OUR CHILDREN TO BE INTERESTED IN MISSIONS.

1. Because the boys and girls of today will make the men and women of the church in the future.

2. Because we want the spirit of the church more in accord with Christ's great commission in the future than it is now.

3. Because the world with all its allurements appeals so strongly to the selfish nature of the young that they need some influence to call out and develop the opposite traits, self-sacrifice and unselfishness.

4. Because the missionaries of the future must come from the young people growing up around us today, and we have learned that childhood is the best time to make impressions for life.

5. Because giving is a Christian grace and a thing of growth and development. The earlier a child is taught to give the more generous it will be when it grows to manhood or womanhood.

6. Because money spent in spreading the gospel is money well invested.

7. Because our children form a large part of our church and we want a whole church giving the whole gospel to the whole world.

(Paper read by Mrs. G. V. Mayo at one of the Arkport Auxiliary monthly meetings.)

GIVING IN TIPS AND IN TITHES.

Mr. George Innes says there was a time in his life when he gave for missions as he gave to the porter on the sleeper or as he gave to the waiter at the hotel. He confesses that he was guilty of tipping the Lord. On a sleeper or in a first-class hotel it is not respectable to fail to give a gratuity, to the porter or to the waiter in recognition of the service rendered. The berth and the meal are paid for in full: the tip is a matter of custom and good nature, and not a legal or moral obligation.

Mr. Innes gave regularly to support the local church of which he was a member, and in doing so felt that he discharged his obligation to the Lord. But he was willing to go farther, and he gave a trifle extra to extend the boundaries of the Redeemer's Kingdom. In doing what many other members of the church did there was no sense of obligation, no recognition of stewardship. Rather than be considered selfish and penurious he gave the Lord a coin or a bill in precisely the same spirit as he gave a quarter or half a dollar to the boy that cleaned his shoes in the sleeper or supplied his needs at the table.

In the Mosaic economy the people were required to give a tithe of all their income from every source. The Law plainly and positively said, "The tithe is the Lord's." If the tithe was withheld, the people were charged with robbing God, and they were punished for their sin. The Prophet Malachi accused the people of his day of robbing God, and called upon them to bring the whole tithe into the storehouse, and he assured them that, if they would do this, the Lord would open the windows of heaven and pour out such a blessing upon them that there would not be room enough to receive it. After the tithes came the "free-will offerings."

Since his financial and missionary conversion Mr. Innes has devoted himself exclusively to the Lord's work. He has opened an office and furnished it, and supports a staff of workers. Now he is a steward: what he has he holds in trust for the Lord. The day of "tipping" is over.

Mr. Innes is not the only one who has been tipping the Lord. As long as the average offering of the Christian people of America for Foreign Missions does not exceed one cent a week, it is plain that the number of "tippers" is very large. There are men and women whom the Lord has prospered who are able to work at their own charges and not only support themselves but support whole stations. Why should they not do it?

It is not clear to all that the law of the tithe has been transferred from the Mosaic dispensation to the Christian. Some say that there are those who cannot afford to give as much as a tenth of their incomes for the Lord's work. The testimony of those who have put God to the proof is that nine-tenths with His blessing will go farther than ten-tenths without His blessing. Does it not appear probable that if the Jew could give a tenth of his income, and if the pagan could and can give a tenth, the Christian can give as large a proportion? Does a Christian wish to give less than a Jew? If all Christians were to give a tenth, there would be money enough in the Lord's treasury for local church expenses, for missions of every kind, for benevolence, and for education. Treasuries would be overflowing. The tithe is the least that we should give, for many could well afford to live on a tithe and give the remainder.

Is it not high time that we were substituting the tithe for the tip? Is it not high time that we were giving as the Lord has prospered us? Can we say that we honor the Lord with our substance, when we hand him a tip? He is not a pauper asking alms; he is a preferred creditor, and his claims should be satisfied first and to the full.

Tip or tithe—which shall it be?—Missionary Review.

What warrant have we in a time of distress for making Christ and his causes suffer first? Our fathers did not do this in the infinitely darker days of the Civil War. They rose then to a greater fidelity. Some of our foreign missionary organizations were born then. Others sent out during the war the greatest companies of reenforcements they had ever sent. The war which now shadows the world and the sacrifices which are willingly made in it should shame our timidity and our tame trifling with duty, and call us to deal with life as a reality and with the work of Christ in the world as worth more devotion than national honor or commercial advantage or racial pride. Every soldier dying for his country on a European battlefield, every home giving up its blood and fears is a summons and a reproach to us men and women who have accepted the Christ of the Cross but not the Cross of Christ. If they have counted their cause above their lives and their every possession, why not we? What they freely yield to their lords of war and death shall not Christians give with joy to their Lord of Life and Peace?—Robert E. Speer.

ASTONISHING OPPORTUNITIES IN CHINA.

The Changing Order.

The other day we were walking through the streets of Chuchow with Dr. Osgood and Mr. Dannenberg, our missionaries there. They took us to the great Confucian temple, which for centuries has been the chief center of reverence and worship in the city. The place covers a large area and is a very interesting succession of outer courts, inner courts and shrines. We were struck with the apparent condition of decay which characterized the whole place. The temple was deserted and, even on feast days, the missionaries tell us, few people come.

Crossing the large inner court, we noticed some very familiar-looking chalk lines on the ground. On asking Dr. Osgood the meaning of them, he stated that he had been laying out a tennis court here for the use of the officials of the city, and that they had suggested this as the best place. The wall of the outer temple court formed one back-stop, and the sacred shrine of Confucius the other. Here the chief officials of the city and leading men of the town exercised their bodies by playing tennis in the cool of the day.

We went into the temple, or shrine, dedicated to Confucius, and saw the sacred tablet to his memory, before which incense had been burned and worshipers had bowed in reverence for centuries. On the tablet was inscribed the words: "The Great Holy One, the Supreme Teacher, Confucius," and the various memorials to the great sage covered with cobwebs. After we had observed this shrine, we went further into another court, at the end of which was a large hall, where, in olden days, the teachers lectured on the divine merits of Confucius. This is now in disuse, and, for a nummber of years there have been no Confucian lectures there. We noticed that the walls of this hall were covered with great placards, on which Chinese characters were inscribed, and on two of the sides were many colored Sunday-school picture scrolls, with Chinese printing at the bottom. Our missionaries informed us that in this hall was held our Chinese Christian Convention of last year. The banners on the wall were Gospel mottoes and Christian hymns in Chinese. In this hall, which has echoed with the teachings of Confucius for centuries, and where thousands of people have been taught to worship him, our Christian convention held its sessions for days: and all of this at the invitation of the leading Chinese of the city.

Education versus Idolatry.

The other day we were journeying inland, in a thickly-populated district, to study conditions among the people and look for possibilities for new work. Our houseboat stopped at a little village along the bank of the canal, and we walked through the streets of this quaint place, our missionary speaking of Christianity to the people and distributing picture tracts to those who came to listen. We wandered through the village and out through the country, between the fields of rice and beans. In the distance we saw a temple and decided to visit it and study its peculiarities. On reaching the sacred building we found that it was a Buddhist temple of some pretensions, which had been standing for several hundred years. We entered the place and found our way around the huge wall of the outer court, which had been erected to keep out the evil spirits. On crossing the inner court and approaching the central part of the temple, which in these places is ordinarily given over to the large shrine of Buddha and his gilded image, we found that a strange change had taken place. This large central room had been converted into a modern schoolhouse with cement floor and comfortable desks, and large American windows had been placed in the sides. Within was a country school of forty boys, with a Chinese teacher giving them instruction in geography and other branches of modern learning. Here was a schoolroom of alert, bright-faced Chinese children, with little piles of modern school textbooks asked the teacher about the idols which had formerly occupied this room. He smiled and took us to a little alcove at the side. Here we found the huge image of Buddha sitting on a low platform and huddled all about it in a crowded group the various idols of the temple. They had been jostled into this minor place, in the temple once erected for their sole benefit, in order that the modern school might have room in the building. We learned that all over this province, the Buddhist temples have been treated in a similar manner.

China Seeking Help.

A few days after our experience in the country temple, we were visiting the institutions of a great Chinese Confucianist who is trying to help his country. His name is Chang Chien, and he is a leader in President Yuan Shi Kai's cabinet. His home is in Nantungchow, where we have a mission station, and it is of his work in this city that I speak.

We were taken, first, to a girls' normal school, constructed with the money of this rich man, who owns great cotton mills. We found he had taken one of the leading Buddhist temples of the city and entirely transformed its once sacred buildings in order to provide room for this training school for women teachers for China. He had spent $20,000 in remodeling the old buildings and erecting new ones in this great temple compound. Here are 250 young Chinese women who are being trained in school methods, from the kindergarten up to the high school. His purpose is to train in this institution the leaders for the new modern schools throughout his province. He is calling on the mission schools to furnish the instructors and teachers to carry out this plan.

In another part of the city he has constructed a similar normal school for young men. It accommodates 480 teachers, whom he is training for their task.

Five miles from the city he has built a great orphanage, which has over 500 orphans in it, and he has asked our mission to put one of our missionaries in charge, while he pays the expenses. He has said that we might teach Christianity in the school, but we are helpless to take advantage of this offer because of our lack of workers.

In another part of the city he has built a large hospital and has urged that our mission doctor direct it. At present, we have no doctor for our own hospital in this great city because of our lack of men and money. We have a young physician under appointment for this place who has just come to China, but he must study the language for a year before he can do the

In this whole district the field is wide open; there are 6,000,000 people and at present we have only three missionaries to carry on the work. A strong educational man, who understands pedagogy and the modern school system, could direct the educational development of this whole section. This public-spirited man of great wealth and high ideals longs for us to help him, for his struggle is a difficult one, and this field is but typical of other great districts in China.

What It Means.

What does it mean that the temple of Confucius in Chuchow is practically abandoned; that the inner court is turned into a tennis ground and that our Mission Convention was held in the sacred Confucian lecture-hall? It does not mean that the people of Chuchow are all turning to Christianity, for they are not; it does not mean that their lives are any better than they were before, for they are not; but it does mean that the moorings of the past are broken: that the sacredness of their aged institutions has, for the time at least, largely passed away; it does mean that the people are drifting, that they are unattached, that they know not whither they are going, and with the doubt which has arisen in their minds concerning their own religions, they are fast moving toward a position of doubt in everything. What does it mean that the gods in the Buddhist temples have been displaced with modern schoolrooms and that the idols have been huddled in a corner to give place to the teaching of physiology and geography? It does not mean that the ignorance and superstition of the Chinese people have been overturned in a night: it does not mean that the teachings of Christ have gripped their hearts; but it does mean that they are open, as never before, to the truth, and that the Church of Jesus Christ has the greatest responsibility of its history resting upon it. China is wide open; the barriers are broken down; the people are eager to learn; the Church can take possession, if she will. If, in this hour of transition, we do not accept our responsibility and send to these people sufficient teachers and preachers, ere long the door will be closed again; the more ignorant will return with renewed zeal to their idols and superstition; the more learned, with their moorings broken, will drift into atheism, as have the great multitude of educated in Japan.

America's Opportunity.

This great sickening war in Europe is affecting even China. The chief topic of conversation out here is this war among Christian nations. America, with its ideal of the East, stands out as the ideal to the Chinese. They intertwine their new republican flag with ours; they say we are on the other side of the Pacific—sister nations; they look to us for teaching, for direction, for inspiration. We have a tremendous advantage, in this time of discord and bloodshed. They listen with eagerness to what America has to teach them; our missionaries are in high favor; the hoor has struck for the American church to take swift advantage of this opening in the Orient. What we do in the next ten years will mean more than the work of the succeeding one hundred years. China looks to America; America has the Gospel; this is the psychological moment and God calls us to the task with tremendous emphasis.—Stephen J. Corey, D. D., in Men and Missions.

THE CHINA Continuation Committee says: "The walls which guarded the young girl are being demolished rapidly and the spiritual walls which can protect her purity and peace are rising only slowly. We urge the need and importance of providing Christian literature for them."

DIGGING A WELL AT ALIGARH.

Having secured sanction from the finance committee for a much-needed well, Mrs. Matthews, the able missionary in charge, decided to make a beginning. Getting the women together one day she told them of the need of the well and the plan to put this work in hand. As quick as lightning a number of them said, "Oh, Mem Sahib, we will dig the well; don't you call outside labor." She told them how deep and wide it would have to be.

"Oh, yes," they said, "we will do it."

Out went the procession, led by Mrs. Matthews, measuring tape in hand. The circle was described and all were ready, pick in hand, when Buri, the "boss of the gang," said, "Mem Sahib, let us ask God's blessing and help so that we may have the strength to do this work."

There and then they knelt in the circle and Buri prayed. I am told she prayed from a full heart and in simple, beautiful language such as you would not expect to hear from a village woman rescued in the famine a few years ago.

Rising from their knees, the women had orders to go ahead, and immediately fifteen picks were at work. The digging was interrupted by other work that was necessary, so it was a month later that they struck water. They shouted with joy and called Mrs. Matthews to the spot.

Except for the mason and his mates [illegible] the barren fields around to flourish and bring forth food for the institution.—Indian Witness.

MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

We have heard of many ways of inducing the unconverted to become Christians, but we have heard of none quite so unique as the method a Chinese man used to convert his wife. The incident is taken from an article, "Present-day China," printed in the Woman's Missionary Friend. The man was himself an earnest Christian, and was in conversation with a missionary. She asked him, "Has your wife learned to read in any of our little Christian books?" The man replied, "Not very much. When I first came home and told her she ought to stop worshiping idols and pray to the true God she did not like it. I tried to read to her, but she would not listen. Finally I burned the book and told her if she wouldn't listen to my preaching I would make her drink the ashes of the book, and get the doctrine into her that way. She saw I meant business and decided to listen and now she is a Christian."

GIVING THE BEST.

One morning, before the English government had forbidden the throwing of children into the Ganges as an offering to the gods, a missionary went out and found a woman standing by the river. Held tightly by each hand was a child, one as beautiful as any American mother's baby and the other lame and blind. The missionary knew why the woman was there—it was to throw her children into the Ganges to appease her god. She had never heard of Jesus, but oh, there is not a woman anywhere in the world of whom Jesus has not heard!

When the missionary came back at sunset one of the babies was missing. As he came near, he saw that it was the deformed one whom she had kept. Pityingly he asked her, "Oh, why did you not give this child and keep the other?"

She lifted her great, dark eyes and said, "O, sir, I do not know what kind of a God you have in America, but out here in India our god expects us to give him our very best."—Selected.

ORIENTALS AT SERVICES IN CALIFORNIA.

It is worthy of note that when the crypt of the new cathedral in San Francisco was dedicated this year, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains" was sung by a choir from the Japanese mission, and "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun" [illegible] to the officers and men of two Japanese cruisers in San Francisco. Representatives of the Bible Society, of the Federation of Churches and of the Japanese-American evangelization society, Dendo Dan, participated in the formal presentation which took place on the afterdeck of Admiral Kuroi's flagship, the Asama. The flagship's band played the national airs of the two countries, and in addition, "I love you, California," which in view of Californian legislation, indicates a reasonable spirit of forgiveness on the part of the visitors.—Record of Christian Work.

HIDDEN NAMES OF PREACHERS.

Who will find them?

1. Let life every where serve a royal brotherhood.

2. You are worth a little lying in mud.

3. Several nights in barrooms bend us to sin.

4. Strive with energy, rise daily, never abandon.

5. Small means are insufficient latitude late in winter.

Well, I've run down again, so I'll have to stop. C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Greensville Ct.—Arrived at Triplet, Va., Jan. 2, and Sunday, Jan. 3, marks the beginning of my program of work.

I have made my first appointment journey, and I wish to say that large congregations have greeted me at all the churches where services were held. Because of the rough, rainy weather there was no service at Ebenezer Jan 24. That day completed my round according to the schedule of appointments.

We held our first quarterly conference at Hobbs' Chapel Jan. 30. All the churches were represented. But the little official delegation coming from our lively Philadelphia church would have made a good Conference within itself, saying nothing of the rest. The finest kind of spirit prevailed throughout the session. One good Christian brother said that he had never before witnessed a more lovely conference.

All told, the reports were very good. Of the five churches on the circuit three are running right lively Sunday schools. On the side of finance, pastor's salary is up to date and a little ahead. Nothing as yet has been done toward the collection of general claims. This will be taken up and inspected later. We hope to come up at the end of the Conference year with every cent of every claim in full.

Having traveled over the field and making an inspection of all things, I wish to take this opportunity to say that the people are kind, sympathetic and thoughtful. To make a long story short, it is a class of mighty good people, a people who believe in looking after their minister. In making a tour over the Conference district a nobler army or company of people than these would be hard to find.

D. T. Surratt, Pastor.

Brink, Va., Feb. 5, 1915.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—Our Young People's Rally last Sunday night proved to be a very successful meeting. We had Bro. Dixon from High Point who made a fine address on "How to save the young people to the church." The attendance was gratifying, and real service was rendered the work of the young people of Grace Church by the service. The C. E. society had a fine attendance last Monday night and is getting started off with the new president, Bro. E. E. York, and other new officers in a way encouraging us to believe the society will do fine work this term.

Our debt raising campaign resulted in about $2,500 promised for this year; this leaves just $2,500 for 1916. It encourages us greatly to see the vanishing point coming nearer to us, and we hope that when 1916 closes the last dollar of this church debt will be paid.

Attendance at both Sunday school and preaching services Sunday morning was fine; we had over 300 at preaching.

Last Sunday we inaugurated a new system of grading the classes; there are five points four of which must be made every Sunday in the quarter and one every quarter to make a perfect record; the four are—to be present on time, to bring an offering, to have studied the lesson before coming to class, and to stay for church that day; the fifth is to bring a new scholar. We believe this new system of grading will greatly help our school, and will also increase the attendance of the smaller children at preaching service.

There are yet several of our members on the sick list; we have missed very much from her accustomed place in the S. S. and the choir at church Mrs. T. A. Hunter, and hope she may soon be with us again. R. M. Andrews.

Burlington.—For the first time in several weeks the weather was fair and the day beautiful last Sunday. The birds sang their sweet songs as if spring had come, and children's voices could be heard in joyful tones as they journeyed toward the church. Every one seemed to rejoice because of the agreeableness and beauty of the day. The Sunday school attendance was next to the highest we have had this year. The increase over the previous Sunday is due, in a large measure, to the work of the Baraca class. This class had an attendance of 71, which was a considerable increase over the previous Sunday. The class has taken on new life and fresh enthusiasm since Bro. J. E. Brown, the new president, took charge of the class. Bro. Brown is proving himself "the right man in the right place."

The preaching services were well attended Sunday. The Lord's Supper was observed at the morning service and a good number participated in the celebration of the ordinance. The doors of the church were opened for the reception of members and Mrs. H. R. Payne was received by letter from Mt. Hermon M. P. Church.

The C. E. Society met at 7 p. m. with unusual attendance. The leader, Miss Margaret Hayes, was absent and Dr. Hornady conducted the service. A few interesting and helpful talks were made by different members.

The prayer meeting last week was to have been conducted by Bro. R. F. Williams, but owing to his inability to be present, the service was conducted by our pastor. Abraham was the subject of discussion, and many interesting facts were explained relative to the life and character of Abraham.

The Baraca-Philathea City Union, of which three of our Sunday-school classes are members, held its monthly meeting at the Reformed church last Sunday afternoon. Bro. J. G. Rogers of the Baraca class of our Sunday-school, was honored with the office of President of the Union, to succeed Mr. W. C. Douglass, resigned.

Our church and Sunday school are glad to have Miss Ila Sta Stafford with us again after an absence of several months. She returned last week. Miss Ila was greatly missed by the church and Sunday school during her absence, for she is numbered among our most faithful and loyal workers.

We are glad to report that the sick among our members are improving and we hope for them a speedy restoration to their usual health and strength.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Uwharrie Ct.—Our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, preached an interesting and helpful sermon last Sunday to a very good and attentive congregation. We appreciate having Bro. Trogdon in our Sunday school on preaching days, and wish he could be with us every Sunday. We always feel spiritually blessed and strengthened to have our pastor with us.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely with our new superintendent, Mr. L. B. Garren. Owing to rough weather our S. S. attendance has not been what we would like for it to be. Many times the people neglect going to Sunday school and church when they are blessed with health and strength. We ought to go to church and Sunday school. There is no place I like to go better than to church because it is the best place young people can go.

Luna Briles.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—We have been having such disagreeable weather the attendance at Sunday school has been very small. The attendance Jan. 31 was 46. The attendance at prayer meeting has also been small although there is a great interest shown in the services. Mrs. Stella Corbet conducted the services last Thursday night and Miss Estie Swain has been appointed for next Thursday night.

The singing school taught by Rev. J. E. Bassett was not a very great success on account of sickness in this community.

Mr. Joseph Roberts and Miss Verlen Burrell were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, on Jan. 30, at the home of Mr. Guy Edwards in Weaverville. Rev. E. Fox, pastor of the Weaverville M. E. Church, South, officiated. The wedding was a quiet one, only a very few of their closest friends being present. Mr. Roberts and Miss Burrell were both members of the Clark's Chapel Sunday school and we wish them a long, happy and prosperous married life. Lester Watts.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Fairview Circuit.—I visited this field the first Sunday; Fairview at 11 a. m. and Gibsonville at 7:30. A very good attendance both morning and night. Rev. J. W. Self was assigned to this field at the last session of Conference. He lives at Gibsonville as only one Sunday is given to Ossipee, and this was agreed upon before the pastor reached the field by the members or at least most of them. The pastor is trying to get into the homes of the membership and get them interested, and this is a field on which there needs a great deal of pastoral work to be done. Mill people do and and expect more of this kind of [illegible] pastor [illegible] the country and pastor [illegible] fields long will find it to be so. Bro. Self is serving a good people and I hope he will have a good year. Both pastor and people seem to be pleased. Some church repair or building needs to be done at Gibsonville, if we hope to hold our own. Other denominations no stronger in numbers nor financially have better church buildings than we in this town.

I hope this is the year our people at this place will do something in this direction. YOU CAN: WILL YOU? Claim paid.

C. A. Cecil.

Canaan, Piedmont Ct.—Bro. Shelton, as usual, reached a good sermon on the fourth Sunday; the congregation was small. We were glad to have our pastor and wife join our church. We are looking and praying for the best year of Canaan church. On the 1st Sun. in April, 1911, we organized Sunday school in our new church with seventy present; since that time we have had an evergreen Sunday school and God has blessed our efforts wonderfully, and in this evergreen Sunday school there are some evergreen flowers growing up. Up to Christmas our record showed that Eunice Bailey has not been absent from Sunday school in this time; she was late one Sunday. Eunice is a little girl twelve years old today. In our special meeting last August Eunice gave her young life to God and joined Canaan M. P. Church. This little girl lives about one mile from church which distance she walks almost every Sunday. Our prayer is that she may continue in this good work so that she when she has grown into womanhood may be as pure and as white as snow. Rev. 2:10. Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life (Eunice).

Our total attendance has been good. Pray for us that God may continue to bless our efforts. Yours in His service.

George Berrier.

Piney Grove, Siler City Ct.—Our pastor, Bro. Bowman, was around the first Sun. and preached another good sermon. His subject was Watch: every letter had a distinct meaning. We all should watch more carefully what we say and what we do, as the world is looking at our every movement. We are ready to make excuses on our part, but that is not going to excuse us in the least. We are all going to have to render an account for ourselves and no one else. Some folks would be delighted if they could put their faults on somebody else.

The wealth of the people in the community is good. Better than [illegible]

Siler City.—We had the [illegible] school last Sunday that we have ever had, there being 56 present, and our collection for orphanage at High Point was $4.26. Everybody seems to be taking a great interest in the Sunday school work. Our lesson was a very interesting and beautiful one. Our Supt., Mr. L. L. Wrenn, was sick and couldn't be with us, but hope he will be out in a few days.

Mrs. E. D. Woody.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Ct.—Our S. S. is suffering greatly from the rains and cold weather, but we hope spring will soon open up with beautiful sunshine and warm weather. We organized the second Sun. in Jan. with the same superintendent and officers. We are glad to have Bro. Waldrop back with us this year. On last Sunday he preached an excellent sermon on the birth of Christ. He now preaches here on the second Sunday at 3 p. m. and fifth Sunday at 11 a. m. We hope all will come out next time to hear him preach and help us in Sunday school.

"Good cheer in your work helps you along.
"Good cheer in your work helps you along.
Don't worry and fret if things go wrong.
'Tis easier to make the work go right
When the soul is filled with hope and light.
Take a little of 'good cheer' when you rise;
Repeat oft the dose, that you be wise:
For a cheerful way will others bless,
And nothing like cheer to bring success."

Mrs Goldie Morris, Rep.

Pageland, S. C.—I am so encouraged with our S. S. I just want to tell it. The attendance has increased at least one third since last year. People seem to be more interested in the Sunday school work. I notice our record for 1st Sunday in Feb., 1914—present, 40; today, present, 71. We take collection every first Sunday for the Children's Home. Today's collection, $3.-31. I think this is good for our little school. Let every superintendent in the N. C. Conference see to it that a collection be taken once a month for the Children's Home. The good ladies of our church are going to organize the egg club. If we give freely, God will bless us in our work. Jeff Turner, Reporter.

Eden, Halifax Ct.—Our pastor, R. A. Swaringen, filled his regular appointment Sunday, preaching a fine sermon. We also had preaching the fifth Sunday, but on account of bad weather there were not very many out. In fact, I don't think very many of our people knew it. The roads around here are terrible; it is needs much and are willing to aid them at any time. A collection was taken Sunday amounting to a little over ten dollars.

We were very glad to have Mr. Lonnie Williams' wife worship with us Sunday. Our Sunday school out at the McDaniel School House is still progressing, and did not go into winter quarters.

Irene Hawkins.

Feb. 8, 1915.

Alleghany, Davidson Ct.—We organized Sunday school today with the following officers: superintendent, Mr. G. T. Loflin; teachers, F. M. Cook, N. L. Fine, G. T. Loflin, Abigail Coggin. Singing teachers, G. W. Surratt, N. E. Loflin. We hope they will all come out and have a good Sunday school this year.

There will be preaching next Sunday, and we would like to see a large number present. There are some sick around here but we hope they will soon be able to attend Sunday school, for we miss them very much. Abigail Coggin.

Feb. 12 is Lincoln's birthday.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Ct.—We are among the few that have class meeting, and we want to tell it, thinking it may encourage some others to have it. We have the old time class meetings, but have rather an organized meeting, thinking by so doing to accomplish more good and be a greater help to our pastor and to one another. We have Sister Annie Billings for our class leader, Bro. Lee Cashatt assistant; then we have Bro. David Cashatt for our secretary and Sister Geneva Nance, Martha Parsons, and Bro. Ivy Cashatt are committee. The secretary is to keep a record of each meeting and report each month what was done at the last meeting and call the roll and mark all present or absent, whichever it may be. The committee are to help the class leader to visit and encourage the members to attend and to report if any are sick and if any need a special visit by the pastor. We hope to do a great work this year for the Master, and I want to say that I believe that the preacher that sees to it that all his churches have class meetings and all his members or heads of families have family prayer will surely have many more stars in his crown than the one that does not see after such things. We hear some one say, "O, well, we don't need class meeting, it's so old-fashioned; we have prayer meetings and Christian Endeavor meetings and what could be better?" That's all good, but I will still contend that the class meeting excels them [illegible] services I ever affended and I have attended these meetings ever since I was converted, and they have grown sweeter to me. I love the class meeting; my mother taught me to love it and she would always go and encourage her children to go. She told us it was such a good meeting, so good she was converted at one of the old-time class meetings. So these meetings are so dear to me and I am going to try to help to keep up this grand old class meeting service as long as I live. We have been hearing the question discussed quite a little about the old-time power being lost in our churches, and it is lost to some extent, I think, and I believe where we lost out was when we left off class meetings. Some have said to me, "What is class meeting? what kind of a service is it, and what is it for?" It's a place to stand up for Jesus, a place to talk about God and His goodness. The Word says, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon His name and they shall be Mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him; then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." Sometimes we find it a cross to tell at church our Christian experience, especially when first converted, but "ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord," and I have found it one of the best ways to grow in grace. I hear some one say, "It's all right to tell how you are getting along if you feel like talking, but I don't see any need of the young people's saying anything, we do not need to talk about God's goodness." The Word says, "O that men, kings of the earth and all people, princes and all judges of the earth, both young men and maidens, old men and children, let them praise the name of the Lord, sing unto the Lord a new song and His praise in the congregation of saints." And again: "O that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men! Let them exalt Him also in the congregation of the people and praise him in the assembly of the elders. Praise ye the Lord; let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord. Praise ye the Lord, for He hath strengthened the bars of thy gates, [illegible] the finest of the wheat. Praise ye the Lord! Let us say, His praise shall continually be in my mouth; all thy works shall praise thee, O Lord, and thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy Kingdom and talk of thy power. My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord and let all flesh bless his holy name forever and ever. Praise ye the Lord!"

Pleasant Grove, Lebanon Ct.—We are having a good Sunday school, and when the weather gets better we expect to have the best attendance we have ever had. We took our freewill offering for the Children's Home to-day, receiving $1.00. We hope to do better next time. Bro. Stubbins delivered an excellent sermon. He improves every time we hear him. May God bless him and prosper his work. We were very sorry that Mrs. Stubbins could not be with us; hope she will be able to come next time, for it is a pleasure to have her worship with us.

Walter Burton, Rep.

St. Paul—Our pastor, G. F. Millaway, was with us Sunday and preached us two good sermons. Our S. S. is doing nicely. Quite a number of our people couldn't be with us Sunday on account of bad colds, including our reporter. G. H. May.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Ct.—One more sunshiny Sunday at last! Good crowd at preaching service and Sunday school. Bro. O'Briant preached us a very helpful sermon. Hope the weather will be good soon so more of our old people can attend preaching, and we reckon our S. S. Supt. would not care if they would attend S. S.

Talk about killing a church by neglecting the young people. They are about running things in this neck of the woods, and we are mighty proud of them. But we think the aged members could do much good by keeping along with the young ones and help them with their experiences and advice.

Our class leader, Bro. W. A. Lamb, had class meeting the 5th Sunday in Jan. Quite a number of young people attended. We venture they felt more religion in that one service than they would in a half dozen entertainments. We are not asking for less entertainment, but more and deeper consecration.

Mocksville Ct.—We arrived here Dec. 30, 1914, and received a hearty welcome [illegible] have been very kind to us as well as our own people. Have been to all my churches and found plenty of mud to all points. But regardless of mud or cold, on Jan. 30th Mr. Charlie Sain drove to the parsonage with lots of nice things from the good people of Bethel church, for which we were very grateful. While they feed these bodies of ours may we be able to feed them spiritually. We are enjoying our new home and like the work fine. The people here are so good and kind to us. We are looking forward for a successful year.

On Jan. 30th I was called to Union Chapel to conduct the funeral of little Granger Loftin Stonestreet, an infant of Bro. and Sister Tom Stonestreet. It is hard to give them up, but Jesus knows best. May the Lord comfort them in their sad and lonely hours.

T. A. Williams.

Thomasville.—On the fourth Sunday in Jan. Pres. Cecil was with us and preached a helpful sermon. The day was cold and windy but the congregation was reasonably good. We were glad to have him come to inspect the work and to offer his practical suggestions.

The congregations have help up remarkably well during the rough weather—in fact, almost better than we could expect. The Sunday school is growing larger all the time. There were three new scholars last Sunday. The teachers and officers are generally there and the best thing about it is—on time. Here both the S. S. and preaching service are run almost exactly on time.

The pastor has been authorized to collect our part of the district parsonage fund both for last year and for this and it is hoped that the amount can be raised right away.

Three new members have been received this year and there are several others who are talking of joining. It is earnestly hoped both by pastor and people that a goodly number may be received this year. One new member was received last Sunday.

The people are still kind to the pastor and his wife and express their kindness in a substantial way every few days. It has been a pleasure so far to serve such a people.

Our people are already planning for the Young People's Convention to be held here April 23rd to 25th.

O yes, I have not said any thing about our Wed. night prayer service. Well, it is fine. The attendance has been right about forty most of the time but a week ago it jumped up to forty-eight. The membership leads the meeting most of the time, the pastor having led only twice.

J. E. Pritchard, Pastor.

West Forsyth Ct.—The first quarterly meeting will convene at Pleasant Hill on Saturday before the third Sunday in Feb. The official brethren will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

G. H. Autin, Pastor.

Guilford Ct.—I notice in nearly every paper some pastor reports what the people are doing for him, his family, and on his work. And now I am glad that I have something to report.

Bro. W. M. Jones came our way a few days ago with his buggy well nigh loaded with a forty-pound shoulder of pork, potatoes and chickens. Bro. and Sister J. A. Suits continue to come this way with all the milk that we can use, and with fruit and all of our firewood, and part of it cut and hauled too. Bro. and Sister J. A. Gray have kindly remembered us with butter and eggs. We do not know how to express our appreciation better than to say "thank you!"

Now about the work: We think that we are doing very well, but you think not so well, and after all we will admit that there are many things over here on Guilford that need to be done, and we are trying to get our work planned so as to do some of those things this year.

Red Hill church needs to be moved to the Greensboro and High Point road, near Armfield's store or a little nearer Greensboro.

Shady Grove people need a church and I hope that they will determine to have it.

The other churches need painting inside and some outside. And, too, some of them need a bell so much that I do not know how to express it.

Guilford Ct. needs a parsonage. If any brother can furnish us with plans telling how we may add all these things this year we will appreciate it very much.

S. M. Needham.

Greensboro, N. C., R. D. 3, Feb. 8th.

Winston.—Last Sunday was full of encouragements for our Winston work. The attendance at the eleven o'clock hour was the largest that it has been at any regular service during our pastorate here. And this, I think, was also true of the Sunday school. One noticeable and encouraging thing was the large number of our S. S. staying for the preaching service and especially the little folks. The practice of the children in going home from the S. S. and not staying for church service is a bad one, we think, and we are trying to overcome it in the Sunday school. Beginning with yesterday certificates will be given to all of our children who attend the morning service for three months. This has interested the children and we are expecting good results from it. In addition to this a five-minute talk for the children quickens their interest and makes them more willing to stay for the service.

The 3rd Sunday night in this month we are going to hold a young people's meeting. Bro. Andrews is to preach for us on that occasion. We are looking forward to his coming with great pleasure and from the service we expect good results. Our young people are interested and are already making preparations for the service. Our annual church social was held last Friday night and was in every way a splendid success. The night was cold and wet and this kept many away who would have attended otherwise. As it was, we had a good crowd and every one seemed happy. Some of our older people enjoyed it so well that they want it repeated. We think our church socials are good assets to our work. S. W. Taylor, Pas.

Winston-Salem, Feb. 8, 1915.

Asheville.—Yesterday was rather rough, but we had a good day. Two new scholars in Sunday school. We have had about fifteen additions since the first of the year. At the night service one new member was received into the church. Yes, we're growing. The Christian Endeavor services are being well attended, and are proving helpful.

I just had two things to talk about in my last letter, and left out several things that I might have mentioned. One is the Japanese social of a couple of weeks ago, given by the Philathea class. The Sunday school room was decorated with lanterns, paper chrysanthemums and cherry blossoms. After an enjoyable evening with games, tea, and other refreshments were served. The Baracas are to have a Washington birthday social. The two classes have organized a debating club, and are looking forward to some pleasant evenings together.

Several members of the Ladies' Aid spent a pleasant day quilting at the home of Mrs. G. P. Younginer. The preacher was there to help—eat.

A number of our folks are on the sick list. One enters the hospital today for an operation, which is to be performed tomorrow.

Bur-r-r, clickity, click, click. Don't get frightened—I was just winding up the machine so I could say something more about money for the Asheville church. Now you are frightened, aren't you. Calm yourselves, just a moment, please, till I get through. Had a letter last week from one of Asheville's faithful friends, Mrs. J. J. Welch. She starts off this way:—"Dear Bro.: As you failed to report last week in the Herald, I fear you are a little discouraged, so I am sending you ten dollars. I think that a boy with your energy, and doing such a great work, should have a great deal more help than you have had." Amen to the last clause of that. And she called me a boy! I don't know whether to feel pleased or hurt. But I won't be a boy much longer, if you don't come along with that money you are going to send. I'll be white-headed, stoop-shouldered, dried up, and old with worry and disappointment. No, I'm not discouraged yet. But it's up to you to keep me from getting that way.

What happened to you preachers who promised last June at the Summer Conference to take an offering for the Asheville church at your appointments? Have you forgotten it, or are you afraid? Try it, and see what your folks think about it. Three or four of the brethren did what they said they would. Hurrah for them!

BUILDING CHURCHES IN NEW PLACES.

One of the greatest mistakes made by the earlier builders of our Zion, especially in the cities, was the attempted meeting of a great opportunity with facilities totally inadequate to the full possession of that opportunity. Too often in our history, a $15,000 opportunity in some growing city has been utterly and forever lost because we undertook to house it in a five-hundred-dollar chapel on a lot 25 by 50! We would not by any means encourage speculative enthusiasm on the part of newly-organized classes and congregations. To build beyond the financial ability of a congregation is just as unwise as to build beneath the ecclesiastical prospects of a congregation. Reckless extravagance is not enterprise. But our general trend as a denomination is not that of building beyond our opportunity. We have fallen short in this direction, from our earliest history.—Methodist Recorder.

PRIZE ESSAY.

Thru the generosity of a resident of California, and in connection with the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, the Natioal Educational Association is able to offer a prize of one thousand dollars for the best essay on "The Essential Place of Religion in Education," with an Outline of a Plan for Introducing Religious Teaching into the Public Schools.

Religion is to be defined in a way not to run counter to the creeds of Protestant, Roman Catholic and the Greek Church, which are "A Heavenly Father, who holds nature and man alike in the hollow of His hand"; the commandment of Hillel and Jesus of Nazareth, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself"; the high ethical teachings and spirit of service and sacrifice indicated in the Sermon on the Mount.

Notice of intention to file an essay must be given the Secretary of the Association by April 1, 1915. Essays will be limited to ten thousand words and must be in the possession of the Secretary by June 1, 1915. Six typewritten copies must be furnished in order that the preliminary reading may be done independently.

The right is reserved by the Association to publish not only the prize essay, but any others which may be submitted in competition, copyright privileges to be vested in the Association for all such.

MOTHER—A TRIBUTE.

Yes?—Old and wrinkled, and gray and bent,
And the vigor of youth—it was long since spent.
The ruby of lip, and the glint of eye,
Have been cheerfully paid, without fret or sigh,
By the woman that I call Mother.

The glossy tresses that once were the pride
Of the man who wooed her and stood by her side,
Have lost their coppery burnish of gold,
Though they frame a face just as sweet as of old,
The face of her I call Mother.

The blush of the cheek, once rounded and full,
Like the light of the eye, has grown faded and dull,
A part of the price that's been paid, through the years
Spent in shielding the loved ones from pain and from tears,
Spent unsparing, by her I call Mother.

The hands once dimpled are gnarled and drawn,
With the labor of days that began with the dawn,
Nor ended till loved ones were resting in sleep,
Commended to Him who alone can them keep,
Commended by her I call Mother.

But—though ease and grace may have dropped from her form,
She is still [illegible] with heart-beat as warm,
And with love just as strong and as tender and true,
As it was for the babe that she first taught to coo.
That dearest earth name, the name, Mother.

Then here's to my Mother, the very best one.
Let me pay her devotion before the "sand's run,"
Not wait to heap funeral flowers on her bier,
But love her and tell her so—while she is here,
For there is no one else just like a Mother..

FAITH.

Here is the supreme contribution of women in war,—that we may establish again our faith and the faith of our nation. If we dare to send our men to war in the name of God we have to see that his name is honored and hallowed at home. Out in the trenches or on the high seas men look up to God unashamed, for faith is a part of reality and God draws near in the time of man's need. But we who are the traditional guardians of faith have proved ourselves careless and indifferent.

We can determine at this time to bring God more into our life, our work, our ideals and our homes. We can humbly regain old-fashioned habits of family prayer because our lives are scorched with the fire of anxiety for those we love. We recover "grace" at meal time, so childish, so simple, so forgotten, because we have learned that our bread is daily bread bought at the cost of men's lives; it is a sacramental feast. We recover Sunday with its quiet and dignity, its home life and recognition of God, because our hearts are broken for want of him and his peace. We examine anew our shifting moral standards in the quiet light of the Christian standard and recognize how desperately we have failed. The vulgar play, the suggestive book look strangely garish now and we have little use for them. We want God, O, how much we want God! The nation needs Him too and women can bring Him once more into the camp of national life.—From "Papers for the Times", issued by Oxford University Press.

A scholar in Peking has been investigating the New Testament for himself and was soundly converted. "My Word" . . "not void." He came into the Bible Society rooms in Peking and said that he was persuaded of the absolute truth and inestimable value of this book to renovate China. He had invesigated various faiths. This was the one that rung true. Could he get copies to send to his friends? As many as fifty? Could he get five hundred copies? Finally he ended by buying five thousand five hundred and eighty-four copies of the New Testament, some for influential friends in elegant leather bindings. He paid for them at once and was preparing elegant silk sheets to accompany many of them. On these sheets were written in scarlet and gold characters his estimate of the precious Book. Pray for those Bibles.—Mrs. Arthur H. Smith.

"The earth is full of anger,
The seas are dark with wrath."

THEY SAY.

I do not wish to notice tattlers
Or the falsehoods of the day,
But would pity those who slander,
And forgive the words they say.

But sad it is to spend the moments,
Knowing not the things they say;
"Making mountains out of molehills",
With the silly words they say.

And " who are they who say,"
Who feel so mighty smart?
They can stoop to little things,
And joy in casting darts.

Savior, O Savior, lead us—
Lead us to a throne of grace;
When the shadows gather round us,
Show to us Thy kindly face.

Help us ne'er forget to trust Thee
Every moment, every day;
May our thoughts be lifted upward,
Help us follow in Thy way.

Bring us to Thy holy bosom;
Shield us from the world of strife.
May we walk with Christ, our Savior,
May we gain a crown of life.

Pair.—William R. Pair was born in March, 1836, and died Jan. 27, 1915, aged 78 years, 10 months. He leaves five sons, three daughters, one sister and a number of grand-children, great-grand-children, relatives and friends to mourn his departure. His wife having died five years ago, he has since lived with his eldest son, R. D. Pair.

He has been a professing Christian since early manhood and a member of Hobbs' Chapel for a number of years.

Grandpa was faithful to his church, always attending Sunday school and other services as long as his health permitted; it was his delight to visit the sick and do what good he could.

His health had been declining about a year and death was not unexpected to him, for he often said he was ready and willing to go at his Master's command.

The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. D. T. Surratt, and he was laid to rest beside his wife in Mt. Vernon cemetery.

Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding
O'er spoils that death has won,
We would, at this time of weeping,
Calmly say, "Thy will be done."
By thy hands the boon was given;
Thou hast taken but thine own:
Lord of earth, and God of heaven,
Evermore, "Thy will be done."

Duty and to-day are ours; results and futurity are God's.—Horace Grecley.

A FACTORY IN A GREAT JAPANESE CITY.

Whatever may be the idea of the world at large concerning the business aims and methods of Japan, we who live on her shores cannot fail to see that she is reaching toward an ideal, and that in common with Western nations she is slowly developing a new social conscience.

Recently I visited a factory, which stands in the midst of this teeming commercial city, for the manufacture of braid used on fine hats. Entering the gate we found ourselves in a clean paved court, and a few steps brought us into a connected group of long, low buildings, erected around a large, sunny open square. These buildings have air and sunshine on all sides. The great rooms containing the machinery have outside windows on one side and, along the other, windows and doors opening into a gallery, so there was no lack of light or fresh air.

The machines were noisy with their ceaseless whir; everything was immaculately clean. I studied the faces of the operators with interest, and did not see a dull, hopeless one among them. Many showed real animation, and although it was near the end of a long working day, there were smiles and laughter.

After seeing the four hundred girls at work we saw the dormitories where they live, for in addition to paying wages the factory houses and boards all the girl employees. They are apparently as carefully supervised and guarded as in a boarding school. The dining room is a long room, perfectly plain and bare, excepting for the tables that fill it, which were spotlessly clean. Here, wholesome, well cooked, plain food is served at regular hours.

The bedrooms compared very favorably with our own school dormitories at 212 Bluff, the same kind of mats on the floor, the same presses for clothing and bedding. These bedrooms open on an outer gallery, wide open in summer, glass enclosed during cold winter days.

Last of all we saw the school room, where evening instruction in rudimentary branches is given. It had a black board, desks for the students, and a small baby organ.

The manager's little house stands in the great yard back of the dormitories. We called on his wife, who is an inquirer, and to whom one of our Bible women goes each week to teach the Bible.

This factory is by no means a representative specimen of factories in Japan. Its unusually favorable conditions are due in large measure to the influence of its Christian manager. I could take you to any manfacturing city or town and show you such unideal conditions, such hard painful labor, such physical misery and moral degradation as would make your heart bleed. But you need not come to Japan to see such dark pictures, they are at our very doors in Christian America.

This good factory is far from ideal. The commendable features are its cleanliness, space and air, its comfortable dormitories where the girls are safeguarded from evil, its spacious exercise ground and flower gardens, and its school room. The things to be criticised and that cry out for improvement are: First, Japanese girls are small, yet I feel sure I saw children under fourteen at work; second, the long working hours. No eight-hour law here as yet! Third, and worst of all, there is no rest on Sunday. The Japanese toiler knows the full bitterness of the seven-day week. To offset this there are two holidays a month, when the girls are free.

You will want to hear about the relation of our Mission to the factory. Mr. Yamada, the Manager and foreman (but not the owner), feels a fatherly interest in his employees.

Feeling the need of moral not Christian teaching for the girls, and having been disappointed in the effort of a Buddhist priest in this direction, he at last applied to our Bible school for help. Our Bible Training School students from 212 Bluff opened a Sunday school in the school room, and it has been carried on regularly ever since on Sunday evenings. Four young Bible women are now in charge. Membership in the school is not obligatory, and no undue pressure is brought to bear upon the girls, yet the roll has grown to over seventy. I visited the school when seventy-nine were in attendance. After general exercises the girls are divided into four groups for Bible instruction. The manager's three bright children are in the school and a few other little ones. All the others are factory girls. Of the seventy-nine in attendance, seventy-eight were girls, and there was one small boy who did not seem in the least embarrassed. The beautiful result of the Sunday-school work is that the Manager himself has lately become an earnest Christian and been baptized. It moved me to see him standing at the head of the room before his employees Sunday, leading them in earnest prayer.—Miss Julia Hand Bronson in The Missionary Link.

—Bro. S. R. Harris, of Henderson, visited his daughters in Greensboro las Saturday.

—Miss Mabel Harris, of Henderson, was taken ill with pleurisy while visiting her sister in Philadelpha.

VOLUME XXI. GREENSBORO, N. C., FEBRUARY 18, 1915. NUMBER 13.

A PRAYER FOR PEACE.

Oh Thou the Great I am of all the ages,
Since Eden bloom'd and Adam walked with Thee,
Thou who do'st write on Nature's rugged pages—
Thy will, dictating, that which is to be.

Thy world is steep'd in sin, greed and passions striving;
Men in Thine image made, bid passions kill.
Their heavy guns o'er bloody fields are driving,
While crying men are praying "Peace, be still!"

Slav, Anglo-Saxon, Teuton, French in battle,
Nations, once mingling in the marts of peace.
God, still the cannon's roar; death dealing rattle:
And bid this carnage forever cease.

Oh hear, Jehovah! hear! the widows weeping
As they bemoan, husband and father slain;
Orphans with streaming eyes, today are reaping
The bitter fruit of war; hunger and pain.

Oh Thou who didst for man Thy life surrender,
Didst pay our debt of shame on Calvary's brow;
In love look down, with pity, yet so tender!
Oh "Prince of Peace," we plead before Thee now.

Oh Holy Spirit! promised by the Master,
In this dark hour of war we cry to Thee;
Stay Thou this tide of woe! this fell disaster—
And grant the nations peace—beyond the sea.

—Wm. Laurie Hill.

AFTER THE WAR, WHAT?

There has been a great deal of printers' ink, a great deal of breath, and a great deal of temper lost in trying to fix the blame for this war. It is easier to say who will be responsible for the next war, if there be a next—ALL OF US.

The war with all its horror and loss has given to us one immense gain—it has shocked the world into self-consciousness. This blow which has mangled Europe has made the world tingle to its finger tips. For many years industry, commerce and all forms of communication have been developing common interests, and organizing a common life, and this terrific explosion has waked us up to the fact.

By this convulsion of war, which is sending its shudders through every member, the world has learned what had dawned on but few that in its development it has reached a new plane where henceforth it must live one life. The new world-conscience which comes with this new world-consciousness means that henceforth there is to be a world-judgment bar, and a new ethical standard which is not national but world-wide in its application. It means a new direction to the world's history. It means new possibilities of undreamed good, and equal possibilities of undreamed evil. This new responsibility means that the world must take direction of its own future. It means that the world must neither be driven by a tempest of passion, nor suffer itself to drift in some gulf stream of inherited tendency. It must take the Ten Commandments for its chart and Reason must stand at the wheel.

There have been a thousand wars before this, which have been concluded with a thousand treaties of peace. What would be the gain of one more treaty, if it proved to be simply a prolonged truce that would only enable the belligerents to renew the struggle some years hence with increased vigor and with still more frightful destruction? We do not want the death and devastation of this war to be repeated. We do not want this world-agony to be wasted. It would be a great thing to stop this horror; it would be a greater thing to prevent its recurrence.

Any statecraft which undertakes to readjust international relations without removing the causes of international FEAR will be only diplomatic quackery.

As long as nations fear each other they will arm against each other, and no treaty can prevent it. And when thought of war, and preparation for war, become habitual, war becomes inevitable, because the combination of circumstances which seems to give one nation or group of nations a decided advantage will be seized for a quick master stroke in "self-defence," and then—a conflagration in which treaties, and moral obligations, and Christian civilization turn to ashes.

In vain do nations pledge themselves to peace and cultivate friendly relations so long as the most potent causes of war are operative. Each of the Powers engaged in this conflict protests that it was driven into the war against its will. If this is true, which we may well believe, it is an unanswerable indictment of conditions which could plunge the nations into a horror that all alike dreaded and all were seeking to avert.

It would certainly seem to be the first and most imperative duty of the world to remove, if that be possible, conditions which have such compelling power of death and devastation.

Evidently the increasing interdependence of the nations is creating new international rights and duties, but there is no world-legislature to recognize and legalize them; there is no world-judiciary to interpret and apply them; and there is no world-executive to enforce and vitalize them. Precisely here appears one of the most obscure and, at the same time, one of the most potent causes of the war.

The economic and industrial organization of the world has far outgrown the political organization of the world. And in spite of all efforts to keep the peace, this will continue an active cause of war until there has been provided for the new world-life an adequate body politic. Until then governments will undertake by military power to make, interpret, or enforce a law of nations to please themselves; and this seizure of civil functions on the part of armed force is war; it is an attempt to make might right; it is the law of the jungle; it is the abnegation of civilization; it is anarchy between nations.

A world-executive, a world- parliament, and a supreme court of the world would revolutionize international relations, and make impossible such continental anarchy as now obtains. Victor Hugo is quoted as saying: "I represent a party that does not exist—the Party of Revolutionary Civilization. This party will control the twentieth century. Out of it will grow, first, the United States of Europe, and then the United States of the World."

Does not the cataclysm through which the nations are now passing constitute a world-crisis, calculated to awake men to new understanding and to high endeavor? When men are deeply stirred by a profound experience, and especially if it is one of suffering and sacrifice, they often reveal unsuspected capabilities, they seem endowed with new powers, and become capable of new achievements. In view of this experience, from which the world must needs emerge sobered, is it not possible, is it not altogether probable, that an intelligent and purposeful effort would accomplish as much in a few years as a century of political evolution? Says Mr. H. G. Wells: "This is a time of incalculable plasticity. For the men who know what they want the moment has come. It is the supreme opportunity * * * to do fundamental things that will otherwise not be done for hundreds of years." If this supreme opportunity is not grasped, this unspeakable war will be a measureless calamity. Which shall it be? Shall civilization gain, or lose, a hundred years? It is for the world to say.

The belligerent nations can hardly be expected, when the war is ended, to take the initiative in planning either a European or a world federation, but exhausted by war, and vividly conscious of its horrors and losses, they might follow the lead of a World Congress, sitting at the same time.

Such a congress has been repeatedly and fittingly suggested on the ground that the whole world has been profoundly affected by the war, and is vitally concerned with the kind of peace which shall follow it. Such a congress, held in Washington or elsewhere, should be composed of the most eminent statesmen, publicists, and jurists of the world—men both of knowledge and of vision, who think in world-terms, who have developed world-sympathies and a world-conscience, and whose faces are toward the future.

Such a congress, especially if it be deemed desirable that its members be officially appointed by their respective governments, cannot be extemporized. Steps should be taken as soon as practicable for the creation of such a congress unless this unparalleled opportunity is to be left to go by default. If we would put a final end to the savagery of civilization, we must "in time of war prepare for peace."—From Studies in Social Christianity.

"IN ME—PEACE."

The German "China Inland Mission" has its home at Liebenzell in a lovely valley of the Wurtemberg Black Forest. The road and railway wind on and on along the course of the little river with steep fir-clad hills rising on both sides. Liebenzell is a quaint village with a tiny lake; the Mission House lies part way up the hill side, with its various dependent houses scattered around.

A more peaceful spot could hardly be imagined. But suddenly the storm broke. Missionaries about to start for China, or in training for service there, were ordered to be in readiness to serve in the German army. An accepted candidate was on the eve of returning to her home in Hungary on her way to China. But having put her hand to the plough she at once expressed her readiness to start by another route without bidding them farewell at home.

At the small Christian pension where I was staying, an old German, a retired officer, was vehement in his assertions as to the necessity for Germany to go to war to maintain her rights and her freedom. The rest of his family were for peace, especially his son, a lieutenant. This young officer and his wife, probably but recently married, respectfully but very firmly maintained a different attitude to their father, as did also the young daughter and her mother, a deeply spiritual Christian lady. Both father and son advised me to start for England at once if I wished to get through, which I accordingly did the next morning, the lieutenant and his wife leaving by the same train, silent and sorrowful at the parting which awaited them.

I pursued my long homeward journey alone through what was all too soon to become a hostile land. War was in the air; soldiers at all points; aeroplane-destroyers stationed on the pinnacles of Cologne cathedral. Our through train was stopped at two o'clock at night before reaching the frontier, and we had to walk a short distance to the next station in Belgium, leaving behind all our luggage save what could be carried in the hand. But these were small discomforts compared with what those experienced who delayed their departure even another twelve hours. The benediction of the dear German friends left behind at Liebenzell, and their payers on my behalf, were abundantly answered, and I realized indeed that I was not alone but in our Heavenly Father's care.

The heavenly citizenship is a closer bond than that of earthly nationality, as I proved in this my first actual visit to Germany, both in the circle of Christian friends at Godesberg on the Rhine, and later at Liebenzell. The hours spent at the Mission House are a precious memory. All was peace there in the midst of storm. Pastor Korper, the head of the Mission, conducted the short service the evening before I left. He dwelt on the reality of the living God—the stillness which comes from knowing Him. He told a touching incident of a little blind Chinese girl who was brought by her father to one of their Mission Stations in China for healing. When she found that her father had left, her grief was inconsolable, and nothing could comfort her. But during the evening service he came back, and being a Christian, he joined in the singing. The little child at once recognized her father's voice and felt her way through the crowd to where he was sitting, and climbing upon his knee lost all her grief in the clasp of her father's arms.

"There is room," said Pastor Korper, "for all the world to rest upon the Father's bosom; there is comfort for every sorrowing one in the heart of Jesus."

Oh that all God's children may abide in this place of refuge through these days of storm! (Is. 26:20, 21). —A. M. Hodgkin in Friends' Witness.

ACROSS THE SEA.

Across the sea I heard the groans
Of nations in the intervals
Of wind and wave. Their blood and bones
Cried out in torture, crushed by thrones,
And sucked by priestly cannibals.

I dreamed of Freedom slowly gained
By martyr meekness, patience, faith,
And lo, an athlete grimly stained,
With corded muscles battle-strained,
Shouting it on the fields of death.

I turn me, awe-struck, from the sight,
Among the clamoring thousands mute;
I only know that God is right,
And that the children of the light
Shall tread the darkness under foot.

I know the pent fire heaves its crust,
That sultry skies the bolt will form
To smite them clear; that Nations must
The balance of her powers adjust,
Though with the earthquake and the storm.

God reigns, and let the earth rejoice!
I bow before His sterner plan.
Dumb are the organs of my choice;
He speaks in battle's stormy voice,
His praise is in the wrath of man.

Yet, surely as He lives, the day
Of peace He promised, shall be ours,
To fold the flags of war, and lay
Its sword and spear to rust away,
And sow its ghastly field with flowers.

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

A German mother has the bravery to appeal to the German Chancellor as follows: "In the name of humanity, in the name of the mothers of Germany and of all the mothers of Europe, I address myself to your excellency in these grave times. This cruel war must cease if we are to remain worthy of humanity. The nations have no right to sacrifice their sons and to kill the sons of other nations. A way to peace must be found through humanity, through Christianity. . . I sign myself A MOTHER who has the courage to put in words that which millions and millions of mothers think."

THE NEW PATRIOTISM.

The old patriotism shot off firecrackers, symbolic of battle; had military parades, fired the big guns at the arsenal and toy pistols in the street.

The glory of the country was supposed to be somehow tied up with war.

Orators spoke of the colonials who licked England and of the war of the sixties when Americans butchered each other wholesale.

The old patriotism wanted to whip Spain, and wants to move on to Mexico, and is spoiling for the conquest of Japan, or of any other nation that crooks a finger at us.

The new patriotism sees that the nation is more in danger of rotting within than of invasion from without.

It is more agitated over the army of the unemployed that besieges the cities in winter than it is over the forces of Carranza or the fleets of Europe.

It is awake to the danger of the beast whose name is privilege, whose taste is for the life blood of democracy.

It is studying to limit vast wealth, aggregated greed government, while it destroys little children in its factories and men in its mines.

The new patriotism dreams of a city beautiful, tree-lined streets, playgrounds for the children, some measure of the joy of living in the industrial grind.

It attacks the unsanitary tenement houses, the sweat-shop, poisoned food, typhoid water works, polluted streams.

The day of the man on horseback is past; the day of the hero of social service is dawning.

It conceives a new ideal of the state, as a social organism protecting the weak, restraining the strong.

The new patriotism does not advertise for men willing to die for their country, but for men and women willing to live for their country, to work, think and act for their country.

The new patriotism covets no other country's land. It sends ships and soldiers to Mexico not to kill but to help.

It is sane, intelligent, shrewd, sincere. It is on fire for justice, not war.

Under the inspiration of the new patriotism, a great army is rising, an army of men and women who love their country for its humanities, not for its brute power nor crass success, an army ready to contend

"For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be."

"What are you going to be when you grow up, Jennie?"

"I'm going to be an old maid."

"An old maid, dear! Why?"

"'Cause I don't think I'd like to kiss a man a hundred times and tell him he's handsome every time I do shopping. I'd rather earn money and buy things for myself."

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Randleman Ct.—Rev. J. B. O'Briant met me at the station and took me to the parsonage. This parsonage has been bought since Bro. O'Briant has been on Randleman charge; it is well located and a splendid home for the pastor of this field. The pastor and his people are making headway in paying for the property. I spent Saturday and Sunday on this field, preached in all of the churches, and found the work in good shape. The factories are running on full time. Had splendid attendance except at New Salem, and that appointment was on Saturday at 3 o'clock—rather a hard hour in many places to get a good attendance.

I spent a few pleasant moments with Bro. J. F. Kennett and wife Saturday eve. They are growing old and feeble; but as they fail in strength they grow stronger in faith and they are faithfully following on to know the Lord.——My claim paid.

I desire the "Standing District Committee" as found recorded on page 33 of our Conference Journal to confer and decide as to the change of the time of the meeting of our next session of Conference as suggested by Rev. A. G. Dixon some time ago.

I hope pastors will not ask me to change my published plans for their field. I try to take into consideration every thing connected with the work and make my plans accordingly. To me it makes no difference whose field I am on when Sunday comes or in what church on the field; but I do try to give a Sunday to the field that had the week day last year when I can. C. A. Cecil.

———o———

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Ct.—We have been silent quite awhile, but hope we will differ from the ground hog. If we saw our shadow we will not go back and stay six weeks longer, but will continue to come every Sunday the year through. There is not enough interest taken in our church. Some can go through almost any kind of weather to town or any place on business, but not so with the church.

Bro. Trogdon preached a good sermon on the fifth Sunday. We gladly welcomed Messrs. C. C. Harvey and Walter Morgan of Farmer at our church yesterday, and all others from different churches.——Bro. Trogdon conducted the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. James Gallimore's infant child, the 18th. We extend sympathy to the bereaved family and trust that they will see aright. I hope to have something to report from our S. S. in the near future.——We were sorry to hear of the illness of Mr. Havner of Asheville. Truly hope for him a speedy recocery, and that he and his kind family may enjoy life in its fullest degree, for such people as they are are so much help to the church and community, and such kindness reaches a far off. Mrs. C. H. Hill.

———o———

Shoals,, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Ct.—Our S. S. is progressing very nicely. The attendance has been very good for the past month considering the weather. Ten new scholars last Sunday; collection, $2.25. We were very glad to have Bro. Suits with us again last Sunday. He preached two excellent sermons, one at eleven o'clock and one at seven. He had large congregations. I feel sure that every one enjoyed his sermons, for he said enough to put any one to thinking less about this world and more about the world to come. With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers, Martha V. Hauser, Rep.

———o———

Pensacola Station.—We held our first quarterly conference on Feb. 6. The business was transacted in harmony. Our preaching services were attended well Sunday. Our Sunday school is doing fairly well, considering the rough weather. The collection amounted to $1.14. The people here are kind and sympathetic. We have a class of people who believe in Methodist Protestant principles and doctrine. The outlook for the work is encouraging.

They are both popular young people and have many friends who are wishing happiness and prosperity on life's road. The undersigned officiated.

Gill.—David Heflin Gill, born April 11, 1850, died Feb. 1, 1915. On Nov. 11, 1872, he was married to Pattie Jones Hight and to this union were born ten children, four dying in infancy and one just at the time of merging into womanhood at the age of seventeen. One son and four daughters survive him, his good wife preceding him to the spirit world about sixteen months ago. He also leaves one brother and sister and a number of grandchildren and relatives and friends to mourn his departure.

He joined Plank Chapel M. E. Church when but a boy, but about 18 years ago he moved his membership to Union Chapel where he remained until death removed him. He was a man of great determination and his son made the remark to the writer the day of his burial that when he mapped out a course believing it was right nothing could deter him in his purpose to carry out his plans. This same son also said, "Father had his enemies, we all know; but he also had his strong friends." He was a man of thrift and industry and prosperity had attended his efforts and he has done a great deal for the church, having taken a leading part in the remodeling of Union Chapel some years ago, making it one of the best country churches in this section. He was interested in the building up of his community as was evidenced by his interest in all that was undertaken for improvement. He will be missed in every public enterprise, for there his influence was always felt. He will be missed in his home, for there he showed his interest also by the way his home was improved. He will be missed by his children, for he was anxious that they should do well. His help will be missed at church also, for he was liberal to that. He made this remark to the writer when standing by the gravee of his wife a few months after she had been called away so suddenly: "If I was only as good as she was, I would not mind going as she did." He was called away suddenly, having the fourth stroke of paralysis from which he never rallied. Having this desire we hope that he made the necessary preparation and was ready when the summons came. A great company of people gathered to see his remains laid to rest in the cemetery at Plank Chapel there to await the resurrection morn. N. G. Bethea.

Mt. Pleasant Ch., Mt. Pleasant Ct., J. C. Causey, peaches; Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Ct., Mrs. Billings, blueing and soap and Bro. Mitchell, one stack of hay. Bro. Mitchell is almost 78 years old; he is loyal to his church and is very much interested in the Children's Home.

The Baracas of Grace Church, Greensboro, have pledged themselves to support a child in the Home for one year. We knew they could not wait any longer because you can't find a more loyal class any where. Dr. J. J. Hamlin, one of the leading dentists of Guilford county, having become so much interested in the Children's Home, offered to do the dental work free. Of course the offer was promptly accepted and now he is putting the children's teeth in good condition. They must go to him every three months and have their teeth examined.

Every friend of the Children's Home should feel very grateful to the following gentlemen for free services to the Home: Dr. S. S. Coe, the Home's physician; Dr. J. W. Austin, a specialist for the eye, ear, nose and throat; Mr. J. Fred Tesh, a prominent optometrist, and Dr. J. J. Hamlin, dentist. The services of these able men mean much to us, all unsolicited.

Fourteen cases of mumps have developed since our last report. H. A. Garrett.

Rev. R. M. Andrews is attending the laymen's missionary convention of the Presbyterian Church held in Charlotte this week. Very distinguished speakers are on the program.

—Bro. J. M. Davis, our Fairfield correspondent, was called to Greensboro this week to serve as witness in court. We were glad to have him call in our office.

Dr. P. P. Claxton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, in an address to the A. and M. College here outlined to the negroes a scheme of co-operative farming; ten farmers to organize a stock company, buy a tract of land three miles square; land to be taken from the middle of it 60 families,, each to have about four acres for the home surroundings; community barn, store, school, church and place of amusement. The scheme looks rather impractical to us, with our impressions of human nature.

—Dr. T. H. Lewis called in our office on Tuesday. He is visiting a number of our churches in the interest of Western Maryland College—not seeking students just now, but trying to awaken sentiment. He will speak in High Point next Sunday morning and in Greensboro at night. In referring to the church union movement, he said he thinks the next step is for our people to re-unite themselves. He does not believe in uniting with any church unless we can unite as a whole in a self-respecting and orderly way, with a clear sense that we are following the divine leading. All will agree with the doctor in this. We ought to have regard to our mission first of all, and we ought to be willing to follow wherever God would lead; but we ought not to allow ourselves to be seized with panic and mutual distrust and pull our own dear church to pieces. And we must guard against the delusion that the way we want to go is the way of Divine Providence. We must allow no seeming material advantage to draw us away from devotion to the truths for whose realization our church was formed.

—President Wilson has selected Duval West, formerly U. S. District Attorney at San Antonio, Texas, to go to Mexico as his personal representative.

—Postmaster-General Burleson has issued a new order regarding rural mail service which may result in some cases in an every other day service in stead of daily service. He is trying to make the postal service self-sustaining.

OUR GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK.

The following found the names hidden last week: Miss Dela Bustin, Miss Alma McAdams, Miss Lessie Pugh, Master Dale Montgomery. The names were found by taking the initial letters in reverse order. They were Braswell, Millaway, Stubbins, Andrews, Williams.

Here are some more preachers' names hidden in a different way; let us see who can find them.

1. Dynamo, tons of coal and other supplies are ready.
2. We paid a visit to old Uncle Caviness in the far West.
3. John Carter, after committing the crime, hid himself in an abandoned coal mine.
4. More education is urgently demanded in these strenuous times.
5. Hurry up, grab a Testament and run away.

THE HELPMET.

Not from the brain of Adam,
Nor yet from his foot did she start;
Eve, the first woman, man's helpmeet,
Came close, oh, close from his heart!

From a rib 'neath his arm was she fashioned,
The fairer and frailer form,
And forever and aye for protection
She looks to that same strong arm.

Not to be ruled, nor to rule him,
To be not below nor above;
But ever to walk beside him,
Returning full measure in love.

To share all his joys and sorrows,
To comfort, to strengthen, and cheer;
Unquestioning, living and loving,
His helper, his equal, his peer.

For not from the head of Adam,
Nor yet from the soles of his feet.
God formed and fashioned the woman
To be man's first helpmeet!

SMOKING AND SCHOLARSHIP.

The injurious effects of smoking upon the boy's mental activities are very marked. Of the many hundreds of tabulated cases in my possession, several of the very youthful ones have been reduced almost to the condition of imbeciles. Out of 2,336 who were attending public school, only six were reported "bright students." A very few, perhaps ten, were "average," and all the remainder were "poor" or "worthless" as students. The average grades of fifty smokers and fifty non-smokers were computed from the records of one term's work done in the Kansas Agricultural College, and the results favored the latter group with a difference of 17.5 per cent. The two groups represented the same class rank; that is, the same number of seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshmen.

The ordinary cigarette-smoking student often has a very peculiar experience in his effort to prepare his daily lessons, about as follows: He goes to his room in the evening with the full intention of studying and opens his text-book, but a certain feeling of nervous uneasiness soon leads his hands automatically to roll and light a cigarette. He indulges the habit a few minutes, when, presto, the lesson task which a while ago looked serious and urgent now appears trivial and unnecessary, and he accordingly neglects it. He is now affable and companionable, but the higher moral judgments have lost their value to him and he is most ready to yield to the evil suggestions of others. The partial brain paralysis resulting from the smoking makes the victim regard with indifference the most sacred promise he has ever made to any one, and he is likely to violate it upon the slightest provocation.—W. A. M'Keever.

ABOUT HIS BUSINESS.

The late K. S. Hastings once visited at a house where some gay young ladies sought to avoid his earnest personal appeals, and remained out of the room where he was, until their duties made it necessary that they should show themselves. He was not long in embracing chance of following his calling as a fisher of men, and he engaged them in conversation and pressed upon them the importance of the great concerns of life eternal. At length one of them pettishly intimated her desire that people should "mind their own business," to which he replied promptly that this was his business, to bring sinners home to God; nor did he cease to attend to it, until the thoughtless ones had bowed at mercy's altar, and turned their feet into the way of God's testimonies.

Dr. A. J. Gordon relates in the Watchman a similar story of "Uncle John Vassar," the well-known laborer in the gospel field. "He wished to call on a Christian gentleman who was living at one of our fashionable boarding-houses. A young friend of mine who went with him, to show him the place, reported what occurred. While waiting in the parlor to be shown to the gentleman's room, he opened conversation with a very fashionable and proud looking lady who was sitting in the room. With great concern he began at once to urge the necessity of the new birth, and immediate acceptance of Christ upon her. She was thunderstruck, and protested that she did not believe in any of those things. Then followed a most fervent appeal, texts of Scripture, warnings against rejecting Christ, the certainty of a wrath to come for any found in impenitence, till at last my friend said he was fairly alarmed at the boldness of the assault. Suddenly the gentleman came in for whom he was waiting, and called him out. The friend sat watching from behind his newspaper for the effect of the interview. In a moment the lady's husband came in. 'There has been an old man here talking with me about religion,' she said. 'Why did you not shut him up?' he asked, gruffly. 'He is one of those persons that you cannot shut up,' was her reply. 'If I had been there,' he said, 'I would have told him very quickly to go about his business.' 'If you had seen him you would have thought he was about his business,' was her answer."

Would that there were more men on the earth today who are never so much about their business as when seeking to save lost men. We cannot tell what glorious results may follow the utterance of a few earnest faithful words spoken in season by a devoted child of God.—H. S. Hastings.

THE BETTER WAY.

Sometimes professing Christians are beset by special hindrances to their usefulness—tendencies of speech r action that mar the beauty of holiness most sadly. What are you going to do with the evil habit, or the half-dozen which are hindering you? Fight them one by one, that is one way. What did you do last winter when the panes of the window were covered with frost, and you could not see out of them? Did you scratch them off with a knife? That would take too long. Heat up the room and the frost goes off the pane. Warm up the soul with the love of Christ and the bad habits will run off. That is what Chambers calls the "expulsive power of a new affection." Bring Jesus Christ into the soul, and you will overcome the evil habits.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

JOY FINDS A HOME.

Not long ago there was a touching story in one of the Chicago daily papers about a little boy who was without any home. His name was Joy. He had lost both his parents, and then his guardian had died, so that at five years old he was left homeless for the second time. He had no living relatives.

Imediately telephone calls, telegrams and personal inquiries poured in on the newspaper. Hundreds of homes were open to Joy; not in charity, but because those who asked for him really wanted to make him their son. The editors of the newspaper were deeply touched by the eager, spontaneous cry that came to them—the call of the childless homes.

Some of the people who wanted to adopt Joy were rich; some were well-to-do; others were in moderate circumstances, and some were poor. The paper made a careful investigation, and selected a few of the most suitable families. From among these it asked Joy to choose his own home.

Joy started out with a representative of the newspaper, and visited one home after another. For two days the little fellow was undecided. The whole city became eager to know what his choice would be, and the suspense of the childless families who hoped for him was touching. On the third day Joy visited a home he had not previously seen. It was a home of a very modest sort—comfortable enough, but with no sign of wealth, and no offer of luxury. The woman came down the hall as the little boy came in at the front door. She spoke one word: "Joy!" Instantly the little fellow ran to her, and as she caught him up, he threw his arms about her neck.

Joy had found a mother, and the woman's hungry heart had found a son. And all the city who had watched said how fortunate was this woman, who had no great wealth to offer, and who yet had won the little fellow's heart.

But it was not luck or childish caprice that settled the question. The woman had loved children all her life, and had given her time and thought and such means as she had to making them happy and good. She had loved children, and worked for them, and the sign of it was upon her face and in her voice. The little boy knew as soon as he saw her that she was the best mother of them all for him.

In that way, so indirectly that it often seems accidental, we get our richest compensation for love and service and right living.—Youth's Companion.

A missionary in India, William Butler, with his wife, at the time of the uprising of the native Hindu soldiery against English and Americans, was obliged to flee for his life to the mountains. At the base of the mountains was a jungle which was inhabited by wild beasts.

They entered the jungle, and the coolies who were carrying the chairs put them down and refused to go farther. Wm. Butler offered them triple pay if they would go on. They refused absolutely and began to start away, carrying the torches with them. The growl of a tiger could be heard in the distance. Wm. Butler knew that there was no hope for himself and wife in such a situation. They could only pray as the light of the torches grew dim. Suddenly they began to grow brighter. He saw that the coolies were returning. They took up the chairs again and carried them to their destination, asking for their service only the sum first agreed upon.

Wm. Butler knew that God heard and answered prayer.

EPIGRAMS OF WM. A. SUNDAY.

Justification: It means that when I accept Jesus Christ as Saviour, God looks at me as though I had never sinned. He imputes Christ's righteousness to me.

Love: I believe the world is dying for the manifestation of the love of God—love can never be defeated. Love will build a tunnel through all the mountains heaped against it.

Faith: Faith puts us in touch with God. It is the power that controls the world. If your faith isn't used it will shrink. If we farm it by using it it will grow. Without faith there is not a merchant or a banker that could do business.

Prayer: Were the world to pray "Thy Kingdom come," there would be no need of police, of courts, of standing armies or navies. Pray that prayer as it should be prayed and the peace of God would spread over all the earth and people would live literally by the Golden Rule.

Seventenths of the professing Christians have no family prayer and do not read the Bible. It is no wonder you are wizened spiritually. Thy Kingdom come means that we will ask God for the conversion of the world before we ask Him for our breakfast. Jesus taught us to say "Thy Kingdom come" before he taught us to say, "Give us this day our daily bread." Pray first, eat later.

Jesus began the day with prayer. You never forget to wash your face and comb your hair. You always think of breakfast. You feed your physical bodies. Why do you starve your spiritual body?

A WORD.

I am glad we have a free press and freedom of speech. But because a thing is free no Christian ought to be indiscreet. So I am sure and quite sure, every preacher and layman in the M. P. Church has plenty and all they can do to preach Jesus Christ and His righteousness and edify our own people, instead of elbowing other denominations. In God's name let the Baptists alone. You need not offer a defense where there is no attack. I am as faithful to our church as any preacher in the Con., Ego. left out, and I find no time, and have no spirit, to lambast, humdrum, cut, slash and carve other people's creeds..

The thunderbolts of denominational venom so generously contributed to our church paper, are not inspiring nor edifying. The mistakes made by weak uneducated Baptist preachers, no one is trying to force us to believe. But get in your cosy corner behind some strange animal name, spurt and fill the air with your poisonous fumes of denominationalism and make it as uncomfortable as you can for every preacher in our church who has to associate and work beside those people, and thereby place a star of destruction in your own crown.

We are commanded to search the Scriptures, and that is more profitable than the work of creed-searchers. No controversy, so here is my name. J. D. Morris.

Fallston, N. C.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Shelby Ct.—Dear Bro. Cecil: I am glad to say this circuit is inviting and encouraging. Since entering this field of labor I have been encouraged. Despite the hard times, our people are coming up with salary and doing as they promised. So often people promise and the promise is our pay. My people here promised, and it means bread and meat both to myself and family. Caroleen pays monthly. Lincolnton does the same. Shelby is a little behind, but they are coming up now, and will make a good financial report at Conference. We reorganized at Shelby Sat. before 1st Sun. this Mo. and every official has taken hold of his work and say they are going to work together —and with Him. Congregations are increasing at every church. Our people are delighted to have Editor Slate of the Lincoln Times, Lincolnton, N. C., to give so much of his valuable time to our S. S. at Lincolnton. Bro. Slate recently gave our S. S. a most interesting and instructive lecture on the birth of Samson. Thanks to Ed. Slate. Lincolnton S. S. has organized a male quartet, which is attracting much attention and is a great asset to both S. S. and church. Ed. Slate, D. B. Johnson, John Elmore and Bro. Rudisell are the efficient songsters. Every church on the work has a splendid choir. We are anxious for sister H. I. Bess's daughters to return from college and teaching to our S. S. and choir at Caroleen.

Life will cause anything to move. Where congregations will join their pastor (if he is on fire for God) you will see, not only signs, but real church life. Frat.,

J. D. Morris.

Mt. Hermon Ct.—Since the weather has become more favorable congregations are increasing. Yesterday was a good day at Cedar Cliff. Good attendance at Sunday school, good congregation, who were easy to preach to because of their close attention. Four members received by certificate.——An item that I have failed to give heretofore is the gift of a very handsome individual communion service to the Bellemont church by a class of young men in that Sunday school called the "Brothers." The church was greatly pleased and gave the young men a rising vote of appreciation and thanks. All the churches on this circuit have the individual service except one.

Bellemont has other improvements in mind. A class of young ladies called the "Sisters" has a secret which I will not tell because I do not know it. C. H. Whitaker.

Mocksville Ct.—Our first quarterly conference was held at Bethel last Saturday with good attendance. The business was transacted in harmony. T. A. Williams.

Siler City.—Our pastor, Bro. Bowman, was with us last Sunday night and preached a beautiful sermon. We had a splendid congregation and the sermon was an inspiration to all. Our Sunday school is steadily increasing. The collection last Sunday was $2.64. Rev. U. S. Pickard, Seventh Day Adventist, was with us and after Sunday school made us a talk on the lesson, which we appreciated very much. Afterward the Philathea class had their business meeting and elected Mrs. J. N. Johnson Pres., Miss Sallie Smith Vice Pres., Miss Claytie Andrew Sec. and Treas. Mrs. E. D. Woody, Rep.

Union Grove, Gaston Ct.—On account of sickness in the home of our reporter, Mrs. Wright, I have been elected reporter and will try to make a report. Our S. S. was not as good today as we expected. Collection, 77 cts. We got some catechisms for the children on the 2d Sun. in Jan. and today one of the little girls recited one all the way through by heart.——Our preacher, W. H. Neese, preached a most helpful sermon last Sunday. His text was, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

Monroe C. Wright.

Halifax Circuit.—The poundings on this circuit continue. Mrs. Whitehurst came to the parsonage last week with chickens, flour, and canned tomatoes from the members of Ringwood church. If gifts of chickens, and flour at the present prices, would not cause a preacher to love his members, he must be very hard-hearted. This church seems to have a courageous, loyal little band. The members of Lee's Chapel continue to pound on the installment plan. My wife and I spent last night with Brother J. G. Lee, and he gave us a ham and a chicken when we were ready to leave, besides paying nearly if not all of his assessment for the entire year. Say, I don't mind visiting in the least, and if any of the other members of this church want me to pay them a visit, they have only to mention it! R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

Love's Grove, Charlotte Ct.—Our S. S. did not go into winter quarters; the winter has been rough with roads bad and mud plenty. We are looking and praying for greater things this year; looking to God for all, for we know that God is the author and finisher of all good works. Our collection for Children's Home was $1.41 last Sunday; we take collection every 2nd Sun. for the Home. Our officers are Mr. John N. Smith, Supt., Mr. J. C. Tarleton, Miss Minnie Osborn, Mrs. Silas Whitler, teachers. We want to get the older people to attend Sunday school better this year.——Our pastor, D. A. Braswell, filled his regular appointment last Sunday; he preached one of those soul-stirring sermons. We are always glad to hear Bro. Braswell preach; he hits going and coming, if you are not on the straight line, and we like for him to hit, if needed—we mean with God's word. The health of the community is very good now. We have preaching every second Sunday at 11 a. m. and fourth Sunday at 3 p. m.

Brethren, pray for us. A Member.

—Speak the truth in love.

Bethany, Randleman Ct.—Bro. Cecil was on this work Sunday and preached a good sermon and we believe many were helped and encouraged. We hope to be able to send our average attendance at Sunday school after this; we have a good school. We were glad to have Rev. Joe Allred, Bro. Paris Foust and wife of Worthville and others whose names we do not know worship with us yesterday.

Theodosia Routh.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Ct.—The winter weather we hope is ended, and the beautiful sunshiny Sundays are with us. With the coming of Spring and favorable weather there come better opportunities for better work on the country charges as well as elsewhere. Our pastor, Bro. Bowman, was with us again the second Sunday. His sermon was simple, plain and practical. His hearers were very attentive to the word. A very good congregation, but not what it should be; some were away on account of sickness, others simply because they don't care to go to church. Those people who refuse even to hear the word preached will some day thirst in vain and wish that they could call back the many hours they spent in visiting some friend instead of going to church, but alas! it will be too late then.——Our S. S. is still improving, but consists mostly of young people. We have a few old people who are faithful to attend. We are so glad to report that one of our efficient teachers, Mr. W. H. Kimrey, has returned home from the hospital. The writer was very much impressed by the beautiful service our pastor had in teaching Mr. Kimrey's class. He asked the members to pray for him before they began the lesson, and O, what beautiful prayers were prayed in behalf of their dear teacher. We have missed him very much. He was always there and ready and willing to do his duty. We are so glad that he will soon be with us again. We feel that it would be impossible to fill his place. We are so proud of the little girls and boys that attend our Sunday school. If they will only continue to come to Sunday school they will be highly rewarded.——We are still having class meetings and in them I believe seed is sown that will tell in the future.——We are expecting a prosperous year in our church work. So we hope as the new year dawns upon us we may each find our right place and be enabled to accomplish something worth while during the year.

(Miss) Lellia Lemmons, Rep.

Anderson and Yarborough.—We have held our first quarterly meetings. The following is the report: Work done since Annual Conference—I preached 38 times on charge, 27 off charge; made 65 pastoral visits; had 65 interviews; 50 or more conversions and reclamations; 17 accessions to the church; 25 subscriptions to the M. P. Herald; conducted three funerals. Prayer meeting in all churches but one; well attended. Spiritual condition improving. One hundred and thirty dollars paid on salary. We will try to raise our Conference claims during March and April. The work is prospering. W. A. Lamar.

Burlington.—Last Sunday was another good day for Burlington Sunday-school and church. The S. S. was the largest of this year. Each class had a splendid attendance, especially the Baraca class, which had 77. There seems to be a growing interest in our school, and if the weather continues fair and agreeable, we hope to have a larger school in the future. The morning preaching service was well attended, there being about 150 present. Bro. Curry delivered a splendid, instructive sermon on World-wide Missions. At this service, Miss Swannie Patterson, who has been a member of our Sunday-school and a regular attendant at church for years was received by letter into the church. Her membership was with Friendship church, Mt. Hermon Ct. We are glad to have her with us, as she is one of our most substantial and faithful members.

The evening service was conducted by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and was presided over by the president of the society, Mrs. O. N. McPherson. The service was very interesting and was largely attended. About 250 were present. The offering was about $12.00. Dr. Harris-Glascock, of Greensboro, made an address as part of the program, which was elaborate.

According to announcement, Dr. Lewis was with us Monday night and delivered a most splendid and helpful address on Education. Owing to rain there was not as large a congregation as was expected. Dr. Lewis is a most pleasant and interesting speaker, and those who heard the address were doubly paid for whatever sacrifice they made to attend. Burlington church was very fortunate in having one of the biggest men in the Methodist Protestant Church visit it.

The C. E. Society met at 6:30 p. m. Sunday with a usual attendance. Miss Mittie Jeffries was the leader. This meeting was the regular consecration service, and each member was asked to recite a verse of Scripture or respond in some manner when the roll was called. These consecration meetings occur once each month and are intended to be a spiritual uplift to the society.

Mid-week prayer meeting was led by the pastor last week. Attendance, about 25. Much interested was manifested.

The regular monthly business conference of the church was held last Tuesday night, with a fairly good attendance. Reports of officers were made and other business attended to.——Rev. C. H. Whitaker and daughter, Miss Alice, and Mr. Green A. Nicholson of near Bellemont were among the visitors to hear the address of Dr. Lewis.

Bro. Curry assisted in the funeral of Mrs. Petty at Bellemont last Friday. The deceased was the mother of Bro. C. W. Petty of our church at Burlington. We extend sympathy and pray God's choicest blessings upon them.

C. B. Way, Rep.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.—Bro. Bethea as is usual, preached us a good sermon last Sunday, being his regular appointment here. We expect to start our Sunday school again soon and I will be so glad to see that time come, as I do dearly love to go to Sunday school. M. B. G.

High Point.—On Sunday, Feb. 7, the pastor spoke more especially to the young people. We have been urging our young people of the Sunday school to stay for preaching, and they are doing it remarkably well. A great deal of the credit for this is due the workers in the primary department of the Sunday school. And some of it is due to the fact that we have the children from the Children's Home in our congregation. The influence of their staying for church has been helpful in getting others to stay. However, an epidemic of mumps has kept several of the children of the Home from coming for the last few Sundays. After having spoken to the young people on the above-mentioned date I asked that all present under twenty years of age come up around the altar and sing "Jesus wants me for a sunbeam." And there were 84 who came. Five small children who were present did not come, so there were 89 young people present at that preaching service who were under twenty years of age. And there were a good many others who were under twenty-five. That is something like our usual showing on a pretty Sunday, and we are working to make it better still.

Yesterday was an exceptionally good day with us; attendance at both Sunday school and church was at the high water mark. The Baracas of our Sunday school have a friendly contest on at present between the two sections of the class, and are bringing in lots of young men who do not attend Sunday school elsewhere. There were 68 present yesterday.

We also received ten members into the church yesterday morning, eight by letter and two on profession of faith. Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Goley, Miss Marcia Goley, Mr. Willard Goley, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Hines, Miss Myrtle Hines, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. White and Miss Sarah E. Fuquay are the ones who joined the church here on yesterday. Several of our children and some few of our grown people were not able to attend church and Sunday school yesterday on account of mumps. The Supt. of our Sunday school, Mr. A. M. Idol, is at present in the hospital for treatment; also Mrs. M. P. Sechrest, Mrs. J. G. Anthony, and Miss Mary Lyndon.—We are expecting a great treat in the coming of Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., President of Western Maryland College, who will preach for us next Sunday at 11 a. m. In His Name, A. G. Dixon, Pas.

High Point, Feb. 15.

Asheville.—Weather as usual, congregations about the same, preaching extraordinary. Bro. Williams did that part of it in the morning, and the preacher led the Christian Endeavor service at night, and made the C. E. talk do for a sermon. Had two to unite with the Society. Preacher had a funeral in the morning—a young man of twenty. Buried the father on Tuesday. I'm not going tell you what Bro. Williams told the folks in his sermon, for I wasn't there to hear it, and don't like to make hearsay reports, but they tell me it was a mighty impressive sermon. In the congregation in the morning was a Mr. Breck, the husband of the author of "Face to Face with Christ my Savior," "The Cross is not Greater than His Grace," and other well known hymns.

Two additions to the Sunday school membership yesterday. Started to get ready for the Easter Service. We are hoping to break the record with this service this year. This will be the first Board service to be held in the new church.

We are indebted to Bro. J. M. Blackwelder for some repairs to the church building. Windows and doors swelled and useless. He had them put in shape for service. Plenty of frsh air now.

The preacher-folks are indebted to certain of the members of the church for little kindnesses in the shape of eatables that have been brought in from time to time.

I regret to announce the bad news, I have purposely put it off until the last. I am sure you will sympathize with us in our very great disappointment. I have cried a good deal about it,—soaked at least three good sized handkerchiefs and have had to apply cold water to keep my eyes from getting red. No money was received last week for the building fund. Come on, folks. Note for $450 due the first of March, not a fourth of the amount needed in the bank. You haven't done your part yet. If you had, there wouldn't be any need of tears.

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Fairfield, Guilford Ct.—The Guilford circuit seems to be getting on rather slowly. Bro. Needham has been on the work about fifteen months and says he had never had anything to report till last week when Bro. Jones brought him a forty-pound shoulder of meat and some chickens and a couple other brothers had remembered him with some other things. And when he got down to the church work he simply enumerated the things that needed doing. So I suppose he said about what he had to say. Now during that time I don't think any layman has reported. Now shall we just return the compliment and say we had nothing to report? No, I am not going to say that. We all love Bro. Needham and we'll not take any exceptions to what he said. I will not go back but just report a few things we have done this year. Fairfield had the pleasure of entertaining the first quarterly conference. Also the pleasure of having our president with us and hearing him preach. Bro. Cecil is always a welcome visitor on the Guilford circuit. Bro. Cecil presided over the quarterly conference with the same precision and interest that he does over the sessions of the Annual Conference. The routine business was transacted in harmony. The incidental business brought forth considerable discussion, but I think it was settled satisfactorily to all. The quarterly conference agreed to pay the pastor's house rent, the same being apportioned according to pastor's salary. Fairfield has already come across with her part. For the first time in several years our Sabbath school has remained evergreen this winter; seventy in Sunday school last Sunday. That does pretty well for a country school in a sparsely settled community. The president asked the quarterly conference for an expression in regard to his visiting all the churches and he has asked for an expression through the Herald from the different fields, so I believe I will express myself now. I have come to the conclusion that any person who thinks the president of our Conference hasn't any more important duties to attend to than to travel over hills and hollows through heat and cold and rain and snow and preach to empty benches is thirty years behind and falling back every day. Our Conference will never have the influence and prestige it should have so long as we make a little two by four circuit rider out of our president. Not but what the circuit rider is just as good as the president, but it is the lofty position he occupies. Let us elevate the man to the position, not bring the position down to the man. This method was adopted nearly a hundred years ago when our Conference was nothing but a little mission, but now it reaches from beyond the mountains to the sea shore, and we are in the same old rut. But we have always done a kind of bush-whacking business; we have gone into the woods and done the driving and the other fellow held the net and got the game.

J. M. Davis.

Cid, Uwharrie Ct.—It is always a pleasure to receive your valuable paper as it always brings some good tidings from other churches. The weather this winter has been so bad that Bro. Trogdon has not been with us much, but I am glad to say he filled his appointment here yesterday and delivered a most excellent sermon to a large congregation of attentive hearers. He doesn't fail to warn the people about their faults. We were very glad to have Mrs. J. B. Trogdon to act as organist, as our organist was absent. Death visited our nearby community and claimed for its victim Mr. Wiley Hedrick, an aged and highly respected citizen. He was a member of Jerusalem and was laid to rest in the cemetery yesterday. Bro. Trogdon conducted the funeral. He leaves a wife, four daughters and one son to mourn his loss. He was a good worker and took much interest in the church. He will be greatly missed by all. He was 78 years old. May his dear children live so as to meet him above. We had the pleasure of having Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Trogdon in our home Sunday for a few hours. We are expecting to have some work done on our church soon.——Mr. Jasper Surratt who got his back hurt recently is improving. We are glad.——We appreciate the presence of some of sister churches who come to Cid to join us in worship and especially those that help in the choir. Come again, we need your help.——Mrs. Fannie Parish, widow of the late Frank Parrish, was buried at Pleasant Grove last Monday. I extend sympathy to the bereaved children; only two living. Mrs. N. W. L.

Bethesda, Yadkin College Ct.—Our pastor, Bro. Powell, preached to us Sunday morning, giving us the best sermon he has for some time although it is common for him to give us a good one. He also took a collection for Children's Home which was over $3. He made a proposition to the church members for each one to give ten cts. each month this year, and 17 gave their names to the proposition. He said that if each member of Bethesda church would pay one cent a week it would amount to $75 or more each year, and surely any of us can do that. We were glad to have Bro. Archleus Hinkle of Greensboro worship with us. Bro. Hinkle is at his old home visiting his mother, brother and sisters. He said he was converted at Bethesda in 1878 when Dr. Ferree was holding a camp meeting, and there was a large crowd of boys converted at the same time and all of them were holding good. He said that was the greatest meeting he was ever in, no doubt it was, because when we first find Jesus is a precious time to us all.——We were all very glad to see old Mr. John Everhart out at church; he is getting very old, near 90, and has good health for that age.——The whooping cough is raging in this section. Bro. R. E. Leonard's have been right bad with it; it seemed to be doing them more harm than any other family. Mrs. Joseph Wagner is right sick at this time with neuralgia. Reporter.

Notice.—Bro. C. A. Cecil, President, will preach at Moriah at 11 o'clock Sunday, Feb. 1st, and at Tabernacle at 3 p. m. on same day. T. M. Johnson, Pastor.

Concord.—The weather being unfavorable during this Conference year has kept a goodly number of our people from attending our church services. We are glad to say that we have some faithful ones on whom we can always depend regardless of the threatening weather. Sometimes we older ones become discouraged, but when we look into the bright happy faces of so many children we leave discouragement behind and look forward to the time when they will take the lead in the church, and we are hoping that they will prove as faithful then as now, for it is the children in the church who will some day be our teachers, superintendents and officers.

Our Sunday school seems to be gradually increasing, but not as fast as we would like to see.——We have a very interesting prayer service on Wednesday nights; not many attend, but all who come take an active part. The children as well as the grown-ups.——We are very sorry to say our pastor has been detained at his home for the past two Sundays and could not be with us. We wish for him and his sick ones a speedy recovery and that he may be able to be with us next Sunday.——Rev. Mr. Alexander of Harrisburg preached us an inspiring sermon tonight. We thank him for his kindness for coming to us and filling the vacancy, and we hope he will come again.

Graham S. S.—Our school averages over 90 per cent. of enrollment, but we are not doing what we could do. Many children do not attend anywhere; these should be looked after. We are glad to hear that little Miss Nina Holt, one of our members who has been afflicted with rheumatism, is improving. Bro. Williams reports every thing moving smoothly on his charge. J. L. Amick.

Flat Rock, Vance Ct.—Our new pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, was with us Jan. 17th and preached a good sermon. We all like him very much and pray that he may have a successful year in the blessed work of our Master. Immediately after the service new officers were elected for the ensuing year and the Sunday school reorganized. But owing to disagreeable weather we have not been having Sunday school regularly. However, we hope that the weather will soon permit so that the interest may increase, and we trust we will have a much larger attendance. Our Sunday school is by no means what it should be. The older people should take more interest in the work to be done.

Reporter.

Lebanon Church, Lebanon Ct.—One of our number, Mrs. Belle Cook, is now in the High Point hospital where she recently underwent an operation. Miss Lula Thacker, another one of our members that has also undergone an operation, is now at her home and continues to improve.

Miss Lena Hammer, our reporter, is in Washington, D. C., visiting her brother, Mr. Victor P. Hammer.

Since the "February frogs" have begun to sing our congregations are getting larger and our Sunday school more interesting. (It might be a good idea to pet a few of these frogs and teach them to sing all the year.)

Alleghany, Davidson Ct.—Our Supt. and a few of us went out and read our Sunday school lesson and Mr. J. G. Surratt gave us a nice talk. Our Supt. is faithful. We want all to take part, for there is something for all. Every church member ought to feel that he has a part in the work of the church. If we cannot preach like Paul or speak like angels, we can tell the love of Jesus. We can say that he died for all. Let us all do our part. I believe in the old-time religion. It was good for our fathers and it is good enough for me. Rev. J. W. Hulin preached us another good sermon yesterday, one among the best, and everybody seemed to enjoy it. Next Sunday, Mr. Odell, a Baptist, will preach for us. Come and hear him. We would love to hear from more of the Davidson Ct. reporters. I love to read the letters of the reporters.

Halifax Ct.—On last Thursday the stewards, together with several other members of the church, met at Eden to discuss the finances, and lay the assessments. It was an important meeting for pastor and members. The stewards promised to notify each one on his list how much is expected of him, writing those at a distance, and the pastor promised to visit every member who lives in reach of the church and to write a pastoral letter to those living a great distance away in this and other states. I spent Friday and Saturday visiting the members of this church, and while I have not visited nearly all of them, still I have reached the conclusion that this church has the greatest opportunity to expand of any church that I have ever seen. There is no church of any denomination near it. It is located in one of the most fertile farming districts in the State. There are "hosts" of intelligent young people in the community that seem willing to work for their church. There are many people who were once members of Bradford church, but since that church has become extinct, they are not members anywhere. I found many men and women of middle age, in the best of homes, who have never been connected with any church. Oh what a work for us to do! I appeal to every member of Eden church to pray mightily that God will give us a great ingathering of souls this year. May the revival begin now rather than that we should wait until August for it! I believe that a revival of interest has already begun, for at 10:30 Sunday morning the Grove was fairly well filled with horses and buggies, and by 11, the hour for preaching, there was a splendid congregation. We had a service that seemed to be enjoyed by all. After the Sacrament had been administered and the regular offering taken, I called the attention of the audience to the fact that one of our good widow ladies, Mrs. Anna Hamill, had a sick son and that it was costing her $5 or $6 a trip to get a physician to visit him. I felt that our people would like to show this sister that we sympathized with her, and I was not mistaken, for we merely passed the collection plates and secured over $10, and the members were not expecting two collections. One of our oldest and best members said that it was the best service that was ever held at Eden church. This church must have more services from its pastor in the future, and it is well able to support a pastor with the help of one other church.

At 3 on last Sunday I preached to a small but appreciative congregation at Union church. This is one of our oldest churches, and at one time was a very strong church, but the members have moved away and helped to build other churches, and negroes live where many of these members once lived. There are only about 28 members now, and many of them do not live in the community, so you will agree with me that these people deserve great credit when I tell you that under Bro. Pritchard's active ministry, they built a new church. Their being few in numbers does not keep them from doing big things. This was demonstrated again about ten days ago when these people sent their pastor's large family a buggy load of chickens, pork, canned fruit, cake, etc. Since writing before, Mrs. Smith of Brinkleyville and Mrs. Neville of Heathsville, both of them members of Bethesda church, gave us 22 lbs. of fresh meat. One couple has already married and gave me a "fat" fee, and there is every prospect that others will follow soon, so I am greatly encouraged. I hope to have something more to say about Bethesda and Lee's Chapel in my next report, and then the next week I shall speak of Harmony and Fosburg Camp, and then will come something about Ringwood. Those who don't subscribe for the Herald on this circuit will miss something. If the editor continues to publish my articles, we may have to increase the size of our paper. R. A. Swaringen.

Thomasville.—We are looking forward with great interest to next Thursday evening, Feb. 19th, when Dr. T. H. Lewis will be with us. We know that he has the reputation of being one of America's greatest preachers, and we expect to have a large congregation present to hear him.——Pres. Cecil was with us Jan. 24th and preached a most helpful sermon to a good congregation. We are always glad to have the president with us.

We were all very much pleased to learn last Sunday week that the Board of Young People's Work had selected Thomasville as the place for its first meeting. We expect to try to make this convention a great success.

Bro. Pritchard continues to preach most excellent and helpful sermons and we are very much pleased with him. The more we know of him the better we like him. Bro. Pritchard is liked very much by the town at large.

NOVEL PLAN FOR ENDING THE WAR IN EUROPE.—The Highway Commissioners of Guilford County have been experimenting for a year or two on a road leading out from Greensboro. Every effort at improvement has only made the road worse, and it has been almost impassable much of the time, and the residents along the way have not had the best of feeling over it. But the experiment has suggested a bright idea to one of the observers, Mr. D. M. Sullivan. He says if our Highway Commissioners are sent over to Europe to work the roads there, he will guarantee that it will stop the war in six months.

—Dr. Lewis explains that the University of Maryland whose presidency he declined is to be made up of the colleges receiving aid from the State and of a medical college or two and a law school in Baltimore. There is no thought of starting any new school. The literary colleges comprised will still retain their autonomy, and he does not think their work will be interfered with by this new move of the State. If serious interference should come to the church colleges, they would have the alternative of withdrawing from the university at the price of relinquishing state aid.

—Fifty-nine sixtieths of all the vast continent of Africa is owned by Europe. Only two hundred thousand square miles of Africa's twelve million belong to native Africans.

—As an evidence that many of the opposing soldiers in Europe have no enmity against each other, it is said that at one place, on Christmas day, the German and English soldiers played football.

—During the first three weeks of the Billy Sunday meetings in Philadelphia 42 meetings were held, 800,000 heard his message, 9,062 professed conversion and the offerings amounted to $33,003.99.

—The French flag floats over more than one-third of the continent of Africa, a colony twenty times as large as France itself, or nearly as large as Alaska, Mexico and the United States combined. France has already built 7,000 miles of railway.

—A young man in Argentina had a Bible. Becoming engaged to a Catholic girl, the priest forbade the marriage unless he gave up the Bible, and he threw it out with the rubbish. —A saloon-keeper said to an old friend: "Well, I see you've been up to the tabernacle and given Billy Sunday your last nickel, and now you've got to walk home." "Yes," replied the old friend, "and many a time I've given you my last nickel and couldn't walk home."

ON THE WAY TO THE LAND OF THE STRONG.

JULIA H. JOHNSTON.

"You must keep and obey the Angel's message
If you would ever reach the land of the strong."

It was fair and the sun was shining. A company of boys and girls were going joyously along a pleasant road. They seemed to be thinking of nothing but having a good time, but in their young hearts were earnest thoughts, too.

"What a long way there is before us," said one. "And how many things there are to do," said another. And just here the young folks were met by a very wise-looking and kindly personage, who looked at them pleasantly, and stopped to speak with them.

"I am glad to see you are setting out so happily," was the greeting, as the children paused politely. "My name is Experience. Perhaps you would like to ask me something that I would be glad to tell you. I have traveled many roads, and I may be able to give you some directions."

"Oh," cried one of the company, "can you tell us how to be strong? We have been talking about the long way we have to go, and the great things that we would like to do. Do tell us how to be strong and which way to go."

"That I will, and gladly, too," was the answer. "You must turn to the right at once, and after taking that road, you must go through the gates. It is the way to the Land of the Strong. The gate-keepers will tell you many things. They will help very much, if only you hear and do what they tell you."

The boys and girls turned to the right and went gaily on. It was very good to think of learning the road to the Land of the Strong, for every one of the company wished very much to reach it. Who wouldn't?

At the first gate the gatekeeper wore such a smiling face, and altogether had such a roly-poly, good-natured aspect that nobody was surprised to hear that his name was Mr. Cheery.

"You look so bright and happy," said Mr. Cheery, "that I know it will not be hard for you to take my advice, and keep cheerful if you would reach the Land of the Strong. Your being on this road, shows whither you are bound, and I am glad to tell you something that will not be hard to do in the beginning. But remember that you must keep cheerful when it is not so easy as now, for to be grouchy, and grumbly, and peevish, has a bad effect. It never fails. You can't be very strong in mind or body if you worry and fall into the dumps."

The keeper of the next gate seemed almost a giant, as the boys and girls looked him over, while he let them pass through. He was tall and straight, and his muscles were like whip-cord. This was Mr. Athletic, at your service. He set the young folk to standing on their tippy-toes, swinging their arms, running and jumping at a great rate, and —would you believe it?—even using brooms and shovels as such things ought to be used. "Keep exercising," counseled Mr. Athletic. "Don't be lazy. Don't be selfish either, but do some of your exercising for the benefit of others." The young folks were all in a glow, and in high good humor as they left this gate and its keeper.

By this time, you may well believe that the young travelers were hungry. At the next gate they were glad enough to see that the keeper wore a white apron and a cap, as if he were just ready to wait on them at table. And sure enough, so he was. For Mr. Good-Food had a table spread with the most wholesome fare that you can think of—not pies and cakes and candy, and such rich eatables, mind you—but the best of plain things—bread and butter and meat, vegetables, grains, fruits—yes, indeed—good things a-plenty. "Now eat enough, but don't you stuff," said this wise gatekeeper. "If you load up too heavily, you'll not reach the Land of the Strong."

After taking his advice, and his good things, too, in moderation, the boys and girls reached the next gate in an incredibly short time. And there the gate-keeper gave them all cups and sent them to drink from the most beautiful spring of cool, clear water that ever you saw. When they were refreshed, he took them up to a room over the gate to show them some pictures. "After you have seen them," he said, "you can guess my name, perhaps." And there on the canvas appeared a great strong man bearing two enormous gates which he had carried away from the city wall, for you could see the gaping, open space they were taken from.

"O what a strong man," cried the children. "How did he ever get to be so strong?"

Another picture fell on the canvas. An angel figure was speaking to a man and a woman, who listened as for their lives. The gatekeeper said: "These are to be the parents of a boy who is to be strong and brave, and deliver his people from their enemies. The angel has told them the news and now is telling how to bring up the child to be strong. I will give you the angel's message and you must keep and obey it, too, if you would ever reach the Land of the Strong."

As the children went out they received folded papers, and when on the road, they read to each other, "Drink no wine or strong drink." "Oh," cried one who had read a paper called The Young Crusader, "it was Mr. Temperance who kept that gate."

I can't name other gates now, but having gone through these, surely the travelers were well on their way to the Land of the Strong.—The Young Crusader.

SALLY DOUBLE BESIDE HERSELF.

Have you ever met Sally Double? No, she isn't a twin, although you might think so from her name; but there are two Sallys. When you meet Sally, you have a strange feeling that there is another Sally around the corner listening to the conversation; and the other Sally is always a great deal more interested in what Sally is saying to you than in what you are saying to Sally.

Sally is bright, and very entertaining. One of her mother's friends remarked the other day: "Sally Double is one of the cleverest girls I know; but what a pity it is that she knows it!" How do you suppose that Sally found out that she was clever? It was that second Sally, whom we never see, who eavesdropped on the Sally we know, and whispered to her: "Sally, you're a wonder!"

Whenever Sally does anything, she appears to think that somebody is looking at her. She is really looking at herself. She divides herself, and puts Sally Number Two in the audience to watch Sally Number One; and sometimes you think you can hear very loud hand-clapping. That's Number Two applaunding Number One; Sally is very pleased with herself.

Sally doesn't have a very good time when she plays; she doesn't put her whole heart into the game; she keeps wondering whether she is enjoying herself or not. Some of her feelings are always busy feeling how the rest of her feelings feel; so she does not feel the pleasure other boys and girls get out of the game.

She is a pretty girl, but you do not find her as attractive as you think she ought to be. She takes a long look at herself in the glass before she leaves her room in the morning, and, although she is far away from the mirror now, she has not forgotten what she saw there. People who think about their looks always spoil them. I overheard a lady say that Sally was self-conscious. Her little brother told her that she was stuck on herself. The glue must be the "Vanity Brand," I think, and Sally is a good advertisement for its ability to stick tight, for she never becomes unstuck. She is fastened to herself all the time.

One of her small brother's friends remarked that he did not think that she had a great deal to be stuck on. And he was quite right. Nobody has a very large self who thinks about himself. You know how the Bible describes an idiot; it says, "He is beside himself." We say, "He isn't himself." Sally Double is seldom herself; she is "beside herself." It is not surprising that she does not do as well as she might; only half of her tries to do it, the other half looks on. If only all that is in Sally Number Two could be kept in Sally Number One!

How often the Bible tells us that Jesus made people "whole!" God does not want fractions, but units, whole men and women, boys and girls. And the way Jesus made people "whole" was to tell them of their Father who watches them, thinks of them, loves them. They need never look at themselves, becaus God's eyes are on them. They need never applaud themselves; God will give them all the praise they ought to have. No one needs to be beside himself, because God is always beside every one of us. —The Outlook.

OBITUARY.

McClure.—Mr. B. F. McClure who moved from here to Norfolk about two years ago brought the remains of his wife back here on last Tuesday morning for burial. Mrs. McClure was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church here, and was a worthy woman. She was a great sufferer. Her last illness was a lingering one, lasting from last July until she peacefully passed over the river on Feb. 7, 1915. Mrs. McClure was just 34 years and 6 months old. She leaves a husband and three children, besides two step-children, and a host of other relatives and friends who are made sad by her death.

Our people here sympathize very deeply with Bro. McClure and his family in their sore bereavement. May God bless and keep them. A. G. Dixon.

Feb. 15, 1r15.

Anthony.—Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Anthony were called upon on last Thursday morning to give up their first-born son, whom God had loaned to them for just a little while. The little body was laid to rest in the cemetery here to await the resurrection. These young parents were greatly grieved, and their many friends extend to them their deepest sympathy in their great loss. A. G. Dixon.

High Point, Feb. 15th.

A Pleasant Home-Gathering.—On last Sunday the home of Mrs. Sallie Huff was the scene of a very delightful occasion in the form of a birthday dinner given in honor of Mr. Berry Davidson, her father, who has just passed his eighty-fourth mile-post on life's highway. Mr. Davidson is perhaps the oldest citizen of Gibsonville, N. C., and he has always been a most valuable asset to his community and town. He was one of the first men to build mills in Gibsonville for the manufacture of cotton, and much of the town's present prosperity is due to him. He also built the first church in Gibsonville. There can never be any more happy and enjoyable occasion than the coming together of the members of a family on such a time as this. Then it is that they who have met forget the cares of this world and, living over in memory the days that have gone, they seem to be drawn closer in the ties of affection, and are thus made stronger to face the duties of the future. A list of those fortunate enough to be present follows: Mrs. Rev. T. J. Ogburn, Cornelius, N. C.; Mrs. J. B. Ogburn, Miss Mary Ogburn, and Master Richard Ogburn, Summerfield, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Davidson with their little son, Dwight, Jr., and Prof. E. L. Daughtry, Gibsonville, N. C.; Rev. W. W. Davidson, Elizabethtown, N. C.; Prof. G. C. Davidson, Fayetteville, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Davidson, Mr. Bryant Davidson, and Dr. H. H. Ogburn, Greensboro, N. C.

The following were invited but could not be present: Rev. T. J. Ogburn and son, Cornelius, N. C.; Miss Lois Davidson, Elon College, N. C.; Miss Mamie Newlin and Mrs. G. C. Davidson, Fayetteville, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ogburn, Jr., and son, Richmond, Va.; Mr. J. B. Ogburn, Summerfield, N. C.

A Pounding.—Perhaps Bro. Peter Slewfoot will not object to our saying through the Herald that a number—we know not just how many—of the good people of the M. P. Church at Liberty have remembered us very kindly with a new suit of clothes, pair of shoes, gingham for dress, sugar, rice, &c. We will say that this is fully appreciated, and may the Lord bless each of the givers. We do not know the names of all who participated, and consequently give no names, lest we might seem to make a distinction. Dr. Shepherd and J. W. Curtis delivered these tokens of goodwill, but a number of others participated.

J. F. Dosier.

USE OF GARRETT-GRABBS FUND.

Nine persons responded to our request for suggestions as to the use of this fund. We thank them all. All the plans suggested have merit, and we feel indebted to each one for help in formulating the plan finally adopted, which differs somewhat from any of the plans suggested. Some of the plans suggested would be better under other conditions than those now prevailing. We offered a year's subscription to the Herald to the one suggesting the best plan. We have found difficulty in determining which is the best. But we have concluded that under existing conditions as we conceive them to be, the plans suggested by Miss Mary Parsons, High Point, and Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Oak Ridge, are a little more fitting, and about equally valuable. We will therefore divide the prize equally between them, and ask them without further notice to send us the names of those to whom the Herald is to be sent.

The plan decided on is as follows:

To prepare subscription sheets headed as follows:—

TO BUY A SEWING MACHINE FOR THE CHILDREN'S HOME AT HIGH POINT.

Supt. Garrett of the Children's Home has stated that a Sewing Machine is needed in the Home (that the girls may learn to sew and make clothes for themselves and others). You are asked to give 25 cents (only) to help purchase a good new Sewing Machine for the Children's Home at High Point and will receive in return the "Methodist Protestant Herald" for three months, if you are not now receiving the paper; if you are receiving it, you may have it sent for three months to some person who has never taken it.

These subscription sheets will be sent to pastors who are requested to secure the appointment by S. S. Supt. and teachers of boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 16 years of age to act as canvassers with these subscription lists. One canvasser to a church of 150 members or less; two to a church of between 150 and 250 members, and three to a church of more than 250 members.

The canvassing period will extend to May 1, 1915. The boys and girls to hand subscriptions and money to the pastor, who will forward the same to the editor of the M. P. Herald.

The Garrett-Grabbs Fund to be used as prizes as follows: The boy or girl who collects the largest amount for the purchase of the Sewing Machine will receive $1.50; the next, $1.00. The remainder of the fund will be used for the purchase of presents to be divided among the remaining canvassers in proportion to the sums raised.

The publisher of the Herald reserves to himself the privilege of paying as much as possible of the purchase price of the sewing machine in advertising, charging therefor at the usual rate.

The success of the plan will depend on the co-operation of pastors and Sunday-school workers, which we here ask. We trust that pastors will publicly speak of the effort and ask for it sympathetic attention. If all will do this, the Sewing Machine can be bought, the girls in the Home made happy and helped, and we trust the circulation of the Herald be somewhat extended—the object of Bro. Garrett and Bro. Grabbs in contributing to the fund.

This plan has the endorsement and most hearty approval of Bro. J. M. Millikan, chairmen of the Board of Trustees of the Children's Home. Bro. Garrett left the formulation of plan entirely to others and will be as much surprised as any one to see the plan that has been adopted.

—Dr. T. H. Lewis, president of Western Maryland College, spoke in Greensboro, Tabernacle, and High Point churches last Sunday, ending his tour in our Conference District. He pleads for our denominational colleges and for loyalty to them on the part of our people. We need Methodist Protestant colleges for the same reason that we need Methodist Protestant churches, and both are so important that we ought not to think of failure to build and maintain them because it costs effort and money (product of past effort). Of course we cannot have a college in every county any more than we can have a church on every hill, but we ought to aim at the number necessary to do the largest possible service. There is room for a difference of opinion as to how many colleges our church ought to try to have, but it is clear to us that existing institutions cannot do for our people in North Carolina what ought to be done, and that we ought, all of us, to be thinking of our duty and preparing to act together as soon as favorable conditions return in meeting the great need for better and more general education.

—Bro. J. Ed. Swain, of our Asheville church, went to Raleigh on Monday to attend to business.

—Cabarrus county has taken a forward step in providing moonlight schools for adult illiterates.

—Rev. Ed. Glenn, evangelist of the M. E. Church, preached a very good sermon to us of Grace church last Sunday night in the absence of the pastor.

—Last Tuesday was tree-planting day at Tabernacle. Bro. Johnson and his people were looking forward to it with great interest. A number of the old oaks on the church ground have recently been cut down, fearing that they might fall and do injury. The new trees planted were some of them to be family trees, memorials of families living in the community.

—We hope no Sunday school will fail to report its attendance because it is not as large as some others. This may be a means of securing a more regular attendance of some scholars and of causing some to bring in new scholars.

Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul,
Love is the only angel who can bid the gates unroll;

CHEER UP!

"Chir-up, chir-up!" the little birds say,
"Let your hearts sing a song to-day."
The fragrant balmy breezes playing,
In the boughs so gently swaying,
Whisper, "Oh, be gay! Be light of heart.
In our joy and glee come take part!"

The silvery laugh of the gurgling brook
Resounds in steady dell and nook.
"Come let's revive the flowers and grass
To cheer the hearts of lad and lass."
Even the brooklet's ready to serve—
And says, "From duty never swerve."

And since of nature we're a part,
Let's sing to-day with all our heart.
"Chir-up, chir-up!" as the little birds say,
Then like the breezes we'll be gay—
And like the brooklet we'll serve to-day—
Then we'll be happy anyway!

MEMORY.

Back to the halls of memory,
Back to the days that were,
And view the things that once were seen,
Yet ne'er will reappear.

Old friends can meet again in dreams,
Bright faces beam with light,
And kind words cheer the lonely hearts,
When memory is bright.

Still, passing scenes of earth go on,
Which no one photographs;
But memory—immortal thought—
Records the sighs and laughs.

ANSWERS TO BRO. WHITAKER'S QUESTIONS.

On referring to the original copy of the Nominating Committee's report I find that the name of Bro. C. H. Whitaker appears and not that of Bro. C. L. Whitaker. While this paper is not marked "Passed" I am quite sure it was. The name of Bro. C. L. Whitaker appearing in the list on page 11 is simply an error on the part of the publisher.

Bro. Porter's name should not have occurred on the unstationed list. This is also an error of the publisher and will be corrected for next year.

As to the Conference Roll, it was never intended to be a roll of voting members of the Conference. It was designed by the publisher to have a convenient list of those who have become parts of our Conference, showing the consecutive order in which they became connected with the Conference and when they were ordained and became full members of the Conference. While our book of Discipline does not provide, by means of words, for probationary members of the Conference, yet usage is such that when those who are employed by the Conference with a view to their admission into full membership when the Conference is satisfied with their experience and equipment, they are really probationary members. The Conference Roll, so-called, is only a production of the publisher,—the opinion of one man,—but in the minutes of the proceedings of the Conference where the roll was called (see pages 16 and 18 for examples) the roll contained the names of those who have never been members of the Conference. This is called a roll. It was voted on and adopted by the Conference. This is my opinion only. The Conference may have an entirely different view.

I appreciate any criticism or correction and am glad to answer any question I can.

Yours for a better Journal, G. L. Curry.

PRAYER.

I see a great deal said in the Herald about prayer and the church work, which I enjoy reading very much. I want to say Amen to Sister Gulie H. Grantham's article on present day dressing, but I started to give some of my thoughts on prayer. I once heard a man say he saw a man stand in the pulpit and pray with his eyes open, looking over the congregation, and I asked him how much he prayed while looking at the man in the pulpit. I have always believed it was best to close our eyes to the objects before us, and get our minds as much off the things of the world as possible, and just approach God in that simple, child-like manner and ask him for the bread of life, the spiritual food that we so much need, and with the same faith that the childs asks its mother for bread. St. James said, Ye ask and receive not because ye ask amiss; and again he says, the effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. But what is effectual? Surely nothing but what is sincere, for we are told prayer is the sincere desire of the heart, unuttered or expressed.

I heard of a very pooor man that was taken sick, and his friends appointed a time to have prayer meeting for him, but when they gathered at his house the old brother that they expected to lead the meeting did not come. After a while his [illegible] came in with a basket on his arm, and said, Father could not come, but he sent his prayer in the basket. I think sometimes we can show our prayers better than we can repeat them.

Christ said, Ask what you will in my name, nothing doubting, and it shall be done. I believe that prayer is the most powerful weapon that the church has to rout the enemy and bring the blessings of God, but prayer does not consist in a form of words to be heard by men, or to entertain a congregation. It must be sincere, and unto God, and with the expectation of receiving the things we ask for and so much need. But why so much preaching and prayer with so little effected as to saving the world for Christ? May it not be that we have drifted into forms, and depending too much on our own strength. Forms are all right in their places, and we must have some forms, but there is nothing that can take the place of the Spirit and power of God. Christ said, I if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me. And there is no such thing as failure in him, it must be in us or the world would be saved. Let us all pray for power in the church, for we certainly have not as much power as we should have. With kindness and deep interest to all I submit these thoughts, hoping for a great awakening in 1915. Peter Vuncannon.

WHAT MAKES SO MANY CHURCHES EXTINCT.

In the issue of Feb. 4 of our church paper we find some distinguished person writing on this subject in which he says some ugly things against the old officers of the church, but does not sign his name and I suppose that he is ashamed of such authorship: if he isn't, he ought to be. I don't know whether the scribe spoken of is lord or lady; however, it will do them no harm to take broken doses of my prescription. I have been a steward for 33 years—not from choice on my part, but because of the fact that when young men were elected they did but little good or would resign and then the poor preacher with tears in his eyes, as if he had liver complaint, rheumatism, catarrh, lagrippe, and the blues, too, would come along and say, John, if you don't fall in now and collect something for me, my dear wife and little ones must starve, and I can't stand that sort of thing; and for this and no other reason I have given those years of service without pay, and now then I want this fast young person to take hold of the throttle and try his hand for thirty-three years. In conclusion, my young friend, remember when you modern Absaloms have kicked out all the old fogies (as some call them) out of the church and do away with those old soul-stirring hymns, "Amazing Grace," and "There is a Fountain," and sing "Fire in the Mountains," "Run, Boys, Run," if you like, but remember the sad fate of Absalom for his filial ingratitude. He died the infamous traitor of his country, and the name of Absalom will go down with those of Benedict Arnold and the like, to the disgrace of their history forever, but bring them in from the fields of sin, from the club room, the ball room, picture show; there is Delilah with flounces and bounces, she thinks only of society—the dance, the theater &c. Curls and paint and grease and chalk and rings and bracelets and ribbons and feathers and flowers and chit-chat and nonsense, are worth more to her than all the glory of heaven and the life of eternity. I do not pretend to be a prophet. But though not a prophet I see a very dark cloud on our horiz n; that dark cloud is thoughtlessness. David said, "I thought on my ways and I turned my feet unto thy testimonies." Absalom had the swell head and was slain. Beware! Beware! The Absaloms and Delilahs have their counterpart today. I imagine the devil laughs fit to kill himself or at least to split his sides when he sees them marching into the church with their horn and violin from the dance. Jno. A. Walker.

(Bro. Walker has done long and faithful service and we are not surprised at his resenting what seemed to him a reflection on those long in the harness. But as it appears to us, both writers are warning against thoughtlessness; one the thoughtlessness that neglects the young people; the other ,the thoughtlessness that fails to appreciate the old people. Both are real dangers, one strong in one locality and the other in others. These two writers have nothing to quarel about.—Ed.)

CHURCH HYMN TUNES.

There may be some who never think about the hymns they sing—and hymn-singing, if done perfunctorily, means nothing to us. In fact, it is a positive injury to us as it trains us to habits of inattention and weakness our power of concentration and sincere expression. On the other hand, a hymn sung with an attentive and sympathetic interest in its value as a part of the worship becomes at once an experience, intellectual and emotional, and therefore a positive benefit to us.

I have used the sentence, "its value as a part of the worship"; do we ever think just what is the function and value of music in worship? Briefly, I should say that its function is to stimulate and create a mood of worship. (So-called "special" music, such as organ numbers, solos and anthems will not be considered here. Our attention is directed solely to congregational singing, and the use of hymn tunes.)

If we are agreed that the function of music in worship is to create a "mood of worship" let us analyze a kind of hymn frequently sung and discover whether or not it really contributes to this end.

It is the kind of hymn chosen in order that everybody may sing and enjoy singing. Two very desirable features. The character of the words is of small moment, so long as a single catchy phrase is repeated again and again. Let this be said of hymns: No hymn which will not bear careful reading as religious poetry and the closest scrutiny as worthy literature is deserving of use in sacred worship.

In this kind of hymn, not only are the words unworthy, but the music is still more so. The melodies are unnecessarily simple. They are easily learned, to be sure, but they have no substance. Contrast a hymn of this description with a hymn such as "Come, Thou Almighty King" or "A Mighty Fortress is Our God" and you will feel which has "class" and endurance.

Another characteristic of these tunes is their excessively marked rhythm. Rhythm is a necessary element, but let it predominate and purely physical emotion is the result. It will surely contradict and destroy every spiritual impulse and feeling which may be aroused by the words. The so-called "spirit" in congregational singing obtained by the use of strongly marked rhythm is trivial, not to say flippant, and has no place in dignified Christian worship. Surely no one who appreciates true worship will mistake such "spirit" for sincere spiritual elation.

But the severest condemnation of such hymns lies in this: A hymn used by a young person when the first consciousness of a personal religious life is coming into being is forever after a part of that experience. To build therefore into the foundation of a developing Christian experience a hymn which will not endure the test of mature judgment or of refined literary taste, is simply a religious crime.

To summarize: The most important element of a hymn is the text. This should be a worthy poetical statement of a sincere religious feeling. It should be reinforced and interpreted by music which people enjoy singing, and which, because of musical worth will retain its attractiveness after innumerable repetitions have made it perfectly familiar. The problem perhaps is not the matter of agreeing as to the sort of tune to be used, but in persuading non-musical and unmusical people to use that sort.—J. L R. in The Guilfordian.

ARE MINISTERS' SONS WORSE THAN OTHERS?

Did you ever hear it suggested that "ministers' sone and deacons' daughters" usually go to the bad,—they may turn out well, but the odds are against them?

Within the last ten years two magazines—The Nineteenth Century in England, and Munsey's in America—have let in the light on this devil's lie. Bishop Welldon Canon of Westminster Abbey, examined the parentage of every person whose name occurred in the sixty-six volumes of the Dictionary of National Biography (of Great Britain) since the Reformation. Of 2,130 men and women distinguished for marked esrvices to their nation, whose fathers were either doctors, lawyers, or ministers, 350 were the children of doctors, 510 the children of lawyers, and 1,270 the children of ministers. Bishop Welldon states: "The superiority has been one not of numbers only but of degree. From clerical homes have sprung sons more distinguished, and a larger number of more distinguished sons, than from the homes of any secular profession." Thus the ministers' children in Great Britain have outnumbered by almost fifty per cent. in notable national service the children of the two honorable professions of law and medicine combined.

For America, D. O. S. Lowell's study of the census showed that one in every 221 men of special distinction ought to be a minister's son, if these sons bore their full share But "Who's Who in America," instead of including the 51 ministers' sons thus called for, recorded 898, or nearly eighteen times as many as the normal proportion. While there was only one minister's son to 221 of male population, nearly one in 12 sons of ministers had risen to special distinction. The ministerial family stock of less than half of one per cent. of the total population gained eight per cent. of the honors.

As The Sunday School Times said some years ago, in commenting on these facts, they correct the "senseless notion that Christian training makes it harder than usual to live a decent life. People do not go to the bad because they have early been introduced to the good."—Sunday School Times.

Have you ever thought of the inequality of the burden? Your sister has gone to the field, leaving friends and the comforts of the home land. Perhaps God did not call upon you to make this particular sacrifice, but is not your responsibility toward the unsaved millions as great as hers? Ex.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Tabernacle Ct.—I visited two of the appointments on this field on the 21st. I spent Saturday night with Bro. W. S. Job who on Sunday morning took me to Moriah where I met a good congregation. Here they have a nice new church completed and furnished on the inside beautifully; this speaks well for the membership and community and I trust they will soon realize and see the fruits of their labors. The church has only a smalll debt on it and I was told that would be paid this year. People can do in church matters about what they want to do when they unite. May there be more union of effort in the different places throughout the N. C. Conference where we need new churches. Bro. Henry Whitely met me at Moriah and conveyed me to his home where I took dinner, and soon after we drove to Tabernacle where a large congregation had gathered for the three o'clock appointment. Dr. T. H. Lewis was present and preached to the edification of all present. We were real glad to have him with us and hope he can and will visit our Conference more frequently. The work is in good condition and I hope this will be a good year. Bro. Johnson is pleased with his people and they with him. I will visit Julian church later. Claim paid.

Winston-Salem.—Rev. R. M. Andrews of Greensboro delivered an address to young people at our first Methodist Protestant Church on Sunday night, the 21st instant. He captured the audience at once by his forceful and eloquent diction and impressive truths. The address was fine and his style of delivery was exceedingly pleasing to the large audience that were so fortunate as to hear him. We wish that the address was reproduced in our M. P. Herald. We hope that Bro. Andrews will come again and often. Reporter.

Denton.—We have begun to wake up to the fact that we need to do something if we succeed in our Christian life. Today we had several old people out to our Sunday school, which we appreciated very there are still more on roll. We hope to have the best work done this year that we have done yet. We listened to a good sermon from our pastor, Rev. G. L. R., at 11 o'clock and also at night. After the eleven o'clock sermon the pastor called a meeting of the members to lay plans for a special meeting which will be announced later. We are having an interesting prayer meeting every Wednesday night. The people are attending well and we are glad to see the good work going on.

H. A. Garrett was in our town one day last week on business; we were very glad to see him and to know that everything is moving on nicely at the Children's Home.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. Geo. Keith one day last week cut her throat seriously, but is yet alive and probably with good attention she will recover. She had a stroke of paralysis about a year ago and has never gotten able to do any work since. The relatives have our sympathy.

C. T. Surratt, Rep.

Hope, Siler City Ct.—Our pastor, Bro. Bowman, last Sunday preached an excellent sermon to a large congregation. We are glad to have him back with us again. He served us so faithfully for three years, it seems lik an old member of the family come back to us.

We are pleased to see the Sunday school progressing so nicely. Baraca and Philathea classes have been organized with a good membership and deep interest in the work. We feel proud of this, for to my mind there is no better evidence of a live Sunday school, and I hope with the coming of spring the attendance and interest may increase.

We were glad to see Mrs. J. G. Hanner out at preaching again. She has been in very poor health since about the first of Oct. Hope she may soon be restored to her usual health. Success to the Herald and its readers. Kara Andrew, Rep.

Asheville.—Bro. Stubbins said in last week's Herald that he thought his folks must have heard the frogs, and that brought them out to church. The frogs haven't started to exercise their vocal chords up here in the mountains yet, so our people haven't started to come out very well yet. Attendance yesterday was rather slim although the weather was fine. Some are sick, however, and that may account for it.

The Baracas are preparing to entertain the Philathea class and their friends at a Washington Birthday Party in the Sunday school room to-night. A good time is expected. Our young folks know how to have a good time together.

I was on the point of not sending any report to the paper this week, but a check came on the noon mail today from Mrs. J. H. Dixon, of Greensboro. Mrs. Dixon pledged $5.00 to Miss Jessie Williams when she canvassed the Conference in 1910 for the Asheville church. If the rest of the folks who pledged at that time would only pay up, or even partly pay up, we would be relieved of a financial stress that is greatly handicapping the progress of the work here. There are some things we ought to do here that cannot be done until the present indebtedness is removed. If you have pledged to the work and can send all or any part of the amount, it will mean very much to us just now. Won't you do it—for Christ's sake?

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Ct.—Brother William G. Sharpe, one of our faithful members who is nearing his 85th birthday, is very feeble at this writing. Mt. Hermon has not a few soldiers of the cross who have reached the fourscore mark and over. "The fear of the Lord prolongeth life."

Miss Parson's recent article on class meetings brings to my memory that my grandmother was converted at one. I think it would be well for us to revive the old class meetings, for it seems that much good is derived from them. I have never had the oportunity of attending one.

Bro. Whitaker preached us an excellent sermon Sunday, and judging from the attention the audience gave, the sermon was very much enjoyed. Rev. H. M. Neese of Bellemont worshiped with us; he also made an interesting talk to the Sunday school.

Death has visited our home since my last report and removed my father. He was such a good father! We miss him so much. Hubert L. Isley, Reporter.

Union Chapel, Granville Ct.—We have been silent for quite awhile, but our S. S. work has been going on just the same. We were all very glad to see the sun shining so warm and pretty today. Sunday school has been increasing every Sunday for the last few Sundays; hope it will continue to. We are going to have Easter service the first Sun. in April. The teachers gave out some of the recitations today. Next Sunday is our preaching Sunday; hope the weather will be fine, as we haven't had a pretty preaching Sunday for quite awhile Reporter.

FIGHT WITH A JELLY FISH.

It occurred in the Pacific Ocean off the coast of California and is thus referred to in the daily press account:

G. H. Wilson lies at the Cottage Hospital in a critical condition as a result of as thrilling and unusual encounter as has ever taken place here. He had a life and death struggle with a hugh jellyfish. Four hundred feet from shore Wilson was suddenly attacked. He saw before him what he says looked like a great sheet of butter and eggs. Suddenly strips of yellow and white began to separate from the mass and extend toward him. He turned to swim out of reach when the creature threw its tentacles about him and the mad fight was on. In the struggle Wilson broke the mass into fragments, but reached the shore exhausted, and his face and shoulders stinging as though from scalds. At the hospital it was said that the patient is getting along favorably. His pain at times was so intense that morphine had to be administered. His shoulders and face resemble one mass of poison oak burns.

—An interesting story, which is vouched for as true, is told of a Scotch woman who lived on oatmeal that she might be ble to give to missions. A friend knowing of her self-denial gave her a sixpence to buy a mutton chop. The old Scotch woman said: "I have been without chops nine years. I can do without the chop." The friend sometime after, being at a dinner party where a number of wealthy people were present, told the story of the Scotch woman and the chop. Many were impressed, and one lady among them said: "I never went without a chop yet for Christ. I will give a thousand pounds for missions." Another and another spoke, until around that dinner table the old Scotch woman's sixpence worth of mutton chops given to missions grew into twelve thousand pounds to send the gospel to heathen lands.—Exchange.

—A young convert on the west coast of Africa, saved out of the most horrible savagery, came into the house of God on Christmas Day to offer a gift on the Lord's birthday—for they observe Christmas Day there, not by giving their best to each other, but by bringing their best gift and offering to Christ Whose birthday is being celebrated. At the close of the service they came in a procession to the front of the church, each offering the gifts they had brought for the Saviour. They were so very poor that most of them only had a handful of vegetables to bring, and some only a bunch of flowers to show their goodwill. If anyone could bring a coin worth a penny or two it was counted a particularly valuable gift. But here came this girl, sixteen years of age, and just saved out of paganism, and from under her old dress she drew a silver coin worth 3s. 6d., and handed this to the missionary. He was so amazed at the magnitude of it he at first refused to accept it, for he thought she must surely have got it dishonestly; but lest he might create confusion he did take it, and called her aside at the close of the service to ask her where she got such a fortune as that. She explained to him very simply that in order to give to Christ an offering that satisfied her own heart, she had gone to a neighboring planter and bound herself out to him as a slave for the rest of her life, and had brought the whole financial equivalent of her life of pledged service and laid it down in a single gift at the feet of her Lord!—London Chronicle.

THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION SPENDS MILLIONS FOR MEDICAL MISSIONS.

After a careful investigation of the field by its own scientists, the Rockefeller foundation has decided to put into operation a plan for the adequate education of the Chinese nation in the western science of medicine by completely equipping and maintaining three great medical mission colleges in China, Peking in the north, Canton in the south, and probably Chengtu in the west, having already been chosen as the points at which a beginning will be made.

This news indicates that the foundation has discovered one objective for the use of the Rockefeller millions that will scarcely be resented by anybody. Only persons who have personal knowledge of the medical needs of China can apprehend how immense is this humanitarian project.

It has been common knowledge among mission leaders for years past that some such porject has been under contemplation and investigation; and that it will not end with China.

The intimation is current that a scientific survey of the habitable globe's medical needs is to be made by the foundation, in cooperation with existing missionary agencies. Undoubtedly, the greatest single work of social service possible to man would be to stamp out the preventable diseases which are at present taking terrible toll of human life, especially in lands where western civiliation has not yet become dominant.

The three centers chosen for the foundation's beginnings in China are already in successful operation as union medical colleges and hospitals. The missions of various denominations have got together in common medical enterprises. Doctors for the united work are supplied by the various boards. Thus, without denominationalism, the Rockefeller foundation can put the resources of its millions behind colleges and hospitals now established and succesful.

The one lack of medical missions today is money and men. It is easier to get men than money. Lack of adequate support has prevented the mission boards from setting forth to the overthronged profession in America the claims and possibilities of a medical career in those sections of the earth which are one huge clinic. This new access of practically unlimited resources will enable the missions to provide fullest facilities, in the way of buildings, equipment, supplies and personnel.

For a long time there was in contemplation the possibility of endowing colleges and universities in China. Now that attention has been focussed in the medical needs the aim of the foundation is to train up a geneartion or two of fully equipped Chinese physicians. Even the Rockefeller millions are inadequate to provide foreign doctors for all of China. There needs to be produced a sufficient number of thoroughly trained Chinese physicians to maintain a self-supporting and self-directing medical profession for the whole nation. That is why the interest centers upon medical colleges, rather than upon hospitals.

In return, there will inevitably be contributions to western medical science. Nowhere on earth are there such opportunities for scientific research by the physician as in China. Known and unknown diseases are there in abundance. The beginning that is to be made in Peking will have consequences at present unimagined. Incidentally it will be one more tie between America and China.

Already the American Medical Association has had its attention directed to the twentieth century task of making a survey of the world's preventible diseases, with a view to their eradication. Such a prospect fairly staggers the imagination. The funds and the organiation and the direction of this project will doubtless come from the proposed world-wide medical missions of the Rockefeller foundation.

Missions have moved since the modest days of William Carey.—Religious Rambler.

DIED.

Kennedy.—Bertha Attice Kennedy, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Kennedy, was burned to death on Feb. 9, 1915. She lived only a few hours after being burned. Bertha was a very sweet little girl and we will not try to say how much she will be missed in that home. May God help them in this sad experience and may they now look forward to the time when they can have Bertha with them again—in that "home not made with hands." R. C. Stubbins.

Isley.—Edwin Alexander, son of Philip Spoon and Mary Sharpe Isley, was born May 4, 1853, and died January 8, 1915.

June 20, 1878, he wedded Julia Anne Clayton, of Person County. To this union were born ten children, eight of whom together with the wioow survive, two having died while young. In his young manhood he heeded the gospel call at a camp-meeting held at old Mt. Hermon church, and gave his heart to God. He connected himself with the Methodist Protestant Church at Mt. Hermon, and continued a faithful member until his death. He was regular in attendance until deprived by ill-health of what to him was a pleasure and a privilege. He was an official member in his younger days, and always contributed liberally of his means.

He was a Bible reader, not for argument and controversy, but that he might "grow thereby." His son says, "All last summer when I would pass out of the house going to Sunday school he was sitting on the porch reading the Bible."

With an amiable, friendly disposition he made and held friends. "Everybody likes him," said one a short while before he died.

His opportunities for education were very limited, yet he made such good use of what he had that one who knew him for many years said, "He is quite a remarkable man. In spite of his poor opportunities, he acquired a fund of information that is surprising, and writes a fine business hand."

His last words were, "My work on earth is done and I am ready to go. Take me, dear Lord." Then to his children, "Do the best you can. I must leave you."

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. W. Holmes, after which the interment was in Mt. Hermon Cemetery where the bodies of so many sainted dead wait the last trumpet.

C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

Hornady.—Mrs. W. C. Hornady was born Oct. 29, 1844, and died Feb. 7, 1915. She joined the M. P. Church at Mt. Pleasant while a child. She moved her membership after marriage to Rock Creek and later became a charter member of Graham M. P. Church. She was married Jan. 18, 1866. She was the daughter of George Amick, being the fifth member of that family of children, of whom only one is left, Mr. W. A. Amick, of Kimeville. We have never seen a more consecrated Christian than she was, always giving good advice, especially to young people, always looking on the bright side of life. Even in her last years when she was so sorely afflicted, being deprived of her sight and hearing, she would name over so many things for which she was thankful. And while men and women were passing up and down the streets, perhaps many who were despondent over what they thought were misfortunes, she would be singing some good old hymn, getting more out of life in spite of her affliction than many of us who are so blessed. She leaves a husband and two children, Mr. A. C. Hornady and Mrs. Chas. Hardin, all of Graham, and many relatives and friends to mourn her departure. She was buried in Lynnwood Cemetery. Funeral at the home, conducted by her pastor, Rev. O. B. Williams, assisted by Rev. Geo. Curry, of Burlington. Pall bearers, her nephews, Clyde Hornady, Vistor Hornady, W. F. Amick, G. L. Amick, C. B. Amick, T. A. Amick, J. L. Amick, Percy Amick.

—The leader of the Presbyterian churches in Spain, Senor Don Cipriano Tornos, was, as a young man, a Catholic and court preacher to Queen Isabella II. He was converted to evangelical Christianity by study of the Bible when preparing for a debate against Protestantism. For many years he has been one of the ablest leaders of the reformation in Spain. The largest Protestant church in Madrid, with a membership of over 200, occupies a building which has also been converted from Catholicism. It is a gloomy structure in a narrow street and was once the residence of a leading Inquisitor. Subterranean passages built to torture chambers. For many years the building was occupied by the depot of the Bible Society. Now it resounds with the voices of Sunday school children.—Missionary Review.

—The Chicago Blade, published by the W. D. Boyce Co., announces that the Boyce weeklies, with 6,250,000 readers, will print no more advertisements of whisky, wines, beer, or any other alcoholic beverages. The closing paragraph of its announcement says: "The publisher and employes of the Boyce Weeklies are fully convinced that the use of alcoholic beverages is injurious to everybody. We shall not, therefore, encourage any one to use them by advertising same. Heretofore the advertising of whisky has paid us an average of $50,000 a year. The last contract expired December 31, and we have refused to renew any such business."

—Here is an interesting incident of hat the Word of God will do for a man. Missionary C. T. Willingham writes from Kokura, Japan: "A few days ago we had an interesting character to speak at our services. He is a man 50 years old, who has spent 23 years in jail, having been sentenced to death for killing some one. He was converted in prison 25 years ago, having been incidentally brought in contact with a Christian who was a few minutes placed in his cell by mistake, and heard enough to secure a Testament and study further. He says he memorized the whole Testament in three years and a half. He quotes quite freely."

—A missionary, having preached in a village of North India, was accosted by a Mohammedan gentleman, who compared Christianity unfavorably with his own religion on the ground that when Mossems go to Mecca they find at least a coffin, but when they go to Jerusalem, the Christians' Mecca, they find nothing but an empty grave. "Yes," said the missionary quickly, "that is just the difference. Mohammed is dead. Mohammed is in his coffin. The founders of all these false systems of religion and philosophy are in their graves. But Jesus Christ, who is to rule over all, is not in the tomb. Death could not hold him. He is risen."—The Christian Herald.

MY WORK.

I know not where, O Lord, my work shall be,
Nor in what field to set my plow;
It is enough to know Thou leadest me;
It should not matter where nor how.

'Tis mine to do! it is not mine to plan;
Man is the channel, Thou the flowing stream.
Led by Thy love alone, immortal man
Emerges gently from the error-dream.

Man cannot know where his best work may be,
Nor in what field to set his plow;
It is enough to pray, Love, lead Thou me;
It does not matter where nor how!

WINTER SPRAYING OF FRUIT TREES

Late February and early March is the season for winter spraying of fruit trees, and Mr. F. Sherman, Entomologist of the State Department of Agriculture, is sending circulars on the subject to all who apply. Over 500 copies have been sent out since January 1st, indicating a creditable interest.

The winter spraying is done to control San Jose Scale or other scale-insects, to clean off rough bark, and mossy growths, to kill spores of tree diseases, and to encourage a clean healthy growth when the buds open. It should be given while the trees are yet in dormant winter condition, but it is better to make it as late in winter as convenient, just so it is surely complete before the buds open.

For this spraying use the ready-made lime-sulphur solution, one gallon mixed with 8 gallons of water—no other ingredients needed for this winter treatment. The solution can be bought from Thomson Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md., or the Grasselli Chemical Co., Birmingham, Ala., or from several other firms listed in the circular mentioned. It costs from 10 to 15 cents per gallon if bought by the barrel, up to about 60 cents per single gallon. Several hardware or wholesale drug firms in the State sell it at retail.

A few growers still prefer to make their own solution by boiling 15 lbs. lime and 15 lbs. sulphur together and then add water to make 50 gallons, but this is very troublesome and is no longer considered best.

The circular already mentioned also gives a complete schedule for spraying for the whole year, gives all needed directions for preparing mixtures, addresses of firms which manufacture spraying outfits, etc.

Mr. Sherman makes the estimate that about 250,000 fruit trees, or more, in this State, will be given this winter treatment by the middle of March. These growers are keen men, and would not go to this expense unless convinced that it pays.

—Ruth came home from her first visit to Sunday school, carrying a small sack of candy.

"Why Ruth, where did you get the candy?" asked the family who had gathered to hear her experiences.

Ruth looked up in surprise.

"I bought it with the nickel you gave me," she said; "the minister met me at the door and got me in for nothing."—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Pat and Mike, just after their arrival over here, went into a restaurant. On the table was a bowl of mustard, and Pat took a big spoonful and put it into his mouth. The tears began to roll down his cheeks.

"Pat, what are you crying for?" asked Mike.

"I just remembered," said Pat, "that exactly a year ago today my old uncle was hung in Ireland."

Mike, by this time, had a spoonful of mustard in his mouth, and tears began to roll down his cheeks, too.

"What are ye cryin' for, Mike?" asked Pat.

"Because you were not hung wid your uncle!" gasped Mike.—Ex.

—Prof. August Lange, of the University of Halle, Germany, writing to a correspondent in this country, says: "The churches are full to overflowing, as they have not been for decades. Religious sentiment, which seemed to have become lax with the masses, has taken on a new lease of life." Another correspondent writing from Germany says—"A new religious earnestness has come upon our nation. It is retracing its way to the God of its fathers and therewith to the best source of its strength. There is a stern protest against the frivolity and coarseness of the past. Our faith would never have thought such a change possible, and it is a wonderful joy for all Christian men to see such a holy awakening."

—The Missionary Review reports that at the opening of a Gospel hall recently in Ueno Park, Tokyo, Japan, on the grounds of the great Taisha exposition, the mayor of Tokyo, Baron Sakatani, abandoned his manuscript, to speak in warm extemporized words of the special value which he placed on this building and its work. "It seemed," he said, "insignificant in comparison with the imposing structures about it; yet, in his opinion, it was the center of the most profound reality and value of the whole exposition. It alone represented spiritual achievement; all the rest referred to material things only." Such sentiments seem not uncommon among the leaders of the present day Japan.

HOLMAN EDITIONS IN PURPLE BINDINGS

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS AND LITTLE CHILDREN

These special editions have been prepared to appeal to the child's own interest.

All efforts of the imagination and all descriptions in words cannot make the Land of the Bible as real and vivid as it walks through it by means of Pictures. There has been a wonderful change in that part of the Orient that pictures of its scenes as they now are show the very places as they actually existed in the time of Jesus and the Apostles.

These Pictures illuminate in nature's colors scenes and places taken from nature; and life in the Holy Land in manners, customs, dress and homes as they now exist, but so like to that time that one may imagine themselves seeing about us Jesus as He healed, taught and walked through the streets of Jerusalem. Each picture is accompanied by a complete description of the scene portrayed.

—The Billy Sunday evangelistic meetings that have been running for eleven weeks in Philadelphia came to a close Sunday, the 21st. The North American in its report of the work of the day says it was "the biggest single day in the biggest revival the country has ever known". The evangelist addressed four audiences, totaling some 60,000 persons. The converts for this last day numbered 1,858, the largest number for any one day during the whole campaign. When Sunday left the city twelve thousand people followed him to the station to see him off. The number of converts for the eleven weeks totals 41,724. The free-will offering turned over to Sunday amounted to $51,136.85. On the last day the offering received in the plates amounted to $2,000. The givers of this money thought it was to be a parting gift to Sunday personally, but he would not take any of it, but said it should be turned over to be used for the poor of Philadelphia.

But the costliest sorrow is all our own—
For on the summit we bleed alone."

SOME REFLECTIONS. LETTER TWO.

Brother Editor: Back in the 70's, some 45 years ago, it was my lot to be in school at East Bend, N. C., under the tutorship of a noted Baptist divine, Moses M. Baldwin, and at this school I became acquainted with and roomed with Mr. John Wesley Doub, a young man of deeply pious life and habits. Upon inquiry I found that he was a member of the Methodist Protestanth Church. I wish tosay just here to his credit, that, while being associated with him at this time and age in life, he being older by some years than I, made an indelible impression upon my mind and life that has ever remained potent to this hour. My love for him deepened as days went by and also a high respect for the M. P. Church because of the fact of his being a member. Bro. Doub still abides and I hope he may live long to bless humanity.

Bro. Editor, I write this that every boy of yours who may perchance read this may be reminded of the power of influence and also the possibility of association. O boys, young men, every one who reads this: remember that it pays to be good, to be Christ-like, and you will attract attention not only toward yourself, but toward your relatives, toward have been lost to the church, lost to God.

What a great blessing and comfort to you to have it said in after years by some "wayworn traveler" that you by your prayers and influence, or by your life, helped instamping the image of Christ upon some one who otherwise might have been lost t othe church, lost to God.

Here, I have said, was my first knowledge of the M. P. Church. Pretty soon after, or about this time there was a M. P. society or church organized at Union Hill, which is now on Bro. Austin's work. Here I learned to know and love many of the M. P. ministers. Bro. Guston Spilman organized this church and is now at Morganton. I remember one of his sermons till yet. "Start Right" was his subject. Brother, is it not lamentable how we poor mortals are besieged along life's pathway by dangers both seen and unseen, to upset us morally, mentally, and spiritually, that are liable to take us in an unguarded moment, when least expected, and drag us down to such depths as to not be conscious of our standing? God help us to be humble. God bless Bro. Spilman.

Then Dr. Hamilton, the two Brothers Hunt, and Brother Jeremiah Hunter, the father of our Bro. Aquilla. A better and more faithful man of God never lived than he. You need not wonder at Bro. Quilly being able to stay and serve a people for fourteen years without interruption. He has the material in him that doesn't turn back. Fidelity was the watchword of his father. I remember till yet a sermon I heard him preach at least 35 years ago. His text was Psa. 1: 1, 2. "Blessed is the man who walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly" &c. He said "a godly man would avoid the evil, utterly renounce the companionship of evildoers, and will not be led by them." He described the degrees of sin. The ungodly, the sinner, the scornful. He described at some length the progression of sin, beginning with some little thought, word or act and gradually growing into enormous proportions, &c., and in conclusion he discussed the happiness of the man who scrupulously avoided the wrong, bending all his energies toward God, delighting himself in His word and the daily meditation upon the same. Here I got some help that has ever been of unlimited good to me. I was able to see a structure which every one is building, good and bad, young and old, each one for himself. This building is called Character, and every act of life is a component part of it. Young man, if we will day by day be careful to build our lives with pure, noble, upright deeds, at the end will stand a temple, honored of God and man. But, as one leak unstopped will sink the greatest ship, so one mean, dishonorable, untruthful act or word will forever leave its impress upon our lives. Our minds are God's gifts to men, but our characters we make each for himself. A structure that is not builded in one day or in two, but the product of a long and constant formation. Well, may peace and rest be to the ashes of Bro. Jeremiah Hunter. And the blessings of God be upon his children who are scattered here and there and especially Brother Aquilla, who has been called of God to exemplify the life of his sainted father.

H.

System.—The Bible language is a good system of language, and even for the sake of correct language it is a great thing for us to read in the Bible every day—and all ought to be able to read regularly. We do not have enough of the Bible reading in the churches. My idea is that a S. S. Bible class should read two chapters in the Bible—this as a rule. Intelligent reading is better than casual comments.

The system of churches is one of the finest systems in the world. The system of Sunday schools has been a great system. We read of a wheel within a wheel. Perhaps the Sunday school inside of the church is the inside wheel of which we read. We read that the missionary work is the life of the church, and the mission work, though great, is no finer in some respects than the S. S. work. The S. S. work is rather the mose economical inside of the church. The S. S. should be made both a Bible service and a prayer service. When the S. S. is carried on well it makes a good system of prayer.——The church is the finest part of the nation.——The church involves sacrifice and costs much, and ought to cost a great deal. One trouble is that it does not cost some people enough.——All the benevolent orders and systems are obligated to the church of the Living God for their life and liberty and success.——Obedience in full belongs to the terms of salvation. I once heard of a man who tried to get down on one knee, and the reporter said that the man had to put both knees down before he coul obtain salvation. The case was not strange at all—and the man had to act out his convictions, and put both knees down for the same cause that required Naaman to dip in Jordan seven times in order to obtain his cleansing. All these various acts belong to the same system of grace and salvation.——The world tries to entertain, but there is a lack about the efforts of the world. The meet interests of the church are far superior to the charms of the world.—— There is a sweetness to the music of the church that cannot be equaled by the efforts of the world. The promises of God give assurance of good during this life and also for that which is to come. The mission of the church is to show up the righteousness of God and to show the beauty of holiness. The great part of the mission of the church is to carry the gospel to the poor and to "help the needy."

The more systematic the work of the church the better. The building up throughout is so great and important that all the laborers have an essential part. W. F. Grabs.

BOOZE FIGHTING.

The following was handed us by a Philadelphia commercial traveler, Mr. Lengert, who comes this way occasionally selling printer's ink:

For the Married Man Who Cannot Get Along without Drinks, the Following is Suggested as a Means of Freedom from Bondage to the Saloon.

Start a saloon in your own house. Be the only customer (you'll have no license to pay). Go to your wife and give her two dollars to buy a gallon of whiskey, and remember there are about sixty-nine drinks in a gallon. Buy your drinks from no one but your wife, and by the time the first gallon is gone she will have about eight dollars to put into the bank and two dollars to start business again. Should you live ten years and continue to buy booze from her, and then die with snakes in your boots, she will have money enough to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, marry a decent man, and quit thinking about you entirely.

GOD'S WILL.

And here is a good place for me to explain what I understand by "God's will." To say and mean God's will when we pray is a much wider thing than the passive, submissive attitude we have come to believe necessary. If we pray "Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven," we mean, if we mean anything (and mostly I fear we mean nothing), that we desire for ourselves and everybody and everything to work and live under God's law, which is His will, of course. Natural law is His will just as much as moral law. "Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?" There are the laws of God governing seed time and harvest, many of which are not yet found out and many already known of which we are either ignorant or in our stubborn blindness disregard. We have preached "Whatsoever ye ask of the Faher in my name, He will give it," and too often have forgotten "if it be thy will." It is clearly not God's will for us to plow insufficiently a poor field and sow a few seed and by praying for an abundant harvest obtain it. All such prayer is an insult to divine intelligence. If we expect His co-operation in our endeavors, we must put ourselves into harmony with His will as expressed in field and beast and growing plants. Many a time I have heard the query, why is it that so many men who are what we call ungodly prosper, and so many saintly people live in poverty? I am sure one reason is because, although neglecting the spiritual side of doing God's will, they by accurate scientific investigation and knowledge do His will in material things. They do not build ships with insufficient material and trust to God to carry them over. They do their part and do it well according to the laws of mechanics and nautical management. And while this is not enough to develop a well rounded manhood in themselves, it does put them into working order with the universe of matter. Jesus said "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." I do not know exactly what he meant, but I am sure we have all seen it exemplified over and over again by people who have believed that because they had gotten hold of a great spiritual truth, they were therefore freed from obligation to natural law.

Here is an instance. I once heard of a minister of the Gospel who was leaving home for a preaching trip, when his wife said, "There is nothing to eat in the house." He said, "Trust the Lord," and walked out. How she managed I do not know, but I do know I never wanted to listen to that man preach any more, because it is a man's first duty to attend to the nourishment of his family. We have such instances as the above given to us over and over to illustrate something we Quakers have been taught to believe in. We have not heard the other side—how the wives and children have suffered and to what cruel tests mothers of families have been put to allow husbands and fathers to travel in the ministry. Frankly I do not believe in it. If we expect God's blessing upon our labors, we must work according to His will—that is, His outward as well as His spiritual law.—Mrs. Mary M. Hobbs in Friends Messenger.

BRANCH MEETING.

The ladies of Moriah Church have invited the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, the N. C. Branch, to meet with them in April. Moriah is four miles south of Greensboro on the macadam road. They have recently built a splendid new church. This congregation are prosperous and loyal, so we may expect a cordial greeting at Moriah. Rev. T. M. Johnson is the pastor. Most of the delegates will be entertained by the Moriah congregation, the rest in Greensboro. The date of the meeting and the program will appear soon in the Herald... Elect your delegates and send the names when you fill out your Auxiliary report blanks. These blanks will be sent next week, but if any society should fail to receive one, drop me a card.

these two ministries is in reality the richer and the more effective? Yet the tired woman does not think of counting the wayside influences and services at all in her retrospect of the day's work. If she could do so it would greatly cheer her, and strengthen her for a new day's life when it begins.

"We do not realize the importance of this unconscious part of our life ministry. In every greeting we give to another on the street, in every moment's conversation, in every letter we write, in every contact with other lives, there is a subtle influence that goes from us that often reaches farther, and leaves a deeper impression than the things themselves that we are doing at the time. After all, it is life itself, sanctified life, that is God's holiest and most effective ministry in this world—pure, sweet, patient, earnest, unselfish, loving life. It is not so much what we do in this world as what we are, that tells in spiritual results and impressions. A good life is like a flower, which, though it neither toil nor spin, yet ever pours out a rich perfume and thus performs a holy ministry."

Personal influence is a quality that we cannot dispossess ourselves of, neither can we measure its power for hurting or helping, for good or for evil; but we have this assurance that in the world to come they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever. What an incentive this thought should be to induce us to submit to the operations of Jesus Christ our Saviour in our hearts, so that we may reflect good upon others and be instrumental in turning them into the paths of righteousness.

Boys, are you preparing to plant something that you may make some money to send in for the support of the Home? I hope you will plant some corn, peas, melons or something that you may have some money that you have made yourselves. Learn to make your own money and then use it wisely. Remember Carl Alexander made $1.60 from five cents worth of peas. I wish some of the boys who are convenient to market would buy some water melon seed and see how much he can make from five or ten cents' worth. Let the little girls have a hen and see how much they can make.

Parents, give the children encouragement and teach them the importance of looking after the small things.

OUR GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK.

Names hidden last week were found by Miss Bessie Nicholson, Mrs. S. M. Needham, Mrs. W. F. Kennett, Mrs. Myra Hunter Street, Richard Whitaker, Miss Ethel Blackwelder, Oscar Burgess, Mrs. Will H. Neese, Clifton Ray Reed, J. H. Snotherly, Miss Muriel Cook, Dale Montgomery, Mrs. O. F. Hauser, Miss Lessie Pugh, Miss Mamie Leonard, Master Lance Jennings, and Mr. D. A. Neese. The names were Holmes, Dixon, Hulin, Martin, Quick.. They were found by taking the 1st letter of 1st word, 2nd letter of 2nd word, 3rd letter of 3rd word, and so on.

Five preachers are hidden here. You will have to look twice to find them, perhaps:

1. Bill, go with Adam and Stephen.
2. And you, Sam, start instantly, run!
3. Dividends do save, I ever remember.
4. Gather a red blossom off thorn.
5. Tell Georgiana you will outsing her.

And Mr. D. A. Neese, of Henderson, wants to add to your amusement. He sends the following, saying that four preachers are in hiding in them:

1. Sacred memories and ideal lives last indeed well.
2. Life lived in faith helps gain infinite honor.
3. Never run up before heavy slashing armor.
4. None are more weary of battle.

NOTICE.

On Friday, April 2, at 9 a. m., the members of New Salem Sabbath School will meet at the New Salem church for the purpose of cleaning off the church grounds, graveyard, etc. All who are interested in the church at this place, and those who have relatives buried here, are requested to meet with us, or send contributions, which will help make some very needed improvements on the church and burying grounds. R. S. Caudle, Supt. New Salem S. S.

Watkins.—We offer a brief and well deserved tribute to the memory of our much beloved brother, Augustus Watkins, of Warren county, who died just a few days ago. He was a gentleman, a Christian of the highest type, a true Methodist Protestant, and we know of nothing wrong that he did during his long and useful life. We shall meet thee again, dear brother, in the sweet by and by. His bereaved wife is bearing with Christian fortitude the crushing sorrow. He was about 80 years of age. Sister.

Asheville.—At the last Ladies' Aid meeting the preacher agreed to build a couple of closets under the basement stairs at the church provided the ladies would pay for the materials. They did so and the preacher did so. That's the reason there was no report last week.

We have had some splendid services during the last two weeks, especially the prayer meeting of a week ago last Wednesday. It was everybody's meeting. That's the reason it was so good. Last Thurnday the Baraca and Philathea classes of our church entertained the Asheville Union. It is said to be the best meeting that the Union has held. There were 150 present, and every church in the city was represented.——The Ladies' Aid held a sale last Sat. Cleared $10. They are to hold another one a week from Saturday. The society is doing its level best to meet its obligations.——The story is told of a Scotchman who was about to be married and had such a woe-begone look on his face that his best man said to him:

"What's the matter, Jock? Hae ye lost the ring?"

"No," blurted the unfortunate Jock, "the ring's safe eno'. But, mon, I've lost my enthusiasm."

I've about lost my enthusiasm, and have been going about with a mighty long face for the last two weeks. Cause, only six dollars for the Building Fund after making an appeal through the Herald, and writing personal letters. I don't believe it's indifference on the part of the Conference. If the members of the church realized the strait we are in here at Asheville, I am sure they would not be so unresponsive to my appeals. When we started to build the church here we depended upon your subscription. We are still depending upon it. If you will only help us to dispose of the notes that are ovevrdue, we will take care of the rest. Friends, you who haven't pledged, won't you help a bit?

C. W. Bates.

Halifax Ct.—I had thought that I would keep quiet this week, but I can't do it. We had a splendid congregation at Harmony Church yesterday at 11 a. m. Our membership is very small there, but there are many Baptists in the community and they worship at our church regularly. I have visited some of their homes, and I find them the broadest, most liberal Baptists I have met in the South. I believe that they are really interested in the upbuilding of our church. My members and the Baptists are most hospitably "flooding" me with invitations to take dinner or spend the night with them. Indeed, this is true of the entire circuit and it has made an impression on me. Another thing that has impressed me favorably is the fact that almost every one on the circuit speaks very kindly, yes, lovingly, of the former pastors. It makes me believe that my efforts, even though they may be weak, will be appreciated.

I was rather disappointed with the size of our congregation at Fosburg Camp last night. We have had larger congregations on very unfavorable evenings. I do not know the cause for this, but there must have been some sufficient reason for keeping many from the service. Those who were present gave the very best of attention to the entire service. I like to see people make every part of the service important, thus making the offering and the singing a part of worship as well as the sermon. Mrs. Swaringen and I spent the night with Mr. and Mrs. Doxey. Mr. Doxey's father had just sent a box of fresh fish from Norfolk, and he sent so many that I couldn't eat them all in one night, so Mrs. Doxey sent a portion of them home with me for the little Swaringens. She gave us canned peaches also, and you ought to have seen those fish and peaches devoured at dinner. On my way home Bro. Willie Knight filled my buggy with corn. In spite of the bad roads, my horse has gained over 100 pounds in two months. I have tried to preach nine times a month, and I have lost no flesh, so I am going to add about two more appointments soon. My wife weighs more than she has in several years, and all of the children are "in good order". We have not even had a cold in the family this winter. How thankful people should be for good health! Something important next week.

R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

Siler City Ct.—Pres. Cecil was with us the 17th and 18th and preached at Hickory Grove, Piny Grove, Siler City, Hope, and Zion. His visit was much appreciated and we believe resulted in good to the charge. Bro. Cecil seemed to enjoy his visit among these good people, as he was pastor here 25 years ago. To me it was, as it always is, a great pleasure to be with Bro. Cecil. His claim was easily met.——On the 3rd Sun. we were at Hope. The congregation was large, the service a good one; the S. S. was all splendid. At Siler City at night; the congregation, though right good, was somewhat below the average on account mostly of sickness in the town. The service seemed to be an interesting one. The S. S. was also good, I believe. We are sorry to note the death of Bro. Webster, the postmaster. He was a leading member of the Baptist church.

J. H. Bowman, Pas.

Little Mary, the seven-year-old daughter of Bro. and Sister L. L. Wrenn, of Siler City, was on the closing of the day of last Tuesday, March 16, called by the Savior, the lover of children, from her pleasant home, the loving embrace of her father and mother and the affections of little brother William, to a home yet more sweet and to arms more loving and affectionate. Little Mary was indeed a sweet child, loved by all who knew her. Her devotion was extraordinary. When she thought she had done wrong she would pray to be forgiven. At meal time, even if she ate alone, she would not eat till some one else or she herself had returned thanks. At her doll socials she would return thanks. While our hearts all feel sad at her departure we rejoice that she can now praise and thank the Savior more perfectly. I suppose some loving hand will write an appropriate tribute to her memory. Her pastor,

J. H. Bowman.

SHALL WE HAVE A SALOONLESS NATION?

BY ALLAN SUTHERLAND.

"I am the sworn, eternal and uncompromising enemy of the liquor traffic," declared Dr. William A. Sunday recently in Philadelphia. His call to the men of that city is the call of temperance workers everywhere to the men and women of our country: "Stand by me," he pleaded, "in my fight for your homes, your families and your decency. The saloon is doomed; the anti-saloon element already holds the balance of power in the United States. In God's good time we are going to sing 'My Country, 'Tis of Thee,' and there won't be a saloon in it. We might as well try to dam Niagara Falls with toothpicks as to try to stem the great tide of temperance reform that is sweeping our country."

The great American Anti-Saloon League Convention, which is to be held in Atlantic City, New Jersey, July 6th to 9th, is arousing much interest throughout our land. The five hundred hotels of that city are preparing for a vast army of not less than twenty-five thousand temperance enthusiasts who are expected to be present. Prof. E. O. Excell, the popular choir leader, will have charge of the music. The Hon. John G. Woolley, Hon. Malcolm R. Patterson, Major Dan Morgan Smith, Sam Small, and many other widely known men, will be among the speakers. Encouraging reports are being received almost every day of the progress of prohibition.

The Alabama Prohibition law becomes effective July 1, 1915; and on Jan. 1, 1916, Arkansas, Idaho and Iowa will have State-wide Prohibition, which will make a total of eighteen prohibition states. On March 1, Governor Hammond signed the county option bill recently passed by the Minnesota legislature. The law becomes effective immediately.

It is also cause for boundless gratitude that prominent men once committed to the liquor interests, are now seeing their duty with clearer vision and are bravely working for a saloonless nation. Major Dan Morgan Smith, of Chicago, is a notable illustration of this. Although never personally addicted to the use of strong drink, yet he was for several years the able general counsel of the Model License League. He is now a zealous advocate of temperance, and thus writes: "Arguments that once seemed so plausible have failed me; for the foundation of my faith and the corner-stone of my arguments was the failure of regulation and the success of prohibition. My faith is gone, and my corner-stone is displaced; my structure has fallen, and it remains for me to help build another, founded on a new faith, with a corner-stone as enduring as the truth, and that faith shall be called Temperance, and the corner-stone shall be annihilation. I shall never make another speech in behalf of the Model License League. I am through with the wet side. My intelligence insists upon it; my conscience demands it." Major Smith is now under contract with the National Anti-Saloon League as one of its regular national campaign speakers. He recently made a great plea for temperance before an audience of not less than seven thousand in Texas. His first address in behalf of temperance was delivered at the Ohio State Convention of the Anti-Saloon Leagoe. It will be recalled that five hundred and four thousand votes were cast last fall in Ohio for prohibition after ninety days' work. This was the largest number of prohibition votes ever cast in any one State.

Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, who is spoken of as a candidate for President on the Republican ticket, has announced his platform, in which the fourth plank is "The Saloon must go. Sobriety must be the rule of conduct for the future!" He is the first man prominently considered as a presidential possibility in a dominant party, who has declared himself for nation-wide prohibition.

With such leaders, with our hope in God, with a great nation to be saved from the curse of rum, surely we, too, should heed the command given of old to Joshua: "Have I not commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage, be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

All persons shall be recognized as delegates, who are appointed by local church, Sunday school, Gideons, young people's societies, temperance organizations, W. C. T. U., Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A., or District or Annual Associations, Synod or Convention of a religious body, or by any State Board of Trustees or State Headquarters Committee or any other organiation co-operative with the State Department. Each local organization as indicated in the above is entitled to one delegate and one alternate.

If Pastors, Y. M. C. A. Secretaries and others entitled to representation, will forward at once the names and addresses of their delegates and alternates to the Anti-Saloon League of America, Westerville, Ohio, literature and other information will be mailed to them immediately.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

In conversation recently with a brother minister he made the statement that we as ministers are not enough in earnest, surrounded as we are by those who are unsaved, and that we have the privilege of influencing to a better life. I fully agree with what he said and will say further that we as blood-bought sons and daughters of God, whether ministers or lay members, shoult realize what it means to be saved to serve, not that we can do anything to merit salvation, but should show by our lives after our sins have been forgiven that we feel some degree of responsibility.

The age-long question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" cannot be ignored but demands an answer, whether we wish it or not. And while men are saying they are not responsible for their neighbors the conviction is forced upon us that we do not stand alone, but that we are a help or a hindrance to the one we have the opportunity of reaching and helping in what may prove to be the critical hour in his life.

Personal responsibility then we cannot shirk but must realize that there is a work for each of us.

Bishop Berry, of Philadelphia, says, "Every normal minister of Jesus Christ is an evangelist," that is, he will lead sinners to the Saviour of the world. Further, he says, "It is also true that every real Christian in the ranks of the laity is an evangelist." What a high and holy calling to lead men to the foot of the cross! How we should prayerfully and earnestly look to our own condition that we be in line with God's will for us as His representatives here on earth! How our hearts should yearn for that one that is unsaved and our daily prayer be, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" And as one writer says, "Pray as though it all depended on God, and then go to work as if it all depended on us."

Our work should be with the Judgment Day in view, not that we should feel gloomy by any means; in fact, quite the contrary, knowing that we will reap the benefits of our labors and the reward is sure; but we should be sure we have left nothing undone, either by way of help to some one, or by way of preparation for ourselves.

I firmly believe we little realize how the lack of preparation cripples us when we are not aware of it.

The question for me to answer now is, If at the judgment bar I meet one of my friends whom day after day I had the chance to lead to Christ and failed to do so and see that one turned off on the left hand into outer darkness, could I then truly say that I am free from the blood of that one.

It seems to me that while we hear so much about the responsibility of the church, and it is right that we should, that we bring the question home to ourselves as individuals.

Am I supporting my church in every way by attending not only her Sabbath morning and evening services but prayer meeting and monthly meeting as well? When it is stormy do I make an extra effort if need be to attend and in fact be loyal in every way, being sure of this one thing that in being loyal to my church I am being loyal to my own best interests? We should not be satisfied with attending the church services, but be ready when opportunity is given to testify or pray, not necessarily a long prayer, or give testimony, but with a heart warmed by the love of God, conscious beyond a doubt of our acceptance with Him, and with a desire akin to Paul's, that others that are groping their way in darkness might be brought to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. The effort, feeble though it may be, will not go unrewarded, but the one who thus responds to the promptings of the Holy Spirit will be the stronger as a result of their obedience and the spirit of the meeting will be just that much better and the faithful ones who bear the burden of the meeting will be strengthened and encouraged. On the contrary, if the one on whom the impression is made refuses to obey, to a certain extent deadness settles down over the service as well as upon the individual. The opportunity has been lost and the enemy of our souls has gained a decided victory. The next time the impression will not be so strong, the ability to respond has grown weaker, however much that one may desire to be faithful to the Lord.

Again quoting from Bishop Berry, "We need to be brought under conviction, aroused from our lethargy, renewed by the Holy Spirit and endued with power for personal service. The passion of the Christian propaganda is not upon us." We are in the habit of saying "they" when it should be I or me.

D. L. Moody realized his personal responsibility and the world knows the result.

Joshua of old realized the same when he said, "Let others do as they will, as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." Even unsaved people often admire the courage and determination of the one who steps out boldly on the Lord's side.

May we as members, not just of our own church, but most of all as members of the body of Christ, make the most of our opportunities to reach the unsaved and to build up believers, and live so near the Lord that we will prize highly the privilege; and our meetings will take on new life and added interest. Thus we will be able to reach the ones that need the help of the church and whom the church needs as well and they will be brought to the Savior through he faithfulness of the ones who have caught a vision of service and are willing to assume the responsibility.

OUR UNCONSCIOUS INFLUENCE.

In an article on the unconscious influence which we exert over each other, F. N. Zabrieskie mentions the case of a woman who had occasion to stop for a moment in the street to speak to a mechanic, and then walked on; the interview quickly passing from her mind. O year after he came and told her that he had not touched a drop of liquor since that day. She wondered why he should have told her of it, until informed that on the occasion, she had stepped a little aside while talking with him, because, as he supposed, his breath was offensive to her from the fumes of liquor. He had instantly said to himself, with a sudden consciousness of degradation: "Have I reached the point where this lady shrinks from me as from one unclean? It is time for me to stop short!" She surprised him by saying that her movement had no such motive. But the effect had been the same, and her unconscious influence through the Witness for Truth in his heart had done more to make him a sober man than many temperance lectures would probably have done.

It is a serious thought, that all of us are daily exerting an influence upon other persons which we may be wholly or in great part uncons cious of. Whether this influence is for good or evil, depends upon the kind of moral amosphere we carry about with us. If this is impure it will injure others; if it is contaminated with harshness, anger, impatience or evil speaking, it will either repel or else it will beget its like in others. On the other hand if it be filled with love, gentleness, goodness, self-restraint and other fruits of the Divine Spirit, it is these that will go out to cheer and to bless. As the light of a lamp or the fragrance of a flower, a part of ourselves reaches outside of, and beyond ourselves.

On this subject, Rev. J. R. Miller says: "Every good man is constantly scattering these unconscious, unpurposed influences. A mother works hard all day in her home, keeping her house in order, preparing comforts for her family, watching over her children. She can tell in the evening just how many garments she has mended, how many rooms she has swept, and the entire day's history; but all day long she was patient, gentle, kind. At every turn she had a bright smile for her children; she had cheering words and fond attention for her husband; she had a pleasant welcome for the friends who called; in all these things she was unconsciously scattering seeds that will spring up in sweet flowers in other hearts and lives. FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Liberty Church.—I preached on Tuesday night to a small congregation—small on account of rain and sickness. The pastor was present; he was rather on the sick list though he made several pastoral visits during his stay in Liberty. The work so far as I could see on the St. Paul charge is doing very well. Bro. Millaway is acceptable both as a pastor and a preacher and appreciated by his people. Claim paid.

Siler City Ct.—I spent two days on this field preaching at each appointment except one, with a fair attendance for week-day appointments. The pastor and people are working together, and they are expecting to do a good year's work and raise all of the collections. They have an enterprise under consideration which, if consummated (and I have no doubt it will be) will mean much as to the future of the circuit. Bro. Bowman is a good worker and he causes things to come to pass. He is popular. Claim paid.

Mt. Pleasant Ct.—Bro. Troxler came to Bro. J. H. Bowman's where I spent the night for me and we drove to Mt. Pleasant, and had a fair attendance at 11 o'clock. Dinner at the parsonage. Preached at Pleasant Union at 3 p. m. to a very attentive congregation. This is a splendid charge, good churches, both almost new. Mt. Pleasant people are considering building S. S. rooms. They paid all assessments in full last year and are starting with plans which if carried out will do the same this year. Bro. T. took me to Julian. Claim paid.

Randolph Ct.—Bro. Pike, the pastor, met me at Julian and we spent the night with Bro. C. H. Hardin. We met all the appointments on this field but Level Cross: snow and rain hindered us from going to this one. Attendance at Gray's Chapel not large, good attendance at Bethel and Shiloh. This charge has not a good financial plan and fails to pay the pastor's salary and general interests. This can be corrected by good planning by the quarterly conference. The peeople are well pleased with their pastor, and they should see to it that he receives his salary and also help him raise the different collections. This field i s amply able to pay the pastor $600 and their present general interests assessment. My claim paid at three of the churches.

I preached at Julian on Sunday night to a good congregation. Spent the night with Bro. Thos. Coble.

March 22, '15. C. A. Cecil.

Shiloh, Randolph Ct.—Our pastor, Rev. W. M. Pike, filled his appointment the 2nd Sun. at 11 a. m. with an excellent sermon. A very large congregation was present and all enjoyed the sermon. Last Sunday, our president, Bro. Cecil, preached at this church at 3 p. m. He gave us a most interesting and helpful sermon. Preparations are being made to hold an Easter service on Easter Sunday. Our Supt., Mr. M. Brown, is confined to his room with la grippe. We hope he will soo nbe able to be out again.

Julian, N. C., March 22, 19155.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Ct.—Pres. Cecil visited this church March 19 and preached a helpful sermon. Reorganized S. S. 3rd Sun. in Mar. J. E. Stafford was re-elected Supt., S. A. Alexander Asst. Supt., Minnie Suits Sec. and Treas., Sallie Amick Asst. Sec., Eula Swing organist. Bro. Troxler preached a good sermon yesterday. We are preparing to hold Easter service first Sunday in April. Walter G. Causey, Rep.

Siler City.—On last Wed. night Pres. Cecil preached for us, and it was indeed a good sermon. We had a good congregation out to hear him, and I think it was thoroughly enjoyed. We had a very good Sunday school last Sun. Bro. Bowman was with us Sunday night, and as usual had a good sermon prepared for us. He took for his subject Patience, and he made it so plain that I think all present can readily see where we need to have more patience. I think that his sermon should help to all present.

Mrs. Edgar Woody.

Mt. Hermon Church.—Pres. Cecil preached to us on the 12th at 11 a. m. to an appreciative audience, though not so large. His sermon was plain, practical, and helpful. Bro. Cecil said, in speaking of the improvement of our church building, "I have learned that Mount Hermon Church generally does things when she gets ready and not before, so I shall not say much about the material improvement." I trust the members will co-operate with the trustees in finishing the addition to our church.

Bro. Whitaker preached to a large congregation yesterday from the words, "The people had a mind to work."

We are planning to have a Easter service. A committee has been appointed to arrange the program.

Hubert L. Isley, Reporter.

I am sorry to not that Mr. W. C. York does not regain his health. We miss him at the church. Mr. W. A. Williams is also on the sick list. Mr. Wm. Burns who was partially paralyzed about three years ago is slowly growing worse. Mr. Ernest Williams of Danville, Va., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Williams. Mr. Chas. A. Hamlin came down on the Sun. evening train for a little visit to home folks, returning this morning to his business in High Point. Mrs. W. R. Hamlin, Rep.

Hope, Siler City Ct.—Pres. Cecil made his annual visit March 18, and preached a good sermon, and we regret very much that there was not a larger audience. Last Sun. was Bro. Bowman's appointment here, and although the day was a little unfavorable and the roads muddy, a good attendance was out. Bro. B. preached a good sermon on Sin —something all have to be constantly fighting. He urged the young people especially to guard against it. The S. S. is holding up splendidly, especially the Baraca and Philathea classes, and we hope the interest may continue to grow. We are glad our people are considering purchasing a parsonage and hope they may wisely consider the proposition.——There is sickness in our community, but I hope the sick may soon be restored.

Rose Hill, Pageland Ct.—We had a good day yesterday; we had a good S. S. with much interest. Bro. Quick then preached us a good sermon, enjoyed by all; at the close a good number stood for prayer. Two joined the church. I would like to see reports from the other churches on Pageland Ct. Brethren, report to the paper and let us know what you are doing. A Worker.

Matthew's Chapel, Greensville Ct.—We have not organized our S. S. yet, but hope to organipe soon and that we may have a good school. We want all to come and take part in the good work. Rev. D. T. Surratt filled his appointment with a good sermon and had a large congregation. We like our pastor and wish him success in his new field. We wish he could be with us more, for I think it would help our S. S., for we have a very small S. S. now and a few have to carry it on. I hope after the spring opens up that more will come. Mrs. W. W. Clary is now improving; hope she will be well soon. Carrie Lynch, Rep.

Burlington.—We had a very good S. S. last Sun., although the attendance was not as large as we would like to have. The church services were as well attended as usual, and Bro. Curry gave us two good sermons.

The C. E. S. met about 7 p. m., and Miss Hettie Durham was the leader. The attendance was good; and a splendid service.——Prof. H. C. Stout conducted the midweek prayer service last week. The Life of Moses was the subject of the meeting. Prof. Stout is an excellent teacher and his talk on the subject was highly enjoyed and greatly appreciated by those present, because his interpretations and explanations were so clearly and vividly given.

Our pastor has proposed to the class leaders of our church that they have cottage prayer meetings each week in the future for the benefit of those who are not able and those who do not attend the regular prayer meeting at the church. The plan seems to be a good one, and provides that the meetings be held one each week in different sections of the town. This plan, if worked, will furnish something for the class leader to do.

The Executive Committee of the church held a meeting Monday afternoon in the office of Bro. R. F. Williams. Some matters of importance pertaining to the financial interests of the church were considered, among which was the inauguration of a movement to pay off a large portion of the church and parsonage debts. This committee is holding frequent meetings and is hard at work on the problems that are confronting and will confront our church this year.——Rev. and Mrs. Curry went to High Point Monday morning to visit Bro. Curry's brother, Mr. Wrenn Curry, who is sick. They returned on the evening train.

Bro. Curry conducted the funeral of Mrs. Lucinda Clapp at Graham last Sat. Mrs. C. was a member of the Baptist church and was buried at Mt. Zion Bap. cemetery.

We failed to mention last week the return of Miss Margie Loy, one of our best and most faithful young ladies, who spent two months with her uncle at Jacksonville, N. C.

Mrs. Charlotte Crutchfield, who has been sick for an indefinite period, is recovering slowly, and we trust she will soon be completely recovered. C. B. Way.

Mt. Zion.—Perhaps your readers think that we have gone into winter quarters, but we have not. Tho' our S. S. has been small for some time, we hope that now, since Spring time is here again, our classes will soon be large.

The S. S. collection for the Children's Home Sun. was $1.76. Our pastor, Rev. Edw. Suits, preached a very strong, uplifting and able sermon Sunday, also Sunday night. His sermons make us feel our duty and draw us nearer, too. This community was saddened last Tuesday morning when we heard that during Mon. night the death angel had visited the home of Mr. Wm. N. Brown and had taken his wife, Mrs. Mary Jane Brown, home, to her home beyond the skies, of blissful rest and love. Aunt Mary, as she was lovingly known and called far and near, was surely loved by all who knew her, for, as many have said, to know her was to love her. In early life she professed faith in Christ and lived a devoted Christian life. Her church, to which she had been a member for many years, has lost one of the greatest workers and prayers. She has warned and led numbers and numbers to the altar and prayed with them until they found peace, then she would rejoice with them. I could write on and on of the Christian traits of this deceased one, and then not say enough, for those who knew her in life will say: Too much could not be said. A goodly woman has left us to receive her reward. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved and lonely husband.——Our S. S. Supt., Mr. K. D. Brown, will be our delegate at the Young People's Convention at Thomasville.

Union Grove.—We have a good report today; attendance, 47; col. for Children's Home, $1.90. Then our pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese, came to us with a most helpful sermon, also Sun. night with another. We are all glad for preaching day to come and to have Bro. Neese and wife in our homes. She was able to be in S. S. again today.

FUNERAL DISCOURSE BY REV. S. W. TAYLOR.

Mrs. Jacob Tise.—This is an unusual occasion. We are often called to mourn the loss of friends and loved ones, but it is seldom that they are taken by pairs. Today we are here to pay our parting respects to two noble women—a mother and a daughter, a grandmother and a great-great-grand mother. In the lifetime of the oldest persons such occasions are rarely witnessed and our hearts are deeply moved by the very strangeness of it. And yet we cannot suppress the feeling that there is in it the providence of a beneficent Father. It is but fitting, it seems to us, that these two—this mother and daughter—who had gone so far in life together and had each grown faint in the journey, should pass out together and begin life with each other in the spirit land. The occasion, therefore, is one of mingled joy and sorrow. We mourn because we have to give up those we love; we rejoice in the grace of God, through Jesus Christ, that sustained them through all the varied experiences of the long lives and brought them down to their graves in triumph and hath given to them together an inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

The older of these two deceased persons, and the mother of the other one, Mrs. Margaret Pauline Tise, familiarly known as "Aunt Peggy," was in her ninetieth year; her 89th birthday was the 19th of last Nov. She was born 1825,

In her early girlhood, Mrs. Tise and her sister Lucinda, came to Salem to live. It was here that she became acquainted with Mr. Jacob Tise. This acquaintance ripened into love and on the 5th of Sep., 1844, they were united in marriage and lived together in an unbroken devotion for 59 years, when death claimed her husband.

To this union were born four children, two sons and two daughters. They are: Mrs. S. A. Ogburn, Mrs. Ann Masten, Mr. J. Cicero Tise, and Mr. Charlie Tise. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the two surviving children, Mrs. Ogburn and Mr. Cicero Tise. Mr. Charlie Tise preceded his mother in death several years and her other daughter, Mrs. Masten, will be laid to rest with her today.

The father and mother of Grandma Tise have long since departed this life and all of her brothers and sisters have preceded her to the spirit world. Her death, therefore, takes from earth the last surviving member of the family of Henry and Bettie Kiser. Grandma Tise was a plain, unassuming woman. Her early days were lived at a time when school opportunities were few and she did not, therefore, have the advantages of a school education. But she was endowed with a rich store of practical sense and to this was added the blessing of a strong body. With these endowments she brought to her home much of the energy, industry and economy that enabled them to get on in the world. Her religious life dates back to her early years. With her husband she joined this church as a charter member more than sixty years ago. Only recently she told her pastor that the workmen boarded at her house while they were building the little frame church that was first erected on this spot. In all these years she has remained faithful to the church. When she was able she was a regular attendant at the services, and since she has been enfeebled from age and physical ailments, she has occasionally come over in her invalid's chair and always seemed glad to be here. During her recent illness and only a short time before her death she told her pastor that she felt she would go to Heaven when the end came here. That faith, we trust, has already become a reality and that there it may be given to her the perfection of all virtues imperfect here and the fulness of all joy incomplete here.

Since the death of her husband eleven years ago, Mrs. Tise has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Ann Masten. Much of this time she has been shut in because of bodily affliction. During these years she was tenderly nursed and cared for. But a void had come into her life; her companion no more appeared when she looked for him; old age with its imposing weight had settled upon her; the daughter that had been by her side so steadily, and that she had learned to depend upon implicitly, could no longer minister to her, who doubts that she did not want to go and in her going God was answering the cry of her heart for companionship with those whom death had taken from her. We mourn but not without hope; we shall miss her, but our spirits shall not rebel. Rather we shall cheer our hearts with the prospect of meeting her in God's summer land.

Mrs. Martha Masten.—We turn now to speak of the deceased daughter. Martha Ann Masten was born in this place March 5, 1849, and was the child of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Tise. Her life from her childhood was spent in the city where she was born, and she was living when death came, and had lived there for many years, within a stone's throw of the place of birth. It was here she played when a child. It was here that she attended school and church, and in her young life it was here that she found her social enjoyments.

In 1872 she was married to Mr. John Henry Masten, with whom she lived happily fourteen short years, when death invaded her home and claimed her husband. To this union were born six children, two of whom survive and mourn today the loss of this mother. They are Mathias and Pearl Masten. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. S. A. Ogburn, and one brother, Mr. J. Cicero Tise, and seven grandchildren. Left a widow in middle life, the responsibilities of her home and the management of her business affairs devolved upon her. Only those who have been thus left can fully appreciate what it means. She never shrank from her task. In this as in all other obligations that devolved upon her throughout her life she tried to do her duty.

As a wife and mother she was devoted and true. No sacrifice was too great for her to make for her home and her loved ones. While her mother was living with her, Mrs. Masten gave to her in the most beautiful devotion her time and the strength of her own frail body. There was nothing she was not ready to do night or day for the gladness and comfort of those she loved. We take her out today cold in death and in bodily form she will never be seen again in her home that she blessed for so many years, but there will ever remain there in increasing sweetness the aroma of her beautiful life.

As a neighbor she was thoughtful and accommodating. Her unselfishness, so beautifully exemplified in her home life, extended likewise to her neighbors. She was always ready to help when help was needed. When her neighbors and her friends wept, she wept with them; when they rejoiced, in prosperity she showed her joy. The entire community will feel and does feel her loss. In her Christian character Mrs. Masten was strong and beautiful. She became a Christian i nearly womanhood and united with Centenary church, where she remained a member for some time. She later placeed her membership in this church with her father and mother and here it has been for nearly a quarter of a century. Faithfulness, consistency, loyalty and humility characterized her religious life. When she was strong and more active she came regularly to the Sunday school and assisted in the work by teaching a class. Her place at the preaching service was never vacant unless she had some good reason for being absent. Like the Psalmist, she was glad when there was an opportunity to go to the house of the Lord. She was an attentive and helpful listener, and her pastor was always helped by her presence in the congregation. Indeed, she was the pastor's friend. In all of his efforts to promote the church and the Kingdom of Christ he had her sympathy and prayers. Her attitude toward the church is fittingly expressed by these beautiful words of Timothy Dwight:

"I love thy Kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The church our blest Redeemer saved
With His own precious blood.

"For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and toils be given
Till toils and cares shall end."

When the Ladies' Aid Society of the church was organized 28 years ago, Mrs. Masten became a charter member, and during all the years that have intervened, has been a faithful and efficient worker in this strong and helpful organization of the church, as was also her mother, Mrs. Tise. In recent months she has not been able to attend the meetings regularly, owing to her enfeebled condition, but her interest in the society has been unabated. Her presence at the last meeting, held at the house of Mrs. O. W. Hanner in February, gave great gladness to all the members. We knew then that she was feeble but we little thought that she was meeting for the last time with this organization to which she had meant so much. She will be missed by the entire church. Her old associates in the church who have worshiped here so long with her and enjoyed so much her Christian friendship will miss her. Her pastor will miss her. Her presence in the congregation and the eagerness with which she always listened was such an inspiration to him. We shall all miss her but none will feel her loss more keenly than those women of God with whom she has labored for so many years.

It is delightful to contemplate the life of one possessing so many virtues, beautiful and attractive. Those who knew her best and were closest to her heart were most impressed with the beauty and strength of her character. She was a retiring woman and never paraded her virtues, but she had them. Buried deep in her heart, they gave to her life a charm and a beauty that makes us loth to hide even her mute form from our sight. A man of wide and close observation remarked last Sunday as he watched her battling against death, "She is one of the best women I ever knew." She was not perfect, and if her mute lips could speak today, she would disclaim any such attainments. But one can't suppress the feeling and the impulse to say that if every life were like hers, earth would be more like God's paradise.

Our hearts go out in deep feeling for the family and relatives and we shed with them the sympathetic tear. There is for our comfort the blessed assurance of the glorious Gospel of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

May those who are sorely bereaved feel its healing balm in this hour of their distress and resolve that by the grace of God there shall be some day a glad reunion.

Ray.—Green C. Ray was born Jan. 15, 1829; joined the Methodist Protestant Church at Concord in his youth and died Feb. 27, 1915. He married Hannah Newlin who died the 1st day of June, 1903. To this union were born six children, three of whom died while young and three are still living to mourn their loss. Uncle Green, as he was commonly called, made no display of his religion, but was firm and did not meddle with the matters of other people. He had no great ambition that would lead him into the strife of others, but moved on in simple life, doing his part as God had given him to see it. His disposition was cheerful and full of genial warmth, but he knew and appreciated the value of a man.

Now that he has gone from among us, there is a painful lack not only in his home, but among all those upon whom he smiled while he lived and moved among men. May grace be multiplied to those who feel his loss most keenly and may they, as he, look on the sunny side of life and be a blessing to the church and to humanity.

Little Mary Wrenn Dead.—On last Tuesday afternoon at the hour of four, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Wrenn and bore away their beautiful little girl, Mary Emily. She had been sick with pneumonia only four days, when our Heavenly Father saw fit to claim her as His own. She was just past seven years. She was such a sweet child, and it seems awfully hard to give her up, but sometime we will understand. The funeral services were conducted Thursday morning by the pastor, which were indeed very impressive. The little body was laid to rest in the Oakland cemetery at this place.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep
From which none ever wakes to weep:
A calm and undisturbed repose
Unbroken by the last of foes."

Yadkin College Ct.—We expect to have Bro. H. A. Garrett and the children from the Home with us at Bethesda on 2nd Sun. in April and have an all-day service. We are looking forward to this day with delight and pleasure. We are anxious to meet our children and hear them sing and speak, also to have Bro. Garrett to address us, telling us about the Home, the children, and how they are cared for. Let everybody come and bring a nice offering, making Bro. Garrett and the children glad they came. The children will be met at Lexington and conveyed out and lodged in the Bethesda community on Saturday eve. Children, we want to give you a good time and of course we are expecting you to give us a good time on Sunday. Yours for the Master, H. L. Powell, Pastor.

Gaston Ct.—The official members will please take notice that the second quarterly conference will convene on Sat. before the 2d Sun. in April in Fairfield church, at 3 p. m. A full representation is desired.

Union Grove: This church is located on the north side of the railroad in the west end of town. Not many years ago this was a country church. The town has grown and enlarged her borders until now Union Grove is a church in town. As a town church it is badly located. The. So. Ry. cuts off from the south and the immediate neighborhood on the north is not yet built up and is not likely to be soon. Out in the country people will travel miles and miles every Sunday, through mud, storm and sun, to get to church. People in town think the distance of half a mile too far for them to walk to church, especially when mud and inclement weather are to be faced. The only hope for our church here, as I see it, is to remove the barriers. The only way to do that is to take the church to the people. This can be done without infringing on the rights of any other church. Our members here are faithful and "hard to beat." But the location, that's what I am talking about: it doesn't draw. I hope this matter will be considered promptly and faithfully.

Mr. I. F. Newton of our church here and Mrs. Emma Webster of Bessemer City were married Mar. 19, at 8:30 p. m. The writer, assisted by the bride's pastor, Rev. Mr. Helms, of Charlotte, performed the ceremony. A large number of people were present to witness the happy event. The contracting parties have our best wishes for long and useful lives. Will H. Neese.

Gastonia, Mar. 22.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Ct.—Our pastor, Bro. H. E. Waldrop, filled his regular appointment at Zoar last Sun. The congregation was not as large as it would have been if the weather had been beautiful. Bro. Waldrop's subject was "The Companionship of Jesus." The sermon was a very impressive one, one to which the congregation listened attentivvely. Bro. Waldrop is a young minister, having preached only two years. He has been with us fifteen months, having served on this work last year. The people are pleased with him. We are sure the Conference could not have sent us a better man. He is young and full of energy and business ability, just the man to bring Zoar and Mecklenburg circuit to the front.

Our Sunday school is getting on its feet again. It is a pity so many Sunday schools in the country churches have to go into winter quarters. We very often think it is the members' fault. Officers and teachers have been elected and we hope to have one of the most successful Sunday schools we have ever had and one of the most prosperous years in church work. Let us put forth a few special efforts. It was decided to hold prayer-meeting once every week in some one of the members' homes. We hope this will continue and that each and every one will take an active part.

Wilson-Boswell.—At the home of the bride in Graham on Thursdey evening, Mar. 12, Miss Cara Boswell became the bride of Mr. Robert F. Wilson, of Mebane. Miss Boswell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Boswell, of Graham. Mr. Wilson is a son of H. B. Wilson, of Mebane. The ceremony was performed by the writer in the presence of a few friends of the contracting parties. We wish them a long and happy union. Glad to have them worship with us on last Sunday morning. We are also very glad to learn that they will reside in Graham.

O. B. Williams.

Death of an Infant.—Little Edna May, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Knight, died at their home in Rocky Mount last Friday, Mar. 12th. She was four months and twelve days old and their only child. From their home much of its brightness and joy has gone. God takes for Himself His little sunbeams to light up His Kingdom above; dark sorrow is left behind. She was the pride of their home. Knowing the sadness which death leaves when it comes we offer the bereaved ones our warmest sympathy and earnest prayer that in this great sorrow may God who can heal the broken-hearted be sufficient for them. Weep not, fond parents, God knoweth best. If He early plucked His lily it was to save it some rough blast. The remains were brought to Enfield Saturday morning and tenderly laid to rest in the family burying ground about six miles west of Enfield. 'Tis sad to part from our loved ones but by and by we will meet where partings are no more. Lucy Moore.

THE TWINS' APRIL-FOOL.

WHEN strangers saw Wesley and Lesley they said, "Why, I cannot tell them apart! They look exactly alike!" but people who knew them well always seemed surprised.

"April-fool, Mother!" shouted Leslie, as his mother endeavored to draw out her chair at breakfast on the first day of April. The chair was tied fast to the table legs.

Mother stooped to untie the cord, and Father looked displeased as he helped her.

As Mother lifted the cover to the sugar bowl, she found a parcel tied to it. Very patiently she untied the many wrappings, and in the very center was a package of choice sweet pea seeds—Mother's favorite flower.

AUNT MILLY'S EYES BLAZED WHEN SHE SAW HIM.

"April-fool, Mother!" cried Wesley, his eyes dancing, "for of course you did not expect to find anything nice in an April-fool package."

Everyone laughed, and Mother looked very happy.

"There," thought Lesley, angrily, scowling over his oatmeal bowl, "that is the way it is—everything that Wesley does is all right!"

"I wonder," thought Father, as he chanced to glance at his sons' faces, "how people can think our boys look alike!"

Old Aunt Milly, the colored nurse, lived at the end of the lane. As she was working happily in her little kitchen, she heard a great noise among her chickens.

"It's dem old hawks!" she cried, seizing a broom and hobbling out as fast as she could.

Behind the fence Lesley was holding his sides with laughter over the sight of four fine young pullets rushing wildly about the yard, tied together with a long cord.

Aunt Milly's eyes blazed when she saw him.

"You go 'long home, Mastah Lesley," she cried angrily, "or I'll tell your Pa on you!" And she rescued her frightened pets, who were still cackling wildly.

But scarcely had she taken up her work again when there came a sharp rap at her front door. Muttering impatiently, about "that bothering little Lesley," she opened the door. From the knob dangled a package.

"I's jest some nonsense," declared the old woman, "an' I've half a mind not to open it!"

But her curiosity was too great, and she tore off the paper. Inside was one of the gay handkerchiefs Aunt Milly loved to wear about her shoulders.

"April-fool, Aunt Milly," cried Wesley from behind the big rose bush.

"Well, I never was so fooled!" cried the old nurse, delightedly. "You jes' wait, Mistah Wesley!"

When she came out with a bag of her delicious cookies, Lesley appeared sulkily from behind the fence.

"I don't need to worry 'bout him: Wesley will give him half the cookies," she said, watching them scamper down the lane. "But nobody ain't going to make me believe them two children look alike!"

"Who will go up to the front chamber and bring me the big package up there?" asked Mother, when the boys came home to supper.

"Lesley and I, of course," answered Wesley cheerfully.

"You're always speaking for some one else," grumbled Lesley, as they went into the dim chamber. "I can't see a package here. Why couldn't Father come for it?"

"How do you do, little Glad Boy and little Mad Boy," said a voice from the dusky corner.

"Grandma!" shouted both boys in delight. And they hurried her eagerly down stairs, while Mother said smiling:

"April-fool, sons!"

Lesley looked at Grandma's smiling face and kind eyes.

"I am just as happy as I can be," he said, leaning against her knee, "because Mother April-fooled us in such a dandy way. I guess it does pay to play nice April-fool jokes!"

"I can see, now," said Grandma, looking fondly at the two bright, smiling faces, "why people think our boys look alike!" ALICE M. ASHTON.

THE POSTAL CARD - - - - W. F. Kennett, Editor.

On Wednenday morning, March 17, at 5 o'clock, Mrs. J. H. Clark died at her home on North Cherry St., Winston, N. C. Thursday a. m., her body, accompanied by her husband and a number of Winston friends, was brought to Stokesdale where funeral services were held in the M. E. Church, South, conducted by the pastor of Flat Rock Ct. Sister Clark had been a member of Flat Rock churrh for more than 45 years. She was a good woman, a kind and loving mother and grandmother. Her husband and one daughter, Mrs. H. G. Moore, and seven grandchildren survive her. That she had many friends was evidenced by the large congregation at her funeral and by the beautiful floral offering. Her body was laid to rest in the Stokesdale Cemetery.

Mrs. W. N. Brown.—When we read a few days ago that Mrs. W. N. Brown had entered the Father's House of Many Mansions we thought at once of the Shunammite woman who caused a room to be built for the "man of God." The home of Wm. N. Brown was ever the preacher's home and Sister Brown never tired of providing for and entertaining the "man of God." Her name was Mary; once we told her she was Mary and Martha combined, for like Martha she was very industrious, and like Mary she loved to sit at the feet of Jesus. I have an idea that first and last more than one hundred different preachers have been entertained in that pleasant home on the banks of Grassy Creek almost under the shadow of the Pilot Mountain. All former pastors and all preachers who have spent any time in the Mount Zion community will miss Sister Brown should they go again. She and Bro. Brown had no children and he will be very lonely without her. May the "God of all comfort" sustain him until he shall join her on the other shore.

Riley.—Mrs. Mary Riley was called to her eternal home in early morning on the 19th of March, 1915. She was 83 years old, and for 60 years had been a faithful member of the Methodist Protestant Church at Chestnut Ridge. She was a great sufferer during her last days but she bore it with patience. The best that can be said of her is that God spared her through a long period of time and that by far the greater part of it was spent in His service. Having finished her work she came to her grave in a full age like as a shock of corn cometh in his season. She enjoyed the esteem of all her neighbors. She leaves behind one son and one daughter who have also given their lives to the service of the Master. The funeral services were conducted by the writer in Chestnut Ridge Church on the 20th of March at noon and her body laid to rest in Chestnut Ridge cemetery. J. A. Burgess.

Fairview and Gibsonville.—We are glad to see the weather opening up fine, and very glad to see our Sunday schools growing. On last Sunday we had a very large attendance at service, which was very much enjoyed by all present. Fairview church is doing a good work and their Sunday school is growing and the young people are working. We are getting up the program for the Easter service. Mrs. Sallie Huff has charge of the children at Gibsonville and Bro. Farlow at Fairview. We are looking forward to good services at both churches. Our special meeting will begin at Gibsonville on Monday night after the second Sunday in April. Bro. Millaway will be our helper. Bro. Bethea will be with us at Fairview on Tuesday night after the first Sunday in May. We are praying for a good meeting.——In my last writing I made a mistake in regard to suit of clothes, reading as if Bro. Owen was the giver; he presented the clothes as a gift by the members of the Gibsonville Church. J. W. Self.

Roanoke Ct.—We had a good day yesterday (Sunday) at Whitaker's Chapel. We had a fine congregation, a good service and received nine new members into ahe church by certificate. The Sunday school is preparing to have Easter service to be given Easter at 3:30 p. m.——At Roseneath we had a house full of people, a good service, and reorganized S. S. and elected officers for S. S. Spent Sunday night at Mrs. Ivey's, and this morning (Monday) she loaded us up with about four dollars' worth of fresh meat to bring home. T. E. Davis.

P. S.—Sunday school at Roseneath will have Easter service also. T. E. D.

"OLD-FASHIONED METHOD."

Some excellent addresses made by Vice-President Marshall and other eminent people have appeared in the press referring to the present-day need of giving children home training in religion.

In this connection will you let me urge the claims of an "old-fashioned method of providing this training. I allude to the custom—once widenpread, now almost obsolete—of having "family prayers," worship of God morning and night in the home. This practice furnished also the "foundation" on which to build the edifice of "church going." Why has this custom fallen into disuse? Why not restore this strong influence for good in the home, this connection between home and church?

Never in their history have our churches done more for the people than they are doing now. If religious training of children is not what it should be, and if church attendance is not increasing it is because we home people are requiring of ministers, Sunday school teachers, and other church workers to do our work as well as their own—a well-nigh impossible task. Their vast work is being marvelously well done. We are requiring of them, in addition to this, to make good the foundation for interest in the church and attendance there—this "foundation work" being our work. and being in great measure neglected by us as long as we neglect worship of God in our homes, Bible reading, and prayer at the family altar, night and morning.—Washington, D. C., Times.

THE STONE THAT REBOUNDED.

"O boys, boys, don't throw stones at that poor bird," said an old, gray-headed man; "I am afraid the stone will rebound, and hurt you as long as you live!

"Flfty years ago I was a boy like you. I used to throw stones, and, as I had no other boy very near me to play with, I threw them till I became very accurate in my aim. One day I went to work for an aged couple of the name of Hamilton. They seemed very old people then. They were very kind to everybody and everything. Few had so many swallows making their nests under the roofs of their barns; few had so many pets that seemed to love them as they. For seven years a bird had come, after the long winter was over, and built her nest in the same place, and there reared her young ones. She had just returned on the day that I went there to work, and they welcomed her back. She hopped about, as if glad to get back. In the course of the day I thought I would try my skill upon her. She sat upon a post near a spot where she was to build her nest, and looked at me with all confidence, as much as to say, 'You won't hurt me?' I found a nice stone, and, poising my arm, I threw it with my utmost skill. It struck the bird on the head, and she dropped dead! I was sorry the moment I saw her fall; but the deed was done. All day long her mate flew about, and chirped in tones so sad that it made my heart ache. Why had I taken a life so innocent, and made the poor mate grieve so? I said nothing to the old people about it, but through a grandchild they found it out; and, though they never mentioned it to me, I knew that they mourned for the bird, and were deeply grieved at my cruelty. I could never look them in the face afterwards as I had done before. They have been dead many, many years, and so has the poor bird; but don't you see how that stone rebounded and hit me? How deep a wound it made upon my memory! How deep upon my conscience! Why, my dear boys, I would make great sacrifices to-day if I could undo that one deed. For fifty years I have carried it in my memory, and if what I have now said shall prevent you from throwing a stone at a poor bird, that may rebound and deeply wound your conscience, I shall rejoice."

The boys thanked the aged man, dropping their stones, and the bird had no more trouble from them.—Published by the Tract Association of Friends.

DROWNING THE SQUIRREL.

When I was a boy six years old, one morning, going to school, a ground squirrel ran into his hole in the ground before me; as they like to dig holes in some open place, where they can put out their heads to see if any danger is near. I thought now I will have fine fun. As there was a stream of water just at hand, I determined to pour water in the hole till it would be full, and force the little animal up, so that I might kill it. I got a trough beside a sugar-maple, used for catching sap, and was soon pouring the water in on the squirrel. I could hear it struggle to get up, and said, "Ah, my fellow, I will soon have you out."

Just then I heard a voice behind me: "Well, my boy, what have you got there?"

I turned and saw one of my neighbors, a good old man, with long white locks, that had seen sixty winters.

"Why," said I, "I have a ground squirrel in here, and am going to drown him out."

Said he: "Jonathan, when I was a little boy, more than fifty years ago, I was engaged one day just as you are, drowning a ground squirrel, and an old man came along and said to me, 'You are a little boy; now if you were down in a narrow hole like that, and I should come and pour water down upon you, would you not think I was cruel? God made the little squirrel, and life is as sweet to it as you; and why will you torture to death a little innocent creature that God has made."

Said he: "I never have forgotten that, and never shall. I never have killed any harmless creature for fun, since. Now, my dear boy, I want you to remember this while you live, and, when tempted to kill any poor little innocent animal or bird, think of this, and mind, God doesn't allow us to kill his creatures for fun."

More than forty years have since passed, and I have never forgotten what the good man said, nor have killed the least animal for fun since that advice was given, and it has not lost its influence yet. How many little creatures it has saved from being tortured to death I cannot tell, but I have no doubt a great number, and I believe my whole life has been influenced by it.

The minister may be so occupied by many thoughts and interests that the care of the little flock committed to him by Christ takes a very secondary place.—British Weekly.

RUSSELL'S "STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES."

In the imprint of his books, Charles Tate Russell appears as the "International Bible Students' Association," and again as the "Watchtower Bible and Tract Society"; but it is the same Charles Tate Russell all the way through. He or they or it has long had before the public a series of books called "Studies in the Scriptures", each volume represented to be a "helping hand for Bible students." A brother in Wilmington, N. C., recently sent us two volumes, "Series I., The Divine Plan of the Ages," and "Series II., The Time is at Hand." We have been somewhat familiar with Russell's teachings for more than twenty years. These books were written about twenty-six six years ago. Since that time Mr. Russell—"Pastor Russell," he calls himself—has gathered to himself a great following in many lands. He has done this, first, by the character of his teachings, and, secondly, by his business management. He is a man of great business capacity, a man of parts in several ways, and would have been a man of influence in any sphere of life. His wife convinced the courts that they should grant her a divorce from him, with alimony, but human courts are sometimes unjust in their decisions, and we must not lay too much stress on this fact. Again, Mr. Russell has been charged with moving from state to state and with putting his property into the hands of corporations to cheat his former wife out of the allowance made by the court, but a man's motives are hidden, and his critics may be mistaken here. In his writings, Mr. Russell refers to the original Greek in a way to create the impression that he is a thorough Greek scholar, but he had to admit in a Brooklyn court that he could not read Greek. These facts perhaps somewhat prejudice one against Mr. Russell as a religious teacher, but his teachings should be judged apart from his character as a man, and so we propose to judge them.

We have not time for a detailed study and criticism of his voluminous writings. The gist of his teaching may be stated in a few leading doctrines. He deals with great questions, as the titles of his books indicate. From the Bible he works out the exact date of the second coming of Christ, the beginning of the Millennium, the restoration of the Jews to commanding temporal power, and—most important of all—he indicates precisely the ultimate fate of the impenitent and persistently wicked.

In our measurement of Mr. Russell, there is one thing that we have been unable to make out: that is, whether he himself believes what he writes. Some think that he had a concealed purpose to enrich himself at the expense of his dupes, who, thinking that the end of the age was just at hand, would freely turn over to Mr. Russell their property to be used in the propagation of his teachings. But we need not question the sincerity of Mr. Russell. The question is. Does he teach the truth, or does he wrest the Scriptures in an effort to make them support his theories? Our answer to this is: most decidedly the latter. He takes highly figurative and poetical language as literal. He lays great stress upon the mysterious numbers mentioned in the Book of Daniel. Sir Isaac Newton spent much time in studying the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation and finally came to the conclusion that they could not be understood until after they had been fulfilled. But where the great Newton was unable to proceed, Mr. Russell has gone on easily, figuring out the exact date of the world's greatest future events. For instance, he predicted in his book that the Gentile power would be overthrown in 1914 and the Jews be restored to favor as the ruling temporal power. This prediction he based on Daniel's prophecy.

Note how differently Jesus treated this same question (Acts 1:6, 7). His disciples asked him after his resurrection and before his ascension whether he would at that time restore the kingdom (temporal power) to Israel. His answer was, "It is not for you to know times or seasons which the Father hath set within his own authority." Why did he not refer them to the book of Daniel, and tell them that the time is plainly indicated there?

Didn't Jesus understand the Book of Daniel as well as Mr. Russell does?

The year 1914 has now passed and the temporal power was not restored to the Jews.

Mr. Russell states that Christ's second coming took place in 1874, but where is the evidence? What great change in the course of the world's history took place in that year?

But the one thing that makes Russell's teachings so popular with men of a certain class and by far his most dangerous and deadly doctrine is that concerning the fate of the wicked. He teaches that death is annihilation, that when men die, that is the end of all consciousness to them. Yet he teaches that those who were once annihilated will be recreated (just how new creatures could be identical with those formerly utterly destroyed he does not stop to explain) and given a second probation under better conditions (under the rule of Christ instead of under the rule and temptation of the Devil), that this probation will last at least a hundred years, and that those who fail to become perfect in this probation will be utterly destroyed again, this time forever. How absurd this is, and yet this is the teaching that is catching men, destroying for them the significance of the present life, and causing them to postpone serious reflection to that second and easier state of probation.

As an illustration of his perversion of Scripture, Mr. Russell makes Paul's statement that the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death mean the annihilation of the wicked! As if the destruction of life were the same thing as the destruction of death!

Mr. Russell is a plausible writer to the hasty and unwary reader. He has an air of great wisdom about him, and refers almost contemptuously to the interpretations of the great men of unquestioned honesty and goodness and learning who have studied and commented upon the Bible in the past.

They that are deceived and led away by such a man are to be pitied, not only in view of the end to which Russell's teachings will lead them, but in view of the lack of good judgment which makes them the easy victims of such deceivers.

Russellism is a huge system of monstrous Bible misinterpretation and perversion.

THE BIGGEST THING THAT HAS HAPPENED FOR OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

The biggest thing that has happened for our young people will be the Convention of Young People of the M. P. Church which is to be held in Thomasville April 23rd, 24th, 25th. Now I really believe this. And if the Convention is not a BIG thing it will be somebody's fault. Whose will it be? It will be, first, the fault of the pastors, perhaps, who fail to encourage their young people to attend the convention: or, second, it will perhaps be the fault of the older people of the church who fail to encourage the young people and send them to the convention; or, in the third place, it may be the fault of the young people themselves, who fail to take advantage of this splendid opportunity to attend the convention. I appeal to these three classes in behalf of the convention.

Brother pastors, you know, without my telling you, that the M. P. Church in North Carolina is doing very little for her young people. You also know that it is important that we look after our young people and save them to the Kingdom and to our church. Then, if you do recognize these two things, won't you see to it that the young people from your field of labor come to Thomasville; and not only see that they come but you come with them. Your presence will add materiall, to the success of the convention. And I doubt that you could spend your time and what little money it takes to come in a better way.

A word to the older people. We younger people do not want to take your places in the church until after you can no longer hold these places. We do, however, want to be ready to fill the vacancy made by your departure. Some of these days you old soldiers who have borne the hardest of the battle will have to lay down the armor and pass on to your reward. Then some of the younger people will have to step into your place or it will be left vacant. Now the thing I hope you will do is to encourage the young people and help them to get ready to pick up your armor when you lay it down. We hear our people lamenting the fact that the "old-fashioned class meeting" has declined. I, like some of you, have been wondering why this is true. Have you ever thought that perhaps it is due to the fact that the older people have died and a younger generation, who know not how to do these things, has come into the church? In other words, we have failed to train our young people. The convention will be depending upon you to see that your young people come to Thomasville. Will you send them?

In what way can the young people be responsible for the convention's failure? All the young people will have to do to make it a failure is just simply to stay away from it. This convention is to be a convention of young people especially. And if you fail to come the convention will fail that much. If you stay away the convention cannot help you to the extent that it will help you if you attend. This is a great opportunity for the young people.

What are some of the things that will be worth while? First, you will have the opportunity of meeting and getting acquainted with some of our brightest and best young people. That in itself will be worth your time. I believe we become better and wiser as we enlarge our circle of good and wise friends. It seems to me that any young man or woman would be glad of the opportunity of knowing these young women and young men who are interested in the same church. A second thing worth while will be the opportunity you will have of meeting with and hearing some of our ablest M. P. men. Professor Feeman of the Westminster Theological Seminary is to be with us during the entire convention. Here is an opportunity you must not miss. You must know and hear Dr. Feeman. He is intensely interested in young people and in young people's problems. He loves young people, and he is such a lovable man that you will always be glad you have seen and heard him. Dr. Lewis, President of Western Maryland College, will be at the convention on Sunday. I need not tell you what you will miss if you fail to hear him preach the convention sermon. The BIGGEST preacher in the Methodist Protestant Church? Yes, I think so. And what is more, I have never heard a bigger one in any other church. And then our own North Carolina men will be worth listening to. Already I have heard people say, as they referred to the program, "I wish I could hear him," and, "I know that will be good", etc.

A third thing worth while will be that intangible, indescribable something called enthusiasm. As you mingle with the delegates, as you listen to the addresses, as you hear the questions relating to our church work discussed your heart and soul will be kindled with a desire to go back to your home church and do something for the Master. You will be fired with a zeal to go back there and wake up some slumbering Sunday school, or to arouse some dead C. E. Society, or some midweek service. This is the thing after all that will count. All the other things are only means to this end. The convention is not simply for the pleasure of the delegates who attend. It is for all our people. It is for the good of our church work throughout the North Carolina district. And the delegates will be expected to return to their home church with such renewed zeal and enthusiasm that others will catch the spirit of the convention so that the work of the Kingdom will be quickened and greatly hastened. If something like this is the result of the convention, then will the promoters (The Board of Young People's Work) of this undertaking not have planned and worked in vain.

Yours for making the convention the BIGGEST thing for our young people, and for making it all redound to the glory of our Master,

Linley W. Gerringer,
Sec. Board Young People's Work.

WORDS FROM BRO. RAPER.

Dear Bro. McCulloch: We enjoy our paper and are glad to see the good reports etc. I am improving as fast as could be expected, considering. I preached in the First Baptist Church a few Sunday nights ago to a packed house, and there were nine preachers there. I have preached three times for Rev. W. E. Abernethy in the First M. E. Church. He was away one Sunday. I addressed a union S. S. last Sunday at 3 p. m. I addressed the M. P. S. S. today, Easter service, as Bro. Morris is at Caroleen in a special meeting. I have responded to every call except one. I was asked to conduct two prayer meetings the same night; of course I could conduct only one. I am rather short of breath yet, but I am gaining. If I were not away over here to one side I would suggest that I might help some of the brethren in special meetings, but it would cost so much to go and come. The people here speak kindly and are very friendly, and use me at every service I attend. My custom and wish has always been to go when I could. I preached before my doctor wanted me to—he was there. Times are hard and close which embarrasses a man with no income. As you know everything is high and rent to pay besides. The way looks gloomy indeed at times. Our expense has been quite a good deal. I have done one day's work in six months—that was last Saturday. I was offered a position in a grocery store permanently, but have reasons for not accepting. I would have to sell cigarettes, cococola and other soft drinks, besides I could hardly get into the house Saturday night.

I have preached 24 years in the regular itinerant work, and the doctors say my affliction was no imprudence of mine whatever. "It was stricture of the stomach and appendicitis." Those who know me best know we have lived close all along and are now. Will you offer a fervent prayer to Almighty God to open up some way. Our oldest daughter, Hattie, has had a very serious operation since I was operated on. She is now improving right fast. With best wishes I am fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

P. S.—Bro. Morris has been in to see me a number of times and has been of great encouragement to us.

CATHOLICS AND PUBLIC OFFICE.

The anti-Catholic agitation is not on the ground of Catholicism as a distinct religious system. In this country where everyone is permitted to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience, no man is to be persecuted on account of his religious beliefs. On the other hand, no citizen should seek office because he is Catholic or Protestant or Baptist. We should deprecate Baptists seeking office on the ground that they are Baptists. There is undeniable evidence that, in some sections, Catholics as Catholics, rather than as citizens, seek to dominate government, whether city, State or national. On this point the Watchman-Examiner wisely says:

"We do not know how far-reaching and influential this so-called anti-Catholic campaign was, and in all sincerity we greatly deprecate the movement. It is a pity that sectarianism should become an issue in any election, or that the denominational affiliations of any man should be used for or against him when he is a candidate for public office. But having said this much, we desire to say one or two things more which we shall illustrate by a little story. It is declared on good authority that once upon a time a father turned his six-year-old son across his knee and proceeded to give him a good spanking. As the spanking proceeded the lad buried his sharp, white teeth in the calf of his father's leg. With great indignation the father cried: 'What do you mean by biting me, you young rascal?' The boy looked up saucily and said: 'Well, who beginned this war?' This is the question that we would propound to the secular papers and to our Roman Catholic friends.

"No anti-Catholic movement would ever have been thought of, either in New York or Ohio, had it not been manifest that for years Roman Catholics have been gradually corraling municipal, State and national offices. The Roman Catholics have carried this matter of office-seeking so far that all the political parties have been chained to the wheels of their triumphal chariot. In the city of Boston, at the election just before the recent election, all the nominees of all the political parties were Roman Catholics with a single exception, and that exception was Mr. George W. Coleman, whose nomination and election were a personal tribute to him as a social worker. It is not an uncommon thing for Roman Catholics to hold 75 per cent. of the offices of a city, when the Roman Catholic population is only 25 per cent. of the total population. It is not disputed that Roman Catholics are more easily mobilized and controlled by their religious and political leaders than any other class among us. It may be said that it is perfectly natural that Roman Catholics should cling together and help elect one another to office, and we might as well recognize the fact that always and everywhere it is their purpose to do this very thing. No Protestant can be innocently indifferent to this state of affairs. This is not a Roman Catholic country, and we may well shudder at the thought of it ever becoming such a country, for wherever Roman Catholics have undisputed sway civilization has gone from bad to worse. Of this Spain and Mexico are good illustrations. That Roman Catholics should attempt to rule a country that it not a Roman Catholic country is audacious to the last degree."—Baptist World.

DR. CARROLL'S CHURCH STATISTICS

Dr. H. K. Carroll has published his "Bulletin of Church Statistics" for 1914 under the auspices of the "Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America". We may assume that they are approximately correct, though Baptist statisticians have found a good deal of fault with his handling of Baptist figures in the past. He gives the grand total of church members in the United States to be 38,708,149 for 1914 as against 37,945,071 for 1913, a gain of 763,078, an increase of two per cent. Some of these figures are estimates and the Roman Catholic figures mean population less fifteen per cent., and so are not parallel with the rest. The Roman Catholic population is 13,794,637, an estimated gain of 136,850. The actual membership of Protestant denominations represent few more adherents than the fifteen per cent. discount allowed for the Roman Catholics. In round numbers there are fewer than forty million church members out of a total population of a hundred million people. If we allow thirty million for the children not counted and not yet decided, we have still thirty million adults out of the churches, about as many as the adults in them, for many children are members. There is plenty of room for work and reflection in this situation.

The Roman Catholics have not increased as rapidly during 1914 as for some years, perhaps because of the effect of the war on immigration. They have gained a million and a quarter since 1910 and five and a half million since 1900. Boston reports nine hundred thousand Catholics and is no longer a Protestant city.

The figures given for the Northern Methodists are 3,603,265 and for Southern Methodists 2,005,707. Southern Baptists number 2,592,217, Northern Baptists 1,238,323, the Negro Baptists 2,018,868. The the Southern Presoyterians 319,602. The Disciples report 1,363,163 and the Episcopalians 1,015,238. The Lutherans (all kinds) number 2,444,970.

These figures are impressive on the whole. During 1913 the gain was 1,420,604 as against 763,078 for 1914. The Methodists gained 231,460, the Roman Catholics 136,850, the Baptists 122,125, the Lutherans 56,248, the Presbyterians 56,019, the Episcopalians 28,641, the Disciples only 452. No gain at all is reported for Christian Scientists, 85,096 being given (the figures for 1907).

The total number of Baptists in the United States is given as 6,179,622 and of Methodists 7,328,829. There are 42,710 Baptist churches reported with 57,537 ministers. There are 41,925 Methodist churches with 62,416 ministers. The total number of churches of all denominations is given as 178,290, with 225,613 ministers. There was an increase in 1914 of 1,441 churches (very small) and 3,212 ministers (very large).

Figures may lie, but they are interesting, and we give our readers these statistics for 1914 for their meditation and reflection.—Baptist World.

The influence of Christian men and women is being felt in many commercial centers in China to-day. In one of the busiest streets of Peking this sign is hung out every Sunday: "To-day is worship day." This is striking to the Chinese, who for forty centuries have worked without ceasing, bartering and selling every day in the year. The President of the Government Normal School in Peking is an officer in one of the Methodist churches, and a prominent member of the Board of Communications is Superintendent of the Sunday school. Similar leaders for the next generation are being trained in mission schools to-day.—Exchange.

BETTER THINGS.

Considering the scope, flexibility, and indefiniteness of this subject, a treatment of it might be in such a general way as to cover all improvements in general, but vitally touch nothing. The writer to the Hebrews uses the phrase to compare the Old and New Dispensations in what they have to offer their followers; and what this world has to offer in comparison with heaven. In the 6th chapter the writer states the fundamental doctrines of the Christian religion, viz., repentance from dead works, faith in God, baptism, laying on of hands, resurrection and eternal judgment. These are all important and necessary, and must not be neglected, but the writer in Hebrews exhorts to leave them for awhile to study the better things that God has prepared for those who love him. Just as the carpenter proceeds to erect the house upon the foundation already laid, so the writer in Hebrews proceeds to picture to us, setting upon these six pillars, namely, repentance, faith, etc., the better things God has reserved in heaven for the faithful. A glance at the pillars shows that all must precede the believer's entrance upon his heavenly inheritance. The building or structure must do credit to the foundation, and seeing the wonderful foundation Christ has laid, we are not surprised to learn that it is beyond man's powers to fully comprehend the structure, i. e., the better things.

The New Dispensation offers a better ministry, better promises and a better Covenant. The ministry of the Old Dispensation was un-satisfying and the heart continually craved a more complete and less disappointed ministry. In the Old Testament times, the people couldn't sing with any degree of assurance, "Earth hath no sorrow that heaven cannot heal." Now the physical as well as the spiritual man is ministered to, with the promises ringing in our ears, "Say to the righteous, it shall be well," "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," and "There remains therefore now a rest for the people of God." The old covenant was testified to and sealed with the best this world had to give, but the new Covenant is testified to and sealed with the most precious gift that heaven could furnish. The old fades in the presence of the new as doth the moon and stars in the presense of the brightness of the sun. The prophecies awaited the coming of the Messiah to be filled with meaning. How barren and comfortless would be the promises foretold by the prophets, if it were not for the Christ.

We now have a better tabernacle, better sacrifices and better possessions. The best this world can build can only be temporal, fading and perishable; change and decay around us; marbles crumbling to dust, stone walls rotting down, our best friends growing old, with "antique" and "obsolete" becoming fads with the worldly, but the Christian rises above the perishable and with confidence exclaims, "We know that if this earthly tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. The most perfect animals this world could afford were offered for sacrifice under the Old Covenant, but now we have offered once for all the best Heaven had; the Lamb of God who beareth away the sins of the world; not into the wilderness to return or soon to be followed by another, but removed as far as the East is from the West, and that once for all times. Peter tells us of an inheritance, in corruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away and we are exhorted not to cast away our confidence, which hath great recompense of reward; knowing that we have in Heaven a better and an enduring substance.

The new age ushered in by Christ provides a better death, resurrection and a better hope. Death is now represented as a gentle sleep to the righteous, the gate to larger things and in fact to the real life itself; instead of the old world view of extinction and sinking into everlasting oblivion. The dust returns to the dust and the spirit to God who gave it. When Elisha or any of the prophets raised one from the dead, he was only raised to enter the frail life, surrounded with all the sorrow, troubles, afflictions that formerly existed around him; knowing that soon he must die again and enter the same state as before. Since Jesus announced that "I am the resurrection and the life", and has taken His place at the right hand of the Majesty on high, and there intercedes for us; has told us that He has gone to prepare a place for us and will come after us some day, we are assured of a better resurrection than the old world knew. Soon the scales will fall from our eyes, the shackles drop form our feet, the darkness be scattered and the soul will take its flight to a congenial clime. Then and not till then will the hungerings and aspirations of the soul be satisfied. "Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." Heb. 6: 19.

Here we have the soul represented as a ship, the world as the sea, and that bliss beyond this world, the distant shore to which the ship is bound. If we undertake to build our hopes on other foundations than Jesus Christ laid and follow any other guidance than the Holy Spirit's leadings, we will make shipwreck of faith and meet with a spiritual calamity greater and more disastrous than was the physical Titanic catastrophe in mid-ocean. In this same figure, the anchor makes its way through whatever intervenes and buries itself firmly below the bottom of the water in the mud securely; even so our hope in Christ penetrates all haziness, scepticism, doubts, all forms of unbelief; surmounting all obstacles, wading through all afflictions until it fastens itself sure and steadfast to that within the veil. As God knows no defeat, and is righteous to give all that He has promised, we have confidence that the object of our hope in Him shall be obtained. We as servants of Christ, do only our bounden duty and what we leave undone is so much greater than what we get done, that we are thrown back on the righteousness and faithfulness of God to carry out His promises for the realization of these better things and not through any merit of our own. It would be unrighteous in God not to do what He promised, which is impossible to imagine.

Christ justified the mystery accompanying the better things by saying that pearls were not cast before swine, nor would He reveal himself to the world. There is no waste nor useless things done in the divine economy of things. Pearls would be understood and appreciated as well by swine as Revelations by sinful and unregenerate men. Only those who have experienced the new birth can appreciate the message in Revelation, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and I will give to him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." Many good things and people are unappreciated, because their worth and standing are unknown.

Little did Potiphar think that he had one of the greatest men of all ages for a slave and doubtless Jehtro never dreamed during Moses' long sojourn with him that he was entertaining the greatest law-giver of all ages. A lady once criticising one of Turner's sunset paintings remarked to him, "I can't see all that in a sunset," Mr. Turner replied, "Don't you wish you could?" If we cannot understand, comprehend or even endorse all that the other man or denomination sees or feels or vice versa, let us not be disturbed over that, trusting that after while we will be able to understand and appreciate one another better. We know that no man in this world has a complete revelation of God's plans and the things God has reserved for us, so we content ourselves, knowing that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." By faith we are persuaded:

"When all created streams are dried,
Thy fulness is the same:
May I with this be satisfied
And glory in thy name!"

A FEW MORE BROKEN REMARKS.

(Sunday morning). "Where is that auto going?"

"To a junk pile."

"Ah, I mean the people in it. Where are they going—to Old Nick?"

"No, he is in the car with them, as there might be an accident and he would be needed."

"Needed! What for?"

"To escort those who change worlds to their future home."

"Does he go with all the Sunday morning auto pleasure riders?"

"Yes, and with the all-day Sunday visitors. He plans the trips."

"Why does he go to that much trouble?"

"To keep that family and the family they visit from going to church."

"Does he succeed all the time?"

"No. If the family they visit love the Lord better than they love the Devil the visitors go with them to the sanctuary, go back home or stay there until the family returns.'

"To leave them would be an insult."

"Perhaps so, but to fail to attend divine service would insult the Lord."

"Tight place."

"Only a choice between the Lord and Satan."

"There! Who is that?"

"A doctor going to see a patient."

"Is the Old Boy in there with him?"

"No, he is not."

"Why?"

"He has had no invitation. That doctor will be in the church by eleven o'clock if possible."

"Where is that car full of people going?

"To Sunday school and preaching."

"I have heard you say that the Devil is a more regular attendant at church than some members, so I guess he has a seat in that car."

"No, the Lord and the Devil never ride together to divine worship."

"When are Satan's busiest seasons?"

"On Sunday morning he is very busy, as he has to visit every sinner and weak-kneed church member within easy reach of every church, to keep them from going or sending their children to Sunday school. He then rushes off to the church, especially in cities and towns, to hustle the Sunday school children off home before preaching as he considers it quite dangerous for them to hear the Gospel plainly an dearnestly proclaimed. Children have a better understanding than we give them credit for. When he gets those jobs off his hands he is partially at leisure except to arouse an ass or two and lead them out during service and see that the wealthy do not give any more than the poor when the hat comes round. Special meetings are right troublesome. He has to furnish his tattlers with material and start them to lying several months prior to the special meeting season so as to have feelings hurt to be healed by peace-makers during the special effort for the salvation of the lost. I suspect that many of this feelings-hurt gang are out and out servants of the Devil or they would not wait until the battle was on to have their wounds healed. Possibly half the others have not sense enough to be lost after all, but it takes valuable time. He also has to get up frolics (called socials) during a revival to draw the young people's minds away from serious things."

"I do not believe he could be that mean."

"He managed to get up about three last summer that I know of."

"Where did he hold them?"

"In church members' homes."

"I never heard of the like before."

"Neither have I. He has so much individual work to do, but if he can get some preacher to say from the pulpit that his church is right and all others are wrong, he can then sit down and rest."

Still in Ambush.

MARRIED.

At their lovely country home six miles east of Greensboro, on Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Troxler gave in marriage their daughter, Blanche, to W. T. Bowman, of Liberty. The home was prettily decorated for the event, the color scheme carried out being green and white. The parlor, where the marriage vows were spoken before an improvised altar of ferns, ivy and potted plants, was made more beautiful by the soft light of dozens of white candles. The candlesticks in which these candles burned were heirlooms, having been used at the wedding ceremonies of the mother and grandmother of the bride.

While the guests were assembling, Mrs. Leslie Troxler, at the piano, rendered a very charming program of music. Just before the entrance of the bridal party, Miss Lola Long and R. N. Barbee, of Greensboro, sang "Look Down, Dear Eyes." Promptly at 7:30 o'clock, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, Rev. E. C. Murray, pastor of the bride's church, entered and took his place at the altar. Next came Miss Flossie Andrews and R. G. Troxler. The bride, entering from the gift room attended by the maid of honor, Miss Mayo Troxler, was met at the altar by the groom with his best man, T. Kemp Causey. The bride was radiant in a gown of white crepe de chine and carried a lovely shower bouquet of carnations and sweet peas.

After the ceremony, a delightful reception was tendered the guests. Receiving at the front door were Mrs. E. L. Wagoner and W. R. Troxler. Miss Eunice Long and Miss Carolina Holt kept the bride's book. In the dining room, a tempting salad course, followed by hot chocolate and cake, was served.

The array of beautiful presents attested the popularity of the young couple. The bride is well known here, having visited in the city often. The groom is a son of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bowman and is a prosperous young farmer.—Greensboro Daily News.

At the home of Rev. O. B. Williams in Graham on Easter Sunray morning at nine thirty o'clock Miss Gertrude Holt became the wife of Mr. Silas N. Myers of Burlington, N. C. The wedding party arrived at the parsonage at 9:15 which was 15 minutes later than the time appointed, but the delay was caused by the heavy snow fall on Saturday; the big "Hudson" car which the party came in made a slow schedule. The bride and groom were accompanied by a sister of the groom, Miss Myrtle Myers, of Burlington, and a cousin of the bride, Mrs. Nellie Bullard, of Haw River. The wedding was in the east room of the parsonage, and the sun was shining very brightly in through the window, and seemed to make a bright path just in front of the happy couple. May their life always be as bright to them, as the rays of the sun on that beautiful Easter morning: as the earth was covered with snow, may their lives be covered with blessings from above. Mrs. Myers is a daughter of S. D. Holt and is a member of the M. P. Church at Haw River. Mr. Myers is a son of the late Alfred Myers of Alamance county. The happy couple left on the east-bound train for Raleigh and points east. They will reside in Burlington after their "honeymoon." They have the best wishes of their many friends.

A Friend.

When those who love us fade from sight,
And we no more with them can be,
The thought that cheers our lonely night
Is this: Dear Lord, they are with Thee.

Laura A. Whitmore.

WHY SHOULD YOU GO TO CHURCH?

Because the Church is the mightiest agency on earth for the realization of human progress.

It is the efficient advocate and ally of every great reform of our day.

It stands for the highest thinking and the most sacrificial doing.

It presents the noblest ideals of life and points the way to their realization.

It furnishes the motive and the incentive for the expression of sympathy and compassion.

It is the supreme character-making institution in the world. It is the only organization under the sun doing business for God exclusively.

It is the divinely appointed and accredited agency for the realization of the kingdom of God on earth.

It is the avenue through which men and women walk up the heights to God.

It relates mankind to God savingly and satisfyingly and to one another in joyful fellowship.

In its advocacy of civic and social righteousness it does more than all other organizations or institutions combined to make crime difficult and virtue easy.—Christian Evangelist.

ARE THE BRAHMANS ALSO AWAKENING?

The Brahmans of India seem to have had an awakening from the sleep of centuries. A convention of Brahman priests has been held at Amritsar, the second largest city of the Punjab, attended by a thousand delegates. This convention adopted a remarkable set of resolutions, "some of which laid violent hands upon venerable Brahman customs and superstitions accepted by some 217,000 human beings." One of these resolutions expresses the opinion that the Brahmans ought to work for a living and not subsist upon charity. Another enjoined upon all Brahmans as their first duty to get an education. A third advocated that Brahmans should disregard the present-day sub-castes among themselves and intermarry among themselves with due regard for consanguinity. A fourth urged all Brahmans to put an end to unnecessary and wasteful marriage and funeral ceremonies. Perhaps the most radical resolution was the injunction upon all Brahmans to support Brahman widows and for the care for the orphan and poor Brahman children. The president of the convention is reported as urging upon all that they maintain a high moral character and purity of mind, and be truthful and honest in all their dealings. This convention and its conclusions may well be regarded as one of the by-products of Christianity in India.—Missionary Review.

HOPEFUL INDICATIONS IN CHINA.

Old China is passing through a transition stage which is all the more interesting because of the uncertainty as to the ultimate political form that will be assumed. The common people, however, are unchanged and little moved by the kaleidoscopic maneuvers of the forces playing in the political world about them. The ordinary peasant cares little who governs the country as long as his life and property are rendered secure. One traveling about constantly among them, as we do, gets to understand their attitude toward governmental matters.

One night in a country inn, sitting around a fire in a circle of peasants, I was asked whether the Republic of China was really established on secure foundations or not. To my response that they ought to know better than a foreigner about their own country's affairs, they said, emphatically:

"This 'people's country' (republic) is altogether foreign. It started with the postloffice; then came the telegraph; then the railway. We then threw overboard the Confucian schools and adopted foreign learning; then we went in for provincial assemblies and a parliament; and finally came the revolution and the setting up of this new republic. The next thing we know, we will have gone all the way over to the foreigner and become foreign altogether. They tell us we must adopt the foreign calendar, too."

I did not ask them if they liked the change. Their conservatism was too apparent. They only wanted to be let alone. The only thing they voiced an objection to in the new order was the change in the calendar. This was a vital matter to them. A lunar calendar provides the only schedule and program for their lives, and their very existence is so entwined about it that they are unwilling to give it up. Their religious system is wrapped about the lunar calendar. The new moon and the full moon, the first and the fifteenth of the month, are the times for worship in the temples. They asked me if I preferred the foreign calendar to the Chinese calendar, and when I said that, "being a foreigner," I "preferred the foreign calendar," they at once replied that, "being Chinese," they "preferred the Chinese calendar."

This incident and many similar ones give us an insight into what the common people are thinking. The whole course of affairs has been changed for China by the coming of the foreigner. The only feature of Chinese life that resists that change is the feature that involves the religious life. This is the last stronghold, and it is being gradually undermined by the quiet, persistent work of the increasing agencies engaged in the great missionary enterprise. It is the stronghold of darkness into which the light is penetrating. "Tiny points of light" Dr. Martin calls the Christian tracts which are scattered so profusely over China. Surely the pages of the printed word itself are tiny lamps guiding the feet of China's millions into the true path of life. It is with satisfaction, therefore, that we think of the over two million and a quarter volumes of Scripture that have been circulated this year through the agency of the American Bible Society in China. Almost all of these books were printed in the "Kuanhua" or language of the common people, easily understood by the most simple-hearted peasant.

One day I was telling the story of Jesus to a little company of young farmers, and when I got to the crucifixion, one of the young men interrupted me with the enthusiastic statement that he had read that same story to his old grandfather as they sat by the light of the taper with the Gospel of Mark the evening previous in their home. That young man and some of the others were applying for church membership not long after this. It is thus that the life-giving Word is bringing sons to the kindom.

I was asked many times by interested friends, when we were at home in America, about the methods employed in scattering the Scriptures in China, and it may be of interest to you to know something of the tools we use. The methods have necessarily changed as conditions changed, and various methods are employed to suit the situations in different parts of the country; but on the whole there have been three stages in the development of the work of Bible distribution in China.

The first stage was a short one. The object being to get the Scriptures read by the Chinese who were reluctant to come to the foreigner for instruction in religious matters, the Bible Societies furnished quantities of Scripture portions to the missionaries and paid them the money necessary to engage boats to carry themselves and the books from place to place. The books were to be distributed free. This was away back in the early 70's. I once heard an old missionary tell of his experiences on one of these early Gospel distributing expeditions. He started into the interior with a boatload of books, which he proposed to distribute in all the big cities up river. He reached only two of the cities because all his stock of books had been appropriated by the clamoring rabble, mostly the illiterate riffraff and children, who were ready to accept anything distributed free. The Chinese, as most other people also, value a thing for which money has been paid and undervalue a thing upon which no value has been placed by the person issuing it. The society soon changed the method and the second stage was entered. A small price, less than the cost of the materials used, was placed upon the books, in order to overcome the difficulty. Native Christian men were employed to become colporteurs, under the superintendence of missionaries, or of the society's sub-agents in various parts of China. This method is still followed and while there are many splendid native workers developed by the system and while their work has been fruitful in the opening up of vast regions to the missionaries who followed their plowing and sowing, it is now becoming apparent that conditions are ripe for a third stage, which is a home missionary stage.

There are many hndreds, perhaps thousands of Chinese Christians now who are coming to feel a sense of responsibility for the evangelization of their fellow countrymen, and the "Bu dao hui," or Home Missionary Society, is spreading among the churches. Volunteer bands go out through the country villages preaching the Word, and come back to report their experiences. To carry the printed Word in their hands is to arm them with the great weapon for their warfare; and as there are always incidental expenses for food and drink on their expeditions, the money received in payment for the books is given to them by the Bible Society, which provides the Scriptures for their use. Of course, this third stage applies more particlarly in the regions of China where the Christian Church has been longest established, and where the Christians are consequently more perfectly instructed in the doctrine. It is a method which requires close and sympathetic supervision and, to be most effective, a thorough organization. A good trained native Christian worker of the evangelist class is employed as a native superintendent of distribution in a given territory. He supplies the books, keeping a careful record of each volunteer worker's sales, and, in consultation with the foreign missionary in charge, oversees the work of the district. The thorough organization of the Methodist work lends itself to this method of work, and the greatly increased sales which this year's report will show may largely be attributed to this fact. The general plan of missionary work in China follows the circuit idea—many outstations clustered around one central station. This is true of all missions.

God is lavish of life. When the word was likened to seed, how suggestive! The millions of seed for the reproduction of every species of animate creation are seen on every hand. Some, yea, the greater quantity of all the seed, falls amid environment unsuited to the fulfillment of its purpose. Some, however, falls on good ground. God is pleased to have us scatter His Word widely and generously, in order that the receptive hearts and willing ears may appropriate it and all men everywhere may have the opportunity to accept the mmessage. It is distressing, therefore, when the books are not forthcoming at times when we want them for scattering. (They are always sold, not given, except in isolated instances where an interest has been awakened and it seems wise to present.) It is only a matter of arithmetic, however, that limits our supply. The more books we sell, the more money we need to conduct the work, because the books are sold at a loss. We felt it very keenly when our successful house-to-house canvass of this city was stopped by a book famine. In this city, which kept its "iron doors" closed to the foreign missionaries till after the Boxer uprising, our little band of Bible sellers was selling 1,800 volumes a day in a systematic visitation of all the houses. We never witnessed such eagerness to accept the Word (the books sold were all small portions, such as the four Gospels and Acts, Genesis, Exodus, Psalms, etc., each book bound separately and counting one volume) in any other city in China as was manifested here. Of course, we realize that the printing of the books must stop when the funds are inadequate.

I wish I might rehearse all the stories of changed lives, of men converted from idolatry, of priests of Buddha becoming obedient to the faith through the reading of the printed word—stories which are told me by the missionaries in different parts of the field who see the results of this wide seed-sowing. Wherever a really successful work of grace is found and men and women are being gathered into the church, one is almost sure to find that the impetus was given by some man into whose heart the Word came like a fire, making his testimony ring with conviction. I was at such a place last week, where a year ago no sign of interest in the Gospel could be observed. A Buddhist priest bought a Gospel from a colporteur and, being a seeker after truth, he readily recognized in the Gospel of Christ that for which he sought. He is going about now himself bearing the seed bag over the countryside, and thirty men and women are being baptized at this Christmastide at the village where he resides. He has gone out without taking a cent of money, only a bag of Scriptures, to preach the Word in regions beyond. The proportion of such results which reaches our eyes and ears must necessarily be small. Perhaps in the majority of cases the seed is slowly germinating among such a conservative people as the Chinese. Custom has a mighty grip on their lives, and they will continue in their old idolatrous customs long after they are intellectually convinced of the superior value of the Christian religion through the reading of the printed page that is being lavished on them. In rare instances, it would seem, the Spirit of God is causing the first fruits of the great harvest to appear, that we may be enheartened to continue stedfast on the field until the great day when "we shall reap, if we faint not."—Rev. W. S. Elliott in Zion's Herald.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION

The Thomasville Convention, which is to be held April 23-25, is the only convention of the kind which our Church has held in this state in all its history. About twenty years ago we did have a Christian Endeavor "rally", in connection with our Annual Conference. Since then a new generation has arisen. This is the first opportunity our young people have had to meet and get acquainted, and consider the ways by which they can render better service to the Church and the Kingdom.

The live pastor will be there if he can find it possible to do so, and he will certainly encourage his young people to go.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

March is the month during which the collection for Church Extension is supposed to have been taken. It was so ordered by the Annual Conference years ago, and so far as I know the action has not been rescinded.

The object in taking the collection in March is obvious. Quite a number of pastors must depend upon the Board of Church Extension for at least a part of their living. For them to wait until Conference for the appropriation means inconvenience and embarrassment.

I wish to urge that all pastors who possibly can do so will send me the amount of the Church Extension assessment that I may be able to make the hearts of our missionaries glad. J. Norman Wills,

Treas. Board Church Extension.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Piedmont Ct.—I was on this field two days and only preached one time on account of rain and snow. I preached at Spring Hill on Friday at 11 o'clock to a small but an attentive congregation. The pastor and I took dinner with Bro. Joseph Payne. Soon after dinner we started for the parsonage and just after 3 o'clock we arrived, and I spent the balance of my time for this field there. I regretted to miss my appointments at Canaan, Mt. Carmel, and Union Ridge; but the weather was such the pastor thought it useless to try to meet the appointments and so did I. Bro. Shelton seems to be getting along with his work very well and when the roads get better he expects to visit his members, and I am sure this will be appreciated and will do good.

Spring Hill paid my claim and I am sure the balance of the churches would have done the same could I have met the appointments. Bro. Shelton took me to the station so I could meet my next appointment.

Winston Station.—I spent Saturday night with Bro. Taylor and preached at 11 o'clock in his church. This being Easter the attendance was not so large as it would have been; for so many who usually attend had gone to their old home in the country. However, we had a very good attendance and I trust a helpful service.

The Sunday school was interesting, not quite as full attendance as usual for the reason stated above. Bro. Taylor is enthusiastic and succeeding with his work; he is soon to begin a series of meetings which we all hope will be productive of much good to our church and the community. Pleased to see Bros. Norman and Ellis and their wives with them at church.

Claim paid.

I preached at Maple Springs on Sunday night; a good attendance. C. A. Cecil.

WOMEN WORKING FOR MISSIONS.

I desire to say that I endorse our women's boards in the N. C. Conference, and advise all our pastors to co-operate with them in their work, and also to attend their meetings when they can conveniently do so, and help them out on their committee work.

I believe it would be well to organize more Home Mission Societies and Mission Bands in our local churches and get more of our people engaged and interested in the work. C. A. Cecil.

Bethel, Alamance Ct.—Rev. J. A. Ledbetter filled his regular appointment the 3rd Sun. in Mar. and preached an excellent sermon taken from the S. S. lesson of that day. Pre. Cecil and Rev. C. H. Whitaker visited our church since our last report. We were pleased to have them with us. Bro. Cecil preached a good sermon, which was very much enjoyed by all present.

Mr. Joseph Woody is very sick now. He and his family have our sympathy and prayers. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Foust have both been sick, also Mrs. A. L. Foust. They are all better now, we are glad to say. We hear that Aunt Sallie Foust is right sick at the home of her daughter, Mrs. O. N. Hornaday. Hope she will soon recover.

Prof. D. K. Iseley and Miss Addie Belle Lewis closed a very successful school at Betheel Thursday. They are excellent teachers and we will never forget their earnest efforts in behalf of our children and as a result the rapid progress of the children. The children showed their appreciation and esteem for them by presenting them both with a nice present. The teachers gave them a nice treat, which of course was much enjoyed by the children. They left many friends at Bethel who will always be pleased to have them visit Bethel.

The W. F. M. Society met at thhe home of Mrs. M. C. Thompson the 4th Sun. in Mar. We had a good meeting, though somewhat sad, as it was our farewell meeting to Mrs. Thompson, who is going to move near Greensboro. We are very sorry to lose her from our society, as she is one of our most earnest workers. We hope our loss will be a gain to the society with which she unites.

Our S. S. is progressing nicely.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Reporter.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—We observed Easter by using the service prepared by our Board of Home Missions. Our offering was fifty odd dollars. The children did their parts quite well.

Our Christian Endeavor Society has just closed a contest for new members by which there were added seventy new names to the roll. This makes the present enrollment the largest it has ever been in this society.

Our morning congregations, especially, have been quite good excepting last Sunday, and there are signs of improvement in the Sunday night congregations.

We are planning to hold an anniversary service the 9th of May. At this time we expect to have former pastors Johnson and Williams to preach for us and to follow the Sunday service with three services during the week.

Several of our members continue to remember us in many substantial ways. The most substantial of these recent tokens came from Mrs. W. C. Bain in the shape of fresh pork, spareribs, sausage, and a fine ham. Thus Sister Bain enabled us to know how such preachers as Swaringen on country charges feel as they go home loaded down with the substantial evidences of their parishioners' esteem, and love.

Some of our members are yet on the sick list, but we are hoping that now that Spring seems to have really come, the remains of La Grippe, which have kept several of our people indoors since mid-winter will depart and trouble us no more forever. R. M. Andrews.

Lineberry, Davidson Ct.—We are glad to get our church paper every week to hear the blessed reports from the field which we could not get otherwise. Our church we think is in good shape. The young people's prayer meeting is kept up regularly. We think our pastor, Bro. Hulin, is getting along with the work of the circuit very well. Brethren, pray for us.

N. F. Morgan, Reporter.

(This report was delayed through an oversight for which we ask Bro. Morgan's pardon.)

Reidsville.—We are alive and progressing slowly but surely. We have bought 50 new Hymnals for our church. Our Easter exercise was not s o well attended as we had expected, owing to the bad weather. The children did well, owing to the untiring energy of Mrs. Lowdermilk, Mrs. Carroll and others. The pastor made a good short address. We had 52 present for S. S. Collection for Home Missions, $4.50. The Sunday school had an egg hunt on Easter Monday. Bro. Lowdermilk told the children that if they would do as good work finding new S. S. scholars as they did eggs, we would soon have a large Sunday school. Reporter.

Burlington.—Our Sunday-school experienced a considerable decrease in attendance last Sunday. The small attendance was due to the unfavorable condition of the weather and to the fact that a good number of our people spent Easte rout of town. We hope to regain our loss next Sunday.

The church seervice Sunday morning was not so largely attended but was a good service. The pastor spoke on "The Power of the Risen Christ." The Lord's Supper was observed and a large number of the congregation participated. At the conclusion of the Lord's Supper the doors of the church were opened, as is usually done each communion service day, and Lenoir Jones, son of Bro. J. C. Jones, wes received into full membership on profession of faith. Lenoir is one of our Junior Baraca boys, and we are glad to see him taking this noble step, which may well be emulated by his boy friends.

The Easter service occurred at the evening hour, beginning at eight o'clock. When the hour arrived the church was almost filled to overflowing. The program was rendered in a most splendid and satisfactory manner. The music was good and the recitations by the children and young boy and girls were fine. The entire program as provided for in the Easter Service sent out by the Home Missionary Board was used, and the service lasted over an hour. The offering was taken for the Board of Home Missions which was oveer $9.00.

We were mistaken last week in stating that the April meeting of the church conference would meet on Tuesday night, April 6th. We should have said Tuesday night, April 13th, which is next Tuesday night. We trust that there will be a good attendance of officers and members at this meeting.

Our entire church and Sunday-school will feel very keenly the loss of one of our most faithful and substantial members when Dr. W. A. Hornaday removes from our midst to the city of Greensboro, which he will do very shortly. During his sojourn with us Dr. Hornaday has been a great help in the management of the finances of the church. He has also been a most valuable member of the teaching force of our school, besides proving himself an excellent leader in the young people's organization, the C. E. Society. We regret exceedingly to lose Dr. Hornaday from our church, but on the other hand we congratulate our M. P.'s at Greensboro upon the coming of Dr. Hornaday in their midst.

The Executive Committee of our church met Tuesday night of this week for the consideration of important matters pertaining to the general welfare of the church.

We are glad to report that most of our people who have been sick are well again and meeting with us at the various services of the church. Chas. B. Way.

Graham S. S.—Our average attendance for quarter, 79. $7.75 sent to Children's Home. Our school had Easter exercises Sundy night. Children did well, showing that Mrs. Williams, Misses Ray and Lynes had trained them well. We can always depend on the children doing their part. Collections amounted to $13.67. Baracas elected Percy Amick as delegate to Raleigh convention. Bro. Williams gave us a good Easter sermon Sunday morning.

J. L. Amick.

J. H. Stowe.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman Ct.—Pastor O'Briant preached us an inspiring sermon Sunday on the Resurrection. His sermon and the cheering Easter songs sung by the choir helped us to remember and to feel thankful for a risen Savior.

We were glad to have Rev. J. F. Dosier and wife worship with us. We expect them often as they have moved to Randleman.

Sometimes some of us get so bad we try to think we could get along without the preacher, but deep down in our heart the more preachers around, the safer we feel.

We were very glad to have Bro. C. J. Parsons back in S. S. after his absence for awhile. The Baraca class elected him their teacher.

Bro. J. R. Lamb was elected teacher of the Old Folks' class. Our school has organized a Home Dept. with Mrs. Maud Snider as Supt.

We miss Bro. R. W. Lineberry from service. Hope he will soon be well enough to attend. Bro. Lineberry, Bro. and Sister Kennett and Grannie Parsons all live on the same street and are all unable to attend church regularly, but we believe their prayers help the church. And the remembrance of their faithful attendance in the past should inspire those of us who can to be faithful. L. R. Hughes.

Mt. Pleasant, Piedmont Ct.—Our second quarterly conference will be held at Spring Hill church Saturday before 4th Sunday; preaching at 11 a. m. and the business of the quarterly conference will be held in the afternoon. We hear that finances are very much behind which should not be when we realize that the year is moving rapidly along, and now we are to nominate our delegates to the next Annual Conference. We organized S. S. at Mt. Pleasant last Sunday by electing J. R. Stone Supt. and Hermon Murphy secretary. We hope to have a good Sunday school this summer. Sickness and death is abroad in the land. Last Tuesday Bro. Mock Fonto was laid to rest at Mt. Pleasant and yesterday evening at 6 o'clock his mother died of pneumonia. Funeral tomorrow at eleven o'clock. Pray for us that we may grow in grace and in knowledge this year. J. R. Stone.

St. Paul.—There is a singing school going on at our church which has already helped lots. It will last a week or two longer any way. Our attendance at S. S. has been better the past year than it had been in a good many years. Owing to the snow we had on last Saturday we had only 73 present and $5 collection, which goes to the Children's Home. The officers and teachers are as follows: Mr. G. H. May, Supt.; C. E. Wilson, Asst.; Herbert Wade, Sec. and Treas.; teachers, Mr. W. M. Taylor, John Dean, Mrs. Millaway, Mr. Brewer, E. M. Routh, and Mr. John Steward. Lula May, Reporter.

Bethel.—Notwithstanding the amount of snow on the ground last Sunday morning we went to Bethel and fonud the Sunday school at work when we got there. Bro. R. W. Jones is the efficient superintendent. The school has adopted as a slogan "The largest and best ever." We were pleased to receive into the church three new members; these are Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Jones and Mrs. Ben Apple. Bro. Jones comes to us from the Christian Church at Stokesdale and Sister Jones from Bethany M. P. Church, Sister Apple from Midway. Mrs. A. A. Jones was chosen as teacher for the class of small children and we believe she will prove to be a very successful teasher. Nell Jones is canvasser for the Herald at Bethel and had secured five subscriptions up to last Sunday.

Our special meeting for Bethel is to be the 1st Sunday in August and Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk of Reidsville is to assist. We expect Bethel to make the best record this year that she has ever made. To this end let us work and pray.

ELIZABETH GRANT'S CALL.

Elizabeth Grant tripped lightly down the oaken stairway, singing softly to herself:

"Jesus, I my cross have taken;
All to leave and follow thee."

As she paused a moment in the spacious hallway, drawing on her long gloves preparatory to leaving the house, a charming picture was reflected in a long pier glass. From the little hat of violet and gray tulle that rested so becomingly on her beautiful brown hair to her gray suede shoes, her costume was one of perfect harmony and completeness. There was an air of hesitancy in her manner as she smoothed the folds of her dress and adjusted her light wrap. She started toward the sitting room, but changing her mind called out gayly, "Good-by, mother!" and rang the bell for the carriage.

The surprise pictured on Mrs. Grant's face as she caught sight of her daughter was not greater than that betrayed in her voice as she exclaimed: "Why, Elizabeth, are you going to wear your new crepe to the missionary meeting?"

"No, mother; I am not going to that tiresome old meeting to-day. Janet Carter has a rich guest from Boston, and all the society people in town are invited to meet her this afternoon. The De Laneys, the Harrisons, the Whitworths, and, in fact, everybody who is anything will be there. I am the only girl in our set who goes to the missionary meetings, and I have been going ever since I was a baby. I am tired to death of the heathen, and I wish I could forget all about them!"

The expression of surprise on the mother's face had changed to one of grief ere Elizabeth had finished her impetuous speech. After a moment's hesitation Mrs. Grant asked: "But, Elizabeth, what about the song you promised to sing? And you know how interested Evelyn Strong was when you told her of your society; did you not promise to call by for her this afternoon?"

"O, nobody will miss the song, and I know that Evelyn has forgotten all about this being the day of the meeting. Why, mother, Evelyn will be at the reception, of course; and I shall tease her about the way she keeps her engagements; so good-by, mother dear!"

A hasty kiss, and Mrs. Grant was left alone. With a sigh she returned to the sitting room and closed the door. Down on her knees by the davenport she sank, and with her face buried in the pillows she cried: "O God, thou knowest that above all things else I would have my child a true worker for thee! Help her in this hour of great temptation. May she find no happiness in the 'things of this world;' smite her conscience that she may see the error of her way and make her to know that she can have true joy and peace only in serving thee!"

In the meantime the carriage rolled rapidly along the boulevard. As the sound of church bells filled the air, Elizabeth realized that they were nearing the church where the meeting was to be held, and hastily pulling down the shade she sank farther back in the seat, lest the President or one of the girls should see her. She assured herself that she was doing exactly right, but nevertheless she was conscious that somehow she was not very eager to see any of those faithful girls just now, or to have them see her.

In front of the Carter homestead all was hurry and bustle. Motor cars, horses, and carriages seemed mixed in inextricable confusion. Unfortunately just as Elizabeth was stepping from the carriage the horses shied at an approaching auto, and, missing the curb, she splashed down into the soft mud.

In the dressing rooms crowds of women jostled each other in their efforts to secure the attention of the maids, and Elizabeth's patience had been severely tested ere her shoes were cleaned and she was ready to go into the drawing-rooms. Here the crowd was still greater, and she was quickly borne past the hostess and "rich girl from Boston," past a long line of "receiving" women until she found herself at the entrance to the dining room.

As this room also was full, Elizabeth felt glad to pause for a moment in the shadow of some branching palms where she might recover her usual spirits, for in spite of the merry throng she felt strangely alone and disappointed. Somehow, her thoughts just would go back to the missionary meeting. She wondered who were there and what they were doing—was she being missed, and what would they think if they knew; but did not God know? After all, what did all this amount to? Hoping to divert her thoughts, she looked around her at the beautifully appointed home, but strangely enough everything in the house seemed to remind her of the heathen. The rugs on the floor and draperies on the wall seemed to tell that they were imported from Persia and were made by a heathen people. Teak wood tables, beautiful screens and ornaments from Japan made silent appeals for this heathen nation. The drawn linen table-cloth and centerpieces she recognized as having been made in papal Mexico. The dainty cups bore the stamp of a heathen country, and the fragrant tea seemed to whisper: "I was gathered by a heathen people in China." Even the steam from the coffee urn seemed to form itself into the words: "Heathen Arabia." Every article in the dainty menu had a story to tell of a heathen people until Elizabeth could bear it no longer. Bidding her hostess good-by, she hurried on her wraps and was soon on her way home. The song she was to have sung,

Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee,

came rushing to her mind as she again passed the church. "Yes, Lord; take my life, and let it be evermore consecrated to thee," again and again burst from her lips.

Rushing into the sitting room, she buried her face on her mother's shoulder and cried: "Mother, I didn't have a good time one bit; I just couldn't forget the heathen. The very air seemed full of voices calling to me, 'Come over and help us;' and, mother, if God can use my life, I want to give it to Him right now."

In the quiet hour of communion which followed, God spoke, and Elizabeth Grant heard, and when a few months later an appeal was made for volunteers to go into the mission field, Elizabeth knew that it was her life that was wanted, and freely offered herself.—Lottie S. Butler in Woman's Missionary Advocate.

HOW THE CALL CAME: A TRUE STORY.

(By a Missionary.)

"Well, Gussie, what shall it be, shall we go this evening or have a cozy evening at home with our studies?"

"I do not know," said Gussie. "Inclination says 'Stay at home.' The examinations will soon be on and I need every minute. Still it seems a shame not to go. I don't expect the church will be packed for a missionary meeting. 'China' is an interesting subject. Perhaps we had better go. What do you say?"

"I do not know," said Lois. "I am game if you are. The roads will be dark and muddy and it will mean getting up very early in the morning to be ready for our classes."

"Never mind," said Gussie. "We will go. You know the singing is poor and we were especially asked to be there to help with the singing."

These two friends were junior teachers in a well-known school in the south of England, and were both working and preparing for an examination which would enable them to procure promotion in their profession. Three miles out in the country stood a little church where the two girls often went to help in the Sunday school or on special occasions with the music. On this particular night a request had come that they would be present at a missionary meeting and help with the singing. After their decision they very soon donned their outdoor garments and were trudging along the muddy road.

The church was a small square building, lighted with oil lamps. A deacon was on the lookout for them and expressed his pleasure that they were there. "You must come up to the front," said he, "one of you may have to play the harmonium if the organist does not turn up, and anyway you will better help the singing there." "I am glad I am not a musician," said Lois. "That piece of work will be yours, my dear," she said, giving her friend a nudge. But the organist arrived and so did the speaker. The people too turned out fairly well, and though perhaps it was not an intellectual or a fashionable audience it was an interested one.

The speaker told a wonderful story of China and its needs, and it seemed to the two girls as if his eyes were fixed on them. They listened, fascinated with the story of that great land and her needs, of the "open doors," of the harvest waiting for the laborers, and when at the close of his address he made an appeal for young lives to dedicate themselves and go as laborers to this far-away field his eyes appeared to be looking into their hearts.

"Gussie," whispered Lois, "I feel I must say I will go. What do you say, will you go?"

Something felt very full and bursting inside of Gussie at that moment, but she answered, "I cannot, oh, I cannot. I could not leave my home, my father, my sisters. No, I will not go."

The meeting closed, the two girls were hurrying away when a hand was laid on Gussie's arm. She turned around to see the speaker of the evening. "I would like to shake hands," said he. Gussie shook hands and introduced her friend. "And now," said he, again addressing Gussie, "what about your life for China?"

"Oh please do not ask me," she said. "I could not leave my home and country. No, indeed I could not." A few more words and then he said, "I want you to promise one thing. Will you pray for China?" "Yes, I will do that," she said.

"Well, good-by, the Lord bless you, I know you will be in China some day."

A few months passed, the examinations were over, and the girls parted. Lois went as an assistant teacher in a school in the north of England, and Gussie to become principal of a school within walking distance of her home. Lois developed a bad throat and all thoughts of the foreign field had to be abandoned.

Two or three busy, seemingly happy years passed away for Gussie. She entered heartily into the activities of the church,—Sunday school, choir, Christian Endeavor, district visiting. What more could she do? But was she quite happy? Ever and anon the voice would come, "You will be in China some day." Then those prayers for China. How they worried her!

Often when praying for Sunday school scholars a voice seemed to be whispering, "You know what you ought to do. You have heard the call."

The climax came one Sunday evening. Gussie was in her accustomed place in the choir. The minister gave out the text "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Gussie's heart gave a big jump. She could not say that. She well knew she had been disobedient. She well knew that she had not been willing to answer the call, that she had tried to drown it in the work at home. Yes, that was the bare truth—disobedient to her Master—the Master she professed to follow.

After the service she hurried to the manse and sought the minister in his study. "Oh, Mr. Smith," she said. "I have been disobedient to the heavenly calling." The minister looked puzzled. This was one of his most promising helpers. "Is that so?" he said. "Would you like to tell me about it?" And so Gussie told him how she had been holding back, not willing to pay the price.

After hearing he sighed and said, "I am glad for you, but I cannot help thinking of your father." Yes, and Gussie thought of that much loved father, to whom she had been such a companion, and of her sisters also. But she dare not be disobedient any longer, and so she sought her father and, trembling, told him of her struggle and of her desire. The father's lips quivered, "My child, do not ask it of me. I am not ready to say yes. You are working for Christ at home. Will not that suffice?" A little more talk and Gussie promised her father she would not go without his consent. Her father's life had always been her inspiration, and Gussie made up her mind that she would not worry or talk to him about it, knowing that God in his time would have his way with him. She had responded to the call, and the waiting time did not matter.

Another year of really happy and fruitful work passed away. Gussie could pray now, without the burden she carried before, and she had the joy of seeing some of her Sunday school scholars come forward and declare themselves on the Lord's side.

Her father said nothing more, but Gussie felt sure he was not happy. This fact was specially evident on missionary Sundays when as superintendent of the Sunday school he seemed embarrassed and ill at ease. But God's time came. Evangelistic services were being held in the town and Gussie and her father were both helping.

The closing night arrived, and the evangelist spoke from "The Alabaster Box."

Was there anybody in the audience who had an alabaster box and who was not willing to break it, to give it to the Master?

A pause, and Gussie who was on the platform acting as pianist saw a stir in the audience and—yes, it was her father on his feet. "I wish," he said, with tears in his eyes and voice, "to tell you that for more than a year I have had an alabaster box and have refused to break it, refused to give it to my Master. To-night I lay it at His feet to use as he will." All eyes were turned on him. What could he mean? He was one of the best men in the town. The silence was tense as he sat down. The evangelist did not speak but stood waiting. The minister tried and broke down. Several were moved to tears. Gussie felt for the moment she wanted to run down, hug her father and say, "No, no, I will stay with you. I will never go away."

But the silence had to be broken, and a new power came to Gussie, and she rose and said:—

"I'll go if you want me to go, Lord,
Over mountain, or plain or sea,
I'll stay if you want me to stay, Lord,
Just wherever you want me to be."

The audience seemed to understand and heads were bowed. The evangelist pronounced the benediction.

Gussie offered for the mission field and was accepted and sent to China. Never will she forget the last wave of her father's hat at Southampton, never forget his "God bless you, my daughter," neither will she forget his letters so full of quiet joy that she was doing the "Master's Work" in that far off land.

The much loved father has heard the Master's "Well done," has entered the Glory Land. Gussie is still working in China and ever thanks God for the memory of a father who knew both how to "sacrifice" and to "serve."

This little story is very sacred to the one who wrote it. It is sent out with the hope and prayer that it may help some one who perhaps has also been "disobedient to the heavenly vision." Perhaps it may also help some father or some mother to give their "alabaster box."—Life and Light.

OUR GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK.

The preachers in hiding last week were found by taking alternate letters beginning with the first. They were J. S. Williams, J. D. Williams, T. A. Williams, D. R. Williams, O. B. Williams. Those finding them completely were Mrs. W. F. Kennett, D. A. Neese, and Mrs. Floyd Culler. Those finding them partially (all but the initials of given names) were Miss Bessie Nicholson, Miss Martha V. Hauser, O. F. Hauser.

The following preachers are so securely hidden that you may have to look a good while to find them:

1. Be careful, falls so often fully unfit ntelligent zebras.

2. "Playing chess," said John Brown, "overburdened us."

3. Quickly seizing jugs, Uncle Daniel Iseley broke seventy eleven.

4. Many blue noses blew softly.

5. Xerxes bent mighty energies shooting poor quail.

MOTHER SILVER'S SPECTACLES.

When Mrs. Silver stopped one day to think about herself, she found that she was past the age at which most people begin to wear glasses. Her husband had put them on long before. It was a wonder she had not realized sooner how much she needed them. A few evenings later she beamed upon her family at dinner time through a brand-new pair of spectacles. "Now this is like living!" she exclaimed. "To think that there's a beautiful pattern in the parlor wall paper, and I never knew it till to-day! Do you hear, father? That paper's been on the wall three years, and I thought 'twas a plain, tan color. And what's this? A new tablecloth?"

Everybody was looking at her as she sat down. Margaret protested. "You know when I got this tablecloth and all about it."

"I never saw that rosebud design till this minute," Mrs. Silver declared. "It's lovely, too. Why, I feel as if I had a lot of splendid new things."

Just then something called her from the table, and while she was gone, her husband said musingly: "Your mother is just the opposite from my Aunt Cornelia when she first put on glasses. Uncle Robin brought 'em home from town one day—he thought maybe she was beginning to need them—and the first thing she did after she got 'em was to take one of the children by the shoulders and say: 'Mercy, I didn't know you had freckles.'"

"But that's just like mother, not the opposite," small Tom demurred.

"No; the difference is that my Aunt Cornelia discovered freckles and dust in corners and grease spots and everything bad until life wasn't worth living to the rest of the family."

"I never thought of that," said the grownup daughter. "Mother must be discovering unpleasant things, too. She has not spoken of one; but if her eyesight has been affected ever since we put that paper on the parlor, just think—"

"Just think!" Her father took up the words playfully. "Think of the lines and changes in my face alone that she hasn't known were there! But you won't catch her speaking of them. That isn't your mother's way."

"Let's make her tell if father's face does look any different to her," some one proposed, just as Mrs. Silver, quite unconscious that she was the subject of discussion, came back to the table.

Everybody was looking at her as she sat down and met her husband's eyes. Suddenly she leaned a little forward and studied his face intently with an expression that was tender, loving, sorry all in one.

"Caught!" said one of the boys under his breath. "What have you just found out about father's face, momsie? Tell us."

"H'm! What's that?" Mrs. Silver temporized, looking actually guilty.

"Go ahead and tell 'em, mother," Mr. Silver coaxed. "I shan't mind."

"Mind!" There was a volume in the one word as she spoke it. Then she took off the wonderful glasses and wiped a little de wfrom them before she answered, glancing round the circle. "You don't know, children, what it means to me to see your father's smile again across the table as plain as ever. I was thinking when I looked at him how many of 'em I'd missed."—Youth's Companion.

STINGY JIM.

Jimmy was the stingiest boy you ever knew. He couldn't bear to give away a penny, nor a bite of an apple, nor a crumb of candy. He couldn't bear to lend his sled, or his hoop, or his skates. All his friends were sorry he was so stingy, and talked to him about it; but he couldn't see any reason why he should give away what he wanted himself.

"If I didn't want it," he said, "p'r'aps I would give it away; but why should I give it away when I want it myself?"

"Because it is nice to be generous," said his mother, "and think about the happiness of other people. It makes you feel happier and better yourself. If you give your hoop to little ragged Johnny, who never had one in his life, you will feel a thousand times better watching his enjoyment of it than if you had kept it yourself."

"Well," said Jimmy, "I'll try it."

The hoop was sent off. "How soon shall I feel better?" he asked by and by. "I don't feel as I did when I had the hoop. Are you sure I shall feel better?"

"Certainly," answered his mother, "but if you should keep on giving something away, you would feel better all the sooner."

Then he gave away his kite, and thought he did not feel quite so well as before. He gave away his sixpence that he meant to spend fo rtaffy. Then he said:

"I don't like this giving away things, it doesn't agree with me. I don't feel better. I like being stingy better."

Just then ragged Johnny ran up the street bowling the hoop, looking proud as a prince, and asking all the boys to take a turn. Jimmy began to smile as he watched him, and said:

"You might give Johnny my old overcoat; he's littler than I am, and he doesn't seem to have one. I think—I guess—I know I'm beginning to feel so much better. I'm glad I gave Johnny my hoop. I'll give away something else." And Jimmy has been feeling better ever since. —Selected.

TRYING FOR A SCHOLARSHIP.

"Good morning, Fred. How are you making it go?"

"Not so bad, Tom."

"About ready for exams, I suppose?"

"Oh, I don't know. Guess so."

"The papers are going to be pretty stiff this year, I hear."

"That so?"

"Yes. The headmaster has an idea that the Latin paper will make us hustle."

"Well, I don't care as long as I make a pass."

"Make a pass! Why, man, I'm going to try for a scholarship, and you can beat me if you dig in."

"What line are you taking?"

"Mathematics, of course, and I think I'll win out, too."

"Well, go ahead, Tom. I wish you luck, but a pass will do me all right; I'm not going to kill myself if I know it."

"You're bluffing, Fred. Why not pitch in and get to thetop?"

"No, I'm not bluffing, Tom. Honest. What's the use of a scholarship, anyway? Just a lot of work for nothing. If I pull through on a pass, it's enough for me."

In due time the examinations for Junior matriculation came off, and, sure enough, Tom took first place in mathematics and secured the scholarship he had worked so hard to attain, while Fred, equally clever, but indolent, obtained marks enough for a pass

This incident occurred thirty years ago.

After a brilliant course at college, Tom entered mercantile life, and is now at the head of one of the largest manufacturing concerns in Canada, giving employment to hundreds of men. Fred has tried at least half a dozen different things, but has not made a great success of any one of them. He has been satisfied with a 'pass' in everything he has touched, and has never got anything better.—H. Harper, in Pleasant Hours.

MEETING N. C. BRANCH W. H. M. S
Notice All M. P. Women.

The North Carolina Branch, Woman's Home Missions, will meet in Siler City Tuesday, April 27th, at ten o'clock a .m. We are most anxious for the best meeting in the history of our work. Let all auxiliaries elect two delegates; Young People's Societies and Mission Bands, one each. It is also hoped that every congregation in the Conference will send one representative. There has never been a time when there was more need for systematic Home Mission work. Let all cooperate. The ministers are especially invited to attend the meetings.

Sincerely, Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Pinnacle.—Our pastor, Rev. Edward Suits, filled his appointment the 4th Sun at 11 a. m. with an excellent sermon, also Sun. night. We are glad Bro. Suits came and we hope when the weather gets better to have a larger number out to hear him.

We had a very good Easter entertainment last Sunday evening at 7:30 p. m. A large congregation was present We hope to see more of the older ones coming out to help us in our S. S.

One of the teachers, Mr. T. C. Jones, was surprised very much Sunday morning as his scholars presented a large number of eggs to him for Easter. Our S. S. gave an egg-hiding Monday evening for the children. All seemed to enjoy it very much. (Mrs.) Nealie Spainhouer.

Piney Grove, Siler City Ct.—President Cecil gave us another one of his good sermons. We met the 3rd Sun. and organized S. S. The officers are: Mr. J. R. Siler, Supt.; Mr. A. D. McMaster, Asst.: Miss Nora Nelson Sec.; Miss Sallie Fox, Asst.; Mrs. C. M. Brower, Mrs. A. D. McMaster Miss Lovie Fox, and myself teachers. We ask the prayers of all the Christian people for our success. Let's try to make this year the best of all years. We can, if we will try. Dear people, come to Sunday school and let's have a good one. Parents, come and bring your children.

There is a good deal of sickness in the community,—Grippe and Pneumonia. Several deaths near by. Miss Lucy Fox has been sick for a few days. We all hope for her recovery soon. Mr. J. L. McPherson has been housed in for some time with mumps; several cases in the community. We all celebrated on the first day of April J. R. Siler's 71st birthday. There were thirty present.

Our pastor failed to get around Sunday; it was so bad for him. He hardly ever fails, but who would start that far such a day? It looks like we are going to have winter all the year.

There will be Sunday school at ten o'clock every Sunday, preaching at eleven on the first Sundays. Come, everybody.

(Miss) Nettie McPherson.

Pine Grove, Oak Ridge Ct.—We are getting along well, but there is still room for improvement. They had a very good Easter exercise. There was a large congregation out. The offering was $2.63.

We like Bro. Gerringer better and better all the time. I think he is the very man for us, for he has always got a good message for us. I noticed he had sent a notice to the Herald about the second quarterly conference, so don't guess it will be wrong if I mention it again. The second quarterly conference will be held at Ai next Sat., April 10, at 1:30 p. m. Now I trust that the official members will not disappoint our pastor by staying away. Now when Sat. comes, just drop your work and do a little errand for God. He will help you along with your work

A PRINCE ALBERT SUIT FOR SALE.

I am not in the clothing business, but just now I have at my disposal a fine Prince Albert two-piece suit. A business man of High Point had it made for a wedding occasion, and has worn it only one time. It cost $50 and he says he will sell it to some minister for $25.00. A man who is about 5ft. 8 or 10 in. tall and weighs 165 lbs. can wear it. If you are interested, write A. G. Dixon.

High Point, N. C.

Miss Mary Jones was born April 4, 1856, and departed this life March 25, 1915. She was converted when she was 17 years of age and united with Flat Rock Methodist Protestant Church where she remained an honored and worthy member till the Master called her home to rest from her labors and suffering. Miss Mary was loved and respected by all who knew her because of her beautiful Christian character. She was a great sufferer for about eight months, but she bore it all with Christian fortitude.

She leaves to mourn their loss four sisters and four brothers and a host of friends. The funeral was preached in Flat Rock Church by the writer after which her body was laid to rest in the cemetery near the church.

May the Lord bless the brothers and sisters of the departed sister and may the memory of her life be an inspiration to them. J. D. Williams.

—Mr. Chas. C. Cook, 150 Nassau St., New York, is sending out for 50 cents each copies of Croscup's Historical Chart of the European Natons, their Origin and Poltical Development. This gives European history almost at a glance. I know of nothing else that so quickly gives one a conception of the changes that have taken place in the map of Europe in the last thousand years and shows the present peoples and their relation to each other.

—Bro. S. V. Pickens and wife have returned from Florida to their home in Hendersonville, N. C.

—Bro. Pritchard and our Thomasville people are in the midst of revival services. We hope success will crown their efforts.

Asheville.—Yesterday was a lovely day, except for a slight sharpness in the atmosphere, telling us that Winter was still quarreling with Spring. We had a good day. Four new members in Sunday school. A splendid attendance at the morning service. At night the Sunday school gave its Easter entertainment. The program went off splendidly. The attendance was the best at any service since we have been in the church. The offering, though, was a disappointment. About $10.00.

The Ladies' Aid held a sale up-town on Saturday and cleared $16.00. The Society is certainly well named.

We are hoping this week to get at putting the church lot in grass. The men folks are to do the work. We haven't got the money to have it done by outsiders.

Got a dollar last week for the church that cheered my soul. From a "well wisher." That man's a friend of mine. But I imagine there are just 22,000 well wishers in this Conference. Have only heard so far from about 200 of them. Bro. L. W. Causey sent $5.00, and a letter that made me feel good, too. Said when he was here at Conference that he gave all he thought he could spare, but knowing the great work that the church is doing, he felt that he just must help some more.

My brother, the Lord is looking to you who have not yet come to his help here to do your part. When are you going to do it? I heard Charles M. Alexander, the great gospel singer, last Wednesday night, and one of the songs he sang, and afterward made the congregation sing, was, "Can the Lord Depend on You?" Can He depend on you? Here's your chance to show it.

The mail has just come and in it a check for $10.00 from "A Friend," at High Point. This is not the same friend whose gift of $20.00 was recorded a while back. We have lots of friends at High Point. God bless them, and the church of which they are members! Two hundred and twenty-three churches in the North Carolina Conference, though. About 23 have helped. Oh, where are the two hundred! I'm still smiling and waiting for you. Come on! C. W. Bates, Pas.

Oak Ridge Church.—Last night we had an Easter entertainment given by our S. S. children. They did well and could have done better if the weather had been good so they could all have had more time to practice. After the children finished their part Prof. T. E. Whitaker of this place made a splendid talk. His subject was Easter. We all enjoyed it, especially the children, as he explained many things about Easter that they had never heard before. Then our pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, made a nice talk. He announced that the two churches, the M. E. and M. P., would have an Egg Hunt to-day on our grounds.

Our Sunday school is improving every Sunday since we have completed our church. This community has been saddened by much sickness and many deaths recently. Ogolee Benbow, Reporter.

"SOME REFLECTIONS. LETTER 2."

In the Herald of Mar. 25, appears an article with the above heading, signed "H." By some means I missed H.'s first letter, and hence am lost as to who is the author of Letters 2 and 3. But I wish to say to Bro. H. that I have read the letters 2 and 3 with much interest, referring as he does to persons and things very dear to me; carrying my mind back to the days when conversion and joining the church meant more than the ordinary hand-shaking; and when I was young and strong physically, at least, and felt that every member of the Annual Conference were my friends. What happy days these were! But my object in writing at this time is to call the attention of my good Bro. H. that letter of Mar 25. is quite misleading in that you say "Bro. Guston Spilman organized this church", meaning Union Hill, "which is now on Bro. Austin's work." This, my brother, is a great mistake on your part, as Bro. Spilman, at Tabernacle camp meeting, came to Bro. T. H. Pegram and myself and begged us both to come to Union Hill and hold a special meeting, saying, "If you will both come and do so, I believe you can organize an M. P. church there." We both agreed to go, but Bro. Pegram failed to go, but I went and preached for four days and nights, and the last night I organized an M. P. church at Union Hill of 18 members. These are the facts, and I know what I say to be true. Bro. Spilman was present. Write again, Bro. I love to read your letters.

Geo. E. Hunt.

LOOK OUT!

Mr. Saul of Tarsus is on the war path with his humdrum, lambastic, anti-cyclonic zeal and enthusiasm, with assumed letters of authority to lay hold upon, bind, imprison and put to death all who do not quadrate with his whims and notions.

Look out! He is a young man of great zeal and determination, and is especially opposed to any one who would defend our doctrines, but takes a very decided stand with those who are doing all they can against us.

He has already loosed his arrow at one of our best, most experienced and most successful men, and still he rages and foams; and there seems to be no scarcity of his quivers.

He is young in the work, yet he is very bold, and determined because he knows he's right. He's traveling at a desperate rate. Look out, brethren, he'll get you unless he is struck blind on the way.

"OUR GOD IS MARCHING ON."

The people of our nation scarcely realize the vast strides which the temperance cause has been making in recent years under the able leadership of the Anti-Saloon League of America. So successful has this leadership been, that national constitutional prohibition by 1920 is now almost a certainty. To this end many prayers are being offered and many forces of righteousness are being directed.

Prior to September 1st, 1914, the prohibition states were Maine, Kansas, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, North Dakota and West Virginia; and since that time prohibition sentiment has been rapidly developed and widely promulgated, as the following interesting facts will show: Between September 1st 1914, and January 1st, 1915, five states adopted state-wide constitutional prohibition, to become effective as follows: Arizona, January 1st, 1915; Virginia, November 1st, 1916; and Colorado, Oregon and Washington, January first, 1916. The prohibition states have more than doubled in six months. Since January 1st, 1915, Alabama, Arkansas, Iowa and Idaho, have passed prohibition laws. Montana and South Carolina have voted through their legislature to submit to the people the question of prohibition; Utah will vote on constitutional prohibition, and South Dakota is also to vote on the same question. The New Jersey senate voted to give municipalites the right to vote on the liquor question, but the bill was lost in the house. An anti-saloon measure is being vigorously pressed in Pennsylvania, and should this fight, which is being so ably led by the chief executive of the state, Governor Brumbaugh, be successful, it will be a crowning triumph for the splendid forces that are struggling so heroically for righteousness and clean living.

It is confidently expected that the great Anti-Saloon League Convention to be held in Atlantic City, New Jersey, July 6th-9th, will give a mighty impulse to the advancement of nation-wide prohibition. The most cheering reports are being received from prominent leaders, speakers, and others who are interested, which indicate that this Convention will exercise a powerful influence in moulding popular opinion and in creating a far-reaching sentiment against the saloon.

Far and wide people are being roused to the fact that the local option question embraces a great fundamental and highly valued privilege—the right of local self-government, under which those living in a political unit may determine such problems for themselves. The battle now being so vigorously fought is to defend human rights against vested whiskey interests and entrenched wrong; to emancipate our land from the curse of strong drink; and to overthrow men in power who would sell themselves, their party and their dearest interests, to the liquor cause. The campaign is rapidly developing into an aggressive one; it is no longer satisfied to be eternally on the defensive. More and more men are aligning themselves on one side or the other—for or against the rum traffic. It is dawning upon our people as never before, that intemperance is responsible for not less than 50 per cent. of our insane, 60 per cent. of our paupers, the annual drink bill of the United States would build six Panama canals, which cost $375,000,000, and construct fifteen battleships with what remained. More than 95 per cent. more accidents occur to workingmen who indulge in drink than to those who to not; and yet our government legalizes saloons to tempt men from sobriety, and from paths of physical and spiritual safety, ultimately to fill untimely and dishonored graves.

A significant fact is that the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church recently addressed inquiries to the 2,160 daily newspapers of the United States, concerning their attitude on liquor advertising. Replies were received from 679, and from them it was learned that of this number 520, over three-quarters, refuse liquor advertisements of all kinds. These papers make powerful allies against the saloon interests, and this report is a fine showing in favor of the temperance cause. It is another heartening indication of the ultimate overthrow of the saloon.

Men are at last learning that it is criminally foolish to license a traffic that breeds idiots, paupers, and criminals to be supported by industrious people; a traffic which greatly increases taxes by creating the necessity for jails, almshouses, reformatories, orphanages and po[illegible]d criminal courts. and whic[illegible] everywhere know[illegible] everything sacred to God and man. It scarcely seems possible that our country should debar criminal classes from landing on our shores as being "undesirable citizens," and yet license 25,100 saloonkeepers to manufacture similar products out of the very flower of our young manhood and womanhood.

We rejoice in the hope and belief that such a condition cannot much longer exist among an enligtened people. "God's in his heaven: all's well with the world!" "He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat;
Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer Him! be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on!"

As Easter Sunday was a day that your school didn't have a full attendance, take a collection the first Sunday that you have a good attendance. That is the way those schools do that are the most interested. Some of our schools have a standard and the collections must measure up to it.

We have just received the Sewing Machine (Singer), and all the girls are so well pleased that the want to make them a new dress apiece. The Home feels very grateful to the Editor of the Herald and every one who contributed to make it possible to have this machine. It is our purpose to teach the girls to do all their sewing. This will mean much to them when they leave here.

Sunday, the 11th, 12 of the children will render a program in Bethesda church, on Yadkin College Ct. We are anticipating a delightful time. These people have always been interested in the Home. They were among the first to take [illegible] young girls, Walcott, New York, have our thanks for a beautiful comfortable.

cap coat and mittens, little daughter, attend strictly to your own business and you will be as safe as are the doves. I count myself fortunate this busy day to have so capable a little helper. Here is the span. You will have a string of news to tell us at dinner. Good-by and good luck."

The five miles from the farm to the railway station did not seem long, for hers was only one of many wagons, some coming from distant farms, for the grain train having been delayed, every one was needing a supply.

It was first come first served, and Madie was obliged to await her turn. But the morning was fine, every one pleasant, and she also enjoyed watching the white doves that were indeed everywhere, and listening to scraps of conversation about farm matters that she knew would interest her father. She was quiet and silent, and only bowed politely to the salutations of the drivers of the different wagons whom she knew, many of whom she saw at church and Sunday school every week.

Presently Mr. Burnett saw her, and coming up, said: "I am sorry you are caught in the line, and you would better step right out upon the platform here and go to the office where my daughter Elizabeth is at work at the desk. James will look out for your load and will let you know when it is ready." So Madie, who was fond of Miss Elizabeth and always liked going in the busy office, soon found herself sitting in a broad window seat at her friend's elbow.

"We are all pressed into service today," said the tall, pleasing young woman. "Even the boys are keeping account of the sales, so many have rushed in all at the same time." Just then some one came, saying the strings for tying the bags were running short, and Madie cried: "Oh, let me cut. I love to be busy, and I know how."

"You do indeed," said Eliazbeth. "You helped us one day when you came with your father, I remember. Here is the ball of string and here are scissors—thank you. It is like a fairy story—the little caller sitting in the sunshine watching the doves, turning to a friend in need. You may run with these, if you will, across there where brother Tommy is busy; I must not leave the desk."

Flying down the long storeroom, she found herself in a bevy of poultry men all talking of sprouting oats for laying hens.

"How are your White Leghorns, Miss Madie?" some one asked. "Not giving you very many eggs? You must try this new experiment of sprouting oats for them. You would better invest today. These are extra fine oats for the purpose."

"I have a good mind to," she said to James, whom she knew very well. "I buy all my own grain and keep my own accounts—father says it teaches me business methods. How much are they a bag? I think I will take a bag if you think they would go on the wagon."

One of the Burnett boys said he would look after it, and the little girl went back to cutting strings. Miss Elizabeth was just making out the bill for her father and Madie gave her the money she had brought and carefully placed the receipted bill in the pocketbook, as she had been told to do, and from her own little purse she paid for her own purchase.

While Miss Elizabeth was saying what a very businesslike little person she was, James came, saying in a distressed voice: "What ever shall I do, Elizabeth? Mr. Grey gave me a five-dollar bill to pay for his purchase and—

"Yes," said Madie, "I saw him. It was as he was telling me about how to sprout the oats for my biddies."

"Yes," said James, "and I ran back to tell brother Tommy to put up your oats and send them over to your load, and when I stopped, on my way back here with the money, at the big wall slate to note down the purchase, I had neither money nor pencil in my hand."

"It was a long yellow pencil," said Madie, "and you took the bill and wrapped it around the pencil, so."

"Did I? I do not remember; but that is a trick of mine. What ever shall I do? Mr. Grey is standing there waiting for his change and receipt."

"How much will the change be? One dollar? Here, take it," said Madie, and while Elizabeth was saying, "It will complicate the accounts and father is so particular! Oh, Madie, it is not businesslike and I should not allow you."

"It is my very own, Miss Elizabeth, and here are four dollars more in my purse, and I will loan it to you and you can pay me when you find the mislaid money. I am sure you will. It is a pity to annoy your father today in the midst of all this bustle. My father always says, 'Avoid complications.' Should it be known the money was missing, much more would be lost in loss of time in seeking for it, and too, some one would suggest something wrong and there would be all sorts of tales flying about the countryside before night. Let us wait and see. I should be allowed to do what I can, for if I had not made my purchase this would not have happened. It came about because I interfered."

"Good-by, you certainly have a clear head," said Elizabeth, kissing her gently as she tied on her cap. "Run now—your team is waiting."

Mr. Burnett himself lifted her to a place on the load and gave her the reins, saying: "So you have invested in a bag of oats on your own account? That is fine. I believe in teaching girls as well as boys how to handle money. Sorry you had to wait so long."

"I have enjoyed it, Mr. Burnett. I love the office and I learned about the sprouted oats. Thank you for all your kindness, and good-by."

The two steady horses, glad to be out of the line with the long, clear white road before them, made such good time that they were home almost as soon as they were expected. As Madie gave her report of the trip her father was amused at her investment, and promised that if she succeeded in making green food in midwinter he would experiment also when the next grain train came in.

At the dinner table she said: "I had such a nice time, only for this," and she told the tale of the lost money.

"It was not good business," said her father, thoughtfully, "but it was kind, and I have found that the first thought in obedience to the kindly impulse is generally apt to come out all right. It certainly avoided complications for this morning. You did right to tell your mother and me about it."

"Of course I should tell you," said Madie, earnestly. "I knew you would not scold me. I have confidence that the young Burnetts do not have. Mr. Burnett is kind and I like him very much, but James went so white and you could see that Elizabeth even was frightened beyond words at the idea of telling him that the five dollars was mislaid—and to tell before all those who were there made it harder."

"It is by severity that parents lose the confidence of their children," said Mrs. Hoppen. "Let us hope some good may come of this curious episode."

All the afternoon the little girl was busy making preparations for her sprouting experiment, and when she had a box arranged and went for the oats her mother heard her shout, and as she started to go to her met her running.

"Oh, mother, they were in my bag. Just think, in the first dipper of oats I took out was the long yellow pencil and the five-dollar bill. Oh, I must telephone Elizabeth that it is all right and there will be no complications."

"We will all three drive down," said her father. "I think I should like to tell the tale to Neighbor Burnett myself."

That gentleman met them as they drove up and said, jovially: "Great youngsters these of ours! What did he say, Miss Madie, at your investing in oats on your own account? Did he scold?"

"Scold? My papa scold? If he had disapproved, he wouldn't have scolded—he would have talked it over."

"It is this way," said Mr. Hoppen, and in his kind, even voice he told the way in which his daughter had avoided complications during the rush hours of the morning.

"Of course, we all knew it was not good business," said Elizabeth, with tears in her eyes, while her brothers stood by with colorless faces.

"No, it was not good business, but it was great diplomacy," said Mr. Burnett, "for if I had been told at the time I should totally have lost my head, and every one would have suffered. Come in and see my wife. I have a fancy that she knew something of the misadventure."

Mrs. Burnett was an invalid, made so, it had been hinted, by her husband's hasty temper, and by having always to stand between him and the children.

"Of course I knew—I always know," said the gentle lady, "but my husband with all his beautiful and lovely qualities, on account of his hasty temper and hasty judgment, does not live half his life, for always somebody is striving to avoid complications."

"And not only in the family but in the business and social life of the community," said Mr. Hoppen, "there is always a tacit understanding that certain things are not to be told Burnett."

"I have learned my lesson," said the man, "and although it has been humiliating, I promise to profit by it." And he did.

A short time later a crate of white doves with silver leg bands marked "Madie" was received at the Hoppen farm, with a little note from Mrs. Burnett, saying: "Although I have refused to part with my pretty birds to any one, at any price, I take pleasure in sharing with my little friend who has taught us a way to avoid complications."—Mrs. Annie A. Preston, in Zion's Herald.

—She looked at him doubtfully after the proposal. "The man I marry," she said, "must be both brave and brainy."

"Well," he declared, "I think I can lay just claim to being both."

"I admit you are brave," she responded, "for you saved my life when our boat upset the other day; but that wasn't brainy, was it?"

"It certainly was," he retorted. "I upset that boat on purpose."

That was enough.—Exchange.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Bro. Bethea sends the following:—Mr. Tom Harris, son of E. C. Harris, of Rehoboth, is in Battle Creek, Mich., for treatment. He has been in poor health for some time. His sister, Miss Hattie, accompanied him. Help us pray for his recovery. They went last Friday, arrived there Sunday A. M.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends for their visits and expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness and helpfulness extended to Mrs. Whitehead during her stay at St. Leo's Hospital.

J. W. and Julia Whitehead.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

To the People of Cleveland Ct.:

The pastor and his family have been kindly and substantially remembered during the year. A number of useful things have been given to us; namely, fresh meats, including sausage, butter, canned cherries, fruits, green and dried, molasses, potatoes, and goods for a dress. Any articles which at present may be overlooked were nevertheless useful and appreciated. Many thanks to one and all for their kindness. The Pastor and Wife.

Flat Rock Items.—Mrs. Ray who has been on the decline for a year still is kept from church by illness. Mrs. R. S. Ogburn who has been so ill that one of her daughters has stayed by her bedside for weeks is now able to take exercise indoors. A few months ago Mrs. Clarke, seemingly so hale and strong, was with us. But now she has passed beyond mortal ken. Her checkered career ended. How precious the hope—God has wiped all tears from her eyes!

Our pastor preached recently from last chapter of Revelation and on thinking over this chapter these thoughts arise: "To give every man according as his work shall be." Read the references on this, friends. O may we think of this day by day, and each day add to this store of rewards. Abiding in the Vine we shall bear much fruit. Then reading Rev., 1st chapter and eighth and eighteenth verses inclusive, see who backs this promise. The Spirit revealing Him. There is so much to be done. So sorely his children are tried, our eyes are holden. Blessed Trinity, help us!

That Young People's Convention marks a need in our church language is inadequate to describe. May it fill it. And our very, very best are to be there. That Asheville church cuts into our very heart, but that avails not with an empty purse. May it touch our men of means and mites. God bless and help Bro. Raper, for these times are stringent. Reporter.

Stony Knoll, West Forsyth Ct.—We were glad to have Pres. Cecil preach for us April 10th. He preached an excellent sermon. We have organized S. S. with 64 on roll. J. D. Patterson is Supt., Jno. Poindexter assistant, Miss Lucy Speas r-ganist, Miss Anna Speas Sec. and Treas. We have four teachers: W. T. Henning, J. O. Patterson, John Poindexter, and Ila Hening. Reporter.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Ct.—We are moving on slowly but surely. Yesterday, preaching day, we had a large crowd out for S. S., the most we have had for some time. Our classes were crowded with little folks. All take a great interest in the Sunday school, more than some of the older ones, I am sorry to say. I think our Supt. should feel encouraged to see so many of the little children and some of the older ones taking such an interest in the S. S. work. We have a faithful few who are willing and ready to do all they can, but we need more older people who are willing to work and help bear the burden. Parents, won't you come with your children to Sunday school?

Our faithful pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, was with us again yesterday. His sermon was real good and was appreciated by the attentive audience. Our pastor seemed very much encouraged about our Sunday school. I am sure the S. S. appreciated the kind remarks and encouragement he gave us.

We are trying to make our S. S. the best and a success. Success means work. But our classes are not afraid of work! "The best that lies within us" alone can accomplish distinctive results in our S. S. work. Miss Lellia Lemmons, Rep.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Ct.—Bro. Hulin preached a splendid sermon the 3rd in March on Service. May we all heed what he said. There is something for us all to do. Bro. Cecil preached for us the 26th of March; he preached a good sermon. Glad to have him in our homes. Come again. Mr. Spencer preached a good sermon for us the 4th Sunday; congregation small. We have mumps in the community; that may be the cause or excuse. We have our Sunday school organized pretty well, but so few come out; but I think we will have more soon. Mr. Numa Lanier is Supt., also Sec. and teacher; Miss Hazel Loftin, teacher. Miss Mattie Nance is canvasser for the Herald at the Chapel; had 5 subscriptions the last I heard and more promised. Lizzie Cranford.

have here church members that had rather visit and allow their children to play ball or chase cats etc. than to go to Sunday school. Then, too, we are near a Baptist church most of whose members try to argue that their church is right and all others wrong. But I am glad they have a pastor now that preaches the gospel. The writer was present one Sunday. This pastor had preached only two or three times, and one of those good brothers arose and said: "Bro. B., Bro. R. always preached us a Missionary Baptist sermon." On the next appointment Bro. B. said: "Bro. H., I came here to preach the Gospel, not to preach like Bro. R. or to suit Bro. H. If this church reads the Bible and has religion enough, they won't need any special Missionary Baptist sermon." I felt like saying, Amen!

I wish to tell this kind brother that I expect to use "A Few More Broken Remarks" as a dialogue at our Children's Day service; we usually have a large congregation then—including quite a number of Sunday visitors, also these Baptist brethren. Yours with thanks,

Dora Pair.

IN MEMORIAM.

In Loving Remembrance of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Harper, Who Passed from Labor to Reward, She on Nov. 9, 1914, He on Jan. 8, 1915.

After a Long and Happy Life of Usefulness, Labor, Trials, Trouble and Joy.

Mrs. Harper, a daughter of Joseph W. Harris, was born April 29, 1838. Mr. Harper was born April 2, 1842. They were reared in the same neighborhood and knew each other from childhood.

They were married on the 13th day of January, 1869. They were blessed with four children, three sons and one daughter, all of whom survive them. Also 20 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Only one of their offspring died during their life, the infant daughter of their daughter.

Their home was a Christian home, where a warm welcome greeted visitors in all stations of life. Many foot-peddlers and wayfaring people have found shelter and food and a place to rest beneath their roof.

Their home was the preacher's home, and their pastors soon learned they were always welcome there, and to love them. They were both members of the Methodist Protestant Church at Corinth on Littleton Circuit, and were faithful in their attendance at its services till age and disease prevented. Mr. Harper was a charter member, and the last one of the trustees to whom the land was deeded for Corinth Church. He filled many important positions in his church, representing his circuit several times in the Annual Conference. He was ever faithful in the discharge of his duties of every kind. He was a true and trusted soldier in the Confederate army, where he served to the satisfaction of his superior officers till he lost his left arm at the battle of Snickers Gap in July, 1864. I have lived with and known these good people for twenty-five years, and during all this time I have not seen or heard a word or act that any one need be ashamed of. It may be truthfully said of them they did what they could for the relief of suffering humanity. They will be greatly missed in the home, the church and the community where they lived. May God bless and guide all their children and help them to be as faithful and true as they were. Then when the storms of life are o'er, we'll meet again to part no more, a reunited band. Father and Mother Harper were peacefully laid to rest side by side in the family cemetery of their daughter, Mrs. Victoria Fletcher. The funeral was preached by their pastor, Rev. Chas. J. Edwards, assisted by Rev. Francis Joyner, rector of St. Albans Episcopal Church, of Littleton, N. C. This brief sketch of their beautiful and useful life I conclude with the words of the poet:

Servants of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past.
The battle's fought, the victory won,
And thou art crowned at last.

Robert Fletcher.

—Grace Church lost another member by death last Saturday night,—Mrs. Effie Coltrane Smith. She was married only last October, and leaves a grief-stricken young husband as well as father, mother, brothers and sister. The funeral was conducted in the church on Monday p. m. by Rev. R. M. Andrews. He spoke of her dying grace and the ecstatic joy that filled her soul in prospect of Heaven. The beautiful floral offerings and the large number of friends that attended the funeral indicated the regard felt for the deceased and those bereft by her death.

—Deacons should be assistant pastors, without pay, at least in this world. The spiritual qualifications of a deacon are specific and exacting. Often the visit from a deacon will count for more than a visit from the pastor. The pastor's visit is counted more a matter of course. —Western Recorder.

—A daily newspaper in Philadelphia reports that since the Sunday tabernacle meetings began it has sold an average of 500 Bibles daily. Members of all churches are joining in personal work, and many churches are being revived. AN URGENT NEED.

The Edinburg Conference of 1910 marks an important epoch in the history of Missions. At that Conference a Continuation Committee was appointed to continue the great work of investigation in the various mission fields of the world, hoping thereby to develop a practical science of missionary activity.

As the result of investigations made by the Japan Conference of the Continuation Committee held under the leadership of Dr. Mott, in Tokio, 1912, the missionaries of this land no longer consider the evangelization of Japan in visionary terms. The hope of its accomplishment has become the dynamic agency in the lives of men and women endowed by nature to be used of God in the practical solution of missionary problems. God, having given our leaders a broader understanding of what the Christianization of Japan actually involves and having intensified their earnestness to accomplish that end, the methods of missionary activity are being so radically improved that, when various matters pertaining to the great plan are met and solved, and necessary means are provided, under the leadership of Jesus Christ the establishment of his Kingdom will be the victory.

There is no social class in Japan which has not felt the purifying touch of Christianity. The Gospel is being preached alike to the nobility of the realm and to the beggars on the street; to simple-hearted country folk and the educated men and women of the great cities and to the law-abiding citizen and the outcast. But at the present time, owing to special investigation, there is a very strong and growing sentiment in favor of more aggressive work in behalf of the agricultural and industrial classes, for it is the farmer and day laborer who make up the rank and file of Japan's population.

Therefore, it has become the consensus of opinion that the rural districts demand immediate attention. Most rural districts are not being evangelized, nor are they being even partially evangelized, in any true sense of the word. They are being neglected for lack of men. The latest statistics show there is only one evangelistic missionary at work among every 1,260,000 Japanese. In the light of these figures it is not strange the Commission reports Japan inadequately supplied with missionaries. "But in particular there is need of a comparatively large number of well picked missionaries, adapted to the conditions of the rural districts, to establish themselves in the smaller cities and towns or in country fields, and devote themselves to evangelizing the agricultural classes." It is scarcely possible that the need for evangelistic workers will be met by less than double the present evangelistic force.

In so far as conditions in Japan are concerned this dearth of country evangelists is an unnecessary state of affairs. The time has come for progressive country evangelization. Unlike the days of fifty years ago the rural districts are now accessible to the missionaries. Modern modes of travel make it possible to proclaim the "Glad Tidings" in the most secluded mountain hamlets and the farthest seaside villages. Moreover, there are indications that the country people are hungering for the stronger meat of our Gospel. The old religions, their superstitions fears and strange beliefs are losing hold upon the young men and women of new Japan, and they are groping in the darkness of doubt for something more definite upon which to pin their faith and hope.

While they are still searching it is our great opportunity to point them to the "Glorious Light of Jesus Christ"—an opportunity which if neglected may lose us the final victory. For unless the country districts are evangelized soon the obstacles will undoubtedly increase through the spread of materialism. The fear of this evil should be an incentive to urge us on with renewed vigor to overcome the power of darkness through the teaching of Jesus Christ.

One of the great problems of missions in Japan is that of redistribution of forces. Naturally some parts of the country having first become accessible to foreigners are now comparatively well supplied with missionaries while other districts have been more or less neglected. In order to wisely redistribute the missionary force over unoccupied ground a committee of Survey and Occupation was appointed by the Conference of Federated Missions. This committee, in order to further its investigations appointed district meetings made up of missionaries within the various districts, to consider such subjects as the overlapping of work, and the redistribution of forces. Last November the missionaries of the Shidzuoka Ken district met to discuss these important matters. After a careful survey of the whole field it was found to be inadequately occupied; but rather than invite other missions or denominations to enter the district it was resolved to request the denominations already fairly distributed over the field to enlarge and strengthen their forces.

There are nine Protestant denominations working in the district of which our Methodist Protestant Mission is one. An increase of at least five new missionary families and fifty Japanese workers was requested of these nine missions if even in a limited way the whole territory is to be evangelized in this generation. Of this number our Methodist Protestant Church is asked to supply one missionary family and five or more Japanese workers. There should also be one resident lady evangelist to work among women and children.

The territory allotted to us and for which we thereby become responsible, is approximately 500 square miles in area and has a population of over 300,000. At present we have ten evangelists working in this district—one evangelist for every 30,000 souls. At this rate, if God were indifferent enough to grant us an indefinite period of time, how many generations do you suppose it would require for us to evangelize our portion of the Shidzuoka district?

Does a figure 1 and a zero quantity express the limit of interest our church takes in the salvation of 300,000 souls? The absurdity and the seriousness of the situation will appeal to every church member when pointed out in figures so startling as these.

The request made for one missionary family and a lady evangelist to work in the Shidzuoka district is a most reasonable one. If we fail to supply a need so urgent and a need so reasonable we must bear the embarrassment of not meeting our obligation before other Missions, and the humiliation of realizing that our field is not progressing because of our neglect.

In the business world it is the spirit of competition that puts energy and resourcefulness into business. No business concern ever had keener competition than our church has to combat against in this particular field. Buddhism has three hundred years start of us. Shintoism and Confucianism each number their adherents by the thousand. The priest of these various religions are by no neans willing that we claim even one of their followers as a convert to Christianity. When our church members are filled with a holy zeal to build up the Church of Jesus Christ and to win each one of the 300,000 souls, then funds will be at hand and obstacles which now seem so impassable will be met and solved.

The larger towns of the Shidzuoka district being fairly manned, it is suggested that the new missionary family make its home at Ejiri. This is a delightful little town built along the sandy shores of the old Pacific. All about are hillsides covered with orange trees and tea plantations, while in the distance are the silent blue mountains. Above all, silently looking down upon the 300,000 and the ten

ANGELS IN CHARGE.

I am no mystic and I cannot see
Angelic guardians hovering o'er my way.
I do not claim these visions may not be:
Nor doubt the words which they to others say.

But for this vision I, to-day, give thanks,
That I can see God's angels everywhere.
They fill the world in helpful, healing ranks,
And in their hands, the tempted ones they bear.

They weep with those who weep, and gently bring Sweet consolation in their every deed.
Availing prayer is theirs for suffering.
They press the heart of God to human need.

Their hands are quick to do His holy will,
Their willing feet, for love, unfaltering run.
In every walk of life I see them fill
The requisition of the Sinless One.

Dear earthly friends—the angels of God's light
Clothed in the flesh, made holy by his love,
You need no seraph's wings, no robes of white
To prove your great commission from above.

MARY M. HOBBS.

INDUSTRY AND THRIFT.

MARY M. HOBBS.

Now about thrift. Industry and thrift, though closely connected, are not synonymous. We all know people who are industrious but are not thrifty, who seem to toil to no purpose; and I have known one or two who were apparently thrifty, who could arrange to get all the work necessary out of their boys and girls while they themselves managed and had corn to sell and money to lend. Boys and girls do not reverence such fathers when they are greyheaded and themselves have grown to man's and woman's estate, and they do not deserve reverence. As a usual thing industry and thrift are united. By industrious effort exerted in accordance with natural law as discovered by experience or by experiment in investigation, (here all our Agricultural Colleges and Government experiment stations come to our help if we are open to conviction and instruction) in such a land as ours, a man ought to have a surplus after providing for the needs of his family. Whether he actually does or not will depend upon the thrift with which the household is managed. This is dependent upon several things which I will touch upon by and by. Just now we will take it for granted that such a surplus is in hand. Perhaps it is not large, not enough to buy more land or horses. It should be saved and added to until the object one has in view can be obtained. There are many ways of investing a small surplus upon a farm which will yield a tenfold income—cattle, hogs, better machinery, etc. I do not feel wise in these matters, but I do know that thrift requires you to have a surplus, invest it wisely and keep track of your investment so that when you wish to claim it, it will have doubled or trebled or multiplied by ten; and not do as the fellow in the German tale our father used to read to us who found a lump of gold as large as his head and soon met a man with a horse who naturally was willing to sell the horse for the gold. Hans thought how much better it would be to ride than to walk, carrying that lump, so he traded. Then he met a man with a cow—well, the cow would give milk, so he traded. And so it went on until he had come to be the possessor of a whetstone, and being thirsty, he stooped at a brook to drink and the whetstone slipped out of his pocket, and he felt relieved of all his burdens.

Goldsmith tells of the man who bought a gross of green spectacles. I suppose there will always be such people; but I can sincerely hope they will not be Quakers.

One way in which we fail in thrift is in not having things right in the first place, by thinking that very poor and insufficient things "will do." They certainly "do" us:—old rickety fences and the cows in the corn, gardens eaten up by fourfooted creatures, orchards destroyed by San Jose scale when a little spraying would save the whole, wood left in the woods until the roads are hub deep in mud. Forehandedness is a virtue. Jesus taught the necessity of sitting down and counting the cost and preparing for the expedition whatever it was, and it is as necessary in cattle raising as it is in leading an army. It almost makes one sick to think of the unrequited toil bestowed upon objects which never come to fruition because of neglect to prepare the way. If we know that things ought to be, we should see that they are done and not content ourselves with the knowledge: that does no good unless it is acted upon.

If we are to so use our Lord's investment that he may have his interest at his coming (And he is coming every day as he showed us when he said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me) we must be industrious and to our industry add thrift, so that we may have a surplus for investment, or as the business man said, "Money to make money."

Another enemy to thrift is the propensity to go into debt both personally and as surety. There are doubtless times when it is sound business to borrow money, but not "beyond one's ability to pay;" and interest rapidly devours principal. The habit of borrowing money and mortgaging possessions is one easily formed, but pernicious. I have known households which were wisely managed in the interior almost wrecked by the obligations assumed by the head of the family to accommodate some business friend. In these days there are bonded companies who make it their business to "go security" and persons wishing such endorsement can get it without involving their friends. Some of our most prosperous business men have been wrecked and their possessions swallowed up by just this ignis fatuus. This is a loss not only to themselves, but to the denomination and to the various philanthropies to which they contribute. The Bible says, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." But it is pitiful when a man's "good name" to a paper wipes out his riches.

What about the comfort for the family of which the scholar spoke? It is important and necessary, but where is the limit? We are all like Carlyle's infinite shoe black—give us the thing we want and we will at once want something else, and so on until we will demand nothing less than the whole universe. Here is the place for the exercise and control of the spiritual man to step in and regulate the expenditures. There is no tyranny more exacting than that of possessions,—adding field to field, pulling down the barns to build greater, grasping at wealth and power as personal property. Emerson wisely said, "Things are in the saddle and ride mankind," and unless the industrious, thrifty man has his wits about him and is determined to ride and not be ridden, they mount and he is literally driven.

Comfort for the family may mean such an endless array of superfluous things that we need to sit down and count the cost, to investigate what are comforts and essentials and what will prove encumbrances. The family which could wisely adjust these things would be a most useful lesson; for it is exceedingly difficult. Some things are plain, however, if a man takes upon himself the responsibility of rearing a family—food and shelter, warmth and cleanliness must be provided. The manner in which these things are furnished will depend upon the estimate in which the care and nurture of a family is held, the value put upon the proper training of children and the value set upon one's position and influence in his community. All these demand good homes, attractive surroundings, an abundance of pure water and palatable, nourishing food. Order in the home and on the premises is of endless value in the education of children. Things scattered here and there, tools everywhere but where they belong, lead to waste of days and years of time in finding and bringing them when they are needed. There is a money value in having things tidy and ship-shape in the house and at the barn and tool shelter; and to teach children to care for the grass and trees about their home is investing in a force which will change the face of our country life and make the wilderness like Eden and the desert like the garden of Jehovah.

Thrift demands improvement and we honor both our family and our community and our God when we try to make our places beautiful and attractive. This can be done without any exhausting outlay of money. "Comfort" demands good tools and machines for the man who furnishes the living: it also demands more consideration than is usually accorded to the woman in the home who changes this raw material into human lives with the prospect and potentiality of citizenship. This woman, although she must work, should never be a drudge. She is the mother and for her comfort and assistance in her important service much thought and care should be expended, and before there is any surplus set aside the arrangements of the home should be such that she may do what she has to do with as much ease as can be devised. If the home is to be what it should be, she needs, imperatively needs, the time to enjoy as well as "tend" her baby. If she must "tote" water from a spring, or even draw it from a well; if wood is not provided at her hand for cooking; if her utensils are old and out of date; if her stove smokes and will not bake, if she must have biscuits three times a day,—these will all take their toll out of her vigor and out of her ability to be a real mother. So I would put these things in as real necessities for the thrifty man as comforts for his family. Furnishings, carriages, etc., must depend upon the income and must be governed by the estimate the family puts upon essentials. Simplicity is best from every standpoint in furnishing houses. Money is not locked up in household goods which do not yield the value in comfort—the danger of wear and tear is reduced to a minimum, the annoyance of dust and disease diminished and the whole burden of housekeeping largely relieved. Vehicles cause us no end of worry and rivalry and expense. We should try to procure what we need and not what our neighbors have, and to let our means and a due consideration of other matters decide how we shall ride; and see to it that while we ride we are not ridden.

Above and beyond all other of "his goods" entrusted to his servants are the children who are born into the home. These are to be nourished and protected from evil, to be built up into strong, healthy bodies. They are not machines to be used for labor and regarded as chattels until they "are free" at twenty-one; but as the most precious investment to be given every opportunity for mental and spiritual development.

It is criminal in this day for parents to neglect the education of their boys and girls; to keep them at work far beyond what is required for their own sustenance, and out of their toil to add to their own accumulations. In the minds and souls of the children God's greatest harvest fields lie dormant, and to fail to perceive this and to allow them to grow up without opportunity is a blunder which they can never outgrow and never forgive.

Another point I must touch upon. Shall we abstain from contributing to the church and needy causes until we have provided the necessary comforts and are laying up a surplus? If we do, we will never get to the place where our interest in money or in mind will appear sufficient for us to render unto God the things that are his. We must begin to give as a part of our necessary outlay, and the fact that we do this and intend to do it will make us more careful in other expenditures and will at the same time increase our industry and add to our thrift.

We have had for years now exhortations upon "giving" and all sorts of schemes advanced for securing contributions. I wish we might have a corresponding campaign upon getting in order to give, and not so much of what appears to me a contrary teaching as though money-making is a thing tabooed and business men are in class necessary but worldly, while the ideal is unworldly.

We have persons coming among us all the time inviting our young people to become missionaries and ministers: many of them do become teachers and Y. M. C. A. workers, and it is doubtless well for the world that they do: but we need some wise business men to teach our youth how to go into productive business, how to invest their savings (there are so many wild-cat schemes to entrap the ignorant and unwary) where are good openings, that for my part I should hail such teaching as an evangel if conducted by men wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

THE GREATEST FOE.

Lloyd George, Chancellor of the English Exchequer, said: "We are fighting Germany, Austria, and Drink, and so far as I can see the greatest of these three deadly foes is drink." Will England destroy its worst foe? That can be done without the loss of a single life.

The State Championship in Basket-Ball in Indiana was won by the high school team of Thorntown at the State tryout. This is said to be the only team that would not use tobacco in any form. Mary C. Woody.

NOTICE, MISSIONARY WOMEN—SCHEDULE TO SILER CITY.

Very few delegates have sent names to Mrs. E. B. Siler. We are most anxious to have a good meeting of the North Carolina Home Branch. Program appears in this week's Herald. Let all of the churches send in names of delegates at once to Mrs. E. B. Siler, Siler City, in order that she may arrange entertainment. Delegates from a distance who expect to attend both missionary meetings can arrive at Siler City Monday at 2:17 P. M. and leave Thursday at 6:45 A. M. and go to Moriah Church where Foreign Society meets Thursday, 10 A. M. Both of these meetings will be interesting. Trains leave Greensboro for Siler City at 12:55 P. M. and 7:15 P. M.

All ministers especially invited to attend.

Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Pres. N. C. Branch
Woman's Home Missionary Society.

DON'T FORGET.

Branch Meeting April 29 and 30 at Moriah Church. All delegates arriving on Wed., 28th, who have not been assigned homes will please come to my home when you arrive in Greensboro. All women of our church who are interested in Missions are especially invited to attend this meeting. We also cordially invite all our pastors who are in reach of us to attend. Keep the program in this issue of the Herald and save expense of having programs printed. We want a large attendance.

A Good Woman Gone.—Just as the sun had closed its last rays over the eastern horizon, Mar. 29, God called from this life to Heaven Mrs. Francis Henderson Webster, aged 74 years, 5 months, 24 days. She was a member of Brown's Chapel M. E. Church, having joined that church when a young woman. And amid the many trials and temptations of life she lived a true consistent Christian life till she was promoted to the church triumphant. Hers was a beautiful faith, the kind that made the community better by her having lived in it, and her bright cheerful face will long be remembered by her many friends. While she lived a life of affliction for several years and was helpless for three years, yet she bore it with the greatest of patience, never complaining, but bore it as one whose faith in God could triumph over all pain. For the last year she lived with her daughter, Mrs. O. H. Johnson, where she received the tenderest of care and all that medical skill and loving hands could do was done. Her children and grandchildren never tired doing the many deeds for her comfort and attending her as though she were a babe. And no one can ever know how sad it was to them to give up mother and grandmother. An dyet they sorrow not as those who have no hope, for they have a hope and consolation that can't be destroyed, and, dear children and grandchildren, she is not dead but gone on to wait for you to come. She was a good wife, mother, and grandmother, and will be sadly missed in her home and neighborhood and church. While for several years she could not attend church because of affliction, she often expressed a desire to go. She had no fear of death, but expressed her willingness to go and when they laid her down for the last time she said she would never get up again. Her last words were, "Mary, I am coming." That was one of her sisters who had gone on before. She leaves two brothers, two sons, and two daughters, and twelve grandchildren. Rev. W. F. Craven of the M. E. Church, assisted by Rev. W. H. H. Lawhorn, Baptist, very impressively conducted the funeral service at Sapling Ridge M. P. Church Mar, 30, at 3 o'clock, where her friends laid her to rest beside her husband who preceded her about two years. There was a large congregation to pay the last tribute of respect and look for the last time on the face of the one they loved, and beneath a flower-covered mound lies the body of one whose Christian influence will live in her church and community. Amanda Woody.

Mrs. Naomi Jeffries fell asleep April 8, being 87 years, 8 months and 16 days old. Sister Jeffries spent the last forty years with her daughter, Mrs. Isaac Newton. She was totally blind during the eight years preceding her death. The deceased was a member of Union Grove church. The plain, simple and pure life that she lived has suggested much favorable comment by those who knew her best. The testimony given by her son-in-law, Bro. Isaac Newton, with whom she had spent two score years of her days, is strong in its praise of the character of her exceptional life.

At King's Mountain, on April 9, in the presence of sorrowing friends and relatives, the deceased was quietly laid to rest. While loved ones are mourning their loss, they mourn with hope. Funeral services were conducted by the writer.

Edna McConnell.—Little Edna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. June McConnell, of Fairfield, church, happily left her earthly home on March 12 and sped away to the home above. Edna was a bright little girl only eight years old. At the climactic point in her affliction which was of a few days' duration, she called her loved ones to her bedside and bade them, one by one, good by. Little Edna's voice is no longer heard; her smiles are no longer seen, but tender memories of her will ever live i nthe hearts of those to whom she was most dear. We cannot understand now why Edna was taken away. Her departure causes our hearts to ache, but her simple childlike faith and trust, should inspire i neach of us the courage to say: The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away: blessed be the name of the Lord.

Will H. Neese.

Gaston Ct.—On the night of April 12, Supt. H. A. Garrett met the Union Grove membership and spoke in the interest of the Children's Home. Since Bro. Garrett's visit, the ladies here have organized a Sunday Egg Club, consisting of eleven members. Mrs. J. I. Spencer is president, and Mrs. C. E. Wright secretary and treasurer.

As a member of the M. P. Herald family I make a motion that one page of the Herald be dedicated to the interests of the Children's Home.

The nominess for delegate to annual conference are Bro. J. F. Spencer from Union Grove and Bro. H. O. Proctor of Fairfield. Will H. Neese.

Greensville Ct.—Saturday afternoon, May 1, the second quarterly meeting will be held at Philadelphia. It is mandatory that the official members attend this conference and trustees should come prepared to give good reports.

D. T. Surratt, Pastor.

Giles Chapel.—Yesterday was a fine day with us at our church and also in the community. First, we had a good little Sunday school, then our president, Rev. C. A. Cecil, gave us a very helpful sermon and of course our pastor was present. After the services were over a part of the congregation drove to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Ferree and there we found about 150 people assembled for the purpose of celebrating Mr. Ferree's 61st birthday. It was surely a surprise to him, for when he got in sight of home he said to the preachers, "Well, what does all this mean?" Seeing so many buggies and autos he could not think what was going on at his house. After everybody had arrived our pastor was called on to make a short talk and he answered the call in a few appropriate words for the occasion. Also Mr. Ferree and Rev. G. A. Laughlin made short talks which we enjoyed. Then we gathered around one of the most beautiful and heavily laden tables that I have ever seen, and after Pres. Cecil asked the blessing we spoiled the looks of the nice things that we had to eat and I suppose every one did his or her part in it, and when all were done eating there was enough left to satisfy many more hungry [illegible] and yet we cry hard times. Among those who came from a distance were Mr. Linlay Ferree and family and Mr. Edgar Ferree of Greensboro, Mr. and Mrs. Paris Trogdon and Mrs. George Julian and other members of her family of Millboro. We all went away feeling very happy for having met once more old friends and relatives and hoping Mr. Ferree will live to see many more nice birthdays. Mrs. W. R. Hamlin.

FEELINGS HURT.

"So many of my members have been at outs with one another," said a pastor. "They have had their feelings hurt."

"Wouldn't it be fortunate," remarked I, "if they could be treated as are those who have appendicitis, and cut off their sore feelings?"

"Indeed it would," assented he. "And I'd be willing to pay the cost of operating on some of my members."

"He hurt my feelings." Tut! The idea of a full-grown man saying such a thing. It's like a child. And he ought to be treated like a child, a naughty boy, spanked and put to bed supperless. What's the sense of one's carrying his feelings around with him, when they are so easily hurt? Better leave them at home. A child with a sore toe has sense enough to keep out of the way.

Church members getting their feelings hurt! Ridiculous! A maiden losing her temper because the wind flips a rose petal in her face! Think of it, a professed follower of the meek Jesus getting angry with a fellow-disciple! And usually over a trifle.

Pray what does Christianity mean if not a little forbearance? Nine times in ten the offender meant no offense at all. You fancied ill when none was intended. You are just supersensitive. You have lots more feelings than religion.

Even if offense is intended, you ought to have enough of the Christ spirit to take no notice of it. Now, don't get your feelings hurt any more. Be ashamed of yourselves and make yourselves behave.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

—Is there any cure for troubled hearts? "Earth has no sorrow that heaven cannot heal." Is that the best answer that we can give? Are there heart troubles which only heaven can cure? Jacob thought so. When all his sons and his daughters rose up to comfort him, he refused to be comforted; "for he said, I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning." For such a troubled heart as his, he believed there was no solace this side of the grave. But Jacob did not know, and he did not keep his word. He reached the end of his trouble long before he reached the grave.

Earth has no sorrow that Jesus cannot cure. Is there any disciple of His who dares to dispute this? The utmost our unbelief can dare is to say with the leper: "If thou wilt, thou canst." His resources of comfort are not limited to heaven. If He can wipe away all tears from their eyes up there, He can wipe away all tears from eyes down here. He does not have to wait on change of place and state.—Sel —Our denunciation of Russellism has brought us a letter from an esteemed brother of Brown Summit. He says we have not shown that Russell misquotes the Bible. We did not say that he misquotes, but that he misinterprets. We gave one example of gross misinterpretation and could give others. We hope this brother will live to see the error of Russell's way. He is the only intelligent man that we have ever met that was carried away with Russell's imposing but delusive teachings.

—Rowland Hill: "Suppose you were intending to hear a will read from which you expected a handsome legacy, would your attention be given to the manner in which the lawyer read the instrument? No! You would give all ear to hear if anything was left to you, and how much it was. That is the way I would advise you to hear the gospel."

—A woman in Lebanon, Ky., heard Moody preach, and resolved to do something. She gave a tract to a young man. He gave himself to God. He was Dr. Lorimer, the noted Baptist minister. He led to Christ Russell Conwell, now pastor of a large church in Philadelphia.

—A commercial traveler went into a store and asked a young man named Sayford if he wanted to put his name on a prayer list. To please the traveler he assented and forgot it. Soon after he was converted and became an evangelist to young men in colleges of America. Obert gave himself to Christ through hearing him, became an evangelist and went to Cornell University. John R. Mott heard him and was saved, becoming a well-known evangelist in colleges, as well as in other world-wide work.

The Methodist Protestant of Baltimore last week contained a very interesting item to friends of the Children's Home. It was in the report of the Maryland Conference and read: "A resolution was adopted cordially endorsing the orphanage at High Point, N. C., and authorized collections for that work."

The 13th and 14th it was my pleasure to attend the Tri-State Conference for orphanage workers, held in the Church Home Orphanage, Yorkville, S. C. Virginia, the Carolinas, Ga., Ala. and Texas were represented. It is impossible to attend one of these meetings without being greatly benefited, and especially one young in the work. I have a greater vision of orphanage work, and when I look into your face and ask you to help in such a great cause I do it with a deeper conviction than ever before.

I had the pleasure of spending Monday night with Bro. Will H. Neese and talking to some of his loyal members at Union Grove. Mrs. Neese is standing right by him in his work. We will hear from Union Grove later.

Contributions may not be as large as some of the friends think we should have, and they are not, but the future is brighter today for the Home than at any time in the past.

Boys, how about that corn or pea crop? Are you getting ready? Girls, we have 13 girls in the Home. I wonder what you are doing to help in this work. If you remember, last year in my report, one little girl sent in $4.50 which she made by selling eggs and raising chickens from her little bantam.

If we would enjoy life, let us help others to enjoy it.

—Rev W. H. Neese was called home this week by the illness of his father and mother. He expects to return to his charge for a special meeting beginning next Sunday.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Halifax Circuit.—Sunday was a good day for us. The weather was pleasant, and a splendid congregation attended Harmony services. These good people seem to be hungering for the Gospel, for nearly all of the congregation give the very best of attention. Surely this church will not die soon if the members and friends continue to manifest interest as they have done so far this year. May this entire year be one great revival. It was February before we could get the appointments for the circuit arranged so that we could worship in this church, and we have had only three appointments, and yet nearly 40 per cent. of all claims have been paid. Brethren and sisters, if you are praying like you are paying, and I believe you are, God will give us a glorious revival of religion.

On Sunday night the moon was giving some light, and the weather was rather pleasant, and the largest congregation of the year for that place met us at Fosburgh Camp. We noticed some town people present for the first time, and many country people were present. The writer thought that his sermon, or talk, was much below the standard, and yet I do not remember ever to have had closer attention to the discourse. We have a few men there that are kind, lovable characters who do not profess to be Christians. I know that they love me by the many kindnesses that they show me. They are among my most intelligent and attentive listeners, and how I wish that I could show them how God loves them, for then I believe that they would give Him their allegiance. It would be more than worth the whole year's labor to be instrumental in God's hand in saving one such person. Christian people, do you realize the power of prayer? Let us get in earnest, if we are not.

R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—The attendance at Sunday school for the last few Sundays has been very good on an average. Although there were a few names taken off of the roll the first of this quarter, the enrollment is no smaller, for there were some new names to be added. Mr. Leonard Mackey, who has been in the army for some time, is at home again with his parents.

Bro. Martin filled his regular appointment last Sunday night and preached an excellent sermon. He preaches also next Sunday at 11 A. M. The Ladies' Aid Society was requested to meet Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, as that is their regular day of meeting. The Aid, although small, is doing a good work for the church and we wish them success in everything they undertake. Reporter.

Weaverville, April 20.

Reidsville.—The second quarterly conference of this charge met at Sandy Cross Monday, April 19th. Reidsville and Sandy Cross were both represented. Bros. D. L. Carroll of Reidsville and J. D. Baynes of Bethany were nominated as candidates for delegate. Finances are very much behind on this charge. Something ought to be done soon to put things in a better shape along this line. The next quarterly conference goes to Bethany.

E. G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

Shelby Ct.—Closed our special meeting at Caroleen; 55 conversions and reclamations. Four joined, others will soon. Bro. Moton's sermons were acceptable to both saint and sinner. The congregation is asking for his help in our fall meeting. Bro. Moton is loyal to the Bible and calls sin by its full name.

Held our second quarterly conference at Lincolnton. Business transacted in good spirit. Bros. D. B. Johnson and T. S. McFarland nominees for delegate to Conf.

Yadkin College Ct.—Now the beautiful spring has come, we find we are not dead but putting up into new life. We are meeting good congregations. The Sunday school work is more encouraging than I have seen it since I have been on this charge. The Yadkin College S. S. did not go into winter quarters; is still doing its usual good work. The S. S. at Friendship has opened up bright and encouraging with the beautiful spring weather, and we are expecting good things to be done by that faithful little band. Shiloh S. S. that went dead last fall has revived with the most glorious prospect I have ever seen there. We reached 108 in the classes today. The greatest interest manifested on the part of both teachers and scholars. Our new organist, Mrs. Baxter Leonard, is awakening new interest in music. They decided today to order fifty new song books for Sunday school and church. I am expecting to hear of a much larger enrollment.

Mrs. Nannie Lee Leonard, a faithful and highly esteemed member of the First Reformed Church of Lexington, was received by certificate into Shiloh Methodist Protestant Church last Sunday. The pastor and the entire membership are most happy to receive Sister Leonard to our communion and fellowship. Mrs. Leonard is a good woman and a worker. She has been living in Shiloh community for several years and has been known and loved by us all these years. She has been very faithful to our church even before she became a member.

Mt. Carmel is now beginning the most promising S. S. work for years. I think we will have nearer the co-operation of the community than we have had for a long time, if ever. West Lexington has run with an increased interest all winter. On Easter Sunday night we had a most beautiful program rendered by the children and young people. Would have done credit to any of your city churches. Bethesda is not behind. As always, she is going forward. On last Sunday we had the pleasure of having Supt. Garrett, Miss Alspaugh and eleven children from our Children's Home there. They delighted a large congregation with two well rendered programs, consisting of songs and recitations. We love them more because we know them better and I am sure this church will do more for them because they love them more. Bro. Garrett seems to be perfectly happy in his work. A good man whom God has called to this good work. I once heard a large awkward fellow read a composition, when I was in school, on George Washington. He said, "George Washington was left childless that he might be called the daddy of his country." Surely God has, fortunately, set apart Bro. and Sister Garrett to assume the responsibility of father and mother of these dear unfortunate ones. May God bless them in their noble work.

Our second quarterly conference will convene at Bethesda on Saturday before the second Sunday in May. Preaching at 11 o'clock, dinner, business of quarterly conference. May we see every official member of each church present. H. L. Powell.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.—Began Sunday school 2nd Sunday of this month. Last Sunday was the second Sun. of Sunday school with 55 present. Really, I believe there was more interest shown there than has been seen in the S. S. here in some time. There were more married people present it seems than have been in some time unless it was preaching day. Quite an interest has been expressed in the lesson. An extra collection was taken to purchase Teachers' Journals for those that wished them in the class. At this time it looks as if we may have a better S. S. than in years. Pray for us. W. Polk Garrett.

Married.—On Tuesday, April 6, at 4:30 P. M., Miss Lucy E. Gales was married to Mr. Francis A. Slate. The ceremony was performed by the writer in the M. P. church in Lincolnton, N. C. Miss Lucy is very accomplished and one of our best S. S. workers. She is a loyal M. P. and so harmonizes her talents that her presence and vigilance mean much for our church. Mr. Slate is the efficient editor of the Lincoln Times. His affable spirit and efficiency beget for him many friends and place him second to none in county journalism. Mrs. A. Hoke, the efficient organist of Lincolnton church, played the bridal chorus, Lohengrin. The altar was quaintly decorated with ferns and beautiful flowers. The wedding supper was served in Miss Lucy's home to which quite a number of friends and relatives were invited. Immediately after supper Mr. and Mrs. Slate boarded an east-bound Seaboard train for Wilmington and other points. They will reside in Lincolnton. We wish for them a long, prosperous, profitable and happy life. J. D. Morris.

Roanoke Ct.—Owing to stormy weather Easter Sunday, Whitaker's Chapel and Roseneath S. S. deferred Easter exercises till last second Sunday, at which time the churches were beautifully decorated. The exercises were well given before large congregations. The offering for Home Missions at the Chapel was $12. I did not learn of the amount at Roseneath. Fraternally. T. E. Davis.

Hebron, Mebane Ct.—Our pastor, Dr. Swain, filled his regular appointment yesterday and gave us a good sermon, as he always does. The weather was ideal and a large congregation was out to hear him. I am sure if we would put into practice what he tells us we would be greatly benefited.

We organized S. S. the second Sunday in April and elected the following officers: Mr. L. H. McAdams, Supt.; Mr. J. B. F. Jobe, assistant; Mr. Euell Boone, Sec.; A. K. McAdams, assistant. Teachers as follows: Mr. J. B. F. Jobe, Mrs. F. W. Nelson, Mrs. J. G. Jobe, and Miss Eula McAdams. We hope to have a better S. S. than ever before. Pray for us that we may. We hope to have Children's Day this year, am sure we can if we try.

The sick people of our community are improving, we are glad to report. Kennett McAdams, Reporter.

Shiloh, Yadkin College Ct.—The fact that nothing has appeared in the Herald from this place before for this year must not be taken to indicate that we have been asleep or even sluggish about our Master's business. We have been so busy doing things since Conference we have not taken time to write or even talk much about them.

We were very glad to welcome our pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, back to this church to begin his sixth year's service as pastor. His usefulness and popularity increase with his years of service. He begins this year with as much energy and enthusiasm as if it were his first year. His sermons have been of a high order, plain, practical and pointed and seem to get better as the year progresses. His text Sunday was Matt. 11:30, "For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." He told us that Christ's yoke, unlike the yoke used o nthe neck of an ox, is an easy yoke, and that it is made lighter and still more easy by obedience and love. He said the reason the yoke is so hard for some persons to bear is that they do not love and obey the Master as they should. He spoke touchingly of the service of love rendered by mothers to their children. He told us when we loved Christ and the church as we should, we would consider our service a privilege and not a burden. The sermon was attentively and we trust prayerfully listened to by a very large congregation and we hope that much good may be accomplished by it.

Sunday was a glad day for the officers, teachers, scholars and friends of the Sunday school. We partially organized Sunday school the third Sunday in March, or one month ago, by electing Harper A. Leonard Supt., W. J. Berrier Asst., and J. L. Evans Sec. and Treas. The next Sunday the school elected teachers and ordered literature.

The following teachers were elected: A. H. Evans, Carl Berrier, Mrs. Jesse Hill, Mrs. Floyd Berrier. Mrs. Baxter Leonard was elected organist. Attendance, 40, with our heads and hearts set on trying to have 50 the next Sunday, which we did. Our next mile post was fixed at 75 and we had 79; then we set our goal at 100 for last Sunday and we had 108. The Advanced Quarterly Class was so large that it was thought best to divide it and the young men and the young ladies were separated, the young ladies retaining their teacher, Mr. Carl Berrier, and the young men elected Mr. Harvey L. Evans to teach them.——One interesting department of our school is the Adult Bible Class which numbered 24 last Sunday, all being heads of families. Will not every one who reads this breathe an earnest prayer that we may be able to interest and hold these 24 heads of families and that they may be the means of getting hold of others. Bro. Leonard, our Supt., is an earnest, conscientious Christian and is making an admirable superintendent. We hope by God's help to be able to report even better things in the future.——In order to encourage congregational singing our church will order 50 copies of Hymnal. By request of the members the pastor announced that the incidental collection. Sunday, would be devoted to that specific purpose. It amounted to about $7.50 or $8. ——Bro. J. L. Waitman, who has been confined to his room and to his bed most of the time since last Thanksgiving, was able, together with his wife, to attend church Sunday; also Bro. H. J. Leonard, one of our oldest and most faithful members, was able to be out. Both are always an inspiration. Mrs. Levi Evans, another one of our faithful and esteemed members, who has been very sick with pneumonia, is able to be up and do a little work about the home, but is hardly strong enough to take much exercise, and it was not thought prudent for her to venture out to church Sunday. We sincerely hope she may be able to attend next third Sunday. Reporter.

Buncombe Ct.—We had a fine day Sunday. I baptized two candidates Sunday morning at Mt. Zion. The baptism took place at the Palmer Ford Mill. After the services at the water we returned to the church where we found a good crowd. We had preaching, followed by communion. God is blessing the work up here now; the people seem to be taking on new life. Our 2d quarterly conference will convene at Pleasant Gap church on Saturday before the first Sunday in May, when I hope to see all of the official members present and lots of others. Come on and let us have a good time on the mountain together. We were glad to have Rev. Mr. Casto with us this week and we were glad to have him in our home. May God bless all of the readers of the Herald and I hope this will be the best year of our life. Yours in the fight for the lost. T. E. Martin, P.

Richland Ct.—The second quarterly conference convened at Brower's Chapel April 17, with a small representation from most of the churches; one not represented. Our President, Rev. C. A. Cecil, was present and presided. The business wa s transacted in order. All missed a treat who were not there. I think that the members of the conference are too careless about the church business and think more of things of the word, or at least they do not come.

Our president preached at Giles Chapel on Sunday at eleven and gave us a good sermon. Only a small number were out to hear him. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely, but is not what it ought to be. But we are expecting better attendance now. R. L. Allred.

Hope, Siler City Ct.—Bro. Bowman preached an interesting sermon last Sunday. It was a continuation of the subject of sin from which he preached a month ago.

The congregation was the best we have had in quite a while. Miss Wicker of Elon College gave a recital at the Bonlee Hi ghSchool Auditorium Saturday night. She very consented to recite for us at the beginning of the service Sunday morning. It was worth rearing and we appreciate it. We were also favored with a solo by Miss De Ette Tally which was very impressive. The Sunday school is doing nicely now and we hope it may continue to grow.

Success to the Herald and its readers. Kara Andrew.

Pageland Ct.—We had a good day at Rose Hill last Sunday; good congregation, good attention. After preaching service we opened the door of the church and five boys and two girls joined and were received in. May God bless the boys and girls; they are the hope of our church in the future. Pray for us that we may do greater work. Our appointment for next Sunday will be at Bethesda and Bea Creek. J. W. Quick, Pastor.

Oak Ridge Circuit.—The second quarterly conference was held at the Ai church April 10th. All of the churches were represented but the representation was very small. Out of an official list of thirty-three there were only nine present. What is the matter with those whom the churches have elected to look after the work of the church and of the Kingdom? I do not know. I announced the quarterly meeting from all five pulpits, and then sent postal cards to those that I could not see within a few days of the meeting, but they did not attend. The responsibility is with them. If they think they are doing their duty I have nothing more to say. Bros. W. S. Linville and Robert Dwiggins were selected as nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference. The following figures will give you some idea of the finances of the circuit. Paid on pastor's salary for the five months since Conference, $126; on General Interests, $50.01. It seems to me that we are behind. What do you stewards think about it?

Our schedule for special meetings is as follows: Sandy Ridge, second week in July; Pine Grove, third week in July, with Bro. D. A. Braswell assisting at both places; Ai, fourth week in July, no help secured yet; Kernersville, 3rd week of September, Bro. Bethea assisting; Oak Ridge, the time not set yet. I want to ask all who are interested to begin now to remember these meetings in your prayers. Our circuit most certainly needs a general revival, and I pray that God may send it this year.

I want to use this means of thanking my friends for their sympathy and help when I lost my horse. A horse is not so much to the man who has several, but where he has only one it is quite a loss. And while I asked my friends not to do all that they had it in their hearts to do, still I appreciate all that they had in their hearts to do, and am sure it was all prompted by a good motive. This of course is only understood by those to whom I wish to express my appreciation. Through the kindness of Bro. D. L. Donnell I have a horse to drive until I can make some arrangements for traveling.

Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk filled my appointment for me at Sandy Ridge last Sunday while I was looking after my horse. I have not heard from Sandy Ridge since Sunday, but am sure the people were glad to have Bro. Lowdermilk preach to them. He is loved by all the Oak Ridge people, but especially, I think, by the Sandy Ridge people. Bro. Lowdermilk has my thanks for this service.

The cry is, "Hard times! Hard times!" The idea of people with three meals a day, and good clothes, and friends, and peace throughout our land crying "Hard times"! We don't deserve what we have. God has been good to us, and like Jeshurun we have waxed fat and kicked; we have grown thick. . . And there is danger of our forgetting God who made us and lightly esteeming the Rock of our salvation. Let us lift our eyes occasionally to the hills whence cometh our help. Linley W. Gerringer.

Oak Ridge, N. C.

Reidsville.—Protracted services will begin at the M. P. Church in Reidsville, Sunday, April 25th. Rev. J. D. Williams of Henderson will be the pulpit help. Prof. T. O. Pender of Mebane, evangelistic singer, will conduct the music. E. G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

Bethel, Flat Rock Ct.—We organized Sunday school on April 4. Not as many out as we want to see. We want all to come out and take a part in the good work. Rev. W. F. Kennett filled his appointment with a good sermon, as usual. Three new members were received into the church by certificate. Mrs. A. A. Jones, Reporter

Beulah, Mecklenburg Ct.—Since spring opened our S. S. has taken on new life. All seems prosperous under the kind care of our Supt., Mr. T. B. Moore. But we have a great work to do. There are many in our vicinity that do not go to Sunday school and we want to get them on our roll. Lillie Phifer.

Winston.—Rev. T. M. Johnson is assisting our pastor in a series of meetings for nearly two weeks. His sermons are deeply spiritual and soul-winning. Yesterday (Sunday) his sermon on "religion in the home" was one of the most forceful and impressive sermons we ever heard. A number of persons expressed this same opinion. We regret that we have been too unwell to attend all the services. We feel that it was a benediction when we were able to be present. We do not know the number of converts, but we hope that the meeting will be of great and lasting good to our city. We are glad that Dr. Johnson was with us. He has won many warm friends among our people and others. Rep.

Bethany, Reidsville Charge.—Yesterday we had a very good service. Bro. Lowdermilk preached from the text, "I am the bread of life," after which he administered the communion.——Our faithful Supt. and a few others have kept the Sunday school alive under very unfavorable circumstances during the winter, as so many have been sick in the community and the weather too bad for others to be out often. We are hoping for and expecting a good attendance from now on.——Most of the sick ones are out again. Mrs. Jno. T. McCollum returned from the hospital last Thursday; she underwent a serious operation and is making a satisfactory recovery.——Bro. W. P. Alley was out at church yesterday though still very weak and not fully recovered from his recent severe illness.——On March 28, 1915, the spirit of Elizabeth Susan Alley slipped away from earth, leaving a devoted husband, one son, one daughter, and five grandchildren, who have our sincere sympathy in their sorrow. This is especially sad for the husband who is left alone, both children being married. May God comfort and richly abide with him in his declining years. Sister Alley was a charter member of Bethany church and was loyal to her church and pastors, always attending services when well enough. She had been almost an invalid for years. How sweet the thought that in the heavenly home there is no more sickness or pain but joy and peace forevermore. Reporter.

A TRIP TO PATERSON TO HEAR "BILLY" SUNDAY

Saturday morning, April 17th, Rev. H. C. White, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of South Amboy, and I made the trip by trolly to Paterson, N. J., to hear the world famous and to say the least, marvelous "Billy" Sunday, who is engaged in a special seven weeks' evangelistic campaign in that city. We arrived in time to see the man and hear part of the afternoon service, which was prepared mainly for school children. Our hearts throbbed as we listened to and beheld the master of assemblies, gifted orator, realistic preacher, the man of the higher classes, yet knows the needs, language and the people of the street, shop and slum as no other man of today and has been termed "The Prophet of the Marketplace."

Immediately after the afternoon service, I met Rev. S. F. Sliker, who is pastor of the Madison Park M. P. Church in Paterson, and who is also an old school friend of mine. After just enough persuading to convince me that Bro. Sliker was in earnest, Bro. White and I went home with him. On our arrival at the beautiful parsonage, we found Mrs. Sliker, a pretty woman, lovely companion and a devoted helper, with Steven, Jr., one of the prettiest and most interesting babies I have ever seen. Bro. Sliker married a woman with previous parsonage experiences, being a minister's daughter, and she has a brother, who is now a sophomore in Western Md. College preparing for the ministry. Bro. Sliker's heart is in his work, is deservingly popular and is not only making good in Paterson, but leaves his marks of success on all his fields.

Seven o'clock found us again in the monstrous Sunday Tabernacle, with a seating capacity of about 12,000 people. Through the courtesy of Bro. Sliker, we were seated on the preacher's platform, near the speaker; to our left and immediately behind the speaker were seated a choir of one thousand trained voices. The famous choir leader, Rodeheaver, led a song service for nearly half an hour, which must have made the devils tremble and the angels rejoice. Soon the tabernacle was filled and many thousands were trying to lisen on the outside. Mr. Sunday arrived, accompanied by an ex-pugilist and two detectives for a body guard. Just before the close of the song service, he made his announcements, took the offering without comment, then after another song, he announced his text, "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but to us, who believe, it is the power of God unto salvation." For nearly an hour he delivered a forceful, pointed, personally directed, old fashioned gospel sermon. We forgot all about his rudeness and slang and seemingly vulgar expressions and were absorbed in the message from God through His servant. He gave the invitation for all who would accept Jesus Christ as their personal Savior to come forward expressing it in just about that many words, but in the opportune time. Immediately men and women, girls and boys, rushed forward from all parts of the Tabernacle to "Billy" and to an onlooker, it looked more like bees making for the hive and a large swarm at that. It is nothing strange for him to have five hundred to a thousand come forward and accept Christ at one service.

Some are praising Mr. Sunday very lavishly, others are kicking him worse than if he were a sheep-killing dog; yet, many more are really in earnest endeavor to discover the secret of his success and power. Many say that it lies in his organization and the backing given him. His organization is almost perfect and is a marvel within itself, no one can deny; yet, "Billy" is the main show, the chief topic of conversation, on the streets, in the shops, factories, on the cars and in the newspapers nearly all over the State of New Jersey and largely in the neighboring states. Newspapers print extras just to get his latest sermons and utterances. He preaches the old-fashioned Gospel with unmistakable earnestness, clearness; taking the word of God as he finds it, delivers it in the language of the street with no uncertain notes or passages. Like Geo. Whitfield, he makes use of all his dramatic powers in delivering his message and his wit and humor is as natural as wit and humor ever was with Mark Twain. The sacrificial death of Christ together with the surrendered life of man is the only hope of salvation, according to Mr. Sunday. He knows of two places, heaven and hell; two classes of people, Christians and sinners. He is unflinching, unsparing and uncompromising in his presentation of the truth in its denunciation of sin in all its forms. He makes no effort to shield some sins and sinners, lest he might insult old brother Seven-up or old sister Asa Spades; but hits sin on the right and left regardless of whom he hits; revealing sin as it is, its fiendish hellishness and treacherous designs. Sins are sins with him and sinners sinners, whether violating one or ten commandments; robbery is robbery, stealing stealing, a fool is a fool and a lie is a lie. Many of the modern evils which are modernized, societyzed and dressed up, endeavoring to present a respectable appearance, when they are hellish in their nature and design and damnable and destructive in their scope and grasp, are flayed and shown up in their true light with all their destructive, treacherous and deceptive methods. You may read this brief description of the great evangelist, read the newspaper reports of his work, and even volumes of his sermons, as I have done, and you will never know, understand and appreciate him properly till you hear him yourself.

Just a few words about Paterson and the adjacent country will enable the readers better to grasp the situation and understand more fully the extent of the work Mr. Sunday is doing. Paterson is called the Silk City of America and has a population of 130,000 and is about 30 miles from South Amboy and about 15 miles from New York City. In going from here to Paterson the first city to pass through is Perth Amboy with a population of about 35,000; next is Elizabeth with over 73,000; next Newark, with 350,000; and next Passaic, with 55,000; leaving Jersey City just a few miles to the right with a population of 268,000; and New York with her six million. I know that figures are dry and never impress us as they should, but when we consider that if it were possible to combine Greensboro, High Point, Charlotte, Asheville, Raleigh, Wilmington, and Winston in one city, it would lack about two hundred thousand having as many people as Newark and if you could get the people of the state in one city you would have a city one third the size of New York. What do all these figures have to do with "Billy" Sunday? He is preaching in the center of these cities, setting men to think religiously and is shaking them to their foundation morally. A religious awaking seems to be near.

MINE EXPERIENCE.

The pointed remarks in the Herald a few weeks ago made by Bro. Gerringer and others called to my mind some of my experiences during my short itinerant life; and I relate here a few of them hoping that it may in some way help somebody.

The first experience that impresses me much was on the first work I traveled. I will not tell how much salary I got, it might reflect on my preaching ability. But at one of my churches there was a balance due on the organ. A good(?) brother asked me if I could not advance the money and save the organ to the church, pledging himself that I should have my money back in a very short time. I happened to have the amount ($8.00), and cheerfully met the claim. It has been several long years and still, I suppose, the good(?) brother is leading the choir, and his heart is rejoicing at the sound of the melody of the organ that represents fraud and —, but I have never got my money back.

And then came the balance on claims not paid at Conference. Well, said the steward, we want you to have a good report at Conference. So you just report everything in full and I'll see that you get your money when you come back. I came back, but the brother never mentioned the balance. ——— we will say, that ought to have taught you a lesson. Yes, but I am ——— next Conference another brother came to me, and I felt sure he was honest, for he was the choir leader and Supt. of Sunday school; and he made the same request, and I did what he said, but if I ever got my money back, I never found it out.

Another brother, anxious to have his church make a clear record, phoned to me: "Report us out. You shall have every cent when you get back." When I came back he said Bro. A. was responsible.

But I want to tell you that I have had happy experiences by the way. I have served charges where some good brother would vouch for the balance due and when I came home from Conference the money came. And then I have served charges that paid up every cent of every claim, and I went to Conference as happy as happy could be.

But what I want to know is, will those brethren still owe these amounts when they get to Heaven? or do you think they will be excused on the ground that they don't know that it takes money to make reports at Conference?

And still I press on. Afraid.

OUT OF TURKEY.

When I recall the events of the six months immediately preceding the departure of the Friends' missionaries from Ram Allah, Palestine, they seem more like fiction than real facts. The restriction forbidding the sending of letters in English was changed in a few weeks, and it became allowable to send letters in English, but not to England nor to any of her colonies. Near the beginning of the censorship some offending letters of an English missionary were read. Their writer was at once thrust into prison in Jerusalem where he will probably stay until hostilities cease. There is even a possibility that he may be shot before escaping the power of the "unspeakable Turk."

Time and again thousands of Turkish troops camped upon our boys' playground; also many cannon and artillery wagons, not to speak of the hundreds of camels bearing the tents and "hard-tack."

The shops of the people were looted in some localities, their wheat supply was depleted, and sometimes the soldiers unceremoniously took up quarters in churches and in private homes.

No less than 125 unoffending priests, under the escort of a Turkish official were given lodging over night in our boys' school building. They were prisoners of war on their way to Damascus; and their only offense was that they were Russians or French. It was not unusual for poor Jews to be suddenly sent north from Jerusalem through the rain, in order to work on a military railway.

The English missionaries were allowed to choose their own manner of leaving, or route, excepting two hotel men who were sent to Damascus. Moreover, in two instances native Christian workers of the English Church Missionary Society were sent to Damascus and held there as prisoners —because they were helpers of English Christian missionaries.

After Turkey's declaration of war nearly all the mission buildings of the English, French and Russians were appropriated for military usage; this with the previous withdrawtian missions in Palestine.

In January the decree became known that the Turkish language must be taught in all the schools within the limits of the Ottoman Empire, and as much time devoted to Turkish as to Arabic or English, etc. This for us and for most of the schools was difficult to obey; and, besides, Syrians greatly dislike the Turkish language. In addition, the authorities required that "henceforth no person of a different religion shall be required to pursue any Bible study or attend any religious gathering of any kind."

Thus it became evident that the real object of such regulations was to destroy the influence of Christian missions. Therefore it seemed best to leave Palestine until there is a betterment of the political situation there.

Another reason for leaving was the danger which was apprehended from the Turkish army which went to the Suez Canal. It was thought that the army, if defeated, might pass back through Palestine carrying ruin in its wake; and that the people of Ram Allah might be safer without the presence of the foreign missionaries—even tho' Americans.

The regret of leaving was partially mitigated by the fact that seven Syrians accompanied our party of seven Americans; and others would gladly have come, had it been practicable.

We took passage from Joppa on the battleship Tennessee, on the 29th of January. Fellow refugees with us were 1200 Jews from different localities. Arriving the next afternoon at Alexandria none were allowed to leave the customs until all had been unceremoniously vaccinated. Before leaving Alexandria a few days later, we had to have our pictures taken and put upon our passports—all this extra "red tape" because of the war. Our ship from Alexandria stopped at Piraeus, near Athens, and here we had an eight days' wait. In connection with sight-seeing there, our party, on Sabbath morning, gathered in a simple meeting for worship under the shadow of Mars Hill.

Our ship, the Carpathia of Titanic fame, finally started for New York. It stopped at many ports because of freight, which increased the tediousness of our voyage.

When not far from Messina a wireless message came that two German submarines were somewhere in our vicinity! So no lights were allowed on the decks that night and the portholes were shut and closely curtained. At Gibraltar four English Destroyers were seen to follow each other in quick succession. One night in mid-ocean the captain remained "on the bridge" all night.

And so when the voyage ended on the 9th of March it was with gratitude to our Heavenly Father that we stepped upon our native shores. Eunice Darden Meader.

OUR STATE INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF.

Julia McBane is a young girl from Spring who has been for a few years a student at the Institution for the Deaf at Morganton. Five years ago the visitor saw this tiny girl in a long line of little girls marching to recitation rooms. Julia's attention being called by a signal from a teacher, she stepped aside to see the strange and [illegible] Now after the lapse of five years the writer is both pleased and surprised to see in The Deaf Carolinian, that excellent paper published at the Institution for the Deaf, an article from the pen of Julia McBane. It is a story revealing what she saw in a moving picture. All the characters are presented in a realistic manner and the whole is a dramatic article of a column and a half showing an originality of thought and perception rare in a girl who has not had the faculty of hearing. It is doubtful if the readers of the Messenger appreciate the great work of this institution for the unfortunate deaf. No missionary in the foreign field is doing greater work than Dr. Goodwin and his efficient faculty in reaching the imprisoned minds of the hundreds of deaf children in North Carolina and leading the pupils in preparation for a life of usefulness—well educated and prepared to take their places as citizens. Miss Olivia Blount Grimes as editor of The Deaf Carolinian is skillful in bringing out the native ability of the pupils in the periodical printed by the students who are learning the printer's art.

THE GREAT ALTERNATIVE!

"Follow Me."—Matthew viii, 22.

That is a startling observation of John Morley in his "Voltaire," when, in describing the great Frenchman's visit to England, he speaks of the impression which was made upon him by the Quakers. While touched only in a general way by English Protestantism, says Morley, one sect "made a sort of mark on his mind"—the one namely "which conceived the idea that Christianity has after all something to do with the type and example of Christ!"

That there is justification for this caustic comment of the great English author upon the Christianity of the Western world needs no demonstration to-day, when this world is being deluged with the blood of combatants, each one of whom invokes the aid of Christ against the other. The steadfast Quakers have ever said, and, to their eternal honor, stil lsay in this fearful hour, that they do not believe in war and will not go to war, not because they are afraid of death, but because they are not wolves, nor tigers nor dogs, but Christians—those who try as best they can to follow the example and obey the precepts of the "Prince of Peace." But not so with the overwhelming majority of men in Europe to-day, who find it entirely consistent with their Christianity to slaughter their brethren who chance to speak anothe language and salute a different flag.

Nor is war the only violation of the religion of the Nazarene. What can be said, for example, on behalf of the acceptance by a Christian civilization of the traditional business principle of ruthless competition? How can the pursuit of wealth be justified by one who takes the name of Him "who had nowhere to lay his head"? What of a warring nation which worships Him who called all men His brethren? How can race prejudice, class hatred, religious intolerance find refuge in the heart which seeks to know the Master's spirit of universal love? Look at the things we do, the emotions we feel, the ideals we cherish, the institutions we support—and wherein can any of them be made consistent with the life and [illegible] Jesus? It is as though it were about time for the so-called Christian world to face in sober earnest the great alternative—either to follow Jesus as a true leader of men or else frankly to repudiate Him as a dreamer and fanatic! If we really believe in our heart of hearts that Christianity is utterly impracticable, then let us say so and openly take Mammon and not God as our Father. But if we believe that "the type and example of Christ" involve the only true and, in the last analysis, the only really workable way of living, then let us, with such mistakes as are inevitable but with such sincere endeavor as is not impossible, strive to conform our civilization to this "type" and pattern our individual lives after this "example." No sin did Jesus hate more perfectly or smite more terribly than the sin of hypocrisy. And this is the very sin of which we are most fully culpable today. Jesus said to His disciples, without qualification, "Follow me!" If we desire to be regarded to "follow" let us not pretend to be His disciples. Let us confess our repudiation and defend it as best we can!—John Haynes Holmes.

WHEN DESTRUCTION IS ALMOST COMPLETE THEY WILL TALK PEACE.

When the nations of Europe have worn themselves out; when their soldiers have devastated lands that only a short time ago were blessed with prosperity and abundance; when thousands, perhaps millions, of lives have been snuffed out in the quarrel between kings for preservation of royal baubles; when the wails of countless widows and fatherless children shall be heard around the world, and when the trade, commerce and industries of half the earth shall have been paralyzed—then will a board of arbitration composed of some neutral governments, if there should be any left, sit down to determine what could have been settled without the loss of a single life.—Ex.

THE WONDERFUL WORLD.

Great, wide, beautiful, wonderful World,
With the wonderful water round you curled,
And the wonderful grass upon your breast,—
World, you are beautifully drest.

The wonderful air is over me,
And the wonderful wind is shaking the tree:
It walks on the water, and whirls the mills,
And talks to itself on the top of the hills.
You, friendly Earth! how far do you go
With the wheat fields that nod and the rivers that flow,
With cities and gardens, and cliffs and isles,
And people upon you for thousands of miles?

Ah, you are so great, and I am so small,
A whisper within me seemed to say—
"You are more than the Earth, though you are such a dot;
You can love and think, and the Earth can not!"

ONE MOTHER.

Hundreds of shells on the shore together;
Hundreds of birds that go singing by,
Hundreds of birds in the sunny weather.
Hundreds of dewdrops to greet the dawn;
Hundreds of bees in the purple clover;
Hundreds of butter-flies on the lawn;
But only one mother.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

LETTER FROM CUBA.

We praise God for the light that is breaking over the hills and the valleys of the district of Santa Cruz del Norte. A great storm of wind and pouring rain has just passed this A. M., too, and the sunlight is now flooding the hills and dales with welcome light. So our hearts are made glad today because of God's love light in the new-born souls and for the light of His sun after the wind and dark rain, with all the doors and windows closed, without a single glass window to let in the rays of light. How we appreciate our blessings after being deprived of them, if only for a few hours! The revival continues in the hearts of the Christians and many are under conviction who have not yet yielded to God.

The first new soul, the birth of our eight-year-old, was the beginning of the revival; next a dear young girl out across the hills who had not yet attended the daily meetings in session. Now, her whole heart and life goes out in prayer and pleading for the unsaved. How her face beams with the life and light of Christ within! Then another young woman; then a mother with a large family, neighbor of the first girl mentioned; then a man, head of a family; then another neighbor of his, and so on, one by one, and God grant it may continue! Only two weeks of daily meetings were held as other appointments must be attended to. Martha Woody's services were most helpful during these meetings and a number of souls yielded to God through her earnest pleadings. Before her return to Madruga she received notice of the death of a young girl who for a long time had been trying to deceive her in make-believe or pretended conversion in order to avoid further persuasion on the part of the Christians. When taken suddenly very ill her friends asked her if they should send for the missionary and the Christians of the mission in that town. She replied, "No, I want nothing of Jesus." Then she added, do not have any of them come, I am not going to die, I cannot, I will not die." A little later she called out, "Please do not leave me alone, do not go out of the room or the devil will carry me away. He is taking me, he will carry me off." And thus she died, without hope. In utter despair she went out of this life into the darkness and horrors of hell. "God's Spirit will not always strive with man." The sin against the Holy Spirit is the unpardonable sin. To sin against the still small voice speaking within, to disobey this tender voice,—this is the Holy Spirit, to disobey this voice and continue to disobey means that there will come a last time when this Holy Spirit within will cease to strive again. Then He will take His flight and the soul will be left in utter despair. Readers, take this warning. It may not be the unconverted always who commit this sin, but God's chosen ones too, God's messengers, are in danger of committing this sin if they fail to obey the Holy Spirit's teaching. A woman in this town turned her face and her influence against the gospel and all the Christians, doing all in her power to pull down those established in the faith. Then her husband, an honored and beloved sergeant, was called to another town. [illegible] tors were called [illegible] young life and health and beauty, perfectly sound body, and could do nothing for her. devoted husband on leaving the house for his business called a friend and sent her to his house to be company for his wife. When the friend reached the home the wife had already taken her life by poison. On the bed beside her lay this note: "Lay not this deed to any other than myself. Life is so sad I cannot bear it longer."

God help us all to be faithful, obedient, courageous, and true,—filled with love divine! Please pray much for these convicted ones that they may yield to God. Gratefully and faithfully yours,

A Ellen Woody Pain.

OBITUARY.

LINNIE COLTRANE SMITH, the second daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. W. Coltrane, was born Oct. 8th, 1891. She professed faith in Christ and joined Grace Methodist Protestant Church, Greensboro, January 13, 1901.

She was quiet in manner, of a modest, retiring disposition, so that although she grew in grace during the years of her Christian life, she was never demonstrative in her devotions. She was of that type of character that is always loved and esteemed most by those who know it best, and had reached a maturity of Christian growth in her young womanhood that was very beautiful and rare.

Last October, the 20th, the writer united her in marriage to William Oscar Smith. Their attachment had been mutual from the very first, their dispositions were so much alike that discord could hardly have found a place in their domestic life had they lived long upon the earth.

Linnie was stricken with that dread destroyer that takes off so many of our youth. Taking a severe cold on her bridal tour to northern cities, her powers of resistance were weakened and she never quite regained her strength. On April 10, that which was immortal of her left its frail tenement for the mansions in our Father's House.

She was ready; talked of her departure as though she were preparing to make a visit to some place on the earth. She committed her loved ones to the God who had saved her soul, gave directions as to her funeral, selecting the songs, thanked her pastor for his visits to her, and after sleeping soundly for some time awakened only to pass out of life without a struggle in the early hours of the night.

These verses were found upon her bed where they had been kept and read during her last days:

I thought upon the happy dead,
So calm, so sweet, so still,
And wished that I might be as they,
Beyond the reach of ill.

I thought upon the happy dead,
Serene and holy, blest,
And wished that I might be as they:
Forever so, at rest.

I thought upon the happy dead,
'Mongst whom I longed to be,
And wondered, could I hear them speak,
If they would say to me:

"Think not upon the happy dead,
For they are not so blest,
Unless on earth they did a thing
To earn eternal rest."

Funeral services were held by her pastor in her church and her body was borne to Green Hill Cemetery to rest till the resurrection of the just shall bring forth the living and the dead into their habitations eternal and in the heavens.

R. M. Andrews.

STATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

The annual convention of the State Christian Endeavor Union will be held this year, June 4th-6th, in the First Presbyterian Church of Wilmington. Renowned for its old-time Southern hospitality, and situate, as it is, in one of the most historic sections of the State, only a few miles from the popular resorts of Wrightsville Beach and Carolina Beach (the former being reached by trolley and the latter by means of the S. S. "Wilmington," which plies between Wilmington and Southport), Wilmington offers attractions, especially in summer, which should be well-nigh irresistible to those in search of a pleasurable outing.

And this is doubly true of the Christian Endeavor workers of our State, for here are to be found the largest and most enthusiastic band of Endeavorers in North Carolina. For years it has been the banner city, in this respect, the Societies of St. Andrews Presbyterian and of the First Presbyterian church having taken turns in carrying off the State Banner, until it has been found necessary to provide a secondary banner for the other societies to compete for, since they stood no chance at all in a contest with Wilmington.

The presence of the Wilmington delegation has ever been an inspiration at our State Christian Endeavor Conventions, and it will be evident that this effect will be greatly enhanced by meeting with them and seeing them at work on their own ground. Those who attended the 1912 Convention will not forget the uplift and enthusiasm they experienced, the delightful fellowship and the royal good time they enjoyed as the guests of the St. Andrews C. E. Society.

The host Society is already drawing up plans for the entertainment of the coming Convention, and a tentative program is being compiled. No pains will be spared to make it the best convention in the history of Christian Endeavor in this State, and one which no one with the interest of the cause at heart can afford to miss.

ALL THINGS BEAUTIFUL.

C. F. ALEXANDER.

All things bright and beautiful,
All creatures great and small,
All things wise and wonderful,
The Lord God made them all.

Each little flower that opens,
Each little bird that sings,
He made their glowing colors,
He made their tiny wings.

The purple-headed mountain,
The river, running by,
The morning, and the sunset
That lighteth up the sky;

The tall trees in the greenwood,
The pleasant summer sun,
The ripe fruits in the garden,—
He made them, every one.

MONEY RECEIVED FOR SEWING MACHINE FOR CHILDREN'S HOME.

We we will make further report of this when the contest is ended, May 1. Collectors will please report promptly to pastors at that time that they may send in the lists and that we may see who are the winners. Bro. Garrett was in today and left a check for his part of the Garrett-Grabs fund. He informs us that the Singer Sewing Machine sent is satisfactory and that it is accepted. The Home girls are now happy, and it remains to be seen what we can do to make the boys and girls who did the soliciting happy.

NOTICE.

The twenty-second annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Home Missions will be held in the Methodist Protestant Church on Mt. Royal Ave., North Baltimore, Md., May 25 to 28. A cordial welcome will be given all delegates and visitors. Let all branches be represented by at least two delegates. Please see that all reports and money are sent to the proper officers after the April meeting. Miss Alice Conway, Cor. Sec.

—The Maryland Conference meets in April. It met this year in Washington, D. C., and seems to have had an unusually interesting session. It enjoyed addresses from President Wilson, Secretary of State Bryan, and Secretary of the Navy Daniels. For several years it has had on hand a needless controversy as it seems to us over the quadrennial Conference may limit it to one year. Bro. Bowers was elected for the fourth year of continuous service.

—Rally Day at High Point last Sunday brought about 500 into the church service.

—Our thanks to Bro. E. O. Pritchett of Westminster Theological Seminary for an invitation to commencement, May 2-4. Bro. Pritchett's name appears among the graduates, the subject of his thesis being Church Polity.

—The death (last Saturday night) of Col. A. B. Andrews, of Raleigh, removes one of the leading railroad men of the country. He had long been First Vice President of the Southern Railway Co.

—Bro. G. W. Hunt, of Pinnacle, was among the worshipers in Grace Church last Sunday. He was in Greensboro visiting a son in the employ of the N. C. Public Service Co. He himself is a son of the Rev. Isaac Hunt, now deceased.

—Bro. J. H. Spencer, of Seagrove, was in our city on Tuesday.

—Mrs. Fred Neer, of Mechanicsburg, O., Treasurer of the W. B. of Home Missions, is in Grant Hospital, Columbus, O. Very little hope is entertained of her recovery.

—Bro. Gerringer is unfortunate in the loss of a horse which cost him $290. It was a fine buggy horse. Death came as the result of overeating and under-exercise, he says.

THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XXI. GREENSBORO, N. C., APRIL 29, 1915. NUMBER 29.

—Bro. A. O. Lindley has a school closing May 13-16. President Harper, of Elon College, is to preach the annual sermon on Sunday, May 16th.

—AlexanderDowie had followers that are now ashamed of having been his followers. Russell now has followers that we predict will be ashamed that they have ever followed him.

—A report came to our office this week that one of our churches has been injured by Russellism. What a shame that a community intelligent enough to establish a Methodist Protestant church should be duped by such an impostor as Russell!

—And the Baltimore Sun has fallen under the influence of Russell's gold and publishes his "sermons" at so much a line. The readers ought to raise such a storm of protest that the Sun would see that it does not pay to hire out its columns to any one who has Error for sale.

—Bro. Millaway concluded a two-weeks' meeting at Gibsonvile, Bro. Self's charge, last Saturday night. There were 29 professions, most of them in the second week. Bro. Millaway has come to believe that one week is not long enough for a successful meeting in many communities.

—The Summer Conference has made good for two summers. It can do better still this summer by more going and by putting more time and thought into the preparation. If everybody knew that everybody else was going, wouldn't there be more to inspire in the preparation? Why not all determine to go and say so now?

—Dr. Harris Glascock gave a reception in her home last night for the members of the Branch Meeting of the W. F. M. S. It was a pleasant occasion, making the members better acquainted with each other, and putting them in better preparedness for the work of their meeting at Moriah to-day and to-morrow.

Henderson, Burlington, Greensboro, High Point, Asheboro, and Moriah churches were represented at the reception to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society last night.

—Oral report from the Siler City City meeting of ladies held in the interest of Home Missions says the meeting was a splendid one—one of the best yet held. We presume a written report will come in.

—We would call attention to a selected article on the Power of Prayer printed on fourth page. The praying people are the prevailing people. Our church is going to be strong and influential in proportion as it is a praying church. We pray our way into harmony with God so that He can use us most mightily. Let us be a praying people.

—The contest among solicitors in the Sewing Machine-Herald Contest ends this week. Please let us have all reports as soon as possible.

—Bro. Dixon for the Board of Young People's Work urges upon attention the idea of local rallies. Whatever may be thought of going long distances to conventions, there can be no question that occasional local conventions with a good purpose and intelligently conducted are worth more than they cost. The same problems that are studied in the larger conventions may be studied in the local conventions and with peculiar reference to local conditions. Some of our pastors, we feel sure, do not make enough of the convention method of work. Let it be used whenever it can with profit to the work of the church.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

According to the action of the Conference last summer, we meet one week earlier this year than last. The opening date is June 21, 8 P. M. Closing, Thursday. We have not made definite arrangements as to the program, but will get to work on it possibly next week.

This reminder is to both pastors and people. We would like for many more charges to pay the expense of their pastors to Conference than last year. The Conference will certainly be worth both the time and expense of any pastor, and as the charge or the people receive the benefits which the pastors receive of this character, it does appear that every live charge will be glad to give the pastor the trip at least, this year.

Secondly, we want to have a full attendance of our pastors, and hope that all will be governed by the date of the Conference in making out the plan of their revival meetings. Every preacher taking the Conference Course will find that this Summer Conference is for him as well as for the others. The Chairman has been surprised at the few of our licensed preachers who have attended the two former conferences. It was in the mind of the formers of this Conference that it should be of very great service to the young men who are yet taking the course of study, and will be glad to arrange the program this year with this in view.

We shall be glad also to receive at once any topic any one can furnish us that appeals to him as being appropriate and possible for this Conference. R. M. Andrews, Pres.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE YOUNG CHRISTIAN.

BY MISS HATTIE HARRIS AT THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

The history of Solomon, who is the supposed author of these words, is a valuable comment on the vanity of all human grandeur. Having resorted to wealth and power, learning and public achievements, wine and pleasure, feasting and mirth, in pursuit of happiness, he pronounced them all to be "vanity and vexation of spirit." After this, he shows the whole duty and true felicity of man; the sum of which is, to fear God and keep his commandments, which he sets forth in these words: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thought, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." As the best means of shunning that vanity and obtaining this felicity, he recommends early piety, saying, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Believing, as we do, that it is still the best safe-guard to the morals, reputation, manners, present and future prospects of the youth of our country, we are not ashamed to imitate, in our feeble way, the example of the wise man: and therefore we want to talk about this text with reference to their spiritual good. We remember our Creator in the sense of our text only when we love Him with the whole heart and dedicate unto Him our time, our talent, our all. The time for this dedication is in our youthful days. When a child is old enough to know sin, he is at the right age to give himself unto the Lord. We are commanded to remember our Creator while the evil days delay their coming, and we shall have Him for our "strong hold" when affliction and troubles come. Doubtless Solomon realized what a youthful mind and body meant as compared with old age. God wants our best. We do not like to limit his mercies and say that he won't save the old man who is hardened in sin, but it is dishonoring Him when we bring Him our worn-out selves. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good that are accustomed to evil." We want our lives saved as well as bringing ourselves into the kingdom. Some of us who were reared in pious homes do not remember when we became Christians. There was no great change wrought in us. Have we developed within these few years? Are we stronger in the faith than when we first believed? Have we exercised our faith by our works? If not, we are spiritually dead, for "faith without works is dead." There is no time to lose in our Master's work. To make a fully developed Christian the boy or girl has to begin with the "little deeds of kindness and words of love." "I often ask to get light at evening time, O Lord. I should like to have a smile for the weary, though my own soul be sad. Men ask for a rainbow in the cloud; but I would ask more from Thee. I would be, in my cloud, myself a rainbow—a minister to others' joy."

"The faith of the head
Is the faith that is dead;
The faith of the heart
Is better, in part;
But the faith of the hand
Is the faith that will stand;
For the faith that will do
Must include the first two."

We know that development in the material world must be brought about by work; even so with the spiritual. There is always a place for the Christian to find work to do, even though he is young. Certainly he can't grow without exercising his faith; but he will go back to the world just as a piece of machinery will rust if not used. It is not enough to attend church and Sunday school; yea, and even to hold a prominent place in this work—it is the every day life that counts. Some one has likened church and Sunday-school attendance unto the leaves of a tree, while every day living up to the ten commandments and the great Sermon on the Mount may be called the real fruit. These truths are not only applicable to the older people, but just as truly do they apply to the young Christian. We cannot get full development unless we are enthusiastic and anxious for the best in God's Kingdom. Some of us have already found that the way is strait and narrow and it takes daily striving after the right to keep anywhere in sight of the promised land. Can we be satisfied with merely being saved? Don't we know that there are degrees of happiness in Heaven? Do you want a shining crown, or are you content to be saved as by fire?

"They hope to wear a starry crown, in yonder realm of day
Who shrink from every cross their Lord would here upon them lay;
They would wear the victor's palms, 'mid that triumphant throng,
Who never made one struggle here for the conquest of right or wrong."

What kind of development is yours? O for a greater zeal in the Master's work! The indifference among the young people in our churches is appalling. Why is this? "Good times" choke out the love for Christian development. Would that these good time seekers could be impressed with the fact that they are building for eternity! What kind of material are they sending up? Would you grow in grace?

Look all around you, find some one in need,
Help somebody to-day!
Tho' it be little—a neighborly deed—
Help somebody to-day!

Many have burdens too heavy to bear,
Help somebody to-day!
Grief is the portion of some everywhere,
Help somebody to-day!

Some are discouraged and weary in heart:
Help somebody to-day!
Some one the journey to Heaven should start;
Help somebody to-day!
Help somebody to-day,

Somebody along life's way;
Let sorrow be ended,
The friendless befriended,
Oh, help somebody to-day!

A story is told of a man wearily struggling along with a heavy suit case. He sees an old woman with a bundle and as he lifts her burden his own is balanced. Do you see that even little things count?

Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
Where the throngs of men go by.
They are weak, they are strong,
They are good, they are bad,
Wise, foolish—so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man!

Jesus Christ gave us a true example of this. He was a friend to man and is now our best example. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Here is how we can grow—by doing the things which St. James says are the real things which count for Christianity. "Ye are my witnesses," saith the Lord; then go out and live so people will know it. Less of self and more of Thee—that's Christianity. Mr. Sunday says, "You'll have power when there is nothing questionable in your life." Let this be the motto of every young Christian, "To so live that Christians who meet me may become better Christians." Let's give this serious thought. One trouble with our young people is thoughtlessness. It is said of Othello that "His ruin was wrought for want of thought." Don't let's be thoughtless as to things spiritual. The young Christian who is striving for development is gaining a victorious life.

Speak, history, who are life's victors?
Unroll thy long annals and say:
Are they those whom the world calls victors,
Who won success in a day?
The martyrs of Nero, the Spartans who fell
At Thermopylae's pass,
Or the Persians and Xerxes, the judges or Socrates,
Pilate or Christ?

SHOULD A TEACHER OF THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL BE REQUIRED TO STAND AN EXAMINATION ON THE DOCTRINES OF THE BIBLE?

If we answer this question by saying No, we at once admit that we do not require as much preparation by our teachers in the Sunday school as by our teachers in the day schools, or else we assume that the Sunday school teachers will of their own accord make this preparation. The day school no longer assumes that its teachers know the subjects to be taught, but requires proof of it by examinations held either by school boards of by college professors. Does the State value the teaching of a child more than the church does?

If God's Word is to be a "light unto the child's feet and a lamp unto his path" as he goes through the world, how can we afford to put so much stress upon our day-school teaching and be so careless about our Sunday school teaching? Sometimes we think, "Well, I know I am not what I ought to be as a Sunday school teacher, but I just do the best I can." If that be you, teacher, you are to be commended and you will be rewarded. But I wonder how many teachers there are over this land who are really doing the best they can. When the Sunday school hour is over, are we conscious of an honest effort put forth to help those in our class understand God's word better, and love more the right ways of living and doing, and do we feel that we have helped them to get some light for their path the next week? If not, haven't we failed, and where does the fault lie?

If we answer this question, Should a Sunday school teacher be required to stand an examination on the doctrines of the Bible? by saying Yes, at once various questions arise, such as, Where would we ever get enough teachers? Who would hold these examinations? What would you do when you find a really good person with the teacher's instinct and yet that person could not pass the examination? Would you let a person with a questionable character teach because he or she understands the doctrines of the Bible?

All this makes the situation very complex just now. We can't reach the top of a mountain at one step, but by getting the direction, then beginning where we are and going steadily step by step in that direction, in due season we shall reach the top. Now if we can get a vision of what we want our Sunday school to be, and then find out the way to get that and are fortunate enough to possess the perseverance and patience required, we shall in due time have that Sunday school.

In nearly every Sunday school convention and conference, an important part of the program is given to the discussion of "How to get efficient teachers." This shows us that the Sunday school world realizes that one great need in the Sunday school to-day is better teachers; and thinking people are trying to get the vision of how this may be accomplished. The International Interdenominational Association has in a way solved the problem by having the Teacher Training Course. Let the superintendent, pastor or Sunday school council select from among the young people those who would be teachers and organize them into a Training Class under the direction of some one selected as teacher. A man in each state is at the head of the department. He has sub-officers in each county. When the class is organized books can be gotten from him, and a regular systematic course covering the entire Bible be studied with examinations at regular intervals prepared by this department, and subject to its approval or disapproval.

When Christian young people with the teacher's instinct have spent two years or more in this training class, and have passed the required examinations, they will have stood examinations on the doctrines of the Bible. Now let these people have the means to secure the proper literature and equipments, and then see if ten years from to-day will not bring us nearer our ideal Sunday school. A man who had moved away went back to his home town in the eastern part of the state, and found a new church with different Sunday school rooms, modern equipments, and a large, live flourishing school. When he asked how it all came about, he was told that ten years before a teacher training class had been organized, and that this class had brought about these changes. If the plan worked so well there, why will it not work as well elsewhere?—Paper read by Miss Maud Seeley, Easley, S. C.

THE TWO GREAT WARS.

BY J. CAMPBELL WHITE.

The European War.—1. Twenty million soldiers in physical peril. 2. One million men killed in first six months. 3. Cost to kill a man, about $3,500. 4. Cost of European war over $40,000,000 daily. 5. Fighting strength of armies, over 20 million. 6. Develops hatred. 7. Is destructive. 8. Settles nothing finally.

The World War.—Fifty times twenty millions of people in spiritual bondage and death. 2. Two million people people die every month in heathen lands. 3. Cost to give the Gospel to the world, about $2 per person. 4. Expended in World-War about $35,000,000 annually. 5. Total missionary force, 12,000 men and 12,000 women. 6. Promotes friendliness. 7. Is constructive. 8. Establishes Christ's enduring Kingdom and ultimately eliminates all war. Isa. 2: 2-4.

Will the Church make a serious effort to put its world-war on something approaching an adequate basis?

CASUAL NOTES.

A preacher had occasion to tell his congregation that the people are not well enough acquainted. He was right. However, those who lead are responsible first for this, but every one has a share of this serious responsibility. When but a boy I was surprised to hear that there were families in the cities living in the same big houses who knew nothing about each other, and cared nothing about each other. The idea of the preacher was that some people belonging to the same church and worshiping in the same congregation were hardly acquainted. The people do not use enough means for the needed acquaintance. Those who are interested in the singing get better acquainted by the singing, but many efforts for more united singing have been crippled by negligence. Such negligence may be noticed at most of church gatherings. Why learn to sing and then refuse to help sing? A young man, who could sing well, conceived the idea of being a preacher, but that was not his calling, but he could sing well; but he usually fails to help sing when he is so very much needed. If he would do his best singing, and not be negligent in other humble duties, he would go on in life successfully. He may not be needed much on any of the popular occasions, but at the humble quiet prayer service he is needed, and his best friends would be so very glad to have him there. It may be a means of grace even for him to help on popular occasions, but the means for him is to be humble enough to be at the quiet occasions to lead the singing. W. F. G.

ARE WE PRAYING?

Are we as Christians praying that God will call stronger men and stronger women into our church? Are we praying for all our ministers? Are we praying that God will impress and empower them each to develop and divinely cultivate each his territory?

Are we praying for those down and out whom God has forgiven, that they may be restored? Are we praying daily, "Thy Kingdom come! Thy will be done!" Are we praying for and receiving the Holy Spirit? The Master said God would give Him to those that ask Him. Are we finding out God? Are we trying, studying, testing that Being and probing into that exhaustless source of all good? Is Christ daily becoming more and more to us? Is he answering each day little prayers that cause life's friction to grow less? The breaking stubborn wills, and silently subduing the incorrigible. And are we ever careful to thank him for each? If He holds not our hands here, who will walk with us across the valley and up the steeps? A lady of wealth seemingly so happy stated in prayer meeting: "I have had as direct answer to prayer as to ask a servant for a glass of water and receive it at her hands." Beloved, is this our experience? If He answers in the infinitesimals, why not in the aggregate and major matters? If we are not praying thus it is possible to us. And if the thousands of readers of the Herald would do this, all the needs of our church would be met. And we would need no outside Billy Sundays to direct, but would have many of our own.

Are we studying the Master's words, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you ye may ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." Every letter in each word should be outlined with tiny electric bulbs, each bulb a diamond, that we, dazed by its splendor, and overwhelmed by its exhaustlessness, should find with enlarged vision anew the Christ and every word of the promise true. Have we studied it from every view-point? Is there anything the Omnipotent Father will not do for the twenty thousand M. P.'s thus united and incased in prayer? And, lastly, are we praying for the unconverted? Flat Rock Reporter.

PREACHERS SHOULD VISIT SCHOOLS.

Go to the school a little before the hour for their daily worship. The hearts of the teachers will be stirred when they hear you praying for them and their great work. Boys and girls will be impressed for good as they hear you praying for them and their parents. Parents will be made glad when they learn you are so much interested in their children. Brother preacher, here is a great field for you.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

"Prayer is the most potential thing in the world. It is not that prayer is anything, but rather that God is everything. For prayer lays hold on God, or, more accurately, permits God to lay hold on man, so that it brings God into human affairs as the Infinite One. And when the Almighty is in the midst of things he proves himself to be the invincible, all-conquering God.

"So then the man who prays is the most potential man in the world. It is not that man is anything, but rather that God is everything. For the man who prays puts himself in his true place as a suppliant, and God in his true place as the Benignant and Beneficent One. And when God's grace is thus set free it flows earthward in floods of blessing so that the desert places of life are made to rejoice and blossom as the rose.

"What we need then in this world is prayer. And what is necessary to obtain prayer is to secure men who will pray—not men who will think about prayer, or will talk about prayer, or will purpose some time or other to take time for prayer, but who will now and continually pray. Theorizing and good intentions do not move the arm that moves the world. What does this is nothing else or less than sec-rificial prayer. 'This kind goeth not out save by prayer and fasting.' "

This thought is forcefully illustrated in Men Who Prayed, by Henry W. Frost. This book is a series of meditations of the lives of those who knew prayer as a reality and whose experiences are recorded in the Old Testament. Such a contemplation of the lives of praying men will prove a helpful incentive to our own practice of prayer.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

A great gathering! There was hardly a dull moment the entire three days of the Convention. The attendance was an inspiration within itself, aside from the splendid program that characterized each session. The inspiration and information of the convention will no doubt add much to the life and efficiency of many of our churches throughout the N. C. District. Our Board of Young People's Work is to be greatly congratulated upon this convention, as is the church for its hearty and encouraging response. And now for another and bigger one next year! S. W. Taylor.

PRESENT AT THE THOMASVILLE CONVENTION.

The attendance was large enough to be gratifying, still it was felt that something was wanting because of the absence of representatives from a number of fields. The Thomasville pastor and delegates are to be added to the foregoing. The church was well filled we understand at every session after possibly the first afternoon. Bro. Pritchard thought it remarkable that every speaker came up with the part assigned him. The quality of the speeches was good. The only unfavorable criticism we heard was that some were extended through too much time.

—At the conclusion of Dr. Lewis's sermon on Sunday morning a baby that had been perfectly quiet all through suddenly broke out into vehement crying, suggesting the thought that it was Snookums crying for him to go on. But the doctor said, "I'm very much obliged to that baby."

BIBLES WANTED AT THE STATE SANATORIUM.

Nearly all the patients read quite a bit, for as the rest cure requires that they spend a great portion of their time in bed and sitting around, a great many improve their time by reading. Already friends of the Institution have contributed various books to the extent of about three hundred. The patients read these at the rate of fifty or more a week. Bibles, New Testaments, books, magazines, magazine subscriptions, song books and a subscription for seventy-five to one hundred Sunday-school lesson leaflets or quarterlies would be of much value to the patients who are there waging the battle of life and death with the Grim White Plague. Such books or literature, if sent by parcel post to the State Sanatorium, at Sanatorium, N. C., will receive a hearty welcome by the patients.—State Board of Health.

CAUSE AND CURE FOR HARD TIMES.

Please read Haggai, first chapter 6th verse. This verse introduces a very peculiar condition of the Jews. They had been in bondage in Babylon. Being liberated by Cyrus, he consented to their return to Jerusalem in order to build their city and restore their temple. Enemies of the Jews, however, sought the king in order to bias his mind against this procedure. They succeeded in their scheme, and an edict issued from Cyrus brought the work of rebuilding and restoring Jerusalem to a standstill. This silence was continued under Cambyses who succeeded Cyrus. For fourteen years not a hammer was heard nor the sound of the busy artisan. Darius, however, coming to the throne, changed silence into action, and lassitude into busy toil. The work, under this new decree, was hindered and hung heavily on the hand of Judaism, insomuch that Darius sent the Prophet Haggai to speak and cheer the people to the work. Upon his arrival he is confronted with the cry of "hard times." Therefore, they argued, it is not the time to build God's house. He speaks a rejoinder in the words of the verse cited above and analyzes their condition, deducing a cause therefore.

We notice, first the argument of the people. We have sown much and gathered little. Had their fields been barren? No! Had their wages been small? No! Why then the cry of hard times? They had been in contact with the luxurious life of Babylon. They had been servants in homes of different grades of life during the period of servitude. They had witnessed the wantonness of Babylonian life. They had learned to admire it. At first they spurned it. By daily contact they soon learned to endure it. Finally they embraced it, longing for it. The idolatry prevailing in Babylon had turned the hearts of Israel away from God and His service. They discovered that while God condemned a life of licentiousness and pride and luxurious extravagance, idolatry fosters and encourages all these and more. The people had from all these environments learned to become self-seeking. To disregard all else but personal aggrandizement and individual happiness. This led to financial distress from the fact that expenditures far exceeded receipts. Shylocks laid their hands upon these conditions, soon gaining control of the finances of the nation and, by seeking only their own enlargement, produced stringency throughout the entire borders of Israel. These Shylocks lived in costly ceiled houses while the masses lived in helplessness bordering on to want. They had forgotten God, utterly abandoning themselves to secure the much longed for freedom and luxury of Babylonian life. Listen if you please to the words of Haggai: "Is it time for you to live in your ceiled houses and God's house be waste? Was it honest, was it just, for these Shylocks to enrich themselves out of the earnings of the people, and turn the money thus secured to their own personal happiness and enlargement, when God had demands upon them? Also disregard His demands upon the common people? Again he turns his thoughts and words of censure to the common multitude and says: "Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is no warmth. He that earneth wages earneth them to gratify his own lust." God was entirely ignored. Self-seeking, licentiousness, and intemperance everywhere among them. Now let us turn our attention to the warring nations and to our own nation. We are living under the cry of hard times; and to be sure few of those living have ever seen more stringent times. Can we not from Israel's condition and history discover a cause? Have we not lost sight of God's demands? Have we not been fashioning our lives and customs according to the habits and customs of those who disregard the commandments of God? Largely reject His church and Gospel? Disregard His Sabbath? Is it not an alarming fact that the masses turn the Sabbath into a day of pleasure rather than worship and meditation? Have we not fallen into the hands of the money power of this land—gold bugs? Do they not hold sway in this our struggling country? Do they not live in ceiled houses while the masses groan under the loads upon them? Are not the masses responsible for this? First, because they have sought luxury, ease and worldly pleasure?

Greatness, not goodness, has been and is still the watchword of the world at large, not excluding our own nation.

And, secondly, is it not a fact, an almost universal habit of intemperance—in its broadest sense, and extravagance—prevails among all classes of society? The church as well being in many instances so allied that the robes of so-called charity are thrown over the carcass of these awful habits until a system of dissipation prevails. Can we not see from these facts and others lying along the pathway the real cause of our hard times? Our civilization, so elevated in many ways, has lost sight of the fact, that any civilization losing sight of man's development in his twofold nature, is void of the highest and best results.

Judaism cultivated alone the spiritual, and failed. Greece sought mental culture, and failed. The two must join in one. Mind and soul must be ministered unto in order to gain favor of God. Without that any nation or individual fails in her mission and her bags will prove but full of holes, and want and weakness will meet them on every hand.

LEADERS OF THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

BY ALLAN SUTHERLAND.

As we contemplate, with gratitude to God, the marvelous progress which the temperance cause has made during comparatively recent years, we should not be unmindful of those whose rare courage, prophetic vision and heroic devotion have made this progress possible; and, with Longfellow, we feel we should give

"Honor to those whose words or deeds
Thus help us in our daily needs."

When it was determined, in 1887, by the Ohio Temperance Alliance to initiate a movement throughout the state in the interest of a uniform township local-option law, the Rev. Howard H. Russell was appointed to be the leader. With characteristic enthusiasm and devotion, he entered upon the task, giving his entire time to securing petitions from all parts of the state. He also gave much attention to personal work among the members of the legislature in Columbus. In 1888, he was instrumental in securing the passage of the "Beatty Law," which provided for local option by townships.

From this and other successes, it was evident that a permanent state organization should be effected; and in 1893 the Ohio Anti-Saloon League was organized. By reason of his peculiar fitness for the position, Dr. Russell was invited to be the Superintendent. At the end of his first year's service three hundred local organizations were in existence in the state. The sentiment against intemperance increased, and in 1895, the American Anti-Saloon League was formed, with Dr. Russell as its Superintendent. He at once entered upon the task of organizing branch Leagues throughout the Union; and when he resigned in 1903, the Anti-Saloon League had secured a foot-hold in forty states and territories, due largely to his splendid zeal and activity. He will ever be gratefully remembered for his devotion to a great cause.

The Rev. Dr. P. A. Baker, the present National Superintendent, succeeded Dr. Russell, and was admirably qualified for the duties of his new position. Under his able leadership, the League has become an ever-increasing power in the advancement of civic righteousness and human betterment. He has been the League's chief executive since 1903, and under him the work has taken no backward steps. He is a man of marked firmness of will, and is a fine example of the reliant, self-educated man. Instinctively, he condemns the liquor traffic, and does all in his power for its ultimate overthrow. He has a righteous hatred of organized wrong, mixed with a keen sense of justice. His executive ability is of a rare order, and to him is due the credit of perfecting the work so well begun by Dr. Russell. Through the splendid results which have followed his efforts, temperance workers everywhere have reason "to thank God and take courage."

Another devoted worker who has given heroic service in the temperance fight is Mr. Ernest H. Cherrington, who holds a conspicuous place in the annals of temperance reform. He is a bold, trenchant writer, and the most gratifying results have followed his efforts with his pen. To him temperance workers are indebted for the informing "Anti-Saloon Year Book;" and through his editorial writings in several papers, and his able management of other periodicals, thousands of readers are being awakened to a consciousness of the evils of strong drink and the blessings of sobriety. As Editor-in-chief of "The American Issue," his influence for good is nation wide. His carefully prepared history of the temperance movement is proving most helpful. He is aggressive, enthusiastic and masterful. He was the originator of the National Council of One Hundred, which is broadly representative in its membership; and is the Chairman of the active committee of the Scientific Temperance Federation of Boston.

The Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie is another leader of prominence. He was one of the helpers of Dr. Russell in the earlier days of the temperance movement as an organized force, and is now the National Legislative Superintendent, in which position it is his duty to look after the League's interest at the national Capitol.

Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been, from the beginning, one of the foremost leaders and wise counselors of the temperance work, and has, in a very large degree, contributed to the success of the movement. Almost from its beginning, he has been the President of the American Anti-Saloon League, over which body he will preside at the great Atlantic City Convention in July.

Among other well-known and sympathetic leaders are the Hon. S. E. Nicholson, Editor of The American Friend, Richmond, Indiana, and National Secretary of the League; Wayne B. Wheeler, Esq., National Attorney, and Superintendent of the temperance work in Ohio; and W. H. Anderson, Esq., National Legislative Superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church and State Superintendent of New York.

With men like these on the program, and many others quite as able and widely known, there is little doubt that the Anti-Saloon League Convention to be held in Atlantic City, New Jersey, July 6th to 9th, will be the most remarkable and enthusiastic outpouring of temperance workers this continent has ever witnessed.

CIRCUIT AND COMMUNITY RALLIES.

The convention of young people which met in the Methodist Protestant Church at Thomasville has come and gone. And it was a splendid convention from beginning to end. One of the questions with the Board of Young People's Work was, "How shall we follow up this convention and keep its influence working?" Of course all the delegates were urged to go back to their home churches and keep the good work going, and we believe they are going to do that.

Another suggestion the Board wishes to make is this: and this article is written for the purpose of making the suggestion. We wish to ask our pastors and people to hold circuit and community rallies. Get some good speakers and hold these rallies throughout the entire Conference.

Yadkin College Ct. has its rally every Summer. We commend that and suggest that they continue the good work. Henderson, and Vance, and Granville used to hold such rallies; we hope they will plan for at least one such rally this summer. High Point, Lebanon, Welch Memorial, Guilford, Piedmont, and Thomasville are so situated that they can hold a rally in a central point and representatives from all the churches on these six charges can easily get to the meeting. Such a meeting is being planned for to be held at Pleasant Grove church. Let pastors and people take due notice and be ready to respond when the time is announced. The plan of the rallies is to hold all-day meetings with dinner on the grounds. Circuits and stations that are so situated that two or three or more charges can get together in these rallies can have splendid meetings. Let pastors confer, plan their meetings, give their people a social and spiritual good time, and thus do something that will prove a great uplift to the Methodist Protestant Church we love so much. This is written for and by request of the Board of Young People's Work. A. G. Dixon.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Richland Circuit.—I visited four churches on this charge and held the second quarterly conference. The attendance was not large either at the conference or local churches. I hope the attendance will improve since spring has come. The pastor is visiting the membership and this will have a good effect, I trust. The people are pleased with Bro. Highfill as a preacher and pastor and if the membership will co-operate with him good will be accomplished. Claim paid.

Asheboro Station.—I preached Sunday night to a very good congregation of young people. The attendance is not as large at the night appointment as at 11 o'clock, so said the pastor. This ought to be one of our strong fields, being surrounded as it is with Methodist Protestants on all sides. Those who are members I suppose are doing what they can, or the most of them; but from some cause our church here as well as at other places has not grown and developed as rapidly as it seemed it would at one time.

Bro. Whitaker is popular as a preacher and I trust he may have a good revival in his church this year and this will cause any church to grow; and, too, we need a revival in all our local churches, but we have allowed so many other things to get into our churches we are not surprised if we do not succeed in having a revival and say many times when the special effort is past. We had as good a meeting as I expected. Brethren, let us expect more. Claim to be paid soon.

Why Not Ct.—Rev. J. H. Stowe, pastor. I spent three days on this field and preached eight times. Congregations not large, as the appointments were in the week, but the attention to the word was good. At Star we have no church house but steps are being taken by the membership at this time to secure a lot. They have in cash and subscription something over $600. We need a church at this point badly and if we hope to succeed we must have it. Bro. Stowe's field is too large for any pastor to develop, but it is not large enough financially to support two men. No pastor is more popular with his people that I know than the Why Not pastor. May this be a good year for all. Claim paid.

C. A. Cecil.

Anderson Ct., S. C.—Rally day was observed at Fairview church, Saturday, April 17th. The services began at 10:30 A. M. A most interesting program was carried out. First, an address from Rev. Mr. Bailey, of Liberty, S. C., on Effective and Ineffective Life's Work. Rev. Mr. Waller, of Easley, S. C., spoke on Study of our Sunday school Lesson,—a very helpful talk. Rev. D. I. Spearman, of Mt. Airy church, made a short but earnest talk on The Influence of Old People in the Sunday-school, after which an intermission was given for dinner in which the ladies of the church did their part in serving a bountiful and well prepared dinner.

Miss Maud Cely read a paper which certainly did justice to Miss Cely: Should our Sunday school Teachers stand examinations? After this the meeting was for twenty minutes in open discussion. Rev. Sam. Danner, of Anderson, S. C., came last, on Qualifications of the S. S. Supt., which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Miss Sentel of Greenville rendered special music during the day. Rev. Mr. Lamar made a special effort to make a success of the day, which we appreciate.

Hebron, Lincoln Ct.—We have a good S. S., but as there are churches all around, we don't have as large a school as some others. All seem to take a good interest in the work; we have about 40 on roll. W. F. Boyles is Supt., W. A. Boyles Assistant, L. E. Boyles Sec., Bro. Carpenter first teacher, F. A. Boyles second teacher. We think we will have more soon. Some have been staying away on account of measles in the community. I think this is over with.

We received Children's Day Program last week and we are going to hold Children's Day some time as soon as convenient.——Bro. Loy was quite sick last Sunday; could hardly preach at one of his appointments. We heard he was better yesterday, glad to say, for we like our preacher very much. We think he is a man called of God and is trying to do His work. Pray for us that we may have a prosperous year in the work.——Sister Vashti Saine has been very sick at the hospital, but she is coming home today.

Lincoln Circuit.—President's appointments: Bess's Chapel, May 9, 11 A. M. Laurel Hill, 3 P. M. Macedonia, 7:30 P. M. Hebron, May 10, 11 A. M. Knob Creek, 3 P. M.

If not providentially hindered, I will meet the president at Fallston on the 8th of May at 3 P. M.

Yours very truly, D. M. Loy.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Ct.—Our S. S. is still doing nicely. Our attendance last Sun. was 139; collection, $5.02, which goes to our Children's Home. Our attendance for April was not as good as we would like to have had. We hope next month will be better.——Rev. C. H. Whitaker filled his regular appointments for us Sun. at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Good congregations were out Sun. night was the beginning of a series of meetings at our church. I want to ask all who are interested to pray for us that we may have a great revival, and many souls may be saved.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Ct.—I am sorry to say that we are not moving on a s we might, if all would take hold and help to bear the burden. All are aware when there is a heavy load, it takes some to pull and others to push. But we truly hope that every thing will clear away and all will move off nicely. Am sorry to note the sickness in Brother Frogdon's family; they have had three cases of pneumonia this winter; glad they are improving, and wish for them all speedy recovery. They need our prayers and our sympathy; also need us to lend them a helping hand. Now let's none hold back, but all do our part and it will be highly appreciated. I am confident.——Since I last wrote, President Cecil preached at our place. But owing to sickness the writer did not get out to hear him; was real sorry I could not be present. It was reported by those present that he preached an excellent sermon. We had made preparation to hold communion service at our church the last third Sabbath, but owing to serious sickness in Bro. Trogdon's family he could not leave home at that time.——We were delighted to have our son Ray, also Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Moore and son, of Guilford College, to make us a visit on the eleventh.——We wish the kind editor and the Herald's many readers a long and happy life and still broader field. Mrs. C. H. Hill.

———o———

Burlington.—After a silence of two weeks your Burlington correspondent wishes to be heard again through the columns of the Herald.. It was not because we had nothing to report that Burlington was not represented in the last two issues, but because we simply neglected to write, or, to be more specific, we did not find sufficient time to do so.

Our work has been moving along in an ideal manner since the last report was made. We have had the usual attendance at Sunday school and the preaching services. Our mid-week prayer meetings have continued with the usual interest and attendance. However, the attendance upon these services has never been as good as it should have been. The new method of conducting the services has, in a measure, brought about an improvement in the attendance as well as the interest. This method to which we refer is that of the laity having charge of the meetings.——Many things have occurred in our church and Sunday school during the past three weeks, of which we will mention only a few. On Tuesday night, April 6th, the regular monthly meeting of the church conference was held. The attendance was as usual, and many things of importance pertaining to our church work were transacted. The Ladies' Aid Society held a cake sale on Friday and Saturday, April 16 and 17, for the purpose of raising funds to purchase more carpet for the church, as we understand. Our church can certainly boast of this organization as a real auxiliary and one that is truly an aid to the church; one of which we are proud and regard as a most valuable asset to our church organization.——It was the pleasure and good fortune of the writer to attend three sessions of the Young People's Convention at Thomasville on Saturday and Sunday. It is our regret that we did not attend the whole of the convention, but the splendid addresses to which we listened and the inspiration gathered from them doubly repaid us for the sacrifice made in attending the convention. The addresses of Drs. Feeman and Lewis were profoundly impressive and helpful, as was also the one by Rev. Mr. Bethea. We believe that all who attended the convention are convinced that the convention was a success and deserves to be perpetuated. Bro. Curry went on Friday morning and remained throughout the entire convention.

Rev. B. M. Williams, a ministerial student at Elon College, preached for us Sunday morning and night in the absence of Bro. Curry. The congregations were fairly good and Mr. Williams delivered two very interesting and helpful sermons.——Next Sunday will be "Philathea Day" in our Sunday-school. The two Philathea classes will combine and have charge of the Sunday school, and will render a special program. We are expecting a large attendance and great day.——Next Sunday being the first Sunday in the month, the regular communion service will be observed.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Geo. W. Coble, who has been sick for a few weeks, is improving slowly.——Those of our young people who attended the Baraca-Philathea convention in Raleigh were Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Stafford, Miss Elsie Moser, Messrs. J. B. Turner, M. O. Barton, Will Coble and Lonnie Braxton. Chas. B. Way.

———o———

Asheville.—Wasn't it fine, that convention? My! you folks who stayed home missed it by a mile or more! I was mightily obliged to the Philathea class for sending me, but I didn't then know it would be so good. I'm a thousand times thankful now. I look upon it as one of the mountain top experiences of my Christian life—a great inspiration for larger things for the Master.——And I'm happy. I never was happier. Not even the day I got married. This morning Bro. Barrett came to me with his already broad face made considerably broader by an expansive smile. He had good news to tell me. He had just had a talk with one of the doctors living near the church and invited him out to the services. The simple invitation resulted in a check for $35 for the church. I cordially invite the entire city of Asheville, and the State of North Carolina, to visit our church.——And then I'm happy at the result of my visit to Thomasville. I didn't go there with any expectation of getting any help for our church here, but I had a chance—or took it—of presenting the situation, and while my appeal did not meet with a great response financially, it was successful and will be more so. I was greatly touched with the expressions of interest in my letter, and in the sympathy of the delegates toward the church here. "Bear ye one another's burdens," certainly isn't a forgotten injunction with our young people.——And I'm happy at the way our meeting is starting out. The attendance was not large last night, but the interest was good. Our folks have already fallen in love with Bro. Bethea. We are going to have a great time. Pray for the meeting.——Our pulpit was well taken care of Sunday, and I am told the services were well attended and inspiring. Dr. Morris, of the Presbyterian church, preached in the morning, and Bro. J. B. Thrall, of the Congregational church, at night.

I have set me a big task, and I want you to help me. I must raise $600 within the next three months. I am depending on you to help me raise it. I want an offering from every church in the conference that has not yet taken one. Some of you pastors promised to take one, you know, and most of you haven't done so. And from every individual member of the Conference who hasn't yet contributed. Come along with that pledge. Wake up, and help us. Three notes for $600 already two months overdue. Say, what's the matter with you? Come on! C. W. Bates.

The second quarterly conference for Flat Rock circuit will meet in Bethel church on next Saturday, May 1st, at 11 A. M. This notice is rather late but we expect to have a good attendance anyway. On next Sunday we are to have two services at Bethel. At 11 A. M. we will have preaching. The afternoon service will be in the interest of the Sunday school. Bros. John M. Stone, W. W. Hunter, and W. S. Jones, of Greensboro, will be with us. Bro. Stone will lead in the service. We expect to hear from Bros. Hunter and Jones also. These are all former Flat Rock circuit men and Bros. Stone and Jones are Bethelites. The 3rd Sunday in this month Bethel had an enrollment of 75 scholars and had 75 present. Three, however, were visitors. Last Sunday the enrollment reached 81. We hope to reach 100 next Sunday. "The largest and best ever" is the slogan of the Bethel school and the goal has already been reached. He have now fixed the time and secured help for three of our special meetings as follows: Palestine, 3rd Sunday in July, Rev. Geo. L. Curry to assist; Flat Rock, the 4th Sunday in July, Rev. A. G. Dixon to assist; Bethel, 1st Sunday in August, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk to assist. Flat Rock Ct. had fifteen representatives at the Young People's Convention at Thomasville on last Saturday.

———o———

Graham and Haw River.—We will hold our second quarterly conference in Graham church Sat. P. M. at 3 o'clock before the first Sun. in May. A full attendance is desired. We will nominate delegates to Annual Conference at this session. Come! be on time, we will need you.

O. B. Williams.

———o———

Siler City.—We had the largest Sunday school last Sunday that we have ever had, there being 63 present; collection, $2.35. We were delighted to have Bro. O. A. Hanner with us again, as he has been kept away for some time on account of his health and the extremely bad weather; but we hope that he may be with us each Sunday. After Sunday school Bro. Bowman preached for us a splendid sermon. There was a large congregation and all seemed to enjoy it thoroughly. The N. C. Branch of the Woman's Home Missionary Society meets with us this week, and I hope that it will be the best meeting ever held yet, and that much good will be accomplished. Mrs. Edgar Woody.

———o———

Mt. Pleasant, Piedmont Ct.—Our second quarterly conference was held at Spring Hill last Saturday, the 24th, with a good attendance, all churches represented but one. Union Ridge has never been represented since the formation of the circuit, I am sorry to say. Bros. W. D. Payne and J. F. Evans were nominated for delegate to the Annual Conference. Finances are behind, considering the time of year. Bro. Shelton preached to us yesterday to a large congregation, using the Ten Commandments for his subject. We believe this was the best sermon we have heard him preach, while all his sermons are good. He seems to be growing in favor with the people the longer he is with us. Our S. S. started up the first Sunday in April with about 30, but has steadily grown and on last Sunday we numbered 74; and yet there are others that should come. Bro. Geo. R. Pitts, of Canaan, has been real sick with pneumonia for two weeks; is now better. Bro. Pitts is one of our official members and a good man and we hope he will soon be well. Miss Girtha Stone, daughter of J. R. Stone, was taken to the hospital at High Point two weeks ago for an operation; returned home Saturday. The operation was successful and she was getting on all right. We were glad to have Bro. J. F. Evans and wife with us last Sunday. They are from Union Grove. Success to the Herald and the cause it represents. J. R. Stone.

———o———

Zoar, Mecklenburg Ct.—Our pastor gave us a good sermon the third Sunday. The attendance was not as large as was expected, though the weather was fine. Bro. Waldrop will not be able to be here the third Sunday in May but will get some one to fill his appointment. He is going to assist in a meeting in Gastonia. Our S. S. is moving on nicely. The attendance last Sunday was large and the collection the greatest ever. Some of our people have been sick with the grip and have not been able to attend church regularly. We are glad that they are improved and able to attend again. The prayer meeting is at three o'clock on Sunday afternoon instead of Wednesday night. The time was changed because it suited the people better. This is a country church and all of its members are farmers. Every one is tired after a day's hard work, and they say they do not feel like going at night on this account. It was therefore thought best to change the time. Some of the young people are becoming interested and I am sure it is doing good. Bob Osborn, one of our young men, has appendicitis, and Mr. Sam Boyd is in a critical condition, having a leak of the heart. Reporter.

———o———

West Forsyth.—We filled our appointment at Harmony Grove yesterday. After preaching to a very attentive congregation, the good people of Harmony Grove loaded my buggy with flour (three sacks), sugar, coffee, fruit (dried and canned), soda, baking powder, syrup, eggs, and apron for the madam. After reaching home I found the following names: David and Mrs. Todd, Mrs. E. V. Luper, W. A. Riding, J. J. Kenney, Esq., Mrs. Kenney, Mrs. J. E. Harper, Ellen Shuts, Miss Naomi Griffith, Miss Stella Brown. There were several packages without names. Sister Luper is the guilty leader of this pounding party. May God bless every one who so kindly remembered their pastor at this time, and help him to pay them in faithful service.

G. H. Austin.

———o———

Davidson Ct.—We held our second quarterly meeting the 10th of April. The business was transacted in the usual way. All churches represented but Mt. Ebal. The finances were about like common. We had a good congregation Sunday. I think now that the weather has got better the church work will move off better.——Death came into Bro. Croley Harris's home and claimed their only child, a little girl of 18 months. The writer preached its funeral in the presence of a large congregation, Sunday evening. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved. J. W. Hulin.

—Thanks to those two reporters, one from Cid, the other from Flat Rock. I do not know them but wish to assure them their well wishes are appreciated, and may blessing be returned to them. "A word spoken in due season, how good it is!" Fraternally, C. E. M. Raper.

Shelby, N. C.

—The pastor of the First Baptist Church of Shelby has invited Rev. C. E. M. Raper to preach morning and evening the first Sunday in May. This is one of the most beautiful churches in all this section and has a membership of about 550. The building is almost new and cost upwards of $40,000. The pastor, Rev. L. W. Swope, is a big-hearted Christian gentleman. He will be away the first Sunday in a special meeting.

Married on the 17th of April, 1915, Mr. Russell G. Laughridge and Miss Mary Lou Johnson at the home of Rev. C. E. M. Raper on the corner of S. Washington and E. Warren street, Shelby, N. C. Mr. Laughridge is a talented young mail clerk in the post office and is highly esteemed by his host of friends. His wife is one of Shelby's accomplished young ladies. Both are held in high esteem by the town and the best wishes of their many friends follow them. They left immediately for Gaffney, S. C. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. M. Raper. May their life be all that is possible for them to get out of life here. A Friend.

Rev. H. L. Feeman, D. D., of the faculty of our seminary at Westminster, Md., visited the Home Sunday. He was so well pleased with the work that the Methodist Protestant Church is doing for homeless children that we will hear from him later. It was a pleasure to have some prominent members of West Forsyth Ct., Gaston Ct., Winston Station, Tabernacle Ct., Halifax Ct., Henderson Church and Granville Ct. visit us within the last few days. All said that they would be interested now more than ever before. You who have not seen the children and the work that is being done by them, come, and you like all the others who have visited us will express yourselves as being surprised. This is what we usually hear: "I have been reading about the Home and have seen pictures of it, but it is far beyond my expectations." Then the next expression is: "I am going to do more for this work." Come and be convinced. You are always welcome. H. A. Garrett.

—We gladly welcome Dr. Hornady of Burlington to Greensboro. He is a veterinarian and moves to Greensboro to practice. He is also a good church worker and Grace church hopes to profit by his coming.

"FINANCIAL FINDINGS" FOUND AND NOT FOUND.

This report says that Halifax Circuit has promised $800.00 Pastor's salary, but at the close of the first quarter had paid nothing to pastor's salary or general interests. A great mistake or error! I am not sure as to the amount that this circuit had paid at that time, but we were behind more than we are now. At this time, with a little more than one third of the Conference year gone, we have paid over 34 per cent. of all claims. I don't know whose fault it is that a part of my report was omitted, but I will find out and attend to him at the Thomasville Convention.

There are 64 stations and circuits in the N. C. Conference of the M. P. Church, but it seems that only 37 sent a report to the Chairman of the Finance Committee. Brethren, our only desire is to help you build up a financial system that we will be proud of, but we can not accomplish this unless you co-operate with us. Were the 27 pastors ashamed to send their poor reports? Brother Pastor, if your people are to blame, I would have sent the report hoping that some might be benefited by seeing it in the Herald. But if you are to blame for the poor report, you ought to have sent it anyway with an apology to your appointment and a promise to do better. Or was your report so good that you do not feel that your appointment can be benefited in any way financially, and that your report would only have made the rest of us feel bad? If it was good, I believe that it would have encouraged us. Send the report next time, if Bro. Curry sends return postage.

The 37 charges reporting promise $21,531 salary, or an average of $581. At the time the reports were made, $5,382.75 should have been paid, but I find that only $2,747 had been received, which is an average of $74. It cost that much or more for some of the ministers to move. I notice that one brother had received $7, another $17, and another $20. Brethren, are you still alive? High Point is the only charge that had paid one fourth of pastor's salary, though St. Paul and Pinnacle and Mt. Zion are not much behind, while Burlington and Flat Rock have paid a little more than one fifth. The weather was so unfavorable and the roads so nearly impassable that is was a difficult time, especially for the circuits. We can and will do better this quarter. R. A. Swaringen, Mem. Finance Com.

Grace Church, Greensboro.—May the 9th and week following we will celebrate the 24th anniversary of Grace Church. The following program will be carried out:

Sunday morning, sermon by Rev. T. M. Johnson, former pastor.

Sunday afternoon, an exercise by the Sunshine Band.

Sunday evening, sermon by Rev. J. S. Williams, former pastor.

Monday evening, Young People's Rally and an address by Rev. R. C. Stubbins.

Wednesday evening, Get-together Church Social.

Friday evening, Sunday school addressed by Rev. S. W. Taylor.

Supt. T. A. Hunter launched a contest for new scholars in the Sunday school last Sunday which we believe will add many new members during the next few weeks.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Sunday was a good day for the dedication of the Methodist Protestant church at Pensacola. Rev. J. S. Williams of Asheville preached the dedication sermon. His text was, Upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. The sermon was enjoyed by all present. Rev. Homer Casto preached an able sermon Sunday night to a large congregation. This was a fine day for the people of Pensacola station. Miss Mattie Gardner was organist for the day. We were glad to have her with us. The choir sang some beautiful songs.

Success to the Herald. W. B. Surratt, Pastor.

ANOTHER REPORT.

Sunday, April 25, was a glad day for the kind people of Pensacola, Yancy Co. Bro. Surratt, the pastor, and Bro. Homer Casto, the ex-pastor, dedicated their new church. It is a beautiful building. The architecture is faultless. The building is near Cane River. A tributary of the river passes right near the church. The valley surrounding the church might well be called the Valley of Peace as well as the Valley of Blessing. The service was well attended.

Bro. Casto presided over the meeting. Bro. Surratt aided in the music. They had a large choir of voices. Some of the voices showed professional training. The church was filled with attentive worshipers. There are two lumber camps in the vicinity. The train was sent to the camp farthest away an hour ahead of schedule time so as to bring the settlers to the service. The little church has the cordial sympathy and cooperation of the new settlers as well as the old. The officers in the companies, the railway officials and employees, the operatives of the companies, vie with each other in lending a hand to the work and in their praise of Bro. Casto for his blameless life among them, his devotion to Christ and his influence in the community as a religious leader.

The opportunity of this church is boundless. To be present in the church and a guest in the happy and beautiful homes of the village, one is reminded of the Ralph Conner stories as they depict the gracious influences of religion on the lumber camps of the great Northwest. The people of this community deserve the very best possible in spiritual and educational leadership. Our denomination now has a church building that will be attractive 40 years hence.

To show how much Bro. Casto, the ex-pastor, is beloved by the community, he lives in a snug cottage, just at the rear of the church, built by the lumber companies themselves. The cottage is arranged on the most modern plan, having a sleeping porch of perfect comfort.

The other churches of the community closed their doors for this dedicatory service. Their ministers and members were present and took active part in the service. It was indeed a great privilege to spend a happy Sabbath day with them. J. S. Williams.

Fairmount, Richland Ct.—We had a fine day Sunday; the weather was pleasant and our S. S. was larger. There were 55 present. Our pastor, Rev. D. A. Highfill, filled his regular appointment at 11 and at night. He preached two splendid sermons. Rev. J. F. Allred, pastor of the Rockingham work, who has been at home for some time on account of sickness, we are glad to state has got able to go back to his work. Let's everybody do all we can to make this a year well spent. Mrs. Josie Allred, Rep.

Richland Circuit.—The second quarterly conference was held at Brower's Chapel, April 17th, and was presided over by Rev. C. A. Cecil, president of the N. C. Conference, in his usual interesting way. One church was not represented, the other four had a small attendance of official members. Bros. J. M. Trogdon and J. C. Allred were named as candidates for delegate to the next Annual Conference. Bro. Cecil preached excellent sermons on the work, visiting all the churches except Fairmount and receiving his claim at each church. Sunday schools are running at the different churches with a fairly good attendance. Congregations not so large as they might be or ought to be. Now that winter is gone and the roads are getting better we see signs of improvement in different respects. D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Gaston Ct.—President's appointments: Bessemer City, May 3, 7:30 P. M. Union Grove, May 4, 7:30 P. M. Fairfield, May 4, 11 A. M., provided my plan of getting the president to that point is accepted by the membership. It is thirty miles from Gastonia to Fairfield through the country; we cannot get there by rail and return the same day for preaching at Union Grove at night.

I am 140 miles from my work. I find it a very difficult task to lay plans and try to carry them into execution by correspondence. I am with my father and mother, who are sick, but am planning to be on my work by the first Sunday in May. Will H. Neese.

Charlotte Ct.—Dear Bro. Cecil: We are moving along slowly with our work. We could do worse and we could do much better. The wet cold weather has been against us, and the panic is against us. The warm spring weather has come and that will remove the wet cold weather troubles. And I trust our services will be so warm that they will remove the panic troubles, and then we will run along and not drag along. ——I have received a little over eighty dollars on my salary this year. We have not collected anything on general interests. It is not because I have not tried, for I have talked it in the pulpit and in the homes. I trust our folks will wake up before Conference.——We have received some tokens of appreciation since my last report. I visited Bro. Charley Garmon some time back and next morning when I was ready to go home he and his good wife gave us over five dollars' worth of goods. We thank Bro. Charley and his wife for their most helpful gifts. On April 21st Bros. Floyd Furr and Lee Perry came to the parsonage and brought the following articles: Sister Lillie Furr, fruit, butter, soda, and cash, $1.20; Bro. C. V. Kiser, meat, $1.69; Bro. Lee Perry, corn, $1; F. C. Furr, corn, $1; March 16, Bro. M. C. Garmon gave us a nice side of meat and some corn and Bro. Jeff Gray gave us two and a half bushels of corn. There may be some I have overlooked, but the Lord knows them all, and we heartily thank all that have helped us in any way. ——Our folks at Charlotte and Pine Bluff are still alive and I will write up our work at these places soon. On April 12 I left home for Denton. I reached there the 13th. I preached there five nights and Sunday 11 A. M. We had splendid congregations and the people gave the word good attention. I am sure good was accomplished. The school seems to be doing finely. I went to Pleasant Grove and preached Sunday evening to a large, attentive congregation and the Lord was with us. I spent Sunday night with Bro. W. A. Loflin. Monday, I drove to Rev. Joel Trogdon and spent the night with him and his good family. It was a helpful treat to go back to Denton and spend a few days with those kind people, and then be permitted to go to that noted old church, Pleasant Grove, where so many of our brethren who are gone used to preach and mingle with those dear people for a short while. Tuesday I drove to Seagrove where I am to help Bro. J. H. Stowe in a meeting for a few days. I was glad to meet Bro. Cecil here at Bro. Russell Williams', and I am always glad to be with Bro. Stowe, and I am also glad to be with any of our brethren. Brethren, pray for me. God bless you all.

D. A. Braswell.

STATEMENT AND APPEAL FROM REV. W. P. MARTIN.

Lenoir, N. C., April 17, 1915.

Dear Brethren and Friends:

For the year 1914 I served Lenoir and received as salary only about $35. I had saved up for old age over $300 every dollar of which I had to use. I expected the Church Extension Board would pay something as this was the poorest field in the Conference; this they claimed they could not do. This year I was left without work. I have a farm but being away from it six years it was all out of order. I have worked very hard to get it in condition to make something and think I could make a living if I had any money. To add to my trouble my good horse worth $200 was kicked and ruined. Those who know say she cannot live. I want to ask my brethren and friends who are able to help me what they feel willing to do; in this trying condition a little help will mean much. I have the assurance that some brethren and friends will help me. I need it now and it must come from some source. Very truly, W. P. Martin.

[President Cecil has read the foregoing statement and appeal and declares that Bro. Martin is a worthy man, and that his circumstances are very untoward. He is an aged minister who has preached for a number of years in the employ of our Conference. We have heard his preaching well spoken of. We take it that there are among our readers quite a number who will sympathize with Bro. Martin in his extremity enough to be willing to help him. Some may be deterred from giving by the thought that others who are nearer will meet the needs of the case. But Bro. Martin lives where there are very few of our people. We would suggest with a view to really relieving Bro. Martin's situation that those who sympathize with him and can help him make an offering to the Superannuate Fund Society right away, sending the money to Bro. J. Norman Wills, Greensboro, with the instruction to use as much of it as may be necessary to relieve Bro. Martin's condition.—Editor.]

OUR CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD.

The following resolution was adopted by the Brotherhood at its last session:

Resolved, That the Conference Brotherhood provide a sick benefit for its beneficiary members; and that the plan of the sick benefit be as follows:

1. Only beneficiary members of the Brotherhood be eligible to this sick benefit.

2. All members of the Brotherhood shall pay the sick benefit.

3. That a member be sick one week before he is entitled to the sick benefit.

4. That his application be made to the Sec. of the Brotherhood, and be accompanied by a certificate from the attending physician showing how long the applicant was treated.

5. That the benefit be paid for only ten weeks in succession.

6. That the sick benefit shall not be paid to any member more than twice during the Conference year.

7. That the Sec. of the Brotherhood make the call for the sick benefit through the Herald as he now makes for the mortuary benefit.

8. That in case of the death of a member both the mortuary benefit and the sick benefit shall be paid.

9. That the sick benefit dues shall not exceed ten cents per member for a period not exceeding ten weeks.

I hope every member of the Brotherhood will carefully read the above resolution. A sick benefit call is soon to be made for Bro. Raper; and as this is the first of its kind it seemed proper to the President and Sec. of the Brotherhood to call the attention of the Brotherhood to the resolution passed at the last session of the Brotherhood. The Sec. hopes that when this call is made every member of the Brotherhood will respond at once. For reasons which we have not time nor space to explain the call has been delayed, and Bro. Raper is in great need of the help.

NOTICE.

—As a rule our forms close on Wednesday night. It is exceptional when matter received on Thursday morning can be printed the same week in the Herald.

—Another terribly bloody battle is now on in Flanders.

—As we expected, Kronprintz Wilhelm decided to intern.

—It is reported that a great fleet of German war vessels is now ready to dash out from the North Sea.

—The French have published a list of atrocities committed in the present war the reading of which makes the horrors of war seem tenfold more horrible.

—Mrs. Geo. B. Harris visited Mrs. B. F. Norman of Winston after the Young People's Convention. She then went to the Siler City meeting and is now at the Moriah meeting.

THE INDIANS.

"Scamper! The raindrops woll get there before you." And Mr. Jackson scattered her children like a flock of chickens to the green to gather up the whitened linen which had been spread to dry.

"There, Samuel! Do stop that nonsense, for the rain will soon be here!" She laughed in despair as the round freckled face of her boy, on hands and knees, appeared with a grin from beneath a sheet.

The laughter of all three children increased when the cows and sheep in midafternoon came hurrying to the barns as if they too were afraid of a sprinkle.

Mrs. Jackson gave a troubled glance skyward at the oncoming storm and then at the trembling cattle, which doubtless had been frightened by something worse.

Samuel, Betsy, and Peggy had a glorious romp together after supper; but neither father, mother, nor even Uncle Jack could be persuaded to tell them a bedtime story, for something seemed to trouble them all. The children went early to bed. Betsy whispered as they climbed onto the feathers: "I heard father say that we'd stay here one more night. Do you suppose the Indians are coming?"

However, not even the dreaded word Indian nor the booming of the thunderstorm outside could keep those sleepy eyes open.

Downstairs the elder members of the family and several neighbors gathered about the wide fireplace, glad of the warmth that chilly June night. With sober faces they discussed the rumors of terrible deeds the Indians had committed in Dover, a few miles up the river.

"Some are lurking about us," declared Mr. Jackson, "for no storm would so frighten the cattle. 'Tis not the first time they have come home bruised and bleeding."

"To-morrow night," added his brother, "the settlers here at the Plains (as the clearing was called) must go to the garrison house for safety. An attack may come at any moment."

Little Samuel was the first to open his eyes the following morning, thinking it was glorious sunshine that gave such a brilliant light outside, until a snap and a crackle brought him to his feet. He found the barn ablaze. Then came a war whoop from the Indians that roused the household.

While father and Uncle Jack armed themselves with such implements as they had at hand, mother gathered the children together to go with her to the garrison house. Recalling her wallet, which she had left, she ran upstairs, but came down to find the children gone.

"Perhaps they have started ahead," she thought and hurried out alone.

When the barns were smoldering ashes and no Indians could be seen or heard, plump Samuel rolled out from under the cinnamon rosebushes in the front garden. Peggy and Betsy were seen peering from beneath the low branches of lilacs, where they had gone in their fright and bewilderment.

"Where's mother?" cried little Samuel.

"Is she not with you?" asked their surprised father, yet relieved to see his children alive.

She was not found at the garrison house nor yet among the many injured people.

"Could the Indians have taken her off?" sobbed Betsy, when Peggy cried: "Hurrah! Here's Captain Shackford with his soldiers. They'll help us."

Everybody crowded about the sturdy Captain, who had been summoned from Strawberry Bank, two miles away. He had ordered his company to proceed to the Plains; and now, seeing the destruction and learning in which direction the Indians had fled, he started in pursuit to the south.

"Bring back my mother!" pleaded Samuel hopefully.

The Captain nodded doubtfully, for he knew how treacherous the Indians were.

It was a desolate spot that he left behind. Nine barns and five houses had been burned.

Little Samuel, Betsy, and Peggy had a house left to them. But what was that without mother? The people who had gone to the garrison house in groups had reached there safely, but she had gone alone.

Several hours passed, when voices were heard across the clearing, and Captain Shackford and his militia appeared from the woods with prisoners and plunder.

"There's mother!" shouted the children, and they dashed across the Plains.

Clinging to her, they heard how the Captain had seen a feathery blue smoke some four miles from the Plains and found that the Indians were cooking their breakfast behind the protection of their captives, who were tied to the trees. The soldiers rushed upon them, but the Indians escaped. However, the plunder and, best of all, the prisoners were safely brought back.

Since then many a bedtime story by the hearth fire has been told of that spot, which to this day is known as Breakfast Hill."—The Child's Hour.

A DOG AND HIS TOYS.

Ponto is a big, beautiful dog. He is very kind and friendly, and when I go to the house where he lives he nearly always comes to the door to bid me welcome. A very funny thing about Ponto is that he has a large box full of toys, and he plays with these toys just as a little boy or girl would. He has several dolls, a stuffed elephant, a stuffed lamb, a toy dog and horse, a ball, and several other things. Whenever any of the people of the house go away for a few days, they bring him a present on their return. He very much appreciates a gift of sweets, especially chocolate or molasses candy, which are his favorite kinds; but the present he likes better still is a new toy. A little while ago some one had brought him a stuffed lion. He was very proud of this, and when I went to his house the last time he brought it in his mouth to the door to show me. He was taking this stuffed lion to bed with him every night.

He takes better care of his toys than some boys and girls do, for he never destroys them. When little boys or girls come to the house who are friendly with him and notice him, he will invite them to play with his toys. He will pull out the box, take out the toys with his mouth, and stand them around, and seems quite to enjoy seeing his company play with them; only they must not take them out of the house. He never takes them out of the house himself and never allows any one else to do so.

I do not know whether he is vain, but he enjoys having his photograph taken and will willingly pose in any position. He is very intelligent. He knows almost exactly when it is time for the farmer and two sons to come home from work and always looks out for them. He knows when Sunday comes. On Sunday mornings he is allowed to go with one of the sons to a rather distant barn. He used to try to go every morning; but he found he was not allowed to go on week days, so now he never attempts to go except on Sunday, and then he is all excitement. They tell me he never makes a mistake about the day. He is about ten years of age and getting rather old and stiff; but he is a noble, faithful old fellow.—Edmund T. Byles, in New York Christian Advocate.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas death has invaded our Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. P. Church and claimed Mrs. Martha Ann Masten, one of our beloved members, and

Whereas she was a charter member of the Society and until enfeebled by age and bodily infirmities was an active and hearty supporter of all that the Society attempted to do: therefore be it resolved—

1. That we do, at this our first meeting since her death, hereby express our heartfelt sorrow at the loss of this good woman and our sincere appreciation of her long years of faithful service in the Society.

2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him whom she loved and served throughout her long life.

3. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Society and that a copy be sent to the M. P. Herald and the press of the city.

Reeves.—Mrs. C. D. Reeves was born Nov. 28, 1838. She had been in feeble health for some time, but was resigned, calm and undisturbed all through her sickness and death. In early life she gave her heart to God and surrendered all her life to His service. In her failing hours she had complete victory over sin and death. Gently and peacefully God's devoted servant bade adieu to all that is mortal, and entered the realms of immortality and everlasting bliss, where sorrow and sickness never come. Before she passed away she called her children and grandchildren and those of her friends who were present around her bedside and, calling them by name, bade them good-bye and begged them to be faithful and meet her in heaven.

The writer has known her for a number of years, and never heard her speak an unkind word of any one. I never knew her to do an uncharitable deed. She lived above suspicion. Her life exemplified practical Christianity. All the Christian graces shone out in her conduct and conversation. She was true to her convictions, always defending the right and opposing the wrong.

She joined the M. P. Church at Harmony when quite young and for more than fifty years she remained a loyal, devoted member. Harmony church has lost one of her most consecrated members, the community a kind and loving friend, the family a faithful and affectionate mother and grandmother. She was always devoted to her pastor, never finding fault with anything he did but by words of encouragement and her prayers she did all she could to help him in his work in winning souls to Christ.

The last time she attended the services of her church she praised the Lord aloud and testified that she believed she would soon be at home. We will sadly miss her in the church, but it is the Lord's work and we know He makes no mistakes. Dear Aunt Kate, as we called her, had grown weary in the burden and heat of the day and the blessed Master called her home to be forever with Him. She lived and died in the community where she was born. Worn out in years of service she gently fell asleep April the first, 1915, leaving to her children and grandchildren the most precious of all legacies, the record of a triumphant Christian life. May God's richest blessings abide with those who feel this loss most and their end be like hers.

The paths that we are treading are the paths that saints have trod, that lead to that beautiful city whose builder and maker is God. Kate Medlock.

ASHEVILLE CHURCH BUILDING FUND.

Hon. W. C. Hammer, Asheboro, $10; Rev. and Mrs. Geo. L. Curry, $5; Mrs. Sarah D. Harris, Enfield, $5; Mr. L. F. Ross, Asheboro, $2; Walter Bunch, Asheboro, $1; Mr. S. L. Hayworth, Asheboro, $1; Miss Eugenia Tyson. Asheboro, $1; Miss Xanie Stowe, Wake Forest, $1; Mrs. L. M. Whitaker, Enfield, $1; Mrs. L. F. Ross, Asheboro, 50c; Ernest Teague for W. J. Teague, deceased, 50c; Mrs. S. L. Hayworth, Asheboro, 25c.

Miss Xanie Stowe passed through Asheville last week and stopped at the parsonage for a few moments. When she left she gave me a check for the church. I cordially invite all Methodist Protestants who are passing through to stop at the parsonage and see the preacher! Notice that Bro. Ernest Teague paid his father's pledge? I think that little act must have added to his father's joy in heaven. There are others who have died since they made the pledge to help build a church in Asheville. Wonder what they think of you who have failed to carry out their wish? What's your answer. I'd like to see it by return mail. Got it down to $466.65, but only three weeks to go. Am I going to make it? That depends on you.

C.W. Bates, Pastor.

DUE REGARDS.

I have been to see Bro. Raper from once to twice a week for quite a while. He is real sick now, and not getting any relief from the doctors. I want to say positively and emphatically that Bro. Raper is a deserving man. And I am sorry to read any article in our paper that casts reflection upon such a clean man. No one does this of course intentionally, but it behooves any of us to be careful, lest we cast reflection. I am behind Bro. Raper's work of last year and can conscientiously say his work is commendible and record as a preacher and as a citizen is clean and reflects credit upon our church here in Shelby. There have been discouragements on this work which gave Bro. R. trouble and are giving me trouble and it seems are going to serve as a barrier to our success for years to come. Bro. R. is not responsible for all claims not being paid on this charge last year, and if they are not all paid this year, I propose, I am not to blame. I am as much concerned about the general interests being paid as any of our finance committee; and when they are not paid in full I request the respect of that Com., or any one of them, in order to appease their wrath on an individual, not to make an exposition of myself nor predecessor through the paper. Let's have no nagging through our church paper. I shall be satisfied to follow any preacher with as clean record as Bro. R. He deserves and in his declining health needs our sympathy and encouragement. Let's see he gets it. Frat.,

J. D. Morris.

—We thank the publishers for a copy of The Making of Men, a new book by President Harper, of Elon College. Dr. Harper has given some of his best thought to this subject, and embodied the results in a number of addresses delivered on special occasions, which addresses are in this book given a wider hearing. The book contains the author's portrait, which will add to its value in the eyes of many. The book is well gotten up mechanically, and has been put at 75 cents per copy. It is published by The Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio.

—You will wonder why some of the pastors did not report to the finance committee for their exhibit made this week. You know these pastors to be loyal to the Annual Conference and faithful and prompt in the performance of their official duties. Why did they not report this time? Let us indulge in a little guessing: They considered the matter and saw that so small a part of the claims for the year had been paid that they were afraid their people would be ashamed of the showing, if the truth were told. While they are somewhat ashamed to fail to report, they would rather suffer shame than to make their people suffer it. There is a way to deliver both pastor and people from all feeling of shame and fill both with a feeling of just pride over the financial report. Can you guess that too?

—Mr. C. B. Riddle, of Elon College, bids fair to be a maker of books. He is still an undergraduate student, and has three books to his credit. His latest is entitled "Thirty-Six." It gives thirty-six articles from his first book, "College Men Without Money," and has the same purpose—to inspire young people to effort for an education. This little book sells for ten cents, but may be worth much in suggestion and inspiration to many young people. Address C. B. Riddle, Elon College, N. C., for a copy.

—The following advertisement recently appeared in a Pittsburgh, Pa., daily paper. Read it and make your own comment: "A colored man, qualified with acknowledged inventive, resourceful, productive and meritorious ingenuity and endowed with powerful energy and ambition and invincible courage, equipped with normal training, valuable experience and extraordinary credentials and recommendations as to education, clean habits and upright, sterling character, offers himself for employment."

—High Point's S. S. attendance for the last three Sundays has been 328, 368, 328. We thank Bro. Dixon for reporting.

—We request Bro. Swaringen to give Bro. J. T. Jones the information asked for.

DOES GOD ANSWER PRAYER?

Address by Rev. D. A. Highfill at the Summer Conference.

..851. 4. (. œ|7œ6|.., (9 9œ5 fff & :958:' :Zfffff58 3*&6...

Text—Acts 10:31: "Cornelius, thy prayer is heard."

We all know the circumstances under which this text was spoken. We need not report here in detail the conversion of Cornelius as an answer to his prayer, but will endeavor at once to consider as best I can this very important question. The words "pray" and "prayed" are used about 175 times in the Bible; and the word "prayer" about 114 times; and the word "enquire" is used in the sense of prayer about 50 times; and the word "ask", meaning to ask of the Lord, about 60 times; and the word "seek", used also in the sense of prayer to God, is used about 70 times; and the words "cry" and "call' and "supplicate" a great many times. This is very significant. Why should God so frequently tell us in His word that men ought to pray if He does not hear and answer our prayers? Why should we ask if we had no assurance of an answer? Can we be so silly and so irreverent as to charge God with tantalizing his poor, helpless, erring children by giving them such exceeding great and precious promises, if He did not intend to answer their prayers and make good these promises?

What is prayer? In a general sense it is an act of asking, and is treated as synonymous with petition, "request," or "supplication". Christians, Jews, pagans and Mohammedans all believe in prayer of some sort, but there can be but one kind of prayer that God will answer. Prayer includes all communion between the soul and God. True prayer implies or involves the truths, that God is our Heavenly Father, and is accessible to the requests of man; that He hears and heeds them; and is influenced and affected by them; that nature is subject to His will; and that He is both able and willing to modify its operations in compliance with the needs and the expressed wishes of his praying people; that he operates directly on the hearts and consciences of men; and that it is in this realm that prayer is the most efficacious, as it is the spiritual blessings that are of the most transcendent importance, and that our prayers not only affect us by making us ready to receive the gifts of grace, but that they are also the means of affecting others who are unconscious of our prayers. True, acceptable prayer must be offered to God, believing that He is, and that He is a rewarder of all them that diligently seek Him; and such a prayer is offered in submission to His will and for Christ's sake. It "is a pouring out of the soul to God as a freewill offering, solemnly and eternally dedicated to Him, accompanied with the most earnest desire that it may know, love and serve Him alone. He that comes thus to God will ever be heard and blessed. Prayer is the most secret intercourse of the soul with God, and as it were the conversation of one heart with another."

Does God answer prayer? Let us see if the Old Testament does not give some proof that He does. Gen. 20:17, "So Abraham prayed unto God; and God healed Abimelech and his wife." He also prayed for Sodom and Gomorrah and was heard. Num. 11:2, "And when Moses prayed unto the Lord, the fire was quenched." Num. 21:7, 8, Moses prayed for the people who were bitten by fiery serpents. He prayed for them at other times and was heard. 1 Sam. 1:27, Hannah said, "For this child I prayed; and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him." 2 Kings 4:33-36, Elisha prayed for the Shunammite woman's son who was dead and the son was restored to life. Jer. 29:12, 13, "Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. And ye shall seek me, and find me when ye shall search for me with all your heart." Eze. 36: 36, 37, One of the greatest blessings ever promised the Jews is here recorded, but that promise is a conditional one. "I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them." 2 Kings 20:5, The Lord said to Hezekiah, "I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears; behold, I will heal thee, and I will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria." David was a man of prayer as well as a poet. In Ps. 40:1-3, he says, "I waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. He brought me up also out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings. And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God."

Now we turn to the New Ttestament Scriptures and we find that Jesus our Lord and Savior prayed. He spent whole nights in prayer. He said, Matt. 7:7, 8,—"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." The apostles were engaged in prayer on the day of Pentecost when the Holy Ghost was poured out upon them. Acts 4: 31, "And when they had prayed the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness." Acts 9: 40, Peter prayed and raised Tabitha to life. Acts 16:25, Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises at midnight, and a great earthquake followed, and the prison doors were opened, and the prisoners' bands fell off, and the Philippian jailor was converted. Jas. 5: 17, 18, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. Elijah was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain; and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." Many other quotations might be made from the Bible, but the above are sufficient.

But some may say, "We admit that God did answer prayer in Bible times, but that the day of miracles is past, and God does not answer prayer directly now." So then it is a very pertinent question to ask, "Does God answer prayer now?" Martin Luther prayed for the recovery of Melancthon when dying and Melancthon recovered, though he did not want to live. George Muller's orphanage in England is supported as a direct result of prayer. Every genuine conversion is a direct answer to prayer. Every temptation overcome by the Christian; every cross borne; every persecution endured; every advance made in the divine life; every victory obtained over the enemy of our souls, is in answer to prayer. Grace sufficient for living the Christian life; grace sufficient to enable us to fulfill our mission in life; and grace for the dying hour is the gift of God to every praying soul. Every true revival is a consequence of prayer; for when a church gets earnestly engaged in prayer for a revival, a revival is sure to follow. In my younger days I heard of this incident: A certain church had become so near extinct that there was but one faithful member left, an old woman who went regularly to the church on the days the church had preaching before it had become extinct and then she prayed earnestly to God to send a preacher, and with him a revival. After a long while a preacher in passing through the community heard of this faithful Christian woman and how she prayed for that church. He left an appointment, and in a short time a glorious revival followed. Your speaker, when quite young, knew a person who had a small brother who was very sick of fever and growing worse. The doctor was sent for, but could not be found; he was sent for three times and still could not be found, for he was off somewhere on a spree, it was learned afterwards. The person spoken of began to pray for his little brother and continued to pray for his recovery until he had the assurance that the Lord had heard his prayer and that his brother would get well. In a few hours after receiving this assurance his brother began to show signs of improvement, and finally got well and is living today. Another case: While traveling the Granville Circuit about 23 years ago, I heard of the serious sickness of a certain sister and that the physician had given her up to die. I felt very much impressed that I ought to visit her and so I went. She seemed to be in a dying condition, though still conscious. It seemed as if she could not live through the night. I prayed with and for her. I was never more drawn out in prayer for the recovery of any one before or since. I left her not knowing whether I would ever see her again alive. Next morning I heard she was better, and she soon was fully restored. I am satisfied her recovery was in answer to prayer. Another case: A certain minister whose name could be called had several children, the oldest of them drawing near the age when they ought to seek religion. He began to pray for their conversion and he prayed earnestly for months until one day while praying and thinking about them and their salvation, he received the pleasing and happy assurance that his children would all be saved. Soon afterwards they, one by one, began to seek religion and join the church until they all finally became members of the church. That minister did not have the least doubt about God's answering his prayers. Dr. Cuyler says: "Answered prayers cover the field of providential history as flowers cover Western prairies." Swinnock, a writer of the 17th century, says, "A godly man will seek God's face evermore; he calls upon God as long as he lives. Breathing heavenward in prayer is the beginning and the ending of his spiritual life upon earth, as we see in Paul and Stephen. Paul begins life with prayer, and Stephen ends his with it. He never takes his leave of prayer till he is entering into the place of praise. Prayer is his element; he cannot live without it, and communion with God in it. Prayer is the vessel by which he is continually trading into the Holy Land; he sends it out fraught with precious graces—faith, hope, desire, love, godly sorrow, and the like, and it comes back home many times richly laden with peace, joy and increase of faith." David says, Ps. 34:6, "This poor man cried and the Lord heard him and delivered him out of all his troubles. What a glorious truth that God in heaven hears and answers our prayers on earth! How could we live and labor and bear afflictions and crosses and oppositions and temptations and poverty and finally face death if he did not! Thank God for His many promises! But more than this, thank God for His many precious promises made good to us; for we "have tasted the good word of God and the powers of the world to come"! "We have tasted and seen that the Lord is good." "And this is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask anything according to his will he heareth us; and if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him." It is no wonder that Charles Wesley, a man of prayer, could sing:

What we have felt and seen
With confidence we tell,
And publish to the sons of men
The sign infallible.

We, who in Christ believe,
That he for us hath died,
We all his unknown peace receive
And feel his blood applied.

Exults our rising soul,
Disburdened of her load,
And swells unutterably full,
Of glory and of God.

His love, surpassing far
The love of all beneath,
We find within our hearts, and dare
The pointless darts of death.

If God is so anxious to bless; if He runs to receive the returning prodigal; if He is more ready to give than we are to receive; if He is rich in mercy to all that call upon him; if he is willing to give us all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; if He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us; if eye hath not seen nor ear heard nor hath it entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him; if these things be true, then why should any professing Christian say that God does not answer prayer? Is it not because he has not truly prayed? Why is the church so empty, poor and lean? Why do we not have greater revivals and more of them? Why is it the church everywhere does not enjoy that degree of spiritual prosperity that it could and should enjoy? These are serious questions that we should ponder. We pray often enough and long enough probably, in a way, but do we really pray as we ought? Do we, when we pray, really believe that God is our Heavenly Father, and is more able and ready to give than our earthly father; and that Jesus Christ, who died for us, is a sympathetic High Priest, and that he yearns for our spiritual good? In a few words, do we truly and earnestly believe, when we pray, that the Triune God is engaged to help and bless and give as he in His wisdom sees best for our benefit and His glory? If we do, then "let us come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." So we shall find that God does truly answer prayer.

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Next year several of our ministers are planning to take their families with them to the Summer Conference. The Conference hereby extends to all laymen as well as ministers invitation to come, bring their families and tents and spend the days of the Conference with us. The Home is not large enough to afford accommodations for more than the pastors who attend, but by living in tents all who came might receive the inspiration of the Conference and enjoy the fellowship of the brethren besides giving a fine outing to their families. The attendance was better this year than last, and while some of the brethren who were on the program to speak failed to come, the Conference was better than last year, notwithstanding; if these had just come as we had hoped they could, it would have been a decided improvement over last year in so far as the addresses were concerned, and this is not minimizing the quality of the addresses of a year ago either. Many of the same speakers appeared this year as last, and they were better than before.

The following charges paid part or all of their pastor's expenses to the Conference: Roanoke, Halifax, Why Not, Granville, and Spring Church. There may be some charge left out that ought to appear; if so, please correct it in next week's Herald. Already plans are being made for the program for next year, and we are hoping to present both an attractive and instructive list of subjects.

Dr. Thomas H. Lewis, Pres. of Western Maryland College, added greatly to the success of the Conference by his two magnificent addresses. Rev. C. M. Compher, of Lynchburg, Va., gave us three splendid addresses besides delivering the anniversary address of the Children's Home on Thursday. Dr. W. A. Harper, who took the place of Prof. T. C. Amick, delivered a most splendid address on Social Service in the Sunday School. Officers for next year are: President, R. M. Andrews; 1st Vice Pres., J. E. Pritchard; 2d Vice Pres., J. D. Williams; Sec., R. C. Stubbins; Treas., L. W. Gerringer.

This is not intended to be a report of the Conference at all; we expect this to come from the hands of several of the brethren. R. M. Andrews.

Sometime ago I saw this statement in print: "A school to teach cooks to cook." It struck me at first as being a reflection on the cooks to make such a statement, but the more I thought of it the more I was inclined to think it was a good thing to have such a school, for I have seen cooks that I really thought could be taught to cook better, for the mere fact that they can cook is an evidence to me they could learn to cook better, and that is no reflection on the cooks either.

Now this is my idea about the Summer Conference: one object is to teach preachers how to preach, and that is no reflection on the preachers either, for some people could never be taught to preach in any Summer Conference or school, for there is just no preach in them and you just can't get any in them, no matter what you do; for nature never intended them to be preachers. But a preacher who can preach, there is just no end to teaching him to preach, so long as he is humble and teachable; for we are never too old to learn. All the Summer Conferences which have been held at our Children's Home were calculated to do this very thing, according to my judgment, but the last one was the "best yet," not because I was on the program for the first time, though I have attended them all, for I really did not get to say my little piece on the program—was so full of better pieces, so when it came my time I only said at part of my piece, for I realized that we had come to the stopping-place for that afternoon, for a fellow can hold just so much, you see, and when he is full you had better stop and let him digest what he has and get ready for more the next time.

Another object is to teach pastors to be better pastors, and that is no mean object, only second to that of preaching in importance, if it is really second.

Another is to get acquainted with eacch other that we may learn to love each other more. And this last is the most important of all so far as we are personally concerned. "Behold how they love one another." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples." You see the world would not know that we are disciples at all if we did not love each other, and therefore we could hardly hope to make men of the world what they did not recognize us to be. Now, brethren, let us all attend the Summer Conference next year. I believe it will do us all good.

Yours fraternally, T. E. Davis.

My impression of it! Of what? Why, the Summer Conference, of course. Well, now, to tell all my impressions of it would require more space than our accommodating editor is willing to spare.

First of all I want to say it was in the superlative degree,—that is to say, the first was good, the second better and the last best. All the preceding sessions were fine and a happy spirit prevailed, but more than one remarked that the last was characterized by the finest spirit of either of the three. The only criticism I heard was that the programme was a little too crowded and that sufficient time was not given for breathing spells. However, the programme committee is to be congratulated on so breaking up the different subjects discussed that it had a very pleasant consonantal ripple all the way through.

One thing that made this and the other sessions so very helpful was the splendid way in which the management of the Home served meals and the celerity and wholesouled way in which the citizens of the town conveyed the people from and to the trains.

But, after all, the climax of the Home is the children. It is easy to note marked improvement from year to year as we come together. They are happy and free, yet under that kindly restraint and control that makes their conduct beautiful to see. The amiability of the children is the highest possible praise and indorsement of the Supt. and his assistants. It is hoped next year that quite a number of our people will have tents, move out, set them up, bring their own groceries and bedding and enjoy a few days together. The management would be glad to take all under the special care of the Home, but there is not room enough yet. In the years to come there may be.

Attention.—Before you read this, Mrs. Garrett and I will be speeding across the continent to the Exposition in San Francisco. Prof. C. C. Sharpe, principal of the Kernersville school, will have charge while we are away. Let every one who sends in contributions tell the circuit or how the contribution should be reported. By doing that you will help Mr. Sharpe to get the reports exactly correct. Many of you in sending to me don't give the circuit, but I have become familiar with your schools.

Direct your mail to me as usual and there will be no delay as Mr. Sharpe will open all mail addressed to me.

FINANCIAL FINDINGS.

It was hoped that the Financial Findings could have been published much sooner than this, but the reports were so slow coming in that it was thought best to postpone the publication for a while. It is very much regretted that the reports came in so hesitatingly and that so many of the pastors failed to report at all. Yet a few more reported this quarter than did last quarter. This is very much appreciated. It is to be hoped that quite a number of the pastors will report even yet. The committee wants your report whether it gets into the published report or not. The committee is anxious to help, but to do so it is very necessary to get hold of the financial situation of the Conference. These reports furnish the one way by which we hope to get hold of the situation. Bro. Pastor, please help us. We want to help you.

The following is what has been gathered from reports: It is understood that this report covers the first six months of the Conference year.

Explanation.—Column 1, Amt. promised pastor for the year; 2, paid pastor to date; 3, paid on General Interests to date; 4, paid on debts and improvements; 5, paid on incidentals; 6, Children's Home; 7, Ladies' Aux.; 8, Church papers read on work.

DOES THE SMOKER SUFFER SPIRITUAL LOSS?

There are thousands of strong Christian men who smoke. More than that, there are hundreds of Christian men who are at the work of winning souls and who use tobacco. Some of these men to-day are honestly asking whether God wants them to give up smoking. Many a man is ready to say that he will give it up as soon as he is convinced that it is a real spiritual hindrance. The consideration of physical injury, however true in unnoted ways, may have found but little weight with him. The paramount question about smoking for him is, Does it hinder my life in Christ and my service for him?

One of the personal leaders in the Billy Sunday tabernacle meetings in Philadelphia was a physician who had known what it was to be deep in sin and drunkenness. When he came to Christ the craving for drink was instantly taken away, but he continued his smoking. He had heard it said that few men were able to continue the victory over drink if they kept on with tobacco; but he was doing it, and was rather proud of the accomplishment. He did not realize the havoc that his stand was working among some of the men in the mission where he helped.

One Sunday he was walking to his Sunday-school class with his Bible under his arm, and a cigarette in his mouth. As he walked he happened to glance down and noticed three things in the swift glance—the smoke that was pouring from his mouth, the Bible under his left arm, and the cigarette between the fingers of his right hand. Half unconsciously he quickly put the cigarette in his mouth, took his Bible from under his arm, and thrust it into his overcoat pocket. When he got to Sunday-school he asked himself why he was troubled about his Bible and his smoke getting so close together. For he was not ashamed of his Bible and he was not ashamed of his smoking. He was an honest man, and he was an earnest Christian, who wanted to do his Lord's will. There was, of course, only one answer. The two things did not belong together. To-day his testimony for Christ includes a strong plea that a man should "come clean" for Christ and cut out smoking.

Why do men instinctively feel that smoking and holy things do not go together? They do feel that way even when they cannot explain the feeling. Men who have no doubt that smoking is right feel that way. When this question was being discussed recently, a Christian man who for years after his conversion continued to use tobacco said that he often used to smoke when reading his Bible. One time the ashes fell from his cigar upon the pages of the Bible in front of him. A cold shiver ran through him, he said, and without knowing why he hurriedly cleared the ashes away from the Book. Yet there was no consciousness at that time that smoking was a sin for him, and it was not until some time afterward that he gave it up.

The apparent impossibility of associating tobacco smoke and the things of God reaches its climax when the question is asked whether we can picture our Lord himself with a cigar, or a pipe, or a cigarette in his mouth. He was far from being an ascetic. His habits gave an opening for his enemies to call him a glutton and a winebibber; and he apparently paid little heed to certain sacred rules of cleanliness that the strict Jews observed so carefully. But if there are considerations that would make it impossible to imagine Jesus as a smoking man, then the question is once for all settled for these men who seek only their Lord's will. For the same considerations would make it impossible for the man who is fully representing Christ, and who is as He is in this world. Are there such considerations?

Our Lord would give no occasion of stumbling in anything. It was from him that Paul learned to say, "If meat causeth my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh forevermore." If tobacco were as clean as the finest city-dressed meat, the voice of thousands of drunkards who have struggled to live Christian lives without giving up tobacco would cry aloud for the stumbling-stone—clean though it might be—to be taken away. As Mr. Hall suggests, one visit to a rescue mission by a Christian leader who smokes, and hearing himself quoted as an excuse for using the thing that is helping to ruin some poor drunkard's life, would settle forever the question as to whether this is a stumbling-stone. The thousands of boys who have let cigarettes help to ruin body and mind and spirit might point their fingers to their fathers and brothers and others whose use of "clean" smoke has led them astray. Tobacco is making many brothers stumble.

Our Lord was a man to whom the little children eagerly came, from whom a pure and sensitive woman would not turn away. There are smokers to-day whom little children love. But they do not love the smoke, and they come willingly and gladly to the smoker in proportion as his body at that moment is free from the effects of tobacco. Why cannot little children travel in the smoking-car with their fathers? Robert E. Speer has told of his noticing day after day when coming into the crowded station in New York how women, and men too, turn from side to side to avoid the smoking men in the crowd. And doubtless many of these men are utterly unconscious of the discomfort that they are causing others. Our Lord Jesus, in his most unconscious moments, never caused unnecessary discomfort to another human being.

"Are you coming clean?" is the invariable question that is put to every man who takes a stand for Christ in the Galilee Mission of Philadelphia. And every man knows, or is soon made to know, that "coming clean" means for him to do the hardest thing there is for him to do, harder in most cases than turning over his liquor-craving to Christ: and that is to give up his pipe or his cigar, or his cigarette. In that misson they do not consider he is coming all the way unless he comes clean. And while this is going on, well-to-do, clean-appearing, earnest Christian men may be sitting in that mission who have never let the Holy Spirit in his cleansing power completely fill their bodies, because they are smokers.

A habit that is offensive to most women and children and to many men, that poisons the temple of the Holy Spirit, that confessedly helps to ruin many lives, that costs money which could supply crying needs, that brings the body under a degree of bondage, a habit that is universally popular with the men of the world and is almost as universally eschewed by spiritual and soul-winning Christians—this is a habit that should at least cause earnest Christians to have doubts as to whether it is the Lord's will for them. And smokers who are serving Christ successfully do have doubts. That ought to be enough.

A Sunday-school superintendent last summer went to Princeton for the closing days of the Christian Life Conference there. He heard on every side testimonies about the surrendered life and the joy and power it brought. He fought it all out, and the next day he rose to give his glad testimony that he had quit his smoking and was knowing a joy he had never experienced before. Yet not a word had been said about smoking in the conference addresses.

A business man who had decided to give his life to Christian work was filling out an application blank for The Moody Bible Institute. He came to the question, "Do you use tobacco in any form?" He laid aside his pen, gathered together his pipes and all the tobacco he had on hand, including the cigars that were in his pocket, and threw them out. Then he went back to the application and wrote "No," in answer to the question. He wanted a clean application sheet.

A soul-winning pastor of a large church had listened to the testimonies of several young men and women who were telling before his congregation what the surrendered life meant to them. The pastor stood before his people and in his straightforward way told them that he had once been a heavy smoker, but had cut down on it till now he used cigars very moderately; tonight, after hearing these testimonies, he was ready to give up completely.

The plain fact is that while a Christian man holds on to this thing he is not a surrendered man. Testimonies might be piled high from men who have, for Christ's sake and in his Name, relinquished this beloved habit, and have found new joy and peace and power coming into their cleansed lives.

"Lord, is it your wish for me to give up the indulgence in tobacco?" There can be but one answer that our Lord Jesus Christ would give to such a straight, direct question. And may the response be, "Thy will be done."

—One of the most successful fighters of tobacco and the cigarette is Mr. James J. Jeffreys, who was formerly Field Secretary of the Anti-Cigarette League of America. In the past six years he has spoken to hundreds of thousands of students and in several hundred churches, and always with great effectiveness. The lecture used by Mr. Jeffreys he has put into printed form as a suggestion to Sunday-school workers and other temperance speakers. An eight-page leaflet containing this and other temperance items will be mailed for five cents. A larger booklet with additional material for temperance teaching, entitled "Building and Rebuilding Men," is issued by Mr. Jeffreys at 25 cents. Address James J. FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

—o—

Shiloh, Yadkin College Ct.—Our faithful superintendent, Mr. Harper A. Leonard, was detained from Sunday school last Sunday on account of the illness of one of his children. This is the first Sunday he has been absent this year. Our prayers are that the child may be speedily restored to health and Bro. Leonard and his faithful wife may be back in their usual places in Sunday school. Our Sunday school this year has surpassed all past records, both in point of number and in the interest manifested by the officers, teachers and scholars. Our attendance Sunday was 144. The collection for the Children's Home was $4.43. In the absence of the superintendent, Bro. Leonard, A. H. Evans acted in his stead and the pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, was called upon to teach the Adult Bible Class, which numbered 35. The subject of the lesson being "A Prayer for the Tempted," he dwelt at large on the importance of daily prayer that we may be able to overcome the temptations that come to us daily. Sunday being the regular monthly preaching day, we were privileged to hear another of Bro. Powell's excellent sermons. After the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered, which was participated in by an unusually large number which fact we think indicates that the spiritual condition of our church is in first class shape. Election for delegates to the next Annual Conference was held immediately after the sacrament.——Sister Velna Craver who professed faith in Christ in the recent revival meeting at West Lexington was received as a member of our church. We welcome her to our communion and fellowship and trust that her life may be one of usefulness and service.

This report would not be complete without mentioning the noble and generous act of one of our noble young men whom our church is proud to claim and honor as one of its most faithful and devoted members. A young man who only a few years ago left his father's homestead and went out in the world to carve his fortune, taking God as his partner in business. He makes it the rule of his life to give one tenth of his income to the Lord and he is succeeding immeasurably. As the large crowd began to assemble for Sunday school and preaching, Sunday, they noticed that the church presented quite a different appearance from what it did the last time they saw it. It has been treated to two nice coats of paint with well selected trimmings.

Curiosity ran high. How could the church be painted so nicely and nobody asked for a cent of money? At the close of the service the pastor said he felt it was due the members and friends as well as the donor to tell them how this was done. It was the generous act of our noble young brother, Richard Berrier, of Jacksonville, Fla., who sent $100 to his father, Bro. W. J. Berrier, to be used for this purpose. This amount was supplemented by his father to the amount of $5.00. The church gave Bro. Berrier a rising vote of thanks and closed by singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." Reporter.

Halifax Circuit.—I preached to a small but appreciative congregation at Ringwood yesterday at 11 a. m. I want to appeal to the members of Union Church and ask them to worship with us at Ringwood. These two congregations are small and they ought to help each other. We have no Sunday school at Ringwood, so we will have no children's day there, unless they invite some of the other churches to bring their S. S. and hold it for them, but we want to take a special offering for foreign missions on the fourth Sunday in July.

Lee's Chapel had children's day exercise in the morning and I tried to preach to the parents and children at 2 p. m. I was greatly surprised when I arrived at this church about 1 p. m. to see the entire grove filled with horses and buggies and automobiles. I was told that the women and children almost filled the church, while the men outside would have made another splendid congregation. I heard several people speaking very highly of the entire service. N. M. Harrison, Jr., one of our ministerial students, was at home, so he kindly consented to make a lecture in connection with the children's day service. Every one seemed delighted with his talk. J. H. Harrison, Jr., was present and made an interesting and helpful talk about our Children's Home. He and Miss Lula Lee both attended the Thomasville Convention, and they have created interest at their churches. At the afternoon service, I asked the good women to organize a Sunday egg club for the benefit of our Home, and they did so, securing about twelve names in a few minutes. At some future appointment, I hope to take a special collection for the Home at this and all of my churches, and we hope to get at least $200 on this circuit. I forgot to say that the offering of the morning for foreign missions was $12.20.

We had a very good service at Bethesda at 8 p. m. Meet with us at Eden next Sunday and stay for both services. R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

Asheville.—Yes, I'm feeling better, thank you. Congregations were not so large yesterday, but we had one addition to the church membership at the morning service, and all the services of the day were helpful spiritually. So this isn't blue Monday for this preacher.

And I feel better, too, about that Building Fund. Look at the list of names this week! Looks like old times. My only regret is that your name isn't in the list. You remember I told you some days ago that Miss Ross, of Asheboro, had written me for a list of the delinquents at that place. I sent it to her post-haste, and the result is evident in this week's report. Hurrah for Miss Ross, and the very best of thanks. But what's the matter with Greensboro, and High Point, and Henderson, and the rest of them? "Brethren, see that ye come not behind in these things."

And did you notice in the last report from Bro. Davis that he had appointed a collector for Asheville on his work? No, there wasn't anything due from Roanoke; he was just wanting, out of the bigness of his heart, to help that other Yankee out of a hole. Miss Edith Harris sent in to-day the money reported from Enfield. Thank you, Miss Harris.

The Ladies' Aid is hoping to get the Park for a Fourth of July sale. We were kept out of it last year, but the year before that cleared over $100 at the sale.

I regret very much my failure to get to the Summer Conference. I am glad that it was such a splendid success. Just here I want to express my appreciation of the desire of the Philathea class to raise the money to pay my expenses to the Conference. They had the will to do it and would have done it had I been able to go.

Welch Memorial Church.—Our special meeting embraced the first Sunday in June with Rev. R. C. Stubbins as pulpit help. There were twelve conversions and reclamations, two united with our church. His sermons were all good plain gospel; he did his part well, and everybody seemed to enjoy his preaching. D. R. Williams, Pas.

Philadelphia, Greensville Ct.—We are going to have an all-day program of service at Philadelphia next Sunday. The pastor will preach at 11 o'clock, and in the afternoon we are expecting a noted man to give an address on some phase of the work of Sunday schools. Music will be furnished by the combined force of singers from the different Sunday schools on the work. Nothing renders public worship more effective than excellent music. Numbers of souls are sung into the Kingdom. Every family is requested to bring dinner and eat the fat and drink the sweet, and we are hoping to have a good time together. If the day is pretty, I am sure multitudes of people will attend. D. T. Surratt,
M. P. Chambliss.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Ct.—The S. S. attendance for June has been larger than any of the past months. There have been over one hundred almost every Sunday this summer. We hope it will be still larger next month. The number has been: June 6th, 139; 13th, 124; 20th, 134; 27th, 107. Minnie Suits, Sec.

Hill Top, Guilford Ct.—I want to tell our people something about "Hill Top." The first service of any kind ever held at this place was a preaching service the third Sunday evening in March this year. The following Sunday afternoon a Sunday school was organized with seventeen members. Mr. J. W. Lewis was elected superintendent. No other officers elected at this meeting. Later other officers were elected and teachers chosen for each class. This school has more than doubled itself, there are about fifty on roll with an average attendance of about forty. This is a small school compared with many others, but we are proud of it. Hill Top is not a church but a school house, a meeting place. This meeting place is beautifully located on the Greensboro and High Point road. There is but one church on this road, and that is at Jamestown, about ten miles from Greensboro. Hill Top is about midway between these two places. We don't know of a better place to plant the seed of Methodist Protestantism than right here in the Hill Top community. We have Sunday school here every Sunday and preaching every third Sunday at 3:30 p. m. We are now planning for a special meeting to begin here the third Sunday in Oct. We beg for the co-operation of all Methodist Protestants to help us establish our church at this place. All other meetings on this work are planned and help secured, and I hope that this will be a blessed year for Guilford circuit. Bro. Cecil was with us Sunday and finished his work on this charge. He preached two splendid sermons; one at Hickory Grove, the other at Red Hill.

The pastor and his better half want to thank their friends and brethren for so many good things. Bro. E. S. Jones for flour, sugar, coffee, and oats for the horse; Bro. Oscar Hassell for flour,; Bro. J. A. Suits for a fine pig, honey and oats; Bro. M. E. Futrell for fruit. We certainly do appreciate these good things, for they came in such a good time. Frat., S. M. Needham.

Concord.—Last Sunday was a good day for us. The congregation at the morning service was the best we have had since I came. The Sunday school was larger than we have had at all, I think. We have a splendid superintendent, a good teaching force and we only lack room. I find this difficulty in many of our churches—we lack room. In the future we ought to see to it that our churches be so arranged that we can have separate rooms for the classes. In our church here the Baraca and Philathea classes are curtained off which is a splendid arrangement where separate rooms were not originally planned in the building.

On next Sunday we commence our protracted meeting with Bro. L. W. Gerringer as our help. Pray for us that we may have a great revival and that souls may be saved.

I am happy in my work. Two sad deaths have occurred in our church here since I came. Sister Lucy Blackwelder was called to her final reward on the night of the 16th inst. Every one joins in saying that she was a good woman, faithful to the vows that she made to her church and to her God. She was a faithful, loving mother and wife, a good neighbor and a devout Christian. She was the mother of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters. Six of the children are gone on and six are left to mourn her loss. May these six who all live here, I think, continue their service to the Master and meet mother on the uplands of eternity. The husband is still living—a faithful, earnest, devout Christian, he is. Only a little while and he will pass over on the other side where there will be no parting. On yesterday we buried Sister L. A. Scarboro, the mother of our townsman, W. H. Scarboro, and our effieient Sunday school superintendent. Sister Scarboro was 66 years old and the mother of eight children who are all ilving. There are six sons and two daughters. The oldest son, Joe, lives at Norwood, N. C. Robert lives in Bessimer City, Daniel in Salisbury, Fred in Mt. Gilead, and Clay in Concord. These are all noble young men, manly men, whose lives we trust are consecrated to the service of their mother's God. The two daughters live here, Mrs. Mary Everhardt and Mrs. Nannie Honeycutt. They are good Christian women.

Everything was done that loving hands could do, for the restoration and comfort of this mother, but on the night of the 27th inst. she was called up higher to meet her Savior and husband who just eleven months ago went on before. Sister Scarboro had been a member of the church for fifty years and had lived a consistent, exemplary Christian life. She will be missed in the homes of her children, in the church, in the community. May the blessed Master who knows all about sorrows, bind up broken hearts and help these sons and daughters so to live that they will meet mother over on the other shore.

W. R. Lowdermilk.

Moriah, Tabernacle Ct.—As Bro. Johnson was called to preach a funeral this morning Bro. Hunter from Greensboro kindly filled his place. He made a short but interesting talk on "Choice in Life." We were glad to have his wife with us also. We held our children's day service the 2nd Sun. The children did finely and much credit is due Miss Gertrude Sharpe who is so faithful in training them. Collection, $12.00. A large crowd was present and it is reported that our new church was full for the first time. Different suggestions are being discussed as to raising money to pay off small debt on church. Our Philathea girls certainly believe in carrying their motto, "We do things." We are not satisfied by just putting a beautiful carpet on the floor, but now we want to place some nice lights over it. We hope to have them by the last of August. Miss Nellie Sharpe and Robert Kirkman are on the sick list. We hope for them a speedy recovery.—Our Foreign and Home Missionary Societies will meet with Mrs. John Moore Thursday afternoon. We are praying for a good meeting and hope to get more members. With love, Lillie Sharpe, Reporter.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Ct.—Last Sunday was a very good day for us. We held our children's day exercise at 11 a. m. The children all did their parts well and everything went off nicely. A large congregation was out which showed they enjoyed the exercise by the good attention they gave us. Our collection for foreign missions was $22.25. We thank each and every one for their contribution and every one will be greatly rewarded for same. Our Sunday school is still doing nicely. The attendance was very good through June and we trust it will be still better through July. Our pastor, Rev. C. H. Whitaker, filled his regular appointment for us Sunday night. He had just returned from the Summer Conference and of course had lots of nice things to tell us. Reporter.

—Bro. Pritchard had a serious time last week after the close of the Summer Conference, owing to the alarming condition of his wife, but he is feeling better now: little Harlan Feeman has come into the home, the mother is improving, and Bro. P. is enjoying paternal honors. The Children's Day at Thomasville had to be postponed, however, and is set for the second Sunday in this month. By the way, our cradle roll in Grace S. S. is growing by leaps and bounds. Three members or rather three candidates for membership appeared on the scene in one week recently.

A Note of Thanks.—We wish to thank our friends for their acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy extended to us during the illness and death of our husband and father. Mrs. M. H. Pegg and Family.

AN APPEAL TO THE ADVOCATES OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

It is an assured fact that the National Anti-Saloon League Convention at Atlantic City, New Jersey, July 6-9th will be a success. The latest reports indicate that thirty thousand will be present. One Sunday school in Philadelphia will send fifteen hundred. The program, which is just out, is filled with men and women of national and international reputation in both church and state. Supreme court judges, governors, senators, congressmen, and bishops and other prominent D. D.'s will be there. All who attend will get a new vision of national prohibition and an inspiration that will make them a force in bringing it about. I am jealous that North Carolina shall be largely represented at this historic gathering.

It is an assured fact that we will have representatives from all parts of the state. Delegates from Weldon, Morehead City, Wilmington, Charlotte, Raleigh, Concord, Gastonia, Monroe, Asheville, Spencer, Guilford College, Winston-Salem, Greensboro and other places have written that they will go. Never before has the national organization made such preparations for a convention, nor has our state organization made such preparations for an organized delegation that will bear fruit. We have selected as our state headquarters one of the best hotels, the Monticello, and secured therefrom a $2.50 rate, a reduction from their regular price. We have borrowed from the State a North Carolina flag to wave over our heads in that part of the auditorium that we shall occupy and have secured two hundred and twenty-five small flags for each one of the delegates to carry. In addition to the usual information, May 20, 1775, and April 12, 1776, these flags have in large letters, "N. C. A. S. L." (North Carolina Anti-Saloon League) and our yell, which is:

"Tarheels, tarheels, tarheels are we,
Who come from a prohibition state,
Don't you see?
'A quart in fifteen days'
The laws now read.
But our doctors say, 'Nil',
And to them we give heed."

These flags can be easily worn in the hats of ladies or gentlemen or stuck in the button holes of the coats or pinned on the shirt waists, but wherever we go in Atlantic City, the people will know that we are from North Carolina and are proud of the fact.

To secure representation from every county and community only requires that some man or woman interested in the proposition take hold of it and bring it to the attention of the church or Sunday school, or some other gathering of citizens. If your church or community has not selected its delegate, or delegates, and arranged for their expenses, it is high time for action and this earnest appeal is to every pastor and Sunday school superintendent, or any other man or woman that loves the cause, to get busy at once and see that such a selection is made next Sunday. Bring the matter up in Sunday school, prayer meeting, baraca class, preaching or somewhere else and have your community to take stock in this convention.

In case you do not have time to write us of your delegate, remember that our delegation will get together at Washington, D. C., Monday, July 5th, and leave there at 4 p. m. over the Pennsylvania for Atlantic City. Train reaches there at 8:39. Summer excursion rates to Atlantic City are on from all points of any size in North Carolina, which rate is equivalent to two cents per mile, but a cheaper rate can be secured from Washington, D. C. Return ticket from there is $9.05. The cheapest plan is to go on mileage to Washington and buy return ticket from there. Yours for national prohibition,

R. L. Davis, Supt. N. C. Anti-Saloon League.

FROM IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS.

The following formed part of the "Letter of Greetings from the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America to the Churches of Christ in Japan":

"We are sending these, our brethren, to tell you as no written words of ours can tell, the sincerity of our affection, the eagerness of our desire, and the steady persuasion of our hope that we all, of the East and of the West, shall be one in Jesus Christ.

"We pray that in your land and in ours, faith shall have its satisfying vision of our Lord, that love shall be sanctified by His fellowship, and that our common life shall be broadened in its sympathies and beautified with His likeness.

"May the God of love unite our hearts in the bonds of holy sympathy, and bring us all in the joy of fellowship which is with the Father and with His Son our Savior.

"May peace and prosperity abide in all the homes of Japan. May your schools be centers of intellectual light and your churches centers of moral life and spiritual power. May believers be multiplied and all your land be blessed by Him who is the Light of the World, the Redeemer of men."

Extracts from the "Letter of Greetings from the Federated Churches of Christ in Japan to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America":

"The total number of Christians in Japan is less than 200,000, even including the Roman Catholic membership. But while the number of Christians in Japan cannot be said to be very large, those who are in favor of Christianity are several hundred per cent. more. In fact, Christian ethical ideas, and the Christian view of life are sweeping through the mind of the educated class. Especially of late inquirers are coming from all classes. This is but one sign of the ripeness of the time for evangelization of the entire country. Again, that the special three-year evangelistic campaign which started last year is to be an opportunity for a great revival, we do not doubt. Indeed, this is a great blessing which the Lord has shown to Japan, and which is also the fruits of self-sacrificing services rendered by the missionaries whom the churches in your country have sent us. For these we are grateful. It is, we believe, the respopnsibility of the two countries with their historic friendship, that in grateful response to unbounded grace from on high, the one from this side of the Pacific, and the other from the other side, shall contribute toward the peace of the world, and toward the happiness of entire humanity, by bringing into light the fundamental principles of brotherhood of all nations.",

THEY ARE COMING, THEY ARE GOING.

Children's Day offerings are coming by every mail. They gladden my heart. They represent toil and sacrifice for His Kingdom. Attica, Ia., sent $117.76, more than twice as much as last year. Represents leadership, interest, co-operation. May there be many such. The supplies are still going to schools daily. They are free. Your school ought to have a service, if not arranged for. Send order to-day ,Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.

THE SAVER OF THE WHITEHOUSE SILVERWARE

It was a woman that kept the nation from utter disgrace in 1814, when the city of Washington was burned by the British. She stayed at the doomed Capitol until the last moment, packed the Declaration of Independence and many other valuable papers into as many "trunks as to fill one carriage," cut the large portrait of General Washington from its frame on the wall of the White House reception room, and loaded a wagon with silver plate and precious portable articles. That woman was Dolly Madison, wife of the President of the struggling republic.

While the nation's leader, with General Winder and his army, ineffectively battled with the advancing British foe, Dolly Madison's nimble fingers and alert mind diminished the victor's glory by depriving him of a large portion of the spoils. The society queen changed to heroine and womanly wife. "Two messengers, covered with dust, come to bid me fly," she wrote, still expecting Mr. Madison, "but I wait for him."

It was Mrs. Madison who put our White House on the map. Before its destruction, in 1814, is was merely known as the presidential mansion. With the blackened walls and the frame still standing after the evacuation of the city by the British, Mrs. Madison suggested that the rebuilt structure could best be restored to its former beauty by covering the scorched and the new timbers with a heavy coat of white. It was done, and the building was dubbed "White House."

The war interrupted the social activity of the President's wife, but before and afterwards the receptions and gala affairs were numerous. The "levee" of the President in 1816 was declared to have been the most brilliant of any ever seen in the mansion, and it was on this occasion that Mr. Bagot made the immortal remark that Mrs. Madison looked "every inch a queen."

Concerning the social gayeties of the Madison regime, the author of "Ladies of the White House" says: "Mrs. Madison's sole aim was to be popular and render her husband's administration brilliant and successful. Her field was the parlor: and with the view of reigning supreme there, she bent the energies of her mind to the one idea of accomplishment."

In the letters and comments of James G. Blaine, the famous Congressman and candidate, he depicts the power of Mrs. Madison as follows: "She saved the administration of her husband, held him back from the extremes of Jeffersonianism, and enabled him to escape from the terrible dilemma of the War of 1812. But for her De Witt Clinton would have been chosen President in 1812."

The expression, "Nothing in this world is of much moment, my dear," is declared to be a true statement of Mrs. Madison's philosophy of living. She did not worry. She was born of Quaker parents in North Carolina, May 20, 1772. As a young miss, Dorothy Payne married Mr. Todd. Shortly after his death she married Mr. Madison, in October, 1794. Her age at that time was twenty-two. James Madison served eight years as Secretary of State with President Jefferson and during the following eight years was the nation's chief executive. He died in 1836, and Mrs. Madison died in 1849 at the ripe age of eighty-two.

There was true devotion in the family life of Mr. and Mrs. Madison. When he was Secretary of State he had occasion to go from Washington to Philadelphia. On hearing from him of his safe arrival, the wife quickly replied: "I have this moment perused with delight thy letter, my darling husband, with its enclosures. To find that you love me, have my child safe, and that my mother is well seem to comprise all my happiness."

When Washington Irving, the aspiring young author, came to Washington with the intention of securing from the President an ambassadorial post, he failed in his mission. On January 13, 1811, he wrote to his New York friend Brevoort and said in part: "I cut one of my best opera flourishes, skipped into the dressing room, popped my head into the hands of a sanguinary Jacobinical barber, and in a few minutes I emerged into the blazing splendor of Mrs. Madison's drawing-room. Here I was most graciously received, found a crowded collection of great and little men, of ugly old women and beautiful young ones, and in ten minutes was hand in glove with half the people in the assemblage. Mrs. Madison is a fine, portly, buxom dame, who has a smile and a pleasant word for everybody. Her sisters, Mrs. Cutts and Mrs. Washington, are like the two merry wives of Windsor; but as to Jemmy Madison, he is but a withered little applejohn."

At a ball in celebration of the third naval victory of the War of 1812 a letter writer says that "almost all the ladies made free use of rouge and pearl powder" and continues her description: "Mrs. Madison is said to rouge, but not evident to my eyes; and I do not think it is true, as I am well assured I saw her color come and go at the naval ball when the Macedonian flag was presented to her by young Hamilton."

Virginia, one of the famous family of Randolphs, wrote in after years: "Mrs. Madison was an intimate and much-valued friend of my mother's; and her amiable, playful manners with children attracted my sisters and myself and made her a great favorite with us."

One of the receptions during the Madison regime so impressed a young girl who was present that she wrote home at once under the spell of her great enthusiasm. She drew a pen picture of the famous Dolly, who was the most queenly wife and matron in Washington in her day.

"I could describe the dignified appearance of Mrs. Madison, but I could not do her justice," the youthful guest wrote. "It is not her form; it is not her face; it is the woman altogether whom I should wish you to see. She wears a crimson cap that almost hides her forehead, but which becomes her extremely and reminds one of a crown from its brilliant appearance contrasted with the white satin folds and her jet-black curls; but her demeanor is so removed from the hauteur generally attendant on royalty that your fancy can carry the resemblance no farther."

Queenliness and heroism ennobled Mrs. Madison's character above her associates. She had true culture and courage, and she kept her presence of mind at all times. This native mettle is disclosed in the letter she wrote to her sister while Admiral Cockburn and the British army marched toward Washington. Often quoted, but ever valuable from a historical standpoint, the letter is here reproduced:

TUESDAY, August 23, 1814.

"Dear Sister: My husband left me yesterday morning to join General Winder. He inquired anxiously whether I had courage and firmness to remain in the presidential house until his return; and on my assurance that I had no fear but for him and the success of the army, he left me, beseeching me to take care of myself and the cabinet papers, public and private.

"I have since received two dispatches from him, written in pencil. The last is alarming, because he desires that I shall be ready at a moment's warning to enter my carriage and leave the city, that the enemy seemed stronger than had been reported, and that it might happen that they would reach the city with the intention to destroy it.

"I am accordingly ready. I have pressed as many cabinet papers into trunks as to fill one carriage. Our private property must be sacrificed, as it is impossible to procure wagons for its transportation. I am determined not to go myself until I see Mr. Madison safe and he can accompany me, as I hear of much hostility toward him. . . . My friends are all gone, even Colonel C., with his hundred men who were stationed as a guard over this inclosure.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, 12 O'clock.

"Since sunrise I have been turning my spyglass in every direction and watching with unwearied anxiety, hoping to discern the approach of my husband and his friends; but I can descry only groups of military wandering in all directions as if there were a lack of arms or spirit to fight for their own firesides.

"Three O'clock.

"Will you believe it, my sister? We have had a battle or skirmish near Bladensburg, and I am still here within sound of the cannon. Mr. Madison comes not. May God protect him! Two messengers, covered with dust, come to bid me fly, but I wait for him. . . At this late hour a wagon has been secured. I have had it filled with the plate and most valuable portable articles belonging to the house. Whether it will reach its destination, the Bank of Maryland, or fall into the hands of the British soldiers, events must determine.

"Our kind friend, Mr. Carroll, has come to hasten my departure and is in a very bad humor with me because I insist on waiting till the large portrait of General Washington is secured, and it requires to be unscrewed from the wall. This process we found too tedious for these perilous moments, so I have ordered the frame to be broken and the canvas taken out. It is done, and the precious portrait is in the hands of two gentlemen from New York for safe-keeping.

"And now, dear sister, I must leave this house, or the retreating army will make me a prisoner by filling up the road I am directed to take. When I shall write again or where I shall be to-morrow, I cannot tell."—Carl Schurz Lowden, in Christian Advocate.

Whitaker's Temple, Roanoke Ct.—On the third Sunday night in June our S. S. held its children's day service. We got it up in just one week and had to do that under difficulties, sickness in our homes, and storms to interfere with practice; but with it all we felt amply repaid when everything went off so nicely and our offering for foreign missions was $15.25. We had one little class of five children to recite, just four and five years old, and it was surprising how well they did. Our S. S. is moving along nicely. We need a new church so much; I believe if all our people could see that is what we need to give us new life, we would wake up on the subject and have one, for I believe we can build if we will. Our ladies' aid society is still at work, and while we are not doing what we might, we are doing some good. With best wishes for the Herald and its readers,

Mamie Johnston.,

Midway, Haw River Ct.—We are trying to press onward with our S. S., though there were a good many absent last Sunday. We do wish the people would take more interest in this good work, for there is something that every Christian ought to do. But O how we shun our duty.

Bro. Ashburn filled his appointments last Sunday with an excellent sermon.——We expect to have our children's day the fourth Sunday morning in July. Our special meeting also begins on that day. Let us be praying that some good may be done and that some souls may be saved.

June 28, 1915.

Winston-Salem.—Our children's day service was conducted successfully last Sabbath. The little ones acquitted themselves well owing to the untiring labor and care of Mrs. S. W. Taylor who spent so much time in drilling and teaching them. The result of it all accomplished a most beautiful success. We had in our congregation in the morning service our genial friend and brother, S. R. Harris, of Henderson. He delivered a fine address to the young people at the night service which was much enjoyed and highly appreciated. We hope that his timely admonitions will not be forgotten and his forceful remarks about reaping what we have sown will deter many young feet from going astray. We hope Bro. Harris will come again and often. His very presence seems a benediction.

We have just heard that Mrs. James Pegram died yesterday at the home of her stepdaughter, Mrs. Flora Hunt, in Winston-Salem. Aunt "Gillie," as she is familiarly known, is gone to her great reward. She had been failing for some time with a complication of diseases. She was a faithful and true Methodist Protestant and throughout her long life did what she could for her beloved church. Many of our ministers will recall her deeds of kindness and devotion to all our church interests. She gave liberally of her means for the support of her church as long as she lived. She was about 75 years of age. Her funeral will be conducted from the church this evening at 4 o'clock. Her remains will be buried in Salem Cemetery by her husband's side. Rev. S. W. Taylor, her pastor, will conduct the last sad rites for the departed sister. One by one God's children are gathering home. Rep.

Mt. Pleasant Church, Mt. Pleasant Ct.—Children's Day service was held third Sunday in June. Collection, $15.50. The children rendered their parts well. Mrs. Robert Amick, Misses Sallie Amick and Mary Smith deserve credit for training the children. Also does Mr. Troxler deserve special mention for his ever ready service in training the choir. On the third Saturday evening in June Mr. and Mrs. Troxler, at the parsonage, served lemonade, cake and ice cream to the junior, intermediate, and primary pupils of the S. S. It was an enjoyable evening for the children.

Greene Township S. S. Con. was held in Pleasant Union M. P. Church on the fifth Sunday in May. There were several good speakers for the day.

Another One of Oak Ridge's Good Men Has Gone.

The Oak Ridge community as well as the immediate family and a host of friends lament the death of a distinguished citizen. On Tuesday, June 15, Professor J. Allen Holt, President of the Oak Ridge Institute, died. His death was of course not unexpected, for he had for several months fought bravely to conquer the disease that was fast destroying his body. Prof. Holt was not an old man, being only 62 years of age, but he had lived a great deal more in 62 years than the majority of men live who spend a great many more years on the earth. His work needs no praise from me. The whole State of North Carolina and a great many other states know of the splendid work done by Prof. J. Allen Holt in co-operation with his no less distinguished brother, Prof. M. H. Holt, at Oak Ridge. The work of these two men surely follows them.

The M. P. Church at Oak Ridge has suffered a severe loss in the death of this man. As pastor of the church I find myself thinking, What shall we do without the encouragement, advice and help of Profs. J. Allen and M. H. Holt? And then I breathe a prayer to God that the mantle of these great men may fall on their sons and on the young men of the church and community.

The good wife, the two sons and daughter have had and still have my sincere sympathy in their sad hour. For a while only the separation may be, for it is your privilege to see him in the sweet by and by.

The pastor was assisted in the funeral by Dr. Tagg of Baltimore and Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk of Concord. It was Prof. Holt's request that Dr. Tagg preach the funeral sermon and that Bro. Lowdermilk assist in the service.

Interment was at the Oak Ridge Cemetery near to his brother, M. H. Holt. In life they walked near each other in their life's work, in death their bodies rest near each other, and in heaven they walk and talk and rejoice together.

Linley W. Gerringer.

Brother James Pegram Dead.

Bro. James Pegram died at his home at Reedy Fork, Sunday morning, June 13th. He was 85 years old. For many years, the writer does not know how many, he had been a member of the Ai M. P. Church. The deceased was a good citizen, and his death brings regret to his many friends. He leaves behind a wife nearly 90 years of age, three daughters and two sons.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Mr. Hill of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and interment was at Friendship Chapel, Monday at 1 o'clock. The aged wife, and the sons and daughters have our prayers and sympathy.

Linley W. Gerringer, Pastor.

One of Sandy Ridge's Oldest and Best Men Dead.

On Thursday, June 17th, Bro. M. H. Pegg passed on to the spirit world. He had been a faithful member of Sandy Ridge M. P. Church for a great many years. The deceased was 80 years old. He leaves a wife, two sons and three daughters, and a large number of friends to weep and regret their loss. Bro. Pegg was one of the best citizens of the community, and I am sure the whole Sandy Ridge community will miss this good man. The church will miss him. He was quiet and unassuming, but intensely interested in the welfare of his church. The wife and children have our sympathy in this time of bereavement. We should take comfort from his parting testimony. When his pastor read God's word to him during his last days he rejoiced in God's promises; and just a few hours before he died he gave to his good wife the assurance that all was well with his soul.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer at the Sandy Ridge M. P. Church, after which he was buried in the Sandy Ridge Cemetery. Linley W. Gerringer, Pas.

N. C. BRANCH W. F. M. S. TREASURER'S REPORT

Amount received since Branch Meeting: Center Auxiliary, $5.72; Greensboro Auxiliary, $25.57; total, $31.29.

Velna McCulloch, Treas.

WANTS TO KNOW THE NEAREST M. P. CHURCH.

Bro. J. T. Jones is a railroad man and consequently moves from place to place. He has moved to Farmville, N. C., and thus writes:

"I am now living at this place, a beautiful little town of about one thousand inhabitants, and I wish you or some one else would tell me the nearest M. P. Church. Farmville is in Pitt county, 33 miles from Washington, N. C., about 14 miles from Greenville, N. C. This is a beautiful farming country. The people do not farm right, for they raise tobacco. I made a trip down to Washington, N. C., some time ago. I visited an oyster boat while there. The manager of the boat asked me did I like fresh oysters right out of the shell. I told him I did not know, as I had never tried one. He immediately went down to the bottom deck of his boat and brought up some in the shells and he at once pried open a shell and soon had an oyster cut out with a queer-looking knife. He insisted on my eating it; he said it was good. Well, I cannot say that I ate it. I just swallowed it, and he asked, Is it good? I said, I am not used to those things, I guess I would have to cultivate an appetite for them."

ANIMALS AND EARTHQUAKES.

That animals are sensitive to the approach of earthquakes is a fact frequently observed, and the more recent seismic troubles in various countries give numerous examples of this singular faculty which many animals possess. For instance, in Japan, horses set up an unusual agitation whenever a seismic shock is near at hand. In Central America dogs and cats flee from houses and the inhabitants have become so accustomed to this that they follow the example of the animals and leave their dwellings, so as to escape danger. In Italy it has been observed that birds left their nests and flew up to a great height in the air, but this without noise, before the earthquake took place. However, from the beginning of the shocks to the last the birds uttered their cries continuously. It is asserted that in Sicily cocks crow and dogs howl just before an earthquake.—Catholic Sentinel.

THE BAD BOY.

"Once we thought it was the bad boy who made the disorderly school; now we are coming to understand that it is the disorderly school that makes the bad boy. We are learning that this is not a matter of rods or rules and regulations; it is not a matter of persuading so many little sufferers to sit in silence in the Sunday-school, and least of all is it a matter of expertly handling obstreperous individuals by physical exertion. Indeed, discipline and order in the Sunday-schhol is not so much a matter of individuals as a problem of organization and of dealing with a social group. Discipline is a matter of discipl-ing."

Many such wholesome interpretations are found in Efficiency in the Sunday-school, by Henry Frederick Cope, who writes from extensive experience and who has a helpful message for those who are interested in increasing the influence of the Sunday-school.

STRAWBERRY CROP.—Over 700 solid car loads of strawberries have been shipped from the East Tennessee section and points south of Chattanooga to Cincinnati and other western markets during the season now coming to a close, according to figures of the Queen and Crescent Route, over which practically the entire crop moved. The great bulk of this movement comes from stations north of Chattanooga on the C. N. O. & T. P. Ry. A number of cars also come from points on Southern Railway in East Tennessee, the total from these sections for this year running over six hundred cars. Eighty cars came from Cuba, Ala., and other stations in that territory on the Alabama Great Southern Railroad. There were a few scattering shipments making up the total. The crop this year was much larger than last year, but despite this fact good prices were realized, growers receiving an average of $1.75 a crate, or about $700 a car, which will mean that this year practically $500,000 has been brought into this section for strawberries alone, giving the growers a handsome profit and furnishing employment to a large number.

He was awarded the Victoria Cross by King George and the Cross of the Legion of Honor by the French government. But he did not live long to enjoy these honors. He was taking up in his flying machine a magazine writer who wished thus to gather material for an article, when he lost control of his machine and it fell to the earth, killing both men.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

This week we report $2 each from D. R. Williams, I. I. York, J. H. Hulin, T. M. Johnson, J. H. Bowman, and C. W. Bates. Bro. Bates sent his direct to the beneficiary. If others have done this, please bear in mind it is necessary to report same to the secretary. Bro. Johnson in sending his dues sent an extra two dollars from Tabernacle church contributed by the following brethren: D. H. Hunter, $1, P. A. Hardin, 50c, D. T. Smith, 25c, I. L. Trogdon, 25c. The total amount from all sources including the amounts sent direct to Bro. Raper by Bro. Moton and Bro. Bates is $61.50. A number have not yet sent in their dues. Letters have been sent to all the beneficiary members who have not paid, and it is hoped they will be prompt in responding to these letters. Bro. Raper is in great need of the money, and it will not be long till the secretary will be away from home, which will make it difficult for him to attend to the business promptly. J. A. Burgess, Sec.

DENTON HIGH SCHOOL.

Our school property here is clear of all debt, but we carry no insurance. If it should go up in flames it would be a total loss to the church. I feel like it is unnecessary for me to say anything in an effort to show the necessity of having the property insured, for every business man knows that it should be done without delay. In order that we might be able to take out an insurance policy at once I have sent out a large number of circular letters asking for a donation of only $1.00. This is a small amount, yet if we get 40 responses we can get a $2000 policy for three years. This will be better than no insurance. Let every interested person send me a dollar at once. W. P. Pickett, High Point, and Dr. G. E. Matthews, Siler City, have already sent in a dollar each. We want 38 more to come in at once. Now, friends, I just simply lay the matter before you and if you will respond I will get the policy and forward at once to our Treas., R. H. Brooks, Greensboro. If you do not respond, I shall be as careful as possible to keep the property safe, but we stand chances to lose all. A mighty foolish thing for the church to do is to pass this matter by as not worthy consideration. Fair notice is now given. Send it at once and let's protect our own. George L. Reynolds.

THE REVOLT OF YOUNG MORMONS.

It gives one a higher opinion of the honesty of the masses of the Mormon people to read that the younger generations are beginning to lose faith in their-so-called sacred books. Some of them are beginning openly to advocate reform. The following, written by Prof. E. J. Banks for The Christian Herald, helps to explain the change that is coming over the young Mormons:

"Accompanying 'The Book of Abraham' are several illustrations of the Egyptian documents which Smith pretended to have translated, and which he claims were written by Abraham. They are genuine ancient Egyptian documents, as any scholars familiar with the Egyptian characters may see at a glance. Smith seems to have obtained the documents from a sea captain. The hieroglyphic inscription is very short, but Smith's translation of it covers thirty pages of printed matter. At the time Smith's translation was made no man could prove that it was not correct, for the hieroglyphs could not then be read; but now they are as easily read by scholars as the page on an English book.

"Some two years ago Bishop Spalding, of Utah, persuaded the Mormon leaders that it would be well if Egyptian scholars might be permitted to see the inscriptions, the supposed translation of which is the 'Book of Abraham.' The leaders of the Mormons, convinced beyond a doubt that Smith's inspired translation was correct, willingly supplied Bishop Spalding with copies of them, and these copies were submitted to several Egyptian scholars for translation. It seemed to the Mormons that the scholars must verify Smith's translation, and thus the world would be convinced of the truth of the book, and all mankind would turn to Mormonism.

"But the Mormon elders made a fatal mistake. A glance at the inscriptions convinced the scholars that Smith's translation was purely imaginary. The inscriptions are not upon papyrus, but upon small clay objects, which the ancient Egyptians placed as cushions beneath the heads of the mummies. They make no mention of Abraham in Egypt; they are merely short prayers to the Egyptian sun-god. These little clay cushions are among the most common of Egyptian antiquities; they may be seen in nearly every museum, or purchased in Cairo by any traveler for a trifling sum. So instead of verifying Smith's translation, the scholars presented to the world scientific and absolute proof that Joseph Smith was not inspired to translate the inscriptions, that his alleged translation was purely imaginary, and that the 'Book of Abraham' was not a translation of the inscriptions at all."

—Bro. E. G. Lowdermilk expects to begin protracted services at Bethany, Reidsville charge, next Sunday and expects Rev. R. L. Troxler to preach in the meetings.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The Executive Committee of the Methodist Protestant Church will meet in regular annual session on Wednesday, the 31st of July at 10 o'clock a. m., in Westminster, Md. The presidents of the annual conferences have an important duty to perform at this meeting in connection with the Committee. The General Conference has made it the duty of the presidents who are present to pass upon the general assessments laid upon the church at large before such can be adopted by the Executive Committee. This is an important matter and should have the attention of each president in the denomination, and it is a duty of each president to be at this meeting. We have urged their attendance each year, and especially invited them to participate in the discussions of the many important questions that annually come before the Committee, and their counsels have been of great value to our deliberations, as well as add much to the interest of the meeting. The meeting next week will be the most important of the quadrennium, and a large attendance is expected and desired.

R. T. Pickens, Secretary.

UNITED BRETHREN ACTION ON CHURCH UNION.

The Methodist Recorder of last week reviews the various actions of the United Brethren in relation to their union with the M. P. Church. We have not space for the entire article, but give the concluding portion which states the last action taken:

"As a Board of Bishops, we can only reaffirm our desire and judgment in favor of the merger of churches of similar faith and order at such time and in such degree as mutual love and concession shall make possible In the effort at church union in which we have present responsibility, we are compelled to declare that, owing to the fact that in those sections of both denominations involved, where each is rich in tradition and history, and where conferences are strongest numerically as well as financially, that a mutual disinclination toward union exists, which is determined and insistent to a degree that compels us to postpone referring the question of union to a vote of our people.

"That Bishop H. H. Fout and Judge R. H. Bennett be our representatives on a joint committee of the Methodist Protestant Church and the Church of the United Brethren in Christ in conducting a campaign of education in both churches.

"That Bishop William M. Bell, Bishop H. H. Fout, Judge R. H. Bennett, Dr. A. P. Funkhouser, and Dr. H. H. Shupe be acommittee to forward a campaign of education with reference to church union in our own church."

—Rev. S. W. Taylor is enjoying a needed vacation this month. He is spending the time visiting relatives in Rockingham county.

THE MIND OF THE SPIRIT.

By Rev. R. J. Campbell, D. D., in Christian Work.

Not for a moment should we be prepared to concede that human nature as we know it today is unresponsive to higher impulses and nobler demands than those which relate merely or mainly to the appetites and baser instincts. Notwithstanding all the discouragements born of a close acquaintance with average humanity in its lower levels it still remains true, thank God, that it is capable of great and beautiful things which show themselves in moments of exalted feeling. What glorious self-sacrifice we have been witnessing in Europe to the remotest corners of the earth, since last July! How bravely, nobly, willingly, and even gladly, men and women have given, and still are giving, of their best! How grandly sorrow and affliction are being borne, how tenderly and sweetly ministered to! Yea, and on the battlefield itself, in the very heart of the maelstrom of passion and brutality it creates, we see things that testify of the presence of Christ in the human soul, and are less of earth than heaven. We were deeply touched a few days ago on being told of the way in which three wounded soldiers, an Englishman, a Frenchman, and a German, helped each other through a long and dreadful night—perhaps two or three nights, for the wounded often have to lie as long—before death came to the deliverance of one and human rescue for the others. They were all in direct pain, but somehow they managed, though with great difficulty, to bind up each other's hurts. The German produced his morphia case and the needle with which all the Kaiser's troops are supplied, and injected enough of the drug from time to time to give his companions in sufferings a little ease. Then they fell to talking about their respective homes and the loved ones they had left behind, showed each other the photographs of their wives and children that they carried about them; and then they prayed together and compared experiences on the mysteries of the Spirit. We think we are right in saying that they even tried to sing a hymn together, for the same tunes run in all lands—music is international. In the morning the German was dead. We do not know whether the others are still alive, but, anyhow, they lived long enough to tell the tale. How beautiful and uplifting, how great in its mastery over death and hell is this expression of the mind of the Spirit in which heart speaks to heart concerning the love and mercy of God! Wrath and rancor are only of the passing hour; the fellowship of Christ is eternal.

Again, any one who has to do with the poor knows how amazingly generous they can be to one another in times of distress, how they will watch by one another in times of sickness, how a hard worked woman with her own living to get and that of her children, too, will give both of her substance and strength to a neighbor who has fallen upon evil days. And yet, so curiously inconsistent is the human heart, these very people will occasionally show themselves meanly jealous and covetous when it becomes a question of one obtaining a little advantage over another in worldly good. Prodigal generosity and grudging suspicion united in a single soul, and not contending against each other either! What a puzzling combination; yet it runs all throu' life. We are only capable of seeing and responding to higher influences within a certain limited range; outside of that we lack the faculty or remain unawakened.

Nevertheless it is clear that, slow and irregular though the moral advance of the race has been, there is advance, and it must be due to something. It is equally clear that there is in all men a capacity, however limited and imperfect, for aspiring toward or responding to what we may fitly call the appeal of Christ, the superman.

Yes, appalling though the occasional setbacks may be—as we are realizing only too terribly today—we can always depend upon the presence of this susceptibility in the normal man. When you hear of some brutal murder, or some horrible case of innate depravity in a child, the inward recoil of which you are conscious is a proof of this, and shows how far the race has moved since the days when all men were capable of such crimes, or at least unconscious of their enormity; your typical criminal of today is an unexplained reversion to a period when the higher consciousness had not declared itself.

Where, then, has this change come from and to what is it due? It comes from God and is the unfolding of the divine Spirit in man. We do not yet know how far it has to take us or how much it has to do—that is, we do not fully know the mind of the Spirit or all that it means: only God knows that, who knows the end from the beginning. "He that searcheth the heart knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit." True, the world has seen in Jesus that toward which the eternal Spirit is leading mankind, but it is only as that Spirit clears the way in our hearts that we learn to understand Jesus. Do you think we understand him now? Do you think his Church has ever completely understood all that was implied in the message of Jesus to the world? No, indeed; here and there a great soul may have visualized it in something approaching completeness, but to the mass of men the divine word lies hidden until the Spirit shines upon it and enables them to see. We have not yet seen the full Christ, the Christ as he is, the Christ of humanity that is to be, nor shall we ever see him in his true glory till the God within us reveals him to our seeking souls. He has still many things to say unto us, but we cannot bear them now. It is only too true that there are human concerns in which we are dealing with him all the time, but seeing in him no beauty to desire. No, the word without is helpless till it is welcomed and interpreted by the word within.

The same applies to some extent to what we are as well as to what we see. A man may see what he ought to do without feeling morally able to do it; he may even be conscious of remorse and self-despair without being able to escape the thraldom of the temptation that has worked his overthrow. What will do it? Only one thing, and that is faith in the Spirit of Christ, that has shown him the wrong; that light bringer is also the life giver. No man has ever yet battled down an evil either in himself or the world outside by any other agency, and the thought ought to fill us both with tolerant sympathy for each other and hope for the future. Yonder brave, straightforward man who is not sure of either God or heaven, but whose very soul abhors a lie and whose solicitude for mankind compels him to spend his days and nights in the service of some great cause, has something of the mind of the Spirit, tho' he knows it not; God knows; it is God who speaks in the courage and truth of his child. See yonder degraded wretch, in whom no thought above the meat that perisheth or the gratification of sensual passion ever seems to stir. It is the mind of the Spirit in you, withheld as yet from him, that bids you pity him and long to help. Look, again, upon that rare soul to whom the whole world is filled with the light and joy of God, to whom Christ is the nearest and sweetest of companions, and whose heart is aflame with the love that counts not life dear if it may help to win the world for God; there you have the mind of the Spirit.

Spirit of purity and grace,
Our weakness pitying see;
O make our hearts thy dwelling place,
And worthier thee.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

By Prof. T. C. Amick.

About the middle of June, 1915, the writer began to prepare for a stay away from home to last for about six or seven weeks. After much seeming persuasion, the better half also decided that a man who has but a small avoirdupois needed some protection, and so she decided that the journey nor the stay either should be made by him alone. The passage of Scripture which tells us that it is not good for man to be alone doubtless had its part in influencing her to take the trip also. So on the 22nd of June the train carried us from one spot of beauty to another, from Elon College to the University of Virginia, where the purpose was to spend the time in study and in the enjoyment of literary pursuits.

It had been published that rooms would be ready for their occupants by June 21st. In fact, the rooms were ready when we came, but the furniture was not. A couple of chairs, a bed, and a desk were all the furniture found; but like good natured people, the results were accepted, and things moved on smoothly until, finally, after a certain amount of muscular energy spent in following up the Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds for three or four days, the full complement of furniture came and the occupants were comfortably housed. Trunks were finally unpacked and the real work of life at the University begun. We had been here a year before and had learned that all things come to those who wait and so we waited. The day after our arrival classes were organized, work assigned and near one thousand men and women began the serious work of University life.

So far as improvements are concerned, there has been little done in a material way at this university since a year ago. In the Summer School, a few of the courses have been broadened and a few new courses added. The Faculty has been enlarged and strengthened and the opportunities for gaining inspiration and instruction are abundant. Here under the shadow of the home of the author of the Declaration of Independence and the Father of the University of Virginia one may drink in the lore of the ages past and gather the flowers from the fresh fields of scientific investigation. This spot of weird beauty and loveliness was not ill-chosen by Jefferson for a university, for while the student delves in literature, science, and the other fields of learning, the beauties of this historic spot break in upon his soul through every avenue of the senses, and the student's life and character are simply moulded in a place of loveliness and beauty. He goes out with a greater appreciation of the beautiful for having associated with beauty so long. But while the great university has its advantages, there are sometimes diadvantages also. The moral atmosphere is not always what it might be. The advice of members of the faculty for the students to study on Sunday comes a little harshly to ears of persons taught to keep this day holy. The opportunity to have a great model Sunday school, yet the opportunity passing with no Sabbath school at all, seems a great opportunity wasted. No preaching to be heard unless the student goes to the town churches. In these respects the small denominational college is far ahead of the great university. But vesper service under the shadow of the trees and of the Rotunda somewhat redeems the lost opportunities already mentioned. Here upon the steps of this triumph of architectural skill, the Rotunda, planned by the father of the University, the common crowds consisting of men and women of every sect and creed meet and raise their hearts to the common Father of us all and all join in such good old hymns as "Abide with me," "Vesper Hymn," etc. These services are very largely attended and are greatly enjoyed by all.

A number of excellent entertainments have already been given. The Devereux Company of New York presented Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer" and two of Shakspeare's plays. Several musicals are in the Lyceum course here as well as a number of other plays. The Frank Lea Short Players and the Coburn Players are to be with us the latter part of this month. For the small price of two dollars and fifty cents the University gives her students high grade plays and entertainments that would cost from ten to fifteen dollars if attended at other places.

This paper, already growing long, must close. Something further of the inner life and work of the University as well as the scenes about the place and the history of its organization will come later. And after awhile the wanderers from North Carolina will return feeling that the Good Old North State is the best place of all.

A PLEA FOR PEACE.

Of the large number of books which have appeared about the war, special mention should be made of Paths of Glory, by Irvin S. Cobb. It is written in an impartial spirit by one who entered the scene of activities not to report what he wished he saw, or what he thought he saw, but what he actually saw. This is certainly a picturesque and vivid narrative from experience by a disinterested journalist whose sole desire was to present actual facts. Here is a passage which will be read with interest:

"Of the waste and wreckage of war; of desolated homes and shattered villages; of the ruthless, relentless, primitive exactness with which the Germans punished not only those civilians they accused of firing on them but those they suspected of giving harbor or aid to the offenders; of widows and orphans; of families of innocent sufferers, without a roof to shelter them or a bite to stay them; of fair lands ploughed by cannon balls, and harrowed with rifle bullets, and sown with dead men's bones; of men horribly maimed and mangled by lead and steel; of long mud trenches where the killed lay thick under the fresh clods—of all this and more I saw enough to cure any man of the delusion that war is a beautiful, glorious, inspiring thing, and to make him know it for what it is—altogether hideous and unutterably awful."

You will surely want to read this book and see the scenes of warfare through the clear glasses of this reliable reporter.

OUR PROSPECT IN CHARLOTTE.

The writer has just returned from Charlotte where he assisted Rev. D. A. Braswell in a revival meeting at his "new tabernacle." We are peculiarly impressed with what is being done there and can be done if our Conference will stand by the work. Bro. Braswell is an untiring, energetic worker and is putting his whole soul into the effort to make our church there a reality. He has gotten results worth while in the way of gifts and contributions. The people there of different denominations love and stand by him; his Christian influence has won for him a large number of friends. The lot that has been given us by Mr. D. B. Heath of the M. E. Church is worth at least two thousand dollars and is located in the very best section of Charlotte surrounded by wealth, culture, and refinement, and the people are friendly to our church. There is no church close by, which gives us a good field to draw from. Other denominations seem almost as anxious as our own people to see a nice church erected on our lot there. Some of them with responsibility for their own church contributed as much as a hundred dollars. There is a large number of Methodist Protestants in Charlotte who have joined other churches. Yet we have a small but loyal band of them who are anxious for an M. P. Church and are going to do what they can to get one. They are not all located near the "Tabernacle," but can come from almost any part of the city on the street car. As I see it if we as Methodist Protestants will lend a hand it will be only a short while till Charlotte will be one of our very best fields.

Fraternally, D. R. Williams.

Burlington.—Last Sunday was a good day with Burlington Sunday school. "Baraca Day" was observed and the Baracas rendered a very good program. The program consisted of special music and a report of the year's work by Bro. J. H. Boon. The attendance in the Sunday school was the largest we have had in quite a while.

Rev. A. G. Dixon of High Point was present and delivered two interesting and inspiring sermons in the morning and evening church services. Both of the sermons were on the subject of "Manhood," and Bro. Dixon was at his best in presenting the theme. At the morning service three young men reconsecrated themselves to the service of the Master. These two services were very helpful and inspiring not only to all Baracas but to every one who was present.——The third quarterly conference met in adjourned session on Tuesday night of this week and elected Bros. J. C. Jones and J. E. Brown as nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference. After the quarterly conference adjourned the regular monthly meeting of the church conference was held. The regular routine business was transacted. A committee was appointed to arrange for the annual picnic of our church which will be held on Saturday, August 21st. The picnic will be of the same nature and at the same place as last year. The other M. P. Sunday schools in the county will be invited to join us and have one grand picnic together. We are going to make it a greater success than last year.——At the meeting of the Baraca-Philathea City Union of Burlington last Sunday afternoon Bro. J. G. Rogers of our church was honored by being re-elected president of the union for the next six months.——There will be no preaching services at our church next Sunday on account of the pastor being away on his vacation. We will have the Sunday school as usual and hope to have a good attendance. Charles B. Way.

Halifax Circuit.—Our congregation at Bethesda yesterday was not large, but it was attentive and liberal. This congregation has already paid over $210 of its assessment, and it has now less than $90 to pay to all claims for the remainder of the year. This is a cotton country, and yet these people have decided that it is unwise to wait until the close of the year before they pay God what they have proised Him, and what they intend to pay at some time.

The report on the first Sun. in this month showed a total of $5 for the Children's Home from the women's Sunday egg club of Bethesda church. We are hoping to send the Home $100 from this one church during this Conference year. Large clubs have been organized at Lee's Chapel and Eden churches, and when those hens find out just what is expected of them, I believe that our reports will make Bro. Garrett and the children smile. God bless our Children's Home! If every woman in our Conference would give the eggs that are laid on Sundays to the Home, I believe that it would be supported, and no one would miss the gift, for God would bless them for it. Furthermore, I believe that almost every woman in our N. C. Conference will do this, if we pastors will request them to do so. Let us try it.——We had the largest congregation at Union yesterday at 3:30 p. m. that I have seen there. Some one said that it looked like a revival meeting congregation. Bethesda and Ringwood churches were represented there, and there was a large number of Eden members present, besides visitors from other churches. Come again and worship with us, for you don't know how much easier it is to try to preach when we have a congregation.

We thank Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Lewis for fruit and vegetables. We were sorry to learn that "Aunt Peggy" Lee has had the misfortune to lose a mule yesterday. She had a horse to die last winter, so this is the second misfortune of this kind within seven months. Losses like this should not be allowed to fall so heavily upon one person, for we as neighbors should always share the loss. Bro. "Doc" Lee has met with a similar loss recently. R. A. Swaringen.

LETTER FROM JAPAN.

We missionaries like to tell you of our progress and victories; but it is also well to tell you of some of the difficulties that beset us in our work. I am sure you want to know some of the characteristics of these people, in spite of the unfavorable aspects revealed thereby.

Some of the Japanese, especially among the older ones, are steeped in idolatry and polytheism. That is, they worship idols and believe in the existence of many gods, some good and some bad. Like Ephraim of old, they are joined to their idols. But, unlike Ephraim, they have not yet had ample warning. It is our business to press the claims of the Gospel upon them in accordance with Christ's last command.

There are others, however, who are too scholarly to believe in idolatry, and have fallen into agnosticism or atheism. A few have had the claims of Christianity pressed upon them at the logical time, before settling definitely into a state of aversion to religion. With them there is a co-operation of Christianity and scholarship; and they are indeed strong. In their case education is the handmaiden of Christianity, being subordinated to that which is of supreme importance. Education can empty the house of idols and some kinds of rubbish; but unless the house be disinfected, as it were, by the purging of regeneration, followed by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, atheism and a half dozen other evils take possession; and the last estate makes a serious problem for the Christian forces to deal with. How are we to effectively call to repentance the self-satisfied disciples of Darwin, Huxley, or Spencer? They lay claim to special knowledge of anatomy, ethics, philosophy, etc., without discerning the Creator who created the body and imparted to this intricate mechanism a soul by breathing upon it. A few are made to see that without God "all is vanity and vexation of spirit," and find refuge in Christ. Some find life commonplace or intolerable in spite of scholastic attainments; but they seek refuge or release in suicide, not realizing that there is a balm in Gilead. We are not without hope when we remember that the Bible and the Holy Spirit are potentialities to be reckoned with in confounding the wise. And the lives and influence of missionaries and native Christians may be counted upon to help overcome prejudice and bigotry. So there is, after all, a fighting chance to bring some of the "wise" and "noble" to a realization of the truth.

In all ages it has been hard to reach with the Gospel those who are wise in their own conceit, who make an idol of scholastic attainment. Paul felt the force of this when he wrote in I. Cor. 1: 26, 27, "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty."

But I am not writing in this strain to discourage you; for you can see from what I am about to say that our Lord and his workers in Japan are not without definite plans, and not without the prospect of ultimate victory.

The bright little children of the Sunrise Kingdom are willing to hear the Gospel truths, and come in considerable numbers to our Sunday schools. Read Matt. 11: 25, 26, and you will see the plan of Jesus and the Father. "At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight." We are aware of the logic of the situation; hence we are laying stress upon the organization and proper equipment of Sunday-schools. We are putting the leaven of the Gospel in young receptive hearts. After this leaven shall have done its work the end may come—I mean the end of heathenism and idolatry. It will take time to cleanse the house of idols and the cobwebs of superstition, and then to install love, faith, virtue, knowledge, good works, etc. But the effect will be more permanent than Christianization by a popular wave, or by the sword. When these young tender hearts are touched by the true doctrine the effect cannot be entirely effaced. Once a man, wishing to steal something, looked all around to see that no one was observing him. His little son, who had attended Sunday-school said: "Father, there is one direction in which you have not looked. You have not looked above." The boy had learned in Sunday-school that God is in heaven and sees everything.

So you who are aiding the work in Japan by your offerings and prayers should not be discouraged. In the end all these gifts and prayers will be accounted for. We are not without interesting incidents to encourage us. Recently the young wife of a soldier was baptized in our Nakatsu Methodist Church by the Japanese pastor. Then she and her mother-in-law brought her two little children forward for baptism. While these three generations were before the altar the great-grandmother of these little children, who had been baptized a few Sundays before, was seated in the congregation. Four generations in the way of righteousness, en route to glory—what a happy contemplation!

On the 12th instant there is to be a meeting for the young men of Nakatsu to be addressed by the superintendent of the Nakatsu Middle School, and by a Buddhist priest, and by myself. The purpose is to help the young men. I am to tell them what Christianity has to offer. O that I may do my Master justice! O that it might turn out like Elijah's contest with the prophets of Baal. (See the eighteenth chapter of First Kings). After the summary disposal of the priests of Baal "the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain;" and the terrible famine was at an end.

PALESTINE FOR JEWS AFTER THIS WAR.

If the Turk is ejected from Europe, will he be humbled sufficiently to loosen his hold also on the Holy Land? The question is agitating the Jews as a people, who wonder if, on the other hand, the war will prove the Armageddon for their race. "Turkey will cling desperately to the little that is left," observes the Philadelphia Evening Ledger. "Russia—Jew-hater and Jew-baiter—is not likely to cast its vote for the people it has harried." But "if the race is represented in the international peace conference, as Ben Yehuda suggested recently at the Jewish National Farm School, and if the arbiters of the allies see their way clear, then the Jew will cease to be the great man-without-a-country." The problem interests the Jews of this land, whose organizations have met in Boston to discuss the possibilities. The New York Sun reviews the conditions that invite the repatriation of this people within their ancient domains.

"Palestine, it is estimated, can accommodate a population of 6,000,000. With the establishment of new political control of the Holy Land it is intended that Jews shall migrate there from Russia, Germany, Austria, and other European States. Thus, the leaders of the movement say, a solution will have been found for the race-old Jewish problem. Not only will the Jews have their own land, but an end will be brought to the discrimination against them in other countries.

"Partly as a result of the Zionist movement, initiated some years ago, many American Jews have already made investments in Palestine. Jews in this city own a large tract of land in the neighborhood of Haifa. St. Louis Jews bought not long ago 800 acres near the shores of the Sea of Galilee. Chicago Jews control territory near Cana, where the ancient religious feast formery was held A vast tract in the vicinity of Joppa is in the hands of Jews living in Winnipeg, while Jews of Cleveland and Pittsburg own 1,800 acres near Armageddon.

"The investment of foreign capital has resulted in a marked improvement in the physical features of Palestine, it is said. Until a few years ago the country was a treeless region, with much desert land. The ground has been rendered productive, with soil formerly considered barren yielding great crops of wheat. It is asserted that nearly every acre from the sea on the west to the River Euphrates on the east, including the whole of Syria and a part of Mesopotamia, may be made to blossom.

"American financial intervention has resulted too in the transformation of some of the cities. Damascus, for instance, now has a street-railway system to serve its 150,000 people, and banks and industrial institutions have been established.

"Soon after the war started, Protestants in England made an informal proposition to their coreligionists in the United States to obtain joint control of Palestine. It was suggested that the Holy Land possest tourist-drawing qualities enjoyed by no other country, and offered extraordinary opportunity for development through the modernizing of inter-city transportation facilities.

"There were to be rapid-transit trunk lines connecting Damascus, Nazareth, and Jerusalem. A branch line was to draw Mount Hermon close to Damascus. Mount Carmel was to be brought within easy distance of Nazareth. Trolleys were to take Jerusalem visitors on excursions to Bethlehem, Bethany, and Jericho.

"All of this, the English propagandists said, would prove the greatest missionary movement for the Christian religion conceivable. The success of the project was contingent, of course, on the wresting of Palestine from the domination of the Turks. The present Jewish movement assumes also that a fresh disposition of the Holy Land will be made after the end of the war.

"Leaders in the Boston conference assert that the possession of Palestine by the Jews would not prevent Christians from developing the country for show purposes. Rather, they see in such a movement the welding of a close spirit of coooperation between the races. They are ambitious to obtain Palestine for a national home, but, once established there, they would welcome the coming of visitors to the places of peculiar interest to Bible students, it was said."—Literary Digest.

DANGERS FROM HEAT INCREASED.

The thermometer 100 degrees or more in the shade. Hotter still, unbelievably hot in close factories or around those great furnaces where men have to stand over pots of molten steel with a blazing flame coming up around their clothes protected by asbestos. Hot enough, surely. Some one thinks beer or any kind of liquor will help him stand it. But figures of the sunstroke and heat prostration in a very hot summer (over) showed that over 80 per cent. of the victims of sunstroke were drinkers, as were 90 per cent. of those who died from sunstroke.

In hot climates men who do not use alcoholic drinks as a rule stand the heat better and have less sickness.

The alcohol in beer and other liquors so affects the brain and nerves that it tends to make one careless about protecting himself against over-heating. It disorders the body's natural mechanism for regulating body-heat, so that one becomes more sensitive to excessive heat, and heat apoplexy may take place.

Cramps or spasms sometimes lay up stokers and other men in rolling mills when working in intense heat. The chronic drinker appears to be more liable to this "spasm" and his attacks to be more severe. The idea that alcoholic liquors help one stand heat is simply due to the fact that alcohol by dulling the feelings deceives one as to its real effects.—C. F. Stoddard.

ASHEVILLE CHURCH BUILDING FUND.

Mr. T. A. Hunter, Greensboro, $25; Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Amick, Elon College, $5; Rev. C. L. Whitaker, Asheboro, $5; Bethesda S. S., Halifax Ct., $3.84. It looks like I am not going to get that $600 in the time I allowed for it. Got it down to $427.81. Won't somebody make it $400 at one clip? Looks like I would have to extend the time. I give you fair warning that I am going to keep on talking about this money until I get every cent of it, provided Bro. McCulloch doesn't close the Herald to me, and he's too much interested in Asheville to do that. The sooner you help me reduce the $400 to nothing wanted, the sooner I'll stop. It's up to you. C. W. Bates, Pastor.

PRESIDENT'S PARSONAGE.

This enterprise is waiting on the fields that have not contributed, or have not contributed an amount equal to President's claim for one year. It must of necessity wait until these fields act. The fields that have already contributed an amount equal to President's claim for one year cannot be expected to contribute again until the other fields come forward with one year's contribution. It is expected that each pastor bring the matter before his people and keep it before them until the work is done. Let's do it, brethren; it will take only one time to do it, but it will take one time, and in some instances it may be a protracted time.

Send contributions to Mr. T. A. Hunter, Treas., Greensboro, N. C. T. M. Johnson.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Shiloh, Randolph Ct.—We held our children's day service last Sunday. The children rendered their part well. Mrs. J. A. Crowson, Mrs. J. S. Pickett, and Miss Ethel Stout deserve credit for training the children. Collection, $31.15. Our pastor will not fill his appointment the fourth Sunday. He will be away assisting in a special meeting at that time. The special meeting will begin at Shiloh the second Sunday in August.

Hester Patterson, Reporter.

Julian, N. C., July 13, 1915.

Bethany, Randleman Ct.—Yesterday was children's day here. And a happy day it was for the little folks. They spoke their pieces well. They reflected credit on Mrs. Luella Siler who had charge of the service. Mrs. Siler is not a member of our church, but she is a Sunday school worker as well as school teacher and is a great help to our school. The singing was good. We have a faithful choir. You can always depend on them for their best. Our Township S. S. Convention met with us fourth Sunday in June; it was a good convention. Some good speakers. A church surely will be better for having such service. Bro. O'Briant, our faithful and ever new pastor, is going on in his own quiet way, doing his best and we trust doing much good. Two daughters of Rev. O. P. Routh, of Danbury, are visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Hannah Routh, and attended service here yesterday.

I forgot to say the collection for children's day was $3.50. Theodosia Routh.

Piedmont Ct.—We had a good day at Spring Hill yesterday. Bro. Pierce, one of Bro. Stubbins' members, preached for us from the text, "What is truth?" He impressed the people with the importance of telling the truth, and we believe all that heard him were benefited. We are having the best Sunday schools on the work trat we have had at all. Mt. Pleasant is coming to the front like fire as it hasn't done for years. If we could just get more of our older people to lead the way in this work it would draw more of the young people.

Our parsonage doesn't seem to engage the minds of the people very much any more. At our 2nd quarterly conference some of the building committee stated that they were ready to go to work, but we believe that "ready" soon wore off. If some of the members had to drag around as much as some of us do, they would soon realize what it means to have no parsonage. Every circuit ought to have a parsonage and then furnish it with all the heavy furniture. Other denominations do this, and we can too if we will. Here is hoping that the building committee will get busy. Our 3rd quarterly conference will meet at Union Grove on Saturday before the first Sunday in August. It is the duty of every official to be there. A. D. Shelton.

Birthday Celebration.—One of the most enjoyable times of the season to those present was Sunday, July 11, at Mrs. Mary Moser's, when near the noon hour her children and grandchildren came flocking in by numbers to the dear old home, as they thought to surprise her; but she had caught a note of the music. Sunday being an ideal day for the occasion, though warm, all of her children and grandchildren were present but one son and his four children who live in South Carolina. Mrs. Moser is the happy grandmother of 33 grandchildren all living and at no time does she seem more happy than when they gather home to see her. This occasion celebrates her 60th birthday. Many years of usefulness, the mark some of us will never reach. She received a number of beautiful and useful presents presented by her loved ones, which are visible proof of the love and esteem which she enjoys. The total number present was 55. About one o'clock they all gathered around the large table arranged on the veranda which fairly groaned beneath its burden, to partake of the sumptuous and well prepared eatables of every kind of good things. Due credit is given to those who so nicely manifested their culinary art. Refreshments were served to all at intervals during the evening. When the hour for departure came all were loath to leave, expressing themselves as having had a good time and feeling that it was good to be there. We hope and trust they may all meet again without the loss of one. To my mind nothing could be more effectual in uniting and strengthening the bonds of love now existing among the family circle than to all gather home at mother's knee, thus cheering her onward and showing the respect due her.

A Friend Present.

Harmony, S. C.—Our pastor, Bro. Lamar, was at his post last Sabbath (4th Sabbath) and gave us a good sermon, as usual. The night service was given over to the children's missionary temperance exercises which were grand and very appropriate at this time. I wish an exercise like this could be had all over South Carolina, as we are soon to have an election for Prohibition. We want the editor and all readers to pray for us down here in this dark corner that we may be able to kill Old Man Booze so dead he will never rise anymore. It may be a hard fight, but I believe the good Lord is on our side and if we will follow He will lead us to victory.

Brother Ray Anderson, of the Presbyterian Church, preached for us last night. He preaches for us often. Bro. Anderson is a good man and a good preacher and we are glad to have him preach for us. Bro. C. A. Moore has been quite sick for several days. We hope he will soon be well again. Mrs. Killingsworth does not seem to improve much; is still very ill. Our special meeting will begin the fourth Sabbath in this month. We want all to pray for us that we may let Jesus have full control and have His way in the meeting. There are some good moral men in this community standing in the way of their children who ought to know Jesus. We need your prayers. Very sincerely, Jas. A. Hughes.

Halifax Circuit.—It continues to rain on the first Sundays, but it did not rain till afternoon yesterday, so we had a large congregation at Eden for our all-day service. Many present praised the children for the way in which they spoke, but we were a little disappointed with our offering, as we received only $7.54. Our congregation was so large that nearly all of the men were forced to remain outside of the church, thus missing the program. I fear that the men in that community carry the pocket book, and we did not reach it. In the P. M. we organized a Sunday egg club for the Children's Home, and 20 women gave their names at once. They will bring their offering to the church on the first Sundays and ask Miss Lossie Hardee to take charge of it for them until they are ready to send it to the Home. Several more names will be secured soon for the club. At some time during the year, I shall give the men an opportunity to contribute to this cause, and if they do not contribute liberally, I shall wish that all of the members of Halifax Ct. were women. Ha!

Our special meeting will be held at this church the first week in August with Dr. Swain as help. Brethren, pray for a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and then let us work and the blessing will come.

I arrived at home last night with a large ham. Bro. White thought that I didn't have room in my buggy for it, but I assured him that I would take it if Mrs. S. or I had to walk.. Pastor.

Yadkin College Circuit.—To the Official members: Dear Brethren: The 3rd quarterly conference will convene at Friendship on Saturday before 4th Sun. in July. Let every official be present. We are expecting Bro. Shelton to be with us and preach for us at eleven o'clock. Dinner. Business of quarterly conference.

My special meeting will begin at Friendship on 4th Sunday following our quarterly conference. Rev. Wm. Pike will be my help. We are praying for and expecting good meetings. Hope all earnest souls will pray for us. The S. S. work is the best we have ever had.

I preached to a large and attentive congregation at Bethesda today. After service I went home with Dr. Yokely and ate a good dinner with him on his thirty-first birthday. After dinner I baptized Raymond Yokely, Jr. May God bless this bright little boy and give father and mother grace to bring him upin the way he should go.

H. L. Powell, Pastor.

Concord, Saxapahaw Ct.—We held our children's day exercise the fourth Sunday evening in June. The children all acted their parts well and everything went off nicely. A large congregation was out which showed they enjoyed the exercise by the good attention they gave us. Our collection for foreign missions was $10.00. We thank all for their contributions and all will be greatly rewarded for same. Our pastor was with us; he had just returned from the summer conference and of course he had lots of nice things to tell us. Our S. S. attendance for June has been larger than any of the past months; we hope it will be still larger next month. The Philatheas held their monthly business meeting Saturday afternoon. We are planning to have an entertainment Saturday, July 17th at 2:30 P. M. Refreshments will be sold for the benefit of the church. All are cordially invited. Our special meeting begins the first Sunday in August. With best wishes to the Herald and its readers, Lena Roberson.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Ct.—On Sunday, July 12th, 10 a. m., our S. S. rendered the children's day program. The children recited remarkably well. They deserve much credit as we had practised only a few times. A very unique feature of the children's day was that it consisted entirely of children. Our pastor, Mr. Bowman, was with us and seemed very much impressed with the exercise. He said it was one of the best he had ever attended. Collection was splendid. The music was unusually good. As Mr. Kimrey could not be with us to lead the choir, Mr. Lashley took his place. I am sure the choir appreciated his help very much. Before the exercises began a few moments were devoted to prayer in behalf of one of our S. S. teachers, Mr. Kimrey, who is very much afflicted. We regret very much that he could not be with us.

Our special meeting will convene the 2nd Sunday in September with Mr. Johnson as pulpit help. May it be a great revival and in-garnering of many souls.

Our Sunday school is gradually increasing; 54 present first Sunday, some new scholars who had not been with us before. We have some church members that do not attend S. S. anywhere. Think if they would only come one time and see what an interesting S. S. we are having they would be regular attendants then. We regret to note that Mrs. W. M. Pike, one of our S. S. teachers, could not be with us Sunday on account of sickness. Lellia Lemons, Rep.

Tabernacle Church, Tabernacle Ct.—Children's Day was first Sun. in July. Attendance good. Collection, $16.75. Mr. McAlister of Greensboro and Mr. E. J. Coltrane of Jamestown came and gave enthusiastic talks in behalf of the S. S. work. We were sorry we did not know they were coming so that we could have had an all-day exercise and thus have given them more time for this very important work.——The W. H. M. S. held a public meeting on July 6 to which all the ladies of the neighborhood were specially invited. Program as follows: Devotional exercises conducted by the president, Mrs. T. M. Johnson. Roll call. Minutes of last meeting. Paper—"The W. H. M. S. —Its Needs and Possibilities," Miss Ola Whiteley. Report of Branch Meeting held in Siler City in the Spring was given by Miss Lelia Kirkman. (This report had been given before, but for the sake of those who were not present at the time Miss Kirkman kindly consented to reproduce it.) Solo, by Mrs. T. M. Johnson. Paper, "Growth of the Children's Home," Miss Joanna Hardin. The writer then read a letter concerning the Children's Home written by Mr. H. A. Garrett for the occasion. Just before adjournment our pastor, Rev. T. M. Johnson, stepped in and by request gave a few minutes' talk the burden of which was our Children's Home and how we may help to finance it. He urged our taking up some definite work as a society along that line. After a few remarks by our very efficient president the meeting adjourned to the parsonage lawn where all were amply served with ice-cream and cake provided by the different members of the society.

Our special meeting begins first Sun. in Aug. with Rev. G. L. Curry as pulpit help. We are praying that we ourselves may be in such an attitude that God may be able to use as a church effectually in His service.——Mrs. Everett McCulloch is at this writing seriously ill.

Lucilla Hardin.

———o———

Antioch, Mecklenburg Ct.—Mr. Waldrop filled his regular appointment last Sunday with an excellent sermon, which was very much enjoyed. The congregation was larger than usual. The camp meeting services will begin Sat. night, Aug. 7th. Pray for us that we may have a great spiritual revival. Mr. W. H. Phifer, of Monroe, N. C. will be with us on the 4th Sun. in July at 11 a. m. We hope a large crowd will be present to hear Mr. Phifer's lecture. It will be worth your time to come.

Asheville.—It wasn't my fault. I wanted to send a report to the Herald last week, but our sale at the Park at the Fourth of July celebration was too much for me. I had to rest Tuesday, and when I felt better it was too late to send in my letter. But I'm here again this week, thank you, feeling as fine as you please. The services Sunday, with the exception of the night service, and that due, in some measure, at least, to the revival services now going on at the church nearest to us, were extra well attended. The Sunday school attendance was the best in more than a year. Five new scholars. There were a number of strangers present at the morning service. One of the assistant secretaries of the Y. W. C. A. addressed the Christian Endeavor service, which was better attended than usual. The average attendance at Prayer Meeting last month was the best of the present pastorate.——The report of the Building Fund covers two weeks, but at that is much better than it has been. Notice the amount from Bethesda Sunday school on Halifax Circuit. That makes a total of $21.24 for that one school, beating the gift of any other school or church in the Conference. Folks, won't you do your best to help us. The last note on the lot is due the 28th of this month—$500; and our folks will meet it. Bro. Swain, the Treasurer of the Board of Trustees says he averages three letters a week from the Glass and Furniture men whose notes are still not entirely met. They have been more than kind to us, but we must meet our obligations. Our people cannot meet that lot note and these others, too. We must have your help. If you can spare only a little bit, it will be that much. Won't you do it?

C. W. Bates.

—Bro. Powell is expected to assist Bro. Suits at Mt. Zion next week.

Mountain Valley, Buncombe Ct.—To-day is our regular preaching day. Mr. Martin preached an excellent sermon. We had a very good congregation. We like to hear Mr. Martin preach and we like to have him in our homes. Wish it were so he could visit more. But he has such a large work he can't get around very often. He is doing some good work. We are expecting to begin our special meeting right away. I think Bro. Martin is depending on Brother W. A. Lamar as pulpit help. Hope he will come right away, for if there ever was a time a revival was needed it is now.——Our Sunday school is doing very nicely. Evvery one seems to be taking a very good interest. We wish the older folks would come out and take more interest. Will some one suggest some plan that we may follow to get the older folks to take an interest? Pray for our church and Sunday school. Moleta Williams, Rep.

Concord.—Our special meeeting commenced on the 4th of July and closed on the 9th. We had a splendid meeting. The church was very much revived and twelve or fifteen were reclaimed or converted. Four joined the church and there will be some more, I think. Brother L. W. Gerringer was our help and did some splendid preaching. We all learned to love him. Our congregations are increasing all the while and also the Sunday school. We had 168 last Sunday morning. We are preparing to have children's day soon, perhaps on the 4th Sunday night in the month. On the 10th of this month Bro. John C. Garmon was married to Mrs. A. L. Long at the parsonage in this place. Bro. Garmon is a prominent citizen and farmer who lives five miles west of town. He is a member of the M. P. Church at Fairview and a good one. Mrs. Long lived in this place and is a splendid Christian woman. We are wishing and expecting for them a happy life. Yours in the work. W. R. Lowdermilk.

Fair Grove, Why Not Ct.—It has been some time since the readers of the Herald have received any news from our church. But however silent we have been I feel like our church has been growing spiritually under the pastorate of our dearly beloved pastor, Rev. J. H. Stowe.

On the first Sunday in August our regular revival meeting begins with Dr. C. L. Whitaker of Asheboro as our pastor's help. Pray for us that we may have a great revival and that many souls may be won for Christ.

On the 2nd Sun. in August the third quarterly meeting will convene at Macedonia. Last Saturday night the Baracas of the above church entertained the Philatheas of the same church at the home of Mr. J. A. Auman with an interesting program. Also at this time they held their regular business meeting.——I am glad to report that God has blessed the farmers of this neighborhood by giving them good wheat crops. With best wishes to all readers of the Herald,

J. Clyde Auman.

—Mrs. R. M. Andrews has been confined to bed by ill health, but is improving now.

—Mrs. Bascom Baynes is still very low, but indications of her recovery are perhaps more marked now. Still there is great and prayerful anxiety about her.

—It is good to read in some of the reports that the Sunday school is better than ever.

THE ROAD THROUGH THE WOOD.

The woods were dark and the night was black,
And only an owl could see the track:
Yet the cheery driver made his way
Through the great pine woods as if 'twere day.

I asked, "How do you manage to see?
The road and the forest are one to me."
"To me as well," he replied, "and I Can only drive by the path in the sky."

I looked above, where the tree tops tall
Rose from the road like an ebon wall,
And lo! a beautiful starry lane
Wound as the road wound and made it plain.

And since, when the path of my life is drear
And all is blackness and doubt and fear,
When the horrors of midnight are here
below,
And I see not a step of the way to go,
Then, ah! then I can look on high,
And walk on earth by the path in the sky. —Selected.

SPIRIT FILLED.

Pharoah said: "Is there anything better than a Spirit-filled man?" Learning makes him humble, not proud. The more he knows, the more he acknowledges the goodness and greatness of God. A man is ignorantly, foolishly insane who thinks that Christ does not dwell with men. He is wonderfully ignorant. Knows so little and he thinks he knows so much. The wisest of the Spirit-filled men, when God permits them to understand some great law, some mighty movement of the age, they before could not use, feel gratefully humble that they know this—every mighty revelation of God only shows a mightier thing beyond it, a greater depth to be reached, and the greatest man is the humblest man because the spirit of humility is in him.

Losses do not disturb the Spirit-filled man. You go to him as they went to Job and tell him that the wind has destroyed, the fire has burned and the robbers have taken, and yet Job did not assail God foolishly. Calm remained with him. Solitude is not necessary to the Spirit-filled man. To those who walk on the verge of this experience it is sometimes necessary to stand on a mountain top, far up from mankind, up where the snows never melt, where the sun ever gleams, and there, gazing around upon the indefinite distances, we recognize the awful presence of God. We need that retreat. We need to be near a mighty waterfall, sometimes in the darkness and depth of the forest, sometimes far away upon a dreary desert, alone upon a single camel, in order that we may be near to God. But the Spirit-filled man finds Christ's presence everywhere. The Spirit-filled man can retreat from the public marts and find him. He can retreat from any assembled company; he can retreat and find God anywhere, retreat from men, retreat from the worldliness that surrounds him in his activity into the godliness of the deeper experience. He can do this anywhere. Nothing ever diverts him. He does not always need the solitude of the desert, because he has the power within him to shut the door, to shut out all else but God, to be alone and live alone with Christ.

Weariness does not disturb him. To be weary is a welcome condition. The Spirit-filled man welcomes weariness. "Blessed are the hungry, for they shall be fed. Blessed are the weary, for they shall find rest." What is more delightful than the rest that remaineth for the people of God, the rest after an honest day's work, the rest after trial? They enter a rest after years of ambition have been filled, and the rest of heaven is so delightful. Yet many people are all the time disturbed, fretting and worrying about the trials and tribulations of this world.

There is no spiritually-minded man who has been hungry for the Spirit but he has been filled, and he is filled, and always will be filled—not to know what it is to be hungry any more, never to hunger for company of the loved, never hunger for the presence of one's family; always to have the spirit of adjustment, or resignation to God's kindness and God's disposition, and find everywhere peace. Peace—no hunger of the heart any more. Satisfied whatever God sends. Content whatever condition the providence of God finds him in.—Russel H. Conwell, in the Examiner.

THE CRIME OF THE EVIL TONGUE.

Character building is a slow process evolved by tests, experiences and temptations. A good name or character is the most precious heritage that can be bestowed on mortal man. It is the measure of what you are and what you have said and believed and what you have done.

The real man of character is the target for the envious arrows of inferiority. It is part of the price he must pay for being a man.

The thief and the murderer are placed in the criminal class and are dealt with severely by the law. Gossips, scandalmongers and character despoilers ply their nefarious practices almost at will. Place in a balancing scale the evils resulting from the acts of criminals, and in the other the grief and tears and suffering resulting from the crimes of respectability and we find that the crimes of the tongue —words of unkindness, anger, envy, bitterness, unjust criticism, gossip, lying and scandal—are greater menaces to happiness than the meanest work of criminals. At the hands of the thief or murderer, a few suffer, but from the careless tongue of friend or the cruel tongue of enemy, few are spared.

"They say" is always a liar, and the whispered confidence is always the most false.

In olden times our puritanical fathers branded a scold or a gossip, sometimes with a gag, and sometimes with a red hot brand. Civilization made no great step in progress when it white-washed the guilt of the gossip.

The insidious attacks against one's reputation, the loathsome innuendoes, slurs, half-lies by which the ordinary seek to ruin the superior is a scandal and a crime. These low-life beings have dimmed their eyes to sweetness, purity and character, and have become the scavengers of society. They drone and buzz like certain carrion flies, that pass over a beautiful garden of lilies to feast on the garbage. like a dead fish in the sunshine they shine and stink; like the carrion fly, they can't be confined to their natural habitation.

There are pillows wet by tears; there are broken hearts throbbing in their own confines of silence whence comes no protest; there are fatherless and motherless children bereft of support; there are old-time friends walking their lonely ways with hope dead and every memory a bitter pang; there is real murder, real crime seeking in noble minds, and cruel misunderstandings that make all life look dark, —these are but a few of the sorrows that come from character assassins and scandal mongers.

The constant dropping of their lying words of malice and envy have in too many instances worn away the reputation of a strong character.

Truth crushed to earth does not rise as fast as the poisoned arrows of scandal mongers penetrate the heart of society. Laws do not reach this detestable practice of incendiarism of character. "Where there is much smoke, there must be some fire." Yes, but the fire may be only the fire of envy, hatred or malice, the incendiary firing the reputation of another by the lighted torch of selfishness.

In this new year, by the grace of God, let us observe the commandment of the great Nazarene, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'' Let us shun and discourage evil spoken of our fellow-man. Let us eliminate envy, hatred and malice and all forms of selfishness and uncharitableness from our hearts and minds, and purer emotions will rush in, as air seeks to fill a vacuum. Let us, if we would be happy and make others happy, not usurp the privilege of the great God, but obey the injunction—Judge not.—Exchange.

THROUGH DEFEAT TO BETTER THINGS.

An American Board leaflet says: ''But a new day is dawning for Turkey. Her crushing defeat at the hands of those she has persecuted and despised is likely to affect the Turks in the same way that the victory of Japan over China affected the Chinese. It will force them to realize their need of western civilization and learning. Already the valis, the pashas, members of parliament and the more enlightened generally are beginning to send their children to our American Board schools, and these genuine 'Young Turks' are very eager for our western education. Some of our schools are overcrowded through the influx of Mohammedan pupils. The long expected break is evidently at hand, and we may expect to see the Moslem work take on large proportions at no distant day.''—Missionary Review.

A NOTABLE EXAMPLE OF FAMILY PRAYERS.

It is indeed a source of inspiration and a stimulant to a revival of the old-fashioned family altar of our fathers and mothers to read of a representative Briton who maintained this religious exercise in his own home circle for more than a half century, and that, too, in spite of daily military exactions and many-sided interruptions that come to public men. Speaking in the House of Lords soon after the death of Lord Roberts, Lord Curzon quoted from the last letter that the great field marshal of Great Britain had written to him:

''We have had family prayers for fifty-five years. Our chief reason besides worship is that they bring the household together in a way that nothing else can. Then it insures the servants and others who may be in the house joining in prayers, which, for one cause or other, they have omitted saying for themselves. We have never given any order about prayers. Attendance is optional, but, as a rule, all the servants, men and women, come regularly on hearing the bell ring.''—Watchman-Examiner.

WHY THE KINGDOM MUST COME NOW.

The tide has set in against the old, false beliefs, there is no doubt of that; but this is not an unmixed joy. In the same halls where the people are now being taught the folly of idol worship, they are also being taught even greater errors. Already even in the villages atheism is being taught. The same man who tells them that their gods are useless tells them that there is no God at all. We must work now as never before. Men are willing to listen to what we have to say, and now is our opportunity. We need more workers!—B. L. Baker, Caochowfu, China.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS.

Billy Sunday.

Twenty-two years ago, with the Holy Spirit as my guide, I entered this wonderful temple called Christianity. I entered at the portico of Genesis, walked down through the Old Testament art gallery, where the pictures of Noah, Abraham, Moses, Joseph, Isaac, Jacob and Daniel hung on the wall. I passed into the music room of Psalms, where the Spirit swept the keyboard of nature and brought forth the dirge-like wail of the weeping prophet Jeremiah to the grand impassioned strain of Isaiah, until it seemed that every reed and pipe in God's great organ of nature responded to the tuneful harp of David, the sweet singer of Israel. I entered the chapel of Ecclesiastes, where the voice of the preacher was heard, and into the conservatory of Sharon, and the Lily of the Valley's sweet scented spices filled and perfumed my life. I entered the business office of the Proverbs, then into the observatory room of the prophets, where I saw telescopes of various sizes, some pointing to far-off events, but all concentrated upon the bright and morning star, which was to rise above the moonlit hills of Judea for our salvation. I entered the audience room of the King of kings, and caught a vision of his glory from the standpoint of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John; passed into the Acts of the Apostles, where the Holy Spirit was doing his work in the formation of the infant church. Then into the correspondence room, where sat Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, Paul, Peter, James and Jude, penning their epistles. I stepped into the throne room of Revelation, where all towered into glittering peaks, and I got a vision of the King sitting upon his throne in all his glory, and I cried:

''Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all.''

Who Was It?—On July 5, some one mailed us a dollar for the Herald, but failed to sign any name or give any postoffice. We would like to know who it was.

ETHELDA'S TASK.

When Great-Aunt Jane Durkhan came to Edon, she took a liking to her young relative, Ethelda Cassel, and showed it in marked ways. If she wanted anything done that was out of the ordinary, Ethelda was asked to do it, and her response was so kindly Aunt Jane was sure she did not consider it a heavy task.

"That girl has the grit of her ancestors in her making," said the aged relative as she surveyed her departing niece speeding on an errand of kindness.

"I don't know about that," said Mrs. Cassel, smiling. "She has grit, I know, but I'm rather under the impression it belongs exclusively to herself."

"Why don't you educate her?" said Aunt Jane, snuffing and sighing the same instant. "She ought to be away at school now, with her talent. She's got a voice worth cultivating, if you only knew it."

"I know it," said Mrs. Cassel, sighing, "but I regret we can not afford it. I would be willing to give her up in the home, although the sacrifice would be great, but the money is not forthcoming. You see, Ben and Billy must both have their college courses, and we are straining every nerve to do that. Still, Ethelda is so ready she will not miss it like many another."

"I'd like to know the reason why," said Aunt Jane, sharply. "The girl's got talent and sense to know it. I don't reckon she will find it easy to hide her light under a bushel."

Arguing with Aunt Jane was never profitable business and Mrs. Cassel forebore. But she looked at her young daughter thoughtfully that evening and there was a suspicious moisture about her eyes. But there was nothing to do but to let things take their natural course; she could not add another straw to the load father was already bearing.

One morning a few days later Aunt Jane appeared at breakfast carrying in her arms a ball of yarn of such enormous size that it resembled a small-sized balloon. The color was gray, of that uncertain grade hard to distinguish. Aunt Jane was the center of attention and to all appearance she was enjoying it; she laid the ball carefully on the side table and turned to Ethelda.

"I've been wanting a shawl for some time, but I never could find the right shade in gray until yesterday. Ethelda, my fingers are too stiff to knit; do you think you could finish this for me by the first of September?"

Ethelda was sure she could and said so. She knew it meant many evenings by the study lamp, but there was not the shadow of hesitation in her answer. "I'm afraid Aunt Jane is a little unjust", said Mrs. Cassel to father. "She professes to love the child, but she does not seem to mind making life a little hard for her."

Each day the ball diminished in size. Aunt Jane watched its progress with unabated interest. The shawl would never be beautiful, Ethelda knew, but if the color suited the wearer there was no one else to be consulted. Every moment she pursued her task, and it is surprising how the work grew under her fingers. She would soon add the last stitches; the ball had assumed the size of a small egg. Aunt Jane had been rather restless the past days, watching the work with such interest that Ethelda had put on extra speed.

"What's this?" said Mrs. Cassel, bending over the work.

"That's the paper the ball's wound on, little mother."

"But there's writing on it; see what it is, dear."

"Why, it's a note and a check—for a thousand dollars—to the little girl who is not afraid to sacrifice for others, for her course in College, from Aunt Jane."

Ethelda was weeping softly and Mrs. Cassel had her arms about her.

"Oh, mother, mother," she said, "the dearest wish of my heart is granted."

"And I never knew you cared, dear," was all the mother could say.

Aunt Jane often tells the story with a gleam of humor in her eyes. "I put the child to a pretty severe test," she said. "I had a great hunt finding that particular shade of wool, but I got it at last, and great-niece Ethelda had grit enough to perform the task."—Selected.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $151 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

CHARITY BETTER THAN FAITH AND HOPE—AND BETTER THAN GOOD FEELINGS.

After preaching on the new birth, the preacher asked all that had been born again to stand. Some who, as it seems, should have responded did not stand. Perhaps they were hindered by their feelings, which were not as good as they wanted, in order to feel free. It is one's business to know himself, to know how he is, but the inference is that all good people should exercise faith over and above their feelings. We read that the "children of the world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."

When the children of the world meet, they say, How do you do? But when the children of light meet, there is rather slow action. More than a generation ago one of the experienced preachers, in preaching about preaching, said that he had preached some of his best sermons when he did not feel like preaching. Of course he could understand all that better than we can, but he did understand, and had a clear understanding. He had faith as a little child, and did not have to make a question about his faith or his feelings. I once heard one of the good old class leaders tell how he had gone to the class meeting and not being able to feel good—but he had the charity, love for God and the people, and he just went on to the church to pray and worship God. Often good people are called to act out charity, if they would consider how they ought to do rather than how they feel. One of the high authorities had the idea correctly, as it seems, and he said that at times he was better when he did not feel good than he was when he felt good. I remember very well once hearing one of the able Bible students, a fine preacher, say that some people shouted less when they had reached a deeper experience than before they had become so well settled in the faith. Their light had been flickering, but later it became fully bright, and continued more and more until the perfect day. One of the finest articles on salvation by faith that I have ever been privileged to read was written by the good preacher who spoke of some who shouted less after becoming better established in the faith. Once a serious religious girl, being a member of the church, but feeling in trouble, went to the mourner's bench. Later she rose and at once clapping her hands exclaimed, "I never had religion before." At once she fell down on the straw and lay there speechless. The opinion of those of ripe experience was that she had been converted before and speaking in a way to dishonor the spiritual in her case was reproved by the power of the Spirit. God makes His part of salvation His business first.

A good woman neglected to pray and to use the means of grace, and drifted into a state of deep sorrow, and being surrounded by spiritual darkness she ventured to say that she had never had religion, that she had been deluded, but she was warned not to talk so, but to pray to God to be restored—and she prayed and became satisfied. Numbers of friends remembered seeing these two women profess religion at the first, and believed that they were genuinely converted when they first professed religion. They were both converted at the mourner's bench. Few people go to the mourner's bench unless they mean business—and when they profess religion it is apt to be genuine and they are apt to be known by their fruits. When the Son of God traveled among the people helping the suffering, he commended those of great faith, but helped those of little faith whenever they were humble enough to go to Him for the help needed. The command is to worship God, but the worship of God is being neglected. If we would read the Bible and pray, and assemble together rather daily and keep to the devotional, God would help us to the charitable and we would have the evidences. We know that the Christian religion is love—and we know that we must use the means of grace. W. F. G.

OBITUARY.

Dr. Benjamin Franklin Spencer was born in Alabama, Sep. 20, 1852. He departed this life Mar. 25, 1914, at his home in Weston, Tex.; the interment took place at Cottage Hill, Friday morning, Mar. 27th. When a little boy at the age of eight years he moved with his parents to Jasper County, Miss., near Paulding, where he lived for about seven years. At the age of fifteen he attended school one year at Mount Sterling, Ala., then one year at Mississippi College at Clinton, Miss. Then leaving Mississippi College he attended school at Murfreesboro, Tenn. Dr. Spencer received his medical education in the Medical Department of the University of Louisville, Ky., and graduated from there in 1874, and began the practice of medicine and surgery in Fulton, Ky. In 1876, Dr. Spencer, then 25 years of age, came to Texas and located in Weston, Collin County, where he lived and practiced his profession thirty-eight years, until the close of his life. Dr. Spencer was married twice. In 1884 he married Miss Alla Hubbard, daughter of Dr. Moses Hubbard, who lived only five years, No children were born to this union. In 1892, he was married to Miss Cora Sutton, a cousin of his deceased wife. Two children were born to this union. Mrs. Alla Hubbard Farnsworth, and a son, Frank Sutton Spencer. Dr. Spencer was too young to enter the Confederate Army, being only a small boy, but he was an ardent supporter of the principles of the South. He had one half-brother, David Kennedy, who served all through the war, and at its close was captured, and kept a prisoner at Point Look Out, Md., for some months after the war was over. Dr. Spencer's father was too old to serve as a soldier, but made crops, and helped to support the widows, orphans, and poor soldiers, and as occasion demanded it, served in the State Militia. His grandfather and other kinsmen served their country during the revolution; the older ones came from England (where some of their Spencer relatives still live) and settled in Virginia, and from there their children went to North Carolina, and on to Alabama.

The Spencers were thrifty and good managers, and served their country in many ways, lending some of their money to the Washingtons, when they were in need, and to whom they were related when the families lived in England.

In early life Dr. Spencer gave his heart to God, and united with the Methodist Church. In 1890 he was baptized in Honey Creek, by Elder J. R. Darnall, and united with the Christian Church. Dr. Spencer was a man of fine character. Tender, kind and loving, and his friends were many. As a physician he had few equals, and he was well known all over North Texas. He was well educated. His mind naturally alert and incisive was a veritable storehouse of useful knowledge. The beauty of his work was constantly seen in the charm of good humor and cheerfulness, with which it was done. The pleasant smile which always beamed from his face seemed to pervade all of his conversations, and made him universally popular. He was a good husband, an indulgent father, and a neighbor of whom every one speaks kindly. Dr. E. E. King, pastor of the First Baptist Church, McKinney, Texas, and who was a schoolmate of Dr. Spencer while in Clinton, Miss., said: "I should have been pleased to be present at his burial, and pay his worthy memory a tribute, especially of his worthy young manhood, when we were together at Mississippi College. He was a manly young man, kind and courteous, had a host of friends at College, was a good student, and was full of noble impulses, and radiant hopes, and had large plans for the future. He had a brother and cousin in College, for a season, at the same time. A fine trio of young men, of noble parentage." Dr. Spencer had been in declining health for some time, the last week being confined to his bed. His death was caused by diabetes and other complications. He was a patient sufferer, and died trusting in his Saviour. He leaves on this side of the River a sister, a devoted wife and two children, to mourn their loss. They have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their great loss. He bequeaths to them the rich legacy of an unsullied name, the memory of a happy domestic relationship, and a sweet memory to love. The funeral was conducted by the writer, after which the body was laid away in Cottage Hill's beautiful cemetery. "Where thou art gone adieus and farewells are a sound unknown. May I meet thee on that peaceful shore; the parting sound shall pass my lips no more."—Rev. W. D. Darnall, minister of Christian Church, Denison, Texas. Published by request of J. H. Spencer of Seagrove, N. C.

IN MEMORIAM.

The following lines were written by her husband, B. F. Spencer, M. D.

Thou art sleeping in the church-yard on Cottage Hill,
Free from sorrow, grief, pain and all earthly ill.
Neither the flowers of spring that bloom above thy grave and die,
Nor the warbling birds of summer that o'er the prairies fly,
Nor the falling leaves of autumn that in eddying gust whirl round,
Nor the wailing winds of winter with its melancholy sounds,
Will disturb thy body's quiet rest;
Thy soul is in heaven with the blessed.

Sleep on, my darling Alla, in thy silent tomb till resurrection morn,
When Gabriel's trumpet shall wake all earth, even to the first born,
Then through God's mercy and love we again shall meet
And bring all our grief and care and place them at Jesus' feet.
Though the way appears rugged, rough and lone and weary;
And each day without thee seems more dark and dreary,
Yet I know you would say, "Do your duty regardless of all fear,"
Though the burden at times seems greater than I can bear.

Many a night when returning home from a sick bed of sorrow and care,
Methinks in my mind's eye I can see thy face so beautiful and fair,
And those bonny black eyes looking down from God's ethereal dome,
And those trembling little hands pointing to the great white throne.
'Tis then I stop and ponder of the many sweet things you have said;
And it brings to memory that sad day in December when thou wert lying dead;
When my poor heart was aching more than human tongue could tell,
And you requested that I should make a greater effort ere I fell.

Oh, those little hands, those trembling little hands, so soft and thin,
How silently have they led me from the paths of sin.
How often, oh! how often, when the sun was sloping down the west,
Have I sat on the back piazza and held them to my breast;
And when night gathered its misty shadows like a pall
You would kneel at your bedside and pray for all;
And the promise I made thee on thy deathbed I am struggling to fulfil;
And through Jesus' love, and atonement—by the grace of God I will.

How often, oh! how often, when the fire was flaming on the hearth,
When the cold winter winds were blowing and snow covered the earth,
You would nestle close beside me and put those little hands in mine,
And we would talk of childhood hours and the days of Auld Lang Syne.
Then in laughing way I asked you would you live this life again;
It was in a poem you replied: "I would not live this life again."
And rising from your chair with a look so bright, "Which one of the authors shall we read tonight?"
Then you read in a low, sweet tone the poem of my choice, "The Day Is Done,"
From that grand old bard who fought the good fight and the victory won;
And we talked of that aged poet across the sea, who wrote the sad "In Memoriam,"
And wept for his friend, Arthur Hallem, as did David for his son Absalom;
And of that classical scholar who loitered along the River Charles at early dawn,
And drew from his imagination that beautiful character in his Marble Fawn;
And he who wrote the Fall of Grenada and the chivalry of the Spanish Cavaliers
That will be read by all English speaking people for unnumbered years.

God of earth, God of heaven, God of mercy, God of love, God of all!
Thou who watchest all creation and not without Thy care a sparrow falls;
Thou hast placed a burden upon me more than I can bear aright.
Send thou my darling's spirit to guide these faltering footsteps right,
And when this poor soul of mine shall leave this tenement of clay
This gentle spirit will lead me on through the ether blue and milky way;
And those little trembling hands that lead me through a world of sin,
Will leap forward and spring the pearly gates ajar and let me in.

A WONDERFUL CLOCK.

One of the most curious clocks in the world is said to be that which tells the time to the inhabitants of a little American backwoods town. The machinery, which is nothing but a face, hands and a lever, is connected with a geyser or hot spring which shoots out an immense column of hot water every thirty-eight seconds. This spouting never varies to the tenth of a second. Every time the water spouts up and strikes the lever, it moves the hands forward thirty-eight seconds.—Apples of Gold.

WHAT WE ARE ALL APT TO FORGET.

That politeness costs nothing.

That we should live and let live.

That we should live within our means.

That our lives are what we make them.

That others have feelings as well as ourselves.

That a kind word, even to a dog, is never lost.

That a loafer is the most despicable creature on earth.

That every skilled workman was once an apprentice.

That we owe a duty to our fellow-man as well as to ourselves.

That we are judged by our acts and the the company we keep.—Selected.

—The teacher of a class of small children recently gave a physiology lesson on the bones of the body. The time to ask questions had come.

"Who will tell me what the backbone is?"

The question was a poser and no one ventured a reply.

Finally, the teacher detected a gleam of hope in Sammy's face, and smiled encouragingly at him.

"Well, Sammy?"

"The backbone is a long straight bone. Your head sits on one end and you sit on the other," answered Sammy.—Harper's Monthly.

The little boy was carrying home an empty bowl that had contained his father's dinner when a bully appeared.

"Do you mind if I kick that bowl," he asked.

"Not a bit," replied the small boy.

"You mean that you don't mind if I kick that bowl?"

"Not a bit."

"For the last time," persisted the bully, "do you mind if I kick that bowl?"

"No, I should like you to," said the small boy.

"Oh, would you!" exclaimed the bully. "Then watch me!" He shattered the bowl to atoms. "Now do you mind?" he asked.

"Not a bit," said the small boy, edging away. "My mother borrowed the bowl from your mother this morning. You will hear about it when you get home."—National Food Magazine.

THE FUEL VALUE OF WOOD.

The fuel value of two pounds of wood is roughly equivalent to that of one pound of coal. This is given as the result of certain calculations now being made in the forest service laboratory, which show also about how many cords of certain kinds of wood are required to obtain an amount of heat equal to that in a ton of coal.

Certain kinds of wood, such as hickory, oak, beech, birch, hard maple, ash, elm, locust, longleaf pine, and cherry, have fairly high heat values, and only one cord of seasoned wood of these species is required to equal one ton of good coal. It takes a cord and a half of shortleaf pine, hemlock, red gum, Douglas fir, sycamore, and soft maple to equal a ton of coal, and two cords of cedar, redwood, poplar, catalpa, Norway pine cypress, basswood, spruce and white pine. Equal weights of dry, non-resinous woods, however, are said to have practically the same heat value regardless of species, and as a consequence it can be stated as a general proposition that the heavier the wood the more heat to the cord. Weight for weight, however, there is very little difference between various species; the average heat for all that have been calculated is 4,600 calories, or heat units, per kilogram. A kilogram of resin will develop 9,400 heat units, or about twice the average for wood. As a consequence, resinous woods have a greater heat value per pound than nonresinous woods, and this increased value varies, of course, with the resin content.

The available heat value of a cord of wood depends on many different factors. It has a relation not only to the amount of resin it contains but to the amount of moisture present. Furthermore, cords vary as to the amount of solid wood they contain, even when they are of the standard dimension and occupy 128 cubit feet of space. A certain proportion of this space is made up of air spaces between the sticks, and the air space may be considerable in a cord made of twisted, crooked and knotty sticks. Out of the 128 cubic feet, a fair average of solid wood is about 80 cubic feet.

It is pointed out, however, that heat value is not the only test of usefulness in fuel wood and since 95 per cent. of all wood used for fuel is consumed for domestic purposes, largely in farm houses, such factors as rapidity of burning and ease of lighting are important. Each section of the country has its favored woods and these are said to be, in general, the right ones to use. Hickory, of the non-resinous woods, has the highest fuel value per unit volume of wood, and has other advantages. It burns evenly, and, as housewives say, holds the heat. The oaks come next, followed by beech, birch, and maple. Pine has a relatively low heat value per unit volume, but has other advantages. It ignites readily and gives out a quick hot flame, but one that soon dies down. This makes it a favorite with rural housekeepers as a summer wood, because it is particularly adapted for hot days in the kitchen.

The fuel qualities of chestnut adapt it particularly to work in brass foundries, where it gives just the required amount of heat and it is therefore in favor. Coastwise vessels in Florida pay twice as much for Florida buttonwood as for any other, because it burns with an even heat and with a minimum amount of smoke and ash.

The principal disadvantage of the resinous pines is their oily black smoke.—U. S. Department of Agriculture.

DEATH COMES AND COMES AGAIN.

Twice in the last week has death invaded our little flock in Grace Church, and each time has borne away one of our best.

Last Saturday Mrs. J. C. Morris, who had been a great sufferer for a long time, underwent a surgical operation at the hospital, hoping to get relief. Her children were left at home, hoping for the best. They had seen their father taken to the hospital a few months ago and then had seen him return home improved, and naturally they looked forward with hope to the time when their mother would come back to them. Imagine the shock that came when their Grandfather Bradshaw came to tell them that Mother was dying. She never recovered from the operation. She died before the day was done. Her funeral was held in Grace Church Sunday afternoon, in which Pastor Andrews was assisted by two former pastors, Bros. Swain and Curry. Though Mrs. Morris had lived in Greensboro only a few years, she had endeared herself greatly to our people, and her death causes many a heart to feel sad. The husband and children have much sympathy in this loss so great. One of the little girls in her inconsolable grief cried out: "O God! why did you take my mamma from me?"

Then on Tuesday morning our church organist, for whom we had been praying and for whose recovery we had been hoping against hope, Mrs. Willie Clapp Baynes, succumbed to typhoid fever and was gone from us forever. Why? Why? We cannot tell. God knows, and what God does is best. Few, if any of our number, would be missed more at the church. It has been only a few months since this young woman walked out from the church a happy bride in the sight of a great company of admiring friends. Yesterday evening at five o'clock many of these same friends met in the church again to pay the last sad tribute. The stricken young husband, Bro. Bascum Baynes, and the father and mother, sisters and brothers, have widespread sympathy. Few illnesses here have caused more general concern and anxiety than that of Mrs. Baynes.

—Susan, wife of Everett McCulloch, of Tabernacle Church, after weeks of suffering from Bright's Disease, found relief in the sleep of death last Sunday morning. The funeral was conducted at Tabernacle at eleven o'clock on Monday by Rev. T. M. Johnson, and was attended by many friends. The editor visited her twice toward the end of her life, and found her trusting in God. She leaves besides her husband a grown son, two grown daughters, three younger daughters (the youngest four years old), and a little boy of six or seven. These will have the sympathy of their neighbors and friends in their irreparable loss. May they so live that they may meet her whom now they so sadly miss in the blessed land!

—Rev. T. M. Johnson began a protracted meeting at Julian last Sunday. The editor of THE HERALD was permitted to be there. Rev. J. D. Williams was expected on Monday, and the people were looking forward with interest to the results of the meeting. May they see the fruits of their labors.

—Tabernacle Circuit is to have a Young People's Convention at Tabernacle on Thursday, August 12. This is one of the good results of the Thomasville Convention. One of the young ladies who attended that was so impressed that she felt that others should be permitted to attend a similar convention. She went to work and by the pastor's help worked up interest. A committee met in Greensboro last Saturday and prepared a program and fixed upon a time and place. We hope many young people will embrace the opportunity to be entertained and helped which this meeting will bring near to them. We understand that Bro. Dixon is to be one of the speakers.

EVANGELISTS AND PASTORS—A REQUEST.

The Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is creating a Library on Evangelism for the free use of those interested. We want you to help us. If you will, please send to the Commission at 608 Lakeside Bldg., Chicago, Ill., any evangelistic books you may possess and can possibly spare. The publishers of religious books have generously donated to the Library such works as they have published on this subject, and the Globe-Wernicke Co. have donated a handsome set of bookcases for the same.

The Commission wants evangelistic sermons, Biographies of evangelists, and books on the History and Methods of evangelistic work. In fact, any book pertaining to this subject. All gifts will be gratefully acknowledged.

W. E. BIEDERWOLF, General Secretary.

THE COMMUNION OF SAINTS.

How strong is the bond that unites Christians of all creeds and classes together! It is the link of love for Christ that knits them into one. A full discussion of the subject of Christian unity is found in "Evangelical Christianity: Its History and Witness," edited by Principal W. B. Selbie. Representatives of the leading evangelical churches give reasons for their particular denominational positions.

"By 'Evangelical' is meant that type of Christian life and truth, which regards as primary and determinative, alike for the individual and for the Church, living faith in Christ as all-sufficient mediator of God's grace. That is, its emphasis falls upon the experimental and personal rather than the sacramental and institutional aspects of Christianity."

This book gives the necessary outlook upon the various relations and activities of the Christian Church and therefore deserves to be widely read.

THE W. H. M. SOCIETY. ITS NEEDS AND ITS POSSIBILITIES.

God has actually chosen to make himself dependent upon us. It is hard for us to realize this. If we thought it clear through, perhaps we should yield ourselves to him more continuously. Mr. J. Campbell White has said: "While it is true that Christ alone can save the world, according to his own divine plan Christ cannot save the world alone." He has planned to use us. He is dependent upon us. We can cause him to rejoice if we give him unhindered opportunity to do his mighty works through us; by giving ourselves wholly and unreservedly into his hands to be used of Him."

The women of our Methodist Protestant Church, wishing to give some of their time and means to the service of God; and realizing that "in unity there is strength", have organized our Woman's Home Missionary Society. This Society has for its purpose the advancement of God's Kingdom, not in the foreign field, but here in our own home land. Each branch of the society is doing a different work. Each branch is doing that which seems to be most needed in the state in which it is organized. I shall not try to tell you how many of these organizations there are in the United States, nor of the work which they are doing. But shall confine my remarks to the work of our own branch of the Society here in North Carolina.

First, I want to speak of just two very great present needs of the Society. The first of these is the need of more members, members who are willing to give of their time and means to the great work which the Society has found to do. The next is the need of more efficient prayer. Not efficiency that is measured by the hours spent in prayer, nor by the number of objects of prayer, but real prayer-efficiency that gets into the very presence of God and lays hold on him for the things that he would have us pray for. Are we, each of us, praying for the Society in such a way that God may hear and answer our prayers? There are few Christians, probably, who could not add many minutes to their daily prayer periods. However, if we can not give more time, we can be more earnest. Let us pray a believing prayer in which there is power and soon we shall see the glory of God.

When we have enlisted the interest of the vast number of women of our Methodist Protestant Church, and when this great body becomes united in efficient prayer, then great possibilities will loom up before us.

When we do too much, we are not doing enough. God wants to capitalize our time for himself at one hundred percent. Many of us who are in his service try to capitalize it at one hundred and twenty, or thirty, or forty percent., and so we fall far below the standard that he would like to have us reach. Satan loves to keep Christians over-busy in the Lord's service. It is one of the commonest causes of inefficiency among Christian workers. We try to do more than we can do well. May I give you a little verse of Courtenay Fenn's poem?

"I need a Friend who knows me
So fully through and through,
He'll ne'er misjudge a motive
Nor let me try to do
More work than I can manage,
The work that is not mine,
Because of vain ambition
Or conscience drawn too fine."

Perhaps it was some such feeling as this that prompted the North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Home Missionary Society to devote their entire interest to Our Children's Home near High Point.

When this organization proposed opening a home for motherless and fatherless children, no doubt there were those who cried "Impossible". "Impossible" is one of the most hopeful words in our language. When we see that something which must be done is imposible, it is a direct invitation to let God in. The greatest human scientific discoveries and inventions the world has ever known have been in connection with the things that men before that called impossible. As a Christian looks back over his lifetime, the brightest, best, most wonderful experiences in it shine out where he had been able to see only the word "impossible". That word is a veritable bridge between our little resources and God's great resources. What to some seemed impossible was to this band of workers a possibility. And today we have the home complete. In it are children whom it is our privilege to help.

There are two classes of persons who are held in highest honor in heaven, if they are faithful,—the children's parents and those who take the place of the children's parents.

I believe there are angels who are spirits, whom we cannot see, whose touch we cannot feel, whose voices we cannot hear. I believe that there is a ministry of these holy messengers to which we owe more than we can ever know. They guard us and guide us and defend us and help us. Jesus would not have spoken as he did about the children's angels always seeing God's face if the belief of his people had been only a rabbinical fancy. There are angels who ever minister both to childhood and to age.

But the best angels are the mothers and fathers, and those who care for the motherless and fatherless. I am sure God wants them to be the children's angels. It is a holy moment when a baby is laid in the arms of a mother or a father. One speaks out of the silence and says, "Take this child, and nurse it for me." It is for God they are to nurse the child—his child and theirs.

I do not believe that those who have the care of the little children have any true sense of the honor that is theirs, or begin to realize how dear they are to God. I have read somewhere this beautiful story of old Jewish times:

There had been a great drought,—no rain for many months. The fields were parched, and the springs were dry, and there was distress everywhere. The people came together to pray for rain. Rabbis and great men prayed, but no rain came. Prophets and rulers prayed, but the sky remained cloudless. At last came a quiet, plain, unknown man, and he offered prayer. At once clouds began to gather, and soon the rain was falling. The people asked him who he was, and he answered, "I am a teacher of little children." This man was heard in heaven when rabbis and prophets had pleaded in vain.

What is said of the children's angels is true also of those who care for the children. They stand always before the face of the Father. The fact that they love the children and are interested in their lives, and are seeking to shield them, and to teach them, and help them to know Christ and follow him, gives to those who care for the children a holy and sacred privilege which no others have. When we go in eager haste to God in behalf of a little child we will not be kept waiting, and our prayer will not fail to be answered. We should read the Master's words, and think of ourselves as the children's angels and the privileges of the children's angels as our privileges. "In heaven their angels do always behold the face of my father who is in heaven."

Such service as this needs our very best effort. If we are the children's angels, we must work as the angels work. If we stand always before the face of God we must be holy. Only the pure in heart can see God. We must be earnest, for looking upon the face of God cannot but kindle love in us. Shall we not all consecrate ourselves anew to the blessings and the helping of the children? They look up into our faces with love and trust, and make pathetic appeal to all that is holy and divine in us.

WHICH FIRST?—CHURCH OR LODGE?

Do those who belong to both church and lodge always make the church first? We fear not; in fact, we are sure some give precedence to the lodge. Some instances in proof of the above assertion: On one of our charges which we served for two years, the secretary of the Q. C. was also secretary of the lodge. And when the Q. C. happened to meet so as to conflict with the lodge meeting he always went to the lodge. When Q. C. was published if it came at lodge time he would always tell us that he could not be present, as his lodge met at that time, and that he was secretary of the lodge, and therefore "could not come." He was considered one of the most worthy members, but he made lodge first and church second. He placed a wrong estimate upon the lodge, or the lodge required an unchristian service of him, to neglect the church to serve the lodge. How many church members of this kind, making lodge first, and church second, God knows. But what kind of an answer will they give to Jesus Christ at the Judgment, for such an unchristian course?

Another instance: A certain man had been paying about $10 per year on pastor's salary. A certain year he subscribed $10 on pastor's salary, so said the steward, and never paid a cent. That year he joined the lodge, which cost $20 initiation fee, and, as he was not very "full-handed," the reasonable presumption is that he had nothing left for the church, after he got through with the lodge, or the lodge got through with him. Another case of lodge first, and church second or not at all. Yet he was considered a nice, upright man. But what can such a one answer to Jesus Christ in the Judgment for thus deserting the church for the lodge? If a man has not money enough to discharge his obligations to the church and the lodge, he had better stay out of the lodge, if he wants to be a Christian, or else just withdraw from the church. If a man is going to "play second fiddle" to the church, for the sake of the lodge, he is not worthy of the church. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God," not first the lodge. If a man "cannot serve God and mammon" —and Jesus says he can't—he cannot serve God and the lodge, if he makes the lodge first. And if a man cannot remain in a lodge without making it first, he had better get out. "Pluck out the right eye," if it is found to be a cause of offense, and "cut off the right foot or right hand," if found to be a cause of offense.

Another case: In another town I was asked if I had been to see a certain sick man in the suburbs whom I scarcely knew at all. I said, "No." He said, "If you had been a Knight you would have gone." They both were Knights. The well man visited the sick man because each was a Knight. The question arose in my mind, if the sick man had not been a Knight, would the well man have visited him? This is quite doubtful. The well man was a leading church member, and considered one of the best men in town, and I a church member also, but the air and manner of his conversation led me to infer that if I had been sick he would not have felt the same obligation to visit and see after me, as he did the Knight. If this were true, he made the lodge primary and the church secondary. But Paul said: "Do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." Gal. 6:10. Some, it seems, if we judge by their conversation and actions, act as if this read, "Do good unto all men, especially unto them who belong to the lodge."

I am not railing against the lodge. I am "neutral"—not speaking for nor against the lodge as an institution, but trying to point out some of its abuses and dangers, if a man gives it first place—precedence of the Church of Jesus Christ. There is a great deal of so-called charity being done that is not charity. If paying the premium on a life insurance policy is charity, in the true Bible sense, then quite a number of so-called charitable deeds are charity. If I join a fraternity and put my money into it, with the thought that it is a good thing, that it may be beneficial to me or my family, that is not charity, it is simply business. I am not saying that this is wrong, but I say that it is not charity. Charity is giving when there is no hope or expectation of a return, save as God may return it, either here or hereafter, as a reward, in gracious Providence. Luke 14:12-14 gives us the teaching of Jesus Christ concerning charity: "When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbors; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind; and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." So we see that charity is giving when there is no hope or prospect of a recompense from those we help. Real charity will be "recompensed at the resurrection of the just." But when we give to persons because they belong to a certain lodge, or fraternity, this is not rewardable in the sight of God, but is "wood, hay, stubble," which will be consumed in the fire of the judgment. We are not saying that these things are wrong, but saying that they are not charity—while they are good, they are not the best. Our first, prime, eternal obligation is to God. "For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ"—not because ye belong to a certain lodge, fraternity or order—"verily, I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." Mark 9:41. "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Col. 3:17. "God is no respecter of persons," and "the wisdom that is from above," is not only "pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits," but it is also "without partiality." But if a person gives, or does a favor to another, because he belongs to a lodge, and fails to give to or aid another who is in equal need, but does not belong to his lodge, but at the same time belongs to Christ and the church, is not this person partial, a respecter of persons, making the lodge first and the church second? There is but one answer.

I heard a reputable man and church member in one of the leading cities of the State say, some years ago, that it had about gotten to where if a man died, not belonging to some lodge, there was hardly any one to bury him. If this is true there is something seriously wrong. It looks as if the lodges are of greater esteem than the church. I am not saying that this is true—the picture may be overdrawn. The man who made the above statement was a member of a lodge or lodges. If this be true, it seems that there is a partiality, a clannishness, being developed that is alarming. Does the fact that a man belongs to Christ and the church count for little, or nothing, in comparison with his membership in some lodge or lodges? This is not inconsistent with the spirit of the world, for "the world will love its own," but it is positively at variance with the Spirit of the blessed Christ. So which is first, the church or the lodge? And what will we answer in the Judgment, if we neglect, or despise, one of Chirst's little ones who does not belong to a lodge, or my, or our lodge?

No human institution should be given equal place with the church, much less precedence. The church was before these human institutions, and will continue after they have all perished. All the good there is in these fraternities came from the church, but the church gets little or no credit for it. In fact, we hear some speak as if the fraternities were superior to the church. For a person to so speak seems to manifest ignorance, or a spirit of treason, if uttered by a church member. Where do I stand, for the church first or the lodge? How would you answer Jesus?

RUSSIAN AFFAIRS.

The conspicuous place which is occupied by Russia in the present war compels us to understand something of the genius and spirit of the Slav. One of the best books on this subject is "The Russian People" by Maurice Baring. He writes from first-hand information, having lived amongst the people of Russia for many years. His analysis of Russian character, and characteristics is especially forceful. He treats of the present conditions, with regard to the history of Russia, from the past up to the present time.

Two other books of smaller size contain a concise summary of matters pertaining to this Empire of a hundred and seventy millions of souls. Many of us will be surprised to read "Russia's Gift to the World" by J. W. Mackail, and learn that the contribution made to the higher life of the race by Russian thinkers and artists is considerable. In literature, music, art, the drama, mathematics, physical and biological science, history, philosophy and sociology, Russia has done a great deal in furnishing ideas and ideals to the Western world.

There have, however, always been difficulties in this vast Empire. Some of them are enumerated by Prof. Paul Vinogradoff in his little volume, "The Russian Problem," which carefully analyzes the causes and consequences of the present humanitarian movement in that vast Empire. The problem in Russia is how to spread the principles of democratic enlightenment and economic improvement among the one hundred and forty millions of the peasant population in such peaceful ways so that the process will be one of evolution and not of revolution. He also deals with the problems of the central Government, the reform of the Duma and of the council of the Empire and the large bureaucratic establishments of the Civil Service. The author is optimistic that out of the confusion and conflict there will evolve in Russia a universally humanitarian type.

CONCENTRATION.

If the present status of the great prohibition reform suggests anything it is the pressing need of concentration upon the part of various organizations in the nation-wide movement. The other and many lines of temperance and prohibition effort have certainly led up to this very important one. And now to cling tenaciously to old theories and forms will only occasion delay when great and rapid strides are demanded. The Prohibition Party, the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U. and the numerous social and church temperance societies can well take fresh courage in seeing the culmination of long continued plan and effort in the nation-wide agitation for prohibtion. To be sure, some of the workers have had this movement always in mind—they have not swerved from it but there has not been a day when there was such an impetus toward a united concentration as there is just now. And we believe this phase of the subject marks the beginning of the end to the greatest reform of the century. The conviction obtains that there have been theorizing and organizing long enough. Let outright and downright work now be in evidence. The end to be accomplished is of vastly greater moment than the prolongation of the life of any particular organization. Let societies and organizations perish but let the end toward which they have contributed be their enduring monument. If need be they can well lose their identity in the unity and concentration now becoming universally apparent.

—An attempt of a Mexican to smuggle two Chinamen from Mexico into the United States was revealed at New York a few days ago. The faces of the Chinamen had been blackened and they had been otherwise "made up" to look like negroes. When one of them wiped his perspiring face with his hand, leaving a streak of yellow, the secret was let out.

Religious Training. Religion comes naturally to children. Let it be always the most natural thing in the world, an inevitable part of life. Don't be afraid to teach them to pray as soon as they can speak. Let them think of God as of Someone who loves and is interested in them—a real Person, though unseen, just as a Missionary's little child can learn to love the unknown grandparents in the homeland. Teach them of Jesus Christ as the Savior, who will give help in every time of need. Let them understand that God does make a demand on their lives, and that sin grieves Him.

DELAY IS NOT DENIAL.

O weary soul,
  By trouble long distressed,
Thy father hears thy cry,
  He'll give the promised rest.
By faith hold on
  And know, whate'er betide,
Thy answer, though delayed,
  Is not denied.

O troubled heart,
  Thy Father knoweth best,
Thy present trial of faith
  Shall to thy good be blest;
Thy humble prayer is heard,
  So never turn aside,
Though answer is delayed,
  'Tis not denied.

O waiting one,
  Though day to night be turned,
Thy answer thou shalt have,
  Though sad the lesson learned;
His will is wrought in thee,
  Then in His Word confide,
Should answer be delayed,
  'Tis not denied.

A STOLEN RIDE.

In 1901 George Newbert stole a ride on an Erie Railroad train from Mansfield to Akron, Ohio. There would be no occasion to publish his real name and the wrong he did had he not made it public by his restitution. Four years later he wrote a straightforward letter to the assistant general passenger agent, telling him what he had done, and inclosing two dollars and twenty-five cents, the price of a ticket, which he wished credited to him as payment for the ride.

I. D. Brown, the agent who received the money, forwarded it to the treasury of the company, and wrote a receipt for the amount. In forwarding the letter to George Newbert, he wrote a letter, in which he said:

"I have a wish, and you and I will shake hands on it. The wish is that there were more people like yourself. Some parts of your letter indicate that you have been reading one of the choicest gems of wisdom and experience, the Bible. I assume that its divine counsel has spoken, and you have heard; you have been blind, and it has given you light; weak, and it has given you strength; hungry, and it has given you food; thirsty, and it has given you drink. Stick close to that book. Two dollars and a quarter are perhaps to you a large sum, but I am sure it has been a millstone round your neck since the day you stole the ride. Now I know you are happy, and the world looks bright."

George Newbert was not expecting a letter of this character in answer to his straightforward note, but it touched his heart to discover that the officer to whom the money went was, like himself, a student of the Bible.

Some one who learned of the correspondence was interested to inquire whether the passenger agent was right in assuming that it was the Bible which had stimulated the man who stole the ride to return the money.

"It was conscience most of all," said George Newbert, "but it was the Bible, too. I felt I owed the money, and so I returned it. Yes, I agree to all that Mr. Brown's letter says about the Bible. It is the Book of books. Conscience and the Bible are what make men honest."—Youth's Companion.

GIGGLING GIRLS.

The wise man said of laughter, "It is mad," and he describes the laughter of fools "As the crackling of thorns under a pot." But this by no means implies that laughter itself is either sinful or foolish. There is a time to laugh. Man seems to be the only one of earth's inhabitants endowed with the power of laughter, and certainly such an endowment has its legitimate place and use in this world. One man, when speaking of his efforts to select the proper persons for some desired service, said that if they would get them all together and get them to laughing, he could pick out the men he wanted by their laugh.

Most people have learned to recognize that "surly, knavish grin" which "shows that the soul within is deeply steeped in sin." They have noticed the hypocritical laugh which sounds more like a cough than a laugh and which is intended to hide some hidden heartache. They have observed the sneering laugh of scorn, a laugh such as Satan himself might imitate; they have heard the light and liquid laugh of childhood with its inward joy, or that which recognizes the keenness of kindly wit, and the fitness of a gaiety and innocence; they have listened to the laugh which tells of calm content and wise and well-timed answer; but among the laughs which are the least pleasant to hear may be mentioned the giggling of a thoughtless girl, too old to be childish, too knowing to be unsophisticated, too self-conscious to be hearty and natural, but who has somewhere acquired the habit of giggling and te-he-ing, with a kind of mirth which never goes below the chin, and which has no more of the contagion of gladness about it than could be found in a gravestone.

There are such persons who giggle on every occasion; when they speak, or when they have nothing to say; when they meet friends; when they retail gossip; when they visit, and when they converse; ever and anon the sensitive ear is pained by this shallow senseless giggle, which means nothing and expresses nothing but the emptiness and shallowness of the giggler's soul.

It is not necessary to laugh unless there is something to laugh at. No person is bound to giggle out of compliment to company, and as for making one's self agreeable by giggling, such an undertaking is hopeless. People who love laughter and mirth hate the empty mockery of giggling girls.

Good friends, there is nothing wrong in silence. A hollow laugh is no sign of gladness or good cheer. A faint and kindly smile, which speaks of friendly interest and genuine good will, is worth a thousand silly girlish giggles, which tell of empty hearts and sometimes of empty heads.

Good friends, please do not giggle. Laugh if you will, if you have anything to laugh at; but don't undertake to giggle your way through this world, and only win a reputation for foolishness and emptiness thereby. Let your aspect have in it something of sincerity, candor, frankness and good comon sense, and you will find that it will make you a dozen friends where empty giggling will not make you one. And the friends which come to us through candor and frankness and faithfulness are friends that are worth having, and which remain and stand by us; but gigglers do not know what true friendship means, nor do they understand how to exercise it.—H. L. H. (Clipping)

Who Was It?—On July 5, some one mailed us a dollar for the Herald, but failed to sign any name or give any post-office. We would like to know who it was.

—In order to afford better facilities for meals to travelers using trains on which there are no dining cars, the Southern is furnishing free to inn-keepers, hotel proprietors, and restaurant managers at points where trains stop at meal hours, nice lunch boxes. These boxes to be used in serving lunches on the trains. Conductors will notify passengers of the opportunity to secure these box lunches and will send telegraphic reports in advance of the number of lunches required. The amount to be charged for the lunches is at the discretion of the inn-keeper, restaurant manager or hotel proprietor.

NOTES BY THE WAY

If Edgar Allan Poe were living today, what would be his astonishment on learning of the homage paid to his name! And how might he not have won that homage during his lifetime had it not been for the demon of drink!

Years ago his foster father sent him to the University of Virginia as a student. He was bright, active, brilliant, but spent a goodly part of his time in gambling and in drink. Large debts were contracted by him while a student here which his foster father refused to pay, and Mr. Allan took the future poet out of school and put him to work in his counting house at Richmond.

It is not the purpose to give even a brief sketch of the life of this poet, but to speak of his connection with the University of Virginia, and speak of the fame that came after his death which was denied him while still alive.

After the poet had lived his uneasy, feverish, restless life and had laid himself down on that fatal night in Baltimore in a sleep from which he never awoke, the world began to realize that his genius was of no common order, and so his praise began to ring from continent to continent. The University of Virginia began to be proud of her honored son. She remembered that room number thirteen on West Range had been his room while he was a student here, and so the occupants of this room were ousted, the room was fitted up as nearly as possible like Poe left it, and it was forever dedicated to his memory. It was the writer's privilege to visit this room recently. Here were found complete editions of Poe's works; several Poe relicts and pictures as well as original autographs hang upon the wall. Above the door sits a "stately raven of the saintly days of yore," that doubtless came years ago "from the night's plutonian shore" to his room and haunted his memories. How many weird dreams may have been dreamed here in the narrow confines of these four walls! What imaginings, what hopes, what bright prospects may have presented themselves to the future poet's fancy! Here may have been woven the webs of fancy which was afterwards embodied in some of his noted stories and tales.

Further than this there has been created here the Edgar Allan Poe professorship of English Literature. This has been established by the University and its friends in honor of this noted son. For a man to fill this position, the University of Virginia came to North Carolina and found Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, a native of Greensboro, and one of the foremost English scholars of the South. By this professorship established here in the poet's honor it is hoped that others will be trained to write in perhaps nobler strains and on grander themes than his.

In considering the life and character of this erratic genius, the mind goes back to the Allan home in Richmond where the boy was spoiled and petted and taught, not intentionally, of course, but taught, nevertheless, to use and look with favor on the flowing bowl of wine. When the Allans entertained in their home, which they often did, the boy, Edgar Allan Poe, was placed on the table where he recited verses that he had been taught in honor of the guests and drank a glass of wine to their health. Alas! Could the Allans have known the awful result of a life wrecked, the fires of genius to be drowned in that fearful cup, would they have allowed it or even thought of teaching him to drink? Could parents foresee the results of their influence and teachings on their children and on the lives of those about them, how different might the lives and teachings of these parents be!

And so the poet lived and died in poverty and weakness, without honor or renown, but these have come later. What estimate the future will place on this poet we can not tell; but it seems sure hat this University will ever count him as one of the greatest of American poets.

JAPAN'S NEED OF CHRISTIANITY.

The paramount need of Japan, as of any non-Christian nation, is the Christian religion. Leading officials now recognize that even in its schools there is "no force to which they can appeal except religion." It must be remembered, as Dr. Sailer Mathews points out, that "the Japanese government built up a very elaborate and indeed notable system of education with the distinct understanding that this should be removed from religious control of all sorts. Its results are now confusedly unsatisfactory, if not threatening. The educational authorities in Japan have been forced to admit the breaking down of moral restraints among the scores or thousands of university and college students."

Other proofs could be adduced to show Japan's need of Christianity, and that Buddhism has been outgrown.

One well states "the ideals presented by these two systems are in many respects diametrically opposed to each other. One looks forward, the other backward; one regards life as a blessing to be enjoyed and an opportunity to be improved, the other sees in it only evil, from which escape should be sought; one crowns this life with immortality, the other adds to a gloomy existence the darker night of annihilation; one offers faith as the inspiration to noble deeds, the other presents a plan for the perfecting of self, with no sense of responsibility to God to prompt it or promise of reward to encourage it; one enlarges the sympathies and links each individual with all other human beings, the other turns the thought inward in search of perpetual calm.

"Christianity dominates Europe and the Western hemisphere, while Buddhism still holds the Orient under its drowsy spell.

"On the islands of Japan a struggle is now going on between these two great religious systems, and the triumph of the gospel of love and consecrated activity in the land of the Rising Sun will open the way to a still larger triumph in Asia."

It may be said that Christianity has broken down in Europe in the light of the present awful conditions, but such is not the case.

"A world order built up by secular education and dependent on force has collapsed. Christianity has not failed: but nations have failed to be Christian. The ideas underlying this war spring from a savage interpretation of life, and directly contravene the teachings of Jesus."

The Methodist Protestant Church is called upon to do her utmost to increase her working force in Japan to help win it to Christ.

A BETTER SHOWING

One hundred more schools have ordered Children's Day supplies than ordered last year, and yet not one-half of the schools of the denomination applied for them. This is a distinct loss to the schools, and the Board will be embarrassed without their financial help.

The growth of the Japan work demands a larger income, and your aid is needed. You could hold a service yet. Send me your order for supplies.

LIBERTY BELL TAKES LONG TRIP.

Although the crack in the Liberty bell has been gradually widening and lengthening and experts who have examined it have declared that a long railroad journey will be disastrous to it, Panama-Pacific exposition officials have prevailed upon the custodians of the relic to allow it to be exhibited at the exposition and it started a few days ago on the longest trip it has ever made, not excepting the journey from England in early colonial days. The bell was placed on aspecially constructed car attached to a special train which stopped fora brief time at the larger and more important towns enroute for the bell to be exhibited before crowds of patriotic citizens.

This old bell, which, 139 years ago last Independence day, rang for more than two hours from the steeple of the old state house in Philadelphia announcing that the representatives of the 13 colonies had proclaimed the independence of the United States, means much to every true American because of its patriotic associations. Among the thousands who have paid homage to the sacred relic, W. V. A. Sunday, of Philadelphia, has probably looked at it oftenest. In 1825, when an infant in his mother's arms, he first visited it. For the next two years his mother led him by the hand to the bell's resting place, and since then he has gone to Independence hall in Philadelphia every fourth of July to see the relic, the one last Fourth being his 89th annual pilgrimage.—Pathfinder.

GOVERNMENT NOTES.

—A pecial federal grand jury has indicted F. D. Underwood, president of the Erie railroad, for having violated the interstate commerce law which provides that a private car be allotted only upon payment of 25 fares. Underwood is said to have furnished a private car for W. B. Miller, an Akron, O., rubber magnate, on the payment of only eight fares.

—The old sloop of war Portsmouth which took possession of San Francisco for the United States in 1846, destroyed the Chinese fortifications at Canton in 1856 and performed valiant service as part of Admiral Farragut's fleet has been sold for $3,600. Since the Civil War this old vessel has been used as a training ship. She is of value now only on account of the metal and other material in her hull.

—The weakness and inefficiency of American submarines is being demonstrated every day. Reports recently submitted to the navy department by naval officers tell of three accidents to submarines engaged in maneuvers off the Atlantic coast. One sustained a broken crank shaft, one developed engine trouble and the third ran aground.

—When H. E. Brock, of Seattle, Wash., was arrested recently for driving an auto without a license two Chinamen concealed in sacks were found in the machine. Brock has confessed that for seven months he has been engaged in a profitable smuggling business, transporting Chinamen across the border from Canada into the United States at $200 a head.

—President Wilson has appointed Sylvester Long-Lance, a full-blooded Cherokee Indian, to a cadetship at West Point. Long-Lance has a good record in school work and in athletics. He is the second Indian to be appointed to West Point, the first being a Creek who after graduation fell fighting with the whites against the Seminoles in the Seminole war.

—Some time ago Representative Helgesen of N. Dak. charged that inaccurate maps of polar regions furnished by the navy department to the Mylius-Erichsen arctic expedition were responsible for the deaths of several members of the party. Secretary Daniels has ordered the charts in question withdrawn and their issue stopped.

—The first $50 gold piece, commemorating the Panama-Pacific exposition, was struck at the San Francisco mint a few days ago and was sold to C. C. Moore, president of the exposition, for $100. On the obverse side of the coin is the head ofa laborer and on the reverse are two dolphins, emblematic of the meeting of the two oceans thru' the Panama canal. Some 25,000 so-called exposition coins are to be struck and offered for sale at double their value.

—The navy department has ordered from a Connecticut company a dirigible air-ship which is to cost $45,600. It is to be 175 feet long and 55 feet high, with accommodations for eight men. The speed will be 25 miles an hour. The old battle cruiser North Carolina is to be remodeled for use as an aviation ship and will be stationed at Pensacola, Fla., where a station and school for aviators will be maintained.

—The new U. S. battleship Arizona was launched at the Brooklyn navy yard a few days ago. The Arizona and the recently launched Pennsylvania are the two mightiest vessels ever built. This newest dreadnaught cost $15,000,000, is 608 feet long, has a displacement of 31,400 tons, a speed of 21 knots, armor plate 13 inches thick, will carry 12 14-inch guns and 22 five-inch long range rifles and will have a complement of 1,000 officers and men. The Arizona was christened by Miss Esther Ross, of Arizona, in the presence of a large and enthusiastic crowd of spectators.

—The postoffice department has commenced the use of automobiles for the delivery of rural mail over some of the best routes in the country and the service is to be improved and extended from time to time. In most cases the mail auto will be able to cover about twice the distance that a horse and wagon cover, thus cutting down operating expenses.—Pathfinder.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Randleman Circuit.—Our third quarterly conference will be held at Bethany, 3:30 o'clock P. M. on Saturday before the first Sunday in August. The officials are urgently requested to be present and let all the churches be sure to hold the election for delegate to Annual Conference and carry the count to the quarterly conference. J. B. O'Briant.

Asheville.—Attendane at the services yesterday was not quite up to standard. A good many of our people were away from the city. You folks come to Asheville to spend your vacations, and our folks, as many as can, go away from it. We held our Children's Day service last night. It came rather suddenly, and, as a result, the congregation was very small. However, the offering amounted to something over $12.00. This is considerably larger than last year. It is interesting to note, and decidedly gratifying to me, that, with one exception, each Children's Day and Easter offering has been better than the preceding one. This year the increase is about 75 per cent. over last year. It speaks well for any people to have it so, but especially for this people who are burdened with the church debt. But, as I have said before, these people are loyal to all the interests of the church, and are quick to see the opportunities for service that lie beyond their own four walls.

You will note the contribution of Bro. Brooks to the Building Fund. I had about despaired of having any report to make this week, when it came. Saved me from Blue Monday, sure! Bro. Brooks says in his letter: "I have never seen any reason to doubt the wisdom of your present location, but reports from time to time have clearly vindicated the wisdom of your (Brooks ought to have said "ours", for he had as much to do with selecting the new location as any one), choice. Another location might have been better, and doubtless would have been at one time, but with changed conditions, I am satisfied that the best location was finally selected." That choice has been vindicated in still another way. Just two blocks farther out, on the same street with us is a vacant lot, and on that vacant lot a sign with this inscription: "Building site of the First Congregation Church." That church has owned the lot about a year. When they bought it there weren't more than ten houses within an eighth of a mile of it; now there are twenty-five and a dozen more contracted for. And their choice isn't interfering with ours a bit, for our territory is building more rapidly than theirs. No man who put any money in this enterprise needs fear that it is a poor investment. There have been results already that in eternity will rise up in blessing. I have just had word of the death of a young man—Bro. Dolph Roberts—whom I received into membership a few weeks ago. It is my chief joy to know that he reconsecrated his life during my ministry here, and in the church that you helped to build. Aren't there some others who want to share in such experiences as these? C. W. Bates.

Asheville Church Building Fund.

Mr. R. H. Brooks, Greensboro $25.00

Thanks to Bro. Brooks, I have it down to $402.81. I'm anxious to see it enter the 300's. When General Grant was besieging Vicksburg, he was asked for terms. His reply was "Unconditional surrender! We'll fight it out along that line if it takes all summer!" I haven't any other terms to offer you folks, nor any less time, if you want to take that long. Come on!

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Granville.—We have just closed two splendid revivals with Bro. Millaway doing the preaching. He preached with his old time vigor and power. At Rehoboth the first week in July we had a good revival in the church. About fifteen reclaimed and converted. We will give an opportunity to any who wish to unite with the church at next appointment. Here we are beginning to talk church enlargement as the church is hardly large enough to accommmodate the congregations at the regular services, to say nothing of the special services. Hope to give you something more definite about his a little later. Miss Harris would have given you a report of this meeting, but went to Battle Creek to visit her brother Tom the day after the meeting closed. Help us pray for his recovery, as he is in the hospital there.

The second Sunday we began our meeting at Mt. Carmel. Good crowds here as at the other place. Some twelve or fifteen professions with eight accessions to our church and some to other churches. We enjoyed a good revival in the church here also. Large crowds at each service. Every one at each church expressed themselves as being highly pleased with Bro. Millaway's preaching and his work generally. Of course every one that knows him does not have to be told of that.

We begin our special ecort at Antioch tomorrow and will continue most of the week. Bro. D. R. Williams will help there and at Union Chapel the next week. We are expecting good results at each of these places also because our dependable people have promised to pray for a revival and then because of the man that has been blest of God in other places that is coming to preach in these meetings. All this with God on the giving hand means victory for His people. Please pray for us. Hope to give you more interesting items later. Our third quarterly conference will be held at Union Chapel on Monday after fourth Sunday during revival meeting. Let every official come.

Sincrely,

N. G. Bethea.

Henderson, July 17.

Randleman Circuit.—The parsonage was, on Saturday, July 10, the scene of a most pleasant occasion when the pastor and family were the happy recipients of a nice pounding. This was given by our people at Worthville. They came in a two-horse wagon, also a buggy. The wagon was loaded "hay-ride" fashion with young people and the pounding wedged in, which consisted of flour, sugar, coffee, meal, soap, starch, soda, baking powder, pepper, rice, tapioca, tomatoes, eggs, toasted corn flakes, tooth picks and a little money. Bro. Myrick had mentioned to us that he wanted to talk with us on a little business and might call that evening. We guessed it was church business and did not give it further thought. So he slipped upon us unawares by bringing a crowd with him to help him to carry "business" into effect. It was a fine business proposition and we sure did enjoy it then and we believe it gets better since we have tried it. We are thankful to all who had anything to do with this "business". We forbear to mention names, but pray the good Lord to abundantly reward them in both temporal and spiritual blessings.

J. B. O'Briant.

Gaston Circuit.—On the second Sunday night in this month, children's services were held at Fairfield. The church was filled to overflowing, there being perhaps fifty or more on the outside. Only four weeks before the service was held it was decided to have the service. On the next Sunday the recitations were given out and the work of preparation began. The service was a decided success. The collection for missions amounted to $3.27.

Our special meeting at this place will begin on the fifth Sunday in August. Rev. A. O. Lindley will be our help. We are looking forward to a great revival. Prayer meetings are being held every Sunday evening.

Children's Day will be held at Union Grove in the near future. It was decided by the school yesterday to go on a picnic sometime in August.

Our third quarterly conference will be held at Bessemer next Saturday, 24th, at

P. M. A full attendance of all official members is desired. The nominees for delegate to Annual Conference are: J. F. Spencer and H. O. Proctor. The nominees for alternate are: A. M. Lyttle and A. P. Sills.

Will H. Neese.

Gastonia, July 19, 1915.

Creswell.—Our meeting at Mt. Hermon began Saturday night before the fourth Sunday in June and contined over a week. Rev. G. F. Millaway was with us part of the time and did some fine preaching. Rain prevented holding one service. When the weather was favorable large congregations attended. A number showed interest in their salvation, but only two joined the church.

Last Monday night we began at Woodley's Chapel without any regular pulpit help. A young man intending to enter the ministry was with us and worked in the meeting. The meeting closed yesterday at the morning service.

At one service there were 26 at the altar. Some of these were members of some church. Six united with the church.

Last night our Creswell Sunday school held the Children's Day service. It was well attended and the program was rendered remarkably well.

Our meeting at Mt. Elma will begin next Saturday night. We will have no help. Monday night after the first Sunday in August we will begin at Rehoboth with Rev. T. E. Davis to do the preaching, and Monday night after the fourth Sunday in August we will begin the meeting in Creswell and continue over the fifth Sunday, with Rev. N. G. Bethea to do the preaching.

July 19.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Circuit.—The contest for the attendance banner this quarter has caused a greater interest in the Sunday school. The young ladies had the largest attendance the first Sunday and the young men have had the largest number both of the other Sundays.

The annual ice cream supper of these two classes will be given at the home of Mr. A. N. Eller, Friday evening, July 30. This annual treat is looked forward to with a great deal of interest each year as every one that attends them is sure to enjoy the program in every way. Music is always furnished by the Clark's Chapel String Band, and is regarded as one of the best features of the evening.

There was an unusually large audience to hear Bro. Martin Sunday night, and he preached a forceful sermon to them.

We were very glad indeed to have Miss Beulah Moton with us for the services Sunday, and we extend to her and anyone else who can, a cordial invitation to be with us at any service.

Weaverville, July 20.

Halifax Circuit.—Wasn't yesterday a "scorcher"? But we had a very good congregation at Harmony. We are much pleased with the congregations that have worshiped with us here all the year. It is true that all who attend services there get a splendid dinner, but judging from the attention and interest given to the reading and expounding of the Word, the dinner is not what brings these people to church. Harmony organized a Sunday Egg Club for the benefit of the children's Home, electing Miss Bessie Draper as their Treasurer. Wherever I have mentioned it the women become enthusiastic about the Home. Some time we will give the men an opportunity to make an offering to the Home.

Those people are planning and praying for a great revival when we have our special meeting the 3rd Sunday in August. The members expect to meet on the church ground on Friday A. M. before the second Sunday in August to do some work on the grove that will add much to the beauty of it.

We also had a very good congregation at Fosburgh Camp last night considering the fact that some of the people were away on their vacation, and others were sick. The attention given was most noticeable and helpful. It was warm enough to put any one to sleep, but I saw no sleeping. All public speakers appreciate good attention, and these people made it a pleasure to speak to them. An appreciative audience is a great inspiration. God bless these good people, and may we be a blessing to each other.

R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

Reunion at Mt. Hermon.

Next Saturady, July 24, has been set apart for the reunion of the Sunday school and members of Mt. Hermon church. Every member, old or young, is earnestly requested to come, bring dinner and spend the day on the spot our ancestors held sacred. It will, no doubt, be a means of bringing to our minds fond recollections of bygone days. Refreshments all day, also good speaking. Let everybody come. It is hoped that much good will result from this gathering. Hubert L. Iseley.

Welch Memorial M. P. Sunday School.

In spite of the hot weather, and scarlet fever raging in our community, our attendance shows up well—just one more than it was last year.

We are satisfied that a goodly number were kept away on the account of scarlet fever. Our attendance for the month of July is as follows:

July 4, 152. Collection $3.68
July 11, 144. Collection 1.56
July 18, 126. Collection 1.54

We consider ourselves lucky in having a regular attendance of our teachers.

In the absence of our pastor, Bro. W. F. Easter delivered an excellent sermon which was enjoyed by a good congregation. Grover A. Kerr, S. S. Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Circuit.—Special meeting closed Thursday last with several conversions and eight new members. Bro. Millaway did the preaching, and truly it was preaching. He makes the way to be saved so very plain that even the child can understand.

Our Sunday school is in good condition. The attendance, I think, has been better this year than in several.

July 20, 1915.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Circuit.—We held our children's day service last Sunday morning, July 11th, and the songs and recitations seemed to be enjoyed very much by all present. The children did exceedingly well; Misses Mary Pegg and Hattie Smith deserve credit for training them. The collection amounted to about $6.00.

In the afternoon our special meeting began and continued until last Friday night. Rev. D. A. Braswell did the preaching and we never heard better nor more inspiring sermons. Both he and our pastor worked faithfully and the church was revived and many souls saved. There were 20 conversions and reclamations. We were indeed glad to welcome eleven new members into the church and are expecting others to join soon. We have all learned to love Mr. Braswell and hope to have him with with us again. He is such an earnest worker.

We are hoping that our Sunday school and prayer meeting will move on with renewed energy and do better work than ever before and we believe they will.

Since my last report death has visited our home and taken away dear father. It is so lonely without him, but we know that our loss is his gain, so we try not to grieve so much.

Best wishes to the Herald.

MISS JULIA'S SECRET OF JOY.

"I'm no comfort to myself or anybody else," sighed Mrs. Marlow, shaking a sorrowful head. "I'm simply a helpless invalid, Ruth." The visitor looked sympathetic and said: "I didn't know it was as bad as that. Have you had a second stroke?"

"No, though I suppose I may have at any time. But one such experience as mine is enough to reduce me to uselessness. It's very hard, Ruth, when one has been considered a fairly capable woman, to be suddenly set aside. I am a mere nonentity now—no one consults me or cares for my advice. Nobody asks my assistance, and of course, I can't give it. People are kind, it is true, but it's a very different thing to be only and altogether the recipient of favors from what it used to be when I could grant many myself."

"Do you suffer, Louisa?"

"Only from weariness."

"Is your eyesight good?"

"Yes, thank fortune."

"And your intellect is clear. It is only that you can't walk?"

"That, and my general stiffness and disability. My hands are too clumsy and slow to accomplish anything, and I have to be taken care of as if I had reached an advanced stage of second childhood instead of the prime of life. It is a mysterious Providence that shuts up a useful woman—for I think you will admit I was that once—to perhaps many years of uselessness. There is absolutely nothing left for me but this." Mrs. Marlow pointed to her wheel chair and sighed heavily.

Her visitor hesitated, then spoke: "Louisa, I'm just as sorry for you as I can be. But isn't it just possible you are taking a wrong view of the situation? Perhaps circumstances might be worse."

The invalid flushed. "Of course, Ruth. You speak foolishly. I might be in the poor-house—" she began indignantly.

Mrs. Jamison raised her hand. "Wait, dear," she said, and her voice was gentle. "I met a case so much like yours in Trenton that I want to tell you about her. It is Miss Julia Wentworth, and she is older than you by a dozen years."

"Very patient and uncomplaining?" Mrs. Marlow's voice was slightly sarcastic.

"Yes, she is both but that wasn't the point I mean to emphasize. Let me tell you a little story of her. She lives alone, with one servant, who keeps her house and takes the necessary care of Miss Julia, too. She was born to purple and fine linen, but her money is gone except the pittance she lives on. She has three little rooms, and their furnishings show what she was used to, earlier in life—mahogany and Chippendale, exquisite china and fine, beautifully darned old linen. Her own people are all gone.

"She was paralyzed ten years ago and her condition reminds me of yours, except that her speech is slightly affected, making it a little hard for strangers to understand her. But Louisa, though old and crippled and alone, she is a power in that town, where many feel and acknowledge her influence."

Mrs. Marlow's eyes closed wearily. The visitor paused. "Are you tired? Shall I go?" she asked.

"No, indeed, don't go, but do change the subject, Ruth. I can't bear to be preached at."

Mrs. Jamison laughed. "You ridiculous girl," she exclaimed. "I'm never preaching—not a sentence. I'm telling you a story of one of the most interesting characters I ever met, and because you would love and admire her if you knew her, I thought you might enjoy hearing about her. Let me tell you, Louisa. It will do you good."

"As I supposed—a motive behind the tale. However, go on. I didn't mean to be rude."

Ruth Jamison took no notice of the air of patient submission her friend assumed, and this was the story she told:

"I heard of Miss Julia on my first afternoon in Trenton. My hostess, Mrs. Crosby, had invited a friend to meet me and at the tea the guest exclaimed over the deliciousness of the rolls. 'They are good,' acknowledged Mrs. Crosby satisfiedly. 'I owe that accomplishment to Miss Julia.' Then she went on to tell how, some years before, she had expressed a wish for a reliable recipe for Parker House rolls in Miss Wentworth's hearing. Months afterward came a note, inclosing the recipe and explaining that the writer had been on the lookout ever since and had just obtained the desired object. 'There have been others, but I couldn't depend on their excellence,' she wrote. 'I know this to be good!' It undoubtedly was, for Mrs. Crosby has used it many times and always successfully.

"The next day I was invited to the home of another friend, where I admired a beautiful sofa cushion, and she told me that Miss Julia had sent her the directions for making it. 'She knew my fondness for such work and she clipped out of a newspaper these instructions. It was entirely new and I am so pleased wtih it.' After that it was an especially pretty afghan, then a dainty dimona and a baby robe. Mrs. Smith declared she owed her success with house plants to the hints and clippings Miss Julia had sent her from time to time; and Mrs. Jones' excellent work-apron was made by Miss Julia's pattern.

"By that time my interest was roused, and I asked Mrs. Crosby if we might call on this much-quoted lady. 'Indeed, we will,' my hostess declared warmly. 'No visit to Trenton would be complete without that interview.'

"We went that afternoon, and Mrs. Crosby left me there while she attended to some errands further down town. The little old lady, looking like a piece of her own Dresden china, sat in a wheel chair before an open desk. Her hands were much misshapen and stiff, but still showed the tapering fingers and delicate mold of the true aristocrat. They were fluttering among her papers as we entered, but she turned to give us cordial welcome.

"The sweet, white face won my heart at a glance—so patient it was, yet cheery, and the snowy waves of hair framed it so beautifully. I told her what I'd come for. 'To get your secret of helpfulness, Miss Wentworth. Everywhere I turn your name is sounded in terms of endearment. How do you do it?'

"Her cheeks flushed like a girl's as she acknowledged my compliment, and we had a talk I shall never forget. She let me ask questions, and she answered them freely. I soon learned to understand her rather difficult speech, about which she was not sensitive. Each phase of her infirmity she seemed to accept as a part of necessary experience and not a hint of complaining did I hear. Have I talked too long, Louisa?"

"No, Ruth; I must hear the rest since you've gone so far. Now for the wonderful secret."

Mrs. Jamison hesitated once more. Facing this querulous invalid, it seemed almost a hopeless task she had set for herself—that of helping Louisa Marlow to find her own posibilities. "After all, there isn't a bit of mystery about it," she began. "It is simply the sweetest, most logical way of making the best of things. Mrs. Crosby told me that in Miss Julia's earlier days of wealth and good living she had been rather reserved and dignified, and people had stood somewhat in awe of her. But in the removal of temporal abundance, and later of wealth, she gradually slipped into her present place in the love of all her friends."

"Yes, but how?" demanded the invalid. "Stating a fact isn't enough if I am to imitate this pink of perfection."

"Who said imitate?" Mrs. Jamison asked laughingly. "Surely, not I."

"Action speak louder than words, my dear, so they say. Don't argue—it tires me and we'd both be of the same opinion afterward."

"Very well. To return to Miss Julia. After her stroke occurred, friends dropping in to call took her magazines and papers to read. Books she can't handle, as nearly all are too heavy. In her reading she noticed, as she had never done in her more active days, how many helpful hints and items there were in all the current publications. 'It seemed a shame to waste them,' she said earnestly. 'So finally I took to cutting them out with a view to using them.' I found use for all I had, so I began keeping a bunch of envelopes in this handy pigeonhole. On the upper right-hand corner of each I mark the name of the friend to whom it shall later be mailed. The postage stamp will cover the mark, you see.

"'Here's Mrs. Crosby's. She's a good cook and she likes to get new ideas. I have a new frozen dessert here for her and a jumble recipe that sounds delicious. This is Mrs. Little's, where the wee new baby lives. Inside is the sweetest poem on motherhood and its joys. I thought of her and the rose-leaf baby girl the instant I saw these lines—aren't they exquisite?' They were, and Miss Julia waited for me to read them before she resumed. 'In this is a leaflet that holds a world of comfort for Miss Benson's heavy heart. She lost her mother last week.

"This fat one goes to Mrs. Moore. She's a new, inexperienced housekeeper and eager to learn. I save all sorts of helpful hints for her—easy ways to do hard things, such as beginners never know.

"'Here's a funny story for Jack Sills. He does enjoy a joke though his own life is a bit somber, poor lad. And a comical cartoon for Dick Wickles. The boys run in to talk things over with me once in a while. I have become quite an authority on politics, if you'll believe it, all because of my search for timely pictures for them.

"'This dear little fairy tale is for Flossy Crawford, and this page of paper dolls for Annabel Gaines. She cuts them out herself and pastes till you'd be surprised at the fine results she gets.

"'The cardboard aeroplane is for Dandy Belt. It occupied one page of a journal Mrs. Thompson sent me, and they claim it will look like the real thing once it is cut out and mounted. Dandy has so few toys and he is an ingenious little fellow. This will be a treasure to him.'

"Ruth, I had that paper myself, and threw that aeroplane into the waste-basket without a thought of Tommy O'Leary. Isn' that a shame?" Mrs. Marlow was sitting erect, and her friend took courage and went on.

"Louisa, I can't remember all. There were newspaper embroidery patterns for one young girl who does dainty needlework and chochet lace directions for another. Bits of helpful advice for boys, friends off at school or items cut from the 'personal columns' of the daily paper. A whole page of 'society' news for a young lady away with a sick grandmother.

"There wasn't an envelope in the lot that held anything unusual—nothing but what any of us could find each week of our lives. Yet you and I, and all the rest of womankind, have been ignoring them, because though 'having eyes, we see not.'"

"I'm afraid it's true, Ruth." Mrs. Marlow's voice was subdued. "Go on."

"Well, that's nearly all. As soon as she mails an envelope she marks another for that friend and slips it into the pigeonhole. Then when she finds items to suit the need of that individual, she clips them out and puts them away. Sometimes they go to strangers who are in sorrow or need. Sometimes a few painfully penciled lines go along, but oftener not.

"There she sits, Louisa, day after day, carrying the needs and desires of friend and acquaintance on her brave heart, meeting those needs and desires as far as her opportunities permit. Love her? The people in Trenton adore that little woman. Her pastor told me with tears in his eyes that he could spare any member of his congregation easier than Miss Julia. 'She is my first assistant in pastoral work, even though she never leaves her house,' he declared, and I agreed with him.

"They go to her for comfort or advice—the young, the tempted, the sorrowful. They carry their love affairs for her blessing and their bereavements for consolation. And it has all come about through what she calls her envelope habit. Who can doubt the love that expresses itself in ways which mean constant and painstaking thoughtfulness? And Louisa, once love is understood, there are few things in the way of good influence that may not follow."

There were tears in Mrs. Marlow's eyes. She looked at her stiffened hands with new vision. Her friend nodded quick assent to the unspoken appeal. "Yes, dear, you could. You are no worse than she, and you are younger. You needn't be left out of things unless you choose, for even the limitations of a wheel chair may be partly overcome by determined self-forgetfulness."

"Ruth, I'm going to try. It sounds so beautiful to be loved and honored in spite of infirmity."

"It is beautiful, Louisa. If you could see Miss Julia you would know it. But dear, her motive is not at all for herself. The love and the honor is a consequence of her own outreaching effort for others—and for God. It is for His glory she rejoices to serve and her influence is surely His gift."

"Thank you, Ruth, I get the lesson."

That she did there could be no doubt. From that day, Mrs. Marlow began to think for others as well as herself, and, before long, for others instead of herself.

Her wheel chair will always be an accompaniment of each effort, but she has almost forgotten that, in her eagerness to be used. "I shall never cease to be thankful to you, Ruth, for Miss Julia's secret," she said one day long after. She sealed an envelope that held a message of good cheer for a heart that needed it.

"Louise, dear, it's your secret," rejoined her friend. "Wherever I go among our friends, Mrs. Marlow is quoted lovingly and traces of her influence are met on all sides. As for thanking me—anybody can tell a story about others, but it isn't everyone who is willing to live it for others."

The invalid reached for a second envelope with hands that trembled. "It's the living for others that makes life worth having for one's self," she said softly, and her friend knew she spoke the truth.—Continent.

Union Chapel, Mocksville Circuit.—It has been some time since the readers of the Herald have received any news from our church. But however silent our church has been I feel that our church is growing spiritually under the pastorate of our dearly beloved pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams. We are getting on fairly well with our Sunday school. The attendance some Sabbaths is 86, 59, and last Sabbath there were only 37 in the classes. Our superintendent was sick last Sabbath and could not be with us.

We are having a prayer service every Sunday night; we are having a good attendance. Bro. Dock Creason held the prayer service last night. It was fine. I am sure he is a man filled with the love of God.

Our special meeting begins the first Sabbath in August with Rev. G. H. Austin as pulpit help. May it be a great revival and ingarnering of many souls.

Bro. Garrett and Miss Alspaugh and some of the children were with us the first Sabbath in June and gave us an exercise; we enjoyed it very much. The children showed that they were well trained by their efficient teacher, Miss Alspaugh. May God bless our Orphan's Home and everybody connected with it, for it's a great and grand work. We took up a collection, which amounted to $10 or $12. I do not remember the exact amount. Hope some time in the future they will come again.

We stewards are not doing very much in regard to collecting our pastor's salary. We beg the people: no money, times are very close. It looks as if the money is all tied up somewhere.

Wheat-threshing is the order of the day now, and we are not displeased over it, as we are hoping to get a little of it for our pastor. Pray for us that God may give us a great and glorious revival, and that we may know more of the word of God and have more of His Spirit in our lives; and with the poet we sing:

"I am thinking today of that beautiful land
I shall reach when the sun goeth down;
When through wonderful grace by my Savior I stand,
Will there be any stars, any stars in my crown?"

With best wishes to all readers of the Herald,

Mrs. J. B. Robertson, Rep.

SINS OF OMISSION.

We are sometimes led to believe that our sins of omission are greater than our sins of commission. We suppose that to every thinking mind who can realize what great value to place upon the proper improvement of our time and talents, the question often arises, Am I living right? Am I discharging faithfully the many obligations that devolve upon me, environed as I am with so many opportunities for making this sinning, sorrowing old world better and happier. And how oft do we realize what a fearful thing it is to live. Dying is only the closing of life's dream. It is not such a sad thing to die, if only we have lived aright. How grand, how glorious to pass from scenes of strife and confusion to be forever with Jesus in the realms of eternal [illegible] But to enjoy that rest we must not [illegible] idle here. There are so many lonely, aching hearts all about us, their burdens so heavy to bear, that we might quickly relieve. There are enemies to forgive and let them know that we have forgiven them freely and fully.

For our probation is short; it will soon be ended and a great man has said, To know the will of God and not do it is unspeakably awful. As a consecrated Christian lady, when she was taken suddenly and severely ill and thought she must soon meet her God face to face, said, she felt that the blood of Jesus had atoned for her sins, but her greatest regret was that she had done so little for the woes of human souls. O, let us tell those about us that there is still a balm in Gilead, that there is still a great physician there ready and waiting to forgive all sins and to heal all our sorrows. Pray for us, dear sisters and brothers, that we may not be scattered, but that we may hold to our profession and ever look to Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, for without him we can do nothing. O how thankful I am for the dear old M. E. brother that God in his goodness and mercy has sent to preach for us every fourth Sunday at 3:30 P. M. He preached a noble sermon last Sunday; his text was in the ninth chapter of Luke: He that putteth his hands to the plow handles, and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom of God. No preaching is as consoling as the M. P. preaching to me, but I try to prove all things and hold fast to that which is good. I know that our dear Father is able to build up Harris's Chapel if all will come to him in faith and love and carry everything to him in prayer, for he is a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God, and he has promised never to leave us nor forsake us and he tells us not to be deceived, for what soever we sow, that shall we reap. If we sow to the spirit we shall reap life everlasting.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from earth to heaven the infant, Harlan Feeman, son of our beloved pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Pritchard;

Whereas, Brother and Sister Pritchard are much loved by their membership and entire town and are ever ready to lend a helping hand, that is, for the good and uplift of humanity, be it

Resolved, First—That we, the members of the Senior Philathea Class, and also the members of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Thomasville, bow to Him who doeth all things well.

Second—That we extend to them our deepest sympathy, praying that God may ever help and bless them.

Third, That a copy oof these resolutions be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald, a copy to the town papers, and one to the bereaved parents; also one spread upon the minutes of our class book.

William Ray.

William Ray was born Dec. 3rd, 1859, in the southern part of Alamance Co., N. C. Died at his home in Graham, on July 13th, 1915. He was married on Oct. 7th, 1877, to Miss Louzena C. Stout. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Mary Ann Guthrie and Miss H. Fannie Ray, of Graham; and one brother, Oliver Ray, and one sister, Mrs. Nancy Jane Moore, both of southern Alamance County.

Bro. Ray berame a Christian in his youthful days, so he lived ever close to God until the Lord called him to his heavenly reward. He was a charter member of Graham M. P. Church. In the loss of this member, Graham church feels deeply that she has lost one of her best members. He was church treasurer, and chairman of the Board of Stewards.

Bro. Ray was a good man, because his steps were ordered by the Lord, and he delighted in his way. He was a member, and a regular attendant, of the Men's Bible Class of Graham M. P. S. S. He did not believe that the Sunday school was an institution for children only, but he responded to the call of the bell just as gladly as did his little grand-children. Bro. Ray read his Bible. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." This wos Bro. Ray's motto in the Sunday school (oh, such a good motto). He was a loyal church member, a faithful steward, a loving husband, a kind father and a good neighbor. The funeral was preached by his pastor, Rev. O. B. Williams, from the texts, Psalms 37: 37, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace"; Numbers 23: 10, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my end be like his." These words were very appropriate; for the end of Bro. Ray's life was peace.

In the presence of his pastor, Bro. Williams, he asked the doctor the following question: "Doctor, is this death?" The doctor replied, "I hardly think so just now." He replied, "If it is, it is welcome! welcome! welcome!" The end of this man was peace, "perfect peace".

The funeral and interment were at Concord M. P. church, in the southern part of Alamance County. The pallbearers were the Board of Stewards of Graham M. P. Church, who are as follows: G. C. Fogleman, H. M. Rodgers, John Webster, Isaac Holt, B. S. Mills, and Jas. Black. The flower bearers were ten little girls. The Concord Church was not large enough to seat the large number of relatives and friends that attended the funeral. Bro. Williams was assisted by Rev. G. W. Holmes, pastor of Saxapahaw Circuit, and Rev. G. L. Curry, of Burlington.

A Friend.

Clemmer-Black.

On Thursday evening, July the first, at the home of the bride's parents in Bessemer City, Mr. Charlie Clemmer and Miss Attie Black were united in marriage. A number of friends of both bride and groom witnessed the solemnization of the event.

Mrs. Clemmer will be missed in her church at Bessemer. She has served very faithfully as steward and has been very regular in attendance. Mr. Clemmer is a member of the Presbyterian church in Gastonia.

In their new relation of life, they have the congratulations and best wishes of many friends. Will H. Neese.

BROTHERHOOD SICK BENEFIT NO. 1.

This week we report two dollars each from T. A. Williams and R. S. Troxler. There are still others, and the secretary is waiting every mail, and hoping it will bring your dues. Brother Raper's needs are increasing rather than growing less. If times are hard with you, ask yourself how much harder it would be with you if you had no work, and were a sick man with an increasing medical bill to meet, and living in a rented house? Why not inconvenience yourself just a bit to meet this urgent need promptly?

J. A. Burgess, Sec. Treas.

Bro. J. Robert Holt, of this city, has been sick for some time. The physician has decided that he has typhoid fever. He seems to be getting on well.

—Miss Adna Dillon has typhoid fever.

—Bro. R. E. Patterson, of Liberty, is recuperating at Wrightsville Beach. We hope he will come back well again.

—Mrs. J. M. Millikan is in the hospital, having undergone an operation. Her early recovery is expected.

—The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference met in 89th session at Elon July 13-15. A full array of fine addresses was promised.

—There is a prospect that the Piedmont Railway and Electric Company will come to Elon College, the College agreeing to sell its town lighting system to them. This will be a distinct gain for the town, because power can be had for manufacturing. The College lighting plant is already taxed to its full capacity. This will eventually mean the extension of the inter-urban electric car lines to Elon.

—Mrs. C. H. Hardin, of Julian, returned home last Sunday after an absence of eight weeks. She had gone to St. Leo Hospital for treatment. She returns home much better though it will take time to effect a complete recovery. Her family were delighted at her return.

—Rev. Dr. Jones, Presbyterian minister living in Greensboro, has three cases of typhoid fever in his family—his wife and two daughters. One of the daughters (aged seventeen) died on Tuesday morning.

WORLD CONFERENCE ON FAITH AND ORDER.

Bulletin No. 9.

Spite of the confusion caused by the European War, the interest in Europe and the East in the promotion of Christian Unity by the World Conference on Faith and Order seems to be steadily increasing. During the last few weeks there have been received copies of a Russian paper with a brief mention of the World Conference and a promise to give further information, a pamphlet from Finland, giving a summary of the publications issued by the Commission of the Episcopal Church, and a copy of "Ein Herr und Ein Glaube" by Dr. Otto Freiherr von und zu Aufsess, of Munich. One of the most eminent Archbishops of the Russian Church has been good enough to send ten dollars toward the expense of the publications and to send also a copy of a pamphlet containing a review by him of the publications about the World Conference, with a classical Russian translation of the three prayers suggested by the Commission of the Episcopal Church for general use. The "Tserkovnia Viedomosti", published by the Holy Governing Synod of Russia, has published articles by Serge Toitzky, explaining and commending the plan of the Conference and urging the participation of the Eastern Churches. Postal cards from Germany and Hungary have lately been received showing continued interest there.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of New Zealand has passed a vote of sympathy and interest in the Conference. The Committee on Co-operation and Unity of the National Missionary Council of India has asked for literature and to be kept in touch with the movement. The Nippon Seikokwai of Japan has appointed a Commission, Bishop Cecil of South Tokyo being Chairman, and he with Bishop McKim and two Japanese clergymen and two Japanese laymen form the Commission.

The Editor of Pharos, the diocesan magazine of the Patriarch of Alexandria, has published a letter from the Secretary of the Episcopal Commission, written nearly a year ago, informing the Patriarch of the then intended visit of a Deputation to explain the proposal to the Churches of Europe and the East, and the Editor has asked for an article explaining the project as fully as possible.

As showing the increasing recognition of the importance of unity, it is interesting to see the progress that is being made in the United States by the great Methodist bodies, North and South, toward restoring their union, and that three important Norwegian Synods, namely, the Norwegian Synod in America, the Hague Norwegian Lutheran Synod and the Norwegian United Lutheran Synod, are considering union.

The Manual of Prayer for Unity, which has been for some time in preparation, has now been issued. It will be sent free to all whose names are on the mailing list of the Commission of the Episcopal Church and single copies may be had free by applying to the Secretary of that Commission, Robert H. Gardiner, P. O. Box 1153, Gardiner, Maine.

The Southern Baptist Convention, which has been appointing a Commission from year to year, has now, in view of the importance of the World Conference and of the increasing prospects of its proving of value, appointed a standing Commission which will consist of its President and two Secretaries.

The Advisory Committee, consisting of one or more members appointed by each of the Commissions to keep in touch and consult with the Executive Committee of the Episcopal Commission, now represents almost every quarter of the globe and is preparing to take an active share in the preparations for the Conference.

"DO YOU BELIEVE THEY THINK I AM LOST?"

I shall never, as long as I live, forget a scene which I witnessed several years ago. I left the tent where we were holding meetings in Paris, Ill., one night, and among the number who left last was a young man to whom I was especially attracted by his fine looks. I walked down the street with him, and put to him the invariable question, "Are you a Christian?"

He said, "No, sir, I am not."

Then I used every Scripture and every argument to get him to promise me to give his heart to God, but could not succeed. When about to separate, I said to him, "Are your father and mother alive?"

"Both alive," said he.

"Is your father a Christian?"

"Don't know; has been a steward in the church for several years."

"Is your mother a Christian?"

"Don't know; has been superintendent of the Sunday school of the same church for some time."

"Have you a sister?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is she a Christian?"

"Don't know; she has the primary department in the Sabbath school."

"Do your father and mother ever ask the blessing at the table?"

"No, sir."

"Did your father, mother or sister ever ask you to be a Christian?"

"Mr. Sunday, as long as I can remember, my father or mother or sister never said a word to me about my soul. Do you believe they think I am lost?"

I could not answer such arguments, and I can hear his words still ringing in my ears, "Do you believe they think I am lost?"

Could not many of our loved ones, our neighbors and our friends, take up this cry against us today: "Do they act as though they think we are lost?—W. A. Sunday, in "The Episcopal Recorder."

ASKING AND EXPECTING.

We are told that in one place the Saviour himself could do no mighty works because of their unbelief. How often today do we deprive ourselves of blessings which are waiting to descend upon us, but which are prevented by our own unbelief! In the following story we can see how the faith of two children brought an answer to their prayer.

In a miserable cottage at the bottom of a hill two children hovered over a smouldering fire. A tempest raged without, against which man and beast were alike powerless. A poor old miser, much poorer than those shivering children, though he had heaps of money at home, drew his ragged cloak about him as he crouched at the threshold of the miserable door. He dared not enter, lest they might ask him for alms, and he could not move for the storm.

"I am hungry, Nettie."

"So am I: I've hunted for some potato parings, and can't find any."

"What an awful storm."

"Yes, the old tree has been blown down. I guess God took care that it didn't fall on the house. It would certainly have killed us."

"If He could do that, couldn't He send us some bread?"

"I guess so; let's pray 'Our Father,' and when we have prayed that part about 'bread,' stop until we get some."

So they began, and the miser, crouching and shivering, listened. When they paused, expecting in their childish faith to see some miraculous manifestation, a human feeling stole into his withered heart.

He had bought a loaf in the village, thinking it would last him some days, but the silence of the two little children spoke loudly to him. He opened the door softly, threw in the loaf, and closing it, listened to the wild, eager cry of delight uttered by the half-famished little ones. Can any one wonder that the children believed "it dropped right from heaven?"—African's Friend.

WHEN PAPA WAS A LITTLE BOY.

"When papa was a little boy
You really couldn't find
In all the State of Washington
A child so quick to mind.
His mother never called but once,
And he was always there;
He never made the baby cry,
Or pulled his sister's hair.

"He never slid down balusters,
Or made the slightest noise;
And never in his life was known
To fight with other boys.
He always studied hard at school,
And got his lessons right;
And chopping wood and milking cows
Were papa's chief delight.

"He never grumbled when he had To do the evening chores,
And ne'er in all his life forgot
To shut the stable doors.
He never, never thought of play
Until his work was done,
He labored hard from break of day
Until the set of sun.

"He never scraped his muddy shoes
Upon the parlor floor,
And never answered back his ma,
And never banged the door.
But truly I could never see,"
Said little Dick Malloy,
"How he could never do these things
And really be a boy."

VACATIONS THAT DO NOT REFRESH.

Many people stop work, go off to the mountains or seashore, and come back worse off than when they started, some of them positively sick. We had observed this, and our observation was concurred in by a physician with whom we talked recently. He said he had been called to prescribe for people whose sickness was brought on by their summer vacation.

This should not be so. It does not prove that rest is not a good thing; it does not prove that it is not well sometimes to take a vacation. But it does indicate that many people do not know how to use a vacation when they get one; or if they know how, that they have not the moral force to carry out a sane and wise program.

Vacations should be periods of recreation,—not of dissipation. Wearied nerve and brain should be allowed to rebuild themselves into strength to endure the strain of life's necessary tasks. But many a one takes a vacation to be a time for unusual and nerve-racking excitement, a time for late hours, little sleep and much eating. Such people find, not refreshing and health in their vacations, but weariness and often positive physical injury. Better for such would it be if they had no vacation.

NEW EDITION OF LUTHER'S WORKS.

Martin Luther wrote much and has been much written about. A British museum catalogue contains about seven thousand titles of books and pamphlets written by him or about him. But Luther is a character of perennial interest, especially to Protestants, and the present generation will gladly study his life as preceding generations have studied it. But Luther can best be learned through his own writings, revealing as they do the growth of his mind and the progress of his views regarding the great religious questions that interest every earnest and devout spirit. Few English readers have sufficient acquaintance with the languages in which Luther wrote (Latin and German) to read his writings in the original, and few have sufficient time to go through all of his voluminous works. It is therefore a great service that the Messrs. A. J. Holman Company of Philadelphia have rendered to English readers in having prepared a translation into English of the most important selected portions of Luther's works—enough to make ten volumes. This work has been done by a group of scholarly Lutheran pastors, living near each other and working together.

We have examined the first volume, a book of 411 pages, and found it filled with matter of great interest and revealing Luther's mind and heart as well as the mind and heart of his time. The honesty of the man Luther is so apparent and his love of truth so clearly the motive of his action that we cannot but fall in with him and go with him to the conclusions which make him the great reformer.

This first volume contains treatises by Luther on Indulgences, on Baptism, on Confession, on Consolation, on Good Works, on the New Testament, on the Papacy at Rome, each with an illuminating introduction by one of the Lutheran pastors.

This set of books will make a quite helpful addition to any preacher's library or to that of any layman who wishes to be intelligent in the history of religious thought and to understand our own time and be ready to take a stand in the conflict never ending between truth and error.

RESPONSE OF REV. T. J. OGBURN.

Dear Brother McCulloch:—

Please convey to the prayer meeting of Grace Church, Greensboro, this expression of my heartfelt appreciation of the fraternal greetings conveyed to me in The Herald of July 29th. These greetings are to me a beautiful rift in the clouds, like "the clear shining after rain," and will, with the kindness shown me at the recent Summer Conference, and by the pastor and friends at Bethel church on the occasion of my semi-centennial sermon last Sunday, cheer and brighten all my remaining days. May Grace church and its pastor and all its members always prosper in every good word and work.

Very sincerely,

T. J. Ogburn.

—The editor spent last Sunday with Bro. Johnson and the Tabernacle peoeple, the occasion being the beginning of their special meeting. There were large and attentive congregations. Bro. Curry was expected on Monday. He had already sent cards for signers to pledge help in various weeks or to ask for help. These were distributed by the pastor who pleaded earnestly for the co-operation of the people in the work of the meeting. It is sometimes hard to get people to move because they don't realize how much they can do, having never tried. This meeting will be a good one, if by it the people are made more active workers, as that will give promise of future results. But we hope to hear of present results. There are swarms of young people at Tabernacle now, as well as some that are older, who need the impulse and inspiration of a stirring revival of religion. May this be the time when it will come.

A CAMPAIGN OF PROGRESS.

Conditions in the Methodist Proteestant Church are very favorable at this time to a general forward movement, and to the progressive development of our various enterprises and institutions. In all conferences and congregations, in every group of workers for the Master, in every loyal heart of all our two hundred thousand people, with exceptions so rare at least as to throw the happy fact into yet stronger relief, there is a readiness to press onward in the widening paths of duty to the goal of higher achievement. Everywhere among the people of our church there is a new manifestation; a wholesome discontent, a splendid impatience with themselves for not having done better service in the Lord's vineyard, a determination not to be satisfied with anything that falls short of their highest possibilities; a restless spirit, which betokens, not disobedience, but loyalty, a spirit born of the vision of opportunity, on the mountain of the Lord's house, and possessed of longings which can not be satisfied, save only in the privilege of doing larger things for the kingdom of God.

The young people of our denomination are keenly responsive to this challenge of the new age, and they are marshaled by tens of thousands under brave banners, in the very front ranks of the army of the Lord, ready and alert, looking straight ahead, marking time and waiting for the bugle call. Therefore, "speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward!"

The progressive development of the Methodist Protestant Church calls for a forward movement on three parallel lines: educational, missionary, and evangelistic. And while such a revival of interest in these great provinces of the kingdom would naturally bring results far beyond the scope of calculation, we should nevertheless set before ourselves certain tasks and undertake to compass certain definite achievements. In the field of missions and of education, we shoud propose to ourselves, first of all, the simple but lofty aim of raising for the ensuing year the whole round sum of the apportionment fixed and adopted for these great fields of Christian enterprise. In the province of evangelism, using that term in its broadest sense as including all the spiritual activities and influences of the church that reach out after the unsaved, we should aim for at least a net increase of ten per cent. in the active membership of the denomination during the coming year. And, beginning in the early fall, the progress of this forward movement will be announced in the church papers, at brief intervals; and every possible agency and influence must be invoked for the realization of the highest ideals of the Methodist Protestant Church. Our people will respond unitedly, and with a spirit of self-consecration and of self-sacrifice to this appeal of opportunity. Our every circle of authority and of influence, through the conferences and the congregations, out to the remotest borders of our Zion, will enter cheerfully and hopefully into this campaign of progress, and splendid results will follow to the glory of God and the upbuilding of our beloved church.

The final fruitage of such a movement depends upon the faithful application of methods and agencies already constituted, rather than upon the invention of new devices or the enactment of new laws; and indeed the people of the Methodist Protestant Church are not such as need to be bound or limited, or circumscribed, or hedged about, or much-governed. Our people are such as need only to be released from hindering forces and given room for their race, tools for their vineyard, weapons for their warfare, and wings for reaching now and again, with all the children of liberty in all the ages, their mount of vision and of hope. But, nevertheless, for the conservation of the heritage already ours, and for the constructive work necessary to the progressive development which every true family of the faith must honestly covet, there are certain readjustments of our polity, in its administrative functions, which, in the judgment of many, would add very greatly to our usefulness as a denomination. Neither these suggested changes, nor this forward movement as a whole. will displace any church union to which we are obligated, but will rather prepare us all the better for every duty and every destiny to which the Lord may call us.

After prayerful study of our whole denominational field, and largely as an interpretation of the sentiment of our people as well as of their conference leaders, we venture the following suggestions:

First. Our Methodist Protestant Church needs a general educational board, with functions clearly defined by the General Conference; this board not to displace the separate organizations now directing our educational institutions, but to assist and supplement their work by an authoritative appeal to the whole church in behalf of our whole educational system, and to see that our several educational units are correlated the one to the other, and each of them to the whole denomination.

Second. The missionary activities of the Methodist Protestant Church should be directed by a General Board of Home and Foreign Missions, the separate executive functions of this board to be performed respectively through a superintendent of home missions and a superintendent of foreign missions; these two executive officers, now designated as secretaries, to be relieved of all clerical duties, that they may devote themselves entirely to the great twofold mission of surveying the field of opportunity, and of inspiring the church to occupy both at home and abroad her missionary land of promise.

Third. The evangelistic forces of the Methodist Protestant Church should be supervised through some agency especially created by that body, or by means of special rules operating through the several annual conferences; to the end that the seal of approval may be clearly set upon the worthy ministers of our denomination who have consecrated themselves to this great province of the kingdom, and that our churches everywhere may be safeguarded against such as promulgate heresy under the guise of evangelism.

Fourth. For reasons of economy and efficiency, the clerical work of all the general boards of the denomination should be performed in the one central office, the location to be designated by the General Conference.

Fifth. The progressive development of the Methodist Protestant Church requires that the smaller annual conferences of the west and the south shall have the same organic efficiency as the older conferences, including the benefits of the traveling presidency. Certain conferences could be grouped or united for this purpose, if necessary, and, in all conferences, the traveling presidency should be supported by an active church extension society, this extension society to be so correlated to the home mission work of the denomination as to open avenues of sympathy and help between the stronger centers and the needy fields of our denomination.—Editor of Methodist Recorder.

UNION OF METHODISM FROM A COLORED MAN'S STANDPOINT.

Doubtless there is no matter of more importance before the church at this time than the question of the union of the two great Methodist bodies; and equally true is it that no section of either body is more interested in this question than is the Negro membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for it is an open secret that he is perhaps the greatest obstacle to such a union. The fact of its peculiar interest to Negroes, together with their equal right with other members of the church to express their views with reference to any problem with which the church is concerned, give adequate excuse to any man of color in our church for venturing to put into print a contribution which he feels he has to make to this subject. And now to the question before us.

In the abstract I am sure there is no question on the part of anybody in either church as to the desirability of the union. Who could object to that and still claim the name of Christian? It was exceedingly unfortunate that the differences in opinion in 1844 were so great as to necessitate a separation; and everybody in each church should lend all possible aid to the healing of the breach that was occasioned in those days of both church and state. In this desire to heal the breach and arrive at a fraternal understanding that will permit of organic union between these two great branches of Methodism, the Negro is not one whit behind his white brother. It is only a part of the larger national movement in the attempt of the North and South to wipe out sectional differences and become one country in thought and ideals.

That this movement is succeeding so splendidly is a cause for sincere gratification on the part of every loyal American. No one welcomes this more than the discerning Negro, nor will any one be more benefited than he, in the truest sense, if the movement towards this mutual understanding is a normal and healthy one rather than of the mushroom order; for the Negro has sincere friends in both sections of the country who simply need to come to a clear comprehension of their relation to him and his to them.

The situation in our nation is paralleled in our church, and the Negro has the same attitude towards both; he is as desirous as any of them can be that the white elements in church and state arrive at a mutual understanding of each other. He is as eager for union as any, because he, too, wants to advance the kingdom, and feels that, other things being equal, this can be done better by a united than a divided Methodism.

But our problem is not in the abstract attitude toward unity, for there is common agreement there, but in the concrete putting of our desire for union into operation. The proposition most generally discussed at this time is the one submitted to us by the Methodist Church South, by action of its General Conference in May, 1914: That the two churches unite on the basis of four General Conference jurisdictions—one colored and three white.

That the Negro membership is in favor of union on this basis may be easily seen in the action of a representative body of this membership assembled at Nashville, Tenn., where the convention almost unanimously endorsed this proposition. The same thing might be seen in the action of the Mississippi and Washington Conferences in endorsing it by large votes. The Negro is heartily in favor of the union as proposed, for he sees a chance for the exercise of that initiative on his part without which no people can hope to "arrive," and at the same time to be a part of what would be the greatest Protestant communion in the world in its work of preaching the Christ to all sorts and conditions of men. The Negro favors in principle the proposition submitted by the Church South. If the South is sincere, and our church is satisfied—and the Negro membership is certainly satisfied with the proposition as far as it understands it—the question of union ought to be merely the working out of the details of the union by a commission.

But just here has been raised an issue by some in our own church that seems to us a fundamental one. That is, the colored membership is being made to wonder if what is most desired by the leaders of our church is not the withdrawal of its colored membership. Take the masterly address of our senior Bishop Cranston at a meeting of the Boston Social Union recently. In his address, reported in Zion's Herald, he gave the clear intimation that the withdrawal of the Negroes would greatly simplify matters and, may we presume, correspondingly relieve the church. He was kind enough to say, however, that in the matter of withdrawing the Negro would be allowed to take the initiative. Again, take a recent editorial in the Philadelphia Methodist Times, the editor says among other things: "Difficulties there are, and the black man is the greatest of all. If he would eliminate himself and incorporate himself with other branches of colored Methodists into one great Negro Methodist Episcopal Church, the chief difficulty would disappear immediately."

Statements like these, any number of which may be found in the numerous articles which are being written on the subject make us wonder if the leaders of our church, having tired of us, are determined to make life so miserable for us that we shall be forced to withdraw, despite the South's apparent willingness to accept us as a part of the union. It is this evident program that we object to most decidedly.

To explain our opposition to being thrown out of the church of our choice is not always easy to do, because it subjects us to the charge of being lacking in self-respect. In a recent contribution on this subject in Zion's Herald there was the statement: "The self-respecting Negroes do not want to be a part of the Methodist Church, but simply ask to sustain a friendly and brotherly relation to the church, such as the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church sustains to the Southern Methodist Church now." Taking it for granted that the writer is sincere in this belief, and not using this as a means of coercing us into doing what he wants done, and remembering that there may be others who sincerely feel as he expressed himself, it may not be inappropriate to call attention to a few facts.

In the first place, there is acommon erroneous impression that the Negro membership is a kind of adjunct to the white membership of the church, that the white membership is the church proper, while the Negro membership is a loosely connected, useless annex. There is no question as to the fact that the white membership constituted the original unit, no question as to its primacy being continued indefinitely, because of superior intelligence and superior numbers; but the fallacy ought to be exploded forever that the white membership is any more truly a part of the church, so far as its theory and polity is concerned, than is any other race element in the church. The Negro, like the white man, was either born into the membership of the church or, having been invited, accepted the invitation and came into its membership, and has a right to stay there, provided he obeys its laws, as long as an other man. To say that he is not self-respecting because he wants to remain in the church of his choice is, to say the least, unkind, and even unchristian.

The question usually overlooked in the discussion of this problem is: What is to be the effect of the proposed union on the world program of Methodism? It is doubtless assumed that a united Methodism could do a larger work along the same lines as it has been doing. It most certainly can if it follows the program of its peerless founder: "The world is my parish," or, better still, that of our Master, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The question at issue is: Will the union leave room for the incorporation into its membership of all races, or will it simply be a colossal Protestant organization having only the white race in its membership? This question as to the future program of the church is of far more importance than the effect of being driven from the church can possibly be on the Negro.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has swept on like a prairie fire, impossible to check, because it had a message to all sorts and conditions of men. Shall the great church now narrow that message and say it has a message to white men alone? That is what it says when it deliberately drives its colored membership from its ranks. The glory of the old church has been its work in China, India, Korea, and Africa. Will the church deliberately set forth a program that will ultimately exclude all these alien peoples from her membership? To drive the colored membership out is equivalent to saying to Bishop Hartzell that his Christian statesmanship on the vast continent of Africa was simply a work of supererogation; we humbly retire in the face of the Mohammedan onslaught, not because we are beaten but because we have no place in our communion for men of that hue and race. The same would ultimately have to be said to Bishops Lewis and Bashford in China and to all our workers among alien races.

As to union and the proposition submitted, we are enthusiastically committed to it if it means to leave us our richest heritage as Methodists—our world-wide program; anything other we must oppose. Let no one delude himself into believing that with the Negro it is simply concern for his material welfare, for whether in the church or forced out the Negro will get along somehow. Let there be more concern about the future program of the dear old church; and let us see to it that our union be not "One-at-any-price," but a union for a larger, fuller, truer expression of our common humanity.—Rev. Willis J. King, Boston, in Zion's Herald.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The Executive Committee of the Methodist Protestant Church met in regular annual session in Baker's Chapel on the campus of Western Maryland College at 10 o'clock, A. M., July 21, 1915.

Members of the Committee present: Rev. L. E. Davis, D. D., Pittsburgh; Rev. D. C. Coburn, D. D., Ohio; Rev. W. W. Lineberry, D. D., Ind.; Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., Md.; Mr. F. F. Brierly, Penn.; and R. T. Pickens, N. C. Mr. T. E. Hodges, the other member of the Committee, was not present.

Dr. C. E. Sheppard, of the Muskingum Conference, and Dr. J. C. Broomfield, of the West Virginia Conference, were the only visiting presidents. Their presence was greatly appreciated, and they were important factors in the meeting. Drs. Klein, Beck, and Brown were present, representing their respective Boards. Dr. Tagg and Mr. Pierpont made reports of the Publishing Houses. Dr. G. W. Haddaway, President of the Board of Young People's Work, made report therefor. The reports from Adrian, West Lafayette, and Tehuacana Colleges were read, Dr. Sheppard presenting that of West Lafayette. Dr. Lewis was the only president making report in person. Dr. Elderdice reported the work and condition of the Seminary.

The reports generally showed progress, and the several departments of the church are as efficient and aggressive as the financial system warrants. Along this line the Committee hopes to work out a plan that will merit the approval of the General Conference.

The college and church school question is an important one before the Committee, and the discussions are always striving to evolve a plan to save the schools, and, through them, the young people to the church. Personally I think a more universal church loyalty at this time would prove to be a prime factor in solving these problems. If our denominational love and pride could reach beyond our own front gates, and proceed more on the co-operative plan amongst ourselves as a great denomination, the gaps would soon be filled up.

The reports of the publishing houses were gratifying, except in the newspaper department, where the Methodist Protestant and the Recorder are run at a loss. The patronage is not sufficient to meet the expenses. In view of this fact the Committee hears with regret that several local papers are springing up in different sections of the church. After an extended discussion of this question the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, information has been brought to our attention that local church papers have been started in West Virginia, Alabama and Texas, therefore resolved,

That we discourage all such movements for the reason that they interfere with the circulation of the official organs of the church. We believe that we should give our undivided support to the papers already established and published by the authority of the General Conference, and thus conserve more fully and extend further the interests of the Kingdom of Christ and of the Methodist Protestant Church through the influence of religious periodicals. That the secretary of the Executive Committee be required to send a copy of this resolution to the owners of the said local papers, and also publish same with his report of this meeting in the official papers of the church." (The secretary would be glad to get the addresses of these apers.)

The budget for all the general purposes of the church was made the same as last year, and the apportionments to the annual conferences will appear in tabulated form in the church papers as official information to the conferences. The plan of official visitations of the Secretary-Treasurers of the several Boards was adopted and will be published.

Believing that a broader fraternal relation would be fostered thereby, the Chairman and Secretary were directed to formally request the stronger annual conferences to send fraternal messengers to the adjoining or near by smaller conferences. Of course these delegates should bear a message of helpfulness and co-operation. Herein lies a large field of usefulness that may be appropriated and conserved in this way.

The question of selecting the place for the meeting of the next General Conference was postponed. There was one application presented. If there is a congregation that aspires to the distinction of entertaining this representative body of the church next May, a letter to President Davis will put that church in line for promotion. Unless such invitations are received the Committee will have to proceed to negotiate terms for entertainment. Annual Conferences might take this item of expense into consideration in electing and providing for their representatives.

With a hearty vote of appreciation for sumptuous entertainment by Drs. Elderdice and Lewis while we were in their midst, the meeting adjourned with prayer by Dr. Haddaway.

ITEMS FROM HENDERSON GOLD LEAF.

Children's Day exercises were held at the M. P. Church in Henderson last Sunday morning.

Rev. R. D. Wiliams, of High Point, is giving the people of Union Chapel and Gillburg some splendid sermons this week.

Miss Ada Pruett, who is visiting Mrs. N. G. Bethea, spent the past week end with Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Harris at Middleburg.

A series of meetings is in progress at Gillburg this week. Rev. N. G. Bethea preached an interesting sermon to that congregation Monday night.

The farmers are all wearing a smile over the good crop prospects; the children are feasting on watermelons and fruits, and the ladies are busy canning.

The M. P. Sunday school held its annual picnic at Mt. Carmel church last week. They had sack races for men and boys and jumping the rope and other games for the girls. The boys went to Falkner's pond and had a fine time swimming. A bountiful dinner was spread on a large table in the grove and served with lemonade and ice cream. All who attended declared the picnic was a great success.

MAKING FALL POTATOES.

This is my plan for planting the fall crop of Irish potatoes. If you take your seed from the spring planting, take the Early Bliss, as they seem to be more reliable than the Cobbler. Take the small potatoes and spread them in a shady place in the garden, or elsewhere; spread on the ground and cover with straw and old sacks, sprinkle with water and keep them moist for a week or ten days. By this time you will see the sprouts on such as will grow. Plant the whole potato. If you should use seed which has been held in cold storage you can cut these into four pieces, if they have eyes sufficient, determining this by the same preparation as recommended for the seed from the spring crop.

Break your land deep and harrow until you have a fine seed bed, then run off your rows three feet apart. Run twice in the same furrow in order to get your seed deep in the ground. Apply well rotted barn manure, enough to nearly fill your furrow, first having dropped your seed in the bottom of the furrow.

Potatoes like potash, and the best source to get it is from hardwood ashes. Give a liberal supply and some more. Give 400 pounds of 16 per cent. acid phosphate and 100 ounds of soda per acre. I have never seen land too rich for the Irish potato.

Cover lightly as soon as the potatoes come up, work the earth to them until you have a ridge above the middle of the row. Do your work fast, and if you have only a small patch, mulch with straw eight or ten inches, not to conserve moisture, but to protect the roots from cold.

With a mild winter the potato will make through the winter. I am in the 35th degree of latitude, and have had them to make long after the frosts had killed the tops down. Remember, the potato is a cool weather crop, so do not make the mistake of planting too early. You make nothing and lose much by planting in midsummer. July is entirely too early. August is early enough for us. I would rather plant in September than July.

Under proper conditions the potato matures rapidly. We have potatoes all the year around, and all others in our latitude could do likewise if they would meet conditions. Eighteen to twenty inches is close enough to drop potatoes in the row. By T. J. Watkins, in Southern Ruralist.

NOT PULLING FODDER.

It is astonishing to see how many so-called up-to-date farmers still cling to the old method of pulling fodder, when they know that it is injuring their corn to a large extent by making it lighter in weight, securing far less feed, and also of a much less nutritious value when compared to making use of the whole stalk.

I have found out from experience (always our best teacher) that unless we let the corn stand until the shuck on the ear is little more than onehalf dry before pulling off the fodder, the grain will always shrink, thereby causing it to be much lighter in weight; though if we allow it to stand until in the above condition, one-half of the fodder on the lower part of the stalk will be fired or burnt up, which is no good at all for feeding purposes, as burnt fodder is perfectly valueless, having no nutritious quality whatever.

Where one has much replanted corn, not any of this will amount to much when we use the method of pulling fodder, because when the old or first planted corn is ready the replanted is not nearly ready to have the fodder pulled, therefore the grain is bound to be injured to a large extent. There is also a great risk to run in pulling fodder, as we often have it almost cured when there happens to come a wind and heavy rain storm, making it absolutely worthless except for the manure heap. So take our advice (which is from experience) the coming season and don't pull your fodder, but instead cut the corn down, which you will find far more profitable in every way when handled properly.

We find that the proper condition for the corn to be cut is when the shuck on the ear first begins to turn brown. In this way enough growing strength will be left in the green stalk to fully mature the grain by the time all is cured. Have the corn put up in medium sized shocks and tie tightly around the top with binder's twine. Have it shredded if you have enough to justify hiring a machine. If not, house it when thoroughly cured, and cut up before feeding with a hand cutter made for that purpose. This makes fine feed for stock, and what they do not consume will act for bedding, making the finest kind of manure when trampled down by them and mixed with their droppings. So cut the corn down always, and save all of its feeding value and other benefits derived therefrom.—Wm. Hart Harrison, in Southern Ruralist.

WHAT IS THE GREAT METHOD?

Individual work, after all, is the great method of the soul-winner, and all these plans turn upon the willingness of the workers to win souls one by one; often in systematic, united effort; often quite apart from any set plan; but always and everywhere seizing the golden opportunities of the Sunday school workers' high privilege in dealing with precious souls in what is usually the most critical period of the soul's experience—the years of youth.

EXAMINATION PAPER HUMOR.

"The source of food supply in England is in ships." Here is a "schoolboy howler" which turns out to be an important fact—and one which has been well illuminated by recent events, says the Philadelphia Ledger. It is timely information, too, that "to germinate is to become a naturalized German." From the same source—the class in civil goverment—we receive the reminder that "the president takes the yoke of office."

The joke is on us. For, to quote a schoolboy, "The press today is the mouth-organ of the people." Which, in phraseology, suggests another boy's description of how the cavalry swept over "the eyebrow of the hill."

The reader is earnestly requested not to apply the Salic law to this compilation: "The Salic law is that you must take everything with a grain of salt." Many of these "howlers" are taken from the notebook of the writer, who had experience as a high-school teacher. It should be added for the sake of the boys that some of the howlers were written by girls.

Now let us begin with the class in civil government.

"I don't nnow anything about the constitution, as I was born in Kansas."

"The minority is composed of the minors."

"The spoils system: The place where spoiled things and waste are kept. The board of health has largely taken the place of this."

"An ex post facto law is one that gives officers a right to go to foreign countries and get criminals, dead or alive, and take them back to the place when the crime was committed. It is a law where the crimes of the father descend to his children; they are punished for him."

"Benjamin Franklin is the founder of electricity."

"George Washington was a land savory."

"Lord Raleigh was the first man to see the invisible Armada."

"Tennyson wrote 'In Memorandum.'"

"Tennyson also wrote a poem called 'Grave's energy.'"

"Louis XVI. was gelatined during the French revolution."

"Ben Johnson is one of the three highest mountains of Scotland."

"George Eliot left a wife and children to mourn his genli."

"Henry I. died of eating palfreys."

"Caesar was a king and went high up on a mountain."

"Lincoln had a woman make him a suit of homespun from rails which he had split. They were hickory rails, hence hickory shirts."

"Franklin produced electricity by rubbing cats backwards."

"Where poisoning by acids is caused the blood should be immediately drawn from the bruises to send back the acid."

"If a schoolroom is without ventilation how are the pupils to study with the fowl air pressed down upon them; it makes them oftentimes sick and inclined to laziness."

"The blood vessels are the veins, arteries and artilleries."

You might think from these quotations that the brain really is "a soft bunch covered with wrinkles." Or perhaps your conclusion would agree with this. "The bones of the blood are the cerebrum, the cerebellum and other small bones."

"Reflex action is when anything is turning in one direction and it turns in the other."

The man who eats too fast or too well may be interested to know that "the heart is located in the left part of the stomach in a loose membrane sack."

"A deacon is the lowest kind of Christian."

"May day commemorates the landing of the Mayflower."

"The Boxers were Corbett, Fitsimmons and Bill Johnson."

"A renegade is a man who kills a king."

"In India a man out of cask may not marry a woman out of another cask."

"The Pharisees were people who liked to show off their goodness by praying in synonyms."

"Modern conveniences: Incubators and fireless telegraphy."

"A lie is an aversion to the truth."

THE REST OF THE SOUL.

Whether the summer leads us far afield or constrains us to stay in our own places and face familiar tasks, there is one source of rest which is open to us all—the rest of the soul. This is always our master need. The most searching wearinesses are those which numb the springs of eager and radiant action; the most blessed rest reaches and recharges the inner hiding places of power. Strange lands and storied cities and all communion with the spirit of beauty do their perfect work if they reestablish faith and hope and joy in their places of administration. The deep and abiding gains of happy summer experiences will be secured only as we discern beneath the swing of ocean tides the unfailing tides of God's love and care, find his help in the hills, his healing in green pastures, and his shepherding by still waters.

But there is also a rest which works from the inside out. Lassitude and nerve tension disappear before the thrill of new spiritual impulses, and a serene and restored soul will set the whole house of its habitation in order. The ministers of such a rest as this are never far from any one of us. You may find the springs of spiritual healing in home and office, and city streets may lead us to the hills of help.

Duty is one of these ministers of rest. Neglected duties pursue and haunt us, cloud the fairest landscape, and scorn the sundering spaces of the sea; but duty uncomplainedly rendered is a strength-bringing comrade. Her commendations make us forget our weariness; her gifts of power and contentment compensate for the loss of many lesser things. So much the more when duty is the servant of love. There is a recompense in the gratitude of those whom we serve which makes us free of His secret from whom weariness fell as a garment at the call of any need and who had bread to eat the world knew not of.

The rest of the soul is to be found in our sense of true values. Friendship, sympathy, happiness in simple things, the laughter of little children, flowers and grasses, the spaces of the sky though seen through city streets, the rising and setting suns, the far tranquility of marching constellations, the ministration of books, and the like constitute our enduring wealth. And they are to be had at a price we are all able to pay. There is a vicious circle which begins in the pursuit of pleasure that does not please and wealth that does not enrich, and returns to its point of departure through Europe and summer hotels and rest cures which we shall escape only through an emancipating sense of what is worth while in mind, body and estate.

There is a rest of the soul in going bravely about our business in the face of difficult or challenging conditions. While we weary ourselves with sterile anxieties and the fretful criticism of social and political conditions, harvests are being gathered, corn is growing, and the minstrant seasons pursue their blessed and appointed courses. A confidence which looks for its wages or its dividends to seedtime and harvest and brotherly interchange of effort for the satisfaction of human need is never disappointed.

A vast deal of our physical weariness is the outcome of strains and tensions which are really rooted in the want of confidence in such blessed and unfailing realities—in the lack of trust in God. He is the true sanctuary of the soul's rest. It counts, our sense of the Unseen and Eternal. The channels by which his healing tides reach our weary or troubled spirits have many names— Duty, Truth, Love, Rest, Work, Waking, Sleeping, Joy, Sorrow—at home or afar. How he reaches us does not greatly matter; the main thing is that some new sense of a power beyond ourselves should come in to heal, exalt, and sustain us.

"I take great comfort in God," says Lowell in one of his wise and whimsical sentences. "I do not believe that he would allow his children to play with matches if he did not know that the framework of the universe were fireproof." A spiritual serenity so secured is the true secret of unfailing power. It will work from the inside out, take the tension out of protesting nerves, lend new elasticity to wearied muscles, and bring tired bodies strength enough for the day—and something more. It will check our undue haste, quiet fretful voices, clothe strained faces with a new expression, spread abroad the strength and security of brotherhood, and secure for us the peace and power for which our souls are longing.—G. G. A., in the Congregationalist.

HISTORY.

The Doctrine of Mutual Rights was first advocated in Alabama in the early twenties. About 1823 a class was in a partial organization in Autaga county. In 1827-28 quite a number of churches were organized in Perry, Butler, Autaga and Macon counties. The first Alabama Conference was held May 1, 1829. It was presided over by Rev. Britton Capel, Seymore Powell, secretary. The following September a second conference was held and the organization was complete and all the work laid off. It convened near Smith's Ferry in Perry county. Rev. Peyton Bibb was one of the prominent preachers, and helped in organizing the Methodist Protestant Church, as also did B. S. Bibb, Abner McGee, Rev. Britton Capel and others.—Alabama Methodist Protestant..

BUTTERMILK CHEESE.

(From Office of Dairy Experimentation, West Raleigh, N. C.)

Where only a few pounds of cheese is to be made at a time the fresh buttermilk, without further treatment, should be heated to 140 degrees or higher for thirty minutes. After standing from fifteen to thirty minutes it should be taken up in a dipper or skimmer. It should be allowed to drain in a cheese cloth bag for one to four hours or it may be immediately squeezed dry. The cheese should be salted to taste or at the rate of one ounce of salt to 5 pounds of cheese.

Buttermilk cheese is a sanitary food product, having about the same food value, pound for pound, as lean beef steak.

Good cheese cannot be made by the heating method from buttermilk which is too sour for drinking purposes.

In addition to ordinary cleanliness in its manufacture the buttermilk used is heated to a pasteurizing temperature sufficient to kill disease germs such as those producing tuberculosis, typhoid fever and dysentery.

Buttermilk cheese in the household may be eaten alone or like cottage cheese, mixed with cream and seasoned with salt and pepper.

On account of its smooth texture, it can be spread on bread like butter and thus used in sandwiches either with or without butter.

HONORABLE MENTION WELL DESERVED.

The church at Renrock, on Renrock charge, Muskingum Conference, has the distinction of being the first and only church, to my knowledge, that has contributed to our Foreign Missionary work more than it pays to its pastor's salary.

The further significant fact is that the pastor, Rev. A. R. Read, is the foremost advocate, the inspiring leader in the larger effort of that church to respond to the increasing needs of the Japan work arising from its steady growth in all departments.

He is not afraid that what his people give for foreign missions will lessen his salary, or add to his burden in providing for the church's requirements, local or general. He recognizes the operating principle of the Kingdom, that as we give for others at His command, we will have an increased appreciation of our heritage, and will be blessed with the willingness and means to do more for our home work.

This splendid example proves the value and efficacy of a pastor's leadership, and that, when one's full duty is done, the results justify the faith, effort and even sacrifice, and it indicates that many other pastors could duplicate in some degree Brother Read's splendid work, and thus enable greater things to be done by our denomination.

IS THIS YOUR EXPERIENCE?

In a very valuable book entitled "In a Preacher's Study," the Rev. George Jackson writes in his charming way about books and other literary and religous subjects. In a very chatty chapter entitled "Three Letters to a Young Man about Books," he makes this confession which strikes a tender chord in many a heart:

"For my own part, I am never thankful for the loan of a book. I agree with Ruskin, if it is worth reading it is worth buying; and, to be quite frank, and selfish as it may sound, though I delight in giving books, I am never eager to lend them. And there I touch on an ancient grievance of the bookman; why has the borrower of books no conscience? How comes it that a man, who, if he accept the loan of half a crown, will make haste to repay you by return of post, is yet conscious of no obligation in the matter of a borrowed book, which perhaps you would not have sold him for many half-crowns? What is this strange something about a book which transforms honest, law-abiding citizens into thievish rogues? I who speak, I too have suffered. Among my books there is a nearly complete set of the works of Dr. R. W. Dale, which I greatly prize. Several years ago a visitor in my library begged the loan of one of them. From that day to this I have seen neither it nor him. The book has long been out of print, and cannot now, I fear, be replaced."

TYPEWRITING EXPLAINED.

A typewriter is one who typewrites on the typewriter and the typewriter is a machine on which the typewriter who typewrites on the typewriter typewrites. Now, the typewriter who typewrites on the typewriter typewrites on the typewriter until there is no more typewriting to be typewritten by the typewriter on the typewriter on which the typewriter who typewrites on the typewriter typewrites.—Ardmore, Kans., Sun.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

ABOUT THE MOUNTAIN.

Sunday, July 27th, I went to Pinnacle, and to the Methodist Protestant church. The special meeting commenced at eleven o'clock. The pastor, Bro. Suits, preached to the Junior order—and the occasion was very interesting. I was privileged to be at the services Sunday night also. The pastor preached, and the preaching and service was of deep interest. The people were spiritually interested, and the evidences were that saints and some sinners felt the need of special prayer—and this for the meeting, and for certain individuals who felt the need of help so as to get better and to do better. When I go to church, either far or near, I feel the need of the interests of worship, the need of the public means of grace, and I receive grace also by seeing the good people. The top of the Pilot Mt. is near, two and one half miles from Pinnacle.

However, this effort is not an official report, but I venture, hoping that it may find place in the good company of the officials. I venture this too, not knowing anything about the late results of the meeting up to this date, July 30. On the train, going up from King to Pinnacle, Sunday, I was gladly surpriced to meet up with Rev. A. L. Brown; he, too, was on his way to the meeting. Several times Bro. Brown has preached at Crooked Run church, where his mother, and her mother, and others of their people were buried.

Our Crooked Run neighbors were and are always glad to see Bro. Brown, and to hear him preach, and to hear him sing some of the old peculiar songs that were greatly admired by his parents and their people of forty years ago. Bro. Brown is a man of near fifty years of age, and I asked him if he could sing as well yet as he could when he was a younger man. He answered by saying, "Nearly so."

He was born and raised up near Mt. Zion where I used to think some people were born singers. However, he, on his mother's side, belongs to the Hunt family; his mother was a sister to Rev. G. E. Hunt, and I feel to count that family as a people born to sing and to preach. Over fifty years ago, in those days the good people near where the Mt. Zion church now stands, saw that they needed a place for preaching, and for public worship, and the mother of Bro. Brown told the neighbors (the women rather) that if they would fix up a brush arbor she would find a preacher to serve.

They made the arbor right where the grave-yard now is, and the pious woman then secured the services of her brother, Rev. I. N. Hunt, to preach there—and there has been a great work going on at that place from that time on up to the present time. Revs. I. N. Hunt and his natural brother, Geo. E. Hunt, have been serving well in times past at that place, and both have preached many times to that people since the time of 50 years ago. Also, Bro. Brown has served well at that place too. We all have our special friends, and I count Bro. Brown one of my special friends, and numbers of times I have had occasion to tell new acquaintances about the man, and that he is good in singing and prayer and exhortation, and for the preaching too.

(If the editor and those who read please, I want to speak in this manner, this once, through the paper.)

In my youth I heard my parents and others refer, numbers of times, to the Hunt family as being great to sing—and there were, when they were all living, three men and five women to do the singing. I accuse Bro. Brown of inheriting the Hunt voice for the singing, and for the preacher too.

The impulse now with me is to say that friends in reach would do well by having Bro. Brown to preach in their churches—and to sing some of the rich old songs that he learned to sing in his youth.

The first thought for this article was to try to tell some of the friends, far and near, about the Pilot Mt. However, I have ventured out rather about people—and really, I think much more of people than I think of the mountains—but the Pilot Mt. is yet in view. Monday morning soon, I, in safe company, went to the mountain. About six years ago, I ventured, and had Rev. Walter Grabs to preach at Pinnacle, in the M. P. Church on Monday night; he being a Moravian minister, and there being two members of the Moravian church in Pinnacle at that time. And to explain a little more, his grandfather and my grand father were twin brothers and were born in Bethania.

On Tuesday morning, six years ago, we two went up on the Pilot. That trip, and my late mountain trip reminds me to say that it is not advisable to go up on the mountain amongst the bushes and the spider webs, with our best Sunday clothes on. The original idea with me was to go to meeting at night and then to get on the mountain in the day, but I saw that I could not afford to spoil Sunday clothing in that sort of way. I went up with my good Pinnacle friend, Mr. B. He and the boy scouts, who were up there, were clothed in a fashion to not be much afraid of thorns and spider webs. Mr. B. carried his double-barrel gun with him, but we did not hear the rattlesnakes, and saw no bears. We gathered blueberries and ate some, and saved a few, and we drank much of the water of that famous cold spring. Many people from all sides, far and near, go on the Pilot Mt. these hot days, and the cold water there is a great thing for all—a fine treat.

Bushels of berries are being gathered on that beautiful mountain these days, and this week, but there will be a fair share for any and all who may choose to go next week— and there is prospect to find more than the crowds can eat on later for several weeks yet.

There are charms about the scenery of the Pilot Mt. that we can only experience by going up there. Over 25 years ago, when the Annual Conference was at Mt. Zion, a delegate, Bro. White, from down east, walked over on to the mountain alone, rather soon after he got in sight, and then he wanted to go up there daily—and the high authorities had a task trying to hold the good man to his part of the conference work—but such are the natural charms of our Pilot Mountain.

However, again. The spiritual interests of the revival meetings and the business of Annual Conference should not be neglected by desire to stroll on the mountains; but this reference and report is made with a desire to help any who may wish to do so, to take due interest in whatever lawful course they may wish to pursue. It is a reasonable thing to dress up and to travel out in order to see and be seen, to see the friends far and near. Being privileged to see the people is no little matter. In the 7th chapter of Acts we see that the last effort of the great man Stephen was made in an extended reference to people—and the above article,, in the fear of God refers mainly to people.

Flat Rock.

Our revival services began at Flat Rock 4th Sunday in July and closed the following Thursday p. m. Rev. A. G. Dixon was with us and did all the preaching. His sermons were strong and convincing. Congregations were large all the time. There were 22 conversions and 14 accessions. The meeting was a very successful one and we are encouraged.

Caroleen, Shelby Circuit.—We held our third quarterly conference at Shelby Saturday night, July 31st. Messrs. Adkins, Silvers, and Upton represented the Caroleen church. The other churches were represented. They reported a good meeting. Mr. Silvers is the delegate to the Annual Conference.

Saturday afternoon, on a lawn near the church we served ice cream to the Sunday school. We had about fifteen gallons and every one enjoyed it.

Some time ago our Philathea class pieced a crazy quilt. Each member pieced one block and embroidered names on it at ten cents each. We then had an ice cream supper and sold the quilt. We cleared $40 for our Sunday school rooms.

Brother Morris was here the fourth Sunday. He always gives us good sermons, and we are glad to have him with us.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. We have the Cross and Crown system, and the attendance is increasing. A Member.

August 2, 1915.

Friendship, Fallston Circuit.—We hope that the readers of the Herald will not think by our long silence that we are not doing things at Fallston, for we are always busy.

Our Sunday school is alive and doing as good work as it ever did. We are proud of our good and faithful superintendent; he always meets with the teachers every Sunday morning in the teachers' meeting, and does everything he can to make the Sunday school a success.

We have all learned to love Bro. Moton and his dear family so much; he has greatly revived this community, but we feel that the half has not been done that will be done. He now preaches four times a month at Friendship, and every sermon is a good one, as all would expect who know him. Our protracted meeting will begin Saturday before third Sunday in August. It will be a union meeting. Bro. Moser, pastor of the M. E. Church, Fallston, will help do the preaching. We hope every one who can will attend and may the Lord bless and make our meeting a great success.

The third quarterly conference was held Saturday before third Sunday in July, preaching at 11 a. m. and conference at 1 p. m.

The members of Lawndale are contemplating building a church there. Mr. Moton and Mr. Shenk have been looking out for a place to build. Mr. Shenk says he is willing to give a lot to build on if the man that has an interest with him is willing. May the Lord bless and help them in the great work. Besh wishes to the Herald and its readers. Reporter.

Concord.—Dear M. P. Herald: On last Sunday night a week ago we held our children's day service. The children did well, especially in the singing. Thanks to Miss Letta Little and Bro. W. H. Scarboro for their untiring efforts in practicing the children for the occasion. The collection was not as much as we hoped to have, but perhaps as much as we would naturally expect when we consider that our people are paying on the church debt here regularly, each month, besides their other expenses. This is one beautiful and very commendable feature of the church work here. They pay regularly each month, in a business-like way.

Our third quarterly meeting will meet next Saturday night at Fairview and on the following day our special meeting will begin at that place. Here we have scores of young men and women and boys and girls. A large number of them are in the Sunday school and seem very much interested. This school has grown from 35 to 128 in the last few months. We are praying that these young people be saved during our coming meeting and ask that the M. P. Herald readers join us in prayer for them.

On Saturday before the fifth Sunday in the month we are going to have a church rally or home coming for both of our churches. We want to have with us, as far as possible, all of our former pastors and all the members who live at a distance as well as those who live here. We will have some songs and speeches and a big dinner, doing our very best to make the occasion both pleasant and profitable.

Yours sincerely,

W. R. Lowdermilk.

Love's Grove, Charlotte Ct.—Our Sunday school is moving on very well, considering everything. On the fourth Sunday Bro. Morgan, of Denton, filled the pulpit at this place in the absence of Bro. Braswell. He filled it ably. We wish him a great success. Our special meeting will begin August 8th with Brother Whitaker as pulpit help. Brethren, pray for us that the church may be greatly revived and that there may be a great ingathering of souls for Christ at this place. We need your prayers, for we are going through sad hours, as we have lost one of our best brothers, Julius Tarleton. He was taken very ill the 18th of July with that dreaded disease, typhoid fever. He past away the 29th of July and was buried the following day at Love's Grove church. He was a consecrated man to his church and to God's cause. He was faithful. We could depend on him for anything. He was our teacher in the Sunday school. We as a church feel that we have lost one of our best. It is sad to part with a friend like Brother Tarleton, but we feel sure he is at rest in heaven with those two little children that preceded him to glory. Dear companion and children, weep not. We know it is hard to give him up, to meet with him no more on earth, but there is joy to know we can meet him in glory, to part no more. There is joy in our hearts to know that Brother Tarleton lived such a life in this world that all his family are on the way to glory. They need our sympathy and prayers in this sad hour. May the great God of heaven comfort the bereaved family.

John N. Smith.

Randleman Ct.—Our third quarterly conference met at Bethany, July 31. All the churches were represented, and busines was gone through with in a good spirit. Reports indicate some progress.

Our special meeting begins second Sunday in August with Rev. J. H. Bowman as pulpit help, and our meeting at Randleman begins fourth Sunday night in August with Rev. D. R. Williams as pulpit help.

Bro. and Sister Kennett are still living at this writing, but they are growing weaker all the while. Also Bro. J. N. Caudle of New Salem has been very sick. These are all good old people, but we fear they cannot be with us much longer.

J. B. O'Briant.

Oak Ridge Ct.—The third quarterly conference was held at Pine Grove church on Saturday, July 24. All the churches were represented except Kernersville. Kernersville, where art thou? Official members of Kernersville church, I do not believe the Lord is well pleased with your indifference. Beware lest He spew you out of His mouth.

Bro. Robert L. Dwiggins is the delegate elect to Annual Conference, Bro. W. S. Linville alternate.

We have held three of our special meetings. All three were very good. Bro. D. A. Braswell did splendid preaching at Sandy Ridge and at Piney Grove second and third weeks of July. As a result of the meeting at these two places eleven joined at Sandy Ridge and ten at Pine Grove.

The pastor divided time with Rev. Mr. Higgins, an M. E. minister, at Ai during the fourth week of July, each doing half the preaching. Good meeting. Five or six professions, two joined church.

The Lord's work is suffering greatly. And it is suffering not because of "hard times," but because of the alarming indifference on the part of professing Christions. "Woe unto them who are at ease in Zion."—Amos 6:1.

Linley W. Gerringer, Pastor.

Kernersville, Aug. 2, 1915.

Pleasant Grove, Lebanon Ct.—Our special meeting closed last Sunday evening. We had one of the best meetings the writer ever attended. While there were not as many conversions as we hoped and prayed for, the church was greatly revived. We had ten converts, four accessions to the church to the present. Bro. Stubbins did the preaching, and we thought every sermon the best. We had large congregations especially of an evening, and they surely heard the gospel and we believe they enjoyed it. And the singing under Prof. Pender was surely with the spirit and understanding. He sang some of the prettiest solos we ever heard and we wish to give the thanks of the church to Bro. Pender and hope to have him with us again some time, for we surely enjoyed his stay with us.

We also had Bro. Shelton with us. He gave us two sermons which were very good, and we enjoyed his stay very much and feel that it did good. Hope to have him again.

We had our S. S. today, had a very good school, but not as good as it might be. So let's all go to work and make it better; attendance 70. It seems to run from about 70 to 75. Let's see if we can't reach 100 in this quarter. After school Bro. Stubbins filled his regular appointment and preached a very helpful sermon. after which he opened the doors of the church for infant baptism and baptized 19 children. We were very glad to have Bro. J. W. Johnson of Lebanon Circuit worship with us Sunday. Come again, Bro. Johnson.

Walter Burton, Rep.

Mebane, Mebane Ct.—We held our children's day service third Sunday night in July. Much credit is due Mrs. Fred Terrell and Miss Fannie Sykes for the nice program rendered. The children did their best. The music was splendid under the leadership of Miss Sykes, who is our efficient and faithful organist. The collection amounted to $15.00.

Our Sunday school had the pleasure of having Bro. Rogers, superintendent of Burlington Sunday school, with us yesterday. He made us a talk and invited us to the M. P. community rally to be held 21st of August at the Burlington Park. Bro. Rogers was quite an inspiration to us. We hope he will come again. We expect to have our annual picnic next Friday at Tate's Mill. We had no service at our church last night as our pastor is away helping in a meeting.

We have one case of typhoid fever in town, Maragret, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Qualls. We hope that she may soon be restored to health. We miss them from their places in the Sunday school and church service. We have elected two new ushers for church service, Messrs. Fletcher Smith and Claude Hunt: they add very much to the service in this way. The Baraca Class elected Mr. Talton Jobe secretary and treasurer of the class yesterday to take the place of Mr. Sharpe. Mr. Sharpe expects to move away from our town this week. He has been faithful to the class and Sunday school and we wish for him success in his new home.

Mrs. Henry C. Nicholson, Rep.

Aug. 2, 1915.

Matthews Chapel, Greenville Ct.—Our revival meeting began the fourth Sunday in July and closed Wednesday afternoon. We had a very good meeting; there were 7 converted and 3 joined the church. Rev. D. A. Braswell was the helper; he did some excellent preaching. We all like Mr. Braswell fine and hated to bid him goodby. We hope to meet him again, if not on earth, in heaven. We were glad to have Bro. Surratt and Bro. Braswell in our homes and I hope every one around Matthews Chapel was much benefited by going to the meeting, and that every one may try to live a better life and not one will ever turn back in the path of sin, that that we may travel on to heaven above.

Our Sunday school has closed until the first Sunday in September. I hope we may have a better school than before. We are right much behind with our general interests, but we haven't got discouraged yet and hope we may get it now. I saw in the Herald about two weeks ago that Prof. J. Robert Holt was sick with typhoid fever; hope he is convalescent. With best wishes to Herald and its readers,

Carrye Lynch, Rep.

Vineland, Va.

[Yes, Bro. Holt is able to sit up now.—Editor.]

Siler City.—The third quarterly conference met at Piney Grove church last Saturday with a fair attendance. The pastor reported the work progressing nicely over the circuit. L. L. Wrenn was elected delegate to annual conference, W. J. Tally alternate. The fourth quarterly conference will meet at Siler City.

We are anticipating a good day next Sunday. Will have a S. S. rally, with Bro. J. Norman Wills of Greensboro as chief speaker. Have invited the other schools of the town to be with us, and they have accepted. G. E. M.

Burlington.—We regret that there has been no report in the Herald from Burlington church for the past two weeks. The writer has been sick and unable to prepare the reports.

Our church and Sunday school have been progressing splendidly. The Sunday school has maintained a good average attendance during the past few extreme hot Sundays, and the work is moving along nicely and smoothly in every line of endeavor. We are looking forward to our annual picnic with much anticipation and anxiety. The committee on arrangements will soon make announcements of the program, etc., for the picnic.

There was the usual attendance at the preaching service Sunday morning. It being the first Sunday, the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed. A large number from the congregation responded to the invitation to partake of the elements of the sacred and divine ordinance. At this service copies of the discipline were given to those who recently united with the church.

At the night service Rev. M. W. Buck of the First Baptist church preached for us. He and Bro. Curry exchanged pulpits, neither congregation knowing who was to preach for them until the time for the service. On account of the rain the attendance at this service was small.

The Christian Endeavor society has been progressing finely for the past few weeks. The meetings are well attended and the young people take much interest in the work. New officers were elected on Sunday, July 18, which are as follows: Miss Janie Sharpe, President; J. G. Workman, Vice President; Miss Elsie Moser, Secretary; Miss Nettie Durham, Assistant Secretary; Harlan McPherson, Treasurer; C. B. Way, Corresponding Secretary. Under the leadership of Miss Sharpe, who is a splendid worker and enthusiastic endeavorer, the society will continue its great work and extend its influences in blessing and helping others.

Announcement was made from the pulpit Sunday morning that our Fall revival meeting would begin the first Sunday in September. We are to have an evangelistic singer but no pulpit help outside our pastor. This is according to the plans made at the begining of the year by the church. Early preparations will be made for the meeting and we shall expect a great meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the church conference will be held on next Tuesday night, August 10. We trust there will be a full attendance of the officials and as many members of the church as can attend.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

Paint Fork, Ivy Ct.—Although quiet in our church paper, we are very much alive. However we members come short with our duty to our pastor and church, but with such a spiritual, conscientious pastor as Bro. Martin, one who so earnestly presents the wonderful truths and one in whom we have confidence, we could not die, but the association with him helps us to grow spiritually. When he comes into our homes, it seems that the divine power follows him there, and after a visit with him we feel we have been brought nearer to our Master.

He began his special meeting at the church July 25, continuing seven days, and each service he gave uplifting sermons, and more especially last Thursday, from Mark 2:3. His theme was, "Find your corner where God would have you work." The church was very much awakened, and before God's Spirit can have His way the church must work.

It was truthfully said that "God never saved a man to sit with folded arms." In many respects the revival was a great success.

Our work seems to be more interested in our Children's Home. The last month the following churches have made small donations:

Weaverville	$1.18
Clark's Chapel	2.10
Mt. Zion	1.77
Democrat, Central M. P. church	.87
Mt. Holly	.63
Paint Fork	1.00
Total	$7.55

I would to God that each member could visit our Children's Home and know those dear unfortunate children, and then I'm sure we would not cling so closely to our pocket book.

Bro. Martin begins his special meeting at Weaverville Wednesday night, August 4th, with N. G. Bethea assisting. Pray for the success of our work.

Reporter.

Friendship, Haw River Ct.—Our Sunday school has suspended for a few Sundays on account of protracted meetings.

We held our Children's service the first Sunday in July. We had a good service, the children did finely. The offering was very good. There was a large congregation present.

Our protracted meeting was held the third Sunday in July and the week following. Bro. Hutton was with us on Sunday and preached two splendid sermons. We were so glad to have him with us. Bro. Hutton was our pastor several years ago, and it was a treat to the church to have him back with us.

Rev. J. Ledbetter assisted Bro. Ashburn during the week and preached some strong and helpful sermons. We hope to have him with us again. We had a splendid revival. There were several professions. Five joined the church. There were large congregations each day.

Blanche Weatherly, Reporter.

Asheville.—In the absence of our pastor, who is taking a two-weeks' vacation, Rev. J. S. Williams preached for us Sunday. The attendance at both Sunday school and the eleven o'clock service was unusually good. Next Sunday will be "Strangers' Day" with us. All strangers and visitors in the city are especially invited to worship with us. Reporter.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mr. Tom McFarland, one of our most faithful members and a regular attendant of Sunday school and prayer meeting, departed this life July 24, 1915. He was born December 16, 1860. He leaves a wife, six children, a brother, sister, and a host of friends to mourn his absence. He was a faithful husband, kind father, and loyal citizen. He was teacher of our Baraca class, and class leader in the church. He was present at all the church services as long as he was able to get there. His place is vacant here, but we are sure he has a mansion above. We have often in class meeting heard him speak of the heavenly city toward which he was traveling.

He was sick several months and suffered a great deal from nervousneess, but was very patient during his illness. The funeral was preached by Brother Morris in the Methodist Protestant church and the body was laid to rest at Oak Grove cemetery.

The large crowd which showed their last respects to Brother McFarland, and the beautiful flowers placed on his grave show how he was loved and respected by old and young.

We sympathize with the family in this great sorrow. We would direct them to Jesus, the one who understands, and never makes an error. We are confident that Brother McFarland is walking the streets of the New Jerusalem. A Friend.

In Memory of Mrs. Susan Woodburn McCulloch.

Entered into rest, July 18, 1915. Just as the day was ushered in by the light of a beautiful July sun, the spirit of Mrs. A. E. McCulloch took its flight to that home prepared for all those "who have "fought the good fight" and won the plaudit of "well done, good and faithful servant." She is survived by a husband and seven children, an aged father and mother, four brothers and three sisters. She had been for many years a faithful member of Tabernacle church. The highest type of woman is a Christian mother; and such she was, fearing God herself, and trying to bring up her children in the same way. Her faith in God was so firm that even in her long sickness it never wavered. When her summons came she expressed her willingness to go, saying, "I put all my trust in my Saviour." "She gently fell asleep," leaving to her loved ones the memory of a life crowned with heaven's own blessings. She belonged to that large and honorable class of women who accomplish their best work in the quiet seclusion of home, and whose greatest triumphs, because private and domestic, are seldom recorded. Lonely—yes, unspeakably desolate is the home without her presence.

There's a shadow on the hillside,
And there's a gloom within the hall,
Where evermore in days of old,
The sunshine used to fall.

But while desolate and sorely smitten, we can thank God for the life she was permitted to live to testify to his love and faith that sustained and cheered her in life and led her smiling into her last long sleep.

I have heard of a beautiful home,
That is above the bright blue sky,
A wonderful place it must be,
Where people never die.

Little children are never hungry,
And mothers are never sad;
There is nothing to make them sorry,
And there is plenty to make them glad.

They say the sun shines brighter
Than any sun shines here,
There is always a sound of singing,
And nobody sheds a tear.

A Sister.

IN LOVING MEMORY.

The death angel visited our vicinity on July 6, 1915, and claimed for its victim Mr. S. Julius Kennedy, aged 61 years, 2 months and 10 days. The interment was at Fair Grove. July 8th, funeral services being conducted by Rev. L. M. Litaker, of Thomasville. He leaves a wife, two daughters, Mrs. Charlie Hughes, of Fuller's, Mrs. Chas. Longbridge, of Shelby, and one son, Mr. Charlie Kennedy, who holds a position in Gaffney, S. C.; nine grand children and many friends to mourn their loss. He was a devoted husband, a kind and loving father, a good citizen, and will be greatly missed. He had been sick for some time with that dreaded disease tuberculosis, which resulted in death.

Mr. Kennedy was a member of the M. P. Church at Mt. Carmel, and served faithfully these many years. He was a quiet, dignified, strong and unassuming character who loved his church and who could always be counted upon to stand upon the side of right. He said a few days prior to his death that he would like to live to serve the Church of God more, but if the Lord's will, he was ready and willing to go.

Just only think that your companion and father, with the other children, is over there watching and waiting for you to come where parting will be no more. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones. May they look to God who doeth all things well.

We miss thee from our home, dear father,
We miss thee from thy place;
A shadow o'er our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine of thy face;
We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care;
Our home is dark without thee,
We miss thee everywhere.

Mrs. G. T. Royal.

Anna B. Morris.

Death, always sad, seemed even more so as we were called upon to lay to rest all that was mortal of Anna Bradshaw Morris, July 18th, 1915. For quite awhile she had been a sufferer, much more so than many of her most intimate friends knew of, but her death following so closely the operation, in its unexpectedness, came as a great shock to us all. Sister Morris had hoped for some time that an operation might not be necessary in her case, but, convinced that it must be undergone, she went bravely to the hospital and gave her life into the hands of her surgeon. But it was too late, her trouble was so advanced that the operation could not save her life. She was operated on Tuesday and died on the following Saturday, July 17th.

She was born January 29, 1873, in the community of Salem Church, which church she became a member of in her girlhood. She was married to J. Clifton Morris August the first, 1899. Six children have blessed this union, the youngest, a fine little boy of about three years of age. Her mother preceded her to the spirit world a number of years. She left besides her husband and children and a great number of friends, her father, two brothers, C. W. and J. G. Bradshaw; two sisters, Mrs. Bettie Jennings, of Gibsonville, and Miss Blanche Bradshaw, of Greensboro.

Sister Morris had been in Greensboro not quite three years, but she had greatly endeared herself to a host of new-found friends here and was most active in church work. She and her husband were received into Grace Church, presenting their letters from Haw River Methodist Protestant Church, first Sunday of the present pastorate of the writer. Soon Sister Morris became actively identified with the work of her church and was first vice president of the Ladies' Aid Society at the time of her death.

In the death of Sister Morris, the community has lost a good woman, her church a faithful member, her husband a devoted wife, and her chidren a loving mother. We pray heaven's richest blessings upon all those who miss the sweet ministries of her life, and trust that the Christian's hope of a happy reunion in the glory world may be realized by them all. We commend the tender lives of those she left behind her to our merciful heavenly father who knoweth our frame and who careth for us all. R. M. Andrews.

Bingham.

Bro. L. G. B. Bingham was born March 16, 1836, departed this life June 16, 1915; age 79 years and 3 months. He was married to Miss Emily Ward in 1861. Their union was blessed with twelve children. Three passed to their eternal home while young. Six daughters and three sons still live: Mrs. N. M. Morgan, of Farmer; Mrs. Willey Talley, of Randleman; Mrs. Arthur Welborn, of Trinity; Mrs. T. W. Mitchel, of Denton; Mrs. L. G. Loflin, of Flora; Mrs. N. C. Ridge, of Flora; Mr. Web Bingham, of Farmer; Mr. Green Bingham, of Denton; Mr. Tom Bingham, of Farmer.

Bro. Bingham professed faith in Christ in early life and united with the M. P. church, and kept the faith with fidelity, showing himself approved before man and God. He was a man of broad mind, yet he was quiet and unassuming. He always weighed things before he came to a decision, but when he did he was on side of right and he was not afraid to stand for right and oppose wrong anywhere and at all times. He was elected to legislature once and was run for the office of sheriff in Randolph County once and was defeated by a very small majority. He served as county commissioner for some years and had many friends all over the county and State; but the thing that he was most commendable for was the deep interest he had in his church. He was very liberal. He did a great part in building Piney Grove church and also Canaan church. He always took his children to Sunday school and preaching. He was proud of them when he went down to his grave because his example and teaching fastened upon them and they, too, have lived in such a way as to be an honor to him in old age. He never forgot his pastor, and he seemed as a father to me. We will miss him at his church so much in many ways; but, dear companion, and children, you will perhaps miss him more, but serve the God that he served faithfully here and we will meet him on heaven's bright shore. Joel B. Trogdon.

MISS HURRY AND MISS STEADY.

Little Miss Hurry,
All hustle and flurry,
Comes down to breakfast ten minutes too late;
Her hair is a-rumple,
Her gown is a-crumple,
She's no time to button and hook herself straight.
She hunts and she rushes
For needles and brushes,
For books and for pencils flies upstairs and down;
If ever you'd find her,
Just follow behind her,
A trail of shoe buttons and shreds of her gown.

But little Miss Steady
By schooltime is ready,
All smiling and shining and neat in her place;
With no need to worry,
She pities Miss Hurry,
Who but yesterday sat here with shame in her face.
Her heart beating lightly,
With duty done rightly,
She vowed she will never again change her name;
For, though you'd not guess it,
I'm bound to confess it—
These two little maidens are one and the same.

—It has been announced that Henry Ford has practically perfected an automobile tractor intended to reduce the labor of tilling the soil and to do the heavy work on farms. The inventor expects to develop a big new plant at Dearborn, Mich., for the manufacture of the machines and will provide for a new town to accommodate employees of the plant.

MISS BARBARA'S RASPBERRIES.

"I do hope that boy over at the next house won't be troublesome," Miss Barbara murmured as she and Miss Julia carefully carried in the parlor lamp. "I just can't have him running out and in here half a dozen times a day tracking in dirt."

Miss Julia's words and tone were assuring. "If we don't take any notice of him whatever, I don't believe he'll trouble us."

So Robbie watched and waited in vain for an opportunity to make the acquaintance of his new neighbors.

When the goods were unloaded, the truckman went away with his span of white horses and big wagon. Miss Barbara and Miss Julia went into the house and shut the door, and the boy, who had been standing on the steps of the next house, went in to talk with his mother.

"They don't look half so nice as Mrs. Royce," he told her.

"But you can not always tell how good and kind a woman is by her looks," his mother counseled.

"Who do you suppose will have the respberries now?" Robbie asked after a pause.

"I think the new neighbors will want the berries themselves," his mother replied.

Down on the bank at the back of the house where Mrs. Royce had lived was a thrifty black raspberry bush, and, as Mr. and Mrs. Royce did ont care for the berries, Mrs. Royce had given Robbie leave to pick them whenever he liked, which was a privilege that he greatly appreciated.

Brother Roger and father were talking about Godfrey de Bouillon, about whom Roger had been reading, and Robbie's attention was attracted, for he always liked to hear about great men.

How grand the Crusaders must have looked, marching along, shouting their war-cry, "It is God's will," each man with a red cross emblazoned on the right shoulder! Robbie and mother talked about Godfrey de Bouillon when father and Roger had gone down town. Robbie asked a good many questions about the great Crusader who was willing to forgive an injury to himself if good might come thereby.

"I think it's almost as hard to forgive people when they treat you badly as it is to fight battles," Robbie said thoughtfully.

Robbie spent that morning working in his flower-beds at the back of the house. There was a little strip of land at the back of Robbie's house and the house where Mrs. Royce had lived, where flowers grew luxuriantly. Mrs. Royce gave Robbie a little set of gardener's tools, divided her packages of flower-seeds with him, and taught him how to plant the seeds the first year that she lived in the cottage; and since that time he had been an enthusiastic gardener. In the afternoon he thought he would go down on the bank just to see if the raspberries were ready to be picked. As Robbie stood looking at them he wondered if the new neighbors had noticed that the berries needed picking. Then he picked one and ate it; it was delicious. He picked another and ate that, and then another; and then—then some dreadful cold thing came dashing with such force as almost to knock him down. He screamed, and turned to meet Miss Barbara with an empty water-pail in her hand

"Why, are you here?" Miss Barbara asked in well-feigned surprise. "You better keep right away from this raspberry bush, for I'm going to take the best of care of it. I presume I shall wet it every day this warm weather, and you'll be liable to get wet again if you're over here."

Robbie did not wait to hear more. He ran for home as though for his life. When he reached his mother's arms he cried as he had not cried for a long time, and between his sobs his mother could distinguish these words: "I hate the stingy old thing! Yes, I do!"

Miss Julia met Miss Barbara as she came in at the back door.

"What did he say? I saw you gave him a good wetting."

"He didn't say anything, but he made tracks for home, and I think he'll stay there now."

"But don't you suppose his folks will be dreadfully put out about it?" Miss Julia asked apprehensively.

"If they keep on their land, I shan't trouble them; but just as long as we pay our rent here we're going to have what belongs to us, and we're not going to be troubled by boys either," Miss Barbara replied in a very decided tone.

Somewhat later the two ladies were greatly surprised to see the "troublesome boy" coming up the front walk.

"What on earth can he want now!" Miss Barbara ejaculated.

There was a timid knock at the door, and Miss Barbara answered the summons. There were still traces of tears on Robbie's face, but he spoke bravely.

"I didn't pick but just three of your berries, but of course I didn't have any right to touch one. Mrs. Royce didn't care for black raspberries, and she always gave them to me, so I guess I was so used to picking them I didn't think; but I won't never do so again. I thought you must be busy, seeing you've just moved in; and won't you please let me pick the rest of them for you to make up for what I ate? I won't eat one single one of them," he added impressively.

Miss Barbara stared in astonishment. Then Miss Julia broke the silence.

"We are pretty busy, but I guess we can find time to pick them ourselves," she said hesitatingly.

"But I want to make it right, and I can't think of any other way; and I wish you'd let me do it," Robbie pleaded.

And Miss Barbara surprised herself and her sister by saying, "Well, if you want to so bad, you may."

Then she brought a bright tin dish from her pantry for Robbie to pick the berries in. After Robbie left the house, the sisters looked wonderingly at each other.

"He's a perfect little gentleman! But I should think he would not have dared to come over here again. Don't you suppose he hated to?"

"I don't believe he enjoyed it very much," Miss Barbara said meditatively.

"Oh, Miss Barbara, you never dreamed how hard it was to come!"

When Robbie came in, the dish was heaping full of berries. "I picked every one that was ripe," he said smilingly.

"I think you must have," Miss Barbara replied. "I want you to take some of them home, for you have more than paid for the few you ate."

"Oh, I don't want to, indeed I don't!" Robbie protested earnestly.

Miss Barbara could see that he meant what he said, so she forbore to urge the matter; but as Robbie was about to go home she said apologetically—and it was a very unusual thing for Miss Barbara to apologize—"I guess you're a real good boy after all, and I'm afraid I was too hard on you; but I know we shall be friends hereafter."

"Here comes a conqueror, I am sure," mother said, with one of her brightest smiles, as she opened the door for Robbie when he returned.

"Yes, I conquered. It was awful hard to do, almost as hard as some of Godfrey de Bouillon's battles, I guess; but I'm so glad I did it, for she says we're going to be friends now."—Jessie L. Britton, in the Presbyterian Banner.

CIGARETTES.

Wherever endurance is the test the cigarette is forbidden. An item in the daily papers announces that the captain of one of the leading baseball clubs has announced that in the future none of his men can smoke cigarettes, and are notified to prepare themselves during the winter to be total abstainers next season. He attributes the failure of some of his players to "make good" to the fact that the ones who were weakest were cigarette fiends "No man that follows athletics for a living can smoke cigarettes," he says.

LIVING BY CHEATING.

There was some justness in the remark of the foreigner who said: "Men go in de street and sheat one anoder and call it pishness." With some persons this seems to be an acceptable definition. A man has something to sell. He proposes to obtain for it, not what it is worth, but what any person can be deceived and persuaded to give; and the man who knows how to deceive and beguile his neighbor into paying twice the value of an article is held to be keen and shrewd. In the long run it may be fairly questioned whether any bargain is a good bargain for the seller, unless it is also a good bargain for the buyer.

The man who undertakes to do business on the principle of deceiving and cheating, will do well to remember that it is not wise to take too narrow a view of these matters. If of fifty men in a community each contrives in the course of a year to cheat each of the others to the amount of fifty dollars, pray tell us how much better off any of them will be at the year's end? Each of them has gained twenty-five hundred dollars by his own rascality, and lost twenty-five hundred dollars by the rascality of his neighbors. But most of them expect to gain but do not expect to lose; they regard themselves as very "smart," and in this opinion no doubt they are correct; but they make the very common mistake of supposing that because they are wise everybody else is foolish. The keenest of them in the course of a lifetime find their match, and perhaps lose in a day everything which they accumulate through years of craft and guile. But suppose five or ten men succeed in plucking some less crafty soul; suppose they sell him goods at enormous prices, which he can neither sell nor use; suppose after making a thousand dollars out of him by sheer deception and swindling, he fails, owing them two thousand dollars and pays them ten cents on a dollar, how much have they gained? Or suppose they "look out for that" and are too shrewd, and do not allow him to owe them, he may fail owing and ruining some one else who does owe them, involving an innocent person in the disaster, and still bringing the curses home like chickens to roost.

Now all business done upon this basis of deception, cheating, and rascality, is in every way unsatisfactory. It ruins many it really helps none. The long lane of crookedness and craft turns at last, and turns down hill. The only safe and proper way to do business is to do it honestly.—African's Friend.

—The Baptist Banner, West Virginia: "We have now had one year of prohibition in West Virginia. The state is entirely surrounded by 'wet' territory, and yet no sane person would dare say prohibition does not prohibit, nor would any fair-minded person wish to go back to the old regime. Parkersburg is especially fortunate, by reason of the fact that it is within twelve miles of Marietta, Ohio, a liquor-soaked town. The trolley cars go every thirty minutes, to say nothing of two railroads, and any number of steamboats. And yet, Parkersburg is another town. During the year July 1913-1914 there were 622 arrests for drunkenness; July 1914-1915 there were 177 arrests for drunkenness. Figures do not lie!"

—Miss Jane Addams, of the Hull House, Chicago, returned from a visit to the warring nations of Europe, reports a firm sentiment among them all that the war must be pushed to a decided victory. She reports her visit to the pope at Rome as follows: "After seeing Cardinal Gasparri we were ushered into the presence of the pope. He gave us exactly half an hour by the clock. Naturally we were exactly on time. The pope informed us that his mind was entirely open on the war, and that he was ready to talk to us of the work we were doing. It was quite the natural and usual thing for women to be trying for peace among the belligerents, he said, and he was willing to do what he could to further any peace negotiations. He offered himself as a peace mediator if the occasion came for him to act. The pope was careful not to express the slightest opinion on the motives of any nation in the war or of the justice of the cause of any belligerent." It makes us smile.

—Among the Russian Baptists recently sentenced to prison is Vasily Ivanoff of Baku, an aged and infirm evangelical with an amazing record. Ivanoff was converted in his youth and has spent much of his life in prison and exile for Christ's sake. He told at the Baptist World Alliance meeting in Philadelphia that he had lost count of the number of sentences, but he had see nthe inside of at least thirty-one prisons. He has baptized upward of 1,500 men and women, most of them at night and in lonely and out-of-the-way places.

—Here is a characterization of Billy Sunday by Mr. Odell, which appeared recently in the Atlantic Monthly: "The outstanding, unmistakable, undisguisable thing is that he is a genuine man devoting his strength without reserve to preaching the only Gospel by which he believes man may be saved from hell. He is not a scholar, not a thinker, not a sophist, not an actor—but a healthy, frank, fearless and irresponsible man, who offers no apology for doing the one thing he feels that his God has told him to do: preach a Puritan Gospel to a godless generation."

—When the ship Central America sprung a leak in midocean, a steamer seeing her signal, drew near and asked, "What is amiss?" "We are in bad repair; lie by till morning," was the answer. "Better let me take your passengers on board now." "No," said the captain, "lie bytill morning." In an hour the lights of the illfated steamer were not visible; she had gone down and all had perished. Mr. Moody once closed a meeting in Chicago saying, "Think this matter over till next Sunday." On their way home from church that evening, a light suddenly flashed against the sky. It was the beginning of the great Chicago fire. That congregation never assembled again. —The Christian Herald.

—The Duke of Wellington wrote: "War is a most detestable thing. If you had seen but one day of war, you would pray that you might never see another." Geo. Washington said: "My first wish is to see this plague to mankind banished from the earth." Ulysses S. Grant wrote: "Though educated as a soldier, and though I have gone through two wars, I have always been a man of peace, preferring to see questions of difference settled by arbitration." General W. T. Sherman said: "I confess without shame that I am tired and sick of war. Its glory is all moonshine. It is only those who have neither heard a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded, who cry aloud for more blood, more vengeance, more desolation."

—An American Indian was converted. Soon he brought some money to the missionary "to give to Jesus Christ for his work." "That is too much for you to give," said the missionary. FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Burlington.—We had a decided increase in our Sunday school attendance last Sunday. In the Autumn we hope to greatly enlarge our Sunday school.

Our Sunday school picnic and rally was quite a success but the attendance was not as large as we had anticipated. It is impossible to give an account of the occasion in every detail, so I will merely mention a few of the most important features of the day. Members of our school were the first to arrive. Two street cars left the church at 10:30 A. M. for the Park, filled with children and older people. At 1:00 P. M. three more cars brought the remainder of the school to the place, and by this time people from the various churches over the county had arrived. The writer endeavored to ascertain the number of churches and schools represented and to the best of his ability there were ten churches represented, which are as follows: Burlington, Graham, Haw River, Mebane, Fairview, Mt. Hermon, Cedar Cliff, Saxapahaw, Concord, and Center. There may have been other churches or schools represented. The first item on the program of the day was the dinner. Were we to attempt to describe fully the sumptuous dinner that was prepared and served at 1:30 P. M., we would surely fail, as our vocabulary would not permit a complete description of the dinner and how it was enjoyed by all who participated. After the dinner had been served, the people assembled in the Casino Building where an entertainment by a class of children from the Children's Home was given and addresses made by Mr. J. M. Stone, of Greensboro, Rev. Geo. Tilley, Baptist minister of Concord, and Rev. G. W. Holmes, of Saxapahaw. At the close of the program a brief business session was held and it was decided to make the picnic and rally occasion a permanent, annual day with the churches and Sunday schools in the county. Officers were elected to make the plans and arrangements for the gathering next year. Rev. G. L. Curry was elected Chairman of the organization. With this new organization to plan for the occasion next year, we are safe in saying that these annual gatherings will hereafter be better and larger.

The Burlington Township Sunday School Convention was held in our church last Sunday afternoon. The writer was honored with the chairmanship of the convention.

Announcement was made from the pulpit Sunday morning that election of delegate and alternate to the annual conference would take place on next Sunday morning; also that the third quarterly conference would be held on Friday night, Sept. 3rd, at eight o'clock. We trust our people will be present both next Sunday for the election of delegate and at the quarterly conference on the following Friday night.

We are very sorry to note the illness of Bro. L. W. Holt, the most faithful and efficient teacher of the Baraca class in our Sunday school. Bro. Holt has been in poor health for several weeks, and his condition has become more serious for the part few days. Special prayer was offered for him in the Baraca class Sunday morning. We sincerely hope that he will be blessed and restored to his usual health and strength again. There is probably no other person in our church and Sunday school that would be missed more than Bro. Holt is, and certainly no one else is more faithful in attendance than he.

Our people are awake to their responsibility in regard to the approaching revival meeting in our church. Already cottage prayer metings are being held preparatory for the meeting. The revival meeting will begin on the first Sunday in September. Our pastor will do the preaching during the meeting. We ask the churches throughout the conference to pray for the meeting that it may mean a great harvest of souls for the church.

The Christian Endeavor Society will enjoy its first picnic outing next Saturday afternoon. This society has been organized about nine months and has never had a picnic or gathering outside the regular meetings of the society. It held its first business meeting last week and definite work was planned for the coming revival in our church.

Miss Swannie Patterson, the popular and worthy president of the Senior Philathea class of our Sunday school, is enjoying her vacation at the Exposition in California.

Perryman-Wagner Wedding.

On Thursday evening, July 29, at 6 P. M., at the home of the bride, Rev. J. A. Palmer, pastor of the bride, united in matrimony Mr. J. Elmer Perryman, son of Mr. Jno. Perryman, and Miss Nova Wagner, daughter of Mr. R. J. Wagner. The bride is a member of Pilgrim Reformed church, and one of our finest young women. She comes from one of our finest families, and will be missed in our community by her many friends and relatives because of her charming personality and cheery disposition. But while we are sorry to lose her from our community, still we congratulate Mr. Perryman in being the winner of such a splendid young woman to be his life companion.

Mr. Perryman comes from one of the best families of the Midway section of our county, and is one of those sturdy young men, who will win in life. With a splendid personality and handsome appearance he ought to become one of the leaders in his community, in social, civic and religious life.

There were quite a number of relatives and friends of the couple present to witness the ceremony. Miss Bessie Wagner, sister of the bride, played Lohengrin's weddingmarch while the minister, followed by the couple, marched into the parlor. During the ceremony she played Traumerei very softly.

After receiving the congratulations of those present, and partaking of a bountiful supper, the couple left in an automobile for Winston-Salem where they expected to spend a day or two and then return to the home of the groom where they will reside for at least a while. Our heartiest congratulations are extended to this couple as they start life together. May their years together be crowned with abundant blessing.

Father, I crave the gift of a kind heart. Give me a sense of kinship with my fellow men. Give me a fellow feeling: a heart sensitive to the sorrows of men: an unfailing compassion for the needy: an infinite patience with the erring.—Edward Leigh Pell.

revival at this point with eighteen conversions, and perhaps a good part of it is due to Bro. A. Ridge, and others who have kept up the prayer meeting. We are now at Mt. Pleasant, just entering a special meeting. Bro. Shelton will come to me Saturday. We anticipate a good meeting at this point because they have been having prayer meeting and one of the best Sunday schools on the work with Bro. Lee A. Briles superintendent. We go to Jerusalem first Sunday in September with Bro. Hulin as pulpit help. Second Sunday in September, at Piney Grove, with Bro. D. R. Williams as pulpit help. Fourth Sunday in September at Flint Hill, Bro. Hulin as pulpit help. Dear reader, please pray for us.

The people of the Piney Grove community have suffered a great loss by the death of Mrs. Julia Delk. To say she was a good woman doesn't express it. Eternity only can reveal the noble life she has lived, but many who are left behind feel her Christian influence still lingering with them, and it will bless their lives while on earth. We feel our loss greatly, but feel our loss is her eternal gain. May God bless her children and many friends left behind.

I must say Bro. N. W. Lanier made the writer a present of a nice pair slippers some time ago. Sister Beck, of another denomination, made Mrs. Trogdon and our daughter Adletta a present of a nice new dress apiece. Many thanks to you both. I close with best wishes to the Herald and its many readers. Joel B. Trogdon.

Spring Church Circuit.—The third quarterly conference was held at Lebanon church Aug. 7, 1915. The usual business was transacted in a good spirit. T. N. Crew was elected delegate to the next Annual Conference and H. E. Vassar, alternate.

At the special meeting at Lebanon second Sunday in August, Rev. D. A. Fishel did all the preaching. His sermons were highly appreciated. The attendance was good and the interest in the meeting was encouraging. There were about 19 conversions. The following persons joined the church: Henry Woodruff, Peter Thompson, William Burnett, Dick Thompson, Bernard Woodruff, Mary Jordan, Sarah Jane Woodruff.

The protracted meeting at Spring church began on the fourth Sabbath in August, closed Thursday. Rev. J. D. Williams did the preaching. This was a good meeting; the church was revived and there were about 27 conversions. The following persons united with the church: H. L. Rowell, Alice Neal, Gracie Sledge, Annie Evans, George Justice, Ruby Epps, George Sledge, Cleaton Massey, Foster Vassar, Myrtie Evans, Carey Massey, Jas. Mitchell, Cyrus Mitchell, Ashba Sledge.

On the third Sunday of September the meeting begins at Kernersville. Rev. N. G. Bethea will do the preaching. The pastor requests that all who read this remember these two meetings in prayer.

Vance Circuit.—Since our last report we have held two special meetings, beginning at Gillburg the fourth Sunday in July. Here we had no pulpit help until Monday night, when Brother Bethea preached one good sermon. After Monday night Brother D. R. Williams preached every night and one afternoon. We had twelve conversions and eight accessions. The church was revived and helped. The help of Brothers Williams and Bethea was greatly appreciated by Pastor and people, and was helpful to all who heard.

The first Sunday in August we began our meeting at New Hope, with Brother C. J. Edwards as help. He came to us on Sunday and did all the preaching and did it well. Here we had twenty conversions and eight accessions. The church was also greatly revived.

We have had sixty-five conversions and thirty-four accessions on this work this year. We greatly appreciate the extra good help of all the brethren in our meetings, and pray God's blessings upon them and their work. We also appreciate the aid of many of the brethren and sisters as personal workers in these metings.

The pastor has been in meetings of his own and those of other brethren for the past six weeks, straight, and this week is enjoying a much needed rest.

The count at our third quarterly conference showed Brother A. E. Paschall elected delegate and Brother E. S. Glovell alternate to our next Annual Conference.

Three of the oldest members on this charge have died during this year—Bro. Watkins and Sister Capps of New Hope church and Sister Harris of Harris Chapel. They were honored and loved in their respective communities.

The good people of this work continue to "pound" us by degrees, for which we are very grateful, and the longer we dwell among them and serve them the more fully we realize that "the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places."

Fraternally,
A. L. Hunter.

Granville.—This may seem like a late report, but have been waiting for report of our meetings at Antioch and Union Chapel, but as that must have been lost in the mail will write this word of appreciation of Bro. D. R. Williams' work. We had a gracious revival at each church. A number of professions at each church. Two received into church at Antioch and seven at Union Chapel. Bro. Williams is great help in a meeting and a number said that it was the best preaching they ever heard. He failed not to flay the evils of the present and his work was highly appreciated by pastor and people.

Sorry the detailed report was lost, or at least it has never come out. The editor will excuse me for putting it that way as I once had a communication to roost in one of his "pigeon holes" until it was too old for publication. That was the cause of the abrupt close of the Florida Letters. I thought they were crowded out. I never felt slighted in the least as the wonder was that any cared for them. But as another preacher was involved in this, thought I better try it over.

Our revival campaign on Granville was very satisfactory and Bros. Millaway and Williams No. Four endeared themselves to us all by their faithful work and good preaching. N. G. Bethea.

Clarks Chapel, Buncombe Ct.—The special meeting began the 4th Sunday in August and is still going on; it is in full bloom now. Bro. Martin is digging us all up and showing us where we stand. It is hard to understand how any one out of Christ can sit and hear such sermons of power and go away unsaved. There has been a good number saved and the church revived in a powerful manner. Bro. Martin has succeeded in getting Rev. Mr. Hanes, from Atlanta, Ga., for pulpit help. He will be with us Aug. 30th. Bro. Martin has been preaching us some great sermons. They are so heplful to us. The Lord is blessing us. Pray that our meeting may be a great success.

Yours in Christ,

Lula Gill.

Union Chapel, Mocksville Ct.—Our S. S. is not as good as it should be in attendance. I, for one, have been somewhat disappointed because it's not been better, although I'm glad it's as good as it is. Our superintendent, Mr. J. A. Cheshire, has been faithful. Our protracted meeting was the first Sunday in August with Rev. J. W. Austin as pulpit help. We had a very good meeting. Mr. Austin did some good preaching and there were several conversions and reclamations; four joined the church. Our pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, worked hard to make the meeting a success and we all like our preacher. We have been trying to work up a W. H. Missionary Society in our church. I hope we will soon succeed because I feel like it would do our church a great deal of good.

Mrs. W. H. Gaither.

MARRIED.

On June the 30th, at the home of the bride, Mr. Walter Clark to Miss Bernice Buroughs. Miss Buroughs has been teaching in the graded school at High Point for the past two years, and is now an efficient teacher in the Sunday school at Harris Chapel. Mr. Clark is secretary of the same Sunday school. The writer officiated.

DIED.

Mrs. Melissa Killingworth was born April the 14th, 1840, and died July 11th, 1915. She had been confined to her bed for more than three months, and suffered a great deal. She expressed herself as being perfectly resigned to God's will.

She lived and died in the community where she was born. She was first married to Charles Henley, of N. C. To this union were born two children; one son, J. H. Henley, and one daughter, Mrs. Jerry Stone. Her first husband died in the war between the states, and she was left a widow for several years with two small children. She bravely fought through the years of toil and hardship, never being discouraged, but always doing her best.

Some time in the seventies, she was married to Preston Killingsworth, who preceded her to the grave only a few years. To this union were born seven children, two of them dying in infancy; two sons and three daughters survive her: S. C. Killingsworth, of Donalds, and C. W. Killingsworth, of this community; Mrs. Alma Dornburg, Mrs. Luther Hall, of Spartanburg, and Mrs. Bob Moore, of Waterloo; and several grandchildren.

Early in life she professed faith in Christ and joined the M. P. Church at Harmony, and died in the church of her choice. The last time the writer saw her, she said she was ready to go when the Master called for her. She was a great believer in prayer, and prayed a great deal during her last illness.

She said she had many trials and disappointments in life, but felt that these were all for her good and God's glory. She loved her children. Her hands were always busy doing for them. She was one of the most industrious women the writer has ever known. She was never idle, most of her work was done for the comfort of others. She will be greatly missed in her family and community, and the church will miss her much. She was always ready to help in any thing the church undertook to do, but we feel that our loss is her gain.

A funeral service was held in Harmony church, after which her body was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the family burying ground. Her grandsons acted as pall bearers.

We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family. May her children and grandchildren all live so they will meet her in heaven. Yea, may we all strike hands on that beautiful shore.

"It was not in anger nor in wrath,
The reaper came that day,
But an angel came to earth
And bore the mother away."

OUR OFFICIAL ORGAN.

At the last General Conference a resolution was presented to the Conference by the writer and others in favor of consolidating the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Recorder, giving us one general organ for the entire Church. This resolution found favor with the Conference and a Committee was appointed to take up the matter and report at the next session of the General Conference. It is to be hoped that this Committee is doing the work assigned to it and that the report will be made next May and it is devoutly to be hoped that the report may be favorable to the consolidation of the two papers.

With two general organs one half the church does not know what the other half is doing; and while this is true we can never sing in sincerity in the General Conference,

"Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one,
Our comforts and our cares."

You can not expect people to take two General Organs—we are either too poor or too stingy. At the time of the meeting of the last General Conference but one copy of the Methodist Recorder was coming into the bounds of the North Carolina Conference. I should like to be an intelligent Methodist Protestant, but can never hope to be while we have two so-called organs, for I am not going to pay for two papers to get what we should get in one. Let us have one general organ—one great and good church paper and it will help us to become intelligent members of the church and will draw us closer together so we can truly sing "Blest be the tie that binds Our hearts in Christian love: The fellowship of kindred minds Is like to that above."

Stokesdale, N. C., Aug. 30, 1915.

St. Paul Ct.—We held our third quarterly meeting last Saturday, August 28, at Liberty Grove. All of the churches were represented. The finances of the work are hopeful. Bro. A. W. Curtis, of Liberty, was declared elected delegate to the next Annual Conference. Bro. W. M. Taylor, of St. Paul church was elected alternate. The Sunday schools of the work were reported to be encouraging, a good increase was reported.

G. F. Millaway.

Asheville.—Sunday was an off day with us. The preacher bit off more than he could chew in his sermons, so he was off, and the folks were away visiting, so they were off. I hope we'll all be back by next Sunday. However, we were there again so far as Christian Endeavor is concerned. The Society crawled into a hole about six weeks ago, but it was reorganized after preaching service last Sunday, and bids fair to take a much more active part in the work than it did before it crawled into that hole.

It has been my intention for some time to publish a list of the contributions to the "Andrew Pickens Memorial Window," in the Asheville church, but other things have crowded it out. With the editor's permission I will give that list now. The contributors are all descendents of Rev. Andrew Pickens, who organized the first Methodist Protestant church west of the Ridge, and it was thought fitting to honor his memory in this way. Mrs. C. W. Bates, $10; Mrs. Eliza Greenwood, Mr. Sol. Carter, Mrs. Etta Smathers, Mrs. R. C. Pickens, Mr. R. A. Pickens, Col. S. V. Pickens, Mr. Wesley Gill, Mrs. D. E. Walker, $5.00 each; Mrs. Robert Pickens, Rev. C. J. Adwards, Frank Edwards, Mrs. Mamie Garrison, and the Weaverville church, $1.00 each. The window lacks about $30.00 of being paid for, but some of those who have been written to have not yet contributed.

It looks to me, if money doesn't come in a little faster in response to my appeals, like I'd have to get me a submarine if I'm to get down in the dumps any farther than I am now. You might at least contribute something to the purchase of the thing, so I won't have to bear that expense too. I've heard so many people say, and I appreciate that kindness, that they like to read my appeals for money, that I have about decided that's the reason the folks who haven't paid anything are so slow in coming across. They want me to keep on writing. If you want me to quit, you'd better send me that check.

"And a little child shall lead them." When I was pastor, for the college vacation, on Siler City work, a little boy at Piney Grove gave me a penny, all the money he had, on my salary. I shall never forget it. The little folks can do their part, the parents can help them to do it. Mrs. Myra Street, who sends this money for her son, says, "It seems to me your letters are enough to make any one who has pledged 'come across' ". What do you think about it? I'd like to see your answer by the next mail after you see this.

Members of the Baraca-Philathea classes of the Methodist Protestant Sunday school last night enjoyed an outing at the summit of Sunset mountain. Many of the members of the organized classes formed the party which left here in the afternoon and returned at a late hour at night and they will long remember the occasion as one of great pleasure.

Numerous games were played at the summit of the peak and just before dusk, a varied menu was served in picnic style, the members of the party taking lunches to the top of the mountain for the spread. The setting of the sun, with its splendid scenic effects and gorgeous color study, held the admiration of the picnickers, a number of whom had never seen day give way to night from Sunset under more ideal surroundings. Excellent weather and a clear sky made the sunset unusually beautiful last night.

The members of the two classes arranged the outing sometime ago and all preparations for the picnic were completed during the latter part of the past week. —Asheville Paper.

Halifax Circuit.—Our special meeting at Union closed last Thursday. Bro. Burgess came on Saturday and did all of the preaching. We were pleased with his preaching. This church has a membership of only 26 and several of those live too far away to attend services here, but the church gave Bro. Burgess a purse of about $15.00 for his services. All of my churches feel that it is wrong to ask a man to come and help in a meeting for just his expenses or a little more, and I am glad they take that view of it. We had five conversions at Union. Two joined the church there, two others gave their names to join at Eden church next Sunday, and the fifth one may join soon. I am sure that the church was greatly revived under Bro. Burgess's forceful preaching.

We had a large congregation at Lee's Chapel church yesterday for two services. Bro. Curtis Hardy professed Christ at the morning service, and will likely join the church there at the next regular appointment, at which time his wife hopes to place her letter with us. During the special meeting, 12 or more persons gave me this man's name, saying that they were praying for him. Is it remarkable that he was saved? Not at all. More of the unsaved will accept Christ when we get to praying earnestly for them.

Mr. S. M. Lewis, Mrs. Margaret Lee, and Mrs. Bettie Draper have furnished us several bushels of peaches for which we are very thankful.

R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

P. S. I forgot to say above that two of the members of Lee's Chapel church decided yesterday to pay one tenth of their income next year. If the Circuit should be divided next year, I believe that this church will pay $350.00 instead of about $135.00 as they have been doing.

Shiloh, Yadkin College Circuit.—On Saturday, Henry Clay Waitman, the seven year old son of Brother and Sister C. L. Waitman, met with a serious accident, which resulted in instant death. His father runs a wood saw, which he drives from place to place with a traction engine. The little boy's older brother, Clifton, was driving the engine and was passing the home of the little fellow, when he tried to jump on the engine with his brother; missing the object he grabbed at he was thrown to the ground and the heavy wheels of the engine struck him causing instant death. To make the accident still sadder, the mother was in bed with a small sister only two days old, and the shock was almost more than she could bear. She is a faithful Christian, however, and said while the little one was taken from her, she could go to it. The funeral services were conducted at Shiloh church on Sunday by their pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, assisted by Rev. Edward Suits. The sympathy of the entire church goes out to these bereaved parents in this sad hour.

Our protracted meeting began the third Sunday in August and closed on Thursday following. The crowd on Sunday was variously estimated at from 1,000 to 1,500 people. The older members of the church say it was as large, if not the largest crowd, they ever saw present on the first Sunday of the meeting. The attendance and interest during the week was kept at a high guage, the church being about full at every service. Brother Suits, of Pinnacle, did all the preaching and it was well done. He did not relate "grave yard" stories to excite our emotions, but simply preached God's word in such a fearless and convincing way that it did the work. Taken as a whole, they were by far the best series of sermons we have ever heard delivered in a series of metings. We do not recall a single service after Sunday, but that some Christian was made to shout the praises of God. Sinners also came forward to the altar and were converted at nearly every service. The visible results of the meeting are about 20 conversions and reclamations, and 9 additions to the church. The church gained much higher ground.

The note and interest amounting to $187.93, held by Mrs. Sarah Shoaf, against our church, was taken up by the pastor and the Sec. and Treas. of the Building Committee on Saturday following the protracted meeting. As told in our last letter to the Herald, the pastor started out to take subscriptions to liquidate the debt on our church, but before he got around, he ran about $50.00 over. When the meeting closed, he had collected all but $9.00 and this will be paid in in a few days. So that at the next business meeting the pastor will have $50.00 to turn over to the church to be used as they may direct.

Besides raising this $238.00 to pay off the debt on the church, there were other committees at work during the meeting. At the close of the meeting the church treasurer, Brother Baxter Leonard, announced that he had sufficient funds in hand to settle with the janitor, which is $25.00 per year, and as his year will be out the first of September, the church instructed him to settle in full for the year's work. The janitor stated that there was a deficit of $9.00 on last year's work. This too was quickly paid by a voluntary contribution by those present.

The church presented Bro. Suits with a purse of $14.52, as a slight token of appreciation of his valuable services.

Reporter.

Mt. Zion.—Because the reporter has been negligent in doing her duty in reporting is certainly not because our church and Sunday school is not doing its duty.

Our revival meeting, which was held third week in July was indeed a sweet and reviving meeting which drew us near to our Savior. Rev. H. L. Powell was our helper. He preached many able sermons and found a welcome waiting in more homes than he could possibly visit.

At the close of the meeting nine united with our church, three coming to our church from the Missionary Baptist. Our Sunday school this summer has been good with a very good attendance. The Sunday school convention was held at our church Saturday before first Sunday in August.

The Young People's Sunday School Rally was held at our church Saturday before fourth Sunday in August. This was our first S. S. rally. We hope that much good will be the result of the rallies which we hope will be held on this circuit from year to year. Rev. Mr. Taylor, from Winston, was with us and gave an inspiring and educational address on Sunday school. The rally will meet at Pinnacle next year. We have prayer meeting on Wednesday nights. Ada Jones, Reporter.

Moriah, Tabernacle Ct.—Our special meeting began last Sunday and closed Thursday night. Rev. W. C. Kennett preached Sunday morning and Rev. E. C. Murray, pastor of Alamance Presbyterian church, Sunday afternoon. Two fine sermons. Rev. L. W. Gerringer came on Monday morning and preached two sermons a day till the meeting closed. He gave us some powerful sermons (I heard a man say he had never heard an equal to one of them.) As we had three services a day, Bro. Johnson preached one each day. He gave us something good and practical, a characteristic of Bro. Johnson. One thing especially that showed we had good preaching was our crowds, and they increased from night to night. So many Presbyterians attended these services. We were glad to have them. It was truly a great revival. Some praised God aloud. Fifteen took Christ as their Savior. Four of these joined the church. Others are going to join different churches. Three besides these came to us by letter. There are still others of our loved ones who were not willing to put their lives in God's care. How our feelings go out for them when we realize what may be the outcome. God did his part. Did we do ours? Have we lived so these could tell that we were Christians in life as well as in name? We feel very much indebted to Bro. Gerringer for the many blessings bestowed on us during our revival. It was indeed a treat to have him and Bro. Johnson visit in our homes.

Our third quarterly conference was held at Moriah Wednesday afternoon. Mr. S. M. Brown of Shady Grove was elected delegate to our Annual Conference.

We were glad to have Misses Elma, Lois and Maud Sharp, of Mt. Hermon church, visit our S. S. Sunday.

ATTENTION, HALIFAX CIRCUIT!

Quarterly Conference:—The third quarterly conference will be held at Lee's Chapel church Tuesday the 7th of Sept. at 2:00 P. M., Pres. C. A. Cecil presiding. It is always important that all official members attend a quarterly conference, but it is unusually important at this time for a matter of very great importance will likely come before this conference. No doubt but this is the most important thing that this Circuit has thought of in many years, and the official brethren will be doing an injustice to their church and to the circuit if they fail to attend.

President's appointments:—

Eden, Monday, Sept. 6th, at 11 A. M.

Ringwood, Mon., Sept. 6th, at 3:30 P. M.

The President will not preach at Whitakers Chapel and Enfield as published last week, but the appointments at Speight's Chapel and Whitaker's Temple remain as published. T. E. Davis.

DIED.

In the early morning of Aug. 27, 1915, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Harris, of Henderson, and took the spirit of little Samuel Harris Yerkes, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Yerkes, of Philadelphia, Pa., and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Harris.

Mrs. Yerkes and children had been visiting her parents for the past few weeks and the little boy was taken sick after they came. His illness was of a very serious nature from the beginning, and Mr. Yerkes was notified of the serious illness of his child and he reached his beside several days before the end came. Harris was a bright boy and unusually obedient to his parents.

May the Lord bless the bereaved ones and may they all meet the sweet spirit of little Harris on the other shore.

The funeral was conducted by the writer Saturday, Aug. 28, and interment was in Elmwood cemetery.

—Italy has declared war against Turkey.

—England has declared cotton contraband.

—A preacher that will not eat chicken is said to belong to our Conference. A rare man.

—Editor Slate, of the Lincolnton Times, was a recent caller at our office. Sorry to have missed seeing him.

—Recently in an address on Flag Day in Washington, President Wilson said: "As I think of the life of this great nation, it seems to me that we sometimes look to the wrong places for its sources. We look to the noisy places, where men are talking in the market places. We look to where men are expressing their individual opinions. We look where partisans are expressing passion, instead of trying to attune our hearts to that voiceless mass of men who merely go about their daily tasks, trying to be honorable, trying to serve the people they love, trying to live worthy of the great communities to which they belong. These are the breath of the nation's nostrils; these are the sinew of its might."

that expresses itself in reeling men, in frightened women and children the land over. It is a strange national honor that expresses itself in smoldering cities, devastated fields, and whole cemeteries. Last but not least, most emphatically, it is a strange, even an unequal, zeal for citizenship that will permit a nation to fill city and country with widows and orphans and bury its thousands to avenge the death of a hundred.

The principle of non-assertion is Christ's rule for national relationship just as truly as that for individuals; and because some nations are not ready to accept it in practice, we must not look upon the principle as hard and impracticable nor upon its advocates as visionary theorists and sentimentalists. Remember, yet again, that we are evolving almost imperceptibly from one system of morals into a higher; and no people as a whole have been able to see the wisdom of, nor to accept, the next higher system when it was first given.

In this connection our day has its men of destiny. President Wilson is such a one. And I have thanked God more than once that he has given to these critical times such a person to be our chief executive.

But God has also made out of men prophets for our age. As such they are living ahead of us and getting us ready for the next higher step. It would seem that Mr. Taft has somewhat of the vision of a prophet in his suggestion for a federation of the nations of the earth and the establishment of an international tribunal and likewise of a council for the settlement of all international disputes and then the joint use of international arms to prevent any signatory power from going to war till the matter of dispute has been submitted either to said council or tribunal. Most certainly it is an axiomatic proposition that no nation has a right to use its arms for the destruction of another reputable nation, any more than one individual has a right to destroy another individual.

In 1896, when Mr. Bryan unexpectedly burst forth from the Chicago convention a national leader, it was declared by more than one reputable journal that he was another Joshua to lead the people into the land of promise. Yes, time has revealed that he was not only a Joshua, but more. He is a prophet and a statesman without an equal. He is going ahead of the people and leaders of his day. As a prophet he has been able to appreciate God's principle of non-assertion. As a great statesman and diplomat he has been able to accomplish a greater victory without arms than Joshua at Jericho. The man that can bind thirty nations of this world—all but four—up with treaties that make war almost a matter of impossibility is no ordinary man.

Neither is Mr. Bryan far wrong when he insists that there should be a thorough and deliberate international investigation of the Lusitania affair and a vote of the people as to their desire for war, and that in the event of a declaration of war only those be required to go that voted for it. We are sure he is right when he says that if regard for personal safety will not deter people from taking passage upon belligerent ships or upon ships carrying ammunition into a prohibited war zone, then a patriotic consideration of the welfare of one's nation ought to deter them.

The final cessation of war in the earth is God's declared purpose, and any great leader that effectively helps toward this end is surely God's servant. Here is God's purpose: "And he shall judge between many peoples, and shall reprove strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it. (Mic. iv. 3, 4; Isa. ii. 4.)

Beside the above picture, here is still another: "The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play upon the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put its hand on the cockatrice's den. They shalll not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." (Isa. xi. 6-9.)

These are pictures of individual and national peace. Is it worth the faith in, the effort for, and the self-surrender to a principle of personal and national non-assertion that is necessary to make it a reality to us?

Every person and every nation that stands back in doubt as to the feasibilty of such a principle only helps to keep intact, alive, and destructively mighty a brute force that has within itself no such thing as reconciliation to a kingdom of peace.

What the Prince of Peace said to Peter has been reaffirmed for every age since by the voicings of the Holy Spirit. But how slow are even God's own to hear! Stop, every fighter! Stop, O nations of the earth! Does not the Prince say to every one of you, "Put up thy sword"? —Rev. H. C. Allen, in Christian Advocate.

HOLDING TO THE DREAM.

The baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of Brown University upon its 15th anniversary by President W. H. P. Faunce was a dissertation upon the dreams of youth. Dr. Faunce's sermon is so pertinent to the thought of men and women at this time that we are glad to present the following selections to our readers:

"Never did another graduating class during Brown's 150 years go out into a world so dark as that which the class of 1915 is about to enter. The whole of civilization seems to have been cast into a pit. Into the mire and darkness have tumbled cathedrals, universities, thriving cities, peaceful villages, and waving harvest fields. Into the pit have literaly descended millions of Europe's choicest young men, treated as 'cannon fodder.' Into the pit have gone our dreamers—poets, musicians, statesmen, priests—and have carried with them our fond hopes that the last war had been fought; that the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World, was about to be established. This is the day of apparent triumph for the cynic and the scoffer. * * *

"The great powers of the modern world seem to mock our clear-eyed college men and women. Science, misunderstood and perverted, would consign us all to the 'fell clutch of circumstance' and the domination of physical law. Philosophy, interpreted by Nietzsche, would tell us that hatred is a biological necessity and the Christian religion an oriental dream not to be reconciled with occidental progress.

"The world powers seem to conspire to tell the college graduate that he is a chaser of rainbows, and try to fling him and his altruistic dreams down into the pit of pessimism and despair. Will you, men and women of 1915, go there? Or will you die rather than adopt the pit philosophy and surrender your faith in humanity and in God?

"We may grant at once that the dreams of youth seldom come true in their original form. They are only rough sketches of the statue that is some day to be hewn out of the solid marble. But unless we have some kind of rough sketch we shall never carve our statue. If we cannot dream, there is no hope that we can achieve. * * *

"The New Testament is physhologically as well as religiously right when it says: 'If thou canst believe—all things are possible to him that believeth.' But the belief demanded by the Bible is not belief in propositions, but in possibilities. It is faith in human nature, such as Christ had when he saw in fickle Peter the rock, and in Mary Magdalen one worthy to be immortalized. It is belief in the value of human effort, in education, philanthropy, science, and art. It is belief in the educability of the race, in the progress of humanity, in the infinite value of apostle and prophet and martyr. It is belief in the worth of one's own personality, and the refusal to rest in any petty success we have achieved. It is belief that God's tomorrow is to be finer and fairer than all our yesterdays, and that it is "the last of life for which the first was made.'

"The last essential to the realization of a dream is that it shall include the welfare of all humanity. A noble vision is all-inclusive and covers the whole horizon.

"I charge every member of the graduating class to hold steadily before him, the hope and vision of a league of all the nations to maintain an enduring peace. It has been a source of great satisfaction to me during the last tragic year that our Brown students have done nothing tending to inflame racial passion or embroil us in European war. We have let others hurl 'explosive adjectives and forty-two centimeter verbs,' and we have tried to understand before we denounce. But our peace efforts must be more than negative. They must involve something more compelling than abstinence and limitation. They must be contructive and heroic efforts to find a new way of settling the ancient feuds of the world.

"War is old—pathetically old, tragically futile, hopelessly antiquated. Peace—peace heroic and sacrificial—is the new vision which only young men can really believe in. Thousands around us are realizing the biblical description of old age: 'They shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way.' But the policy of fear and force has utterly broken down. Fear has created the conflagration now burning. The nations that have trusted in force are precisely the ones today attacked by the largest number of enemies.

"They that have taken the sword are perishing by the sword. The impossibility that of two nations each shall become stronger than the other on land and sea is now tragically demonstrated. All the world can now see the difference beween the boundary line between Italy and Austria defended on both sides by bristling fortresses erected at incredible expense, and the boundary line between Canada and the United States defended by goodwill and co-operation.

"Will you young men and women hold to the vision of a world-wide pact of peace? Can you stand the ridicule of those whose only hope is in bayonets and howitzers? Can you endure the scorn of those who have no faith in any nation except their own, and no faith in any argument save brute force? * * *

"Be now as resolute and heroic in time of peace as in time of war. Face the scepticism and materialism of the age as unflinchingly as you would face bullets. Stand by your dreams as you would stand by your colors. Then in God's good time, it may be in ten years, it may be in a thousand, the dream you refused to surrender shall come gloriously true."—Advocate of Peace.

REMARKABLE INTELLIGENCE OF AN UNTRAINED DOG.

I threw down my axe, stooped over, braced my inclined body by resting hands on my knees and gazed steadfastly into old Pointer's face. Pointer had carried, stick by stick, the wood which I had cut in the barn lot and placed it in the wood-box by the stove in the kitchen.

My host, an old farmer acquaintance, had left me a few minutes; and, while alone, I indulged in a bygone-duty as a boy, chopping wood. As I threw it out stick by stick, Pointer, a bird dog belonging to a relative of my host who lived upon a near-by hill, was standing near, and he carried in the wood until the box was completely filled. I threw out a large unsplit stick to test his sincerity, and with much difficulty he finally dragged it to the house.

With this experiment, I was determined to learn something of my new four-footed friend, whom I had learned to admire in such a short time.

When my host returned I informed him what had happened. "Oh, yes," he said with a solemn smile, "Pointer is our greatest helper," and then he continued, as he looked down at the dog, "he is truly a friend in need, and one of the most accommodating neighbors we have out here."

Pointer was just a common looking white bird dog, with eyes which bore an uncommonly intelligent expression.

After this experience, when I looked into his eyes and talked to him, somehow I felt that he certainly understood at least some of the things which I said to him.

After Pointer had carried in the wood and done a few other chores about the house, he went home. The next day I was anxious to find out something about the dog's training.

Fortunately, the dog's master was an old friend of mine, and, the following day, when I asked about his tutoring, I was rather perplexed when he promptly stated that the dog had never had any training, but that it was a natural ability.

His discovery of the dog's rare intelligence was purely accidental. While putting on his shoes one morning, one shoe was missing. Pointer was standing by, waching him as he drew on the shoe, and, as he finished, he laughingly said:

"Pointer, I believe you know something about my other shoe. If you know where it is, please get it."

The dog immediately walked out of the door and soon came back with the shoe in his mouth. This was a complete though pleasant surprise to him, and from that moment on the dog was dealt with much the same as if he had been a boy. He was sent daily to the rural mail-box for the mail. He was dispatched a number of times daily a half mile away for butter, sweet milk and other articles. He was the man's servant, who never failed him and never refused to obey.

Pointer was always faithful. He never ate any food which he carried excepting on one occasion. One day he was sent for a pound of butter and when he returned, and the door was closed and he could not bring any one to the door by clawing, concluding that the folks had gone away from home, Pointer, not wishing to see the butter go to waste, sat down and ate it. When his people finally opened the door, he showed evidence of embarrassment, and greasy lips and moustache corroborated his testimony that he had eaten it.

On a Sunday morning as I was out on a walk to the country, when within two miles of my friend's home, he passed by on horseback with Pointer walking. I gave Pointer the morning paper and told him to rush ahead with it so his master's family would have it read by the time I passed. Pointer galloped away and fifty minutes later, as I passed by, the family sent the paper out to me, thanking me for the privilege of reading the morning news. That afternoon Pointer and his master came for a few moment's visit at the same home where I was staying. The dog was given many duties to perform and he did them all with much pleasure. When his master's hat was tossed and lodged on the limb of an ash tree, Pointer yelped because he could not reach it. A little later when I was directly under the bough which held the hat I stooped to pick up something from the ground. Pointer was a keen observer and taking immediate advantage of the occasion, came bounding, leaped upon my back, reared upon his long hind feet, reached the lodged hat in the tree and restored it to the owner. This feat I regarded as wonderful, for the dog had doubtless been contriving all the while some way by which he might reach the lodged hat and return it to the owner.

Later in the day, after he had gone home, he was sent back for something. He encountered a fierce thunderstorm, but came on. Amid the clapping thunder Pointer came to the porch window and knocked. His body was pitiably wet and the heavy raindrops had beaten red mud over his body. He did not dread the storm, and when the note which he carried was read he hastened back.

Pointer was a dog. But even though a dog, he held the esteem of every intelligent man. The discovery of his rare natural intelligence was accidental. When this discovery was made, his master took a greater interest in him. He was ever accorded kind and humane treatment, and this encouraged him. Kindness contributes much to a dog's intelligence and makes him more useful. The absence of it will even transform a human into a brute.—Robert Sparks Walker, in Our Dumb Animals.

OBITUARY.

McKinney.

Gone but not forgotten, little Joseph Shull, son of Mr. J. A. and Mrs. Hattie McKinney, was born January 12, 1915, died August 12, 1915. He leaves a father, mother, two brothers and one sister, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. He was a sweet child and loved by all who knew him and will be missed in the home. He was sick only three days. All was done for him that loving hands could do, but God said it was enough and took little Shull to be with him in Heaven where there is no suffering. So weep not, dear loved ones, for little Shull will be waiting for you on that bright and happy shore where there will be no parting and we will never say goodby, but we will always live together in that home beyond the sky. His Aunt, Mrs. Ollie Miller.

LO, THE STAR.

We are not left to grope our way.
That star eternal like the rest
Beams forth as bright as on the night
When wise-men journeyed toward the west.

That star still gleams; it lights the way.
It faded not to shine no more,
But nightly glows in the skies of those Who would the Christ-Child still adore.

And they, whose eyes the Lord hath touched
Behold the star and follow on,
To find their Lord not yet ashamed
To be the lowly Mary's Son.

Beside the oxen still He bides,
And rests Him in the meadow hay.
Where humble tasks and deeds are done,
And humble hearts are, He's alway.

ONE MOTHER.

"Hundreds of stars in the pretty sky;
Hundreds of shells on the shore together;
Hundreds of birds that go singing by,
Hundreds of bees in sunny weather;
Hundreds of dewdrops to greet the dawn;
Hundreds of lambs in the purple clover;
Hundreds of butterflies on the lawn,
But only one mother the wide world over."

WARSAW.

Warsaw, the capital of Russian Poland, and which has been captured by the Germans, had 872,478 population in 1911. It has been called the most beautiful city in eastern Europe. It is a great manufacturing center, especially of iron and steel; situated in a fertile plain noted for its immense wheat production; connected by railroad trunk lines with Vienna, Kiev, Moscow, Danzig and Berlin.

The date of its foundation is unknown; possibly in the ninth century. The city is not mentioned in history until 1224. In medieval times it was the chief entrepot for the trade of the valleys of the Polica, Wieprz, Narew and Bug with western Europe.

Warsaw has been many times conquered and reconquered, and has been the scene of many bloody battles and uprisings. It has been held by the Poles, Sweden, Russia, Prussia, the French under Napoleon, Austria, and again, since 1813, by Russia.

The Universiiy of Warsaw has 1,500 students and a library of 500,000 volumes. —Union Republican.

HAVE FAITH IN GOD.

"The Book of Faith in God is a narrative of incidents in the lives of some of those whom God has taught to confide in him; who learned to be calm and serene in circumstances that bring many people to the verge of panic; who knew that they were in God's hands, and so could say with gladness, 'Thy will be done'; who, by constant effort to do their best while they waited for the revelation of God's will, proved that theirs was a living faith; who found their greatest joy in abiding in the presence of him who honors the faith of those who wait for him."

These introductory sentences by Dr. John T. Faris well describes the purpose of the devotional chapters in his new book and maintains the reputation of his two previous volumes, The Book of God's Providence and The Book of Answered Prayer. These three volumes constitute a library of practical religion. They will be very acceptable for private reading, and will furnish stimulating material for use at weekly prayer meetings.

VISITING NURSE.

The town of New Bern has taken the progressive step of employing a visiting tuberculosis nurse. It will be her duty to personally visit, instruct and assist in the care and treatment of all cases of tuberculosis occurring in New Bern. In the North and East where such great inroads have been made on the tuberculosis death rate the visiting tuberculosis nurse has been given credit for a very large share in this reduction. Every town of 5,000 should have a public health nurse to carry the message of good health and right living down into the very homes where it is most needed.—State Board of Health.

WHAT PEGGY LENT.

"Give me the power to labor for mankind.
Make me the mouth of such as cannot speak.
Eyes let me be to groping men and blind."

Peggy watched Mrs. Toomey go away with a look of relief on her tired face.

"Oh, mother," Peggy said, "I wish I could lend something to somebody, too!"

"Well, why not?" said her mother cheerily.

"Truly?"

Peggy hurried to the door, but Mrs. Toomey's calico dress was just a little blur of dingy red in the distance. It was too late to call her back.

"And there isn't anybody else with seven mites o' little children and a landlord," Peggy said, coming back into the kitchen slowly.

"Besides," she added, as a sudden afterthought, "I spent my money yesterday —I forgot."

Mother smiled. "Never mind, dear heart," she said; "there are other people to lend to besides Mrs. Toomey, and plenty of other things to lend besides money. Now run out on the veranda steps and eat your luncheon."

It was cool and shady out there, but just outside the reach of the great leafy branches of the lime tree, how sunny and hot! Peggy munched her cake and pitied the people going up and down the street. She made believe the avenue was a desert of Sahara, and it really did make a good one. There was such a wide stretch of glaring white dust to cross from curb to curb. Only, of course—Peggy laughed at the idea—"of course, there wasn't a steady procession of camels going up and down the desert of Sa'ra! On the avenue the cam—, I mean the horses and the cars went back and forth always.

"There goes that blind music teacher—he's going to cross the desert of Sa'ra," mused Peggy, lazily. "He always stops a long time and listens, first. I shouldn't like to cross the desert of Sa'ra in the pitch dark, either."

Out on the curbstone the blind man waited and listened. His face was turned toward Peggy sidewise, and it looked anxious and uncertain. There were so many wheels rumbling by! "He's going to give Tilly music les—"

But Peggy never finished that word. A sudden wave of pity swept over her. The next moment the blind man on the corner felt a little hand slip into his and a shy voice was saying in his ear.

"It's me—I'm Peggy," it said. "I'll lead you 'cross just as soon as that 'lectric car goes by—there now!"

Together they crossed the wide, hot avenue in a whirl of dust. Peggy's bare yellow head caught the sunlight like a nugget of gold. On the further curbing she slipped away and ran across again. By and by she remembered the return trip the blind man must take across the avenue.

"I'm going back there and wait for him, so's not to miss him," she decided promptly, and away she flew.

But it was hot on the other side of the avenue. There were no trees, and Peggy thought it wouldn't be polite to sit on other people's doorsteps.

"Tilly Simons takes pretty long music lessons," she thought, with definite sympathy for Tilly and a general compassion for everybody else who had to wait around on sunny avenues without a hat.

The return trip across the desert of Sahara was made safely, and the blind man plodded his careful way home with a happy spot in his heart. And Peggy—Peggy went home with a glad spot, too. She had never thought to be glad for her eyes before.

Mother opened the window and beckoned to Peggy.

"Well, was it as nice as you thought, dear?" she said, smilingly.

"What—was what as nice, mother?" asked puzzled Peggy.

"Lending things to people."

"Why—why, I haven't lent a single thing to anybody, mother."

"No, not a single thing—two things, dear. I think you must have enjoyed it very much."

Peggy looked decidedly astonished. What had she lent to anybody? Two things, mother said.

"Oh," cried Peggy, suddenly, laughing up at her mother. Then her face sobered and grew gentle.

"Yes—oh, yes, I liked it," she said.—African's Friend.

—The Area of the Chugach National Forest, Alaska, which is to be crossed by the railroad that the government is building from Seward to Fairbanks, is reduced nearly one-half by a proclamation, signed by President, returning approximately 5,802,000 acres to the public domain. This action follows classification of the land by Forest Service showing that the areas involved are not of high enough timber value to warrant government protection, and means the largest elimination of National Forest land ever made by a single Presidential proclamation.

REV. L. H. HATLEY DEAD.

Rev. Levi H. Hatley was born Aug. 7, 1869, died Aug. 18, 1915, aged 46 years and eleven days.

He professed religion and joined Friendship Methodist Protestant church in early life. He was admitted to the conference class in 1909, and was ordained in the year 1912. On his admittance to the class he was assigned to Richland Ct. To this charge he rendered acceptable service for two years—1910-'11. At the conference of 1911 he was assigned to Lincoln Ct., where he served the year 1912. On this work, he impressed his people, as perhaps no one else ever did, with his business ability, and untiring energy.

During this year he made considerable progress along material lines as well as in the spiritual development of the work. From this work he was assigned to Buncombe Ct., where he served the year 1913 and '14 until about the first of February, at which time, on account of failing health, and at the urgent advice of his physician, he was compelled to surrender the work.

Since that time he has given what time his health would allow to business.

From the time of his surrender of his pastorate until the end came at the Presbyterian Hospital at Charlotte, he has been a great but resigned sufferer. But amid it all he has boldly asserted his faith and trust in his God. As to his future, he never experienced a doubt. Like Job he knew that his Redeemer lived. For months he was conscious of the approaching end, and said he was ready for whatever might come.

Before the end came he called his boys to his bedside and told them that his end was near, and plead with them to be good boys and to obey their mother, and never to speak a cross word to her, and then he said, "All is well and I am ready to go."

Bro. Hatley was a man of an affectionate nature; his devotion to his wife was tender and touching.

As a preacher he was fearless—his convictions were deep. A man of a former pastorate said to me while he yet lived, "He certainly did me good." Another said, "He gave us the pure gospel."

His funeral was conducted by the writer, at Friendship, his home church, assisted by Revs. Coburn and Richardson, of the M. E. Church.

May the God of all grace comfort the wife and children until they shall be brought together again where no more partings will be. W. D. Reed.

Stone.

One of the saddest occurences known to the citizens of this community was the sudden calling of Sister Myrtle Stone from the activities of life here to the life beyond. When out riding with her husband, Bro. Luther Stone, and their two little ones at the crossing just below Union Chapel they were struck by the Seaboard's fast train number three from New York to Jacksonville. The mother's body was mangled beyond recognition, while the infant son died on the train a little later as he was with his father and brother on the way to the hospital in Raleigh. This happened Sunday afternoon, August 22nd.

Sister Stone was 26 years, 4 months and 12 days old at the time of this accident, while the baby was four months old. She had been a member of Union Chapel since a girl of thirteen and so far as the writer knows had lived a consistent Christian life. Since becoming the pastor have looked upon her as one of the good young women of the church. She leaves a father and mother, besides other members of the family who are grieved beyond measure. She and the little one were buried in the same casket. A great throng of people came to pay their last tribute of respect as we laid their bodies to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morning. At this writing it is not known whether the husband and son of four years will recover or not. They are both suffering from internal injuries and the great wonder is that they are living at all as the horse was cut to pieces and the buggy was torn into splinters. So sad that a home should be almost if not altogether blotted out at one stroke. But such is life and we extend to the stricken ones our heart-felt sympathy and prayers and ask the prayers of all who read this that God's sustaining grace may be given, for we know not how to take the dealings of Providence many times; but we know while we may not see, that He doeth all things well. N. G. Bethea.

Thomas Braford died Aug. 6 at a good old age. He leaves behind his companion and a number of children and grandchildren. He joined the M. E. Church some time early in life. He moved some years ago into the community of Bethany M. P. church, but never connected himself with Bethany church. He was a man of most excellent qualities and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was sick for a long time and it was our privilege to visit him many times during this time. He testified of his acceptance with Christ. He desired to get well and stated that he did not have business like he wished it to be, but he was resigned to God's will in the matter of life. He said this, "If it is the Lord's will for me to get well, we will let business go."

He was sweet spirited and said, "We always have time for prayer." He seemed to appreciate our visits much, and he was very helpful to us. We do not come in contact with good Christian people without being helped. Those dear ones left behind have our sympathy in the hour of sore trial, and we pray that the children may all learn to love and trust the God of their father. J. B. O'Briant.

Martha M. Wilson, beloved wife of Bro. P. L. Wilson, fell asleep in Jesus August 26th, 1915 at the age of 60 years, five months and 22 days. She and Bro. Wilson had been married about 39 years. To them were born 8 children—four sons and four daughters. One of the daughters died in childhood; all the others survive the mother. Sister Wilson had been a member of Flat Rock Church for some 35 years. As a member of the church she was loyal, faithful and true. She loved the church of God. She was glad when the time came to go into the house of God. She loved her pastor and his family and was always glad to have them go into her home.

She was a faithful wife, a loving mother, a kind neighbor and a true friend. She was pure in heart and she has seen God. She loved Jesus and now she has seen his face and become like him. She will be missed most of all in the home—the loving husband must be very lonely without her; but he too trusts in the "God of all comfort" and God's grace will be sufficient for him. She will be missed in the community and in the church. For years her body has been frail, but her abounding energy has kept her up and she has been true to every interest of life.

On Saturday afternoon, August 28, her funeral was preached in Flat Rock church, by her pastor, and we laid her frail body to rest in the cemetery there to await the resurrection morn.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep."

Another "blessed" mother has gone home to God. Oh! the thousands of sweet faced mothers already there and other thousands are pressing on. Some sweet day we shall meet them again in our Father's house of many mansions.

W. F. Kennett, Pastor.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

Mebane Charge.—The special meeting at Hebron began on Sunday, August 15th. Brother Ashburn came on Monday morning in time for the morning service. The meeting continued till Thursday evening. There were a number of conversions and nine united with the church.

The congregations were good from first to last and the people enjoyed the preaching very much. Brother Ashburn seemed to have renewed his zeal and the old-time power was evident in every service.

Among those who joined the church were some of the brightest and most hopeful young lives of the community. It is believed each one attending the services received a blessing. The visiting preacher made for himself a warm place in the hearts of the people and now their doors are wide open to him, with the hope that he will come this way again.

The most enjoyable social event of the season was the entertainment of the two Philathea classes of the Sunday school by the Baraca class. The purpose was to give the entertainment on the church lawn last Friday evening from 7:30 to 10:00, but the rain drove the crowd to the Piedmont warehouse. Some were doubtless kept away by the rain, but notwithstanding the weather there were about seventy-five present and every one seemed to have a good time.

The election for delegate has been held, but as we have not yet held our third quarterly meeting it is not known who is elected. The third quarterly meeting will be held at Hebron, Saturday, September 4th, at 2:30 P. M. Every member of the quarterly conference is pressingly urged to be present. W. E. Swain.

August 30, 1915.

High Point.—Our third quarterly conference was held on Tuesday evening Aug. 24th. The reports were all fairly good. The following are some extracts from the pastor's report. "During this quarter your pastor has endeavored to have several of the representative men of the Methodist Protestant Church preach here. This has been done with very little cost to the church. It also enabled the pastor to get some rest, and at the same time not leave the pulpit vacant but one Sunday.

We have been favored with splendid sermons by the following brethren: Prof. T. C. Amick, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, Rev. L. B. Smith, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, Rev. F. T. Tagg, D. D., Rev. C. E. Forlines, D. D., and Rev. Geo. L. Curry.

The average attendance for the quarter at the various services has been as follows: Sunday school, 312; morning preaching services, 243; evning preaching services, 149; prayer meetings, 26. I have preached and made addresses at other places 55 times during the quarter, have made 93 pastoral calls, married one couple, and conducted 3 funerals. There have been 112 conversions in the meetings where I have assisted.

It has been a very busy summer with me, but the Lord has abundantly blessed and I feel in fair shape for the fall campaign.

Our Sunday school has lapsed somewhat during the hot weather, and we need to do a good bit of hustling to get it back in good shape for the fall work. We are hoping that our rally day on Sept. 5th will gather back our scattered forces."

It was found that Bro. A. M. Idol was delegate elect to the next Annual Conference. And Dr. S. S. Coe was elected alternate.

On next Sunday, Sept. 5th, our revival services will begin, and Rev. Leonard B. Smith of Christ Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, is to do the preaching. Let every one who is interested in the Lord's work here pray very earnestly for His blessings upon us. We are expecting great things from the Lord. The meetings will continue for two full weeks, and it is our purpose to close the meetings on the 19th of Sept. by celebrating the 20th anniversary of the opening and dedication of this church. Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, the first pastor of the church, and Rev. C. L. Whitaker, D. D., a former pastor, will preach for us on that day. Rev. Wm. Porter, Rev. J. S. Williams, and Rev. J. D. Williams, all former pastors, are cordially invited to be with us that day, also any others of our prachers or laymen who can come. All those who are now, or who have been members of the church here are invited to come.

Yours in His Name, A. G. Dixon.

Aug. 30, 1915.

Pinnacle and Mt. Zion Ct.—The third quarterly conference for this charge met at Mt. Zion on Saturday before the second Sunday in August. All the churches were represented. The usual business was transacted in a spirit of love.

Bro. K. D. Brown, of Mt. Zion, was declared delegate elect to Annual Conference, and Bro. G. W. Hunt, of Pinnacle alternate.

The first special meeting for this charge was at Mt. Zion the third Sunday in July. Bro. H. L. Powell was our help. He did good preaching which was appreciated by all who attended. The services were interesting. Nine joined the church as a result of this meeting.

Our next meeting was at Pinnacle beginning the 4th Sunday in July. Bro. Ledbetter was our help. He preached and worked faithfully. The church was revived and seven members added. The church was revived and seven members added. The first Sunday in August we began at Pilot. Bro. Burgess was our help. All enjoyed his preaching. The church was revived and seven members received. I think there is a splendid opportunity to build up at this place. There needs to be some work done on the building, which we hope will be done soon. The second Sunday in August we began our meeting at Shoals. Bro. Swain was our help. It is needless for me to say he was good help, all appreciated his work. The church seemed to be revived but there were no accessions. Thanks to Bros. Powell, Ledbetter, Burgess, and Swain for the faithful service they rendered us in these meetings.

The good people of this charge have remembered us with tokens of kindness all through the year. We have not lacked for fruit and melons.

Thanks to all who have been so kind to us. I wish space would allow us to give the name of each one who has remembered so kindly.

Fraternally,

Edw. Suits.

Siler City Circuit.—The union evangelistic meeting in progress at Siler City is proving a great success. Evangelist Ham is laying the axe at the root of the tree, or rather he is using the mattock and is grubbing things up by the roots. So far his artillery has been directed mostly at the church, and his sermons are having a telling effect. Things new and old are being straightened out. There have been several conversions.

The meeting is being held in a tent and large congregations are attending. We are expecting great things from this meeting. J. H. Bowman.

Uwharrie Ct.—We have been moving along very nicely on this work, but feel we have not accomplished what ought to have been. We began our special meetings first Sunday in this month at Mt. Zion, Bro. J. B. O'Briant as help. We were almost rained out at this point and he was called away Wednesday to conduct a funeral service. Bro. Milton Varner, of M. E. Church, preached for us four times. There were not much visible results, but think there was good done. The second Sunday began at Cid with Bro. Younts, from Lexington, as pulpit help. A fairly good meeting, with five converts. We began third Sunday at Canaan, with Bro. O'Briant as pulpit help. We had a great
